South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first landing and exploration was undertaken by Capt. James Cook, who formally took possession in the name of George III on 17 Jan. 1775. British sealers arrived in 1788 and American sealers in 1791. Sealing reached its peak in 1800. A German team was the first to carry out scientific studies there in 1882–83. Whaling began in 1904 and ceased in 1966, and the civil administration was withdrawn. Argentine forces invaded South Georgia on 3 April 1982. A British naval task force recovered the Island on 25 April 1982.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

South Georgia lies 1,300 km southeast of the Falkland Islands and has an area of 3,760 sq. km. The South Sandwich Islands are 760 km southeast of South Georgia and have an area of 340 sq. km. In 1993 crown sovereignty and jurisdiction were extended from 19 km (12 miles) to 322 km (200 miles) around the islands. There is no permanent population. The British Antarctic Survey operate a fisheries science facility at King Edward Point and a biological station on Bird Island. The South Sandwich Islands are uninhabited.

CLIMATE

The climate is wet and cold, with strong winds and little seasonal variation. 15°C is occasionally reached on a windless day. Temperatures below –15°C at sea level are unusual.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the new constitution which came into force on 3 Oct. 1985 the Territories ceased to be dependencies of the Falkland Islands. The Government of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands (GSGSSI) administers the islands. The local administration is the responsibility of the Government Officer based at King Edward Point. Executive power is vested in a Commissioner, who is also the Governor of the Falkland Islands. On matters relating to defence, the Commissioner consults the officer commanding Her Majesty's British Forces in the South Atlantic. The Commissioner, whenever practicable, consults the Executive Council of the Falkland Islands on the exercise of functions that in his opinion might affect the Falkland Islands. There is no Legislative Council. Laws are made by the Commissioner (Colin Roberts, CVO, resident in the Falkland Islands).

ECONOMYBudget

The total projected revenue of the Territories (2006) was £4,037,700, of which 85% from fishing licences, 8% landing fees, 3% philatelic sales and 2% harbour dues. Expenditure (projected), £4,265,900, includes 50% fisheries research and protection, 12% King Edward Point running costs, 11% observer fees and 6% Grytviken remediation and maintenance projects.

COMMUNICATIONS

The bases at King Edward Point and Bird Island have modern satellite communication systems. King Edward Point is regularly visited by the GSGSSI Fishery Patrol Vessel. Other visiting vessels include cruise ships, BAS research ships, warships and auxiliaries, fishing vessels and yachts.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONSJustice

There is a Supreme Court for the Territories and a Court of Appeal in the United Kingdom. Appeals may go from that court to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The British Antarctic Survey base commander at King Edward Point is usually appointed a magistrate.

CULTURETourism

In the region of 4,000 tourists visit South Georgia annually.

Sovereign Base Areas of Akrotiri and Dhekelia in Cyprus

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Sovereign Base Areas (SBAs) are those parts of the island of Cyprus that stayed under British jurisdiction and remained British sovereign territory when the 1960 Treaty of Establishment created the independent Republic of Cyprus. The Akrotiri facility formed a strategic part of the West's nuclear capacity during the Cold War. The SBAs were used for the deployment of troops in the Gulf War in 1991. Military intelligence is now the key role of the SBAs. The construction of massive antennae at the RAF communications base at Akrotiri sparked violent riots in 2001 and 2002, led by a Greek Cypriot MP. In Feb. 2003 the British Government offered to surrender approximately half the area of the SBAs as an incentive for a settlement between the Greek and Turkish administrations in Cyprus.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Sovereign Base Areas (SBAs), with a total land area of 254 sq. km (98 sq. miles), comprise the Western SBA (123 sq. km), including Episkopi Garrison and RAF Akrotiri (opened 1956), and the Eastern SBA (131 sq. km), including Dhekelia Garrison. The SBAs cover 3% of the land area of the island of Cyprus. There are around 8,000 military personnel and approximately 7,700 Cypriots. The British Government has declared that it will not develop the SBAs other than for military purposes. Citizens and residents of the Republic of Cyprus are guaranteed freedom of access and communications to and through the SBAs.

The SBAs are administered as military bases reporting to the Ministry of Defence in London. The Administrator is the Commander British Forces Cyprus. The joint force headquarters are at Episkopi. Greek and English are spoken.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Commander British Forces Cyprus: Air Vice-Marshal Mike Wigston (since 21 Jan. 2015).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2004: births, 300; deaths, 218. Population growth rate, 2004, 9.4%.

CLIMATE

An equable and healthy climate as a result of regular trade winds, though hurricanes are sometimes experienced. Grand Turk, Jan. 76°F (24.4°C), July 83°F (28.3°C). Annual rainfall 21".

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution entered force on 9 Aug. 2006. It granted the Turks and Caicos Islands further self-government, while at the same time incorporating provisions enabling the Government to fulfil their responsibilities for the territory. It made provision for the establishment of an Advisory National Security Council, and changed the title of Chief Minister and Deputy Chief Minister to Premier and Deputy Premier. Following the resignation of Premier Michael Misick in March 2009 on corruption charges, the UK government dissolved the cabinet and the House of Assembly in Aug. 2009 and placed the island under direct rule. Despite an initial commitment to hold House of Assembly elections by July 2011 at the latest, direct rule continued to be in place until elections were held in Nov. 2012. The Cabinet (formerly Executive Council) comprises the Governor, the Premier, no more than six other Ministers, the Deputy Governor and the Attorney General. The House of Assembly (formerly Legislative Council) consists of a Speaker, one official member (the Attorney General), 15 elected members and four appointed members.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At elections held on 9 Nov. 2012 for the 15 elective seats in the House of Assembly, the Progressive National Party won 8 seats and the People's Democratic Movement 7. The new government subsequently resumed local administration following three years of direct rule by Britain.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Peter Beckingham; b. 1949 (since 9 Oct. 2013).

Premier: Rufus Ewing; b. 1972 (since 13 Nov. 2012).

ECONOMY

Overview

The economy is based on free-market private sector-led development. The focus is on the service sector, with tourism and finance still the dominant industries.

Currency

The US dollar is the official currency. Inflation was 2.9% in 2007 (3.7% in 2006).

Budget

In 2004–05 current revenues were US$118m. and current expenditures US$122m.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 12.7% in 2005 (11.6% in 2004).

Banking and Finance

There were six commercial banks in 2004. Offshore finance is a major industry.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy in 2011 were the equivalent of 3.6 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Electrical services are provided to all of the inhabited islands. Total electricity production for 2011 was an estimated 214m. kWh.

The Turks and Caicos Islands

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

After a long period of rival French and Spanish claims the islands were secured to the British Crown in 1766, and became a separate colony in 1973 after association with the colonies of the Bahamas and Jamaica. In 2009 the British government imposed direct rule after allegations of widespread corruption among the islands' ruling class.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Islands are situated between 21° and 22°N. lat. and 71° and 72°W. long, about 80 km east of the Bahamas, of which they are geographically an extension. There are over 40 islands, covering an estimated area of 500 sq. km (193 sq. miles). Only seven are inhabited: Grand Caicos, the largest, is 48 km long by 3 to 5 km broad; Grand Turk, the capital and main political and administrative centre, is 11 km long by 2 km broad. Population (2012 census, provisional) 31,618; Grand Turk, 4,831; Middle Caicos, 168; North Caicos, 1,312; Parrot Cay, 131; Providenciales, 23,769; Salt Cay, 108; South Caicos, 1,139. 91.5% of the population were urban in 2013.

The official language is English.

Installed capacity in 2011 was 65,000 kW. Consumption per capita in 2011 was an estimated 6,745m. kWh.

Agriculture

Farming is done on a small scale mainly for subsistence.

Forestry

Forests covered 34,000 ha. in 2010, or 80% of the land area.

Fisheries

In 2010 the total catch was 5,446 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Labour

In 2012, 17% of the economically active population were unemployed.

EXTERNAL ECONOMIC RELATIONS

Imports and Exports

Imports (c.i.f.) in 2009 totalled US$375.4m.; exports (f.o.b.) in 2009 were US$20.8m. The USA accounted for over 99% of foreign trade in 2009. The main export are seafood products, and machinery and transport equipment. Major imports are food and beverages, manufactured goods, and machinery and transport equipment.

COMMUNICATIONS

Civil Aviation

The international airports are on Grand Turk and Providenciales. International services are provided by Air Canada, Air Jamaica, American Airlines, Bahamasair, British Airways, Delta Airlines, TCI Skyking, Tropical Airways d'Haiti and US Airways. An internal air service provides regular daily flights between the inhabited islands.

Shipping

The main ports are at Grand Turk, Cockburn Harbour and Providenciales. There is a service to Miami.

Telecommunications

The main islands have high-speed 4G coverage. Not all phones will automatically function in the Turks and Caicos Islands.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Laws are a mixture of Statute and Common Law. There is a Magistrates Court and a Supreme Court. Appeals lie from the Supreme Court to the Court of Appeal which sits in Nassau, Bahamas. There is a further appeal in certain cases to the Privy Council in London.

Education

The adult literacy rate is 98%. Education is free between the ages of five and 14 in the ten government primary schools; there are also four private primary schools. Total school enrolment in 2004-05 was 1,931 in government primary schools and 1,282 in government secondary schools. There were 1,670 pupils enrolled in the private schools.

In 2005 public expenditure on education came to 11.8% of total government spending.

Health

In 2004 there were 17 doctors, two dentists and 43 hospital beds.

RELIGION

There are Anglican, Catholic, Methodist, Baptist and Evangelist groups.

CULTURE

Press

In 2007 there were two weekly newspapers.

Tourism

There were 354,223 stayover tourists in 2011 (of which 344,337 were from elsewhere in the Americas), up from 281,159 in 2010. Cruise ship visitors totalled 655,497 in 2011 (617,863 in 2010).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

It is believed that the name America was first used on a map of the New World created by German cartographer Martin Waldseemüller in 1507, reputedly in recognition of the Italian explorer, Amerigo Vespucci, who had made a series of voyages to the region in the late 15th and early 16th centuries. The earliest inhabitants of the north American continent can be traced back to Palaeolithic times. The Pueblo culture in modern-day Colorado and New Mexico flourished from the 11th to the 14th century AD. In the 12th century permanent settlements appeared in the east where cultivation and fishing supported major fortified towns. The first Europeans to make their presence felt were the Spanish, who based themselves in Florida before venturing north and west. Santa Fe in New Mexico was founded in 1610. But by the mid-17th century there was competition centred on Quebec from the French who colonized the banks of the St Lawrence River.

Elizabethan adventurers were eager to exploit the New World but it was not until 1607 that an English colony was established. This was at Jamestown in what is now southern Virginia. After a perilous start when disease and malnutrition carried off most of the settlers, Virginia's population grew rapidly to meet the European demand for tobacco. Maryland, originally a refuge for persecuted Catholics, also thrived on the tobacco trade. To make up for the shortage of labour, slaves were imported from Africa.

In 1620 a hundred pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock to found a Puritan enclave, which became the colony of Massachusetts. Other settlements soon followed, accommodating a broad range of Christian radicals fleeing persecution. Not all were tolerant of beliefs that differed from their own. Pennsylvania, the colony named after the Quaker William Penn, was exceptional in offering freedom of worship to 'all persons who confess and acknowledge the one almighty and eternal God'. In 1664 the British took control of neighbouring Dutch colonies. New Amsterdam became New York. Almost all of the eastern seaboard was now claimed by British settlers who were also venturing inland.

Their main European rivals were the French who claimed a vast area around and to the southwest of the Great Lakes. With American Indian tribes allied to both sides, there was heavy fighting in 1744 and 1748. But within a decade British forces had captured most of the French strongholds. After the Treaty of Paris in 1763, Britain commanded the whole of North America east of the Mississippi while Spain, having surrendered Florida, gained Louisiana from France. For a brief period colonization was restricted to the area east of the Appalachians, the rest of the territory being reserved for American Indian tribes. This soon became a point of issue between the settlers who were intent on expansion and the government in London, which wanted a settled, self-supporting community benefiting British trade. Having disposed of the French threat, the colonists felt confident enough to defy orders that ignored their interests. In particular, they objected to the Navigation Acts which required goods to be carried in British vessels and to various taxes imposed without consultation. 'No taxation without representation' became a rallying cry for disaffected colonists. The centre of opposition was Boston, scene of the infamous 'tea party' when, in 1773, militants destroyed a cargo of East India tea. In 1775 the arrest of rebel ringleaders served only to provoke the 13 colonies to co-operate in further acts of rebellion, including the setting up of a de facto government which appointed George Washington commander of American forces.

Independence

The War of Independence was by no means a clear-cut affair. British forces, never more than 50,000 strong, were supported by a powerful body of colonists who remained loyal to the Crown. The war lasted for seven years from 1776 with both sides often getting close to a conclusive victory. The decisive moment came at last with the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne and his 8,000 troops in upper New York state in Oct. 1777, a defeat that persuaded a cautious France to enter the war. Under the peace terms secured in 1783 Britain kept Canada leaving the new United States with territory stretching from the Atlantic to the Mississippi. A constitution based on democratic principles buttressed by inalienable rights including the ownership of property came into force in 1789. It allowed for a federal government headed by a president and executive, a legislature with a House of Representatives and a Senate, and a judiciary with ultimate authority on constitutional matters exercised by a Supreme Court. The first president was George Washington, who was elected in 1789. In 1800 Washington, D.C. was declared the national capital.

Hostilities with Britain resumed in 1812 amidst accusations that Britain was using the excuse of the Napoleonic wars to harass American shipping and to encourage American Indian resistance to expansion into the Midwest. Most of the fighting took place on the Canadian border where an attempted invasion was decisively repulsed. But Louisiana, having reverted to French rule and subsequently sold to the USA, was secured for the Union. With the exception of Louisiana, other American territories that had once been part of the Spanish empire fell to Mexico. But not for long. In 1836 Texas broke away from Mexico, surviving as an independent republic until 1845 when it was annexed by the USA. This provoked war with Mexico which ended in 1848 with the USA taking over what are now the states of California, Arizona, Colorado, Utah, Nevada and New Mexico. Any temptation there might have been for European involvement in the struggle was removed by the Monroe Doctrine, a declaration by President Monroe that interference from the Old World in matters concerning the western hemisphere would not be tolerated. It was a measure of the growing military and economic self-confidence of the USA that such a warning, delivered in 1823, was taken seriously.

The westward expansion began soon after independence but accelerated with the destruction of American Indian power and the removal of the native population to designated reservations. In 1846 a long-running dispute with Britain confirming US title to Oregon acted as a spur to migration as did the Californian gold rush of 1848. By the 1850s the railway network was bringing people and economic prosperity to the mid-west. The population quadrupled between 1815 to 1860, from 8m. to almost 31m. In 1862 the Homestead Act allocated 160 acres to anyone who was ready to farm it. By 1890 the west was won.

Civil War

The transition from a rural society to an industrial power of world importance created tensions, not least between the slave-owning southern states and the rest of the Union which favoured the abolition of slavery. Economic as well as humanitarian factors were in play since the North resented the advantage cheap labour gave to the South. The opposing view held that the South, by now the world's largest cotton producer, depended on slavery for its commercial survival. Mutual antagonism came to a head with the secession of the southern states from the Union in 1860-61 and their formation as a Confederacy. Despite sporadic outbreaks of violence, civil war was not in prospect until Confederate troops fired on the US flag at Fort Sumter. President Abraham Lincoln ordered a blockade of the South. The recruitment of rival armies followed within weeks. The war turned out to be much bloodier than anyone had expected. More American lives were lost in the Civil War than in the two world wars combined. The military balance was maintained until 1863 when the North secured a crushing victory at the Battle of Gettysburg. However, the war continued until April 1865 when Robert E. Lee surrendered to Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Courthouse in Virginia. A few days later Lincoln was assassinated, a loss that the southern states had subsequent cause to regret. Contrary to Lincoln's hopes, a generous settlement was now out of the question. Instead of a gradual transition to a new society, the South was rushed into a social revolution. This in turn led to terrorist violence and acts of vengeance against freed slaves. From this carnage emerged the notorious Ku Klux Klan as the standard bearer of lynch law. While the 13th amendment prohibited slavery, political freedom was denied to the Black community by state-imposed literacy tests and discriminatory property taxes.

That America had interests beyond its own borders was made evident by the Spanish war of 1898 which resulted in the USA becoming the dominant power in the Caribbean. However, the effort to take over in the Philippines came up against Filipino resistance and led to a heavy death toll.

By 1900 the USA rivalled Britain and Germany as the world's dominant power. With vast natural resources and a manufacturing capacity that secured 11% of world trade, it was clear that Europe was soon to lose its grip on world affairs. Ironically, though, it was Europe as the chief supplier of labour that gave the USA the impetus it needed to fulfil its promise. Between 1881 and 1920, 23m. immigrants entered the USA, the largest population movement ever recorded.

Given the heterogeneous background of the American population in the early 20th century it is scarcely surprising that popular opinion was against involvement in the First World War. But events, including German U-boat harassment of American shipping, soon proved that isolationism was not an option. It was not until 1917 that America joined the hostilities but the resurgence of energy created by the arrival of the American Expeditionary Force was critical to the Allied breakthrough.

Post-war America, relatively unscathed by the European conflict, was unquestionably the most powerful nation and as such was able to dictate terms at the Versailles peace conference. But President Wilson's 'fourteen points' which set out a plan for collective security policed by a League of Nations failed to win support in the one country that was critical to its success.

The Treaty was rejected by the Senate in 1920 and America retreated once again into isolationism.

A resumption of economic growth was accompanied by a struggle to impose a common set of values, chiefly white and Protestant, on a diverse population. To outsiders the most extraordinary experiment in social engineering was Prohibition, a federal imposed attempt to outlaw all alcoholic drinks. Whatever gain there was to the health of the nation, the chief beneficiaries were the bosses of organized crime.

New Deal

Dreams of everlasting prosperity were shattered by the 1929 Stock Market Crash. A succession of bank failures was followed by widespread bankruptcies and mass unemployment which sent the economy into a further downward spin. The beginning of the end to the agony came with the election to the presidency of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who pushed through Congress a series of radical measures known collectively as the New Deal, aimed at revitalizing the nation. The abandonment of the gold standard, cheap loans to restart factories and farms and huge investment in public works proved to be the key to recovery. Nonetheless, unemployment remained high until production was boosted by the demands of another world war. In 1935 Roosevelt's social security act provided the bare bones of an American welfare state.

Roosevelt was well aware of the dangers to the USA if the fascist dictators were allowed to triumph, but as in 1914, there was formidable opposition to direct involvement. Roosevelt compromised by supplying Britain with much needed armaments on favourable terms. But it was events in Asia rather than in Europe that eventually persuaded America of the need for direct action. Opposition to Japanese expansion into China and southeast Asia, including an oil embargo and a freezing of Japanese assets in the USA, brought a savage retaliation at Pearl Harbor, when much of the US fleet was destroyed. America declared war on Japan while Germany declared war on America. The US military effort focused initially on the Pacific but after 1942 American forces were also committed to the campaign in north Africa and Europe. With the D-Day landings in June 1944, US troops led the attack on Germany and in May 1945, within a month of Roosevelt's death, Germany surrendered. By then Vice-President Harry Truman had been confirmed as Roosevelt's successor and forced a Japanese surrender by sacrificing Hiroshima and Nagasaki to the atomic bomb.

This time, in the aftermath of war, the USA needed no encouragement to assume the leadership of the free world. The threat of a Soviet takeover in Europe was countered by the formation of NATO in 1949 and the provision of dollar aid under the 1947 Marshall Plan to kick-start European economic recovery. In addition, the Truman doctrine provided a $400m. aid package for the Turkish and Greek governments. The risk of a return to isolationism receded still further when China fell to communism. In 1950 American troops went to the aid of South Korea when it was invaded by the communist North. Though technically under the aegis of the UN, the campaign was an almost entirely American affair led by General Douglas MacArthur. When Chinese forces became involved, MacArthur spoke openly of extending the war to the Chinese mainland, a threat countered strongly by President Truman who forced MacArthur's resignation to establish undisputed political control over the military.

A ceasefire was negotiated after Dwight Eisenhower was elected president in 1953. The USA took the lead in setting up the South East Asia Treaty Organization on the same lines as NATO. Eisenhower had a decisive influence on the Suez crisis in 1956 when he refused to support the invasion of Egypt by British, French and Israeli forces. Domestically he made little headway against a powerful Democratic opposition in both Houses of Congress. His attempts to thaw the Cold War also met with frustration. He handed over the Republican presidential candidacy to his vice-president Richard Nixon, who lost the 1960 election by a slim margin to John F. Kennedy.

Civil Rights

In the early 1960s civil rights were high on the political agenda. The thuggish tactics of Senator Joe McCarthy and the House Committee on Un-American Activities during the previous decade brought into focus basic democratic freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution while growing protests against racial discrimination led to legislation to enforce equality of opportunity in education and employment. The civil rights movement peaked in the early 1960s when the imposition of federal law in the South led to acts of violence against liberal protesters. Foremost among the campaigners for racial equality was Martin Luther King, Jr. who was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964 and who was assassinated four years later.

Social tensions were exacerbated by the Cold War confrontation. In his first year of office Kennedy was embarrassed by the failed Bay of Pigs invasion when anti-Castro Cubans, trained and supported by the CIA, attempted to overthrow the country's communist regime. The building of the Berlin Wall in Aug. 1961 symbolized a hardening of the Cold War. In 1962 Kennedy had to confront the prospect of the Soviets placing missiles in Cuba. The prospect of world war was only too real until an agreement between the two nations allowed for a withdrawal of the missiles on the condition of a US promise not to invade Cuba. The incident prompted a thawing in East-West relations and in 1963 the USA, UK and USSR signed the Limited Test Ban Treaty which, for the first time, put a brake on the spread of nuclear weapons. Less hopeful was the acceleration of the conflict in Vietnam. Kennedy increased the American military presence in South Vietnam from 700 at the beginning of his term in office to 15,000 to counter the threat of communist domination by the North. Domestically, Kennedy's government pledged $1.2bn. for social and housing programmes.

Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas in Nov. 1963 and his vice-president, Lyndon Johnson, was inaugurated as his successor. Johnson oversaw the implementation of civil rights legislation initiated by the Kennedy administration, epitomized by the Voting Rights Act, and also introduced Medicare (health insurance for the elderly). By 1966 over 350,000 American troops were in Vietnam and by the following year almost 80,000 Americans had been killed or wounded. The public turned against involvement in southeast Asia, not least because increased military expenditure led to a delay in domestic reforms.

Watergate

Johnson decided not to contest the 1968 presidential election. His likely successor for the Democrat nomination was John Kennedy's brother, Bobby, but he was assassinated in June of that year. The Republican nominee, Richard Nixon, won the presidency. With falling support for US involvement in Vietnam, he reduced the number of troops stationed there from 550,000 in 1969 to 30,000 three years later but authorized military operations in North Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia in the hope of forcing North Vietnam to the negotiating table. Elsewhere, he signed the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT) with Moscow in 1972 and relaxed trade restrictions against China.

Nixon was re-elected as president in 1973 and shortly afterwards agreed a ceasefire with North Vietnam. However, his second term of office was cut short by the Watergate scandal. The charges against him centred on White House-released taped transcripts of discussions in which Nixon authorized a cover-up of a break-in at the Democratic party headquarters in the Watergate complex, Washington, D.C. in 1972. Threatened with Congressional impeachment, Nixon announced his resignation in Aug. 1974.

Gerald Ford, who replaced Nixon, granted his predecessor a controversial 'full, free and absolute pardon'. Ford lost the 1976 presidential election to Democrat Jimmy Carter. Perceived as a Washington outsider, Carter's often strained relations with Congress and the Senate obstructed his domestic agenda.

The economy suffered and by 1980 inflation and unemployment were both running high. Internationally, he secured the neutrality of the Panama Canal and brokered the influential Camp David talks between Egypt and Israel. He also re-established diplomatic ties with China. Henry Kissinger, who was secretary of state for part of Nixon's and all of Carter's years in office, oversaw America's withdrawal from southeast Asia, winning the Nobel Peace Prize jointly with his North Vietnamese counterpart Le Duc Tho in 1974. Attempts at further improving US-Soviet relations were scuppered when the signing of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II) was postponed because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1979. The incursion also led to a US boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics. Radical Iranian students stormed the US embassy in Tehran in late 1979 and seized over 50 US hostages. After a year of negotiations, a secret US military rescue mission failed and contributed to Republican Ronald Reagan's landslide victory at the 1980 presidential polls.

Reagan's economic policies, known as 'Reaganomics', redefined American society in the 1980s. In his first year of office he introduced a 25% tax cut for individuals and corporations. He slashed welfare but increased military expenditure. In terms of governmental structure, he was intent on delegating many federal programmes to state and local levels. A recession in 1982 prompted tax increases and set the pattern of boom and bust that characterized his tenure. In 1986 he reduced the number of tax rates, abolishing tax altogether for many low-income earners. In Oct. 1987 the stock market collapsed, losing a third of its value over two months, and by the end of his presidency, Reagan had seen the national debt more than triple to $2.5trn.

End to the Cold War

Relations between the USA and USSR deteriorated in the early 1980s. The shooting down of a South Korean airliner carrying American citizens in 1983 led to a further deployment of US missiles in Western Europe while US proposals for the Strategic Defense Initiative (known as 'Star Wars') added to tensions. In 1983 the USA invaded Grenada, scene of a coup, in a bid to curb Soviet-Cuban influence in the Caribbean. However, relations between the two superpowers improved in the mid-eighties after successful negotiations on nuclear arms limitations. Reagan met Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in 1985 and in 1987 the two leaders signed a treaty in Washington, D.C. agreeing to destroy a range of intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

Reagan's foreign policy elsewhere was unstinting in its protection of US interests. In 1986 he bombed Tripoli after Libya was accused of involvement in the bombing of a nightclub in West Berlin which killed two American servicemen. The following year he became embroiled in the Iran-Contra affair. The CIA was found to have sold arms to Iran to fund anti-communist guerrillas in Nicaragua. Reagan and his deputy, George Bush, were cleared of direct involvement but Reagan was censured for allowing the affair to develop.

Bush took over the presidency in 1989 and continued an active foreign policy. At the end of 1989 he authorized the invasion of Panama to remove Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega from power. The collapse of the Soviet empire in 1990 extended US economic aid to Eastern Europe and Bush signed a non-aggression pact with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev which effectively ended the Cold War. In 1990-91 Bush led a coalition of European and Arab states to counter the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. Around 500,000 US troops were stationed in the Persian Gulf and when trade embargoes and diplomacy failed to persuade Iraq to withdraw, Bush authorized a military offensive in Jan. 1991. By the end of Feb. Kuwaiti independence had been restored. Domestically, Bush was badly damaged when he was forced to raise taxes despite his election promise of 'no new taxes'.

The Democrats regained control of the White House with the election of Bill Clinton in 1992. Clinton combined economic recovery at home with an active foreign policy which underlined

America's role as the only superpower. He secured the passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement, which created a free-trade zone between the United States, Canada and Mexico, cut the United States budget deficit by 50% in his first term and in his second term authorized America's first tax cut since 1981. Unemployment reached its lowest levels since the late-1960s and in 1998 there was a federal budget surplus for the first time in almost 30 years. His social legislation included anti-crime provisions, the Family and Medical Leave Act, a welfare reform bill and an increase in the minimum wage. He also appointed Madeleine Albright as the first-ever female secretary of state.

On the international scene Clinton brokered talks between the Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin which resulted in limited Palestinian self-rule. He sent peacekeeping troops both to Bosnia and Herzegovina and to Haiti. In 1995 he was instrumental in securing the Dayton accords that offered peace between Yugoslavia, Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina. Relations with Vietnam were normalized and diplomatic and trade links with China much improved. He was also an important figure in the formulation of the 1998 Good Friday agreement which sought to reach a peace settlement in Northern Ireland.

Clinton retained a hard-line stance against Iraq, sending forces against Saddam Hussein in 1994, 1996 and 1998. Sudan and Afghanistan were attacked in 1998 having been linked with the al-Qaeda terrorist network held responsible for the bombing of US embassies in Tanzania and Kenya. In 1999 there was a Clinton-led NATO campaign of air strikes against Yugoslavia when the country's leaders refused to end a campaign of violence against ethnic Albanians in Kosovo. Yugoslav president Slobodan Milošević was forced to withdraw his troops and allow an international peacekeeping force in Kosovo.

However, Clinton's second term of office was dominated by scandal. He reached an out-of-court agreement with Paula Jones, a state government employee who had accused him of sexual harassment. Clinton and his wife, Hillary, were also accused of criminal wrongdoing over a land deal in Arkansas, known as Whitewater, though they were both eventually cleared of the charges. Most damagingly, Clinton had an affair with Monica Lewinsky, a White House intern. Having denied the sexual nature of the affair under oath, Clinton was impeached for perjury and obstruction of justice although the Senate trial ended when neither motion gained a simple majority.

In 2000 Clinton's vice-president, Al Gore, lost the presidential election to George W. Bush, son of the earlier President George Bush. Gore was defeated despite winning the popular vote. In 2001 Bush's first budget included a $1-25trn. tax cut. He attracted international criticism in his early months in office for refusing to ratify the Kyoto Agreement on global warming and climate change and for his bid to replace the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty with a new accord allowing for a missile defence system in the United States. Following talks with Russian President Vladimir Putin in June 2001 the two leaders signed an anti-nuclear deal to reduce their respective strategic nuclear warheads by two-thirds over the next ten years.

'War on Terror'

On 11 Sept. 2001 the heart of New York City was devastated after hijackers flew two jet airliners into the World Trade Center. A plane also crashed into the Pentagon, in Washington, D.C., and a fourth hijacked plane crashed near the town of Shanksville, Pennsylvania. The death toll, initially put at 6,700, was eventually lowered to 2,753, with 67 countries reporting dead or missing citizens. Osama bin Laden, the Saudi dissident leader of the al-Qaeda terrorist network and believed to be living in Afghanistan at the invitation of the ruling Taliban, immediately became the chief suspect and military action against Afghanistan followed, with air strikes beginning on 7 Oct. 2001. Despite the UN establishing a fragile multi-party government in Afghanistan, the USA continues to carry out special missions against Taliban and al-Qaeda targets.

In early 2002 Bush declared North Korea, Iran and Iraq 'an axis of evil'. Despite facing domestic recession, he pressed the UN to act against Iraq. On 20 March 2003 US forces, supported by the UK, launched attacks on Iraq aimed at 'liberating' the country. On 9 April 2003 American forces took control of Baghdad, so ending Saddam Hussein's rule. In Nov. 2004 Bush won a second term as president, which was dominated by continuing military engagement in Iraq and Afghanistan and by the collapse in 2007 of the US sub-prime mortgage sector. He was succeeded by the Democrat Barack Obama, who won the election of 2008 to become the country's first African American president.

Obama faced a global financial system in turmoil. In March 2010 he pushed through landmark health care reforms. In May 2011 he ordered the military strike that killed Osama bin Laden in Pakistan. He won a second term with victory in the 2012 presidential election. From June 2013 his administration faced revelations of controversial surveillance of US citizens and foreign allies by the National Security Agency. In Oct. 2013 the government shut down for 16 days following Congress' refusal to sign off the budget.

From 2014 US air strikes targeted Islamic State jihadists in Iraq and Syria. Also that year social unrest in Ferguson, Missouri sparked a national debate on the police and Black community relations. In July 2015 the USA sanctioned a multinational deal with Iran, curbing nuclear weapons development by Tehran.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The United States is bounded in the north by Canada, east by the North Atlantic, south by the Gulf of Mexico and Mexico, and west by the North Pacific Ocean. The area of the 50 states of the USA plus the District of Columbia is 3,796,742 sq. miles (9,833,517 sq. km), of which 3,531,905 sq. miles (9,147,593 sq. km) are land and 264,837 sq. miles (685,924 sq. km) are water (comprising Great Lakes, inland and coastal water).

Population at each census from 1790 to 2010 (including Alaska and Hawaii from 1960). Figures do not include Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa or other Pacific islands, or the US population abroad. Residents of Indian reservations not included before 1890.

The mid-year population estimate for 2015 was 321,418,820.

The 2010 census population of 308,745,538 represented an increase of 9.7% since 2000 (the smallest percentage increase between ten-yearly US censuses since the Second World War). Minorities accounted for 92% of the growth. There were 156,964,212 females at the 2010 census, or 50.8% of the total population.

The UN gave an estimated population for 2015 of 321.77m.

2010 density, 33.8 per sq. km (87.4 per sq. mile). Urban population (persons living in places with at least 2,500 inhabitants) at the 2010 census was 249,253,271 (80.7%); rural, 59,492,267. In 2000 it was 79.0%; in 1990, 75.2%; in 1980, 73.7%; in 1970, 73.6%.

Sex distribution by race of the population in 2013:

White	121,636,000	123,957,000
Black or African American	19,946,000	21,768,000
American Indian and Alaska Native	1,974,000	1,935,000
Asian	8,000,000	8,804,000

Two or More Races	3,817,000	3,936,000
Total	155,741,000	160,756,000

Alongside these racial groups, and applicable to all of them, a category of 'Hispanic origin' comprised 50,477,594 persons in 2010, up 15,171,776 from 35,305,818 in 2000. Hispanics are now the largest ethnic minority in the USA. The rapid growth in the Hispanic and Asian populations led the US Census Bureau to suggest in 2014 that by around 2044 Whites will constitute less than half the total population.

Among ten-year age groups the 45–54 age group contained most people according to the 2010 census, with a total of 45,006,716 (14.6% of the population). At the 2000 census the 35–44 age group had most people.

At the 2010 census there were 116,716,292 households, up from 105,480,101 in 2000. There were 31.7m. single-person households in 2010 representing 27% of all households, up from 9% in 1950.

There were 53,364 people aged 100 or over according to the 2010 census, compared to 50,454 in 2000. Females accounted for 82.8% of the centenarians in 2010, up from 80.1% in 2000.

The USA does not have an official language, although English has been provided with official status in 30 states. A survey in 2011 showed that 60.6m. persons five years and over spoke a language other than English in the home, including Spanish or Spanish Creole by 37.6m.; Chinese by 2.9m.; French or French Creole by 2.1m.; Tagalog (a Filipino language) by 1.6m.; Vietnamese by 1.4m.; Korean by 1.1m.; and German by 1.1m. 79.2% of the population has English as its mother tongue.

The following table includes population statistics, the year in which each of the original 13 states (Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Virginia) ratified the constitution, and the year when each of the other states was admitted into the Union. Two-letter abbreviated postal codes for use in addresses are shown in brackets.

The USA is divided into four geographic regions comprised of nine divisions. These are, with their 2010 census populations: Northeast (comprised of the New England and Middle Atlantic divisions), 53,317,240; Midwest (East North Central, West North Central), 66,927,001; South (South Atlantic, East South Central, West South Central), 114,555,744; West (Mountain, Pacific), 71,945,553.

A 2010 survey showed 39,955,854 foreign-born persons, representing 12.9% of the population. The ten countries contributing the largest numbers who were foreign-born were: Mexico, 11.7m.; China, 2.2m.; India, 1.8m.; Philippines, 1.8m.; Vietnam, 1.2m.; El Salvador, 1.2m.; Cuba, 1.1m.; Korea, 1.1m.; Dominican Republic, 0.9m.; Guatemala, 0.8m. In fiscal year 2012 a total of 1,031,631 persons obtained legal permanent resident status (1,266,129 in fiscal year 2006).

¹Designated by the United States Census Bureau as a CDP (census designated place) and not incorporated as a city. ²Incorporated since the 2000 census. ³Officially designated as a Municipality. ⁴Officially designated as a Town.

Immigration and naturalization. The Immigration and Nationality Act, as amended, provides for the numerical limitation of most immigration. The Immigration Act of 1990 established major revisions in the numerical limits and preference system regulating legal immigration. The numerical limits are imposed on visas issued and not admissions. The maximum number of visas allowed to be issued under the preference categories in fiscal year 2012 was 370,951: 226,000 for family-sponsored immigrants and 144,951 for employment-based immigrants. Within the overall limitations the per-country limit for independent countries is set to 7% of the total family and employment limits, while dependent areas are limited to 2% of the total. Immigrants not subject to any numerical limitation are spouses, children, and parents of US citizens who are 21 years of age or older; certain former US citizens; ministers of religion; certain long-term US government employees; refugees and asylum-seekers adjusting to immigrant status; and certain other groups of immigrants.

Immigrant aliens admitted to the USA for permanent residence, by country or region of birth, for fiscal years:

The total number of immigrants admitted from 1820 to 2012 was 78,493,018, with most coming from Mexico, Germany and Italy. One of the consequences of the economic downturn of the late 2000s is that immigration from Mexico has declined considerably and the net migration flow has also slowed. In 2013 for the first time Mexico was overtaken as the leading sending country for immigrants to the USA, with more coming from both China and India. Illegal immigration remains a concern. In the 2013 fiscal year the USA deported some 370,000 undocumented immigrants. In the 2014 fiscal year 67,339 unaccompanied children were detained crossing the US-Mexico border (of which more came from Honduras, Guatemala and El Salvador than Mexico itself), up from 38,045 in the previous fiscal year and 24,120 in the 2012 fiscal year. The number of immigrants admitted for legal permanent residence in the United States in fiscal year 2012 was 1,031,631. Included in this total were 484,072 new arrivals who entered the country with legal permanent resident status. The remaining 547,559 were status adjusters, who had arrived earlier as non-immigrants (including students and temporary workers). The USA has by far the largest annual net gain in migrants of any country. It also receives the most asylum seekers on an annual basis.

A total of 757,434 persons were naturalized in fiscal year 2012 (including 102,181 persons born in Mexico).

The refugee admissions ceiling for fiscal year 2014 was fixed at 70,000.

The birth rate in 2013 was the lowest ever recorded. Although divorce figures are not available since 1997 as not all states maintain complete statistics, it is estimated that the rate fell from 4.3 per 1,000 population in 1997 to 3.2 per 1,000 in 2014 (the lowest rate since 1969). Rate of natural increase per 1,000 population: 5.9 in 2000; 5.0 in 2010; 4.3 in 2014. Population growth rate, 2003–13, 0.9%.

Even though the marriage rate shows a gradual decline, it remains much higher than in most other industrial countries. In 2011 the median age at first marriage was 29 for males and 26 for females. In 2014, 7% of Black men were married to a White woman and 4% of Black women were married to a White man. Following a Supreme Court ruling, same-sex marriage became legal nationwide in June 2015.

The number of births to unmarried women in 2009 was 1,693,658 (41% of all births), compared to 666,000 in 1980 and 1,726,566 in 2008. The rate of births to teenagers was 29.4 per 1,000 women in 2012 (the lowest on record); it has halved since 1993. The number of babies born to women aged 15–19 was 305,420 in 2012, down from 409,802 in 2009 and the fewest reported since the end of the Second World War. Between 1970 and 2009 the proportion of all births outside of marriage rose from 11% to 41% with increases in all age groups. In 2009, 27.3% of children lived in one-parent households—the highest proportion in the industrialized world.

Infant mortality rates, per 1,000 live births: 29.2 in 1950; 12.9 in 1980; 6.0 in 2013. Fertility rate, 2013, 1.9 births per woman (the lowest since the late 1980s).

There were a reported 1,058,000 abortions in 2011, down from a peak in 1990 of 1,608,600 and the lowest total since 1975. The number of abortions per 1,000 women aged 15–44 in 2011 was 16.9, the lowest rate since 1973.

Expectation of life, 1970: males, 67.1 years; females, 74.7 years. 2014: males, 76.4 years; females, 81.2 years.

Numbers of deaths by principal causes, 2014 (and as a percentage of all deaths): heart disease, 614,348 (23.4%); cancer, 591,699 (22.5%); chronic lower respiratory disease, 147,101 (5.6%); accidents, 136,053 (5.2%); stroke, 133,103 (5.1%); Alzheimer's disease, 93,541 (3.6%); diabetes, 76,488 (2.9%); pneumonia and influenza, 55,227 (2.1%); kidney diseases, 48,146 (1.8%); suicide, 42,773 (1.6%).

The number of Americans living in poverty in 2013 was 45.3m. or 14.5% of the total population, down from 15.0% in 2012 but up from 11.3% on 2000.

A UNICEF report published in 2010 showed that 23.1% of children in the USA live in relative poverty (living in a household in which disposable income—when adjusted for family size and composition—is less than 50% of the national median income), compared to just 4.7% in Iceland.

CLIMATE

For temperature and rainfall figures, see entries on individual states as indicated by regions, below, of mainland USA.

Pacific Coast. The climate varies with latitude, distance from the sea and the effect of relief, ranging from polar conditions in North Alaska through cool to warm temperate climates further south. The extreme south is temperate desert. Rainfall everywhere is moderate. See Alaska, California, Oregon, Washington.

Mountain States. Very varied, with relief exerting the main control; very cold in the north in winter, with considerable snowfall. In the south, much higher temperatures and aridity produce desert conditions. Rainfall everywhere is very variable as a result of rain-shadow influences. See Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming.

High Plains. A continental climate with a large annual range of temperature and moderate rainfall, mainly in summer, although unreliable. Dust storms are common in summer and blizzards in winter. See Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota.

Central Plains. A temperate continental climate, with hot summers and cold winters, except in the extreme south. Rainfall is plentiful and comes at all seasons, but there is a summer maximum in western parts. See Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas.

Mid-West. Continental, with hot summers and cold winters. Rainfall is moderate, with a summer maximum in most parts. See Indiana, Iowa, Kansas.

Great Lakes. Continental, resembling that of the Central Plains, with hot summers but very cold winters because of the freezing of the lakes. Rainfall is moderate with a slight summer maximum. See Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Wisconsin.

Appalachian Mountains. The north is cool temperate with cold winters, the south warm temperate with milder winters. Precipitation is heavy, increasing to the south but evenly distributed over the year. See Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, West Virginia.

Gulf Coast. Conditions vary from warm temperate to subtropical, with plentiful rainfall, decreasing towards the west but evenly distributed over the year. See Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana.

Atlantic Coast. Temperate maritime climate but with great differences in temperature according to latitude. Rainfall is ample at all seasons; snowfall in the north can be heavy. See Delaware, District of Columbia, Georgia, Maryland, New Jersey, New York State, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia.

New England. Cool temperate, with severe winters and warm summers. Precipitation is well distributed with a slight winter maximum. Snowfall is heavy in winter. See Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont. See also Hawaii and Outlying Territories.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The form of government of the USA is based on the constitution adopted on 17 Sept. 1787 and effective from 4 March 1789.

By the constitution the government of the nation is composed of three co-ordinate branches, the executive, the legislative and the judicial.

The Federal government has authority in matters of general taxation, treaties and other dealings with foreign countries, foreign and inter-state commerce, bankruptcy, postal service, coinage, weights and measures, patents and copyright, the armed forces (including, to a certain extent, the militia), and crimes against the USA; it has sole legislative authority over the District of Columbia and the possessions of the USA.

The 5th article of the constitution provides that Congress may, on a two-thirds vote of both houses, propose amendments to the constitution, or, on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of all the states, call a convention for proposing amendments, which in either case shall be valid as part of the constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, whichever mode of ratification may be proposed by Congress. Ten amendments (called collectively 'the Bill of Rights') to the constitution were added 15 Dec. 1791; two in 1795 and 1804; a 13th amendment, 6 Dec. 1865, abolishing slavery; a 14th in 1868, including the important 'due process' clause; a 15th, 3 Feb. 1870, establishing equal voting rights for White and Black; a 16th, 3 Feb. 1913, authorizing the income tax; a 17th, 8 April 1913, providing for popular election of Senators; an 18th, 16 Jan. 1919, prohibiting alcoholic liquors; a 19th, 18 Aug. 1920, establishing women's suffrage; a 20th, 23 Jan. 1933, advancing the date of the President's and Vice-President's inauguration and abolishing the 'lameduck' sessions of Congress; a 21st, 5 Dec. 1933, repealing the 18th amendment; a 22nd, 27 Feb. 1951, limiting a President's tenure of office to two terms, or two full terms in the case of a Vice-President who has succeeded to the office of President and has served two years or less of another President's term, or one full term in the case of a Vice-President who has succeeded to the office of President and has served more than two years of another President's term; a 23rd, 30 March 1961, granting citizens of the District of Columbia the right to vote in national elections; a 24th, 4 Feb. 1964, banning the use of the poll-tax in federal elections; a 25th, 10 Feb. 1967, dealing with Presidential disability and succession; a 26th, 22 June 1970, establishing the right of citizens who are 18 years of age and older to vote; a 27th, 7 May 1992, providing that no law varying the compensation of Senators or Representatives shall take effect until an election has taken place.

National motto. 'In God we trust'; formally adopted by Congress 30 July 1956.

Presidency

The executive power is vested in a president, who holds office for four years, and is elected, together with a vice-president chosen for the same term, by electors from each state, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the state may be entitled in the Congress. The President must be a natural-born citizen, resident in the country for 14 years, and at least 35 years old.

The presidential election is held every fourth (leap) year on the Tuesday after the first Monday in Nov. Technically, this is an election of presidential electors, not of a president directly; the electors thus chosen meet and give their votes (for the candidate to whom they are pledged, in some states by law, but in most states by custom and prudent politics) at their respective state capitals on the first Monday after the second Wednesday in Dec. next following their election; and the votes of the electors of all the states are opened and counted in the presence of both Houses of Congress on the sixth day of Jan. The total electorate vote is one for each Senator and Representative. Electors may not be a member of Congress or hold federal office. If no candidate secures the minimum 270 college votes needed for outright victory, the 12th Amendment to the Constitution applies, and the House of Representatives chooses a president from among the first three finishers in the electoral college. (This last happened in 1824).

If the successful candidate for President dies before taking office the Vice-President-elect becomes President; if no candidate has a majority or if the successful candidate fails to qualify, then, by the 20th amendment, the Vice-President acts as President until a president qualifies. The duties of the Presidency, in absence of the President and Vice-President by reason of death, resignation, removal, inability or failure to qualify, devolve upon the Speaker of the House under legislation enacted on 18 July 1947. In case of absence of a Speaker for like reason, the presidential duties devolve upon the President pro tem. of the Senate and successively upon those members of the cabinet in order of precedence, who have the constitutional qualifications for President.

The presidential term, by the 20th amendment to the constitution, begins at noon on 20 Jan. of the inaugural year. This amendment also installs the newly elected Congress in office on 3 Jan. instead of—as formerly—in the following Dec. The President's salary is $400,000 per year (taxable), with an additional $50,000 to assist in defraying expenses resulting from official duties. Also he may spend up to $100,000 non-taxable for travel and $19,000 for official entertainment. In 1999 the presidential salary was increased for the president taking office in Jan. 2001, having remained at $200,000 a year since 1969. The office of Vice-President carries a salary of $235,300 and $20,000 allowance for expenses, all taxable. The Vice-President is ex officio President of the Senate, and in the case of 'the removal of the President, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of his office', he becomes the President for the remainder of the term.

Cabinet. The administrative business of the nation has been traditionally vested in several executive departments, the heads of which, unofficially and ex officio, formed the President's cabinet. Beginning with the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1887, however, an increasing amount of executive business has been entrusted to some 60 so-called independent agencies, such as the Housing and Home Finance Agency, Tariff Commission, etc.

All heads of departments and of the 60 or more administrative agencies are appointed by the President, but must be confirmed by the Senate.

Congress. The legislative power is vested by the Constitution in a Congress, consisting of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Electorate. By amendments of the constitution, disqualification of voters on the ground of race, colour or sex is forbidden. The electorate consists of all citizens over 18 years of age. Literacy tests have been banned since 1970. In 1972 durational residency requirements were held to violate the constitution. In 1973 US citizens abroad were enfranchised.

With limitations imposed by the constitution, it is the states which determine voter eligibility. In general states exclude from voting: persons who have not established residency in the jurisdiction in which they wish to vote; persons who have been convicted of felonies whose civil rights have not been restored; persons declared mentally incompetent by a court.

Illiterate voters are entitled to receive assistance in marking their ballots. Minority-language voters in jurisdictions with statutorily prescribed minority concentrations are entitled to have elections conducted in the minority language as well as English. Disabled voters are entitled to accessible polling places. Voters absent on election days or unable to go to the polls are generally entitled under state law to vote by absentee ballot.

The Constitution guarantees citizens that their votes will be of equal value under the 'one person, one vote' rule.

Senate. The Senate consists of two members from each state (but not from the District of Columbia), chosen by popular vote for six years, approximately one-third retiring or seeking re-election every two years. Senators must be no less than 30 years of age; must have been citizens of the USA for nine years, and be residents in the states for which they are chosen. The Senate has complete freedom to initiate legislation, except revenue bills (which must originate in the House of Representatives); it may, however, amend or reject any legislation originating in the lower house. The Senate is also entrusted with the power of giving or withholding its 'advice and consent' to the ratification of all treaties initiated by the President with foreign powers, a two-thirds majority of Senators present being required for approval. (However, it has no control over 'international executive agreements' made by the President with foreign governments; such 'agreements' cover a wide range and are more numerous than formal treaties.)

The Senate has 16 Standing Committees to which all bills are referred for study, revision or rejection. The House of Representatives has 20 such committees. In both Houses each Standing Committee has a chairman and a majority representing the majority party of the whole House; each has numerous sub-committees. The jurisdictions of these Committees correspond largely to those of the appropriate executive departments and agencies. Both Houses also have a few select or special Committees with limited duration.

House of Representatives. The House of Representatives consists of 435 members elected every second year. The number of each state's Representatives is determined by the decennial census, in the absence of specific Congressional legislation affecting the basis. The number of Representatives for each state in the 114th congress, which began in Jan. 2015 (based on the 2010 census), is given below:

Alabama	7	Louisiana	6	Ohio	16
Alaska	1	Maine	2	Oklahoma	5
Arizona	9	Maryland	8	Oregon	5
Arkansas	4	Massachusetts	9	Pennsylvania	18
California	53	Michigan	14	Rhode Island	2
Colorado	7	Minnesota	8	South Carolina	7
Connecticut	5	Mississippi	4	South Dakota	1
Delaware	1	Missouri	8	Tennessee	9
Florida	27	Montana	1	Texas	36
Georgia	14	Nebraska	3	Utah	4
Hawaii	2	Nevada	4	Vermont	1
Idaho	2	New Hampshire	2	Virginia	11
Illinois	18	New Jersey	12	Washington	10
Indiana	9	New Mexico	3	West Virginia	3
Iowa	4	New York	27	Wisconsin	8
Kansas	4	North Carolina	13	Wyoming	1
Kentucky	6	North Dakota	1

The constitution requires congressional districts within each state to be substantially equal in population. Final decisions on congressional district boundaries are taken by the state legislatures and governors. By custom the Representative lives in the district from which he is elected. Representatives must be not less than 25 years of age, citizens of the USA for seven years and residents in the state from which they are chosen.

In addition, five delegates (one each from the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, the US Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico) are also members of Congress. They have a voice but no vote, except in committees. The delegate from Puerto Rico is the resident commissioner. Puerto Ricans vote at primaries, but not at national elections. Each of the two Houses of Congress is sole 'judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members'; and each of the Houses may, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member. The period usually termed 'a Congress' in legislative language continues for two years, terminating at noon on 3 Jan.

The salary of a Senator is $174,000 per annum, with tax-free expense allowance and allowances for travelling expenses and for clerical hire. The salary of the Speaker of the House of Representatives is $223,500 per annum, with a taxable allowance. The salary of a Member of the House is $174,000 ($193,400 for the Majority Leader and Minority Leader).

No Senator or Representative can, during the time for which he is elected, be appointed to any civil office under authority of the USA which shall have been created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the USA can be a member of either House during his continuance in office.

American Indians. By an Act passed on 2 June 1924 full citizenship was granted to all American Indians born in the USA, though those remaining in tribal units were still under special federal jurisdiction. The Indian Reorganization Act of 1934 gave the tribal Indians, at their own option, substantial opportunities of self-government and the establishment of self-controlled corporate enterprises empowered to borrow money and buy land, machinery and equipment; these corporations are controlled by democratically elected tribal councils. Recently a trend towards releasing American Indians from federal supervision has resulted in legislation terminating supervision over specific tribes. In 1988 the federal government recognized that it had a special relationship with, and a trust responsibility for, federally recognized American Indian entities in continental USA and tribal entities in Alaska. In 2010 the Bureau of Indian Affairs listed 564 'Indian Entities Recognized and Eligible to Receive Services'. Total American Indian and Alaska Native population at the 2010 census was 2,932,248, of which California (362,801), Oklahoma (321,687), Arizona (296,529) and New Mexico (193,222) accounted for more than 40%.

The District of Columbia, ceded by the State of Maryland for the purposes of government in 1791, is the seat of the US government. It includes the city of Washington, and embraces a land area of 61 sq. miles. The Reorganization Plan No. 3 of 1967 instituted a Mayor Council form of government with appointed officers. In 1973 an elected Mayor and elected councillors were introduced; in 1974 they received power to legislate in local matters. Congress retains power to enact legislation and to veto or supersede the Council's acts. Since 1961 citizens have had the right to vote in national elections. In 1978 the Senate approved a constitutional amendment giving the District full voting representation in Congress but it was not ratified by the requisite three-quarters of the states within seven years and so expired in 1985.

The Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Guam and the Virgin Islands each have a local legislature, whose acts may be modified or annulled by Congress, though in practice this has seldom been done. Puerto Rico, since its attainment of commonwealth status on 25 July 1952, enjoys practically complete self-government, including the election of its governor and other officials. The conduct of foreign relations, however, is still a federal function and federal bureaux and agencies still operate in the island.

General supervision of territorial administration is exercised by the Office of Territories in the Department of Interior.

Local Government

The Union comprises 13 original states, seven states which were admitted without having been previously organized as territories, and 30 states which had been territories—50 states in all. Each state has its own constitution (which the USA guarantees shall be republican in form), deriving its authority, not from Congress, but from the people of the state. Admission of states into the Union has been granted by special Acts of Congress, either (1) in the form of 'enabling Acts' providing for the drafting and ratification of a state constitution by the people, in which case the territory becomes a state as soon as the conditions are fulfilled, or (2) accepting a constitution already framed, and at once granting admission.

Each state is provided with a legislature of two Houses (except Nebraska, which since 1937 has had a single-chamber legislature), a governor and other executive officials, and a judicial system. Both Houses of the legislature are elective, but the senators (having larger electoral districts usually covering two or three counties compared with the single county or, in some states, the town, which sends one representative to the Lower House) are less numerous than the representatives, while in 38 states their terms are four years; in 12 states the term is two years. Of the four-year Senates, Illinois, Montana and New Jersey provide for two four-year terms and one two-year term in each decade. Terms of the lower houses are usually shorter; in 45 states, two years. The trend is towards annual sessions of state legislatures; most meet annually now whereas in 1939 only four did.

The Governor is elected by direct vote of the people over the whole state for a term of office ranging in the various states from two to four years and with a salary ranging from $70,000 (Maine) to $190,823 (Pennsylvania). However, Florida Governor Rick Scott has elected to receive an annual salary of just 12 cents while Alabama Governor Robert Bentley has not taken a gubernatorial salary at all since taking office in 2011. The Governor's duty is to see to the faithful administration of the law, and he has command of the military forces of the state. He may recommend measures but does not present bills to the legislature. In some states he presents estimates. In all but one of the states (North Carolina) the Governor has a veto upon legislation, which may, however, be overridden by the two Houses, in some states by a simple majority, in others by a three-fifths or two-thirds majority. In some states the Governor, on his death or resignation, is succeeded by a Lieut.-Governor who was elected at the same time and has been presiding over the state Senate. In several states the Speaker of the Lower House succeeds the Governor.

National Anthem

The Star-spangled Banner, 'Oh say, can you see by the dawn's early light'; words by F. S. Key, 1814, tune by J. S. Smith; formally adopted by Congress 3 March 1931.

CURRENT LEADERS

Barack Obama

Position

President

Introduction

Barack Obama became the 44th president of the USA in Jan. 2009 and the first African American to hold the office. Having secured the Democratic candidacy, he contested the presidential election in Nov. 2008 against a background of deepening economic crisis. Viewed as on the centre-liberal wing of his party, Obama's principal electoral pledges included the introduction of a national health insurance plan and a scaling down of the US troop presence in Iraq. He also sought to counter the economic crisis with stimulus measures, while his Republican opponent advocated a curb on spending. On foreign policy, Obama confirmed the USA's military commitment to the campaign against terrorism, while seeking to promote compliance with international law and the adoption of democratic values across the world political stage. He was re-elected for a second and final term on 6 Nov. 2012 and was inaugurated in Jan. 2013. In his final annual state-of-the-union address in Jan. 2016, he defended his domestic record but lamented the congressional partisan divisions that increasingly hampered the progress of his presidency and its legacy.

Early Life

Barack Hussein Obama was born on 4 Aug. 1961 in Honolulu, Hawaii, to a Kenyan father and white American mother. His parents divorced and, following his mother's remarriage in 1967, the family moved to Indonesia, where Obama was educated until the age of ten. He attended Punahou School in Honolulu and Occidental College, Los Angeles, before graduating from Columbia University, New York, in 1983 with a BA in political science. From 1983–85 he worked at Business International Corporation and at the New York Public Interest Research Group, then moved to Chicago to become director of the church-based Developing Communities Project (DCP). From 1985–88 he led the DCP, expanding its staff and budget and establishing new projects. He attended Harvard Law School from 1988–91 and was elected president of the Harvard Law Review in 1990.

Following his graduation Obama took up a fellowship with the University of Chicago Law School, where he taught constitutional law from 1992–2004. In 1992 he directed 'Illinois Project Vote!', a campaign to register African Americans to vote, and from 1992–2002 he served on the boards of various community organizations and foundations, including the Joyce Foundation and Public Allies. In 1993 he joined law firm Davis, Miner, Barnhill & Galland, practising first as an associate then as a counsel. In 1995 he published a memoir, Dreams from My Father: A Story of Race and Inheritance.

In 1996 Obama was elected senator for the 13th District of Illinois, subsequently winning re-election in 1998 and 2002. As senator he supported health care and welfare reforms, sponsored a law to increase tax credits for low paid workers and promoted tighter regulation of the mortgage industry. In 2003, in co-operation with Republican senators, he led legislation to monitor police procedures in the state of Illinois, requiring police to profile the ethnicity of motorists they stopped and making it compulsory to videotape interrogations of homicide suspects.

After an unsuccessful run for the House of Representatives in 2000, Obama mounted a campaign for the 2004 US Senate elections. He attracted national attention at that year's National Democratic Convention when he gave a keynote speech, 'The Audacity of Hope', in which he spoke of the shared aspirations and efforts of American citizens and set out government's obligations towards them. In Nov. 2004 Obama was elected to the US Senate with 70% of the vote, the largest winning margin in Illinois state history. In office he supported legislation to reduce carbon emissions, voted for robust border controls and immigration reform, and campaigned for controls on political financing, in particular gifts and funding provided by lobbyists.

Having opposed military action against Iraq in 2003, he continued to criticize the conduct of the war. As a member of the Senate's foreign relations committee, he explored ways of reducing the threat from conventional weapons and, with Republican Senator Richard G. Lugar, co-authored a law extending US co-operation in identifying and disposing of stockpiled weapons. He supported successive bills calling for international intervention in Sudan and in 2006 voted for a no-fly zone over Darfur. Obama also served on the health, education, labour and pensions committees, the committee on veterans' affairs and the committee on homeland security and governmental affairs. In these areas he supported moves to expand early years schooling, to increase financial help for low-income high school and college students and to provide funding for veterans to attend college.

In Feb. 2007 Obama announced his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination. Campaigning on the themes of change and unity, he promised to address the key issues of Iraq, health care and the USA's dependence on oil. Obama fought a vigorous contest with main rival Hillary Clinton throughout 2007 and early 2008, gaining praise for his oratory while defending himself against charges of inexperience. In May 2007 he pledged a national health insurance plan open to all. Criticized by environmentalists for supporting liquefied coal, he subsequently modified his position. On the Iraq War, he argued for the phased redeployment of US forces and the withdrawal of combat troops, as proposed in his Iraq War De-Escalation Act of 2007.

By June 2008 Obama had secured the support of a majority of Democratic Party delegates and was confirmed at the Democratic National Convention of Aug. 2008. He selected Joe Biden, the long-serving senator of Delaware, as his running mate.

Some commentators claimed that during the campaign Obama softened his line on troop withdrawal from Iraq and on gun control. His decision to use private donations for his presidential campaign reversed an earlier pledge to work within federal public funding limits. He accused his opponents of 'gaming this broken system' when turning his back on $84m. that would have been available to him and, in doing so, becoming the first presidential candidate in over three decades to bypass the federal system in favour of raising unlimited private finance. During the early weeks of campaigning, polls showed a close contest between Obama and Republican candidate John McCain, with Obama being seen as inexperienced in foreign affairs. However, the failure of key US financial institutions in late 2008 focused attention on the economy, prompting a spike in Obama's support. He called for regulatory reforms and a bipartisan approach to tackling the crisis and voted in favour of President Bush's $700bn. package to buy up mortgage-related securities. Obama won the election on 4 Nov. 2008 with 53% of the vote to McCain's 46% and by 365 electoral college votes to 173.

In the transition between his election and inauguration, Obama appointed Rahm Emanuel as chief of staff and former election rival, Hillary Clinton, as secretary of state. Both appointments were seen as an indication that he would tap the experience of long-serving politicians and officials and retain much of the previous administration's foreign policy. He also gathered an economic team and began preparing a stimulus plan to aid economic recovery through investment.

Career in Office

Obama was inaugurated on 20 Jan. 2009. Because of a minor misreading of the oath of office on the part of Chief Justice John Roberts, which caused Obama to make a similar error, he took the oath for a second time on 21 Jan. 2009. Among his first presidential aims was the fulfilment of an election pledge that the administration would run down and eventually close the detention facility for terrorist suspects at the US naval base in Guantanamo Bay. However, this aspiration has proved elusive throughout his terms of office. Other early measures included tightening restrictions on lobbyists joining the administration, introducing stricter curbs on fuel emissions, enacting equal pay legislation and expanding children's health care.

Obama sought bipartisan support for a $825bn. stimulus package, which aimed to boost economic recovery through sustained investment programmes. However, most Republicans opposed the package, arguing for less direct government spending and tax reductions. After Republicans forced substantial amendments, the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act was passed on 13 Feb. 2009, relying almost exclusively on Democrat support. Worth a slightly reduced $787bn., it detailed plans for unprecedented levels of investment in education, health care, infrastructure, the environment, employment and tax reduction.

On foreign policy, Obama's early months saw a move away from the hawkish tone of the previous administration. In Feb. 2009 he announced that most US troops would be withdrawn from Iraq by 31 Aug. 2010, with residual forces leaving by the end of 2011. He also signalled a change of approach on Afghanistan, indicating that, although troop numbers would initially be increased in an echo of the 'surge' tactics employed in Iraq, he was reviewing strategy and did not believe the region could be stabilized by military means alone. Obama also changed the tone of the USA's dealings with the Middle East, sending envoys to Syria in March 2009 and expressing a willingness to talk to Iran's leaders, subject to their compliance with UN directives on nuclear development. He was similarly cautious on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict, reaffirming the USA's commitment to pursuing a two-state solution while maintaining the previous administration's stance of refusing to talk to the militant Hamas leadership in Gaza. He gave moderate encouragement to the idea of closer dialogue between the USA and China and opened up the possibility of negotiations between the USA and Russia on cutting nuclear stockpiles and on curbing the development of new weapons.

However, one year on from his inauguration Obama had yet to secure any major policy objectives and his personal approval rating among voters had slipped markedly according to opinion polls. Despite the significant injections of borrowed money to stimulate demand and boost the economy, job creation proved slow and unemployment rose to 10% in 2009. Economic weakness in turn further undermined the country's fiscal position.

Obama's radical health care reform plan to extend insurance cover to all Americans proved particularly contentious and has remained the subject of fierce public and congressional division. The House of Representatives and the Senate each passed their own bills on health care reform in late 2009. In Jan. 2010 the loss of the Democrats' critical 60-40 majority in the Senate upset plans to reconcile the two bills. Nonetheless, the health care reform was passed in March 2010, by 56-43 votes in the Senate and by 220-207 in the House of Representatives, and it was hoped that under its terms coverage would extend to a further 32m. Americans. The legislation continued to be widely challenged as unconstitutional before its validity was upheld by a majority vote of the Supreme Court in June 2012. However, implementation of the system, from 1 Oct. 2013, has been plagued by operational shortcomings and remains a focus of public discontent—reflected in a further dramatic fall in Obama's approval ratings among voters.

In Sept. 2009 Obama eased friction with Russia as he announced the abandonment of a missile defence deployment in the Czech Republic and Poland. In March 2010 the two countries agreed a treaty to replace the START Treaty on nuclear arms reduction. Obama was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in Oct. 2009 for his efforts to create 'a new international atmosphere'. Relations with China, however, worsened over trade and currency policy, US weapons sales to Taiwan and, in Feb. 2010, the president's meeting with the Dalai Lama of Tibet.

In April 2010 an explosion in the Gulf of Mexico led to the biggest oil spill in US history, causing huge damage to local communities and the economy. The political fallout, together with the rise in support for the conservative libertarian Tea Party movement, again hit Obama's ratings. In mid-term congressional elections in Nov. that year, the Republicans made sweeping gains to regain control of the House of Representatives, heralding a legislative gridlock with the Democratic majority in the Senate.

Obama's pressure on the Israeli government to stop settlement building on Palestinian land in the Middle East has been largely resisted by Prime Minister Netanyahu, undermining US efforts to broker further talks between the Israeli and Palestinian authorities. Although critical of Israeli policy, the US government did, however, oppose the UN General Assembly's recognition in Nov. 2012 of Palestine's enhanced status as a non-member observer state. After some progress in improving relations with Syria, with a US ambassador appointed in Feb. 2010 after a five-year gap, President Assad's violent response to domestic dissent and the country's subsequent descent into civil war from 2011 ruptured US-Syrian ties and led to threats of US military intervention. In March 2011 Obama committed the USA to join the NATO military intervention in Libya to protect civilians against the Gaddafi regime, stating that Americans could not brush aside 'responsibilities to our fellow human beings'. Meanwhile, there was a potential thaw in long-standing US-Iranian enmity from the second half of 2013. In Sept. a telephone conversation between Obama and new Iranian president Hassan Rouhani marked the first direct communication between leaders of the two countries since 1979, and in July 2015 Iran reached a historic agreement with the major Western countries, Russia and China to limit its controversial nuclear development programme in return for an easing of economic sanctions.

In Afghanistan Obama initially intensified the war, announcing further troop deployments during 2009 to fight the Taliban insurgency. There was a subsequent scaling down of foreign involvement in the country and NATO combat forces (including US troops) were finally withdrawn by the end of 2014, apart from residual personnel to help train and advise the Afghan army. However, in March 2015 Obama announced that the US withdrawal would be postponed and in Oct. he proposed to keep some 5,000 US troops in the country to help with counter-terrorism operations.

In May 2011 US special forces killed Osama bin Laden, having traced him to a compound in Abbottabad in northwestern Pakistan. Bin Laden, the leader of the al-Qaeda movement responsible for the 11 Sept. attacks on New York and Washington, D.C. in 2001, had been in hiding for almost ten years. Obama commented that 'his demise should be welcomed by all who believe in peace and human dignity'. The operation strained already uneasy relations between the USA and Pakistan.

Following his re-election on 6 Nov. 2012 Obama was again embroiled in congressional discord over US debt and federal expenditure. Earlier, in 2011, the government had reached its legal federal debt ceiling, heralding several months of political wrangling before a last-minute cross-party debt-reduction agreement in Aug. to raise the ceiling and stave off the risk of a default. At the same time, Standard & Poor's rating agency downgraded the USA's triple-A credit rating for the first time. In Oct. 2013 the federal government shut down non-essential operations for over two weeks after Congress failed to approve a spending bill for the next financial year. A damaging default was avoided when Democrats and Republicans reached another cross-party deal to end the stand-off. In Feb. 2014 Congress passed legislation to raise the debt ceiling for another year and in Dec. reached a $1trn. budget agreement to fund the federal government until Sept. 2015. The following month Obama and the outgoing Republican Speaker of the House of Representatives—to the surprise of many commentators—reached a new agreement to suspend the debt ceiling and settle spending for 2016 and 2017. Earlier, in Oct. 2014 the Federal Reserve Board had announced that it was ending its quantitative easing programme launched six years previously to support the US economy through the global financial crisis.

US diplomatic integrity was seriously compromised in 2013 by leaked revelations about the worldwide covert electronic surveillance activities of its National Security Agency, including the monitoring of close allies. In response, Obama proposed reforms in Jan. 2014 to include curbs on warrantless intrusion and the retention of data. US-Russian relations deteriorated sharply from March 2014 as Russia annexed the Ukrainian territory of Crimea in response to a separatist rebellion in the east of that country, and the US government imposed punitive sanctions on Moscow. Meanwhile, the rapid rise during the year of the militant Islamic State (IS) jihadist movement across swathes of Iraq and Syria has prompted ongoing US-led military air strikes against IS targets, with support from some Arab and Western nations, since Sept. that year. In Dec. 2014 Obama and Cuba's president, Raúl Castro, reached an historic agreement to normalize relations between their countries after decades of enmity. In July 2015 Cuban and US embassies reopened in the respective capitals of Washington, D.C. and Havana.

In Nov. 2014, reflecting continuing voter dissatisfaction with Obama and the Democrats, the Republican Party had won its biggest majority in the House of Representatives in over 60 years and also regained control of the Senate at the mid-term congressional elections. In the same month, Obama courted controversy when he said that he would use his executive powers to allow millions of illegal immigrants to apply for work permits and avoid the threat of deportation, further straining congressional bipartisan co-operation.

Reacting to the catalogue of fatal shooting incidents and mass casualties including children during his presidency, Obama made a plea in Jan. 2016 for gun control in the USA. However, his declared intention to bypass Congress and take limited executive action to at least ensure gun registration and background checks on owners prompted stiff resistance from the influential National Rifle Association lobby group.

Also in Jan., against the background of continuing friction between the White House and Congress, Obama called on the American people in his last state-of-the-union address to 'fix our politics' and break through the rancour of partisan differences.

DEFENCE

The President is C.-in-C. of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

The National Security Act of 1947 provides for the unification of the Army, Navy and Air Forces under a single Secretary of Defense with cabinet rank. The President is also advised by a National Security Council and the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization.

Defence expenditure in 2012 totalled $655,388m. ($2,088 per capita). Defence spending in 2012 represented 4.2% of GDP (down from 37.8% in 1944, 14.2% in 1953, 9.4% in 1968 and 6.2% of GDP in 1986 although up from the post-war low of 3.0% in 1999). The USA spent more on defence in 2012 than the next 15 biggest spenders combined. US expenditure was 41.3% of the world total, although its population is less than 5% of the world total. In 1997 the Quadrennial Defense Review (QDR) was implemented—a plan to transform US defence strategy and military forces.

Conscription was first introduced during the American Civil War in 1862 and operated during all subsequent major periods of conflict including World Wars I and II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War. A limited draft was also employed in peacetime in the Cold War and early 1960s. The final draft ended in 1973 when the USA converted to an all-volunteer military. Although conscription is not currently in force the Military Selective Service Act requires all males between the ages of 18 and 26 to register for compulsory military service should the need arise.

Active duty military personnel in Sept. 2011 numbered 1,468,364, of which 214,098 were women. In Dec. 2010 US armed forces abroad numbered 291,700, including 103,700 in and around Afghanistan and 85,600 in and around Iraq. In Dec. 2011 the last US troops left Iraq although 4,000 remained in neighbouring Kuwait. However, US troops have been redeployed in Iraq since June 2014 to oppose Islamic State forces active in the country. By the end of 2015 some 3,550 US troops were on active duty. There were 55 active duty military deaths in the US armed forces participating in Operation Enduring Freedom (Afghanistan) and Operation New Dawn (Iraq) in 2014 but then none in 2015. In June 2011 President Obama announced that 10,000 troops would be withdrawn from Afghanistan by the end of 2011 and a further 23,000 by the end of Sept. 2012. There were 29,000 US troops serving with the International Security Assistance Force (ISAF) in Afghanistan in Sept. 2014, although the mission's mandate expired at the end of the year. As of Dec. 2015 the USA contributed 6,800 troops to the 12,900 personnel charged with training, advising and assisting the Afghan National Security Forces under the aegis of Operation Resolute Support. It also supplied about 3,000 troops for use in counter-terrorism operations, making around 9,800 in Afghanistan overall. It is expected that the number of troops deployed in total will fall to 5,500 by early 2017. US troop deaths in Iraq between 2003 and the end of 2012 totalled 4,411 (peaking at 903 in 2007); deaths in Afghanistan between 2001 and March 2016 totalled 2,345 (peaking at 498 in 2010).

The USA is the world's largest exporter of arms, with 31.1% of the global major weapons total over the period 2010–14.

The USA's last nuclear test was in 1993. In accordance with START I—the treaty signed by the US and USSR in 1991 to reduce strategic offensive nuclear capability—the number of strategic nuclear warheads (intercontinental ballistic missiles, submarine-launched ballistic missiles and bombers) in Jan. 2015 was approximately 1,900. There were also about 180 non-strategic warheads in Jan. 2015, making a total of around 2,080 deployed warheads. There are a further 2,680 warheads held in reserve and another 2,500 scheduled to be dismantled. In May 2010 the Obama administration announced that the USA had a total of 5,113 active nuclear warheads, down from a peak of 31,225 in 1967. Strategic nuclear delivery vehicles were made up as follows:

Intercontinental ballistic missiles: 450 Minuteman III.

Submarine-launched ballistic missiles: 288 Trident II.

Bombers: 78 B-52H; 11 B-2.

START I expired in Dec. 2009. In July 2007 the Bush administration decided not to extend the treaty beyond the original expiry date. In May 2001 President Bush called for the development of an anti-missile shield to move beyond the constraints of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. In Dec. 2001 he announced that the USA was unilaterally abandoning the Treaty. On 24 May 2002 the USA and Russia signed an arms control treaty (the Strategic Offensive Reductions Treaty or Moscow Treaty) to reduce the number of US and Russian warheads, from between 6,000 and 7,000 each to between 1,700 and 2,200 each. The treaty was in force from June 2003 until Feb. 2011. It was then superseded by the Measures to Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (New START), signed by the US and Russian presidents in April 2010 and ratified by the US Senate in Dec. 2010 and the Russian Federal Assembly in Jan. 2011. It laid out terms for the number of warheads on each side to be limited to 1,550 by 2017, a 30% drop on previous levels.

Estimates of the number of firearms in the country are around 310m., equivalent to 99 firearms for every 100 people, making the USA the world's most heavily armed country.

With a total of 3.2m. employees in 2009, the Department of Defense is the world's largest employer.

Army

Secretary of the Army (acting): Patrick Murphy.

The Secretary of the Army is the head of the Department of the Army. Subject to the authority of the President as C.-in-C. and of the Secretary of Defense, he is responsible for all affairs of the Department.

The Army consists of the Active Army, the Army National Guard of the US, the Army Reserve and civilian workforce; and all persons appointed to or enlisted into the Army without component; and all persons serving under call or conscription, including members of the National Guard of the States, etc., when in the service of the US. The active duty strength of the Army was 565,463 (79,694 women) in Sept. 2011.

The Army budget for fiscal year 2016 was $146,928m., with a request for fiscal year 2017 of $148,034m.

Starting in 2006 the Army undertook its widest-ranging reorganization since the end of the Second World War in order to allow it to deploy continuously in different parts of the world. Subsequent cuts to the defence budget saw the Pentagon announce in Feb. 2014 plans to reduce active troop numbers from 520,000 to between 440,000 and 450,000, its lowest level since 1940 (before the USA entered the Second World War).

The US Army Forces Command (FORSCOM), with headquarters at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, is the largest United States Army Command and consists of more than 750,000 Active Army, US Army Reserve and Army National Guard soldiers. The other Army Commands are US Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) and US Army Materiel Command (AMC). The Army Service Component Commands are: United States Army Cyber Command/Second Army; United States Army Central (USARCENT)/Third Army; United States Army North (USARNORTH)/Fifth Army; United States Army South (USARSO)/Sixth Army; United States Army Europe (USAREUR)/Seventh Army; United States Army Africa (USARAF)/Ninth Army; United States Army Pacific (USARPAC); United States Army Special Operations Command (USASOC); Military Surface Deployment and Distribution Command (SDDC).

The United States Army Space and Missile Defense Command (SMDC), created in 1997 and with its headquarters at Redstone Arsenal, Alabama, is a specialized major command within the United States Army. The First United States Army now serves as a mobilization, readiness and training command.

Approximately 32% of the Active Army is deployed outside the continental USA. Several divisions, which are located in the USA, keep equipment in Germany and can be flown there in 48–72 hours. Headquarters of US Seventh and Eighth Armies are in Europe and Korea respectively.

Combat vehicles of the US Army are the tank, armoured personnel carrier, infantry fighting vehicle, and the armoured command vehicle. The Army's main battle tank is the M1A2 Abrams; its standard infantry fighting vehicle is the M2A3 Bradley.

The Army has nearly 4,900 aircraft, all but about 300 of them helicopters, including AH-1 Cobra and AH-64 Apache attack helicopters.

Over 95% of recruits enlisting in the Army have a high-school education and over 50% of the Army is married. Women serve in both combat support and combat service support units.

The National Guard is a reserve military component with both a state and a federal role. Enlistment is voluntary. The members are recruited by each state, but are equipped and paid by the federal government (except when performing state missions). As the organized militia of the several states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Territories of the Virgin Islands and Guam, the Guard may be called into service for local emergencies by the chief executives in those jurisdictions; and may be called into federal service by the President to thwart invasion or rebellion or to enforce federal law. In its role as a reserve component of the Army, the Guard is subject to the order of the President in the event of national emergency. In 2011 it numbered 465,071 (Army, 358,391; Air Force, 106,680).

The Army Reserve is designed to supply qualified and experienced units and individuals in an emergency. Members of units are assigned to the Ready Reserve, which is subject to call by the President in case of national emergency without declaration of war by Congress. The Standby Reserve and the Retired Reserve may be called only after declaration of war or national emergency by Congress. In 2011 the Army Reserve numbered 198,000.

Navy

Secretary of the Navy: Ray Mabus.

The Navy's Operating Forces include the Atlantic Fleet, divided between the 2nd fleet (home waters) and 6th fleet (Mediterranean) and the Pacific Fleet, similarly divided between the 3rd fleet (home waters), the 7th fleet (West Pacific) and the 5th fleet (Indian Ocean), which was formally activated in 1995 and maintained by units from both Pacific and Atlantic.

The Navy budget for fiscal year 2016 was $168,787m., with a request for fiscal year 2017 of $164,861m.

The active duty strength of the Navy was 325,123 (53,385 women) in Sept. 2011.

The active ship force levels of the Navy in the year indicated:

Category	2000	2005	2010	2011
Aircraft Carriers	12	12	11	11
Cruisers	27	23	22	22
Destroyers	54	46	59	61

Amphibious	41	37	33	31
Auxiliary	57	45	47	47
Total Active	318	282	288	285

Ships in the Naval Reserve Force, Military Sealift Command and Naval Fleet Auxiliary Force are included in this table.

Submarine Forces. A principal part of the US naval task is to deploy the seaborne strategic deterrent from nuclear-powered ballistic missile-carrying submarines (SSBN), of which there were 14 in 2012, all of the Ohio class. The listed total of 57 tactical submarines in 2012 comprised four Ohio class guided-missile submarines, plus 41 attack submarines of the Los Angeles class, three of the Seawolf class and nine of the Virginia class.

Surface Combatant Forces. The surface combatant forces are comprised of modern cruisers, destroyers and frigates. These ships provide multi-mission capabilities to achieve maritime dominance in the crowded and complex littoral warfare environment.

As of 2012 the cruiser force consisted of 22 Ticonderoga class ships. There were 62 active guided-missile Arleigh Burke Aegis class destroyers and 22 active Oliver Hazard Perry class guided-missile frigates.

Aircraft carriers. There were ten nuclear-powered Nimitz class carriers in 2012, the first of which, USS Nimitz, was commissioned on 3 May 1975 and the tenth and last of which, USS George H. W. Bush, was commissioned on 10 Jan. 2009. USS Enterprise, completed in 1961, was the prototype nuclear-powered carrier and was in service until Dec. 2012 when it was retired, temporarily reducing the number of aircraft carriers to ten. Each of the Nimitz class carriers can carry between 85 and 90 fixed-wing aircraft and helicopters. Strike fighter planes are primarily F/A-18 Hornets and Super Hornets.

Naval Aviation. The principal function of the naval aviation organization (strength in 2009 of 98,588) is to train and provide combat ready aviation forces. The main carrier-borne combat aircraft in the 2009 inventory were 753 F/A-18 Hornet dual-purpose fighter/attack aircraft out of a total of 900 combat-capable aircraft.

The Marine Corps

While administratively part of the Department of the Navy, the Corps ranks as a separate armed service, with the Commandant serving in his own right as a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and responsible directly to the Secretary of the Navy. Its strength was 204,261 in 2009.

The role of the Marine Corps is to provide specially trained and equipped amphibious expeditionary forces. The Corps includes an autonomous aviation element numbering 34,700 in 2009.

The US Coast Guard

The Coast Guard operates under the Department of Homeland Security in time of peace and as part of the Navy in time of war or when directed by the President. The act of establishment stated the Coast Guard 'shall be a military service and branch of the armed forces of the United States at all times'.

The Coast Guard is the country's oldest continuous sea-going service and its missions include maintenance of aids to navigation, icebreaking, environmental response (oil spills), maritime law enforcement, marine licensing, port security, search and rescue and waterways management.

The workforce in 2009 was made up of 43,598 military personnel augmented by 7,659 civilians. On an average Coast Guard day, the service saves 14 lives, boards 193 ships and boats, seizes $12.9m. worth of illegal drugs, conducts 74 search and rescue cases, processes 375 seaman's documents, investigates 24 marine casualty accidents, inspects 18 commercial fishing vessels, assists 98 people in distress, services 135 aids to navigation and interdicts 17 illegal immigrants.

Air Force

Secretary of the Air Force: Deborah James.

The Department of the Air Force was activated within the Department of Defense on 18 Sept. 1947, under the terms of the National Security Act of 1947.

The USAF has the mission to defend the USA through control and exploitation of air, space and cyberspace. For operational purposes the service is divided into nine major commands, 35 field operating agencies and four direct-reporting units. In addition there are two reserve components: the Air Force Reserve and the Air National Guard.

Major commands accomplish designated phases of USAF worldwide activities. They also organize, administer, equip and train their subordinate elements. In descending order, elements of major commands include numbered air forces, wings, groups, squadrons and flights. The basic unit for generating and employing combat capability is the wing, considered to be the Air Force's prime war-fighting instrument. The bulk of the combat forces are grouped under the Air Combat Command, which controls strategic bombing, tactical strike, air defence and reconnaissance assets in the USA.

Air Force bombers include the B-1B Lancer, the B-2A Spirit and the B-52H Stratofortress, which has been the primary manned strategic bomber for 50 years. In the fighter category are the F-22A Raptor, F-15 Eagle and Strike Eagle and the F-16 Fighting Falcon.

The Air Force budget for fiscal year 2016 was $161,783m., with a request for fiscal year 2017 of $166,879m.

The active duty strength of the Air Force was 333,370 (63,552 women) in Sept. 2011—19.1% of personnel were women, compared to 16.4% in the Navy and 13.6% in the Army. Since 1991 women have been authorized to fly combat aircraft, but not until 1993 were they allowed to fly fighters.

ECONOMY

Services accounted for 79% of GDP in 2011, industry 20% and agriculture 1%.

Per capita personal income in 2014 was $46,049, more than double the 1994 total of $22,538.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, the United States ranked equal 16th in the world in a 2015 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 76 out of 100 in the annual index.

In 2014 the USA gave $33.1bn. in international aid, the highest figure of any country. In terms of a percentage of GNI, however, the USA was one of the least generous major industrialized countries, giving just 0.19% (compared to more than 0.6% in the early 1960s).

Overview

The USA remains an economic powerhouse, producing around 20% of total global output. However, based on GDP measured by Purchasing Power Parity, China's economy became the world's largest in 2014—a position previously held by the USA for over a century. The USA's volume of trade is the largest in the world, although the value of the external sector as a percentage of GDP is relatively low. It is self-sufficient in most raw materials, with the notable exception of oil (although it is predicted that domestic shale oil production will lead to self-sufficiency by the 2030s). Core industries include motor vehicles, steel, aerospace, chemicals, telecommunications, electronics, computers and military equipment. Since 1992 the economy has grown at higher average rates than in the other OECD and G7 countries in most years, and per capita GDP is higher than in other G7 states. The economy, however, is constrained by imbalances, including a low savings rate, a heavy reliance on consumer spending and a sizeable current account deficit. The global economy remains fragile following the 2008 financial crisis triggered by the collapse of the US sub-prime housing market. The ripple effects of the crisis continue to impact the USA as it struggles to maintain its leading status within the changing world economy.

By 1995 labour productivity in advanced Western European countries had reached US levels, but since then US labour and total factor productivity growth has outpaced that of other advanced economies. The principal sectors in which the USA outperforms its rivals are retail, wholesale and finance. It has also been able to extract greater efficiency gains from information technology-related investments. US firms enjoy greater flexibility than their counterparts in Western Europe and Asia in laying off workers and in introducing labour-saving equipment. However, income inequality is higher than in other advanced economies and the gap between skilled and unskilled labour incomes has been growing over the last three decades. Over 30m. Americans live below the poverty line with a disproportionate percentage of these being African-Americans. The USA also has a significant gender pay gap—at 36%, it showed the widest disparity of all the 38 developed countries surveyed in the International Labour Organization's Global Wage Report 2014/15.

The attacks of 11 Sept. 2001 posed serious challenges to the dollar payment system and stock market. Business investment relative to GDP plummeted in 2001–02, having reached record highs in the previous fiscal year. The collapse of the giant energy company Enron in Dec. 2002 was followed by other accounting scandals. However, in the third quarter of 2003 the economy recorded an annualized growth rate of 6.9%, fuelled by tax cuts, low interest rates and increased consumer and business spending. Interest rates began rising from then historic lows of 1.0% in 2003 with the federal funds rate reaching 5.25% by the end of 2006. Growth remained strong through 2006 despite the impact of Hurricane Katrina and high oil prices.

The sub-prime mortgage crisis of 2007 seriously damaged the wider economy. A sharp rise in defaults and foreclosures as a result of the rapid decline in house prices, which had begun in 2006, spread panic through the banking sector. A government stimulus package enacted in early 2008 (consisting of targeted tax rebates and investment incentives), together with interest rate cuts amounting to 5% by Dec. 2008, were aimed at raising confidence in the financial markets. However, market nervousness increased, prompting tougher lending criteria and declining asset prices. In Sept. 2008 Lehman Brothers became the first major bank to collapse since the start of the crisis. The government announced financial rescue packages for mortgage-lending giants Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac—between them responsible for half of the outstanding mortgages in the economy—along with American International Group, the country's biggest insurance company.

In Oct. 2008 the House of Representatives approved a $700bn. plan aimed at purchasing bad debts of failing institutions. Continued market turmoil then resulted in a further $250bn. investment that gave the government stakes in a range of banks. Interest rates reached their lowest recorded level at between 0–0.25% in Dec. 2008. In Feb. 2009 Congress approved President Obama's $787bn. economic stimulus plan, comprising tax breaks and money for social programmes, a move that substantially increased the fiscal deficit. The cost of military action in Iraq and Afghanistan, meanwhile, put further strain on the economy. Reported growth of 1.4% in the third quarter of 2009 brought an end to the recession. The fragile recovery was underpinned by the government stimulus measures, a rebound in world trade (with increasing demand from large emerging-market economies) and housing market stabilization. The economy nonetheless contracted by 2.8% in 2009 as a whole, while real annual GDP growth since 2000, at an average of 1.7%, was the lowest in a full decade since the 1930s. Further recovery was hampered by a combination of external events, such as rising oil prices, a debt crisis in the eurozone, and weak domestic drivers including low consumer spending and the sluggish housing market. However, GDP grew by 2.5% in 2010, and by early 2012 positive employment and retail sales figures saw the stock market jump to its highest level since May 2008.

Fiscal pressures have emerged with the retirement of the post-Second World War baby-boom generation and the rise in life expectancy, increasing the strain on welfare entitlement programmes. In March 2010 President Obama signed into law a health care reform bill to extend health insurance to an additional 32m. Americans, impose new taxes on the wealthy and outlaw restrictive insurance practices. According to the Congressional Budget Office, efficiencies contained in the health care bill were expected to cut the federal deficit by $138bn. over ten years. The US Department of Health and Human Services reported in March 2016 that approximately 20m. Americans had gained health coverage under the Affordable Care Act since 2010.

In Feb. 2011 Obama unveiled his 2012 Budget, which aimed to cut $1.1trn. from the US deficit over the following decade. However, political wrangling over raising the debt ceiling caused disruption on the financial markets as fears mounted that the economy would default. In Aug. 2011 Congress approved a bipartisan compromise deal that raised the debt ceiling by $2.4trn. from $14.3trn. and paved the way for savings of at least $2.1trn. over ten years. The international credit-rating agency Standard & Poor's downgraded the USA's AAA credit-rating to AA+ days after the deal had been reached, causing further volatility in the markets. This rating was reaffirmed in May 2015.

Against a background of congressional disagreements, a combination of scheduled tax increases and automatic spending cuts—known as the 'fiscal cliff'—threatened to push the economy into recession again at the start of 2013. Failure to reach an accord on the budget by 31 Dec. 2012 would have triggered automatic tax increases of over $500bn. and spending cuts of over $100bn. from domestic and military programmes, amounting to a 4–5% cut in output. However, a deal was reached on the eve of the deadline, based on a package of measures including limited tax rises for wealthier families and individuals and a short-term extension of unemployment benefits.

On 1 Oct. 2013 following a repeated failure by Congress to agree a budget for the next fiscal year, the government entered a partial shutdown of operations for the first time in 17 years. A short-term fiscal deal was struck on 17 Oct., funding the government until 15 Jan. 2014 and raising the debt ceiling until 7 Feb. Congress then agreed to raise the borrowing limit for another year in Feb. 2014. According to Standard & Poor's, the Oct. shutdown shaved $24bn. off the economy and cut growth significantly in the fourth quarter of 2013. To prevent a repeat shutdown, an omnibus spending bill was passed in Jan. 2014 to provide the government with funding of $1.1trn. for the 2014 fiscal year. In Oct. 2015 Congress passed a budget agreement that allowed for the debt ceiling to be raised until March 2017.

In April 2014 Janet Yellen, chair of the Federal Reserve, cut back the Fed's quantitative easing programme and closed monthly bond purchases with a final $15bn. buying round in Oct. 2014. The programme, which began in 2009, was the largest emergency economic stimulus in history and added over $3.5trn. to the Federal Reserve's balance sheet deficit—an amount roughly equal to the size of the German economy.

Economic recovery gained momentum from the second quarter of 2013 and throughout 2014. GDP growth averaged 2.0% in 2013 and 2014, rendering the economy 8% larger than its pre-crisis level. Despite a mild contraction in the first quarter of 2015, this positive trend continued with reported GDP growth of 3.7% in the second quarter and 2.0% in the third quarter. Unemployment had fallen by around 0.9% each year between 2010 and 2014, and by Feb. 2016 the jobless rate had dropped to 4.9%, its lowest level in eight years. The housing sector has meanwhile shown signs of sustained recovery and equity prices have reached new heights. Broadly balanced growth has resulted from a combination of the hydraulic fracturing energy boom, a rebound in the housing market, robust real consumer spending (which reached an all-time high in the fourth quarter of 2015) and an improved fiscal situation. The current account deficit shrank by 3.5% between the first and second quarters of 2014 but rose again in the latter half of the year, resulting from a fall in exports and in the value of repatriated profits from overseas investments. For both 2013 and 2014 the current account deficit stood at 2.2% of GDP, but increased to 2.7% in 2015.

The economic rebound is more fragile than any following previous recessions, since damage to the financial sector has not been fully repaired. Furthermore, government spending has created a fiscal drag and the long-expected retirement of baby-boomers has depressed the labour supply. The interest rate, which had been at or near zero since late 2008, was raised by a quarter percentage point in Dec. 2015 by the Federal Reserve—a rate maintained at the Fed's March 2016 meeting amid the uncertain global economic conditions and weak inflation. The economy continues to face a number of risks, including slow growth in emerging world markets and international political volatility. The IMF and OECD have forecast modest US growth in the medium term.

Currency

The unit of currency is the dollar (USD) of 100 cents. Notes are issued by the 12 Federal Reserve Banks, which are denoted by a branch letter (A = Boston, MA; B = New York, NY; C = Philadelphia, PA; D = Cleveland, OH; E = Richmond, VA; F = Atlanta, GA; G = Chicago, IL; H = St Louis, MO; I = Minneapolis, MN; J = Kansas City, MO; K = Dallas, TX; L = San Francisco, CA).

Inflation rates (based on OECD statistics):

3.4%	3.2%	2.9%	3.8%	-0.3%	1.6%	3.1%	2.1%	1.5%	1.6%

The inflation rate in 2015 according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics was 0.1%. Foreign exchange reserves in Dec. 2014 were $41,944m. and gold reserves were 261.50m. troy oz. The USA has the most gold reserves of any country, and more than the combined reserves of the next two (Germany and Italy). Broad money liabilities totalled $14,823.0bn. in Dec. 2013.

Budget

The budget covers virtually all the programmes of federal government, including those financed through trust funds, such as for social security, Medicare and highway construction. Receipts of the government include all income from its sovereign or compulsory powers; income from business-type or market-orientated activities of the government is offset against outlays. The fiscal year ends on 30 Sept. (before 1977 on 30 June). Budget receipts and outlays, including off-budget receipts and outlays (in $1m.):

¹Estimates.

President Obama released the fourth budget of his second term in Feb. 2016. The budget of $4.1trn. proposed cutting the deficit from $616bn. in fiscal year 2016 to $503bn. in fiscal year 2017. It sought to cut the deficit by $2.9trn. in the decade to 2026 through a mixture of savings (for instance on Medicare healthcare) and by reducing tax breaks for high earners (including raising the top rate of capital gains tax and closing the loophole allowing investment fund managers to treat income as capital gains). Plans were also put forward for new fees to be levied against the liabilities of large banks and for a $10-per-barrel tax on crude oil. The budget proposed $11bn. to assist the Departments of Defense and State to combat Islamic State militancy and to aid efforts to stabilize Syria. A further $19bn. was earmarked for investment in cyber security upgrades across government. Obama also called for spending on research and development to increase to $152bn., a 4% year-on-year rise. He proposed an increase in funding for clean energy research from $6.4bn. to $12.8bn. by 2020. Other measures included $4bn. on computer science education, $1bn. for cancer research, $1bn. for treatment of addictions to heroin and prescription pain medications, and an upgrade of the unemployment insurance system.

National Income

The Bureau of Economic Analysis of the Department of Commerce prepares detailed estimates on the national income and product. In Dec. 2003 the Bureau revised these accounts back to 1929. The principal tables are published monthly in Survey of Current Business; the complete set of national income and product tables are published in the Survey normally each Aug., showing data for recent years.

¹In 1996 the chain-weighted method of estimating GDP replaced that of constant base-year prices. In chain-weighting the weights used to value different sectors of the economy are continually updated to reflect changes in relative prices.

Performance

Total GDP in 2014 was $17,419.0bn. (making the USA by some way the world's largest economy), representing 22% of the world's total GDP (although in 2000 the USA's share of global GDP was 31%).

Real GDP growth rates (based on OECD statistics):

2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014
3.3%	2.7%	1.8%	-0.3%	-2.8%	2.5%	1.6%	2.2%	1.5%	2.4%

The real GDP growth rate in 2015 according to the Bureau of Economic Analysis was 2.4%. The USA's economy shrank by 3.7% in the third quarter of 2008, by 8.9% in the fourth quarter (the steepest quarterly fall since 1958) and by 5.3% in the first quarter of 2009. There was also negative growth in the second quarter of 2009, of 0.3%. The recession ended with growth of 1.4% in the third quarter of 2009.

The USA was ranked third in the Global Competitiveness Index in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2014–2015, up from fifth in the 2013–2014 report. The index analyses 12 areas of competitiveness for over 100 countries including macroeconomy, higher education and training, institutions, innovation and infrastructure. In the 2014 World Competitiveness Yearbook, compiled by the International Institute for Management Development, the USA came first in the world ranking (as it did the previous year). This annual publication ranks and analyses how a nation's business environment creates and sustains the competitiveness of enterprises.

Banking and Finance

The Federal Reserve System, established under The Federal Reserve Act of 1913, comprises the Board of seven Governors, the 12 regional Federal Reserve Banks with their 24 branches, and the Federal Open Market Committee. The seven members of the Board of Governors are appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate. Each Governor is appointed to a full term of 14 years or an unexpired portion of a term, one term expiring every two years. The Board exercises broad supervisory authority over the operations of the 12 Federal Reserve Banks, including approval of their budgets and of the appointments of their presidents and first vice presidents; it designates three of the nine directors of each Reserve Bank including the Chair and Deputy Chair. The Chair of the Federal Reserve Board is appointed by the President for four-year terms. The Chair is Janet Yellen. The Board has supervisory and regulatory responsibilities over banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System, bank holding companies, bank mergers, Edge Act and agreement corporations, foreign activities of member banks, international banking facilities in the USA, and activities of the US branches and agencies of foreign banks. Legislation of 1991 requires foreign banks to prove that they are subject to comprehensive consolidated supervision by a regulator at home, and have the Board's approval to establish branches, agencies and representative offices. The Board also assures the smooth functioning and continued development of the nation's vast payments system. Another area of the Board's responsibilities involves the implementation by regulation of major federal laws governing consumer credit.

From 1968 the Congress passed a number of consumer financial protection acts, the first of which was the Truth in Lending Act, for which it has directed the Board to write implementing regulations and assume partial enforcement responsibility. Others include the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, Home Mortgage Disclosure Act, Consumer Leasing Act, Fair Credit Billing Act, Truth in Savings Act and Electronic Fund Transfer Act. To manage these responsibilities the Board has established a Division of Consumer and Community Affairs. To assist it, the Board consults with a Consumer Advisory Council, established by the Congress in 1976 as a statutory part of the Federal Reserve System.

Another statutory body, the Federal Advisory Council, consists of 12 members (one from each district); it meets in Washington, D.C. four times a year to advise the Board of Governors on economic and banking developments. Following the passage of the Monetary Control Act of 1980, the Board of Governors established the Thrift Institutions Advisory Council to provide information and views on the special needs and problems of thrift institutions. The group is comprised of representatives of mutual savings banks, savings and loan associations, and credit unions.

All depository institutions (commercial and savings banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, US agencies and branches of foreign banks, and Edge Act and agreement corporations) must meet reserve requirements set by the Federal Reserve and hold the reserves in the form of vault cash or deposits at Federal Reserve Banks.

Banks which participate in the federal deposit insurance fund have their deposits insured against loss up to $100,000 for each account. The fund is administered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation established in 1933; it obtains resources through annual assessments on participating banks. All members of the Federal Reserve System are required to insure their deposits through the Corporation, and non-member banks may apply and qualify for insurance.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1992 originated with bank reform initiatives. It imposed new capital rules on banks, new reporting requirements and a code of 'safety and soundness' standards. The main aim of the Act is to reduce risk through rigorous enforcement of capital requirements. Regulators are required to take action where banks fail to observe these standards.

In March 2015 the largest banks in the USA in terms of market value were: Wells Fargo ($279.9bn.); J. P. Morgan Chase ($225.9bn.); and Bank of America ($161.9bn.).

The key stock exchanges are the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE Euronext) and the Nasdaq Stock Exchange (NASDAQ). There are several other stock exchanges, in Philadelphia, Boston, San Francisco (Pacific Stock Exchange) and Chicago, although trading is very limited in them.

Gross external debt totalled $15,415,265m. in June 2012 (compared to $15,199,591m. in June 2011).

The USA received $92.40bn. worth of foreign direct investment in 2014, down from $230.77bn. in 2013 and a record high of $314.01bn. in 2000. By the end of 2014 the total stock of foreign direct investment was $5,409.9bn.

By Aug. 2010, 45.1% of internet users in the USA were using online banking.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

In 2012 fossil fuels accounted for 81% of primary energy consumption (of which petroleum 36%, natural gas 27% and coal 18%), renewables (including biomass, hydro-power, wind, geothermal and solar) 9% and nuclear power 8%. Consumption of renewables surpassed nuclear power in 2011.

Environment

The USA's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy in 2011 accounted for 17.1% of the world total (the second highest after China) and were equivalent to 17.6 tonnes per capita (down from 20.2 tonnes per capita in 2001). The population of the USA is only 4.6% of the world total. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2016 ranked the USA 26th of 180 countries, with 84.7%. The index examined various factors in nine areas—agriculture, air quality, biodiversity and habitat, climate and energy, fisheries, forests, health impacts, water and sanitation, and water resources.

In March 2001 then President Bush rejected the 1997 Kyoto Protocol, which aimed to combat the rise in the earth's temperature through the reduction of industrialized nations' carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels by an average 5.2% below 1990 levels by 2012. In Feb. 2002 he unveiled an alternative climate change plan to the Kyoto Protocol, calling for voluntary measures to reduce the rate of increase of US carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels.

In 2009 President Obama endorsed an American Clean Energy and Security bill that laid out plans for an emissions trading scheme echoing the EU model. It was passed by the House of Representatives in 2009 but did not become law owing to inaction in the Senate. Obama had previously called for a reduction in US greenhouse gas emissions of 80% on 1990 levels by 2050.

The USA recycled 34.5% of its municipal solid waste in 2012.

Electricity

Net summer capacity in 2009 was 1,027.6m. kW. Fossil fuel accounts for approximately 69% of electricity generation. In 2009, 20% of electricity was produced by nuclear reactors. (The last one to begin commercial operation was in 1996.) The USA has more nuclear reactors in use than any other country in the world. In 2009 the USA had a nuclear generating capacity of 101,004 MW, with 104 nuclear reactors. Two reactors are under construction in Georgia, which are the first new ones to be built in the USA since the 1970s. They are expected to become operational in 2018 and 2019 respectively. Electricity generation in 2011 was 4,100,656m. kWh, the second highest in the world behind China (which overtook the USA as the largest producer that year). Consumption per capita in 2011 was 13,930 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Crude oil production (2014), 3,178m. bbls, the highest annual total since 1985. Up until 2008 production had been gradually declining since the mid-1980s, when annual production was 3,275m. bbls. In 2008 production was at its lowest level since 1946, at 1,830m. bbls. However, it has since risen sharply, largely thanks to the development of hydraulic fracturing (or 'fracking') and horizontal drilling. Only Saudi Arabia and Russia produced more crude oil in 2014, but the USA may have overtaken both of them during 2015 to be the leading producer. Proven reserves were 48.5bn. bbls in 2014. Output (2010) was valued at $150.31bn. Offshore oil accounts for about 33% of total production, but this is likely to increase in the future. Crude oil imports began to exceed production in 1993 and in 2015 totalled 2,683m. bbls, with Canada supplying over 40% of US oil imports.

In Oct. 2002 the USA took its first delivery of Russian oil for its Strategic Petroleum Reserve as a consequence of an energy dialogue declared by then Presidents George W. Bush and Vladimir Putin at their summit in May 2002. The USA is by far the largest single consumer of oil (888.5m. tonnes in 2008). In 2011 the USA exported more petroleum products than it imported on an annual basis for the first time since 1949.

The USA is by some distance the greatest single consumer of natural gas and also the largest producer (having overtaken Russia in 2010). Dry natural gas production, 2014, was a record 25.73trn. cu. ft. Shale gas production was 11.42trn. cu. ft in 2013 (47% of total US natural gas production), up from 0.4trn. cu. ft in 2000. Proven natural gas reserves in 2014 totalled 345trn. cu. ft.

Wind

The USA is the largest producer of wind power, with 190.9bn. kWh in 2015 (up from 94.7bn. kWh in 2010 and 26.6bn. kWh in 2006). In 2014 total installed capacity amounted to 65,877 MW, second only behind China.

Ethanol

The USA is the largest producer of ethanol (from maize). Production totalled 13,300m. gallons in 2012 (13,929m. gallons in 2011 and 13,298m. gallons in 2010).

Water

The total area within the 50 states of the USA plus the District of Columbia covered by water is 264,837 sq. miles. Total average annual water usage is nearly 67,000 cu. ft per person—more than twice the average for an industrialized nation.

Non-Fuel Minerals

The USA is wholly dependent upon imports for columbium, bauxite, mica sheet, manganese, strontium and graphite, and imports over 80% of its requirements of industrial diamonds, fluor spar, platinum, tantalum, tungsten, chromium and tin.

Total value of non-fuel minerals produced in 2011 (provisional) was $74bn. ($33bn. in 1990). Details of some of the main minerals produced are given in the following tables.

Production of metals (2012):

	Unit	Quantity
Aluminium	1,000 tonnes	2,070
Copper	1,000 tonnes	1,170
Gold	tonnes	235
Iron ore	1m. tonnes	54
Lead	1,000 tonnes	345
Silver	tonnes	1,060
Uranium	tonnes	1,596
Zinc	1,000 tonnes	738

In 2008 the value of metal mine production was $27.4bn. Precious metals are mined mainly in California and Utah (gold); and Nevada, Arizona and Idaho (silver).

Production of non-metals (2012):

	Unit	Quantity
Barite	1,000 tonnes	666
Boron	1,000 tonnes	confidential
Bromine	1,000 tonnes	confidential
Cement	1,000 tonnes	74,900
Clays	1,000 tonnes	25,800
Diatomite	1,000 tonnes	735
Feldspar	1,000 tonnes	525
Garnet (industrial)	1,000 tonnes	47
Gypsum	1m. tonnes	16
Lime	1m. tonnes	19
Phosphate rock	1m. tonnes	30
Pumice	1,000 tonnes	397
Salt	1m. tonnes	37
Sand and gravel	1m. tonnes	810 ¹
Stone (crushed/broken)	1m. tonnes	1,170

¹2011.

Coal

Proven recoverable coal reserves were 237,295m. short tons in 2008, more than a quarter of the world total. Output in 2008 (in 1m. short tons): 1,171.8 including bituminous coal, 555.3; sub-bituminous coal, 539.1; lignite, 75.7; anthracite, 1.7. 2008 output from surface workings, 814.7m. short tons; underground mines, 357.1m. short tons. Value of total output, 2008, $38.18bn. The USA is the world's second largest coal producer, after China.

Agriculture

Agriculture in the USA is characterized by its ability to adapt to widely varying conditions, and still produce an abundance and variety of agricultural products. From colonial times to about 1920 the major increases in farm production were brought about by adding to the number of farms and the amount of land under cultivation. During this period nearly 320m. acres of virgin forest were converted to crop land or pasture, and extensive areas of grasslands were ploughed. Improvident use of soil and water resources was evident in many areas.

During the next 20 years the number of farms reached a plateau of about 6.5m., and the acreage planted to crops held relatively stable around 330m. acres. The major source of increase in farm output arose from the substitution of power-driven machines for horses and mules. Greater emphasis was placed on development and improvement of land, and the need for conservation of basic agricultural resources was recognized. A successful conservation programme, highly co-ordinated and on a national scale—to prevent further erosion, to restore the native fertility of damaged land and to adjust land uses to production capabilities and needs—has been in operation since early in the 1930s.

Since the Second World War the uptrend in farm output has been greatly accelerated by increased production per acre and per farm animal. These increases are associated with a higher degree of mechanization; greater use of lime and fertilizer; improved varieties, including hybrid maize and grain sorghums; more effective control of insects and disease; improved strains of livestock and poultry; and wider use of good husbandry practices, such as nutritionally balanced feeds, use of superior sites and better housing. During this period land included in farms decreased slowly, crop land harvested declined somewhat more rapidly, but the number of farms declined sharply.

All land in farms totalled less than 500m. acres in 1870, rose to a peak of over 1,200m. acres in the 1950s and declined to 920m. acres in 2008, even with the addition of the new States of Alaska and Hawaii in 1960. The number of farms declined from 6.35m. in 1940 to 2.11m. in 2012, as the average size of farms doubled. The average size of farms in 2012 was 434 acres, but ranged from a few acres to many thousand acres. In 2012 the total value of land and buildings was $2,268,537m. The average value of land and buildings per acre in 2012 was $2,481.

In 2012 there were 1,828,946 farms managed by families or individuals (86.7% of all farms); 1,428,351 farms (67.7% of all farms) were managed by full owners (farmers who own all the land they operate). Hired farmworkers numbered 2,736,417 in 2012. There were 4.2m. tractors in 2012, 731,771 hay balers and 346,632 self-propelled grain and bean combines. In 2012 there were an estimated 155.11m. ha. of arable land and 2.60m. ha. of permanent crops. 22.6m. ha. of farmland was irrigated in 2012.

Cash receipts from farm marketings and government payments (in $1bn.):

	Livestock and livestock products		Total

2007	149.9	138.6	288.5
2008	176.8	141.5	318.3
2009	163.7	119.8	283.4

Net farm income was $62.2bn. in 2009 ($86.6bn. in 2008).

The harvest area and production of the principal crops for 2007 and 2008 were:

	2007			2008

The USA is the world's leading producer of maize, sorghum and tree nuts and the second largest producer of tomatoes and apples.

Fruit. Utilized production, in 1,000 tons:

Apples	4,865	4,523	4,970
Grapefruit	1,232	1,627	1,569
Grapes	6,366	7,036	7,421
Oranges	9,021	7,625	10,167
Peaches	987	1,116	1,100
Strawberries	1,202	1,223	1,266

The farm value of the above crops in 2008 was: apples, $2,599m.; grapefruit, $265m.; grapes, $3,342m.; oranges, $2,135m.; peaches, $539m.; strawberries, $1,885m.

In 2008 there were 2,643,221 acres of organic crops. Certified organic producers numbered 12,941 in 2008.

Organic food sales for the USA in 2012 totalled $28bn.

Dairy produce. In 2008 production of milk was 189,992m. lb; cheese, 9,935m. lb; butter, 1,644m. lb; ice cream, 943m. gallons; non-fat dry milk, 1,519m. lb; yoghurt, 3,599m. lb. The USA is the world's largest producer of both cheese and milk.

Livestock. In 2013 there were 8,525m. broilers and 240m. turkeys. Eggs produced, 2013, 96.4bn.

Value of production (in $1m.) was:

Cattle and calves	35,491	35,973	34,859
Hogs and pigs	12,714	13,468	14,435
Broilers	17,739	21,514	23,118
Turkeys	3,468	3,954	4,477
Eggs	4,460	6,719	8,225

Livestock numbered, in 2008 (1m.): cattle and calves (including dairy cows), 96.0; hogs and pigs, 68.2; sheep and lambs, 6.0. Approximate value of livestock (in $1bn.), 2008: cattle, 95.1; hogs and pigs, 5.0; sheep and lambs (in $1m.), 823.

Forestry

Forests covered a total area of 751.25m. acres (304.02m. ha.) in 2010, or 33% of the land area. Of the total area under forests 25% was primary forest in 2010, 67% other naturally regenerated forest and 8% planted forest. The 155 national forests had an area of 188,240,000 acres in 2011. Timber production was 11,940m. cu. ft in 2011. The USA is the world's largest producer of roundwood (9.7% of the world total in 2011).

In 2014 there were 758 designated wilderness areas throughout the USA, covering a total of 109.5m. acres (44.3m. ha.). More than half of the total area covered is in Alaska (52%), followed by California (14%), Idaho, Arizona and Washington.

Fisheries

In 2007 the domestic catch was 9,231.8m. lb, valued at $4,089.0m. (including 1,021.1m. lb of shellfish valued at $2,013.0m.). Main species landed in terms of value ($1m.): crabs, 454.0; sea scallops, 385.0; salmon, 381.1; shrimp, 370.0; American lobster, 349.1.

Disposition of the domestic catch in 2007 (1m. lb): fresh or frozen, 7,387; tinned, 501; cured, 121; reduced to meal or oil, 1,223. The USA's imports of fishery commodities in 2011 ($17.47bn.) were the largest of any country; exports of fishery commodities totalled $5.79bn. (the fifth highest in the world).

In the period 2005–07 the average American citizen consumed 53.4 lb (24.2 kg) of fish and fishery products a year, compared to an average 37.0 lb (16.8 kg) for the world as a whole.

Tennessee Valley Authority

Established by Act of Congress, 1933, the TVA is a multiple-purpose federal agency which carries out its duties in an area embracing some 41,000 sq. miles in the seven Tennessee River Valley states: Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Alabama, North Carolina, Georgia and Virginia. In addition, 76 counties outside the Valley are served by TVA power distributors. It is the largest public power company in the USA. Its three directors are appointed by the President, with the consent of the Senate; headquarters are in Knoxville (TN).

INDUSTRY

The largest companies in the USA by market capitalization in April 2016 were: Apple Inc ($610.8bn.), a computer company; Alphabet Inc ($509.1bn.), an internet-related products and services company generally known as Google; and Microsoft ($433.7bn.), a technology company. They were also the three largest companies by market value in the world in April 2016. According to a survey published by the New York-based Interbrand in Oct. 2015, Apple is the world's most valuable brand, worth $170.28bn.

The following table presents industry statistics of manufactures as reported at various censuses from 1909 to 1980 and from the Annual Survey of Manufactures for years in which no census was taken.

The Annual Surveys of Manufactures carry forward the key measures of manufacturing activity which are covered in detail by the Census of Manufactures. The large plants in the surveys account for approximately two-thirds of the total employment in operating manufacturing establishments in the USA.

	Production workers (average for year)	Production workers' wages total ($1,000)	Value added by manufacture ($1,000)

2006	9,175,328	344,192,729	2,285,928,967
2007	9,385,789	353,051,004	2,390,643,058
2008	8,863,950	343,480,037	2,266,362,722
2009	7,502,175	291,638,412	1,976,272,880
2010	7,289,354	299,613,996	2,185,326,324
2011	7,402,625	312,303,512	2,281,045,567

The total number of employees in the manufacturing industry in 2009 was approximately 11,051,000; there were 295,643 manufacturing establishments in 2011 (352,619 in 2001). Manufacturing employment has declined every year since 1998. Much of the decline reflects the recession that began in 2001 and the relatively weak recovery in demand that followed. In 2008 manufacturing contributed 11.5% of GDP, down from 14.5% of GDP in 2000. The leading industries in 2009 in terms of value added by manufacture (in $1m.) were: chemicals, 328,871; food, 258,615; transportation equipment, 229,642; computer and electronic products, 193,242; fabricated metal products, 146,876.

In 2013 a total of 11,046,000 motor vehicles were made in the USA, continuing an upward trend since the height of the recession in 2009 when only 5,709,000 were produced.

In 2008 principal commodities produced (by value of shipments, in $1m.) were: chemicals, 689,000; petroleum and coal products, 674,000; transportation equipment, 619,000; food, 611,000; computer and electronic products, 380,000.

Net profits (2008) for manufacturing corporations were $418bn. before tax ($294bn. after tax). Hourly earnings of production workers in Dec. 2008 were $18.06 in manufacturing and $22.52 in construction.

The USA is the second largest beer producer after China, with 5,940m. gallons in 2013; and third after China and Russia for cigarette production, with 327bn. units in 2010.

Iron and Steel. Output of the iron and steel industries (in 1m. net tons of 2,000 lb) in recent years was:

	Steel by method of production¹
	Pig iron	Raw steel	Electric	Basic oxygen
2005	37.2	94.9	52.2	42.7
2006	37.9	98.2	42.1	56.1
2007	36.3	98.1	41.0	57.1
2008	33.7	91.9	52.8	39.1
2009	19.0	59.4	36.7	22.7

¹The sum of these two items should equal the total in the preceding column; any difference is due to rounding.

In 2008 iron and steel mills and ferroalloy manufacturing employed 109,308 persons (an average 87,400 production workers). The total payroll in 2008 amounted to $7,668.0m.

Labour

The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimated that in 2009 the civilian labour force was 154,142,000 (65.4% of those 16 years and over), of whom 139,877,000 were employed and 14,265,000 (9.3%) were unemployed. The unemployment rate was 4.9% in Jan. 2016 (its lowest since Feb. 2008), down from 8.0% in Jan. 2013 and 9.8% in Jan. 2010. Payroll employment fell by 820,000 in Jan. 2009, the largest monthly fall since 1945. In 2009 as a whole 4.8m. jobs were lost—the highest number since records began in 1939. Long-term unemployment rose from 6.1% of the labour force between 16 and 64 having been out of work for more than a year in 2001 to 10.0% in 2006 and 31.3% in 2011. In Jan. 2010 for the first time there were more women (64.2m.) than men (63.4m.) on US payrolls. Employment by industry in 2009:

A total of 12 strikes and lockouts of 1,000 workers or more occurred in 2015, involving 47,000 workers and 740,000 idle days.

On 24 July 2007 the federal hourly minimum wage was raised from $5-15 to $5-85 an hour. It had been $5-15 for nearly ten years, having previously been increased from $4-75 an hour on 1 Sept. 1997. It was raised again on 24 July 2008, to $6-55 an hour, and on 24 July 2009, to $7-25. Americans worked an average 1,703 hours per person in 2008. Median weekly earnings were $739 in 2009 ($819 among men and $657 among women).

Labour relations are legally regulated by the National Labor Relations Act, amended by the Labor-Management Relations (Taft-Hartley) Act, 1947 as amended by the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act, 1959, again amended in 1974, and the Railway Labor Act of 1926, as amended in 1934 and 1936.

The USA had 60,000 people living in slavery according to the Walk Free Foundation's 2013 Global Slavery Index.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) between the USA, Canada and Mexico was signed on 7 Oct. 1992 and came into effect on 1 Jan. 1994. The Central America-Dominican Republic-United States Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA-DR) between the USA, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua entered into force for the USA on 1 March 2006.

Imports and Exports

2014	2,374.1	1,632.6	-741.5

In 2009 the USA's merchandise trade deficit fell to its lowest level since 2002. Its deficit with China went up from $83-9bn. in 2000 to $343-2bn. in 2014, although despite generally rising during those years it actually fell by $41-0bn. in 2009 at the height of the recession. The USA last recorded a trade surplus in goods in 1975. The USA is world's leading importer and up until 2013 the leading trading nation, although China overtook the USA that year as the largest trading nation overall. The USA is also the second largest exporter after China. As recently as 2004 the USA's total trade in goods was more than twice that of China. In 2013 its trade in goods accounted for 12.3% of the world's imports and 8.4% of exports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

On 31 Dec. 2012 the total public road mileage was 4,092,730 miles (urban, 1,113,018; rural, 2,979,711). Urban roads in 2012 included 16,910 miles of interstate highways, 11,469 miles of other freeways and expressways, and 791,832 miles of local roads. Rural roads in 2012 included 30,522 miles of interstate highways, 4,395 miles of other freeways and expressways, and 2,036,976 miles of local roads. State highway funds were $143,797m. in 2009.

Motor vehicles registered in 2012: 245,184,447, of which 111,289,906 automobiles, 764,509 buses and 133,130,032 trucks. There were 211,814,830 licensed drivers in 2012 and 8,429,988 motorcycle registrations. The average distance travelled by a motor vehicle in 2012 was 11,705 miles. There were 33,883 fatalities in road accidents in 2009 and 32,885 in 2010 (the lowest total since 1949).

Rail

Freight service is provided by nine major independent railroad companies and several hundred smaller operators. The largest companies are the Union Pacific Railroad and the BNSF Railway (formerly the Burlington Northern and Santa Fe Railway). Long-distance passenger trains are run by the National Railroad Passenger Corporation (Amtrak), which is federally assisted. Amtrak was set up in 1971 to maintain a basic network of long-distance passenger trains, and is responsible for almost all non-commuter services. In 2013 the operational Amtrak rail system measured 21,356 miles. Outside the major conurbations, there are almost no regular passenger services other than those of Amtrak, which carried 30.8m. passengers in fiscal year 2015.

Civil Aviation

The busiest airport in 2011 was Atlanta (Hartsfield-Jackson), which handled 92,389,023 passengers. The second busiest was Chicago (O'Hare) with 66,659,709 passengers, followed by Los Angeles International, with 61,862,052 passenger enplanements. As well as being the three busiest airports in the USA for passenger traffic in 2011, they are also three of the six busiest in the world. The six busiest in the world in 2011 were Atlanta, Beijing Capital International, London Heathrow, Chicago O'Hare, Tokyo Haneda and Los Angeles. New York (John F. Kennedy) was the busiest airport in the USA for international passengers in 2010, with 22,702,882, ahead of Miami International with 16,207,353.

There were 23 airports with more than 10m. enplanements in 2013. These were, in descending order: Atlanta (Hartsfield-Jackson); Los Angeles; Chicago (O'Hare); Dallas/Fort Worth; Denver; New York (John F. Kennedy); San Francisco; Charlotte/Douglas; Las Vegas (McCarran); Phoenix (Sky Harbor); Miami; Houston (George Bush Intercontinental); Newark (Liberty); Orlando; Seattle (Seattle-Tacoma); Minneapolis/St Paul; Detroit (Metropolitan Wayne County); Boston (Logan); Philadelphia; New York (La Guardia); Fort Lauderdale/Hollywood International; Baltimore/Washington, D.C. (Thurgood Marshall); Washington, D.C. (Dulles).

The leading airports in 2010 on the basis of aircraft departures completed were Atlanta Hartsfield-Jackson (465,000); Chicago O'Hare (426,600); Dallas/Fort Worth (315,100).

In 2011 Delta Air Lines carried the most scheduled passengers of any airline in the world with 163,838,000, ahead of United Airlines, with 141,799,000, and the low-cost carrier Southwest Airlines, with 135,274,000. Delta Airlines carried the most international passengers of any US carrier in 2010, with 21,029,000 (ranking it eighth in the world for international passengers carried). Delta Air Lines filed for bankruptcy in Sept. 2005, but emerged from bankruptcy protection in April 2007. AMR, the parent company for American Airlines, filed for bankruptcy in Nov. 2011. Delta Air Lines bought Northwest Airlines in Oct. 2008, in the process creating the world's largest airline. However, this was superseded following the merger of Continental Airlines and United Airlines in Oct. 2010. The two airlines are continuing to operate separately under the name United Continental Holdings, Inc. In Feb. 2013 American Airlines and US Airways announced plans to merge, again creating the world's largest airline. Although the Department of Justice filed a lawsuit in Aug. 2013 to stop the proposed merger the two airlines officially merged in Dec. 2013 to form American Airlines Group, Inc. The US Airways brand disappeared in Oct. 2015. In 2015 US flag carriers in scheduled service enplaned 798.4m. revenue passengers.

Shipping

At the end of 2007 the cargo-carrying US-owned fleet comprised 40,250 vessels, of which 39,695 were US-flag vessels. There were 38,936 US-flag tugs and barges for domestic coastwise, Great Lakes and inland waterway trade, 523 US-flag offshore supply vessels (which service offshore oil exploration and production) and 236 US-flag ocean and Great Lakes self-propelled vessels (10,000 DWT or greater) for US coastwise and international trade (of which 55 tankers, 76 container ships, 37 roll-on/roll-off carriers, 61 dry bulk carriers and seven general cargo carriers). Of the ocean-going fleet, 146 have coastwise trading privileges (Jones Act), which means that they were built or reconstructed in the USA or foreign-built but seized for violation of US law and registered under the US flag.

The busiest port is South Louisiana, which handled 212,581,000 tons of cargo in 2009. Other major ports are Houston (211,341,000 tons in 2009), New York-New Jersey (144,690,000 tons in 2009), Long Beach, Corpus Christi, New Orleans and Beaumont. South Louisiana handles the most domestic cargo but Houston the most foreign trade cargo.

Telecommunications

Regional private companies formed from the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. after its dissolution in 1995 ('Baby Bells') operate the telephone and electronic transmission services system at the national and local levels. Telegram services are still available through iTelegram. In 2012 there were 138.6m. main telephone lines in operation (436.5 per 1,000 inhabitants), down from 182.9m. in 2003. There were 304.8m. cellphone subscriptions in 2012 (960.1 per 1,000 persons), up from 160.6m. in 2003. In addition the proportion of households that only have cellphones has rapidly increased, to such an extent that by Dec. 2008 the number of cellphone-only households had surpassed landline-only households, with 20% of households being cellphone-only. The leading cellphone operators are Verizon Wireless (with more than 115m. subscribers), AT&T Mobility, Sprint Nextel and T-Mobile. In 2013 an estimated 84.2% of the population were internet users. 75.6% of households had a computer in 2011, with 71.7% of households having internet access at home. In 2014 e-commerce amounted to $304.9bn. In 2012 there were 89.8 wireless broadband subscriptions per 100 inhabitants and only 28.4 fixed broadband subscriptions per 100. In Dec. 2011 there were 157.4m. Facebook users (about three times as many as any other country and 50% the total population of the USA).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Legal controversies may be decided in two systems of courts: the federal courts, with jurisdiction confined to certain matters enumerated in Article III of the Constitution, and the state courts, with jurisdiction in all other proceedings. The federal courts have jurisdiction exclusive of the state courts in criminal prosecutions for the violation of federal statutes, in civil cases involving the government, in bankruptcy cases and in admiralty proceedings, and have jurisdiction concurrent with the state courts over suits between parties from different states, and certain suits involving questions of federal law.

The highest court is the Supreme Court of the US, which reviews cases from the lower federal courts and certain cases originating in state courts involving questions of federal law. It is the final arbiter of all questions involving federal statutes and the Constitution; and it has the power to invalidate any federal or state law or executive action which it finds repugnant to the Constitution. This court, consisting of nine justices appointed by the President who receive salaries of $249,300 a year (the Chief Justice, $260,700), meets from Oct. until June every year. For the term beginning Oct. 2012 it disposed of 7,602 cases, deciding 76 on their merits. In the remainder of cases it either summarily affirms lower court decisions or declines to review. A few suits, usually brought by state governments, originate in the Supreme Court, but issues of fact are mostly referred to a master.

The US courts of appeals number 13 (in 11 circuits composed of three or more states and one circuit for the District of Columbia and one Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit); the 179 circuit judges receive salaries of $215,400 a year. Any party to a suit in a lower federal court usually has a right of appeal to one of these courts. In addition, there are direct appeals to these courts from many federal administrative agencies. In the year ending 30 Sept. 2013, 56,475 appeals were filed in the courts of appeals, in addition to 1,259 in the US Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

The trial courts in the federal system are the US district courts, of which there are 94 in the 50 states, one in the District of Columbia and one each in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the Territories of the Virgin Islands, Guam and the Northern Marianas. Each state has at least one US district court, and three states have four apiece. Each district court has from one to 28 judgeships. There are 677 US district judges ($203,100 a year), who received 284,604 civil cases in 2012–13.

In addition to these courts of general jurisdiction, there are special federal courts of limited jurisdiction. The US Court of Federal Claims (16 judges at $203,100 a year) decides claims for money damages against the federal government in a wide variety of matters; the Court of International Trade (13 judges at $203,100) determines controversies concerning the classification and valuation of imported merchandise.

The judges of all these courts are appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate; to assure their independence, they hold office during good behaviour and cannot have their salaries reduced. This does not apply to judges in the Territories, who hold their offices for a term of ten years or to judges of the US Court of Federal Claims. The judges may retire with full pay at the age of 70 years if they have served a period of ten years, or at 65 if they have 15 years of service, but they are subject to call for such judicial duties as they are willing to undertake.

Among the 284,604 civil cases filed in the district courts in 2012–13, 63,316 were personal injury cases, 56,955 were prisoner petitions, 35,307 were civil rights cases and 28,571 were contract actions. In the year ending Sept. 2009, 1,402,816 cases were filed in the US Bankruptcy Courts (up 34.5% from 1,042,993 in fiscal year 2008 and the highest since fiscal year 2005), 1,344,095 of which involved individuals or non-businesses.

In 2000 the number of lawyers in the USA passed the 1m. mark, the equivalent to 363 per 100,000 people, reaching 1.3m. by 2015.

There were 78,136 criminal cases filed for the year ending Sept. 2011 of which 27,292 involved immigration, 16,730 drugs and 13,020 property offences.

Persons convicted of federal crimes may be fined, released on probation under the supervision of the probation officers of the federal courts, confined in prison, or confined in prison with a period of supervised release to follow, also under the supervision of probation officers of the federal courts. Federal prisoners are confined in 87 institutions incorporating various security levels that are operated by the Bureau of Prisons. On 31 Dec. 2012 the total number of prisoners under the jurisdiction of Federal or State adult correctional authorities was 1,570,397, down slightly from 1,598,248 in Dec. 2007. A total of 2,228,000 inmates were held in state or federal prisons or local jails in 2012 (down from a peak of 2,308,000 in 2008), giving a rate of 710 per 100,000 population (the second highest in the world). Although the USA has less than 5% of the world's population it has around 24% of the world's prisoners. Blacks make up 37% of the prison population, although they only account for 14% of the general population. The USA was ranked 23rd of 102 countries for criminal justice and 21st for civil justice in the 2015 World Justice Project Rule of Law Index, which provides data on how the rule of law is experienced by the general public across eight categories.

The state courts have jurisdiction over all civil and criminal cases arising under state laws, but decisions of the state courts of last resort as to the validity of treaties or of laws of the USA, or on other questions arising under the Constitution, are subject to review by the Supreme Court of the US. The state court systems are generally similar to the federal system, to the extent that they generally have a number of trial courts and intermediate appellate courts, and a single court of last resort. The highest court in each state is usually called the Supreme Court or Court of Appeals with a Chief Justice and Associate Justices, usually elected but sometimes appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the State Senate or other advisory body; they usually hold office for a term of years, but in some instances for life or during good behaviour. The lowest tribunals are usually those of Justices of the Peace; many towns and cities have municipal and police courts, with power to commit for trial in criminal matters and to determine misdemeanours for violation of the municipal ordinances.

There were no executions from 1968 to 1976. The US Supreme Court had held the death penalty, as applied in general criminal statutes, to contravene the eighth and fourteenth amendments of the US constitution, as a cruel and unusual punishment when used so irregularly and rarely as to destroy its deterrent value. The death penalty was reinstated by the Supreme Court in 1976, but has not been authorized in Alaska, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Rhode Island, Vermont, West Virginia and Wisconsin. At 1 Jan. 2016 there were 2,943 (including 55 women) prisoners under sentence of death. 49 people were sentenced to death in 2015. In 2015 there were 28 executions (the fewest since 1991 and a fall from a peak of 98 in 1999, although there were only 11 in 1988). From 1977–2015 there were 1,422 executions of which 531 were in Texas and 112 in Oklahoma. The death penalty for offenders under the age of 18 was abolished in March 2005. For the first time since 1963, there were two executions under federal jurisdiction in 2001. In Sept. 2003 the federal Court of Appeals in San Francisco overturned over 100 death sentences in Arizona, Idaho and Montana on the grounds that judges, not juries, had passed sentence, contravening a Supreme Court ruling of 2002.

There were 14,196 murders in 2013, the lowest total since 1968. The murder rate in 2013 was 4.5 per 100,000 persons, the lowest since 1957 (4.0 per 100,000) and down from 10.2 per 100,000 in 1980. 67.7% of all murders in 2011 were carried out with firearms.

Education

The adult literacy rate is at least 99%.

Based on the results from the Program for the International Assessment of Adult Competencies (PIAAC), in 2012 some 18% of US adults ages 16 to 65 scored at or below level 1 proficiency on the literacy scale compared to the average of 15% for the countries participating in PIAAC. (The scale ranged from below level 1 to level 5, with level 1 literacy proficiency requiring 'knowledge and skill in recognizing basic vocabulary, evaluating the meaning of sentences, and reading of paragraph text.')

Elementary and secondary education is mainly a state responsibility. Each state and the District of Columbia has a system of free public schools, established by law, with courses covering 12 years plus kindergarten. There are three structural patterns in common use; the K8-4 plan, meaning kindergarten plus eight elementary grades followed by four high school grades; the K6-3-3 plan, or kindergarten plus six elementary grades followed by a three-year junior high school and a three-year senior high school; and the K5-3-4 plan, kindergarten plus five elementary grades followed by a three-year middle school and a four-year high school. All plans lead to high-school graduation, usually at age 17 or 18. Vocational education is an optional part of secondary education. Each state has delegated some degree of control of the educational programme to local school districts (numbering 13,567 in school year 2011–12), each with a board of education (usually three to nine members) selected locally and serving mostly without pay. The policies of the local school districts must be in accord with the laws and the regulations of their state departments of education. While regulations differ from one jurisdiction to another, in general it may be said that school attendance is compulsory from age seven to 16. All states operate both two-year and four-year public colleges, with the two-year colleges typically offering programmes at lower cost. Private schools and college operate independently throughout the USA and are funded primarily by tuition.

Charter schools' are public schools that operate outside the school boards' administration. They retain the basics of public school education, but may offer unconventional curricula and hours of attendance. Founders may be parents, teachers, public bodies or commercial firms. Organization and conditions depend upon individual states' legislation. The first charter schools were set up in Minnesota in 1991. By 2012, 6,079 charter schools were operating in 40 states and Washington, D.C.

In 2012 some 18% of US adults age 16 to 65 scored at or below level 1 proficiency on the PIAAC literacy scale (see above). By race/ethnicity, 10% of Whites, 35% of Blacks and 43% of Hispanics scored at or below level 1 proficiency. In March 2013, 88.2% of all persons 25 years old and over had completed four years of high school or more, and 31.7% had completed a bachelor's or higher degree. In the age group 25 to 29, 89.9% had completed four years of high school or more, and 33.6% had completed a bachelor's or higher degree. However, according to a study conducted in 2013 about a third of American fourth graders (aged 9–10) are unable to read at a basic level.

In the fall of 2012, 20.6m. students (12.7m. full-time and 11.7m. women) were enrolled in 4,726 colleges and universities; 3.0m. were first-time students. It is projected that in 2023 the student population will number 23.8m.

In 2010–11 expenditure for public elementary and secondary education totalled $604bn., comprising $527bn. for current operating expenses, $51bn. for capital outlay, $18bn. for interest on school debt and $8bn. for other expenses. The current expenditure per pupil was $10,658.

In 2011 total expenditure on education came to 6.9% of GDP, of which 2.7% (about two-thirds private funding and a third public) was on tertiary education. Spending as a proportion of GDP on tertiary education is the highest in the world except for Canada, although spending on non-tertiary education is slightly below the average for OECD countries.

Estimated total expenditures for private elementary and secondary schools in 2010–11 were about $48bn. In 2010–11 college and university spending totalled about $471bn., of which about $296bn. was spent by institutions under public control. In 2011–12 the federal government contributed about 18% of total revenue for public institutions; state governments, 24%; student tuition and fees, 21%; and local sources, 6%. Federal support for vocational education in fiscal year 2012 amounted to about $1.7bn.

Summary of statistics of regular schools (public and private), teachers and pupils for 2011–12 (compiled by the US National Center for Education Statistics):

Schools by level	Number of schools	Teachers (in 1,000)	Enrolment (in 1,000)
Elementary and secondary schools:
Public	98,328	3,103	49,522
Private	30,861	421	5,268
Higher education:
Public	2,011	953	15,110
Private	5,223	570	5,884
Total	136,423	5,048	75,784

In the fall of 2012 there were 16.0 pupils per teacher in public schools in the USA and 12.5 pupils per teacher in private schools.

The majority of the private elementary and secondary schools are affiliated with religious denominations. In 2011–12 there were 6,870 Catholic schools with 2,088,000 pupils and 138,000 teachers, and 14,210 schools of other religious affiliations with 1,992,000 pupils and 163,000 teachers.

During the school year 2011–12 high-school graduates numbered 3,452,000 (of whom 3.1m. were from public schools). Institutions of higher education conferred 1,840,000 bachelor's degrees during the year 2012–13; 1,007,000 associate's degrees; 752,000 master's degrees; and 175,000 doctorates degrees. In the fiscal year 2013 US Department of Education outlays in support of student grant, loan and work study programmes totalled $43bn. An additional $107bn. in loans was made available through these outlays to support students in postsecondary education.

During the academic year 2011–12, 764,500 foreign students were enrolled in American colleges and universities. The countries with the largest numbers of students in American colleges were: China, 194,000; India, 100,300; South Korea, 72,300; Saudi Arabia, 34,100; Canada, 26,800; Taiwan, 23,300; Japan, 20,000.

In 2012, 66,000 US students were enrolled in degree programmes in colleges and universities outside of the USA. The country attracting the most students from the USA was the United Kingdom, with 17,000. In addition to these students, some 274,000 US college students attend short programmes in other countries every year.

School enrolment, Oct. 2012, embraced 93.2% of the children who were 5 and 6 years old; 98.0% of the children aged 7–13 years; 97.0% of those aged 14–17; 69.0% of those aged 18–19; and 40.2% of those aged 20–24.

The US National Center for Education Statistics estimates the total enrolment in the fall of 2014 at all of the country's elementary, secondary and higher educational institutions (public and private) at 75.7m. (68.7m. in the fall of 2000).

The number of teachers in public and private elementary and secondary schools in 2012 was about 3,525,000. The estimated average annual salary of public school teachers was $56,400 in 2012–13.

Health

Admission to the practice of medicine (for both doctors of medicine and doctors of osteopathic medicine) is controlled in each state by examining boards directly representing the profession and acting with authority conferred by state law. Although there are a number of variations, the usual time now required to complete training is eight years beyond the secondary school with up to three or more years of additional graduate training. Certification as a specialist may require between three and five more years of graduate training plus experience in practice. In Dec. 2007 the estimated number of physicians (MD and DO—in all forms of practice) in the USA, Puerto Rico and outlying US areas was 941,300 (615,400 in 1990 and 467,700 in 1980).

Dental employment in 2008 numbered around 141,900.

Number of hospitals listed by the American Hospital Association in 2007 was 5,708, with 945,000 beds (equivalent to 3.1 beds per 1,000 population). Of the total, 213 hospitals with 46,000 beds were operated by the federal government; 1,111 with 131,000 beds by state and local government; 2,913 with 554,000 beds by non-profit organizations (including church groups); 873 with 116,000 beds were investor-owned. The categories of non-federal hospitals were (2007): 4,897 short-term general and special hospitals with 801,000 beds; 135 non-federal long-term general and special hospitals with 17,000 beds; 444 psychiatric hospitals with 79,000 beds; one tuberculosis hospital with fewer than 500 beds.

Patient admissions to community hospitals (2007) was 35,346,000; average daily census was 533,300. There were 603.3m. outpatient visits.

Personal health care costs in 2007 totalled $1,878,275m., distributed as follows: hospital care, $696,539m.; physicians and clinical services, $478,768m.; prescription drugs, $227,453m.; nursing-home care, $131,338m.; dental services, $95,171m.; home health care, $59,031m.; medical durables, $24,450m.; other personal health care, $165,525m. Total national health expenditure in 2007 amounted to $2,241.2bn. In 2013 the USA spent 16.4% of its GDP on health—over 5% more than any other leading industrialized nation. Public spending on health amounted to 48.2% of total health spending in 2013 (the lowest percentage of any major industrialized nation). In March 2010 President Obama secured the passage of a controversial health care reform package that was expected to increase insurance coverage to a further 32m. citizens. Implementation of the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (popularly known as ‘Obamacare’) began in Oct. 2013. By May 2014 it was estimated that 20m. Americans had gained health insurance coverage under the Act. The proportion of uninsured people dropped from 18.0% to 11.4% between the third quarter of 2013 and the second quarter of 2015. The US Census Bureau had estimated in 2008 that 46.3m. people in America were uninsured.

In 2011, 19.0% of American adults (21.6% of males and 16.5% of females) were smokers, down from a peak of over 42% in 1965. In 2005–06, 34.3% of the adult population were considered obese (having a body mass index over 30), compared to 14.6% in the early 1970s.

Welfare

Social welfare legislation was chiefly the province of the various states until the adoption of the Social Security Act of 14 Aug. 1935. This as amended provides for a federal system of old-age, survivors and disability insurance; health insurance for the aged and disabled; supplemental security income for the aged, blind and disabled; federal state unemployment insurance; and federal grants to states for public assistance (medical assistance for the aged and aid to families with dependent children generally and for maternal and child health and child welfare services).

Legislation of Aug. 1996 began the transfer of aid administration back to the states, restricted the provision of aid to a maximum period of five years, and abolished benefits to immigrants (both legal and illegal) for the first five years of their residence in the USA. The Social Security Administration (formerly part of the Department of Health and Human Services but an independent agency since March 1995) has responsibility for a number of programmes covering retirement, disability, Medicare, Supplemental Security Income and survivors. The Administration for Children and Families (ACF), an agency of the Department of Health and Human Services, is responsible for federal programmes which promote the economic and social wellbeing of families, children, individuals and communities. ACF has federal responsibility for the following programmes: Temporary Assistance for Needy Families; low income energy assistance; Head Start; child care; child protective services; and a community services block grant. The ACF also has federal responsibility for social service programmes for children, youth, native Americans and persons with developmental disabilities.

The Administration on Aging (AoA), an agency in the US Department of Health and Human Services, is one of the nation's largest providers of home- and community-based care for older persons and their caregivers. Created in 1965 with the passage of the Older Americans Act (OAA), AoA is part of a federal, state, tribal and local partnership called the National Network on Aging. It serves about 9m. older persons and their caregivers, and consists of 56 State Units on Aging, 655 Area Agencies on Aging, 236 Tribal and Native organizations, two organizations that serve Native Hawaiians, 29,000 service providers and thousands of volunteers. These organizations provide assistance and services to older individuals and their families in urban, suburban, and rural areas throughout the USA.

The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (formerly the Health Care Financing Administration), an agency of the Health and Human Services Department, has federal responsibility for health insurance for the aged and disabled. Unemployment insurance is the responsibility of the Department of Labor.

In 2007 an average of 1,673,000 families (3,896,000 recipients) were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families. Total payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families were $26,922m. in 2007. The role of Child Support Enforcement is to ensure that children are supported by their parents. Money collected is for children who live with only one parent because of divorce, separation or birth outside marriage. In 2007, $24,855m. was collected on behalf of these children.

The Social Security Act provides for protection against the cost of medical care through Medicare, a two-part programme of health insurance for people age 65 and over, people of any age with permanent kidney failure, and for certain disabled people under age 65 who receive Social Security disability benefits. In 2008 payments totalling $230,240m. were made under the hospital portion of Medicare. During the same period, $224,835m. was paid under the voluntary medical insurance portion of Medicare. Medicare enrolment in July 2008 totalled 45.2m.

In 2009 about 52m. beneficiaries were on the rolls. Full retirement benefits are now payable at age 66, with reduced benefits available as early as age 62. Pensions may also be deferred up to age 70. The age for full retirement benefits is gradually increasing until it reaches 67 in 2027. Claimants must have at least 40 credits of insurance coverage. This equates to ten years of work. In 2008 the average actual retirement age for both males and females was 63.6 years. The maximum monthly payment for claimants retiring at the full retirement age in 2009 was $2,323. The minimum social security benefit was eliminated in Jan. 1982 for all workers becoming eligible for retirement or disability insurance benefits after Dec. 1981. A means-tested supplemental income benefit is available to over-65s and disabled and blind individuals with limited income and limited resources.

Medicaid is a jointly-funded, Federal-State health insurance programme for certain low-income and vulnerable people. It covered 57.8m. individuals in 2006 including children, the aged, blind, and/or disabled, and people who are eligible to receive federally-assisted income maintenance payments.

In Dec. 2007, 7.36m. persons were receiving Supplementary Security Income payments. 1,205,000 old-age persons received $5,301m. in benefits; 72,000 blind people received $419m.; and 6,083,000 disabled people received $35,485m. Payments, including supplemental amounts from various states, totalled $41,205m. in 2007.

In 2008 the food stamp programme helped 28,408,000 persons at a cost of $34,611m.; and 31.0m. persons received help from the national school lunch programme at a cost of $8,258m.

The USA is one of the few countries in the world not to have guaranteed paid maternity leave. Only 12% of Americans have access to the paid parental leave.

RELIGION

The leading religious bodies according to the 2010 U.S. Religion Census: Religious Congregations & Membership Study and based on the number of congregations are as follows:

¹In Feb. 2016 there were 15 cardinals.

In 2010 (unless otherwise stated) there were 2,600,000 Muslims (estimate), 2,257,000 Jews (estimate), 1,162,686 Jehovah's Witnesses (2009), 992,000 Buddhists (estimate) and 641,186 Hindus. Other major religious bodies are: African Methodist Episcopal Church; American Baptist Churches in the USA; Christian Churches and Churches of Christ; Lutheran Church–Missouri Synod; National Baptist Convention, USA, Inc.; Pentecostal Assemblies of the World, Inc.; Seventh-day Adventist Church; United Church of Christ.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

There are 23 sites under American jurisdiction that appear on the UNESCO World Heritage List. They are (with year entered on list): Mesa Verde National Park, Colorado (1978); Yellowstone National Park, Wyoming/Idaho/Montana (1978); Everglades National Park, Florida (1979); Grand Canyon National Park, Arizona (1979); Independence Hall, Pennsylvania (1979); Redwood National and State Parks, California (1980); Mammoth Cave National Park, Kentucky (1981); Olympic National Park, Washington State (1981); Cahokia Mounds State Historic Site, Illinois (1982); Great Smoky Mountains National Park, North Carolina/Tennessee (1983); San Juan National Historic Site and La Fortaleza, Puerto Rico (1983); the Statue of Liberty, New York (1984); Yosemite National Park, California (1984); Monticello and the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Virginia (1987); Chaco Culture National Historic Park, New Mexico (1987); Hawaii Volcanoes National Park, including Mauna Loa, Hawaii (1987); Pueblo de Taos, New Mexico (1992); Carlsbad Caverns National Park, New Mexico (1995); Papahānaumokuākea, Hawaii (2010); Monumental Earthworks of Poverty Point, Louisiana (2014); San Antonio Missions, Texas (2015).

Two UNESCO World Heritage sites fall under joint US and Canadian jurisdiction: Kluane/Wrangell-St Elias/Glacier Bay/Tatshenshini-Elsek (1979, 1992 and 1994), parks in Alaska, Yukon and British Columbia; Waterton Glacier International Peace Park (1995), in Montana and Alberta.

Press

In 2014 there were 1,355 daily newspapers with a combined daily circulation of 42.7m., the fourth highest in the world behind India, China and Japan. There were 953 morning papers and 402 evening papers, plus 923 Sunday papers (circulation, 42.8m.). Unlike China and India, where circulation is rising, in the USA it has fallen since 1985, when daily circulation was 62.8m. The most widely read newspapers are USA Today (average daily circulation in 2014 of 4.1m.), followed by the Wall Street Journal (2.3m.) and the New York Times (2.1m.). According to research carried out by the Pew Research Centre, in 2008 for the first time more Americans obtained national and international news from the internet than from newspapers. As of Sept. 2014 the USA's three most used online news sites were The Huffington Post (68.5m. unique desktop users per month), CNN (67.7m.) and The New York Times (41.6m.). In the 2013 World Press Freedom Index compiled by Reporters Without Borders, the USA was ranked 32nd out of 179 countries.

The number of books published in 2010 reached a record high of 3,092,740 (up from 561,580 in 2008), largely as a result of 2,776,260 self-published books and print-on-demand works being produced that year. US publishers' net sales revenue rose from $26.5bn. in 2008 to $27.1bn. in 2009 and $27.9bn. in 2010.

Tourism

In 2013 the USA received a record 69,995,000 foreign visitors (66,657,000 in 2012 and 62,821,000 in 2011), of whom 23,407,000 were from Canada and 14,547,000 from Mexico. 18% of all tourists were from Europe. Only France received more tourists than the USA in 2013.

In 2013 visitors to the USA spent $172.9bn., giving the USA by far the highest annual revenue from tourists of any country (Spain, which received the second most, had $62.6bn.). Expenditure by US travellers in foreign countries for 2013 was $104.1bn., second only to spending by Chinese travellers in foreign countries.

Festivals

Independence Day is celebrated on 4 July and Thanksgiving on the fourth Thursday of Nov. There are major opera festivals at Cooperstown (Glimmerglass), New York State (July–Aug.); Santa Fe, New Mexico (June–Aug.); and Seattle, Washington State (Aug.). Among the many famous film festivals are the Sundance Film Festival in Jan. and the New York Film Festival in late Sept./early Oct. Leading rock and pop festivals include SXSW in Austin, Texas (March), Coachella in Palm Springs, California (April), Bonnaroo in Manchester, Tennessee (June), Summerfest in Milwaukee, Wisconsin (June–July) and Lollapalooza in Chicago, Illinois (Aug.). The Burning Man art, music and performance festival takes place every year (Aug.–Sept.) in the Black Rock Desert, Nevada.

Alabama

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The early European explorers were Spanish, but the first permanent European settlement was French, as part of French Louisiana after 1699. During the 17th and 18th centuries the British, Spanish and French all fought for control of the territory; it passed to Britain in 1763 and thence to the USA in 1783, except for a Spanish enclave on Mobile Bay, which lasted until 1813. Alabama was organized as a Territory in 1817 and was admitted to the Union as a state on 14 Dec. 1819.

The economy was then based on cotton, grown in white-owned plantations by black slave labour imported since 1719. Alabama seceded from the Union at the beginning of the Civil War (1861) and joined the Confederate States of America; its capital Montgomery became the Confederate capital. After the defeat of the Confederacy the state was readmitted to the Union in 1878. Attempts made during the reconstruction period to find a role for the newly freed black slaves—who made up about 50% of the population—largely failed, and when whites regained political control in the 1870s a strict policy of segregation came into force. At the same time Birmingham began to develop as an important centre of iron- and steel-making. Most of the state was still rural. In 1915 a boll-weevil epidemic attacked the cotton and forced diversification into other farm produce. More industries developed from the power schemes of the Tennessee Valley Authority in the 1930s. The black population remained mainly rural, poor and without political power, until the 1960s when confrontations on the issue of civil rights produced reforms.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Alabama is bounded in the north by Tennessee, east by Georgia, south by Florida and the Gulf of Mexico and west by Mississippi. Land area, 50,645 sq. miles (131,171 sq. km); water area, 1,775 sq. miles (4,597 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 4,779,736, an increase of 7.5% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 4,858,979.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1930	1,700,844	944,834	465	105	2,646,248	51.3
			All others
1980	2,872,621	996,335		24,932	3,893,888	74.9
1990	2,975,797	1,020,705		44,085	4,040,587	79.6
2000	3,162,808	1,155,930		128,362	4,447,100	87.6
2010	3,275,394	1,251,311		253,031	4,779,736	94.4

Of the total population in 2010, 2,459,548 were female and 3,647,277 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 185,602, up from 75,830 in 2000 (an increase of 144.8%).

The large cities (2010 census) were (with metropolitan areas in brackets): Birmingham, 212,237 (Birmingham–Hoover metropolitan area, 1,128,047); Montgomery (the capital), 205,764 (374,536); Mobile, 195,111 (412,992); Huntsville, 180,105 (417,593); Tuscaloosa, 90,468 (219,461).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 60,050 (12.6 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 48,022 (10.0). Infant deaths, 2009, 8.3 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 37,300 (8.3 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 20,200 (4.4).

CLIMATE

Birmingham, Jan. 46°F (7.8°C), July 80°F (26.7°C). Annual rainfall 54" (1,372 mm). Mobile, Jan. 52°F (11.1°C), July 82°F (27.8°C). Annual rainfall 62" (1,575 mm). Montgomery, Jan. 49°F (9.4°C), July 81°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 52" (1,321 mm). The growing season ranges from 190 days (north) to 270 days (south). Alabama belongs to the Gulf Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The current constitution dates from 1901; it has had 835 amendments (as at June 2010). The legislature consists of a Senate of 35 members and a House of Representatives of 105 members, all elected for four years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Alabama sends seven members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Richard Shelby (D. 1987–94; R. 1994–2017) and Jeff Sessions (R. 1997–2021).

Applicants for registration must take an oath of allegiance to the United States and fill out an application showing evidence that they meet State voter registration requirements.

Montgomery is the capital.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Alabama with 60.7% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Robert Bentley (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $120,935-80, but opted not to receive a salary).

Lieut.-Governor: Kay Ivey (R.), 2015–19 (varies considerably depending on expenses and whether or not the Legislature is in session). Salary for 2015 was $62,849.00.

Secretary of State: John Merrill (R.), 2015–19 ($85,247.94).

Government Website: <http://www.alabama.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $37,512.

Budget

In 2011 total state revenue was $26,305m. Total expenditure was $28,061m. (education, $10,938m.; public welfare, $5,962m.; hospitals, $1,948m.; highways, $1,616m.; health, $609m.). Outstanding debt in 2011, $9,067m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state was $182,301m. in 2014 (provisional), ranking Alabama 26th in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 0.7% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In 2009 production was 143.3bn. kWh, of which 55.6bn. kWh was from coal.

Oil and Gas

In 2014 Alabama produced 9.8m. bbls of crude petroleum; marketed production of natural gas totalled 181bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is 1,775 sq. miles.

Minerals

Principal minerals, 2005–06 (in net 1,000 tons): limestone, 51,127; coal, 19,270; sand and gravel, 12,925. Value of non-fuel mineral production in 2009 was $1,020m.

Agriculture

The number of farms in 2009 was 48,500, covering 9.0m. acres; the average farm had 186 acres and was valued at $2,100 per acre (Jan. 2010).

Cash receipts from farm marketings, 2009: crops, $883m.; livestock and poultry products, $3,335m.; total, $4,218m. The net farm income in 2009 was $1,019m. Principal sources: broilers, cattle and calves, eggs, hogs, dairy products, greenhouse and nursery products, peanuts, soybeans, cotton and vegetables. In 2009 broilers accounted for the largest percentage of cash receipts from farm marketings; cattle and calves were second; and eggs third.

Forestry

Alabama had 22.91m. acres of forested land in 2013 of which 746,153 acres were national forest. Harvest volumes in 2013, 234.41m. cu. ft pine saw timber, 47.67m. cu. ft hardwood saw timber, 891.57m. cu. ft pulp wood and 14.34m. cu. ft poles. Total harvest, 2013, was 1,187.99m. cu. ft. Georgia is the only state with a larger annual harvest. The estimated delivered timber value of forest products in 2013 was $1.5bn.

Fisheries

Alabama had aquaculture sales worth $102.8m. in 2005, ranking it third behind Mississippi and Arkansas.

INDUSTRY

In 2012 the state's 9,836 manufacturing establishments had 553,000 employees, earning $25,916m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $36,184m. Alabama is both an industrial and service-oriented state. The chief industries are lumber and wood products, food and kindred products, textiles and apparel, non-electrical machinery, transportation equipment and primary metals.

Labour

In 2010, 1,869,000 were employed in non-agricultural sectors, of whom 386,800 were in government; 360,100 in trade, transportation and utilities; 236,100 in manufacturing; 214,400 in education and health services; 208,300 in professional and business services. In Dec. 2010 the unemployment rate was 9.1%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Total road length in 2012 was 101,811 miles, comprising 76,620 miles of rural road and 25,191 miles of urban road. Registered motor vehicles numbered 4,712,167.

Rail

In 2009 there were 3,271 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). There were 24 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Alabama in 2009 totalled 30.0m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 45.3m. tons.

Civil Aviation

In 2011 there were five primary airports (commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually) with a combined total of 2,566,909 enplanements, up from 2,562,567 in 2010.

Shipping

There are 1,600 miles of navigable inland water and 50 miles of Gulf Coast. The only deep-water port is Mobile, with a large ocean-going trade; total tonnage (2009), 52.2m. tons. The Alabama State Docks also operates a system of ten inland docks; there are several privately run inland docks.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

In Dec. 2014 the prison population totalled 31,771. Following the reinstatement of the death penalty by the US Supreme Court in 1976 death sentences have been awarded since 1983. There was one execution in 2013 and none in 2014 or 2015, but there was one in Jan. 2016.

In 41 counties the sale of alcoholic beverages is permitted, and in 26 counties it is prohibited; but it is permitted in eight cities within those 26 counties. Draught beverages are permitted in 22 counties.

Education

In 2012–13 there were 1,637 public elementary and secondary schools with 51,877 teachers and 744,637 students enrolled in grades K–12. Average public school teacher salary in 2012–13 was $47,949. Spending per student in 2010–11 was $8,726.

In 2012–13 there were 77 degree-granting institutions (39 public and 38 private). Total enrolment (fall 2012) was 310,311 students. Enrolment for four-year courses (fall 2014) at University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa totalled 36,047, Auburn University 25,912, Troy University 19,041, University of Alabama at Birmingham 18,698 and University of South Alabama at Mobile 15,805. Columbia Southern University at Orange Beach, a private online university, had 21,359 students in fall 2014.

Health

In 2009 there were 108 community hospitals with 15,300 beds. A total of 666,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 10,265 active physicians (22 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 836,560. In fiscal year 2012 a total of 957,500 people in Alabama received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 1,095,925 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 50,757 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

RELIGION

The main religious traditions in 2010 were: Evangelical Protestants, with 2,009,448 members; Mainline Protestants, 388,252; Black Protestants, 346,519; Catholics, 200,657; Latter-day Saints (Mormons), 36,820.

Alaska

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Discovered in 1741 by Vitus Bering, Alaska's first settlement, on Kodiak Island, was in 1784. The area known as Russian America with its capital (1806) at Sitka was ruled by a Russo-American fur company and vaguely claimed as a Russian colony. Alaska was purchased by the United States from Russia under the treaty of 30 March 1867 for $7.2m. Settlement was boosted by gold workers in the 1880s. In 1884 Alaska became a 'district' governed by the code of the state of Oregon. By Act of Congress approved 24 Aug. 1912 Alaska became an incorporated Territory; its first legislature in 1913 granted votes to women, seven years in advance of the Constitutional Amendment.

During the Second World War the Federal government acquired large areas for defence purposes and for the construction of the strategic Alaska Highway. In the 1950s oil was found. Alaska became the 49th state of the Union on 3 Jan. 1959. In the 1970s new oilfields were discovered and the Trans-Alaska pipeline was opened in 1977. The state obtained most of its income from petroleum by 1985.

Questions of land-use predominate; there are large areas with valuable mineral resources, other large areas held for the native peoples and some still held by the Federal government. The population increased by over 400% between 1940 and 1980.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Alaska is bounded north by the Beaufort Sea, west and south by the Pacific and east by Canada. The total area is 665,384 sq. miles (1,723,337 sq. km), making it the largest state of the USA; 570,641 sq. miles (1,477,953 sq. km) are land and 94,743 sq. miles (245,383 sq. km) are water. It is also the least densely populated state. The federal government owned 225,848,164 acres in 2010 (the largest area in any state), equivalent to 61.8% of the state area (the third highest percentage after Nevada and Utah). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 710,231, an increase of 13.3% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 738,432.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	All others	Total	Per sq. mile
1950	92,808	—	35,835	128,643	0.23
1980	309,728	13,643	78,480	401,851	1.00
1990	415,492	22,451	112,100	550,043	1.00
2000	434,534	21,787	170,611	626,932	1.10
2010	473,576	23,263	213,392	710,231	1.24

Of the total population in 2010, 369,628 were male and 522,853 were 18 years old or older. Alaska's Hispanic population was 39,249 in 2010, up from 25,852 in 2000. As of 2010, 14.8% of Alaska's population was identified as Alaska Native or American Indian (the highest percentage of any US state).

The largest county equivalent and city is in the borough of Anchorage, which had a 2010 census population of 291,826. Census populations of the other 14 county equivalents, 2010: Fairbanks North Star, 97,581; Matanuska-Susitna, 88,995; Kenai Peninsula, 55,400; Juneau (the capital), 31,275; Bethel, 17,013; Kodiak Island, 13,592; Ketchikan Gateway, 13,477; Valdez-Cordova, 9,636; Nome, 9,492; North Slope, 9,430; Sitka, 8,881; Northwest Arctic, 7,523; Wade Hampton, 7,459; Southeast Fairbanks, 7,029. Largest incorporated places in 2010 were: Anchorage, 291,826; Fairbanks, 31,535; Juneau, 31,275; Sitka, 8,881; Ketchikan, 8,050; Wasilla, 7,831; Kenai, 7,100; Kodiak, 6,130; Bethel, 6,080; Palmer, 5,937.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 11,471 (16.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 3,727 (5.2—the lowest rate in any US state). Infant mortality, 2009, 6.8 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 5,500 (7.8 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 3,300 (4.4). Same-sex marriage became legal in Oct. 2014.

CLIMATE

Anchorage, Jan. 12°F (−11.1°C), July 57°F (13.9°C). Annual rainfall 15" (371 mm). Fairbanks, Jan. −11°F (−23.9°C), July 60°F (15.6°C). Annual rainfall 12" (300 mm). Sitka, Jan. 33°F (0.6°C), July 55°F (12.8°C). Annual rainfall 87" (2,175 mm). Alaska belongs to the Pacific Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The state has the right to select 103.55m. acres of vacant and unappropriated public lands in order to establish 'a tax basis'; it can open these lands to prospectors for minerals, and the state is to derive the principal advantage in all gains resulting from the discovery of minerals. In addition, certain federally administered lands reserved for conservation of fisheries and wild life have been transferred to the state. Special provision is made for federal control of land for defence in areas of high strategic importance.

The constitution of Alaska was adopted by public vote, 24 April 1956. The state legislature consists of a Senate of 20 members (elected for four years) and a House of Representatives of 40 members (elected for two years).

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Alaska sends one member to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Lisa Murkowski (R. 2002–17) and Daniel Sullivan (R. 2015–21). The franchise may be exercised by all citizens over 18.

The capital is Juneau.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Alaska with 55.3% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Bill Walker (ind.), Dec. 2014–Dec. 2018 (salary: $145,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Byron Mallott (D.), Dec. 2014–Dec. 2018 ($115,000).

Government Website: <http://www.alaska.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $54,012.

Budget

In 2011 total state revenue was $14,921m. Total expenditure was $11,320m. (education, $2,475m.; public welfare, $1,918m.; highways, $1,412m.; government administration, $586m.; natural resources, $391m.). Outstanding debt in 2011, $6,418m.

Performance

2014 Gross Domestic Product by state was $48,742m. (provisional), ranking Alaska 46th in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was −1.3% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Oil and Gas

Alaska ranks fourth among the leading oil producers in the USA (behind Texas, North Dakota and California), although production is steadily declining and is now less than a quarter of what it was in 1988. Commercial production of crude petroleum began in 1959 and by 1961 had become the most important mineral by value. Production in 2014 totalled 181m. bbls. Oil comes mainly from Prudhoe Bay, the Kuparuk River field and several Cook Inlet fields. Oil from the Prudhoe Bay Arctic field is now carried by the Trans-Alaska pipeline to Prince William Sound on the south coast, where there is a tanker terminal at Valdez.

Natural gas marketed production, 2014, 345bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is 94,743 sq. miles (the most of any state), of which 19,304 sq. miles are inland.

Minerals

Estimated value of production, 2012, in $1m.: gold, 1,537.5; zinc, 1,139.6; silver, 383.6; lead, 234.8; coal and peat, 72.5; industrial minerals (sand, gravel and rock), 68.1. Total estimated 2012 value, $3,436.1m. Value of non-fuel mineral production in 2009 was $2,620m.

Agriculture

In some parts of the state the climate during the brief spring and summer (about 100 days in major areas and 152 days in the southeastern coastal area) is suitable for agricultural operations, thanks to the long hours of sunlight, but Alaska is a food-importing area. In 2007 there were 686 farms covering a total of 882,000 acres. The average farm had 1,285 acres in 2007 and was valued at $391 per acre.

Farm income, 2009: crops, $26m.; livestock and products, $6m. The net farm income in 2009 was $8m. Principal sources: greenhouse and nursery products, hay and potatoes.

In 2007 there were 14,823 cattle and calves, 522 sheep and lambs, 757 hogs and pigs, and 3,600 laying hens.

Forestry

Of the 126-87m. forested acres of Alaska (the highest acreage of any state), 10-87m. acres are national forest land. The interior forest covers 115m. acres; more than 13m. acres are considered commercial forest, of which 3-4m. acres are in designated parks or wilderness and unavailable for harvest. The coastal rain forests provide the bulk of commercial timber volume; of their 13-6m. acres, 7-6m. acres support commercial stands, of which 1-9m. acres are in parks or wilderness and unavailable for harvest.

In 2014 there were 758 designated wilderness areas throughout the USA, covering a total of 109-5m. acres (44-3m. ha.). More than 52% of the system is in Alaska (57-4m. acres or 23-2m. ha.).

Fisheries

In 2009 commercial fishing landed 4,064m. lb of fish and shellfish at a value of $1-3bn. Alaska is by far the most important state for fishery landings, accounting for 50-6% of the total by weight in 2009. The most important species are salmon, crab, herring, halibut and pollock.

INDUSTRY

In 2012 the state's 1,446 manufacturing establishments had 42,000 employees, earning $1,699m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $1,895m. The largest manufacturing sectors are wood processing, seafood products and printing and publishing.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2010: 324,400. Employees by branch, 2010: government, 85,200; trade, transportation and utilities, 62,800; education and health services, 41,700; leisure and hospitality, 31,500; professional and business services, 26,200. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 7-9%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Alaska's highway and road system, 2012, totalled 16,301 miles comprising 2,423 miles of urban road and 13,878 miles of rural road. Registered motor vehicles numbered 743,305.

The Alaska Highway extends 1,523 miles from Dawson Creek, British Columbia, to Fairbanks, Alaska. It was built by the US Army in 1942, at a cost of $138m. The greater portion of it, because it lies in Canada, is maintained by Canada.

Rail

There is a railroad from Skagway to the town of Whitehorse, the White Pass and Yukon route, in the Canadian Yukon region (this service operates seasonally, although only the section between Skagway and Carcross is in service). The government-owned Alaska Railroad runs from Seward to Fairbanks. This is a freight service with only occasional passenger use. In 2009 there were 506 miles of freight railroad.

Civil Aviation

Alaska's largest international airports are Anchorage and Fairbanks. There were 29 primary airports in 2012 (commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually), more than in any other state. General aviation aircraft in the state per 1,000 population is about ten times the US average. Anchorage handled 2,543,105 tonnes of freight in 2011 (including transit freight), ranking it second in the USA behind Memphis for cargo handled (and fourth in the world). Alaska Airlines carried 27-4m. passengers in 2013 (25-9m. in 2012). There were 4,537,477 passenger enplanements statewide in 2012.

Shipping

Regular shipping services to and from the USA are furnished by two steamship and several barge lines operating out of Seattle and other Pacific coast ports. A Canadian company also furnishes a regular service from Vancouver, BC. Anchorage is the main port.

A 1,435 nautical-mile ferry system for motor cars and passengers (the 'Alaska Marine Highway') operates from Bellingham, Washington and Prince Rupert (British Columbia) to Juneau, Haines (for access to the Alaska Highway) and Skagway. A second system extends throughout the south-central region of Alaska linking the Cook Inlet area with Kodiak Island and Prince William Sound.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The death penalty was abolished in Alaska in 1957. In Dec. 2014 the jail and prison population totalled 5,216.

Education

In 2013-14 there were 507 public schools in Alaska serving over 130,000 students. There were also 8,195 full- and part-time teachers who earned an average salary of $65,891. Total audited K-12 operating and selected special revenue funds for public schools in the 2012-13 school year were $2-32bn., a figure that includes State of Alaska retirement payments.

There are seven degree-granting institutions (five public and two private). The University of Alaska (founded in 1922) had 28,760 students at fall 2014 at its three campuses (Anchorage, Fairbanks and Southeast); there are six teaching units at the main campus in Anchorage.

Health

In 2009 there were 22 community hospitals with 1,500 beds. A total of 57,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 1,574 active physicians (23 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 54,300. In fiscal year 2012 a total of 137,055 people in Alaska received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 89,047 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 9,872 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

RELIGION

The main religious traditions in 2010 were: Evangelical Protestants, with 100,960 members; Catholics, 50,866; Mainline Protestants, 32,550; Latter-day Saints (Mormons), 32,671; Orthodox Christians, 13,480.

Arizona

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Spaniards looking for sources of gold or silver entered Arizona in the 16th century finding there American natives, including Tohono O'odham, Navajo, Hopi and Apache. The first Spanish Catholic mission was founded in the early 1690s by Father Eusebio Kino. Settlements were made in 1752 and a Spanish army headquarters was set up at Tucson in 1776. The area was governed by Mexico after the collapse of Spanish colonial power. Mexico ceded it to the USA in the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo after the Mexican-American war (1848). Arizona was then part of New Mexico; the Gadsden Purchase (of land south of the Gila River) was added to it in 1853. The whole was organized as the Arizona Territory on 24 Feb. 1863.

Miners and ranchers began settling in the 1850s. Conflicts between American Indian and immigrant populations intensified when troops were withdrawn to serve in the Civil War. The Navajo surrendered in 1865, but the Apache continued to fight, under Geronimo and other leaders, until 1886. Arizona was admitted to the Union as the 48th state in 1912.

Large areas of the state have been retained as Indian reservations and as parks to protect the exceptional desert and mountain landscape. In recent years this landscape and the American Indian traditions have been used to attract tourists.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Arizona is bounded north by Utah, east by New Mexico, south by Mexico, west by California and Nevada. Total area is 113,990 sq. miles (295,234 sq. km) of which 113,594 sq. miles (294,207 sq. km) are land. Of the total area in 2009, 28% was Indian Reservation, 18% was in individual or corporate ownership, 17% was held by the US Bureau of Land Management, 15% by the US Forest Service, 13% by the State and 10% by others. In 2010 American Indian lands covered 31,646 sq. miles (reservations plus off-reservation trust land), the largest area of any state. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 6,392,017, an increase of 24.6% since 2000. The rate of Arizona's population increase during the 2000s was the second fastest in the USA (behind Nevada). July 2015 estimate, 6,828,065.

Population in five census years:

	American Indian/Alaska					Total	Per sq. mile
	White	Black	Native	Chinese	Japanese
1910	171,468	2,009	29,201	1,305	371	204,354	1.8
	All others
1980	2,260,288	74,159	162,854		383,768	2,718,215	23.9
1990	2,963,186	110,524	203,527		387,991	3,665,228	32.3
2000	3,873,611	158,873	255,879		842,269	5,130,632	45.2
2010	4,667,121	259,008	296,529		1,169,359	6,392,017	56.3

Of the total population in 2010, 3,216,194 were female and 4,763,003 were 18 years old or older. Arizona's Hispanic population was 1,895,149 in 2010 (29.6%) up from 1,295,617 in 2000 (an increase of 46.3%).

The large cities (2010 census) were: Phoenix (the capital) 1,445,632; Tucson, 520,116; Mesa, 439,041; Chandler, 236,123; Glendale, 226,721; Scottsdale, 217,385; Gilbert, 208,453; Tempe, 161,719; Peoria, 154,065; Surprise, 117,517. The Phoenix-Mesa-Glendale metropolitan area had a 2010 census population of 4,192,887.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 87,477 (13.7 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 46,765 (7.3). Infant mortality, 2009, 6.0 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional) marriages, 35,300 (5.4); divorces and annulments, 23,100 (3.5). Same-sex marriage became legal in Oct. 2014.

CLIMATE

Phoenix, Jan. 53-6°F (12°C), July 93-5°F (34°C). Annual rainfall 7.66" (194 mm). Yuma, Jan. 56-5°F (13-6°C), July 93-7°F (34-3°C). Annual rainfall 3.17" (80 mm). Flagstaff, Jan. 28-7°F (-1.8°C), July 66-3°F (19-1°C). Annual rainfall 22.8" (579 mm). Arizona belongs to the Mountain States climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The state constitution (1911, with 146 amendments) placed the government under direct control of the people through the initiative, referendum and the recall provisions. The state Senate consists of 30 members, and the House of Representatives consists of 60, all elected for two years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Arizona sends nine members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by John McCain (R. 1987-2017) and Jeff Flake (R. 2013-19).

The state capital is Phoenix. The state is divided into 15 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Arizona with 54.2% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Douglas A. 'Doug' Ducey (R.), 2015-19 (salary: $95,000).

Secretary of State: Michele Reagan (R.), 2015-19 ($70,000).

Government Website: <http://az.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $37,895.

Budget

In 2011 total state revenue was $36,611m. Total expenditure was $32,875m. (public welfare, $9,511m.; education, $9,122m.; highways, $2,038m.; health, $1,822m.; correction, $906m.). Outstanding debt in 2011, $14,163m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state was $260,799m. in 2014 (provisional), ranking Arizona 21st in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 1.4% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Primary energy sources are coal (35.2%), nuclear (24.5%), gas (19.5%) and hydro-electric (18.9%).

Electricity

In 2009 production was 112.0bn. kWh, of which 39.7bn. kWh was from coal.

Oil and Gas

In 2014 Arizona produced 56,000 bbls of crude petroleum; marketed production of natural gas totalled 106m. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is 396 sq. miles.

Minerals

The mining industry historically has been and continues to be a significant part of the economy. By value the most important mineral produced is copper. Production in 2007 was 731,000 tonnes. Most of the state's silver and gold are recovered from copper ore. Other minerals include sand and gravel, molybdenum, coal and gemstones. Value of non-fuel mineral production in 2009 was $5,180m.

Agriculture

Arizona, despite its dry climate, is well suited for agriculture along the water-courses and where irrigation is practised on a large scale from great reservoirs constructed by the USA as well as by the state government and private interests. Irrigated area in 2007 was 876,158 acres. The wide pasture lands are favourable for the rearing of cattle and sheep, but numbers are either stationary or declining compared with 1920.

In 2007 Arizona contained 15,637 farms and ranches and the total farm and pastoral area was 26.1m. acres; in 2007 there were 1,205,425 acres of crop land. In 2007 the average farm was 1,670 acres (the fifth largest average size in the USA) and was valued at $748 per acre. Farming is highly commercialized and mechanized and concentrated largely on cotton picked by machines.

Area under cotton in 2009: upland cotton, 145,000 acres (440,000 bales harvested); American Pima cotton, 1,700 acres (4,000 bales harvested).

In 2009 the cash receipts from crops were $1,766m., and from livestock and products $1,178m. The net farm income in 2009 was $203m. Most important cereals are wheat, corn and barley; most important crops include lettuce, cotton, citrus fruit, broccoli, spinach, cauliflower, melons, onions, potatoes and carrots. In Dec. 2009 there were 930,000 cattle, 167,000 hogs, 160,000 sheep and 43,000 goats.

Forestry

The state had a forested area of 18,587,000 acres in 2013, of which 7,732,000 acres were national forest.

INDUSTRY

In 2012 the state's 8,582 manufacturing establishments had 264,000 employees, earning $16,406m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $23,938m.

Labour

In 2010 total non-agricultural employment was 2,377,000. Employees by branch, 2010 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 468; government, 417; education and health services, 344; professional and business services, 339; leisure and hospitality, 253. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 9.6%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2012 there were 65,262 miles of roads comprising 23,876 miles of urban road and 41,386 miles of rural road. There were 5,014,259 registered vehicles.

Rail

In 2009 there were 1,679 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). Rail traffic originating in Arizona in 2009 totalled 2.8m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 24.7m. tons. A light rail system opened in Phoenix in 2008.

Civil Aviation

In 2011 Arizona had nine primary airports (commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually) with a combined total of 22,735,131 enplanements, up from 21,834,569 in 2010. The busiest airport, Phoenix Sky Harbor International, had 19,750,306 enplanements in 2011 (ranking it ninth in the USA).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

A 'right-to-work' amendment to the constitution, adopted 5 Nov. 1946, makes illegal any concessions to trade-union demands for a 'closed shop'.

In Dec. 2014 the prison population totalled 42,259. Chain gangs were reintroduced into prisons in 1995. The death penalty is authorized. There was one execution in 2014 but none in 2015.

Education

School attendance is compulsory between the ages of six and 16. There were 2,399 public elementary and secondary schools in 2012–13 with 48,866 teachers and 1,089,384 students. There were 53,120 students enrolled at 340 private schools with 3,810 teachers in fall 2011. In 2010–11 the total expenditure on public elementary and secondary education was $9,889m. Arizona has three public universities: the University of Arizona (Tucson) with (fall 2014) 42,236 students; Northern Arizona University (Flagstaff) with 27,705; Arizona State University (five campuses) with 83,260. In 2012–13 there were 87 degree-granting institutions in total, including 63 private institutions.

Health

In 2009 the state had 72 community hospitals with 13,500 beds. A total of 705,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 14,051 active physicians (21 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 919,910. In fiscal year 2011 a total of 1,990,332 people in Arizona received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 1,207,102 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 39,184 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

RELIGION

The principal religious traditions in 2010 were: Catholics, with 930,702 members; Evangelical Protestants, 762,376; Latter-day Saints (Mormons), 394,844; Mainline Protestants, 171,792; Hindus, 32,887.

CULTURE

Tourism

In 2011 overseas visitors to Arizona—excluding those from Canada and Mexico—numbered 864,000, up from 765,000 in 2010 and 563,000 in 2006.

Arkansas

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In the 16th and 17th centuries French and Spanish explorers encountered tribes of Chaddo, Osage and Quapaw. The first European settlement was French, at Arkansas Post in 1686, and the area became part of French Louisiana. The USA bought Arkansas from France as part of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803; it was organized as a Territory in 1819 and entered the Union on 15 June 1836 as the 25th state.

The eastern plains by the Mississippi were settled by white plantation-owners who grew cotton with black slave labour. The rest of the state attracted a scattered population of small farmers. The plantations were the centre of political power. Arkansas seceded from the Union in 1861 and joined the Confederate States of America. At that time the slave population was about 25% of the total.

In 1868 the state was readmitted to the Union. Attempts to integrate the black population into state life achieved little, and a policy of segregation was rigidly adhered to until the 1950s. In 1957 federal authorities ordered that high school segregation must end. The state governor called on the state militia to prevent desegregation; there was rioting, and federal troops entered Little Rock, the capital, to restore order. It was another ten years before school segregation finally ended.

The main industrial development followed the discovery of large reserves of bauxite.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Arkansas is bounded north by Missouri, east by Tennessee and Mississippi, south by Louisiana, southwest by Texas and west by Oklahoma. Land area, 52,035 sq. miles (134,771 sq. km); water area, 1,143 sq. miles (2,961 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,915,918, an increase of 9.1% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 2,978,204.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,131,026	442,891	460	472	1,574,449	30.0
			All others
1980	1,890,332	373,768		22,335	2,286,435	43.9
1990	1,944,744	373,912		32,069	2,350,725	45.1
2000	2,138,598	418,950		115,852	2,673,400	51.3
2010	2,245,229	449,895		220,794	2,915,918	56.0

Of the total population in 2010, 1,484,281 were female and 2,204,443 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population of Arkansas was 186,050, up from 86,866 in 2000, an increase of 114.2%.

Little Rock (capital) had a population of 193,524 in 2010; Fort Smith, 86,209; Fayetteville, 73,580; Springdale, 69,797; Jonesboro, 67,263; North Little Rock, 62,304; Conway, 58,908; Rogers, 55,964. The population of the largest metropolitan statistical areas in 2010 was: Little Rock–North Little Rock–Conway, 699,757; Fayetteville–Springdale–Rogers, 463,204; Fort Smith, 298,592; Texarkana, 136,027; Jonesboro, 121,026; Pine Bluff, 100,258.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, were 38,540 (13.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 28,913 (9.9). Infant mortality, 2009, 7.7 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 31,600 (10.7 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 16,300 (5.7).

CLIMATE

Little Rock, Jan. 39.9°F, July 84°F. Annual rainfall 52.4". Arkansas belongs to the Gulf Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 35 members elected for four years, partially renewed every two years, and a House of Representatives of 100 members elected for two years. The sessions are biennial and usually limited to 60 days. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Arkansas sends four members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by John Boozman (R. 2011–17) and Tom Cotton (R. 2015–21).

The state is divided into 75 counties; the capital is Little Rock.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Arkansas with 60.6% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Asa Hutchinson (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $141,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Tim Griffin (R.), 2015–19 ($41,896).

Secretary of State: Mark Martin (R.), since Jan. 2011 ($90,000).

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $37,782.

Budget

In 2011 total revenue was $22,808m. Total expenditure was $18,862m. (education, $7,508m.; public welfare, $4,494m.; highways, $1,081m.; hospitals, $857m.; government administration, $576m.). Outstanding debt in 2011, $3,749m.

Performance

2014 Gross Domestic Product by state was $110,746m. (provisional), ranking Arkansas 34th in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 0.8% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Oil and Gas

In 2014 Arkansas produced 6.8m. bbls of crude petroleum; marketed production of natural gas totalled 1,124bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is 1,143 sq. miles.

Minerals

Employment in mining, quarrying, and oil and gas extraction totalled 6,364 in March 2007. Crushed stone was the leading mineral commodity produced, in terms of value, followed by bromine. Value of domestic non-fuel mineral production in 2009 was $636m.

Agriculture

In 2007, 49,346 farms had a total area of 13.9m. acres; average farm was 281 acres and was valued at $2,343 per acre. 7.37m. acres were harvested cropland. Arkansas ranked first in the acreage and production of rice in 2007 (48.4% of US total production), second in the production of broilers (1,172m. birds) and third in turkeys (29.2m. birds).

Farm income, 2009: crops, $3,226m.; livestock and products, $3,964m. The net farm income in 2009 was $1,524m.

Forestry

In 2013 the state had a forested area of 18,966,000 acres, of which 2,499,000 acres were national forest.

Fisheries

Arkansas had aquaculture sales worth $110.5m. in 2005, ranking it second behind Mississippi.

INDUSTRY

In 2012 the state's 6,544 manufacturing establishments had 379,000 employees, earning $15,030m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $19,208m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2010: 1,613,200. Employees by branch, 2010 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 234; government, 218; education and health services, 166; manufacturing, 160; professional and business services, 118. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 7.9%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Total road mileage (2012), 100,123 miles—urban, 13,428; rural, 86,695. There were 2,403,830 registered motor vehicles.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

There were many small American Indian tribes, but no central power, when the area was discovered in 1542 by the Spanish navigator Juan Cabrillo. The Spaniards did not begin to establish missions until the 18th century, when the Franciscan friar Junipero Serra settled at San Diego in 1769. The missions became farming and ranching villages with large American Indian populations. When the Spanish empire collapsed in 1821, the area was governed from newly independent Mexico.

The first wagon-train of American settlers arrived from Missouri in 1841. In 1846, during the war between Mexico and the USA, Americans in California proclaimed it to be part of the USA. The territory was ceded by Mexico on 2 Feb. 1848 and became the 31st state of the Union on 9 Sept. 1850.

Gold was discovered in 1848–49 and there was an immediate influx of population. The state remained isolated, however, until the development of railways in the 1860s. From then on the population doubled on average every 20 years. The sunny climate attracted fruit-growers, market-gardeners and wine producers. In the early 20th century the bright lights and cheap labour attracted film-makers to Hollywood, Los Angeles.

Southern California remained mainly agricultural with an American Indian or Spanish-speaking labour force until after the Second World War. Now more than 90% of the population is urban, with the manufacturing emphasis on hi-technology equipment, much of it for the aerospace, computer and office equipment industries.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Land area, 155,779 sq. miles (403,466 sq. km); water area, 7,916 sq. miles (20,501 sq. km). California is the third largest US state behind Alaska and Texas. The federal government owned 47,797,533 acres in 2010, equivalent to 47.7% of the state area. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 37,253,956, an increase of 10.0% since 2000. The growth rate reflects continued high though somewhat reduced natural increase (excess of births over deaths) as well as substantial net immigration. California's population is 12.1% of the total US population. July 2015 estimate, 39,144,818.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	Japanese	Chinese	Total (incl. all others)	Per sq. mile
1910	2,259,672	21,645	41,356	36,248	2,377,549	15.2
1960	14,455,230	883,861	157,317	95,600	15,717,204	100.8
	White	Black	Asian/other	Hispanic	Total	Per sq. mile
1990	20,524,327	2,208,801	7,026,893	7,687,938	29,760,021	190.8
2000	20,170,059	2,263,882	11,437,707	10,966,556	33,871,648	217.2
2010	21,453,934	2,299,072	13,500,950	14,013,719	37,253,956	239.1

Of the total population in 2010, 18,736,126 were female and 27,958,916 were 18 years old or older.

In addition to having the highest population of any state in the USA, California has the largest Hispanic population of any state in terms of numbers and the third largest in terms of percentage of population. In 2010 there were 14,013,719 Hispanics living in California (37.6% of the overall population), up from 10,966,556 in 2000, the largest numeric rise of any state over the same period.

By 2020 Hispanics are projected to form a majority.

The 20 largest cities (2012 population estimates) are:

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 509,979 (13.7 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010, 233,143 (6.0). Marriages, 2011, 218,484. Infant deaths, 2010, 5.1 per 1,000 live births. California was the second state after Massachusetts to allow same-sex marriage when it became legal in June 2008, but the ruling was nullified when 52.5% of votes cast in a referendum held on 4 Nov. 2008 were in favour of a ban. On 4 Aug. 2010 a federal court declared the ban unconstitutional, a decision which was upheld by the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit on 7 Feb. 2012. Same-sex marriages resumed in June 2013.

CLIMATE

Los Angeles, Jan. 58°F (14.4°C), July 74°F (23.3°C). Annual rainfall 15" (381 mm). Sacramento, Jan. 45°F (7.2°C), July 76°F (24.4°C). Annual rainfall 18" (457 mm). San Diego, Jan. 57°F (13.9°C), July 71°F (21.7°C). Annual rainfall 10" (259 mm). San Francisco, Jan. 51°F (10.6°C), July 59°F (15°C). Annual rainfall 20" (508 mm). Death Valley, Jan. 52°F (11°C), July 100°F (38°C). Annual rainfall 1.6" (40 mm). California belongs to the Pacific Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution became effective from 4 July 1879; it has had numerous amendments since 1962. The Senate is composed of 40 members elected for four years—half being elected every two years—and the Assembly, of 80 members, elected for two years. Two-year regular sessions convene in Dec. of each even numbered year. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, California sends 53 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Dianne Feinstein (D. 1993–2019) and Barbara Boxer (D. 1993–2017).

The capital is Sacramento. The state is divided into 58 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took California with 60.2% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Jerry Brown (D.), 2015–19 (salary: $182,791).

Lieut.-Governor: Gavin Newsom (D.), 2015–19 ($137,093).

Secretary of State: Alejandro Padilla (D.), 2015–19 ($137,093).

Attorney General: Kamala D. Harris (D.), 2015–19 ($158,775).

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $49,985.

California's economy, one of the largest and most diverse in the world, has major components in high-technology, trade, entertainment, finance, agriculture, manufacturing, government, tourism, construction and services. California's economy is very dependent on international trade.

Farm production in California has risen despite declines in acreage. Farm-related sales have more than quadrupled over the past three decades. Largest production categories are fruits and nuts, livestock and poultry, vegetables and melons.

Budget

For the year ending 30 June 2011, total state revenues were $122.5bn. Total expenditures were $131.0bn. (education, $50.1bn.; health and human services, $41.9bn.; corrections and rehabilitation, $9.7bn.). Debt outstanding (2012) $84.4bn.

Performance

California's economy, the largest among the 50 states and one of the largest in the world, has major components in high technology, trade, entertainment, agriculture, manufacturing, tourism, construction and services. California is home to leading innovators and entrepreneurs and to firms like Apple, Cisco and Intel in technology; eBay, Facebook, Google and Yahoo in pioneering the use of the internet; Amgen and Genentech in biotech; and DreamWorks and Pixar in combining technology and entertainment. California experienced a severe economic recession that began at the end of 2007, from which the state is still slowly recovering. The principal cause of the recession was a financial crisis instigated by risky financial activity that led to the bursting of the housing bubble.

If California were a country in its own right it would be the world's ninth largest economy. 2014 Gross Domestic Product by state (provisional) was $2,113,280m., the highest in the United States and representing more than 13% of the USA's total GDP. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 2.8% (provisional). Taxable sales in 2011 totalled $517,299m.

Banking and Finance

As of 30 June 2014 there were 7,135 offices of commercial banks, 1,644 offices of credit unions, 131 offices of savings institutions and one US branch of a foreign bank. As of that date California-headquartered savings institutions had deposits of $10.8bn., and mortgage loans also of $10.8bn. Insured commercial banks headquartered in the state had demand deposits of $50.6bn. and time and savings deposits of $372.0bn. Total loans reached $373.3bn. of which real estate loans were $256.7m. Credit unions had assets totalling $145.3bn., and total loans outstanding were $80.2bn.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In 2011 production was 200,414m. kWh of which 90,751m. kWh was from natural gas, 36,666m. kWh from nuclear energy and 42,727m. kWh from conventional hydroelectric energy. California leads the nation in electricity generation from non-hydroelectric renewable energy sources. California generates electricity using wind, geothermal, solar, fuel wood and municipal solid waste/landfill gas resources. The world's largest solar power facility operates in California's Mojave Desert. Consumption is growing at a rate of 2% annually.

Oil and Gas

California is the nation's third largest oil producing state. Total onshore and offshore production fell to an average of 539,200 bbls per day in 2011. Net natural gas production in 2011 was 243bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 7,916 sq. miles. Water quality is judged to be good along 83% of the 960 miles of assessed coastal shoreline.

Minerals

Gold production was 181,959 troy oz in 2010 (compared to less than 20,000 troy oz in 2007). The value of gold production increased to $239.7m. from $138.5m. in 2009. Clays, crushed stone, dimension stone, feldspar, fuller's earth, gemstones, gypsum, iron ore (used in cement manufacture), kaolin clay, lime, magnesium compounds, perlite, pumice, pumicite, salt, soda ash and zeolites are also produced.

In 2010 California ranked sixth among the states in non-fuel mineral production, accounting for approximately 4.2% of the US total. California was the leading state in the production of diatomite and natural sodium sulphate, and was the only producer of boron and rare earth minerals. The only metals produced in California were gold and silver. The market value of non-fuel minerals produced was $2.9bn.; the mining industry employed around 26,800 persons in 2011 (compared to 48,000 in the early 1980s).

Agriculture

California is the most diversified agricultural economy in the world, producing more than 400 agricultural commodities. It is by far the largest agricultural producer and exporter in the United States. The state grows nearly half of the nation's total of fruits, nuts and vegetables. Many of these commodities are specialty crops and almost solely produced in California. In 2011 there were 81,500 farms and ranches. The net farm income in 2011 was $16,276m. (the largest of any state). In 2011 cash income from marketings reached $43.5bn. (11.6% of the US total). Fruit and nut cash receipts, at $15.32bn. in 2011, were 11% above the previous year and comprised 32% of the total. Vegetable receipts were up 2% from the previous year at $7.24bn., comprising 15% of total sales. Livestock and poultry receipts rose 26% from 2010 at $12.36bn. and comprised 26% of total sales. California's leading commodity in cash receipts is milk and cream with $7.68bn. in 2011.

Production of cotton lint in 2011 was 321,800 short tons; other field and seed crops included (in 1m. short tons): hay and alfalfa, 8; rice, 2; sugar beets, 1; wheat, 1. Principal fruit, nut and vegetable crops in 2011 (in 1,000 short tons): tomatoes, 12,562; grapes, 6,612; lettuce, 3,247; oranges, 2,500; strawberries, 1,023; almonds, 1,015; broccoli, 1,012; onions, 973; carrots, 945; lemons, 820; celery, 773; peaches, 773.

In 2011 there were 1.7m. dairy cows; 5.2m. all cattle and calves; 570,000 sheep and lambs; and 105,000 hogs and pigs.

Forestry

In 2011 California had 32.94m. acres of forested land—of which 20,802,641 acres were national forest. There are about 16.6m. acres of productive forest land, from which about 2,900m. bd ft are harvested annually. Total value of timber harvest, 2011, $272m. Lumber production, 2011, 1,288m. bd ft.

Fisheries

The catch in 2011 was 408m. lb; leading species in landings were sardine, squid, anchovy, mackerel, crab, urchin, sole, whiting, sablefish and tuna.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturers in California accounted for 11.7% of the total output in the state in 2011; total output from manufacturing was $229.9bn. Employment in the sector was 8.8% of overall non-farm employment in 2011. There were 77,930 manufacturing establishments in California in 2012.

Labour

In 2011 the civilian labour force was 18.4m., of whom 16.2m. were employed. A total of 126,200 jobs were added in 2011, mainly in professional and business services, educational and health services, trade, transportation and utilities, and leisure and hospitality. The unemployment rate was 10.1% in Oct. 2012.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Estimated foreign trade through Californian ports totalled $559bn. in 2011. Exports of made-in-California goods totalled $159.4bn., an increase of 11.3% from 2010. Of the total $46.1bn. was computers and electronics (accounting for 29% of all the state's exports in 2011), $15.0bn. transportation equipment, $14.8bn. non-electrical machinery, $12.5bn. chemicals and $10.6bn. agricultural products.

Total agricultural exports for 2010 were a record $14.7bn. California's top markets are Canada, the European Union, Japan, China/Hong Kong, Mexico, South Korea, India, the United Arab Emirates, Taiwan and Australia.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2011 California had 172,202 miles of public roads (including 15,133 of state highways). There were a total of 32,903,847 registered motor vehicles in 2013. Motor vehicle collision fatalities in 2012 were 2,758.

Rail

In addition to Amtrak's long-distance trains, local and medium-distance passenger trains run in the San Francisco Bay area sponsored by the California Department of Transportation, and a network of commuter trains around Los Angeles opened in 1992. There are metro and light rail systems in San Francisco and Los Angeles, and light rail lines in Sacramento, San Diego and San Jose.

Civil Aviation

In 2011 there were a total of 968 public and private airports, heliports, stolports and seaplane bases.

A total of 61,862,052 passengers (16,731,324 international; 45,130,728 domestic) embarked/diseembarked at Los Angeles airport in 2011. It handled approximately 1,853,658 tonnes of freight. At San Francisco airport, in 2011, 40,800,352 passengers (9,013,021 international; 31,787,331 domestic) embarked/diseembarked, and 421,096 tonnes of freight were handled. There were a total of 51,311,722 passenger enplanements at Los Angeles and San Francisco in 2011.

Shipping

The chief ports are Long Beach and Los Angeles. In 2010 Long Beach was the fourth busiest port in the USA, handling 68.4m. tons of cargo, and Los Angeles the ninth busiest, with 56.6m. tons.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

A 'three strikes law', making 25-years-to-life sentences mandatory for third felony offences, was adopted in 1994 after an initiative (i.e. referendum) was 72% in favour. However, the state's Supreme Court ruled in June 1996 that judges may disregard previous convictions in awarding sentences. In Nov. 2012 voters approved Proposition 36, which modifies the three strikes law, to impose a life sentence only when the third felony conviction is 'serious or violent' and authorizes resentencing for offenders currently serving life sentences if their third strike conviction was not serious or violent. In Jan. 2009 there were 33 adult prisons. As of Dec. 2012 there were 8,905 adult inmates serving 'three strikes' sentences, of which 2,842 were eligible for resentencing under Proposition 36. There were 136,088 state and federal prisoners in total in Dec. 2014, down from 164,933 in Dec. 2004. The death penalty is authorized following its reinstatement by the US Supreme Court in 1976. Since 1978 the state has executed 14 condemned inmates. The first execution since 2002 was carried out in Jan. 2005. There was one execution in total in 2006. A moratorium on death sentences was ordered in Dec. 2006. The California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation (CDCR) has not indicated when it expects to successfully overcome legal challenges related to executions although a new execution chamber has been completed at San Quentin State Prison. As of April 2016, CDCR housed 748 condemned inmates (more than any other state).

Colorado

Education

Full-time attendance at school is compulsory for children from six to 18 years of age for a minimum of 175 days per annum. In fall 2011 there were 6-7m. pupils enrolled in both public and private elementary and secondary schools. Total state expenditure on public education, 2010-11, was $50.1bn. Average teacher salary in 2010-11 was $67,871 (the fourth highest in the USA).

Community colleges had 2,423,958 students in fall 2012.

California has two publicly-supported higher education systems: the University of California (1868) and the California State University and Colleges. In fall 2010 the University of California, with campuses for resident instruction and research at Berkeley, Los Angeles (UCLA), San Francisco and seven other centres, had 234,464 students. California State University and Colleges with campuses at Sacramento, Long Beach, Los Angeles, San Francisco and 18 other cities had 412,372 students. There were 149 public degree-granting institutions for higher education in 2012-13; there were 308 private degree-granting institutions that had a total estimated enrolment of 492,308 in the fall of 2012.

Health

In 2008 there were 6,906 state licensed facilities; capacity, 260,036 beds. On 30 June 2008 state hospitals for the mentally disabled had 6,080 patients. In 2009 there were 100,131 active physicians (27 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare beneficiaries in 2010 totalled 4,684,845. In fiscal year 2009 a total of 11,518,565 people in California received Medicaid. On 1 Jan. 1974 the federal government (Social Security Administration) assumed responsibility for the Supplemental Security Income/State Supplemental Program, which replaced the State Old-Age Security. The SSI/SSP provides financial assistance for needy aged (65 years or older), blind or disabled persons. An individual recipient may own assets up to $2,000; a couple up to $3,000, subject to specific exclusions. In Jan. 2010 there were 1.23m. SSI recipients. In fiscal year 2011-12 the caseload of the welfare programme CalWORKS averaged 575,988, a decrease of 21.3% from fiscal year 1997-98 (the year CalWORKS was implemented).

RELIGION

The principal religious traditions in 2010 were: Catholics, with 10,234,036 members; Evangelical Protestants, 3,502,250; Mainline Protestants, 880,981; Latter-day Saints (Mormons), 770,437; Buddhists, 326,940.

CULTURE

Tourism

The travel and tourism industry provides 2.5% of the state's $2.0trn. economy. Visitors in 2011 spent $95.3bn. generating $6.3bn. in state and local tax revenues. Tourist spending has increased at an average annual rate of 2.9% since 2003. California was the state most visited by overseas travellers in 2011, when international tourists spent $19.1bn. (approximately 20% of all tourist spending).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Spanish explorers claimed the area for Spain in 1706; it was then the territory of the Arapaho, Cheyenne, Ute and other Plains and Great Basin Indians. Eastern Colorado, the hot, dry plains, passed to France in 1802 and then to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803. The rest remained Spanish, becoming Mexican when Spanish power in the Americas ended. In 1848, after war between Mexico and the USA, Mexican Colorado was ceded to the USA. A gold rush in 1859 brought a great influx of population, and in 1861 Colorado was organized as a Territory. The Territory officially supported the Union in the Civil War of 1861-65, but its settlers were divided and served on both sides.

Colorado became a state in 1876. Mining and ranching were the mainstays of the economy. In the 1920s the first large projects were undertaken to exploit the Colorado River. The Colorado River Compact was agreed in 1922, and the Boulder Dam (now Hoover Dam) was authorized in 1928. Since then irrigated agriculture has overtaken mining as an industry and is as important as ranching. In 1945 the Colorado-Big Thompson project diverted water by tunnel beneath the Rocky Mountains to irrigate 700,000 acres (284,000 ha.) of northern Colorado. Now more than 80% of the population is urban, with the majority engaged in telecommunications, aerospace and computer technology. Colorado and Washington became the first US states to legalize the recreational possession and sale of marijuana following voter referendums in Nov. 2012. The first so-called 'pot shops' opened on 1 Jan. 2014.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Colorado is bounded north by Wyoming, northeast by Nebraska, east by Kansas, southeast by Oklahoma, south by New Mexico and west by Utah. Total area is 104,094 sq. miles (269,601 sq. km) of which 103,642 sq. miles (268,431 sq. km) are land.

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 5,029,196, an increase of 16.9% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 5,456,574.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	783,415	11,453	1,482	2,674	799,024	7.7
			All others
1980	2,571,498	101,703	216,763		2,889,964	27.9
1990	2,905,474	133,146	255,774		3,294,394	31.8
2000	3,560,005	165,063	576,193		4,301,261	41.5
2010	4,089,202	201,737	738,257		5,029,196	48.5

Of the total population in 2010, 2,520,662 were male and 3,803,587 were 18 years old or older. The Hispanic population in 2010 was 1,038,687, up from 735,601 in 2000 (an increase of 41.2%). Large cities, with 2008 populations: Denver City (the capital), 566,974; Colorado Springs, 372,437; Aurora, 305,582; Lakewood, 140,024; Fort Collins, 129,467; Westminster, 105,753; Arvada, 104,830; Pueblo, 103,730.

Main metropolitan areas (2008): Denver-Aurora, 2,506,626; Colorado Springs, 617,714; Boulder, 293,161; Fort Collins-Loveland, 292,825; Greeley, 249,715; Pueblo, 156,737; Grand Junction, 143,171.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, were 66,355 (13.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 31,465 (6.3). Infant mortality, 2009, 6.3 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 37,400 (6.8 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 21,200 (4.2). Same-sex marriage became legal in Oct. 2014.

CLIMATE

Denver, Jan. 31°F (−0.6°C), July 73°F (22.8°C). Annual rainfall 14" (358 mm). Pueblo, Jan. 30°F (−1.1°C), July 83°F (28.3°C). Annual rainfall 12" (312 mm). Colorado belongs to the Mountain States climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution adopted in 1876 is still in effect with (2006) 153 amendments. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 35 members elected for four years, one-half retiring every two years, and of a House of Representatives of 65 members elected for two years. Sessions are annual, beginning 1951. Qualified as electors are all citizens, male and female (except convicted, incarcerated criminals), 18 years of age, who have resided in the state and the precinct for 32 days immediately preceding the election. There is a seven-member State Supreme Court.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Colorado sends seven members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Michael Bennet (D. 2009–17) and Cory Gardner (R. 2015–21).

The capital is Denver. There are 64 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took Colorado with 51.2% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: John Hickenlooper (D.), 2015–19 (salary: $90,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Joe Garcia (D.), 2015–19 ($68,500).

Connecticut

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Formerly territory of Algonquian-speaking Indians, Connecticut was first colonized by Europeans during the 1630s, when English Puritans moved there from Massachusetts Bay. Settlements were founded in the Connecticut River Valley at Hartford, Saybrook, Wethersfield and Windsor in 1635. They formed an organized commonwealth in 1637. A further settlement was made at New Haven in 1638 and was united to the commonwealth under a royal charter in 1662. The charter confirmed the commonwealth constitution, drawn up by mutual agreement in 1639 and called the Fundamental Orders of Connecticut.

The area was agricultural and its population of largely English descent until the early 19th century. After the War of Independence, Connecticut was one of the original 13 states of the Union. Its state constitution came into force in 1818 and lasted with amendments until 1965 when a new one was adopted.

In the early 1800s a textile industry thrived on water power. By 1850 the state had more employment in industry than in agriculture, and immigration from Europe (and especially from southern and eastern Europe) grew rapidly throughout the 19th century. Some immigrants worked in whaling and iron-mining, but most sought industrial employment. Settlement was spread over a large number of small towns, with no single dominant culture.

Yale University was founded at New Haven in 1701. The US Coastguard Academy was founded in 1876 at New London, a former whaling port.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Connecticut is bounded in the north by Massachusetts, east by Rhode Island, south by the Atlantic and west by New York. Land area, 4,842 sq. miles (12,542 sq. km); water area, 701 sq. miles (1,816 sq. km).

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 3,574,097, an increase of 4.9% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 3,596,677.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asian	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,098,897	15,174	152	533	1,114,756	231.3
1980	2,799,420	217,433	4,533	18,970	3,107,576	634.3

	White	Black	American Indian/Alaska Native	Asian	Others	Total	Per sq. mile
1990	2,859,353	274,269	6,654	50,078	96,762	3,287,116	678.6
2000	2,780,355	309,843	9,639	82,313	148,567	3,405,565	702.9
2010	2,772,410	362,296	11,256	135,565	292,570	3,574,097	738.1

Of the total population in 2010, 1,834,483 were female and 2,757,082 were 18 years old or older. The Hispanic population in 2010 was 479,087, up from 320,323 in 2000 (an increase of 49.6%).

The chief cities and towns are (2010 census populations):

Bridgeport	144,229	Danbury	80,893
New Haven	129,779	New Britain	73,206
Hartford (capital)	124,775	West Hartford	63,268
Stamford	122,643	Meriden	60,868
Waterbury	110,366	Bristol	60,477
Norwalk	85,603	West Haven	55,564

Delaware

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Delaware was the territory of Algonquian-speaking Indians who were displaced by European settlement in the 17th century. The first settlers were Swedes who came in 1638 to build Fort Christina (now Wilmington), and colonize what they called New Sweden. In 1655 their colony was taken by the Dutch, who were based in New Amsterdam. In 1664 the British took the whole New Amsterdam colony, including Delaware, and called it New York.

In 1682 Delaware was granted to William Penn, who wanted access to the coast for his Pennsylvania colony. Union of the two colonies was unpopular, and Delaware gained its own government in 1704, although it continued to share a royal governor with Pennsylvania until the War of Independence. Delaware then became one of the 13 original states of the Union and the first to ratify the federal constitution (on 7 Dec. 1787).

The population was of Swedish, Finnish, British and Irish extraction. The land was low-lying and fertile, and the use of slave labour was legal. There was a significant number of black slaves, but Delaware was a border state during the Civil War (1861–65) and did not leave the Union.

19th-century immigrants were mostly European Jews, Poles, Germans and Italians. The north became industrial and densely populated, more so after the Second World War with the rise of the petrochemical industry. Industry in general profited from the opening of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal in 1829; it was converted to a toll-free deep channel for ocean-going ships in 1919.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Delaware is bounded in the north by Pennsylvania, northeast by New Jersey, east by Delaware Bay, south and west by Maryland. Land area 1,949 sq. miles (5,047 sq. km); water area, 540 sq. miles (1,399 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 897,934, an increase of 14.6% since 2000. 2015 estimate, 945,934. Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	171,102	31,181	5	34	202,322	103.0
			All others
1980	488,002	96,157	10,179		594,338	290.8
1990	535,094	112,460	18,614		666,168	325.9
2000	584,773	150,666	48,161		783,600	401.0
2010	618,617	191,814	87,503		897,934	460.8

Of the total population in 2010, 462,995 were female and 692,169 were 18 years old or older. The Hispanic population in 2010 was 73,221, up from 37,277 in 2000 (an increase of 96.4%).

The 2010 census figures show Wilmington with a population of 70,851; Dover (the capital), 36,047; Newark, 31,454; Bear, 19,371; Middletown, 18,871.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 11,364 (12.7 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 7,706 (8.6). 2009 infant mortality, 7.9 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 5,100 (5.4 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 3,400 (3.6). The abortion rate, at 40 for every 1,000 women aged 15 to 44 in 2008, is the highest in the USA. Same-sex marriage was legalized in May 2013, with effect from July 2013.

CLIMATE

Wilmington, Jan. 31°F (−0.6°C), July 76°F (24.4°C). Annual rainfall 43" (1,076 mm). Delaware belongs to the Atlantic Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution (the fourth) dates from 1897, and has had 51 amendments; it was not ratified by the electorate but promulgated by the Constitutional Convention. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 21 members elected for four years and a House of Representatives of 41 members elected for two years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Delaware sends one member to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Thomas Carper (D. 2001–19) and Christopher Coons (D. 2011–21).

The state capital is Dover. Delaware is divided into three counties.

The state supports the University of Delaware at Newark (founded in 1834) which (in fall 2014) had 1,112 full-time faculty members and 22,680 students; Delaware State University, Dover (1891), with 287 full-time faculty members and 4,397 students; and the campuses of Delaware Technical Community College at Stanton and Wilmington with 6,700 students, Georgetown with 4,296 and Dover with 2,939.

Health

In 2009 there were seven community hospitals with 2,200 beds. A total of 102,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 2,177 active physicians (25 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 148,009. In fiscal year 2012 a total of 238,997 people in Delaware received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 192,187 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 14,383 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

RELIGION

The main religious traditions in the state in 2010 were: Catholics, with 182,532 members; Mainline Protestants, 86,858; Evangelical Protestants, 64,625; Black Protestants, 13,371; Hindus, 7,805.

District of Columbia

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The District of Columbia, organized in 1790, is the seat of the government of the USA, for which the land was ceded by the states of Maryland and Virginia to the USA as a site for the national capital. It was established under Acts of Congress in 1790 and 1791. Congress first met in it in 1800 and federal authority over it became vested in 1801. In 1846 the land ceded by Virginia (about 33 sq. miles) was given back.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The District forms an enclave on the Potomac River, where the river forms the southwest boundary of Maryland. The land area of the District of Columbia is 61 sq. miles (158 sq. km); water area, 7 sq. miles (19 sq. km).

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 601,723, an increase of 5.2% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 672,228. The population was 100% urban in 2010. Metropolitan area of Washington, D.C.–Arlington–Alexandria (2010), 5,582,170. The Hispanic population in 2010 was 54,749, up from 44,953 in 2000 (an increase of 21.8%). Of the total population in 2010, 317,501 were female and 500,908 were 18 years old or older.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Chinese and Japanese	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	236,128	94,446	68	427	331,069	5,517.8
			All others
1980	171,768	448,906		17,659	638,333	10,464.4
1990	179,667	339,604		87,629	606,900	9,949.2
2000	176,101	343,312		52,646	572,059	9,378.0
2010	231,471	305,125		65,127	601,723	9,856.5

Blacks constituted 50.7% of the population at the 2010 census—the highest proportion in the USA.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 9,165 (15.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 4,672 (7.8). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 9.9 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 1,900 (4.7 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 1,300 (2.6). Same-sex marriage became legal in March 2010.

CLIMATE

Washington, Jan. 34°F (1.1°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 43" (1,064 mm). The District of Columbia belongs to the Atlantic Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Local government, from 1 July 1878 until Aug. 1967, was that of a municipal corporation administered by a board of three commissioners, of whom two were appointed from civil life by the President, and confirmed by the Senate, for a term of three years each. The other commissioner was detailed by the President from the Engineer Corps of the Army. The Commission form of government was abolished in 1967 and a new Mayor Council instituted with officers appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. On 24 Dec. 1973 the appointed officers were replaced by an elected Mayor and councillors, with full legislative powers in local matters as from 1974. Congress retains the right to legislate, to veto or supersede the Council's acts. The 23rd amendment to the federal constitution (1961) conferred the right to vote in national elections. The District has one delegate and one shadow delegate to the House of Representatives and two shadow senators. The Congressman may participate but not vote on the House floor.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took the District of Columbia with 91.4% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Mayor: Muriel Bowser (D.), 2015–19 (salary: $200,000).

Secretary of the District: Lauren C. Vaughan (D.), since Jan. 2015 ($135,000).

Government Website: <http://www.dc.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $69,838, the highest in the country.

Budget

The District's revenues are derived from a tax on real and personal property, sales taxes, taxes on corporations and companies, licences for conducting various businesses and from federal payments. The District of Columbia has no bonded debt not covered by its accumulated sinking fund.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2014 was $105,018m. (provisional). In 2014 state real GDP growth was 1.6% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Water

The total area covered by water is 7 sq. miles.

INDUSTRY

In 2012 there were 226 manufacturing establishments with 2,700 employees, earning $123m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $151m. The main industries are communications, finance, government service, insurance, real estate, services, transport, utilities, and wholesale and retail trade.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2010, 711,000. Employees by branch, 2010 (in 1,000): government, 246; professional and business services, 149; education and health services, 108; leisure and hospitality, 59; trade, transportation and utilities, 27. In Dec. 2010 the unemployment rate was 9.6%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2012 there were 1,502 miles of roads. There were 318,206 registered vehicles in 2012.

Rail

There is a metro in Washington extending to 130 km, and two commuter rail networks.

Civil Aviation

The District is served by three general airports; across the Potomac River in Arlington County, Va., is Ronald Reagan Washington National Airport; in Dulles, Va., is Washington Dulles International Airport; and in Maryland is Baltimore/Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The death penalty was declared unconstitutional in the District of Columbia on 14 Nov. 1973.

The District's Court system is the Judicial Branch of the District of Columbia. It is the only completely unified court system in the United States, possibly because of the District's unique city-state jurisdiction. Until the District of Columbia Court Reform and Criminal Procedure Act of 1970, the judicial system was almost entirely in the hands of Federal government. Since that time, the system has been similar in most respects to the autonomous systems of the states.

Education

In 2012–13 there were 76,140 pupils enrolled at 244 elementary and secondary public schools with 5,925 teachers. Expenditure per pupil in 2010–11 was $20,793.

Higher education is given through the Consortium of Universities of the Metropolitan Washington Area, which consists of 14 universities: American University; Catholic University of America; Gallaudet University; George Mason University; George Washington University; Georgetown University; Howard University; Marymount University; National Defense University; National Intelligence University; Trinity Washington University; Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences; University of the District of Columbia (the only public university in Washington, D.C.); University of Maryland College Park. There were 20 degree-granting institutions altogether in 2012–13.

Health

In 2009 there were ten community hospitals with 3,500 beds. A total of 138,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 4,900 active physicians (82 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 77,372. In fiscal year 2011 a total of 235,665 people in the District of Columbia received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 79,716 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 17,436 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

RELIGION

The main religious traditions in 2010 were: Mainline Protestants, with 82,388 members; Catholics, 75,948; Evangelical Protestants, 75,306; Black Protestants, 50,602; Jews, 17,664.

Florida

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Of the French and Spanish settlements in Florida in the 16th century, the Spanish, at St Augustine from 1565, survived. Florida was claimed by Spain until 1763 when it passed to Britain. Although regained by Spain in 1783, the British used it as a base for attacks on American forces during the war of 1812. Gen. Andrew Jackson captured Pensacola for the USA in 1818. In 1819 a treaty was signed which ceded Florida to the USA with effect from 1821 and it became a Territory of the USA in 1822.

Florida had been the home of the Apalachee and Timucua Indians. After 1770, groups of Creek Indians began to arrive as refugees from the European-American Indian wars. These 'Seminoles' or runaways attracted other refugees including slaves, the recapture of whom was the motive for the first Seminole War of 1817–18. A second war followed in 1835–42, when the Seminoles retreated to the Everglades swamps. After a third war in 1855–58 most Seminoles were forced or persuaded to move to reserves in Oklahoma.

Florida became a state in 1845. About half of the population were black slaves. At the outbreak of Civil War in 1861 the state seceded from the Union.

During the 20th century Florida continued to grow fruit and vegetables, but real estate development (often for retirement) and the growth of tourism and the aerospace industry set it apart from other ex-plantation states.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Florida is a peninsula bounded in the west by the Gulf of Mexico, south by the Straits of Florida, east by the Atlantic, north by Georgia and northwest by Alabama. Land area, 53,625 sq. miles (138,887 sq. km); water area, 12,133 sq. miles (31,424 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 18,801,310, an increase of 17.6% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 20,271,272.

Population in five federal census years was:

	White	Black	All others	Total	Per sq. mile

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1968 Legislature revised the constitution of 1885. The state legislature comprises the Senate and House of Representatives. The Senate has 40 members elected for four years. Half of the membership is elected every two years. The House has 120 members, all of whom are elected every two years during elections held in even-numbered years. Sessions of the legislature are held annually, and are limited to 60 days. Senate and House districts are based on population, with each senator and member representing approximately the same number of residents. The Senate and House are reapportioned every ten years when the federal census is released. In addition to the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor (who are elected for four years), the constitution provides for a cabinet composed of an attorney general, a chief financial officer and a commissioner of agriculture.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Florida sends 27 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Bill Nelson (D. 2001–19) and Marco Rubio (R. 2011–17).

The state capital is Tallahassee. The state is divided into 67 counties.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of Creek and Cherokee tribes, Georgia was first settled by Europeans in the 18th century. James Oglethorpe founded Savannah in 1733, intending it as a colony offering a new start to debtors, convicts and the poor. Settlement was slow until 1783, when growth began in the cotton-growing areas west of Augusta. The American Indian population was cleared off the rich cotton land and moved beyond the Mississippi. Georgia became one of the original 13 states of the Union.

A plantation economy developed rapidly, using slave labour. In 1861 Georgia seceded from the Union and became an important source of supplies for the Confederate cause, although some northern areas never accepted secession and continued in sympathy with the Union during the Civil War. At the beginning of the war 56% of the population were white, descendants of British, Austrian and New England immigrants; the remaining 44% were black slaves.

The city of Atlanta, which grew as a railway junction, was destroyed during the war but revived to become the centre of southern reconstruction in the post-war period. It was confirmed as the state capital in 1877. Successive movements for black freedom in social, economic and political life have developed in the city, notably the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, led by Martin Luther King, who was assassinated in 1968.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Georgia is bounded north by Tennessee and North Carolina, northeast by South Carolina, east by the Atlantic, south by Florida and west by Alabama. Land area, 57,513 sq. miles (148,959 sq. km); water area, 1,912 sq. miles (4,951 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 9,687,653, an increase of 18.3% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 10,214,860.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,431,802	1,176,987	95	237	2,609,121	44.4
	All others
1980	3,948,007	1,465,457		50,801	5,464,265	92.7
1990	4,600,148	1,746,565		131,503	6,478,216	110.0

Hawaii

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The islands of Hawaii were settled by Polynesian immigrants, probably from the Marquesas Islands, about AD 400. A second major immigration, from Tahiti, occurred around 800–900. In the late 18th century all the islands were united into one kingdom by Kamehameha I. Western exploration began in 1778, and Christian missions were established after 1820. Europeans called Hawaii the Sandwich Islands. The USA, Britain and France all claimed an interest. Kamehameha III placed Hawaii under US protection in 1851. US sugar-growing companies became dominant and in 1887 the USA obtained a naval base at Pearl Harbor. A struggle developed between forces for and against annexation by the USA. In 1893 the monarchy was overthrown. The republican government agreed to be annexed to the USA in 1898, and Hawaii became a US Territory in 1900.

The islands and the naval base were of great strategic importance during the Second World War, when the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor brought the USA into the war.

Hawaii became the 50th state of the Union in 1959. The 19th-century plantation economy encouraged the immigration of workers, especially from China and Japan. Hawaiian laws, religions and culture were gradually adapted to the needs of the immigrant community.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Hawaiian Islands lie in the North Pacific Ocean, between 18° 54' and 28° 15' N. lat. and 154° 40' and 178° 25' W. long., about 2,090 nautical miles southwest of San Francisco. There are 137 named islands and islets in the group, of which seven major and five minor islands are inhabited. Land area, 6,423 sq. miles (16,635 sq. km); water area, 4,509 sq. miles (11,678 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,360,301, an increase of 12.3% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 1,431,603. Of the total population in 2010, 681,243 were male and 1,056,483 were 18 years old or older.

The principal islands are Hawaii, 4,028 sq. miles, population 2010, 185,079; Maui, 727 sq. miles, population 144,444; Oahu, 600 sq. miles, population 953,207; Kauai, 552 sq. miles, population 66,921; Molokai, 260 sq. miles, population 7,345; Lanai, 141 sq. miles, population 3,135; Niihau, 70 sq. miles, population 170; Kahoolawe, 45 sq. miles (uninhabited). The capital Honolulu—on the island of Oahu—had a population in 2010 of 387,170.

Figures for main racial groups, 2010, were: 336,599 White; 197,497 Filipino; 185,502 Japanese; 80,337 Native Hawaiian; 54,955 Chinese; 24,203 Korean; 21,424 Black or African American; 18,287 Samoan; 9,779 Vietnamese.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 18,988 (14.0 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 9,617 (7.1). Infant deaths, 2009, were at a rate of 6.1 per 1,000 live births. Marriages, 2009 (provisional), 22,200 (17.9 per 1,000 population). Inter-marriage between the races is common. In 2007, of the 9,401 resident couples married, 55.1% were inter-racial. 65.6% were non-resident marriages. Same-sex marriage was legalized by the State Legislature in Dec. 2013.

CLIMATE

All the islands have a tropical climate, with an abrupt change in conditions between windward and leeward sides, most marked in rainfall. Temperatures vary little. Average temperatures in Honolulu: Jan. 73.0°F, July 80.8°F. Average annual rainfall in Honolulu: 18.29".

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Hawaii was officially admitted into the United States on 21 Aug. 1959. However, the constitution of the State of Hawaii was created by the 1950 Constitutional Convention, ratified by the voters of the Territory on 7 Nov. 1950, and amended on 27 June 1959. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 25 members elected for four years and a House of Representatives of 51 members elected for two years. There have been two constitutional conventions since 1950, in 1968 and 1978. In addition to amendments proposed by these conventions the Legislature is able to propose amendments to voters during the general election. This has resulted in numerous amendments.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Hawaii sends two members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Brian Schatz (D. 2012–17) and Mazie Hirono (D. 2013–19).

The state capital is Honolulu. There are five counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took Hawaii with 70.6% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: David Ige (D.), Dec. 2014–Dec. 2018 (salary: $149,556).

Lieut.-Governor: Shan S. Tsutsui (D.), Dec. 2014–Dec. 2018 ($145,884).

Idaho

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Kutenai, Kalispel, Nez Percé and other tribes lived on the Pacific watershed of the northern Rocky Mountains. European exploration began in 1805, and after 1809 there were trading posts and small settlements, with fur-trapping as the primary activity. The area was disputed between Britain and the USA until 1846 when British claims were dropped. In 1860 the discovery of gold and silver brought a rush of immigrant prospectors. An area including present-day Montana was created a Territory in March 1863. Montana was separated from it in 1864. Population growth was stimulated by refugees from the Confederate states after the Civil War and by settlements of Mormons from Utah.

Fur-trapping and mining gave way to arable farming. Idaho became a state in 1890, with its capital at Boise. The population of the Territory capital, Idaho City, a gold-mining boom town in the 1860s (about 40,000 at its height), was the largest in the Pacific Northwest. By 1869 the population was down to 1,000.

In the 20th century the American Indian population shrank to 1%. The Mormon community has grown to include much of southeastern Idaho and more than half the church-going population of the state.

The Snake River of southern Idaho has supported hydro-electricity and irrigation. Food processing, minerals and timber are important. So too are the high technology companies in Idaho's metropolitan areas. Much of the state, however, remains sparsely populated and rural.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Idaho is within the Rocky Mountains and bounded north by Canada, east by Montana and Wyoming, south by Nevada and Utah, west by Oregon and Washington. Total area is 83,569 sq. miles (216,443 sq. km) of which 82,643 sq. miles (214,045 sq. km) are land. In 2010 the federal government owned 61·7% of the state area. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,567,582, an increase of 21·1% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 1,654,930.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/Alaska Native	Asian	Total (including others)	Per sq. mile
1910	319,221	651	3,488	2,234	325,594	3·9
1980	901,641	2,716	10,521	5,948	943,935	11·3
1990	950,451	3,370	13,780	9,365	1,006,749	12·2
2000	1,177,304	5,456	17,645	13,197	1,293,953	15·6
2010	1,396,487	9,810	21,441	19,069	1,567,582	19·0

Of the total population in 2010, 785,324 were male and 1,138,510 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 Idaho's Hispanic population was 175,901, up from 101,690 in 2000 (an increase of 73.0%).

The largest cities are: Boise City (the capital), with a 2010 population of 205,671; Nampa, 81,557; Meridian, 75,092; Idaho Falls, 56,813; Pocatello, 54,255; Caldwell, 46,237; Coeur d'Alene, 44,137; Twin Falls, 44,125; Lewiston, 31,894.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 23,198 (14.8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 11,430 (7.3). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 5.4 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 13,900 (8.9 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 7,700 (5.5). Same-sex marriage became legal in Oct. 2014.

CLIMATE

Boise City, Jan. 29°F (-1.7°C), July 74°F (23.3°C). Annual rainfall 12" (303 mm). Idaho belongs to the Mountain States climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution adopted in 1890 is still in force; it has had 135 amendments as of 2011. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 35 members and a House of Representatives of 70 members, all the legislators being elected for two years. It meets annually.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Idaho sends two members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Michael Crapo (R. 1999–2017) and James Risch (R. 2009–21).

The state is divided into 44 counties. The capital is Boise City.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Idaho with 64.5% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: C. L. 'Butch' Otter (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $122,597).

Lieut.-Governor: Brad Little (R.), 2015–19 ($42,909).

Illinois

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Home to Algonquian-speaking tribes, Illinois was explored first by the French in 1673. France claimed the area until 1763 when, after the French and Indian War, it was ceded to Britain along with all the French land east of the Mississippi. In 1783 Britain recognized US claims to Illinois, which became part of the North West Territory of the USA in 1787, and of Indiana Territory in 1800. Illinois became a Territory in its own right in 1809, and a state in 1818.

Immigration increased greatly with the opening in 1825 of the Erie Canal from New York, along which farmer settlers could move west and their produce back east for sale. Chicago was incorporated as a city in 1837 and quickly became the transport, trading and distribution centre of the mid-west. Industrial growth brought a further wave of immigration in the 1840s, mainly of European refugees. This movement continued with varying force until the 1920s, when it was largely replaced by immigration of black work-seekers from the southern states.

In the 20th century the population was urbanized and heavy industry was established along a network of rail and waterway routes. Chicago recovered from a destructive fire in 1871 to become the hub of this network and at one time the second largest American city.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Illinois is bounded north by Wisconsin, northeast by Lake Michigan, east by Indiana, southeast by the Ohio River (forming the boundary with Kentucky), and west by the Mississippi River (forming the boundary with Missouri and Iowa). Land area, 55,519 sq. miles (143,793 sq. km); water area, 2,395 sq. miles (6,202 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 12,830,632, an increase of 3.3% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 12,859,995.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	All others	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	5,526,962	109,049	188	2,392	5,638,591	100.6

Of the total population in 2010, 6,538,356 were female and 9,701,453 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 2,027,578 (1,530,262 in 2000).

The most populous cities (2010) are: Chicago, 2,695,598; Aurora, 197,899; Rockford, 152,871; Joliet, 147,433; Naperville, 141,853; Springfield (the capital), 116,250; Peoria, 115,007; Elgin, 108,188; Waukegan, 89,078.

Largest metropolitan area populations, 2010 census: Chicago–Joliet–Naperville, 9,461,105; Peoria, 379,186; Rockford, 349,431; Champaign–Urbana, 231,891; Springfield, 210,170.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 165,200 (12.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 99,838 (7.8). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 6.9 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 72,700 (5.6 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 32,700 (2.5). Same-sex marriage was legalized by the State Legislature in June 2014.

CLIMATE

Chicago, Jan. 25–3°F (–3.7°C), July 75–4°F (24.1°C). Annual rainfall 38.0". Illinois belongs to the Great Lakes climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution became effective on 1 July 1971. The General Assembly consists of a House of Representatives of 118 members elected for two years, and a Senate of 59 members who are divided into three groups; in one, they are elected for terms of four years, four years, and two years; in the next, for terms of four years, two years, and four years; and in the last, for terms of two years, four years, and four years. Sessions are annual. The state is divided into legislative districts, in each of which one senator is chosen; each district is divided into two representative districts, in each of which one representative is chosen.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Illinois sends 18 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Richard Durbin (D. 1997–2021) and Mark Kirk (R. 2011–17).

The capital is Springfield.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took Illinois with 57.3% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

Indiana

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was inhabited by Algonquian-speaking tribes when the first European explorers (French) laid claim to it in the 17th century. They established fortified trading posts but there was little settlement. In 1763 the area passed to Britain, with other French-claimed territory east of the Mississippi. In 1783 Indiana became part of the North West Territory of the USA; it became a separate territory in 1800 and a state in 1816. Until 1811 there was continuing conflict with the American Indian inhabitants, who were then defeated at Tippecanoe.

Early farming settlement was by families of British and German descent, including Amish and Mennonite communities. Later industrial development offered an incentive for more immigration from Europe, and, subsequently, from the southern states. In 1906 the town of Gary was laid out by the United States Steel Corporation and named after its chairman, Elbert H. Gary. The industry benefited from navigable water to supplies of iron ore and of coal. Indiana Port on Lake Michigan was a thriving trade centre, especially after the opening of the St Lawrence Seaway in 1959. The Ohio River also carried freight.

Indianapolis was built after 1821 and became the state capital in 1825. Natural gas was discovered in the neighbourhood in the late 19th century. This stimulated the growth of a motor industry, celebrated by the Indianapolis 500 race, held annually since 1911.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Indiana is bounded west by Illinois, north by Michigan and Lake Michigan, east by Ohio and south by Kentucky across the Ohio River. Total area is 36,420 sq. miles (94,326 sq. km) of which 35,826 sq. miles (92,789 sq. km) are land. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 6,483,802, an increase of 6.6% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 6,619,680.

Population in five census years was:

	American Indian/Alaska					Total	Per sq. mile
	White	Black	Native	Asian	Other
1930	3,125,778	111,982	285	458	—	3,238,503	89.4
1980	5,004,394	414,785	7,836	20,557	42,652	5,490,224	152.8

Iowa

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of the Iowa Indians, the area was explored by the Frenchmen Marquette and Joliet in 1673. French trading posts were set up, but there were few other settlements. In 1803 the French sold their claim to Iowa to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase. The land was still occupied by Indians but, in the 1830s, the tribes sold their land to the US government and migrated to reservations. Iowa became a US Territory in 1838 and a state in 1846.

The state was settled by immigrants drawn mainly from neighbouring states to the east. Later there was more immigration from Protestant states of northern Europe. The land was extremely fertile and most immigrants came to farm. Not all the American Indian population had accepted the cession and there were some violent confrontations, notably the murder of settlers at Spirit Lake in 1857. The capital, Des Moines, was founded in 1843 as a fort to protect American Indian rights. It expanded rapidly along with coal mining after 1910.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Iowa is bounded east by the Mississippi River (forming the boundary with Wisconsin and Illinois), south by Missouri, west by the Missouri River (forming the boundary with Nebraska), northwest by the Big Sioux River (forming the boundary with South Dakota) and north by Minnesota. Total area is 56,273 sq.

miles (145,746 sq. km) of which 55,857 sq. miles (144,669 sq. km) are land. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 3,046,355, an increase of 4.1% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 3,123,899.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1870	1,188,207	5,762	48	3	1,194,020	21.5

2010	2,781,561	89,148	175,646		3,046,355	54.5

Of the total population in 2010, 1,538,036 were female and 2,318,362 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 151,544, up from 82,473 in 2000 (an increase of 83.7%).

The largest cities in the state, with their population in 2010, are: Des Moines (capital), 203,433; Cedar Rapids, 126,326; Davenport, 99,685; Sioux City, 82,684; Waterloo, 68,406; Iowa City, 67,862; Council Bluffs, 62,230; Ames, 58,965; Dubuque, 57,637; West Des Moines, 56,609; Ankeny, 45,582; Urbandale, 39,463; Cedar Falls, 39,260; Marion, 34,768; Bettendorf, 33,217.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 38,719 (12.7 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 27,745 (9.1). Infant mortality, 2009, 4.6 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 21,200 (7.0 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 7,300 (2.4). Same-sex marriage became legal in April 2009.

CLIMATE

Cedar Rapids, Jan. 17.6°F, July 74.2°F. Annual rainfall 34". Des Moines, Jan. 19.4°F, July 76.6°F. Annual rainfall 33". Iowa belongs to the Mid-West climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution of 1857 still exists; it has had 48 amendments as of Aug. 2011. The General Assembly comprises a Senate of 50 and a House of Representatives of 100 members, meeting annually for an unlimited session. Senators are elected for four years, half retiring every second year: Representatives for two years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Iowa sends four members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Chuck Grassley (R. 1981–2017) and Joni Ernst (R. 2015–21).

Iowa is divided into 99 counties; the capital is Des Moines.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took Iowa with 52.1% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Terry Branstad (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $130,000).

Kansas

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was explored from Mexico in the 16th century, when Spanish travellers encountered Kansas, Wichita, Osage and Pawnee tribes. The French claimed Kansas in 1682, establishing a valuable fur trade with local tribes in the 18th century. In 1803 the area passed to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase and became a base for pioneering trails further west. After 1830 it was 'Indian Territory' and a number of tribes displaced from eastern states were settled there. In 1854 the Kansas Territory was created and opened for white settlement. The early settlers were farmers from Europe or New England, but the Territory's position also brought it into contact with southern culture. Slavery was prohibited by the Missouri Compromise of 1820 but the 1854 Kansas-Nebraska Act affirmed the principle of 'popular sovereignty' to settle the issue, which was then fought out by opposing factions throughout 'Bleeding Kansas'.

Kansas entered the Union (as a non-slave state) in 1861, minus the territory that is now in Colorado.

The economy was based on cattle-ranching and railways. Herds were driven to the railheads and shipped from vast stockyards, or slaughtered and processed in railhead meat-packing plants. Wheat and sorghum also became important once the plains could be ploughed on a large scale.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Kansas is bounded north by Nebraska, east by Missouri, with the Missouri River as boundary in the northeast, south by Oklahoma and west by Colorado. Total area is 82,278 sq. miles (213,100 sq. km) of which 81,759 sq. miles (211,754 sq. km) are land. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,853,118, an increase of 6.1% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 2,911,641.

Population in five federal census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1870	346,377	17,108	914	—	364,399	4.5

Kansas belongs to the Mid-West climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The year 1861 saw the adoption of the present constitution; it has had 183 amendments. The Legislature includes a Senate of 40 members, elected for four years, and a House of Representatives of 125 members, elected for two years. Sessions are annual.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Kansas sends four members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Pat Roberts (R. 1997–2021) and Jerry Moran (R. 2011–17).

The capital is Topeka. The state is divided into 105 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Kansas with 60.0% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

There were four primary airports in 2011 (commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually) with a combined total of 822,434 enplanements, up from 815,385 in 2010.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

In Dec. 2014 there were 9,663 federal and state prisoners. The death penalty was declared unconstitutional in Kansas in 2004. The last execution was in 1965.

Education

In 2012–13 there were 1,367 public elementary and secondary schools with 489,043 pupils enrolled and 41,243 teachers. Total expenditure on public elementary and secondary education in 2010–11 was $5,825m.; average teacher salary was $47,464 in 2012–13. Spending per pupil in 2010–11 was $9,802.

The Kansas Board of Regents governs six state universities: Kansas State University, Manhattan (founded in 1863); University of Kansas, Lawrence (1864); Emporia State University, Emporia; Pittsburg State University, Pittsburg; Fort Hays State University, Hays; and Wichita State University, Wichita. It also supervises and co-ordinates 19 community colleges, five technical colleges, six technical schools and a municipal university.

Health

In 2009 there were 133 community hospitals with 10,100 beds. A total of 316,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 6,436 active physicians in the state (23 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 428,472. In fiscal year 2011 a total of 403,694 people in Kansas received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 521,955 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 22,336 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

RELIGION

In 2010 the chief religious traditions were: Evangelical Protestants, with 516,818 members; Catholics, 426,611; Mainline Protestants, 386,980; Black Protestants, 41,666; Latter-day Saints (Mormons), 40,251.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Lying west of the Appalachians and south of the Ohio River, the area was the meeting place and battleground for the eastern Iroquois and the southern Cherokees. Northern Shawnees were also present. The first successful white settlement took place in 1769 when Daniel Boone reached the Bluegrass plains from the eastern, trans-Appalachian, colonies. After 1783 immigration from the east was rapid, settlers travelling by river or crossing the mountains by the Cumberland Gap. The area was originally attached to Virginia but became a separate state in 1792.

Large plantations dependent on slave labour were established, as were small farms worked by white owners. The state became divided on the issue of slavery, although plantation interests (mainly producing tobacco) dominated state government. In fact the state did not secede in 1861, and the majority of citizens supported the Union. Public opinion was more favourable to the south in the hard times of the reconstruction period.

The eastern mountains became an important coal-mining area, tobacco-growing continued and the Bluegrass plains produced livestock, including especially fine thoroughbred horses.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Kentucky is bounded in the north by the Ohio River (forming the boundary with Illinois, Indiana and Ohio), northeast by the Big Sandy River (forming the boundary with West Virginia), east by Virginia, south by Tennessee and west by the Mississippi River (forming the boundary with Missouri). Total area is 40,408 sq. miles (104,656 sq. km) of which 39,486 sq. miles (102,269 sq. km) are land. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 4,339,367, an increase of 7.4% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 4,425,092.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	All others	Total	Per sq. mile
1930	2,388,364	226,040	185	2,614,589	65.1
1980	3,379,006	259,477	22,294	3,660,777	92.3
1990	3,391,832	262,907	30,557	3,685,296	92.8
2000	3,640,889	295,994	104,886	4,041,769	101.7
2010	3,809,537	337,520	192,310	4,339,367	109.9

Of the total population in 2010, 2,204,415 were female and 3,315,996 were 18 years old or older. Kentucky's Hispanic population was 132,836, up 121.6% on the 2000 census figure of 59,939.

The principal cities with census population in 2010 are: Louisville, 597,337; Lexington-Fayette, 295,803; Bowling Green, 58,067; Owensboro, 57,265; Covington, 40,640; Hopkinsville, 31,577; Richmond, 31,364; Florence, 29,951; Georgetown, 29,098; Henderson, 28,757; Elizabethtown, 28,531; Nicholasville, 28,015; Jeffersontown, 26,595; Frankfort (capital), 25,527.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 55,784 (12.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 41,980 (9.7). Infant mortality, 2009, 6.9 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 33,400 (7.6 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 19,900 (4.6).

CLIMATE

Kentucky is in the Appalachian Mountains climatic zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate). It has a temperate climate. Temperatures are moderate during both winter and summer, precipitation is ample without a pronounced dry season, and winter snowfall amounts are variable. Mean annual temperatures range from 52°F in the northeast to 58°F in the southwest. Annual rainfall averages at about 45". Snowfall ranges from 5 to 10" in the southwest of the state, to 25" in the northeast, and 40" at higher altitudes in the southeast.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution dates from 1891; there had been three preceding it. The 1891 constitution was promulgated by convention and provides that amendments be submitted to the electorate for ratification. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 38 members elected for four years, one half retiring every two years, and a House of Representatives of 100 members elected for two years. It has annual sessions. All citizens of 18 or over are qualified as electors.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Kentucky sends six members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Mitch McConnell (R. 1985–2021) and Rand Paul (R. 2011–17).

The capital is Frankfort. The state is divided into 120 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Kentucky with 60.5% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Matt Bevin (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $140,070-48).

Lieut.-Governor: Jenean Hampton (R.), 2015–19 ($119,079-60).

Secretary of State: Alison Lundergan Grimes (D.), 2015–19 ($119,079-60).

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $37,396.

Budget

In 2011 total state revenue was $31,056m. Total expenditure was $29,370m. (including: education, $9,415m.; public welfare, $7,334m.; highways, $1,936m.; hospitals, $1,135m.; government administration, $880m.). Debt outstanding in 2011, $14,522m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2014 was $171,850m. (provisional), ranking Kentucky 28th in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 1.0% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In 2009 production was 90,630m. kWh, of which 84,038m. kWh was from coal.

Oil and Gas

In 2014 Kentucky produced 3.4m. bbls of crude petroleum; marketed production of natural gas totalled 79bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is 921 sq. miles.

Minerals

The principal mineral is coal: 107.3m. short tons were mined in 2009, value $6.3bn. In 2008, 51.0m. tonnes of crushed stone were mined, value $411m.; 7.6m. tonnes of sand and gravel, value $41.6m.; 0.4m. tonnes of clay, value $8.2m. Other minerals include fluorspar, ball clay, gemstones, dolomite, cement and lime. Total value of non-fuel mineral production for 2009 was $668m.

Agriculture

In 2007, 85,260 farms covered an area of 13.99m. acres. The average farm was 164 acres. In 2007 the average value of farmland and buildings per acre was $2,682.

Farm income, 2009: from crops, $1,829m.; and from livestock, $2,429m. The net farm income in 2009 was $1,332m. The chief crop is tobacco: production, in 2007, 196.3m. lb. Kentucky is the USA's second largest tobacco producer, after North Carolina. Other principal crops include corn (172m. bu. in 2007), soybeans, hay and wheat.

Stock-raising is important in Kentucky, which has long been famous for its horses. There were 175,500 horses in the state in 2007, a number exceeded only in Texas. The livestock in 2007 included 2.40m. all cattle and calves, 90,000 dairy cows, 37,000 sheep, 348,000 swine and 4.58m. laying hens.

INDUSTRY

In 2012 Kentucky's 9,096 manufacturing establishments had 508,000 employees, earning $23,647m. The value added by manufacture in 2009 was $31,994m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2010, 1,770,000. Employees by branch, 2010 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 359; government, 331; education and health services, 250; manufacturing, 209; professional and business services, 180. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 10.3%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2012 there were 79,321 miles of roads comprising 12,620 miles of urban road and 66,701 miles of rural road. There were 3,570,060 registered motor vehicles.

Rail

In 2009 there were 2,558 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). There were 13 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Kentucky in 2009 totalled 76.8m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 41.0m. tons.

Civil Aviation

In 2011 Kentucky had five primary airports—commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually—with a combined total of 5,642,399 enplanements, down from 6,133,451 in 2010. The busiest airports are Cincinnati/Northern Kentucky International (which had 3,422,466 enplanements in 2011) and Louisville International (1,650,707 enplanements in 2011). Louisville handled 2,188,422 tonnes of freight in 2011, ranking it third in the USA for cargo handled behind Memphis and Anchorage.

Shipping

There is barge traffic on the 1,100 miles of navigable rivers. There are six public river ports, over 30 contract terminal facilities and 150 private terminal operations. Kentucky's waterways have access to the junction of the upper and lower Mississippi, Ohio and Tennessee-Tombigbee navigation corridors.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There are 12 adult prisons within the Department of Corrections Adult Institutions and three privately run adult institutions. In Dec. 2014 there were 21,657 prison inmates. The death penalty is authorized for murder and kidnapping. As of Dec. 2011 there were 35 persons (including one female) under sentence of death. There was one execution in 2008 but none since.

Education

Attendance at school between the ages of six and 16 years (inclusive) is compulsory, the normal term being 175 days. In 2012–13 there were 685,167 pupils and 42,769 teachers in 1,583 public elementary and secondary schools; teachers' salaries (2012–13) averaged $50,326. The average total expenditure per pupil in 2010–11 was $9,228. There were also 5,240 teachers working in 330 private elementary and secondary schools with 69,410 students in fall 2011.

In 2012–13 the state had 24 public, 27 not-for-profit independent and 29 for-profit independent degree-granting institutions. There were 224,092 students at public degree-granting institutions in fall 2012 and 58,033 students at private degree-granting institutions. The largest of the institutions of higher learning are (fall 2014): University of Kentucky, with 29,203 students; University of Louisville, 21,561; Western Kentucky University, 20,171; Eastern Kentucky University, 16,305; Northern Kentucky University, 15,090; Murray State University, 11,207; Morehead State University, 11,052. Five of the several privately-endowed colleges of standing are Berea College, Berea; Centre College, Danville; Transylvania University, Lexington; Georgetown College, Georgetown; and Bellarmine College, Louisville.

Health

In 2009 there were 104 community hospitals with 14,100 beds. A total of 597,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 10,076 active physicians in the state (23 per 10,000 population).

Louisiana

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of Choctaw and Caddo tribes, the area was claimed for France in 1682. In 1718 the French founded New Orleans which became the centre of a crown colony in 1731. France ceded the area west of the Mississippi (most of the present state) to Spain in 1762 and the eastern area, north of New Orleans, to Britain in 1763. The British section passed to the USA in 1783 but France bought back the rest from Spain in 1800, including New Orleans and the mouth of the Mississippi. The USA, fearing exclusion from a strategically important and commercially promising shipping area, persuaded France to sell Louisiana in 1803. The present states of Missouri, Arkansas, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Oklahoma were included in the purchase.

The area became the Territory of New Orleans in 1804 and was admitted to the Union as a state in 1812. The economy initially depended on cotton and sugarcane plantations. The population was of French, Spanish and black descent, with a growing number of American settlers. Plantation interests succeeded in achieving secession in 1861 but New Orleans was occupied by the Union in 1862. Planter influence was reasserted in the late 19th century, imposing rigid segregation and denying black rights.

The state has become mainly urban industrial, with the Mississippi ports growing rapidly. There is petroleum and natural gas, and a strong tourist industry based on the French culture and Caribbean atmosphere of New Orleans.

Louisiana, and New Orleans in particular, suffered widespread damage and loss of life after Hurricane Katrina struck the Gulf Coast on 31 Aug. 2005.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Louisiana is bounded north by Arkansas, east by Mississippi, south by the Gulf of Mexico and west by Texas. Land area, 43,204 sq. miles (111,898 sq. km); water area, 9,174 sq. miles (23,761 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 4,533,372, an increase of 1.4% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 4,670,724.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1930	1,322,712	776,326	1,536	1,019	2,101,593	46.5
			All others
1980	2,911,243	1,237,263		55,466	4,205,900	93.5
1990	2,839,138	1,299,281		81,554	4,219,973	96.9
2000	2,856,161	1,451,944		160,871	4,468,976	102.6
2010	2,836,192	1,452,396		244,784	4,533,372	104.9

Of the total population in 2010, 2,314,080 were female and 3,415,357 were 18 years old or older. The Hispanic population was 192,560 in 2010, an increase of 78.7% on the 2000 census figure of 107,738.

The largest cities with their 2010 census population are: New Orleans, 343,829 (484,764 in 2000); Baton Rouge (the capital), 229,493; Shreveport, 199,311; Metairie, 138,481; Lafayette, 120,623; Lake Charles, 71,993; Kenner, 66,702; Bossier City, 61,315; Monroe, 48,815. In Jan. 2006 the population of New Orleans was estimated at 144,000 in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, making Baton Rouge temporarily the most populous city in Louisiana. Although the population of New Orleans has risen steadily back up since then, it has still not reached pre-Katrina levels.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 62,379 (13.8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 40,671 (9.0). Infant deaths, 2009, 8.7 per 1,000 live births. Marriages, 2009 (provisional), 28,700 (7.1 per 1,000 population).

CLIMATE

New Orleans, Jan. 54°F (12.2°C), July 83°F (28.3°C). Annual rainfall 58" (1,458 mm). Louisiana belongs to the Gulf Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1974. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 39 members and a House of Representatives of 105 members, both chosen for four years. Sessions are annual; a fiscal session is held in even years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Louisiana sends six members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by David Vitter (R. 2005–17) and Bill Cassidy (R. 2015–21).

Louisiana is divided into 64 parishes (corresponding to the counties of other states). The capital is Baton Rouge.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Louisiana with 57.8% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: John Bel Edwards (D.), 2016–20 (salary: $130,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Billy Nungesser (R.), 2016–20 ($115,000).

Secretary of State: Tom Schedler (R.), since 2010 ($115,000).

Government Website: <http://www.louisiana.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $42,030.

Budget

In 2011 total revenue was $33,975m. Total expenditure was $33,396m. (including: education, $8,904m.; public welfare, $6,426m.; hospitals, $2,205m.; highways, $2,185m.; government administration, $982m.). Debt outstanding, in 2011, $18,447m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2014 was $215,968m. (provisional), ranking Louisiana 24th in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 1.9% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In 2009 production was 91.0bn. kWh, of which 44.0bn. kWh was from natural gas.

Oil and Gas

In 2014 Louisiana produced 68.4m. bbls of crude petroleum; marketed production of natural gas totalled 1,980bn. cu. ft (fourth in the USA behind Texas, Pennsylvania and Oklahoma).

Water

The total area covered by water is 9,174 sq. miles, of which 4,562 sq. miles are inland.

Minerals

Principal non-fuel minerals are salt, sand, gravel and lime. Total non-fuel mineral production in 2009 was more than $460m.

Agriculture

The state is divided into two parts, the uplands and the alluvial and swamp regions of the coast. A delta occupies about one-third of the total area. Manufacturing is the leading industry, but agriculture is important. The number of farms in 2007 was 30,106 covering 8.11m. acres; the average farm had 269 acres. Average value of farmland per acre, in 2007, was $2,058.

Farm income, 2009: from crops, $1,762m.; and from livestock, $778m. The net farm income in 2009 was $689m. Principal crops, 2007 production, were: soybeans, 24.72m. bu.; sugarcane, 14.09m. tons; rice, 23.12m. cwt; corn, 114.67m. bu.; cotton, 699,000 bales; sorghum, 22.40m. bu.

Forestry

In 2013 the state had 14.97m. acres of forested land, of which 692,000 acres were national forest. Private, non-industrial landowners own 62% of the state's forestland, forest products industries own 29% and the general public owns 9%. Production 2011: sawtimber, 828,637,892 bd ft; cordwood, 5,844,089 standard cords. The economic impact of forestry and forest products industries in Louisiana was $3.1bn. in 2010.

Fisheries

In 2009 Louisiana's commercial fisheries catch for all species totalled 1,147.4m. lb, valued at $271.7m. Louisiana's commercial fishery landings in terms of weight are second only behind those of Alaska. In 2005 Louisiana had 873 fish farms, more than any other state.

INDUSTRY

Louisiana's leading manufacturing activity is the production of chemicals, followed, in order of importance, by the processing of petroleum and coal products, the production of transportation equipment and production of paper products. In 2012 the state's 6,994 manufacturing establishments had 287,000 employees, earning $17,602m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $41,820m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2010, 1,884,000. Rail

In 2009 there were 2,830 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). There were 17 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Louisiana in 2009 totalled 25.2m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 30.0m. tons. There is a tramway in New Orleans.

Civil Aviation

In 2011 there were seven primary airports—commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually—with a combined total of 5,496,614 enplanements, up from 5,274,620 in 2010. By far the busiest airport, Louis Armstrong New Orleans International, had 4,255,411 enplanements in 2011.

Shipping

The port of South Louisiana is the busiest in the country and the second busiest after Houston for foreign trade cargo. In 2009 South Louisiana handled 212.6m. tons of cargo (109.5m. tons of domestic cargo and 103.1m. tons of foreign trade cargo). Other major ports are New Orleans, Lake Charles, Baton Rouge and Plaquemines, which ranked as the USA's 6th, 12th, 14th and 15th busiest ports respectively in 2009. The Mississippi and other waterways provide 7,500 miles of navigable water.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

In Dec. 2014 there were 38,030 federal and state prisoners. There have been no executions since one was carried out in 2010.

Education

Maine

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally occupied by Algonquian-speaking tribes, the Territory was disputed between groups of British settlers, and between the British and French, throughout the 17th and most of the 18th centuries. After 1652 Maine was governed as part of Massachusetts, and French claims finally failed in 1763. Most of the early settlers were English and Protestant Irish, with many Quebec French.

The Massachusetts settlers gained control when the first colonist, Sir Ferdinando Gorges, supported the losing royalist side in the English civil war. During the English-American war of 1812, Maine residents claimed that the Massachusetts government did not protect them against British raids. Maine was separated from Massachusetts and entered the Union as a state in 1820.

Maine is a mountainous state and even the coastline is rugged, but the coastal belt is where most settlement has developed. In the 19th century there were manufacturing towns making use of cheap water-power and the rocky shore supported a shell-fish industry. The latter still flourishes, together with intensive horticulture, producing potatoes and fruit. The other main economic activity is forestry for timber, pulp and paper.

The capital is Augusta, a river trading post which was fortified against American Indian attacks in 1754, incorporated as a town in 1797 and chosen as capital in 1832.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Maine is bounded west, north and east by Canada, southeast by the Atlantic, south and southwest by New Hampshire. Land area, 30,843 sq. miles (79,883 sq. km); water area, 4,537 sq. miles (11,750 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,328,361, an increase of 4.2% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 1,329,328.

Population for five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	739,995	1,363	992	121	742,371	24.8
			All others
1980	1,109,850	3,128	12,049		1,125,027	36.3
1990	1,208,360	5,138	14,430		1,227,928	39.8
2000	1,236,014	6,760	32,149		1,274,923	41.3

Maryland

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first European visitors found Algonquian-speaking tribes, often under attack by Iroquois from further north. The first white settlement was made by the Calvert family, British Roman Catholics, in 1634. The settlers received some legislative rights in 1638. In 1649 their assembly passed the Act of Toleration, granting freedom of worship to all Christians. A peace treaty was signed with the Iroquois in 1652, after which it was possible for farming settlements to expand north and west. The capital (formerly at St Mary's City) was moved to Annapolis in 1694. Baltimore, which became the state's main city, was founded in 1729.

The first industry was tobacco-growing, which was based on slave-worked plantations. There were also many immigrant British small farmers, tradesmen and indentured servants.

At the close of the War of Independence, the treaty of Paris was ratified in Annapolis. Maryland became a state of the Union in 1788. In 1791 the state ceded land for the new federal capital, Washington, and its economy has depended on the capital's proximity ever since. Baltimore also grew as a port and industrial city, attracting European immigration in the 19th century. Although in sympathy with the south, Maryland remained in the Union in the Civil War albeit under the imposition of martial law.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Maryland is bounded north by Pennsylvania, east by Delaware and the Atlantic, south by Virginia and West Virginia, with the Potomac River forming most of the boundary, and west by West Virginia. Chesapeake Bay almost cuts off the eastern end of the state from the rest. Land area, 9,707 sq. miles (25,142 sq. km); water area, 2,699 sq. miles (6,990 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 5,773,552, an increase of 9.0% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 6,006,401.

Population for five federal censuses was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1920	1,204,737	244,479	32	400	1,449,661	145.8
1960	2,573,919	518,410	1,538	5,700	3,100,689	314.0
			All others
1990	3,393,964	1,189,899		197,605	4,781,468	489.2

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first European settlement was at Plymouth, where the Mayflower landed its English religious separatists in 1620. In 1626–30 more colonists arrived, the main body being English Puritans who founded a Puritan commonwealth. This commonwealth, of about 1,000 colonists led by John Winthrop, became the Massachusetts Bay Colony and was founded under a company charter. Following disagreement between the English government and the colony, the charter was withdrawn in 1684, but in 1691 a new charter united a number of settlements under the name of Massachusetts Bay. The colony's government was rigidly theocratic.

Shipbuilding, iron-working and manufacturing were more important than farming, the land being poor. The colony was Protestant and of English descent until the War of Independence. The former colony adopted its present constitution in 1780. In the struggle which ended in the separation of the American colonies from the mother country, Massachusetts took the foremost part, and on 6 Feb. 1788 became the 6th state to ratify the US constitution. The state acquired its present boundaries (having previously included Maine) in 1820.

During the 19th century, industrialization and immigration from Europe increased while Catholic Irish and Italian immigrants began to change the population's character. The main inland industry was textile manufacture, the main coastal occupation, whaling; both have now gone. Boston has remained the most important city of New England, attracting a large black population since 1950.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Massachusetts is bounded north by Vermont and New Hampshire, east by the Atlantic, south by Connecticut and Rhode Island and west by New York. Land area, 7,800 sq. miles (20,202 sq. km); water area, 2,754 sq. miles (7,134 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 6,547,629, an increase of 3.1% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 6,794,422.

Population at five federal census years was:

	White	Black	Other	Total	Per sq. mile
1950	4,611,503	73,171	5,840	4,690,514	598.4
1980	5,362,836	221,279	152,922	5,737,037	732.0
1990	5,405,374	300,130	310,921	6,016,425	767.6
2000	5,367,286	343,454	638,357	6,349,097	809.8
2010	5,265,236	434,398	847,995	6,547,629	839.4

Of the total population in 2010, 3,381,001 were female and 5,128,706 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 627,654, up from 428,729 in 2000 (an increase of 46.4%).

In 1763 Michigan passed to Britain, along with other French territory east of the Mississippi, and from Britain it passed to the USA in 1783. Britain, however, kept a force at Detroit until 1796, and recaptured Detroit in 1812. Regular American settlement did not begin until later. The Territory of Michigan (1805) had its boundaries extended after 1818 and 1834. It was admitted to the Union as a state (with its present boundaries) in 1837.

During the 19th century there was rapid industrial growth, especially in mining and metalworking. The largest groups of immigrants were British, German, Irish and Dutch. Other groups came from Scandinavia, Poland and Italy. Many settled as miners, farmers and industrial workers. The motor industry became dominant, especially in Detroit. Lake Michigan ports shipped bulk cargo of iron ore and grain.

Detroit was the capital until 1847, when that function passed to Lansing. Detroit remained, however, an important centre of flour-milling and shipping and, after the First World War, of the motor industry.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Michigan is divided into two by Lake Michigan. The northern part is bounded south by the lake and by Wisconsin, west and north by Lake Superior, east by the North Channel of Lake Huron; between the two latter lakes the Canadian border runs through straits at Sault Ste Marie. The southern part is bounded in the west and north by Lake Michigan, east by Lake Huron, Ontario and Lake Erie, south by Ohio and Indiana. Total area is 96,714 sq. miles (250,487 sq. km) of which 56,539 sq. miles (146,435 sq. km) are land and 40,175 sq. miles (104,052 sq. km) water. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 9,883,640, a fall of 0.6% since 2000. Michigan was the only state whose population fell between 2000 and 2010. July 2015 estimate, 9,922,576.

Population of five federal census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	2,785,247	17,115	7,519	292	2,810,173	48.9

Minnesota

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Minnesota remained an American Indian territory until the middle of the 19th century, the main groups being Chippewa and Sioux. In the 17th century there had been some French exploration, but no permanent settlement. After passing under the nominal control of France, Britain and Spain, the area became part of the Louisiana Purchase and was sold to the USA in 1803.

Fort Snelling was founded in 1819. Early settlers came from other states, especially New England, to exploit the great forests. Lumbering gave way to homesteading, and the American settlers were joined by Germans, Scandinavians and Poles. Agriculture, mining and forest industries became the mainstays of the economy. Minneapolis, founded as a village in 1856, grew first as a lumber centre, processing the logs floated down the Minnesota River, and then as a centre of flour-milling and grain marketing. St Paul, its twin city across the river, became Territorial capital in 1849 and state capital in 1858. St Paul also stands at the head of navigation on the Mississippi which rises in Minnesota.

The Territory (1849) included parts of North and South Dakota, but at its admission to the Union in 1858, the state of Minnesota had its present boundaries.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Minnesota is bounded north by Canada, east by Lake Superior and Wisconsin, with the Mississippi River forming the boundary in the southeast, south by Iowa, west by South and North Dakota, with the Red River forming the boundary in the northwest. Land area, 79,627 sq. miles (206,232 sq. km); water area, 7,309 sq. miles (18,930 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 5,303,925, an increase of 7.8% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 5,489,594.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	2,059,227	7,084	9,053	344	2,075,708	25.7

2010	4,524,062	274,412	505,451		5,303,925	66.6

Of the total population in 2010, 2,671,793 were female and 4,019,862 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 250,258, up from 143,382 in 2000 (an increase of 74.5%).

The largest cities (with 2010 census population) are Minneapolis (382,578), St Paul (the capital; 285,068), Rochester (106,769), Duluth (86,265) and Bloomington (82,893). The Minneapolis–St Paul–Bloomington metropolitan area had a 2010 census population of 3,279,833.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 68,610 (12.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 38,971 (7.3). Infant mortality, 2009, 4.6 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 28,400 (5.3 per 1,000 population). Same-sex marriage was legalized in May 2013, with effect from Aug. 2013.

CLIMATE

Mississippi

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Mississippi was one of the territories claimed by France and ceded to Britain in 1763. The indigenous people were Choctaw and Natchez. French settlers at first traded amicably, but in the course of three wars (1716, 1723 and 1729) the French allied with the Choctaw to drive the Natchez out. The Natchez massacred the settlers of Fort Rosalie, which the French had founded in 1716 and which was later renamed Natchez.

In 1783 the area became part of the USA except for Natchez which was under Spanish control until 1798. The United States then made it the capital of the Territory of Mississippi. The boundaries of the Territory were extended in 1804 and again in 1812. In 1817 it was divided into two territories, with the western part becoming the state of Mississippi. (The eastern part became the state of Alabama in 1819.) The city of Jackson was laid out in 1822 as the new state capital.

A cotton plantation economy developed, based on black slave labour and by 1860 the majority of the population was black. Mississippi joined the Confederacy during the Civil War. After defeat and reconstruction there was a return to rigid segregation and denial of black rights. This situation lasted until the 1960s. There was a black majority until the Second World War, when out-migration began to change the pattern. By 1990 about 35% of the population was black, and manufacture (especially clothing and textiles) had become the largest single employer of labour.

Mississippi suffered widespread damage and loss of life after Hurricane Katrina struck the Gulf Coast on 31 Aug. 2005.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Mississippi is bounded in the north by Tennessee, east by Alabama, south by the Gulf of Mexico and Louisiana, and west by the Mississippi River forming the boundary with Louisiana and Arkansas. Land area, 46,923 sq. miles (121,531 sq. km); water area, 1,509 sq. miles (3,907 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,967,297, an increase of 4.3% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 2,992,333.

Population of five federal census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	786,111	1,009,487	1,253	263	1,797,114	38.8
	All others
1980	1,615,190	887,206	18,242		2,520,638	53.0
1990	1,633,461	915,057	24,698		2,573,216	54.8
2000	1,746,099	1,033,809	64,750		2,844,658	60.6
2010	1,754,684	1,098,385	114,228		2,967,297	63.2

Of the total population in 2010, 1,526,057 were female and 2,211,742 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 Mississippi's Hispanic population was 81,481, up from 39,569 in 2000 (an increase of 105.9%).

Missouri

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Territory of several American Indian groups, including the Missouri, the area was not settled by European immigrants until the 18th century. The French founded Ste Genevieve in 1735, partly as a lead-mining community. St Louis was founded as a fur-trading base in 1764. The area was nominally under Spanish rule from 1770 until 1800 when it passed back to France. In 1803 the USA bought it as part of the Louisiana Purchase.

St Louis was made the capital of the whole Louisiana Territory in 1805, and of a new Missouri Territory in 1812. In that year American immigration increased markedly. The Territory became a state in 1821. Bitter disputes between slave-owning and anti-slavery factions led to the former obtaining statehood without the prohibition of slavery required of all other new states north of latitude 36° 30'. This was achieved by the Missouri Compromise of 1820. The Compromise was repealed in 1854 and declared unconstitutional in 1857. During the Civil War the state held to the Union side, although St Louis was placed under martial law.

With the development of steamboat traffic on the Missouri and Mississippi rivers, and the expansion of railways, the state became the transport hub of all western movement. Lead and other mining remained important, as did livestock farming. European settlers came from Germany, Britain and Ireland.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Missouri is bounded north by Iowa, east by the Mississippi River forming the boundary with Illinois and Kentucky, south by Arkansas, southeast by Tennessee, southwest by Oklahoma, west by Kansas and Nebraska, with the Missouri River forming the boundary in the northwest. Total area is 69,707 sq. miles (180,540 sq. km) of which 68,742 sq. miles (178,040 sq. km) are land.

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 5,988,927, an increase of 7.0% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 6,083,672.

Population of five federal census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1930	3,403,876	223,840	578	1,073	3,629,367	52.4

2000	4,748,083	629,391	217,737	5,595,211	81.2
2010	4,958,770	693,391	336,766	5,988,927	87.1

Of the total population in 2010, 3,055,450 were female and 4,563,491 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 Missouri's Hispanic population was 212,470, up from 118,592 in 2000 (an increase of 79.2%).

The principal cities at the 2010 census were:

Kansas City	459,787	O'Fallon	79,329
St Louis	319,294	St Joseph	76,780
Springfield	159,498	St Charles	65,794
Independence	116,830	Blue Springs	52,575
Columbia	108,500	St Peters	52,575
Lee's Summit	91,364	Florissant	52,158

The capital, Jefferson City, had a population in 2010 of 43,079.

Largest metropolitan areas, 2010: St Louis, 2,812,896; Kansas City, 2,035,334; Springfield, 436,712.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 76,759 (12.8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 55,276 (9.2). Infant mortality, 2009, 7.2 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 39,800 (6.5 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 23,300 (3.7).

Rail traffic originating in Missouri in 2009 totalled 12.5m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 72.8m. tons. There is a light rail line in St Louis.

Civil Aviation

There were five primary airports—commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually—in 2011 with a combined total of 11,587,550 enplanements, up from 11,414,476 in 2010. The busiest airports are Kansas City International and Lambert-St Louis International.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

In Dec. 2014 there were 31,942 federal and state prisoners. The death penalty was reinstated in 1978. Executions were suspended between June 2006 and June 2007. There were six executions in 2015 (ten in 2014). The Missouri Law Enforcement Assistance Council was created in 1969 for law reform. With reorganization of state government in 1974 the duties of the Council were delegated to the Department of Public Safety. The Department of Corrections was organized as a separate department of State by an Act of the Legislature in 1981.

Education

School attendance is compulsory for children from seven to 16 years. In 2012–13 there were 2,419 public schools (kindergarten through grade 12) with 917,900 pupils and 66,248 teachers. Total expenditure on public elementary and secondary education in 2010–11 was $10,072m.; teacher salaries averaged $47,517 in 2012–13. Spending per pupil in 2010–11 was $9,461.

The higher education system in Missouri is an informal, loose federation of institutions, comprised of distinct sectors and numerous campuses, centres and off-campus locations. In 2013 there were ten public four-year universities with a total fall enrolment of 149,354 (including the University of Missouri with 75,272 students at four campuses), 13 public two-year colleges with a total fall enrolment of 104,084 and a state technical college with a fall enrolment of 1,293 for a total of 254,731 enrolled students. In addition, there are 25 comprehensive independent, not-for profit universities and colleges with a total fall 2013 enrolment of 134,467 and 155 private career or proprietary schools certified to operate by the Coordinating Board for Higher Education with an enrolment of over 70,000 students.

Health

In 2009 there were 125 community hospitals with 19,100 beds. A total of 825,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 14,789 active physicians in the state (25 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 995,011. In fiscal year 2012 a total of 1,151,473 people in Missouri received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 1,246,269 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. Montana

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of many American Indian hunters including the Sioux, Cheyenne and Chippewa, Montana was not settled by American colonists until the 19th century. The area passed to the USA with the Louisiana Purchase of 1803, but the area west of the Rockies was disputed with Britain until 1846. Trappers and fur-traders were the first immigrants, and the fortified trading post at Fort Benton (1846) became the first permanent settlement. Colonization increased when gold was found in 1862. Montana was created a separate Territory (out of Idaho and Dakota Territories) in 1864. In 1866 large-scale grazing of sheep and cattle provoked violent confrontation with the indigenous people whose hunting lands were invaded. American Indian wars led to the defeat of federal forces at Little Bighorn in 1876 and at Big Hole Basin in 1877, but by 1880 the American Indians had been moved to reservations. Montana became a state in 1889.

Helena, the capital, was founded as a mining town in the 1860s. In the early 20th century there were many European immigrants who settled as farmers or as copper-miners, especially at Butte.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Montana is bounded north by Canada, east by North and South Dakota, south by Wyoming and west by Idaho and the Bitterroot Range of the Rocky Mountains. Land area, 145,546 sq. miles (376,962 sq. km); water area, 1,494 sq. miles (3,869 sq. km). In 2010 American Indian lands covered 13,171 sq. miles (reservations plus off-reservation trust land). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 989,415, an increase of 9.7% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 1,032,949.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/ Alaska Native	Asian	Total (including others)	Per sq. mile
1910	360,580	1,834	10,745	2,870	376,053	2.6
1980	740,148	1,786	37,270	2,503	786,690	5.3
1990	741,111	2,381	47,679	4,259	799,065	5.4
2000	817,229	2,692	56,068	5,161	902,195	6.2
2010	884,961	4,027	62,555	6,253	989,415	6.8

Of the total population in 2010, 496,667 were male and 765,852 were 18 years old or older. Median age, 39.8 years. Households, 409,607. In 2010 Montana's Hispanic population was 28,565, up from 18,081 in 2000 (an increase of 58.0%).

The largest cities, 2010, are Billings, 104,170; Missoula, 66,788; Great Falls, 58,505; Bozeman, 37,280; Butte-Silver Bow, 33,525; Helena (capital), 28,190; Kalispell, 19,927.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 12,060 (12.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 8,827 (8.9). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 5.9 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 7,100 (7.4 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 3,900 (4.1). Same-sex marriage became legal in Nov. 2014.

Nebraska

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Nebraska region was first reached by Europeans from Mexico under the Spanish general Coronado in 1541. It was ceded by France to Spain in 1763, returned to France in 1801, and sold by Napoleon to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803. During the 1840s the Platte River valley was the trail for thousands of pioneers' wagons heading for Oregon and California. The need to serve and protect the trail led to the creation of Nebraska as a Territory in 1854. In 1862 the Homestead Act opened the area for settlement, but colonization was slow until the Union Pacific Railroad was completed in 1869. Omaha, developed as the starting point of the Union Pacific, became one of the largest railway towns in the country.

Nebraska became a state in 1867, with approximately its present boundaries except that it later received small areas from the Dakotas. Many early settlers were from Europe, brought in by railway-company schemes, but from the late 1880s eastern Nebraska suffered catastrophic drought. Crop and stock farming recovered but crop growing was only established in the west by means of irrigation.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Nebraska is bounded in the north by South Dakota, with the Missouri River forming the boundary in the northeast and the boundary with Iowa and Missouri to the east, south by Kansas, southwest by Colorado and west by Wyoming. Total area is 77,348 sq. miles (200,330 sq. km) of which 76,824 sq. miles (198,974 sq. km) are land. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,826,341, an increase of 6.7% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 1,896,190.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,180,293	7,689	3,502	730	1,192,214	15.5
			All others
1980	1,490,381	48,390	31,054		1,569,825	20.5
1990	1,480,558	57,404	40,423		1,578,385	20.5
2000	1,533,261	68,541	109,461		1,711,263	22.3
2010	1,572,838	82,885	170,618		1,826,341	23.8

Of the total population in 2010, 920,045 were female and 1,367,120 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the estimated Hispanic population of Nebraska was 167,405, up from 94,425 in 2000 (a rise of 77.3%). The largest cities in the state are: Omaha, with a census population, 2010, of 408,958; Lincoln (the capital), 258,379; Bellevue, 50,137; Grand Island, 48,520; Kearney, 30,787; Fremont, 26,397; Hastings, 24,907; North Platte, 24,733; Norfolk, 24,210.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 25,918 (14.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 15,171 (8.3). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 5.4 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 12,500 (6.7 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 5,400 (3.4).

CLIMATE

Omaha, Jan. 22°F (−5.6°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 29" (721 mm). Nebraska belongs to the High Plains climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution was adopted in 1875; it had been amended 194 times by 2011. By an amendment of 1934 Nebraska has a single-chambered legislature (elected for four years) of 49 members elected on a non-party ballot and classed as senators—the only state in the USA to have one. It meets annually.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Nebraska sends three members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Deb Fischer (R. 2013–19) and Ben Sasse (R. 2015–21).

The capital is Lincoln. The state has 93 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Nebraska with 60.5% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008, although Barack Obama did win in one of the five congressional districts).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Pete Ricketts (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $105,000).

Nevada

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was part of Spanish America until 1821 when it became part of the newly independent state of Mexico. Following a war between Mexico and the USA, Nevada was ceded to the USA as part of California in 1848. Settlement began in 1849 and the area was separated from California and joined with Utah Territory in 1850. In 1859 a rich deposit of silver was found in the Comstock Lode. Virginia City was founded as a mining town and immigration increased rapidly. Nevada Territory was formed in 1861. During the Civil War the Federal government, allegedly in order to obtain the wealth of silver for the Union cause, agreed to admit Nevada to the Union as the 36th state. This was in 1864. Areas of Arizona and Utah Territories were added in 1866–67.

The mining boom lasted until 1882, by which time cattle ranching in the valleys, where the climate is less arid, had become equally important. Carson City, the capital, developed in association with the nearby mining industry. The largest cities, Las Vegas and Reno, grew in the 20th century with the building of the Hoover dam, the introduction of legal gambling and of easy divorce.

After 1950 much of the desert area was adopted by the Federal government for weapons testing and other military purposes.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Nevada is bounded north by Oregon and Idaho, east by Utah, southeast by Arizona, with the Colorado River forming most of the boundary, south and west by California. Total area is 110,572 sq. miles (286,380 sq. km) of which 109,781 sq. miles (284,332 sq. km) are land. In 2010 the federal government owned 56,961,778 acres, equivalent to 81.1% of the state area (the highest percentage in any state).

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,700,551, an increase of 35.1% since 2000. Nevada had the fastest-growing population of any state between the censuses of 2000 and 2010, continuing a trend stretching back to 1950. July 2015 estimate, 2,890,845.

Population in five census years was:

	American Indian/Alaska Native		Asian		Total (including others)	Per sq. mile
1910	White 74,276	Black 513	Native 5,240	Asian 1,846	81,875	0.7
1980	700,360	50,999	13,308	35,841	800,508	7.2
1990	1,012,695	78,771	19,637	90,730	1,201,833	10.9
2000	1,501,886	135,477	26,420	334,474	1,998,257	18.2
2010	1,786,688	218,626	32,062	195,436	2,700,551	24.6

Of the total population in 2010, 1,363,616 were male and 2,035,543 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 716,501, up from 393,970 in 2000 (an increase of 81.9%).

The largest cities in 2010 were: Las Vegas, 583,756; Henderson, 257,729; Reno, 225,221; North Las Vegas, 216,961; Sparks, 90,264; Carson City (the capital), 55,274.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, were 35,934 (13.3 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 19,623 (7.3). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 5.9 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 108,200 (40.9 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 17,700 (6.7). Nevada's marriage rate in 2009 was more than double that of any other state and six times the national average, but less than half that of 20 years earlier. Same-sex marriage became legal in Oct. 2014.

CLIMATE

Las Vegas, Jan. 57°F (14°C), July 104°F (40°C). Annual rainfall 4-13" (105 mm). Reno, Jan. 45°F (7°C), July 91°F (33°C). Annual rainfall 7.53" (191 mm). Nevada belongs to the Mountain States climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution adopted in 1864 is still in force, with 149 amendments as of 2011. The Legislature meets biennially (and in special sessions) and consists of a Senate of 21 members elected for four years, with half their number elected every two years, and an Assembly of 42 members elected for two years. The Governor may be elected for two consecutive four-year terms.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Nevada sends four members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Harry Reid (D. 1987–2017) and Dean Heller (R. 2011–19).

The state capital is Carson City. There are 16 counties, 18 incorporated cities and 49 unincorporated communities and one city-county (the Capitol District of Carson City).

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took Nevada with 52.3% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Brian Sandoval (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $149,573).

Lieut.-Governor: Mark Hutchison (R.), 2015–19 ($63,648).

Secretary of State: Barbara K. Cegavske (R.), 2015–19 ($102,898).

New Hampshire

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was part of a grant by the English crown to John Mason and fellow-colonists and was first settled in 1623. In 1629 an area between the Merrimack and Piscataqua rivers was called New Hampshire. More settlements followed, and in 1641 they were taken under the jurisdiction of the governor of Massachusetts. New Hampshire became a separate colony in 1679.

After the War of Independence New Hampshire was one of the 13 original states of the Union, ratifying the US constitution in 1788. The state constitution, which dates from 1776, was almost totally rewritten in 1784 and amended again in 1792.

The settlers were Protestants from Britain and Northern Ireland. They developed manufacturing industries, especially shoe-making, textiles and clothing, to which large numbers of French Canadians were attracted after the Civil War.

Portsmouth, originally a fishing settlement, was the colonial capital and is the only seaport. In 1808 the state capital was moved to Concord (having had no permanent home since 1775); Concord produced the Concord Coach which was widely used on the stagecoach routes of the West until 1900.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

New Hampshire is bounded in the north by Canada, east by Maine and the Atlantic, south by Massachusetts and west by Vermont. Total area is 9,349 sq. miles (24,214 sq. km) of which 8,953 sq. miles (23,187 sq. km) are land. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,316,470, an increase of 6.5% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 1,330,608.

Population at five federal censuses was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	429,906	564	34	68	430,572	47.7
			All others
1980	910,099	3,990		6,521	920,610	101.9
1990	1,087,433	7,198		14,621	1,109,252	123.7
2000	1,186,851	9,035		39,900	1,235,786	137.8
2010	1,236,050	15,035		65,385	1,316,470	147.0

Of the total population in 2010, 667,076 were female and 1,029,236 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 36,704, up from 20,489 in 2000 (an increase of 79.1%). The largest city in the state is Manchester, with a 2010 census population of 109,565. The capital is Concord, 42,695.

Other main cities and towns (with 2010 populations) are: Nashua, 86,494; Dover, 29,987; Rochester, 29,752; Keene, 23,409; Derry, 22,015; Portsmouth, 20,779; Laconia, 15,951.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 12,874 (9.8 per 1,000 population—the joint lowest rate in any US state); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 10,201 (7.7). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 4.9 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 8,500 (6.4 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 4,900 (3.7). Same-sex marriage became legal in Jan. 2010.

CLIMATE

New Hampshire is in the New England climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate). Manchester, Jan. 22°F (−5.6°C), July 70°F (21.1°C). Annual rainfall 40" (1,003 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

While the present constitution dates from 1784, it was extensively revised in 1792 when the state joined the Union. Since 1775 there have been 16 state conventions with 49 amendments adopted to change the constitution.

The Legislature (called the General Court) consists of a Senate of 24 members, elected for two years, and a House of Representatives, of 400 members, elected for two years. It meets annually. The Governor and five administrative officers called 'Councillors' are also elected for two years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, New Hampshire sends two members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Jeanne Shaheen (D. 2009–21) and Kelly Ayotte (R. 2011–17).

The capital is Concord. The state is divided into ten counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took New Hampshire with 52.2% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Maggie Hassan (D.), 2015–19 (salary: $127,443-47).

Senate President: Chuck Morse (R.), 2015–19 ($250 per term).

Secretary of State: William M. Gardner (D.), first elected by legislature in 1976 ($110,750-02).

Government Website: <http://www.nh.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $52,773.

Budget

New Hampshire has no general sales tax or state income tax but does have local property taxes. Other government revenues come from rooms and meals tax, business profits tax, motor vehicle licences, fuel taxes, fishing and hunting licences, state-controlled sales of alcoholic beverages, and cigarette and tobacco taxes.

In 2011 total state revenue was $8,521m. Total expenditure was $7,638m. (including: education, $2,016m.; public welfare, $1,945m.; highways, $553m.; government administration, $256m.; correction, $113m.). Outstanding debt in 2011, $8,450m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2014 was $66,276m. (provisional), ranking New Hampshire 40th in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 2.3% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Water

The total area covered by water is 397 sq. miles.

Minerals

Minerals are little worked; they consist mainly of sand and gravel, stone, and clay for building and highway construction. Value of domestic non-fuel mineral production in 2009 was $108m.

Agriculture

In 2012 there were 4,391 farms covering 474,065 acres; average farm was 108 acres. Average value per acre in 2012, $4,167. Farm income 2009: from crops, $104m.; from livestock and products, $75m. The net farm income in 2009 was $19m.

The chief field crops are hay and vegetables; the chief fruit crop is apples. Livestock, 2012: cattle and calves, 33,392; sheep and lambs, 8,079; hogs and pigs, 3,287; laying hens, 221,446.

Forestry

In 2013 the state had a forested area of 4,783,477 acres, of which 793,384 acres were national forest.

Fisheries

2009 commercial fishing landings amounted to 13.9m. lb worth $17.7m.

INDUSTRY

Principal manufactures: electrical and electronic goods, machinery and metal products. In 2012 the state's 3,850 manufacturing establishments had 135,000 employees, earning $7,930m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $8,944m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2010, 623,000. Employees by branch, 2010 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 132; education and health services, 110; government, 97; manufacturing, 66; professional and business services, 64. In Dec. 2010 the unemployment rate was 5.6%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from New Hampshire totalled $4,367m., up from $3,061m. in 2009. The leading destinations for exports in 2010 were Mexico (value of $1,049m.), followed by Canada, China (excluding Hong Kong) and Germany.

COMMUNICATIONS

New Jersey

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of Delaware Indians, the area was settled by immigrant colonists in the early 17th century, when Dutch and Swedish traders established fortified posts on the Hudson and Delaware Rivers. The Dutch gave way to the English in 1664. In 1676 the English divided the area; the eastern portion was assigned to Sir George Carteret and the western granted to Quaker settlers. This lasted until 1702 when New Jersey was united as a colony of the Crown and placed under the jurisdiction of the governor of New York. It became a separate colony in 1738.

During the War of Independence crucial battles were fought at Trenton, Princeton and Monmouth. New Jersey became the 3rd state of the Union in 1787. Trenton, the state capital since 1790, began as a Quaker settlement and became an iron-working town. Industrial development grew rapidly, there and elsewhere in the state, after the opening of canals and railways in the 1830s. Princeton, also a Quaker settlement, became an important port on the New York road; the college of New Jersey (Princeton University) was transferred there from Newark in 1756.

The need for supplies in the Civil War stimulated industry and New Jersey became a manufacturing state. The growth of New York and Philadelphia, however, encouraged commuting to employment in both centres. By 1980 about 60% of the state's population lived within 30 miles of New York.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

New Jersey is bounded north by New York, east by the Atlantic with Long Island and New York City to the northeast, south by Delaware Bay and west by Pennsylvania. Land area, 7,354 sq. miles (19,047 sq. km); water area, 1,368 sq. miles (3,544 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 8,791,894, an increase of 4.5% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 8,958,013.

Population at five federal censuses was:

	White	Black	Asian	Others	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	2,445,894	89,760	1,345	168	2,537,167	337.7
1980	6,127,467	925,066	103,848	208,442	7,364,823	986.2
1990	6,130,465	1,036,825	272,521	290,377	7,730,188	1,042.0
2000	6,104,705	1,141,821	483,605	684,219	8,414,350	1,134.4
2010	6,029,248	1,204,826	725,726	832,094	8,791,894	1,195.5

Of the total population in 2010, 4,512,294 were female and 6,726,680 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 1,555,144, up from 1,117,191 in 2000 (an increase of 39.2%).

Census populations of the largest cities and towns in 2010 were:

New Mexico

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first European settlement was established in 1598. Until 1771 New Mexico was the Spanish 'Kingdom of New Mexico'. In 1771 it was annexed to the northern province of New Spain. When New Spain won its independence in 1821, it took the name of Republic of Mexico and established New Mexico as its northernmost department. Ceded to the USA in 1848 after war between the USA and Mexico, the area was recognized as a Territory in 1850, by which time its population was Spanish and American Indian. There were frequent conflicts between new settlers and raiding parties of Navajo and Apaches. The American Indian war lasted from 1861–66, and from 1864–68 about 8,000 Navajo were imprisoned at Bosque Redondo.

The boundaries were altered several times when land was taken into Texas, Utah, Colorado and lastly (1863) Arizona. New Mexico became a state in 1912.

Settlement proceeded by means of irrigated crop-growing and Mexican-style ranching. During the Second World War the desert areas were used as testing zones for atomic weapons. Mineral related industries developed after the discovery of uranium and petroleum.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

New Mexico is bounded north by Colorado, northeast by Oklahoma, east by Texas, south by Texas and Mexico and west by Arizona. Total area is 121,590 sq. miles (314,917 sq. km) of which 121,298 sq. miles (314,161 sq. km) are land. In 2010 American Indian lands covered 12,085 sq. miles (reservations plus off-reservation trust land).

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,059,179, an increase of 13.2% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 2,085,109. Of the total population in 2010, 1,041,758 were female and 1,540,507 were 18 years old or older.

The population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/ Alaska Native	Asian/ Native Hawaiian/ Pacific Islander	Other	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	304,594	1,628	20,573	506	—	327,301	2.7
1980	977,587	24,020	106,119	6,825	188,343	1,302,894	10.7
1990	1,146,028	30,210	134,355	14,124	190,352	1,515,069	12.5
2000	1,214,253	34,343	173,483	20,758	376,209	1,819,046	15.0
2010	1,407,876	42,550	193,222	30,018	385,513	2,059,179	17.0

Before 1930 New Mexico was largely a Spanish-speaking state, but after 1945 an influx of population from other states considerably reduced the percentage of persons of Spanish origin or descent. However, in recent years the percentage of the Hispanic population has begun to rise again. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 953,403, up from 765,386 in 2000 (an increase of 24.6%). At 46.3%, New Mexico has the largest percentage of persons of Hispanic origin of any state in the USA.

The largest cities are Albuquerque, with a 2010 census population of 545,852; Las Cruces, 97,618; Rio Rancho, 87,521; Santa Fe (the capital), 67,947; Roswell, 48,366.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

New York State

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first European immigrants came in the 17th century, when there were two powerful American Indian groups in rivalry: the Iroquois confederacy (Mohawk, Oneida, Onondaga, Cayuga and Seneca) and the Algonquian-speaking Mohegan and Munsee. The Dutch made settlements at Fort Orange (now Albany) in 1624 and at New Amsterdam in 1625, trading with the American Indians for furs. In the 1660s there was conflict between the Dutch and the British in the Caribbean; as part of the concluding treaty the British, in 1664, received Dutch possessions in the Americas, including New Amsterdam, which they renamed New York.

In 1763 the Treaty of Paris ended war between the British and the French in North America (in which the Iroquois had allied themselves with the British). Settlers of British descent in New England then felt confident enough to expand westward. The climate of northern New York being severe, most settled in the Hudson river valley. After the War of Independence New York became the 11th state of the Union (1778), having first declared itself independent of Britain in 1777.

The economy depended on manufacturing, shipping and other means of distribution and trade. During the 19th century New York became the most important city in the USA. Its industries, especially clothing, attracted thousands of European immigrants. Industrial development spread along the Hudson-Mohawk valley, which was made the route of the Erie Canal (1825) linking New York with Buffalo on Lake Erie and thus with the developing farmlands of the middle west.

On 11 Sept. 2001 two hijacked commercial airliners were flown into the World Trade Center in central New York. The complex was destroyed in the attack and 2,753 people died.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

New York is bounded west and north by Canada with Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and the St Lawrence River forming the boundary; east by Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut, southeast by the Atlantic, south by New Jersey and Pennsylvania. CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

New York State has had five constitutions, adopted in 1777, 1821, 1846, 1894 and 1938. The constitution produced by the 1938 convention (which was substantially a modification of the 1894 one), forms the fundamental law of the state (as modified by subsequent amendments). A proposed new constitution in 1967 was rejected by the electorate. In 1997 voters rejected a proposal to hold a new constitutional convention.

The Legislature comprises the Senate, with 62 members, and the Assembly, with 150. All members are elected in even-numbered years for two-year terms. The Legislature meets every year, typically for several days a week from Jan.-June and, if recalled by leaders of the Legislature, at other times during the year. The Governor can also call the Legislature into extraordinary session. The state capital is Albany. For local government the state is divided into 62 counties, five of which constitute the city of New York.

Each of the state's 62 cities is incorporated by charter, under special legislation. The government of New York City is vested in the mayor (Bill de Blasio), elected for four years, and a city council, whose president and members are elected for four years. The council has a President and 51 members, each elected from a district wholly within the city. The mayor appoints all the heads of departments, except the comptroller (the chief financial officer), who is elected. Each of the five city boroughs (Manhattan, Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and Staten Island) has a president, elected for four years. Each borough is also a county, although Manhattan borough, as a county, is called New York, Brooklyn is called Kings, and Staten Island is called Richmond.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, New York State sends 27 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Charles Schumer (D. 1999-2017) and Kirsten Gillibrand (D. 2009-19), who succeeded Hillary Clinton (D. 2001-09) following the latter's appointment as Secretary of State. Gillibrand won a special election in Nov. 2010 to take on the remainder of Clinton's term, which was set to end in Jan. 2013.

North Carolina

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The early inhabitants were Cherokees. European settlement was attempted in 1585–87, following an exploratory visit by Sir Walter Raleigh, but this failed. Settlers from Virginia came to the shores of Albemarle Sound after 1650 and in 1663 Charles II chartered a private colony of Carolina. In 1691 the north was put under a deputy governor who ruled from Charleston in the south. The colony was formally separated into North and South Carolina in 1712. In 1729 control was taken from the private proprietors and vested in the Crown, whereupon settlement grew, and the boundary between north and south was finally fixed (1735).

After the War of Independence, North Carolina became one of the original 13 states of the Union. The city of Raleigh was laid out as the new capital. Having been a plantation colony North Carolina continued to develop as a plantation state, growing tobacco with black slave labour. It was also an important source of gold before the western gold-rushes of 1848.

In 1861 at the outset of the Civil War, North Carolina seceded from the Union, but General Sherman occupied the capital unopposed. A military governor was admitted in 1862, and civilian government restored with readmission to the Union in 1868.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

North Carolina is bounded north by Virginia, east by the Atlantic, south by South Carolina, southwest by Georgia and west by Tennessee. Land area, 48,618 sq. miles (125,920 sq. km); water area, 5,201 sq. miles (13,471 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 9,535,483, an increase of 18.5% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 10,042,802.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,500,511	697,843	7,851	82	2,206,287	45.3
			All others
1980	4,453,010	1,316,050	105,369		5,874,429	111.5
1990	5,008,491	1,456,323	163,823		6,628,637	136.1
2000	5,804,656	1,737,545	507,112		8,049,313	165.2
2010	6,528,950	2,048,628	957,905		9,535,483	196.1

Of the total population in 2010, 4,889,991 were female and 7,253,848 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 North Carolina's Hispanic population was 800,120, up from 378,963 in 2000. This represented a rise of 111.1%.

The principal cities (with census population in 2010) are: Charlotte, 731,424; Raleigh (the capital), 403,892; Greensboro, 269,666; Winston-Salem, 229,617; Durham, 228,330; Fayetteville, 200,564; Cary, 135,234; Wilmington, 106,476; High Point, 104,371.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 122,350 (12.8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 78,761 (8.3). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 7.9 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 65,800 (6.7 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 36,700 (3.8). Same-sex marriage became legal in Oct. 2014.

CLIMATE

Climate varies sharply with altitude; the warmest area is in the southeast near Southport and Wilmington; the coldest is Mount Mitchell (6,684 ft). Raleigh, Jan. 42°F (5-6°C), July 79°F (26-1°C). Annual rainfall 46" (1,158 mm). North Carolina belongs to the Atlantic Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1971 (previous constitutions, 1776 and 1868); it has had 29 amendments as of 2010. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 50 members and a House of Representatives of 120 members; all are elected by districts for two years. It meets in odd-numbered years in Jan.

The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years; they can be elected to only one additional consecutive term. There are also 19 executive departments—eight have elected heads (for four-year terms) and ten have heads appointed by the Governor; the other department is the North Carolina Community College System, under a president.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, North Carolina sends 13 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Richard Burr (R. 2005–17) and Thom Tillis (R. 2015–21).

The capital is Raleigh. There are 100 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took North Carolina with 50-6% of the vote (Barack Obama won it in 2008).

North Dakota

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The original inhabitants were Plains Indians. French explorers and traders were active in the 18th century, often operating from French possessions in Canada. France claimed the area until 1803, when it passed to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase, except for the northeastern part which was held by the British until 1818.

Trading with the American Indians, mainly for furs, continued until the 1860s, with American traders succeeding the French. In 1861 the Dakota Territory (North and South) was established. In 1862 the Homestead Act was passed (allowing 160 acres of public land free to any family who had worked and lived on it for five years) and this greatly stimulated settlement. Farming settlers came to the wheat lands in great numbers, many of them from Canada, Norway and Germany.

Bismarck, the capital, began as a crossing-point on the Missouri and was fortified in 1872 to protect workers building the Northern Pacific Railway. There followed a gold-rush nearby and the town became a service centre for prospectors. In 1889 North and South Dakota were admitted to the Union as separate states with Bismarck as the Northern capital. The largest city, Fargo, was also a railway town, named after William George Fargo, the express-company founder.

The population grew rapidly until 1890 and steadily until 1930 by which time it was about one-third European in origin. Between 1930 and 1970 there was a steady population drain, increasing whenever farming was affected by the extremes of the continental climate. The discovery of oil in the state in 2006 has since prompted an economic boom that has generated a population rise more than three times the rate in the USA overall since 2010.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

North Dakota is bounded north by Canada, east by the Red River (forming a boundary with Minnesota), south by South Dakota and west by Montana. Land area, 69,001 sq. miles (178,711 sq. km); water area, 1,698 sq. miles (4,397 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 672,591, an increase of 4.7% since 2000. Following the discovery of oil in 2006 the population rose by 7.6% between 2010 and 2013, the fastest rate of growth in the country. July 2015 population estimate, 756,927.

Population at five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	569,855	617	6,486	98	577,056	8.2
				All others
1980	625,557	2,568	24,692		652,717	9.5
1990	604,142	3,524	31,134		638,800	9.3
2000	593,182	3,916	45,102		642,200	9.3
2010	605,449	7,960	59,182		672,591	9.7

Of the total population in 2010, 339,864 were male and 522,720 were 18 years old or older. Only Vermont has fewer persons of Hispanic origin than North Dakota. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 13,467, up from 7,786 in 2000 (an increase of 73.0%).

The largest cities are Fargo with a population, census 2010, of 105,549; Bismarck (capital), 61,272; Grand Forks, 52,838; and Minot, 40,888.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 9,104 (13.5 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 5,946 (8.8). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 6.1 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 4,300 (6.6 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 1,600 (2.9).

CLIMATE

Bismarck, Jan. 8°F (−13.3°C), July 71°F (21.1°C). Annual rainfall 16" (402 mm). Fargo, Jan. 6°F (−14.4°C), July 71°F (21.1°C). Annual rainfall 20" (503 mm). North Dakota belongs to the High Plains climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1889; it has had 154 amendments as of 2011. The Legislative Assembly consists of a Senate of 47 members elected for four years, and a House of Representatives of 94 members elected for four years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, North Dakota sends one member to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by John Hoeven (R. 2011–17) and Heidi Heitkamp (D. 2013–19).

The capital is Bismarck. The state has 53 organized counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took North Dakota with 58.7% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Jack Dalrymple (R.), Dec. 2012–Dec. 2016 (salary: $129,091).

Lieut.-Governor: Drew Wrigley (R.), Dec. 2012–Dec. 2016 ($100,215).

Secretary of State: Alvin A. Jaeger (D.), Dec. 2014–Dec. 2018 ($102,689).

Government Website: <http://www.nd.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $55,802.

Budget

In 2011 total state revenue was $7,806m. Total expenditure was $5,516m. (education, $1,781m.; public welfare, $913m.; highways, $717m.; natural resources, $262m.; government administration, $160m.). Outstanding debt in 2011, $2,061m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2014 was $48,233m. (provisional), ranking North Dakota 46th in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 6.3% (provisional), the highest rate of any state, thanks to North Dakota's booming oil production.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Oil and Gas

Oil was discovered in 1951. North Dakota is now the USA's second largest oil-producing state, after Texas (accounting for 12% of output). Crude petroleum production has increased tenfold since 2005 and doubled since 2011, and in 2014 was 397m. bbls; marketed production of natural gas in 2012 totalled 179bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is 1,698 sq. miles.

Minerals

Production of lignite (2009) was 29.9m. short tons. Total value of domestic non-fuel mineral production in 2009 was more than $50m.

Agriculture

In 2007 there were 31,970 farms (61,963 in 1954) in an area of 39.67m. acres and with an average farm acreage of 1,241. In 2007 the average value of farmland and buildings per acre was $771.

Farm income, 2009: from crops, $5,581m.; and from livestock, $771m. The net farm income in 2009 was $1,936m. Production, 2007, included: wheat, 293.5m. bu. (the most in any state); corn, 275.3m. bu.; soybeans, 106.6m. bu.; barley, 75.4m. bu. (the most in any state); honey, 31m. lb (the most in any state).

The state has also an active livestock industry, chiefly cattle raising. Livestock, 2007: cattle, 1.81m.; hogs and pigs, 181,700; sheep, 89,000; laying hens, 109,300.

Forestry

Forest area, 2014, was 797,000 acres, of which 96,000 acres were national forest.

INDUSTRY

Although the state is still mainly agricultural it is diversifying into high tech and information technology industries. In 2012 the state's 1,918 manufacturing establishments had 60,000 employees, earning $2,611m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $3,548m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2010, 376,000. Employees by branch, 2010 (in 1,000): government, 80; trade, transportation and utilities, 80; education and health services, 55; leisure and hospitality, 34; professional and business services, 28. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2012 was just 3.2%, the lowest of any US state.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from North Dakota totalled $2,536m., up from $2,193m. in 2009 although down from $2,772m. in 2008. The leading destinations for exports in 2010 were Canada (value of $1,570m.), followed by Mexico, Australia and Belgium.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2012 there were 86,851 miles of road (84,929 miles rural). There were 776,344 registered motor vehicles.

Rail

In 2009 there were 3,413 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). Rail traffic originating in North Dakota in 2009 totalled 31.1m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 13.8m. tons.

Civil Aviation

In 2011 there were six primary airports—commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually—with a combined total of 861,139 enplanements, up from 798,204 in 2010.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

In Dec. 2014 there were 1,718 federal and state prisoners, up 9.0% from 1,576 in Dec. 2013—the largest rise in any state over the same period. The Missouri River Correctional Center is a minimum custody institution. The death penalty was abolished in 1973.

Education

School attendance is compulsory between the ages of seven and 16. In 2012–13 there were 525 public schools with 101,111 pupils and 8,677 teachers. State expenditure per pupil in elementary and secondary schools in 2010–11 was $10,898. Average teacher salary was $47,344 in 2012–13.

The University of North Dakota in Grand Forks, founded in 1883, had 14,906 students in fall 2014; North Dakota State University in Fargo had 14,747. There were 21 degree-granting institutions in 2012–13 (14 public and seven private); total enrolment in fall 2012 was 55,169.

Health

In 2009 there were 41 community hospitals with 3,400 beds. A total of 93,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 1,617 active physicians in the state (25 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 108,118. In fiscal year 2012 a total of 90,837 people in North Dakota received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 124,372 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 3,776 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

RELIGION

The main religious traditions in 2010 were: Mainline Protestants, with 196,839 members; Catholics, 167,349; Evangelical Protestants, 78,607; Latter-day Saints (Mormons), 7,206.

Ohio

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The land was inhabited by Delaware, Miami, Shawnee and Wyandot Indians. It was explored by French and British traders in the 18th century and confirmed as part of British North America in 1763. After the War of Independence it became part of the Northwest Territory of the new United States. Former independence fighters came in from New England in 1788 to make the first permanent white settlement at Marietta, at the confluence of the Ohio and Muskingum rivers. In 1803 Ohio was separated from the rest of the Territory and admitted to the Union as the 17th state.

In the early 19th century there was steady immigration from Europe, mainly of Germans, Swiss, Irish and Welsh. Industrial growth began with the processing of farm, forest and mining products; it increased rapidly with the need to supply the Union armies in the Civil War of 1861–65.

As the industrial cities grew, so immigration began again, with many whites from eastern Europe and the Balkans and blacks from the southern states looking for work in Ohio.

Cleveland, which developed rapidly as a Lake Erie port after the opening of commercial waterways to the interior and the Atlantic coast (1825, 1830 and 1855), became an iron-and-steel town during the Civil War.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Ohio is bounded north by Michigan and Lake Erie, east by Pennsylvania, southeast and south by the Ohio River (forming a boundary with West Virginia and Kentucky) and west by Indiana. Land area, 40,861 sq. miles (105,829 sq. km); water area, 3,965 sq. miles (10,269 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 11,536,504, an increase of 1.6% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 11,613,423.

Population at five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	4,654,897	111,452	127	645	4,767,121	117.0

CLIMATE

Cincinnati, Jan. 30.6°F, July 76.8°F, annual rainfall 39.6"; Cleveland, Jan. 25.7°F, July 71.9°F, annual rainfall 38.7"; Columbus, Jan. 28.3°F, July 74.7°F, annual rainfall 40.0". Ohio belongs to the Great Lakes climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The question of a general revision of the constitution drafted by an elected convention is submitted to the people every 20 years. The constitution dates from 1851, since when there have been 161 amendments adopted to change the constitution.

The Senate consists of 33 members and the House of Representatives of 99 members. The Senate is elected for four years, half every two years; the House is elected for two years; the Governor, Lieut.-Governor and Secretary of State for four years. Qualified as electors are (with necessary exceptions) all citizens 18 years of age who have the usual residential qualifications.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Ohio sends 16 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Sherrod Brown (D. 2007–19) and Rob Portman (R. 2011–17).

The capital (since 1816) is Columbus. Ohio is divided into 88 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took Ohio with 50.1% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: John Kasich (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $148,886.08).

Lieut.-Governor: Mary Taylor (R.), 2015–19 ($78,041.45).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Francisco Coronado led a Spanish expedition in 1541, claiming the land for Spain. There were several American Indian groups but no strong political unit. In 1714 Juchereau de Saint Denis made the first French contact. During the 18th century French fur-traders were active. A French and Spanish struggle for control was resolved by the French withdrawal in 1763. France returned briefly in 1800–03, and the territory then passed to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase.

In 1828 the Federal government set aside the area of the present state as Indian Territory (a reservation and sanctuary for American Indian tribes who had been driven off their lands elsewhere by white settlement). About 70 tribes came, among whom were Creeks, Choctaws and Cherokees from the southeastern states, and Plains Indians.

In 1889 the government took back about 2.5m. acres of the Territory and opened it to white settlement. About 10,000 homesteaders gathered at the site of Oklahoma City on the Santa Fe Railway in the rush to stake their land claims. The settlers' area, and others subsequently opened to settlement, were organized as the Oklahoma Territory in 1890. In 1907 the Oklahoma and Indian Territories were combined and admitted to the Union as a state. Indian reservations were established within the state.

The economy first depended on ranching and farming, with packing stations on the railways. A mining industry grew in the 1870s attracting foreign immigration, mainly from Europe. In 1901 oil was found near Tulsa.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Oklahoma is bounded north by Kansas, northeast by Missouri, east by Arkansas, south by Texas (the Red River forming part of the boundary) and, at the western extremity of the 'panhandle', by New Mexico and Colorado. Land area, 68,595 sq. miles (177,660 sq. km); water area, 1,304 sq. miles (3,377 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 3,751,351, an increase of 8.7% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 3,911,338.

The population at five federal censuses was:

	American Indian/Alaska Native				Total	Per sq. mile
	White	Black	Native	Other
1930	2,130,778	172,198	92,725	339	2,396,040	34.6

2010	2,706,845	277,644	321,687	445,175	3,751,351	54.7

Of the total population in 2010, 1,894,374 were female and 2,821,685 were 18 years old or older. Oklahoma is home to 39 recognized American Indian tribes. In 2010 Oklahoma's Hispanic population was 332,007, up from 179,304 in 2000 (an increase of 85.2%).

The most important cities with population, 2010, are Oklahoma City (capital), 579,999; Tulsa, 391,906; Norman, 110,925; Broken Arrow, 98,850; Lawton, 96,867; Edmond, 81,405; Moore, 55,081; Midwest City, 54,371; Enid, 49,379; Stillwater, 45,688; Muskogee, 39,223; Bartlesville, 35,750.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 53,238 (14.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 36,544 (9.7). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 7.9 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 23,500 (6.9 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 16,900 (4.9). Same-sex marriage became legal in Oct. 2014.

CLIMATE

Oklahoma City, Jan. 34°F (1°C), July 81°F (27°C). Annual rainfall 31.9" (8,113 mm). Tulsa, Jan. 34°F (1°C), July 82°F (28°C). Annual rainfall 33.2" (8,438 mm). Oklahoma belongs to the Central Plains climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate). Oklahoma's average temperature in July 2011 was 88.9°F (31.6°C), the highest for any state in US history.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution, dating from 1907, provides for amendment by initiative petition and legislative referendum; it has had 200 amendments (as of Sept. 2005).

The Legislature consists of a Senate of 48 members, who are elected for four years, and a House of Representatives elected for two years and consisting of 101 members. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four-year terms; the Governor can only be elected for two terms in succession. Electors are (with necessary exceptions) all citizens 18 years or older, with the usual qualifications.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Oklahoma sends five members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by James Inhofe (R. 1994–2021) and James Lankford (R. 2015–17). Lankford was elected to fill the seat formerly held by Tom Coburn, who had resigned for health reasons.

The capital is Oklahoma City. The state has 77 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Oklahoma with 66.8% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Mary Fallin (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $147,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Todd Lamb (R.), 2015–19 ($114,713).

Secretary of State: Chris Benge (R.), since Nov. 2013 ($140,000).

Government Website: <http://www.ok.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $43,637.

Budget

In 2011 total state revenue was $26,225m. Total expenditure was $22,378m. (education, $7,491m.; public welfare, $5,457m.; highways, $2,049m.; health, $804m.; government administration, $590m.). Outstanding debt in 2011, $10,255m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2014 was $162,377m. (provisional), ranking Oklahoma 29th in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 2.8% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Oil and Gas

In 2014 Oklahoma produced 127.0m. bbls of crude petroleum (ranking it fifth in the USA after Texas, North Dakota, California and Alaska); marketed production of natural gas totalled 2,310bn. cu. ft (third in the USA behind Texas and Pennsylvania).

Water

The total area covered by water is 1,304 sq. miles.

Minerals

Coal production (2009), 956,000 short tons. Principal minerals are: crushed stone, cement, sand and gravel, iodine, glass sand, gypsum. Other minerals are helium, clay and sand, zinc, lead, granite, tripoli, bentonite, lime and volcanic ash. Total value of domestic non-fuel minerals produced in 2009 was $675m.

Agriculture

In 2007 the state had 86,565 farms and ranches with a total area of 35-09m. acres; average size was 405 acres and average value per acre was $1,157. Area harvested, 2007, 7,650,080 acres. Livestock, 2007: cattle, 5-39m.; sheep and lambs, 76,200; hogs and pigs, 2-40m.; laying hens, 3-32m.

Farm income 2009: from crops, $1,260m.; from livestock and products, $3,584m. The net farm income in 2009 was $130m. The major cash grain is wheat (167m. bu. in 2008 with a value of $1,082m.). Other crops include barley, oats, rye, grain, corn, soybeans, grain sorghum, cotton, peanuts and peaches. Value of cattle and calves produced, 2008, $1,954m.

The Oklahoma Conservation Commission works with 91 conservation districts, universities, and state and federal government agencies. The early work of the conservation districts, beginning in 1937, was limited to flood and erosion control: since 1970, they also include urban areas.

Irrigated production has increased in the Oklahoma 'panhandle'. The Ogallala aquifer is the primary source of irrigation water there and in western Oklahoma, a finite source because of its isolation from major sources of recharge. Declining groundwater levels necessitate the most effective irrigation practices.

Forestry

There were 12,363,000 acres of forested land in 2013, with 306,000 acres of national forest. The forest products industry is concentrated in the 118 eastern counties. There are three forest regions: Ozark (oak, hickory); Ouachita highlands (pine, oak); Cross-Timbers (post oak, black jack oak). Southern pine is the chief commercial species, at almost 80% of saw-timber harvested annually. Replanting is essential.

INDUSTRY

In 2012 Oklahoma's 8,100 manufacturing establishments had 297,000 employees, earning $14,162m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $22,886m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment in 2010 was 1,526,000. Employees by branch, 2010 (in 1,000): government, 340; trade, transportation and utilities, 277; education and health services, 204; professional and business services, 169; leisure and hospitality, 138. Oklahoma's unemployment rate was 6-8% in Dec. 2010.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from Oklahoma totalled $5,353m., up from $4,415m. in 2009. The leading destinations for exports in 2010 were Canada (value of $1,867m.), followed by Mexico, Japan and China (excluding Hong Kong).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2012 there were 112,821 miles of road comprising 16,146 miles of urban road and 96,675 miles of rural road. There were 3,312,256 registered motor vehicles.

Rail

In 2009 there were 3,275 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). There were 19 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Oklahoma in 2009 totalled 16-9m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 33-2m. tons.

Civil Aviation

There were three primary airports—commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually—in 2011 with a combined total of 3,148,469 enplanements, down from 3,161,942 in 2010. The main airport is Will Rogers World, at Oklahoma City, which had 1,738,438 enplanements in 2011.

Shipping

The McClellan-Kerr Arkansas Navigation System provides access from east central Oklahoma to New Orleans through the Verdigris, Arkansas and Mississippi rivers. In 2004, 12-9m. tons were shipped inbound and outbound on the Oklahoma Segment. Commodities shipped are mainly chemical fertilizer, farm produce, petroleum products, iron and steel, coal, sand and gravel.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There were 27,650 federal and state prisoners in Dec. 2014. The death penalty was suspended in 1966 and reimposed in 1976. There was one execution in 2015 (three in 2014). Oklahoma's total of 112 executions between 1977 and 2015 is the second highest in the USA behind Texas.

Education

Public elementary and secondary schools numbered 1,796 in 2012–13; there were 673,483 pupils and 41,775 teachers. The average teacher salary per annum was $44,128 in 2012–13. In 2010–11 total expenditure on public elementary and secondary education was $5,619m. There were 66 degree-granting establishments (29 public) in 2012–13; enrolment totalled 228,464 in fall 2012.

Public institutions of higher education include:

Founded	Name	Place	2014 enrolment
1890	University of Oklahoma	Norman	27,261
1890	Oklahoma State University	Stillwater	25,962

1969	Rose State College	Midwest City	6,891
1970	Tulsa Community College	Tulsa	17,861
1972	Oklahoma City Community College	Oklahoma City	13,444

The largest private institution of higher education is the University of Tulsa (founded in 1894), with 4,682 students in fall 2014.

Health

In 2009 there were 116 community hospitals with 11,300 beds. A total of 442,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 6,467 active physicians (18 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 597,228. In fiscal year 2012 a total of 981,568 people in Oklahoma received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 749,794 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 18,633 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

RELIGION

The principal religious traditions in the state in 2010 were: Evangelical Protestants, with 1,531,381 members; Mainline Protestants, 383,786; Catholics, 178,430; Black Protestants, 51,621; Latter-day Saints (Mormons), 46,693.

Oregon

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was divided between many American Indian tribes including the Chinook, Tillamook, Cayuse and Modoc. In the 18th century English and Spanish visitors tried to establish claims, based on explorations of the 16th century. The USA also laid claim by right of discovery when an expedition entered the mouth of the Columbia River in 1792.

Oregon was disputed between Britain and the USA. An American fur trading settlement established at Astoria in 1811 was taken by the British in 1812. The Hudson Bay Company was the most active force in Oregon until the 1830s when American pioneers began to migrate westwards along the Oregon Trail. The dispute between Britain and the USA was resolved in 1846 with the boundary fixed at 49°N. lat. Oregon was organized as a Territory in 1848 but with wider boundaries; it became a state with its present boundaries in 1859.

Early settlers were mainly American. They came to farm in the Willamette Valley and to exploit the western forests. Portland developed as a port for ocean-going traffic, although it was 100 miles inland at the confluence of the Willamette and Columbia rivers. Industries followed when the railways came and the rivers were exploited for hydro-electricity. The capital of the Territory from 1851 was Salem, a mission for American Indians on the Willamette river; it was confirmed as state capital in 1864. Salem became the processing centre for the farming and market-gardening of the Willamette Valley.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Oregon is bounded in the north by Washington, with the Columbia River forming most of the boundary, east by Idaho, with the Snake River forming most of the boundary, south by Nevada and California and west by the Pacific. Land area, 95,988 sq. miles (248,608 sq. km); water area, 2,391 sq. miles (6,191 sq. km). In 2010 the federal government owned 53.0% of the state area. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 3,831,074, an increase of 12.0% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 4,028,977.

Population at five federal censuses was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1930	938,598	2,234	4,776	8,179	953,786	9.9
1980	2,490,610	37,060	27,314	34,775	2,633,105	27.3
	White	Black	American Indian/ Alaska Native	All Others	Total	Per sq. mile
1990	2,636,787	46,178	38,496	120,860	2,842,321	29.6
2000	2,961,623	55,662	45,211	358,903	3,421,399	35.6
2010	3,204,614	69,206	53,203	504,051	3,831,074	39.9

Of the total population in 2010, 1,935,072 were female and 2,964,621 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 450,062, up from 275,314 in 2000 (an increase of 63.5%).

The largest cities (2010 census figures) are: Portland, 583,776; Eugene, 156,185; Salem (the capital), 154,637; Gresham, 105,594; Hillsboro, 91,611; Beaverton, 89,803; Bend, 76,639; Medford, 74,907; Springfield, 59,403; Corvallis, 54,462; Albany, 50,158. Primary statistical (metropolitan) areas: Portland–Vancouver–Hillsboro, 2,226,009; Salem, 390,738; Eugene–Springfield, 351,715.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 45,540 (11.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 31,886 (8.3). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 4.8 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 23,500 (6.6 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 13,300 (3.9). Same-sex marriage was legalized in May 2014.

CLIMATE

Jan. 32°F (0°C), July 66°F (19°C). Annual rainfall 28" (710 mm). Oregon belongs to the Pacific coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1859; some 250 items in it have been amended. The Legislative Assembly consists of a Senate of 30 members, elected for four years (half their number retiring every two years), and a House of 60 representatives, elected for two years. The Governor is elected for four years. The constitution reserves to the voters the rights of initiative and referendum and recall.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Oregon sends five members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Ron Wyden (D. 1996–2017) and Jeff Merkley (D. 2009–21).

The capital is Salem. There are 36 counties in the state.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took Oregon with 54.5% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Kate Brown (D.), 2015–19 (salary: $98,600).

Secretary of State: Jeanne Atkins (D.), since March 2015 ($77,000).

Government Website: <http://www.oregon.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $41,220.

Budget

In 2011 total state revenue was $34,991m. Total expenditure was $27,335m. (including: education, $7,102m.; public welfare, $6,027m.; highways, $1,672m.; hospitals, $1,629m.; government administration, $786m.). Outstanding debt in 2011, $14,069m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state was $203,788m. in 2014 (provisional), ranking Oregon 25th in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 3.6% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Water

The total area covered by water is 2,391 sq. miles.

Minerals

Mineral resources include gold, silver, lead, mercury, chromite, sand and gravel, stone, clays, lime, silica, diatomite, expansible shale, scoria, pumice and uranium. There is geothermal potential. The total value of non-fuel mineral production in 2009 was $314m.

Agriculture

Oregon, which has an area of 61,557,184 acres, is divided by the Cascade Range into two distinct climate zones. West of the Cascade Range there is a good rainfall and almost every variety of crop common to the temperate zone is grown; east of the Range stock-raising and wheat-growing are the principal industries and irrigation is needed for row crops and fruits.

There were, in 2013, 35,000 farms with an acreage of 16.5m. and an average farm size of 471 acres; most are family-owned corporate farms. Average value per acre (2012), $1,882.

Farm income in 2009: from crops, $2,995m.; from livestock and products, $898m. The net farm income in 2009 was $563m. Oregon's top commodities in 2012 were greenhouse and nursery ($745.1m.), cattle and calves ($653.8m.), hay ($638.1m.), wheat ($472.1m.) and grass seed ($411.1m.).

Forestry

Forestland is land that is capable of having at least 10% cover of trees. Roughly 80% of forestland is classified as timberland, which can grow commercial-grade timber. Oregon land area: 63m. acres; forestland, 30.4m. acres; timberland, 24.7m. acres. Only California has more forestland. In 2011 forest/timberland ownership was as follows: federal and state government, 34.5m. acres; private ownership, 19.8m. acres; tribal ownership, 821,000 acres.

The Oregon Department of Forestry (ODF) estimates logging totalled 3.6bn. bd ft in 2011. According to the Oregon Employment Department's covered employment statistics, the forestry and logging subsector's 766 worksites employed 9,385 people statewide and added about $474m. in payroll to Oregon's economy in 2011. Trees vary from the coastal forest of hemlock and spruce to the state's primary species, Douglas fir, throughout much of western Oregon. In eastern Oregon, ponderosa pine, lodgepole pine and true firs are found. Here, along the Cascade summit and in the mountains of northeast Oregon, alpine species are found.

Fisheries

Commercial fish and shellfish landings in 2008 was 260.3m. lb and amounted to a value of $126.5m. The most important are: ground fish, crab, shrimp, tuna, whiting and salmon.

Oil and Gas

In 2014 marketed production of natural gas totalled 950m. cu. ft.

INDUSTRY

Forest products manufacturing is Oregon's leading industry, followed by high technology. In 2012 the state's 10,802 manufacturing establishments had 298,000 employees, earning $15,012m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $29,679m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2010, 1,600,000. Employees by branch, 2010 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 308; government, 300; education and health services, 228; professional and business services, 181; manufacturing, 164. The unemployment rate was 10.6% in Dec. 2010.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from Oregon totalled $17,671m., up from $14,907m. in 2009 although down from $19,352m. in 2008. The leading destinations for exports in 2010 were China (excluding Hong Kong) (value of $4,047m.), followed by Malaysia, Canada and Japan.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2012 there were 59,262 miles of road (46,390 miles rural). There were 3,441,114 registered vehicles in 2012.

Rail

In 2008 there were 2,388 total miles of active track and 22 federally franchised freight railroads. There is a light rail network in Portland.

Civil Aviation

There were six primary airports in 2011 (commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually) with a combined total of 7,772,049 enplanements, up from 7,533,325 in 2010. The busiest airport is Portland International, with 6,808,486 enplanements in 2011.

Shipping

Portland is a major seaport for large ocean-going vessels and is 101 miles inland from the mouth of the Columbia River. In 2009 Portland handled 21,001,697 tons of cargo; Coos Bay, the second busiest port, handled 1,328,340 tons of cargo in 2009. Portland was the 31st busiest US port overall in 2009 but the 13th busiest for exports.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There are 14 correctional institutions in Oregon. In Dec. 2014 there were 15,075 federal and state prisoners. The sterilization law, originally passed in 1917, was amended in 1967 and abolished in 1993. Some categories of euthanasia were legalized in Dec. 1994.

The death penalty is authorized but there have been no executions since 2001.

Education

School attendance is compulsory from seven to 18 years of age if the twelfth year of school has not been completed; those between the ages of 16 and 18 years, if legally employed, may attend part-time or evening schools. Others may be excused under certain circumstances. In fall 2011 the 1,355 public elementary and secondary schools had 561,698 students and 30,157 teachers; average salary for teachers (2010-11), $56,203. The State's share of the K-12 education budget was $5.75bn. for the two years ending 30 June 2011. For the same two years the Federal Government is estimated to have provided $1.5bn. for Oregon K-12 programmes.

Leading state-supported institutions of higher education (fall 2012) included:

	Students
Portland State University, Portland	28,731
Oregon State University, Corvallis	26,393
University of Oregon, Eugene	24,593
Southern Oregon University, Ashland	6,481
Western Oregon University, Monmouth	6,187
Eastern Oregon University, La Grande	4,208
Oregon Institute of Technology, Klamath Falls	4,001

In 2014 Oregon's higher education system consisted of seven public universities, 17 public community colleges, 67 private for-profit and independent colleges and universities, and hundreds of private career and trade schools. Total enrolment for the Oregon University System campuses in fall 2013 was 103,074.

2013 enrolment in Oregon's 19 private colleges and universities (members of the Oregon Alliance of Independent Colleges and Universities) totalled 35,000 students.

Health

In 2009 there were 58 community hospitals with 6,500 beds. A total of 324,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 10,753 active physicians (28 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 615,798. In fiscal year 2012 a total of 759,972 people in Oregon received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 798,156 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 62,051 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

RELIGION

The principal religious traditions in the state in 2010 were: Evangelical Protestants, with 447,009 members; Catholics, 399,440; Latter-day Saints (Mormons), 150,097; Mainline Protestants, 140,248; Buddhists, 14,785.

Pennsylvania

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Pennsylvania was occupied by four powerful tribes in the 17th century: Delaware, Susquehannock, Shawnee and Iroquois. The first white settlers were Swedish, arriving in 1643. The British became dominant in 1664 and in 1681 William Penn, an English Quaker, was given a charter to colonize the area as a sanctuary for his fellow Quakers. Penn's ideal was peaceful co-operation with the American Indians and religious toleration within the colony. Several religious groups were attracted to Pennsylvania, including Protestant sects from Germany and France. In the 18th century, co-operation with the American Indians failed as the settlers extended their territory.

The Declaration of Independence was signed in Philadelphia while Pennsylvania became one of the original 13 states of the Union. In 1812 the state capital was moved to its current location in Harrisburg, originally a trading post and ferry point on the Susquehanna River in the south-central part of the state. The Mason-Dixon line, the state's southern boundary, was the dividing line between free and slave states in the build-up to the Civil War. Gettysburg and other crucial battles were fought in the state. Industrial growth was rapid after the war. Pittsburgh, founded as a British fort in 1761 during war with the French, had become an iron-making town by 1800 and grew rapidly when canal and railway links opened in the 1830s. The American Federation of Labor was founded in Pittsburgh in 1881, by which time the city was of national importance producing coal, iron, steel and glass.

At the beginning of the 20th century, industry attracted immigration from Italy and eastern Europe. In farming areas the early sect communities survive, notably Amish and Mennonites. (The Pennsylvania 'Dutch' are of German extraction.)

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Pennsylvania is bounded north by New York, east by New Jersey, south by Delaware and Maryland, southwest by West Virginia, west by Ohio and northwest by Lake Erie. Rhode Island

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The earliest white settlement was founded by Roger Williams, an English Puritan who was expelled from Massachusetts because of his dissident religious views and his insistence on the land-rights of the American Indians. At Providence he bought land from the Narragansetts and founded a colony there in 1636. A charter was granted in 1663. Religious toleration attracted Jewish and nonconformist settlers; later there was French Canadian settlement.

Shipping and fishing developed strongly, especially at Newport and Providence. These two cities were twin capitals until 1900, when the capital was fixed at Providence.

Significant actions took place in Rhode Island during the War of Independence. In 1790 the state accepted the federal constitution and was admitted to the Union.

Early farming development was most successful in dairying and poultry. Early industrialization from the 1790s was mainly in textiles. Thriving on abundant water power, the industry began to decline after the First World War. British, Irish, Polish, Italian and Portuguese workers settled in the state, working in the mills or in the shipbuilding, shipping, fishing and naval ports. The growth of the cities led to the abolition of the property qualification for the franchise in 1888.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Rhode Island is bounded north and east by Massachusetts, south by the Atlantic and west by Connecticut. Land area, 1,034 sq. miles (2,678 sq. km); water area, 511 sq. miles (1,324 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,052,567, an increase of 0.4% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 1,056,298.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product in 2014 was $50,544m. (provisional), ranking Rhode Island 44th in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 1.2% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCESWater

The total area covered by water is 511 sq. miles.

Minerals

The small non-fuel mineral output—mostly stone, sand and gravel—was valued at more than $40m. in 2009.

Agriculture

In 2007 there were 1,219 farms with an area of 68,000 acres. The average size of a farm was 56 acres. In 2013 the average value of land and buildings per acre was $11,800—making it the second most valuable after New Jersey. Farm income 2009: from crops, $53m.; livestock and products, $9m. The net farm income in 2009 was $14m. Principal commodities are greenhouse and nursery products, dairy products and sweetcorn.

Forestry

Total forested area was 367,000 acres in 2013.

Fisheries

In 2009 the commercial catch was 84.5m. lb valued at $61.7m.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing is the chief source of income and the largest employer. Principal industries are jewellery and silverware, electrical machinery, electronics, plastics, metal products, instruments, chemicals and boat building. In 2012 the state's 3,018 manufacturing establishments had 79,000 employees, earning $4,153m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $4,632m.

Labour

In 2010 total non-agricultural employment was 458,800. Employees by branch, 2010 (in 1,000): education and health services, 102; trade, transportation and utilities, 73; government, 62; professional and business services, 53; leisure and hospitality, 50; manufacturing, 40. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 11.5%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADEImports and Exports

In 2010 exports from Rhode Island totalled $1,949m., up from $1,496m. in 2009 although down from $1,974m. in 2008. The leading destinations for exports in 2010 were Canada (value of $591m.), followed by Mexico, Germany and Turkey.

COMMUNICATIONSRoads

In 2012 there were 6,480 miles of roads (5,256 miles urban). There were approximately 821,000 registered motor vehicles.

Rail

Amtrak's New York–Boston route runs through the state, serving Providence.

Civil Aviation

In 2011 there were two primary airports (commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually). The main airport is Theodore Francis Green Memorial State at Warwick, near Providence, which had 1,920,699 enplanements in 2011.

Shipping

The leading port is Providence, which handled 6.9m. tons of cargo in 2009.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONSJustice

In Dec. 2014 the jail and prison population totalled 3,359. The last execution was in 1845. Capital punishment was abolished in 1852, but reinstated in 1872 for murder committed by a life prisoner. However, it was never carried out and the death penalty was completely abolished in 1984.

Education

In 2012–13 there were 311 public elementary and secondary schools with 142,481 pupils and 9,871 teachers. In fall 2011, 25,420 pupils were enrolled in 140 private schools that had 2,360 teachers. Total expenditure on public elementary and secondary education in 2010–11 was $2,316m.; spending per pupil was $14,948.

There were 13 degree-granting institutions (three public and ten private) in 2012–13. The public institutions are the University of Rhode Island, Kingston, with 16,571 students in fall 2014; the Community College of Rhode Island, Warwick, with 17,553; and Rhode Island College, Providence, with 8,641. Among the private institutions, Johnson & Wales University at Providence, founded in 1914, had 9,955 students in fall 2014; Brown University at Providence, founded in 1764, had 9,181; Roger Williams University at Bristol had 4,884; Providence College at Providence had 4,533; and Bryant University at Smithfield had 3,462.

Health

In 2009 there were 11 community hospitals with 2,500 beds. A total of 127,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 4,020 active physicians (38 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 181,026. In fiscal year 2012 a total of 226,119 people in Rhode Island received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 216,069 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 15,343 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

South CarolinaKEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of Yamasee Indians, the area attracted French and Spanish explorers in the 16th century. There were attempts at settlement on the coast, none of which lasted. Charles I of England made a land grant in 1629 but the first permanent white settlement began at Charles Town in 1670, moving to Charleston in 1680. This was a proprietorial colony including North Carolina until 1712; both passed to the Crown in 1729.

The coastlands developed as plantations worked by slave labour. In the hills there were small farming settlements and many trading posts, dealing with American Indian suppliers.

After active campaigns during the War of Independence, South Carolina became one of the original states of the Union in 1788.

In 1793 the cotton gin was invented, enabling the speedy mechanical separation of seed and fibre. This made it possible to grow huge areas of cotton and meet the rapidly-growing needs of new textile industries. Plantation farming spread widely and South Carolina became hostile to the anti-slavery campaign which was strong in northern states. The state first attempted to secede from the Union in 1847, but was not supported by other southern states until 1860, when secession led to civil war.

At that time the population was about 703,000, of whom 413,000 were black. During the reconstruction periods there was some political power for black citizens but control was back in white hands by 1876. The constitution was amended in 1895 to disenfranchise most black voters and they remained with hardly any voice in government until the Civil Rights movement of the 1960s. Columbia became the capital in 1786.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

South Carolina is bounded in the north by North Carolina, east and southeast by the Atlantic, southwest and west by Georgia. Land area, 30,061 sq. miles (77,857 sq. km); water area, 1,960 sq. miles (5,076 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 4,625,364, an increase of 15.3% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 4,896,146.

The population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	679,161	835,843	331	65	1,515,400	49.7
			All others
1980	2,150,507	948,623	22,703		3,121,833	100.3
1990	2,406,974	1,039,884	39,845		3,486,703	115.8
2000	2,695,560	1,185,216	131,236		4,012,012	133.2
2010	3,060,000	1,290,684	274,680		4,625,364	153.9

Of the total population in 2010, 2,375,263 were female and 3,544,890 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population of South Carolina was 235,682, up from 95,076 in 2000 (an increase of 147.9%, the largest percentage rise in any US state).

South Dakota

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was part of the hunting grounds of nomadic Dakota (Sioux) Indians. French explorers visited the site of Fort Pierre in 1742–43 and claimed the area for France. In 1763 the claim, together with French claims to all land west of the Mississippi, passed to Spain. Spain held the Dakotas until defeated by France in the Napoleonic Wars when France regained the area and sold it to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803.

Fur-traders were active but there was no settlement until Fort Randall was founded on the Missouri river in 1856. In 1861 North and South Dakota were united as the Dakota Territory. The Homestead Act of 1862 stimulated settlement, mainly in the southeast until there was a gold-rush in the Black Hills of the west in 1875–76. Colonization was by farming communities in the east with miners and ranchers in the west. Livestock farming predominated, attracting European settlers from Scandinavia, Germany and Russia.

In 1889 the North and South were separated and admitted to the Union as states. Pierre, founded as a railhead in 1880, was confirmed as the capital in 1904. It faces Fort Pierre, the former centre of the fur trade, across the Missouri river. During the 20th century there have been schemes to exploit the Missouri for power and irrigation.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

South Dakota is bounded in the north by North Dakota, east by Minnesota, southeast by the Big Sioux River (forming the boundary with Iowa), south by Nebraska (with the Missouri River forming part of the boundary) and west by Wyoming and Montana. Land area, 75,811 sq. miles (196,350 sq. km); water area, 1,305 sq. miles (3,379 sq. km). In 2010 American Indian lands covered 15,837 sq. miles (reservations plus off-reservation trust land).

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 814,180, an increase of 7.9% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 858,469.

Population in five federal censuses was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	563,771	817	19,137	163	583,888	7.6
			All others
1980	638,955	2,144		49,079	690,178	9.0

Tennessee

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bordered on the west by the Mississippi, Tennessee was part of an area inhabited by Cherokee. French, Spanish and British explorers navigated the Mississippi to trade with the Cherokee in the late 16th and 17th centuries. French claims were abandoned in 1763. Colonists from the British colonies of Virginia and Carolina then began to cross the Appalachians westwards, but there was no organized Territory until after the War of Independence. In 1784 there was a short-lived, independent state called Franklin. In 1790 the South West Territory (including Tennessee) was formed and Tennessee entered the Union as a state in 1796.

The state was active in the war against Britain in 1812. After the American victory, colonization increased and pressure for land mounted. The Cherokee were forcibly removed during the 1830s and taken to Oklahoma, a journey on which many died.

Tennessee was a slave state and seceded from the Union in 1861, although eastern Tennessee was against secession. There were important battles at Shiloh, Chattanooga, Stone River and Nashville. In 1866 Tennessee was readmitted to the Union.

Nashville, the capital since 1843, Memphis, Knoxville, and Chattanooga all developed as river towns, Memphis becoming an important cotton and timber port. Growth was greatly accelerated by the creation of the Tennessee Valley Authority in the 1930s, producing power for industry. With an expanding economy, by 1970, the southern pattern of emigration and population loss had been reversed.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Tennessee is bounded north by Kentucky and Virginia, east by North Carolina, south by Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi and west by the Mississippi River (forming the boundary with Arkansas and Missouri). Total area is 42,144 sq. miles (109,153 sq. km) of which 41,235 sq. miles (106,798 sq. km) are land. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 6,346,105, an increase of 11.5% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 6,600,299.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,711,432	473,088	216	53	2,184,789	52.4

CLIMATE

Memphis, Jan. 41°F (5°C), July 82°F (27.8°C). Annual rainfall 49" (1,221 mm). Nashville, Jan. 39°F (3.9°C), July 79°F (26.1°C). Annual rainfall 48" (1,196 mm). Tennessee belongs to the Appalachian Mountains climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The state has operated under three constitutions, the last of which was adopted in 1870 and has been since amended 35 times (first in 1953). Voters at an election may authorize the calling of a convention limited to altering or abolishing one or more specified sections of the constitution. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 33 members and a House of Representatives of 99 members, senators elected for four years and representatives for two years. Qualified as electors are all citizens (usual residential and age (18) qualifications).

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Tennessee sends nine members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Lamar Alexander (R. 2003–21) and Bob Corker (R. 2007–19).

The capital is Nashville. The state is divided into 95 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Tennessee with 59.5% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Bill Haslam (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $187,500).

Oil and Gas

In 2014 Tennessee produced 330,000 bbls of crude petroleum; marketed production of natural gas totalled 5.3bn. cu. ft.

INDUSTRY

The manufacturing industries include iron and steel working, but the most important products are chemicals, including synthetic fibres and allied products, electrical equipment and food. In 2012 the state's 13,122 manufacturing establishments had 657,000 employees, earning $31,150m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $48,282m.

Labour

In 2010 total non-agricultural employment was 2,613,000. Employees by branch, 2010 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 555; government, 432; education and health services, 373; professional and business services, 305; manufacturing, 298. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 9.4%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from Tennessee totalled $25,943m., up from $20,484m. in 2009. The leading destinations for exports in 2010 were Canada (value of $7,210m.), followed by Mexico, China (excluding Hong Kong) and Japan.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2012 there were 95,523 miles of roads (70,009 miles rural). There were 5,225,095 registered motor vehicles.

Rail

In 2009 there were 2,635 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). There were 25 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Tennessee totalled 14.4m. tons in 2009 and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 24.1m. tons. There is a tramway in Memphis.

Civil Aviation

There were five primary airports—commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually—in 2011 with a combined total of 10,383,482 enplanements, down from 10,663,323 in 2010. The main airports are Nashville International (which had 4,673,047 enplanements in 2011) and Memphis International (with 4,344,213 enplanements in 2011). Memphis International handled 3,916,410 tonnes of freight in 2011, ranking it second in the world behind Hong Kong (which surpassed Memphis as the world's busiest cargo airport in 2010).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The death penalty is authorized. There were two executions in 2009 but none since. In Dec. 2014 there were 28,769 prison inmates.

Education

Texas

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A number of American Indian tribes occupied the area before French and Spanish explorers arrived in the 16th century. In 1685 La Salle established a colony at Fort St Louis, but Texas was confirmed as Spanish in 1713. Spanish missions increased during the 18th century with San Antonio (1718) as their headquarters.

In 1820 a Virginian colonist, Moses Austin, obtained permission to begin a settlement in Texas. In 1821 the Spanish empire in the Americas came to an end and Texas, together with Coahuila, formed a state of the newly independent Mexico. The Mexicans agreed to the Austin venture and settlers of British and American descent came in.

Discontented with Mexican government, the settlers declared independence in 1836. Warfare, including the siege of the Alamo fort, ended with the foundation of the independent Republic of Texas which lasted until 1845. During this period the Texas Rangers were organized as a police force and border patrol. Texas was annexed to the Union in Dec. 1845, as the Federal government feared its vulnerability to Mexican occupation. This led to war between Mexico and the USA from 1845 to 1848. In 1861 Texas left the Union and joined the southern states in the Civil War, being readmitted in 1869. Ranching and cotton-growing were the main activities before the discovery of oil in 1901.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Texas is bounded north by Oklahoma, northeast by Arkansas, east by Louisiana, southeast by the Gulf of Mexico, south by Mexico and west by New Mexico. Land area, 261,232 sq. miles (676,587 sq. km); water area, 7,365 sq. miles (19,075 sq. km). Texas is the second largest US state behind Alaska. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 25,145,561, an increase of 20.6% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 27,469,114.

Population for five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asian	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	3,204,848	690,049	702	943	3,896,542	14.8

1990	12,774,762	2,021,632	65,877	2,124,239	16,986,510	64.9
2000	14,799,505	2,404,566	118,362	3,529,387	20,851,820	79.7
2010	17,701,552	2,979,598	170,972	4,293,439	25,145,561	96.3

Of the total population in 2010, 12,673,281 were female and 18,279,737 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 9,460,921, up from 6,669,666 in 2000 (an increase of 41.8%). The numerical increase was the second largest in the Hispanic population of any state in the USA, after California. Only New Mexico has a greater percentage of Hispanics in the state population.

The largest cities, with census population in 2010, are:

Houston	2,099,451	Brownsville	175,023
San Antonio	1,327,407	Pasadena	149,043
Dallas	1,197,816	Mesquite	139,824
Austin (capital)	790,390	McKinney	131,117
Fort Worth	741,206	McAllen	129,877
El Paso	649,121	Killeen	127,921

Irving	216,290	Midland	111,147
Amarillo	190,695	Wichita Falls	104,553
Grand Prairie	175,396

The population of the largest Metropolitan Statistical Areas in 2010 was: Dallas–Fort Worth–Arlington, 6,371,773; Houston–Sugarland–Baytown, 5,946,800; San Antonio–New Braunfels, 2,142,508; Austin–Round Rock–San Marcos, 1,716,289.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 386,118 (15.4 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 166,525 (6.6). Infant mortality, 2009, 6.0 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 179,800 (7.1 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 76,900 (3.3).

CLIMATE

Dallas, Jan. 45°F (7.2°C), July 84°F (28.9°C). Annual rainfall 38" (945 mm). El Paso, Jan. 44°F (6.7°C), July 81°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 9" (221 mm). Galveston, Jan. 54°F (12.2°C), July 84°F (28.9°C). Annual rainfall 46" (1,159 mm). Houston, Jan. 52°F (11.1°C), July 83°F (28.3°C). Annual rainfall 48" (1,200 mm). Texas suffered its worst one-year drought on record in 2011, when the average rainfall for the state was 14.9" (378 mm). Texas belongs to the Central Plains climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1876; it has been amended 467 times as of Aug. 2011. The state legislature consists of the Senate and House of Representatives. The Senate has 31 members elected for four-year terms. Half of the membership is elected every two years. The House has 150 members, elected for two-year terms during polling held in even-numbered years. The legislature meets in regular session for about five months every other year. The session begins in Jan. of odd-numbered years and lasts no more than 140 days (although special sessions can be called by the Governor). The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Texas sends 36 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by John Cornyn (R. 2002–21) and Ted Cruz (R. 2013–19).

The capital is Austin. The state has 254 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Texas with 57.2% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Greg Abbott (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $153,750).

Lieut.-Governor: Dan Patrick (R.), 2015–19 ($7,200 plus legislature session salary).

Secretary of State: Carlos Cascos (R.), 2015–19 ($132,924).

Government Website: <http://www.tx.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2014) was $45,669.

Budget

In 2011 total state revenue was $134,345m. Total expenditure was $125,940m. (education, $48,809m.; public welfare, $31,269m.; highways, $6,558m.; hospitals, $4,196m.; correction, $3,765m.). Outstanding debt in 2011, $38,530m.

Performance

In 2014 Gross Domestic Product by state was $1,467,342m. (provisional), ranking Texas second after California. If Texas were a country in its own right it would be the world's 12th largest economy. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 5.2% (provisional), second only to North Dakota.

Banking and Finance

In 2002 there were 751 financial institutions in Texas insured by the US Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, with assets worth $216,900m. They had 4,980 offices with total deposits of $256,600m.

As at Dec. 2003 there were 351 state-chartered banks operating in Texas, with total assets of $121,970m. The largest banks were International Bank of Commerce, Laredo (with assets of $5,294.2m.), Texas State Bank, McAllen ($4,215.6m.), Sterling Bank, Houston ($3,110.1m.), Prosperity Bank, El Campo ($2,395.0m.) and PlainsCapital Bank, Lubbock ($2,061.8m.).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In 2009 production was 396.6bn. kWh, of which 189.0bn. kWh was from natural gas.

Oil and Gas

Texas is the leading producer in the USA of both oil and natural gas. In 2014 it produced 36% of the country's oil and 29% of its natural gas. Output, 2014: crude petroleum, 1,156m. bbls; marketed production of natural gas, 7,953bn. cu. ft. Natural gasoline (a liquid form of natural gas), butane and propane gases are also produced.

Water

The total area covered by water is 7,365 sq. miles, of which 5,616 sq. miles are inland. Only Alaska has a larger area covered by inland water.

Minerals

Minerals include helium, crude gypsum, granite and sandstone, salt and cement. Production of coal (2009) was 35.1m. short tons. Total value of domestic non-fuel mineral products in 2009 was $2,650m.

Agriculture

Texas is one of the most important agricultural states. In 2007 it had 247,437 farms covering 130.40m. acres (up from 228,926 farms covering 129.88m. acres in 2002); average farm was of 527 acres. Both the number of farms and the total area covered are the highest in the USA. In 2007 land and buildings were valued at $1,270 per acre. Large-scale commercial farms, highly mechanized, dominate in Texas; farms of 1,000 acres or more in number far exceed that of any other state, but small-scale farming persists. Soil erosion is a serious problem in some parts.

Production: corn, barley, beans, cotton, hay, oats, peanuts, rye, sorghum, soybeans, sunflowers, wheat, oranges, grapefruit, peaches, sweet potatoes. Farm income, 2009: from crops $5,932m.; from livestock and products, $10,641m. (the most of any state). The net farm income in 2009 was $2,124m.

The state has an important livestock industry, leading in the number of all cattle (13.71m.) and sheep (945,000); it also had 0.44m. dairy cows, 1.16m. hogs and pigs, and 19.12m. laying hens in 2007. Wool production in 2007 totalled 4.60m. lb, the most of any state.

Forestry

There were 61,797,000 acres of forested land in 2011, with 730,000 acres of national forest.

INDUSTRY

In 2012 the state's 41,802 manufacturing establishments had 1,609,000 employees, earning $88,427m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $174,881m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2010, 10,342,000. Employees by branch, 2010 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 2,050; government, 1,860; education and health services, 1,388; professional and business services, 1,273; leisure and hospitality, 1,006. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 8.3%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from Texas totalled $207.0bn., the most of any state and representing 16% of all US exports. The state's major export markets in 2010 were Mexico (with a value of $72.6m.), Canada ($18.8m.), China ($10.3m.) and Brazil ($7.2m.).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2012 there were 313,210 miles of road comprising 99,276 miles of urban road and 213,934 miles of rural road. There were 19,789,723 registered motor vehicles and 3,398 traffic accident fatalities.

Rail

In 2009 there were 10,405 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights), including 8,375 miles of Class I railroads. Texas has more rail miles than any other state. There were 45 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Texas in 2009 totalled 82.4m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 186.6m. tons (the most of any state). There are light rail systems in Austin, Dallas and Houston.

Civil Aviation

There were 24 primary airports—commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually—in Texas in 2011 with a combined total of 68,524,498 enplanements, up from 67,664,379 in 2010. Dallas/Fort Worth International had 27,518,358 enplanements in 2011 (ranking it fourth in the USA) and George Bush Intercontinental/Houston had 19,306,660. A further five primary airports had more than 1m. passenger enplanements in 2011: William P. Hobby (Houston's second airport), Austin-Bergstrom International, San Antonio International, Dallas Love Field and El Paso International.

Shipping

The port of Houston, connected by the Houston Ship Channel (50 miles long) with the Gulf of Mexico, is the second busiest in the country after South Louisiana and the busiest for foreign trade cargo. In 2009 it handled 211.3m. tons of cargo (148.0m. tons of foreign trade cargo and 63.4m. tons of domestic cargo). Other major ports are Corpus Christi, Beaumont, Texas City and Port Arthur, which ranked as the USA's 5th, 7th, 11th and 19th busiest ports respectively in 2009. There were 1,021 miles of inland waterways (271 miles of deep-draft channels and 750 miles of shallow-draft channels) in 2007.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

In Dec. 2014 there were 166,043 state and federal prisoners, up from 157,617 in Dec. 2004. Between 1977 and 2015 Texas was responsible for 531 of the USA's 1,422 executions (more than four times as many as any other state), although it was not until 1982 that Texas reintroduced the death penalty. In 2015, 13 people were executed (ten in 2014). There were 247 death row inmates as at 7 April 2016. In 2000, 40 people had been executed, the highest number in a year in any state since the authorities began keeping records in 1930.

Education

School attendance is compulsory from six to 18 years of age.

In the 2012–13 school year there were 9,280 public elementary and secondary schools with 5,077,659 enrolled pupils; there were 327,356 teachers. Total expenditure on public schools in 2010–11 was $52,712m.

In 2012–13 there were 108 public degree-granting higher education institutions; enrolled students in fall 2012 totalled 1,347,860. The public University of Texas System, one of the largest in the USA, comprises eight academic and six health institutions and had over 225,000 students in fall 2014; the Texas A&M University System is made up of 11 universities, seven state agencies and a health science centre and had over 140,000 students in fall 2014; and the Texas State University System has eight component institutions and had over 80,000 students in fall 2014.

Other public universities and student enrolment, fall 2014:

Institutions	Students
University of Houston System	68,425
Texas Tech University System	46,583
University of North Texas System	41,304
Texas Woman's University, Denton	15,071
Stephen F. Austin State University, Nacogdoches	12,801
Texas Southern University, Houston	9,233
Midwestern State University, Wichita Falls	5,874

There were 163 independent colleges and universities in 2012–13. Largest student enrolments, fall 2014:

Institutions	Students
Baylor University, Waco	16,263
Southern Methodist University, Dallas	11,272
Texas Christian University, Fort Worth	10,033
University of the Incarnate World, San Antonio	8,745
Rice University, Houston	6,621
Wayland Baptist University, Plainview	5,536
Dallas Baptist University, Dallas	5,445
University of Phoenix, Houston	5,254

Health

In 2009 there were 428 community hospitals with 62,100 beds. A total of 2,621,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 53,546 active physicians (22 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 2,976,720. In fiscal year 2011 a total of 4,996,318 people in Texas received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 3,842,249 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 99,080 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

RELIGION

In 2010 the leading religious traditions were: Evangelical Protestants, with 6,456,168 members; Catholics, 4,673,500; Mainline Protestants, 1,553,959; Muslims, 422,000 (estimate); Black Protestants, 345,998.

CULTURE

Tourism

In 2011 overseas visitors to Texas—excluding those from Canada and Mexico—numbered 1,283,000, up from 1,028,000 in 2010 and 975,000 in 2006.

Utah

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Spanish Franciscan missionaries explored the area in 1776, finding Shoshoni Indians. Spain laid claim to Utah and designated it part of Spanish Mexico. As such it passed into the hands of the Mexican Republic when Mexico rebelled against Spain and gained independence in 1821.

In 1848, at the conclusion of war between the USA and Mexico, the USA received Utah along with other southwestern territory. Settlers had already arrived in 1847 when the Mormons (the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints) arrived, having been driven on by hostility in Ohio, Missouri and Illinois. Led by Brigham Young, they entered the Great Salt Valley and colonized it. In 1849 they applied for statehood but were refused. In 1850 Utah and Nevada were joined as one Territory. The Mormon community continued to ask for statehood but this was only granted in 1896, after they had renounced polygamy and disbanded their People's Party.

Mining, especially of copper, and livestock farming were the basis of the economy. Settlement had to adapt to desert conditions and the main centres of population were in the narrow belt between the Wasatch Mountains and the Great Salt Lake. Salt Lake City, the capital, was founded in 1847 and laid out according to Joseph Smith's plan for the city of Zion. It was the centre of the Mormons' provisional 'State of Deseret' and Territorial capital from 1856 until 1896, except briefly in 1858 when federal forces occupied it during conflict between territorial and Union governments.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Utah is bounded north by Idaho and Wyoming, east by Colorado, south by Arizona and west by Nevada. Land area, 82,170 sq. miles (212,818 sq. km); water area, 2,727 sq. miles (7,064 sq. km). In 2010 American Indian lands covered 8,954 sq. miles (reservations plus off-reservation trust land). The federal government owned 35,033,603 acres in 2010, equivalent to 66.5% of the state area (the second highest percentage after Nevada).

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,763,885, an increase of 23.8% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 2,995,919.

Population at five federal censuses was:

	White	Black	American Indian/Alaska Native	Asian	Total (including others)	Per sq. mile

Vermont

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The original American Indian hunting grounds of the Green Mountains and lakes was explored by the Frenchman, Samuel de Champlain, in 1609. He reached Lake Champlain on the northwest border. The first attempt at permanent settlement was also French, on Isle la Motte in 1666. In 1763 the British gained the area by the Treaty of Paris. The Treaty, which also brought peace with the American Indian allies of the French, opened the way for settlement, but in a mountain area transport was slow and difficult. Montpelier, the state capital from 1805, was chartered as a township site in 1781 to command the main pass through the Green Mountains.

In the War of Independence Vermont declared itself an independent state to avoid being taken over by New Hampshire and New York. In 1791 it became the 14th state of the Union.

Most early settlers were New Englanders of British and Protestant descent. After 1812 a granite-quarrying industry grew around the town of Barre, attracting immigrant workers from Italy and Scandinavia. French Canadians settled in Winooski. Textile and engineering industries developed in the 19th century attracted more European workers.

Vermont saw the only Civil War action north of Pennsylvania when a Confederate raiding party attacked from Canada in 1864.

During the 20th century the textile and engineering industries have declined but paper and lumber industries flourish. Settlement is still mainly rural or in small towns.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Vermont is bounded in the north by Canada, east by New Hampshire, south by Massachusetts and west by New York. Total area is 9,616 sq. miles (24,906 sq. km) of which 9,217 sq. miles (23,871 sq. km) are land. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 625,741, an increase of 2.8% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 626,042.

Population at five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/ Alaska Native	Asian	Total (including others)	Per sq. mile
1910	354,298	1,621	26	11	355,956	39.0
1980	506,736	1,135	984	1,355	511,456	55.1
1990	555,088	1,951	1,696	3,215 ¹	562,758	60.8
2000	589,208	3,063	2,420	5,358 ¹	608,827	65.8
2010	596,292	6,277	2,207	8,107 ¹	625,741	67.9

¹Includes Native Hawaiian and other Pacific Islander.

Of the total population in 2010, 317,535 were female and 496,508 were 18 years old or older. In 2000, 414,480 (66.2%) were rural, the highest rural population percentage of any state in the USA. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 9,208, the lowest total of any state. However, this figure represents a rise of 67.3% compared to the 2000 census figure of 5,504. The largest cities are Burlington, with a population (2010) of 42,417; South Burlington, 17,904; Rutland City, 16,495. The capital, Montpelier, had a population in 2010 of 7,855.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 6,223 (9.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 5,380 (8.6). Infant deaths, 2009, 6.2 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 4,700 (8.7 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 2,100 (3.5). Same-sex marriage became legal in Sept. 2009.

CLIMATE

Burlington, Jan. 17°F (−8.3°C), July 70°F (21.1°C). Annual rainfall 33" (820 mm). Vermont belongs to the New England climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution was adopted in 1793 and has since been amended. Amendments are proposed by two-thirds vote of the Senate every four years, and must be accepted by two sessions of the legislature; they are then submitted to popular vote. The state Legislature, consisting of a Senate of 30 members and a House of Representatives of 150 members (both elected for two years), meets in Jan. every year. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for two years. Electors are all citizens who possess certain residential qualifications and have taken the freeman's oath set forth in the constitution.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Vermont sends one member to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Patrick Leahy (Democrat, 1975–2017—making him currently the longest-serving senator) and Bernard (Bernie) Sanders (Independent Democrat, 2007–19).

The capital is Montpelier. There are 14 counties and 251 cities, towns and other administrative divisions.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took Vermont with 67.0% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

Virginia

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1607 a British colony was founded at Jamestown, on a peninsula in the James River, to grow tobacco. The area was marshy and unhealthy but the colony survived and in 1619 introduced a form of representative government. The tobacco plantations expanded and African slaves were imported. Jamestown was later abandoned but tobacco-growing continued and spread through the eastern part of the territory.

In 1624 control of the colony passed from the Virginia Company of London to the Crown. Growth was rapid during the 17th and 18th centuries. The movement for American independence was strong in Virginia; George Washington and Thomas Jefferson were both Virginians, and crucial battles of the War of Independence were fought there.

When the Union was formed, Virginia became one of the original states, but with reservations because of its attachment to slave-owning. In 1831 there was a slave rebellion. The tobacco plantations began to decline, and plantation owners turned to the breeding of slaves. While the eastern plantation lands seceded from the Union in 1861, the small farmers and miners of the western hills refused to secede and remained in the Union as West Virginia.

Richmond, the capital, became the capital of the Confederacy. Much of the Civil War took place in Virginia, with considerable damage to the economy. After the war the position of the black population was little improved. Blacks remained without political or civil rights until the 1960s.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Virginia is bounded northwest by West Virginia, northeast by Maryland and the District of Columbia, east by the Atlantic, south by North Carolina and Tennessee and west by Kentucky. Land area, 39,490 sq. miles (102,279 sq. km); water area, 3,285 sq. miles (8,508 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 8,001,024, an increase of 13.0% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 8,382,993.

Population for five federal census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/ Alaska Native	Asian/Other	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,389,809	671,096	539	168	2,061,612	51.2

Washington State

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The strongest American Indian tribes in the 18th century were Chinook, Nez Percé, Salish and Yakima. The area was designated by European colonizers as part of the Oregon Country. Between 1775 and 1800 it was claimed by Spain, Britain and the USA; the dispute between the two latter nations was not settled until 1846.

The first small white settlements were American Indian missions and fur-trading posts. In the 1840s American settlers began to push westwards along the Oregon Trail, making a settlement with Britain a matter of urgency. When this was achieved the whole area was organized as the Oregon Territory in 1848. Washington was made a separate Territory in 1853.

Apart from trapping and fishing, the chief industry was supplying timber for the new settlements of California. After 1870 the westward extension of railways encouraged settlement. Statehood was granted in 1889. Settlers were mostly Americans from neighbouring states to the east and Canadians. Scandinavian immigrants followed. Seattle, laid out in 1853 as a saw-milling town, was named after the American Indian chief who had ceded the land and befriended the settlers. It grew as a port during the Alaskan and Yukon gold-rushes of the 1890s. The economy thrived on exploiting the Columbia River for hydro-electric power. Washington and Colorado became the first US states to legalize the recreational possession and sale of marijuana following voter referendums in Nov. 2012.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Washington is bounded north by Canada, east by Idaho, south by Oregon with the Columbia River forming most of the boundary, and west by the Pacific. Land area, 66,456 sq. miles (172,119 sq. km); water area, 4,842 sq. miles (12,542 sq. km). Lands owned by the federal government, 2003, were 13,246,559 acres or 31.0% of the total area. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 6,724,540, an increase of 14.1% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 7,170,351.

Population in five federal census years was:

	American Indian/Alaska			Asian/ Other	Total	Per sq. mile
	White	Black	Native
1910	1,109,111	6,058	10,997	15,824	1,141,990	17.1
1980	3,779,170	105,574	60,804	186,608	4,132,156	62.1
1990	4,308,937	149,801	81,483	326,471	4,866,692	73.1
2000	4,821,823	190,267	93,301	788,730	5,894,121	88.6
2010	5,196,362	240,042	103,869	1,184,267	6,724,540	101.2

Of the total population in 2010, 3,374,833 were female and 5,143,186 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 755,790, up from 441,509 in 2000 (a rise of 71.2%).

In 2010 American Indian lands covered 5,063 sq. miles (reservations plus off-reservation trust land).

Leading cities are Seattle, with a population in 2010 of 608,660; Spokane, 208,916; Tacoma, 198,397; Vancouver, 161,791; Bellevue, 122,363. Others: Everett, 103,019; Kent, 92,411; Yakima, 91,067; Renton, 90,927; Spokane Valley, 89,755; Federal Way, 89,306; Bellingham, 80,885; Kennewick, 73,917; Auburn, 70,180; Marysville, 60,020; Pasco, 59,781; Lakewood, 58,163; Redmond, 54,144; Shoreline, 53,007. The Seattle-Tacoma-Bremerton metropolitan area had a 2010 census population of 3,439,809. The capital, Olympia, had a population in 2010 of 46,478.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 86,539 (12.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 48,145 (7.2). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 4.9 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 40,400 (6.0 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 26,300 (3.9). Same-sex marriage became legal in Dec. 2012 after it had been approved in a referendum a month earlier on the same day as the presidential election.

CLIMATE

Seattle, Jan. 40°F (4.4°C), July 63°F (17.2°C). Annual rainfall 34" (848 mm). Spokane, Jan. 27°F (-2.8°C), July 70°F (21.1°C). Annual rainfall 14" (350 mm). Washington belongs to the Pacific Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution, adopted in 1889, has had 104 amendments as of Aug. 2011. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 49 members elected for four years, half their number retiring every two years, and a House of Representatives of 98 members, elected for two years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Washington sends ten members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Patty Murray (D. 1993-2017) and Maria Cantwell (D. 2001-19).

The capital is Olympia. The state contains 39 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took Washington State with 55.8% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Jay Inslee (D.), 2013-17 (salary: $171,898).

West Virginia

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1861 the slave-owning state of Virginia seceded from the Union. The 40 western counties, mostly hilly country and settled by miners and small farmers who were not slave-owners, were declared a new state. On 20 June 1863 West Virginia became the 35th state of the Union.

The capital, Charleston, was an 18th-century fortified post on the early westward migration routes across the Appalachians. In 1795 local brine wells were tapped and the city grew as a salt town. Coal, oil, natural gas and a variety of salt brines were all found in due course. Huntington, the next largest town, served the same industrial area as a railway terminus and port on the Ohio river. Wheeling, the original state capital, located on the major transportation routes of the Ohio River, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and the National Road, was a well-established, cosmopolitan city when it hosted the statehood meetings in 1861.

Three-quarters of the state is forest. Settlement has been concentrated in the mineral-bearing Kanawha valley, along the Ohio river and in the industrial Monongahela valley of the north. More than half of the population is still classified as rural. However, the majority commute to industrial employment.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

West Virginia is bounded in the north by Pennsylvania and Maryland, east and south by Virginia, southwest by the Big Sandy River (forming the boundary with Kentucky) and west by the Ohio River (forming the boundary with Ohio). Total area is 24,230 sq. miles (62,756 sq. km) of which 24,038 sq. miles (62,259 sq. km) are land. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,852,994, an increase of 2.5% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 1,884,128.

Population in five federal census years was:

	American Indian/Alaska				Total	Per sq. mile
	White	Black	Native	Asian/Other
1910	1,156,817	64,173	36	93	1,221,119	50.8
1980	1,874,751	65,051	1,610	5,194	1,949,644	80.3
1990	1,725,523	56,295	2,458	7,459	1,793,477	74.0
2000	1,718,777	57,232	3,606	9,834	1,808,344	75.1

Of the total population in 2010, 939,408 were female and 1,465,576 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 22,268, up from 12,279 in 2000 (an increase of 81.4%). Even with this increase West Virginia has the smallest Hispanic percentage in its population (at 1.2%) of any state.

The 2010 census population of the principal cities was: Charleston (the capital), 51,400; Huntington, 49,130. Others: Parkersburg, 31,492; Morgantown, 29,660; Wheeling, 28,486; Weirton, 19,746; Fairmont, 18,704; Beckley, 17,614; Martinsburg, 17,227; Clarksburg, 16,578.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 20,470 (11.0 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 21,274 (11.5—the highest rate in any US state). West Virginia was the only state in the USA where deaths exceeded births in 2010. Infant mortality, 2009, 7.8 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 12,400 (6.9 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 9,200 (5.2). Same-sex marriage became legal in Oct. 2014.

CLIMATE

Charleston, Jan. 34°F (1.1°C), July 76°F (24.4°C). Annual rainfall 40" (1,010 mm). West Virginia belongs to the Appalachian Mountains climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution was adopted in 1872; it has had 17 amendments. The Legislature consists of the Senate of 34 members elected for a term of four years, one-half being elected biennially, and the House of Delegates of 100 members, elected biennially. The Governor is elected for four years and may serve one successive term.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, West Virginia sends three members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Joe Manchin III (D. 2011–19) and Shelley Moore Capito (R. 2015–21).

The state capital is Charleston. There are 55 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took West Virginia with 62.3% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Earl Ray Tomblin (D.), 2013–17 (salary: $150,000).

Senate President: William P. Cole III (R.), 2015–17 (base salary: $20,000).

Secretary of State: Natalie Tennant (D.), 2013–17 ($95,000).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The state court system consists of a Supreme Court, 31 circuit courts, and magistrate courts in each county. The Supreme Court of Appeals, exercising original and appellate jurisdiction, has five members elected by the people for 12-year terms. Each circuit court has from one to seven judges (as determined by the Legislature on the basis of population and case-load) chosen by the voters within each circuit for eight-year terms.

In Dec. 2014, 6,896 prisoners were under the jurisdiction of state and federal correctional authorities. Capital punishment was abolished in 1965. The last execution was in 1959.

Education

School attendance is compulsory for all between the ages of six and 16. In 2012–13, 767 public elementary and secondary schools had 283,044 pupils and 20,101 teachers. Total expenditure on public elementary and secondary education in 2010–11 was $3,516m.; average teacher salary was $46,405 in 2012–13. Spending per pupil in 2010–11 was $11,978.

In 2012–13 there were 23 public and 20 private degree-granting institutions including:

Health

In 2009 there were 56 community hospitals with 7,400 beds. A total of 280,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2009 there were 4,295 active physicians (24 per 10,000 population).

Welfare

The Department of Health Human Resources, originating in the 1930s as the Department of Public Assistance, is both state and federally financed. Medicare enrolment in July 2010 totalled 377,811. In fiscal year 2012 a total of 404,533 people in West Virginia received Medicaid. In Dec. 2014 there were 464,823 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 20,112 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2012.

RELIGION

The principal religious traditions in the state in 2010 were: Mainline Protestants, with 274,766 members; Evangelical Protestants, 249,756; Catholics, 95,849; Latter-day Saints (Mormons), 17,555; Black Protestants, 11,505.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The French were the first European explorers of the territory; Jean Nicolet landed at Green Bay in 1634, a mission was founded in 1671 and a permanent settlement at Green Bay followed. In 1763 French claims were surrendered to Britain. In 1783 Britain ceded the area to the USA which designated the Northwest Territory, of which Wisconsin was part. In 1836 a separate Territory of Wisconsin included the present Iowa, Minnesota and parts of the Dakotas.

In 1836 James Duane Doty founded Madison and, even before it was inhabited, successfully pressed its claim to be the capital of the Territory. In 1848 Wisconsin became a state, with its present boundaries.

The city of Milwaukee was founded on Lake Michigan when American Indian tribes gave up their claims to the land in 1831–33. It grew rapidly as a port and industrial town, attracting German settlers in the 1840s and Poles and Italians 50 years later. The Lake Michigan shore was developed as an industrial area; the rest of the south proved suitable for dairy farming; the north, mainly forests and lakes, has remained sparsely settled except for tourist bases.

Since the Second World War there has been black immigration from the southern states to the industrial lake-shore cities.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Wisconsin is bounded north by Lake Superior and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, east by Lake Michigan, south by Illinois, and west by Iowa and Minnesota, with the Mississippi River forming most of the boundary. Land area, 54,158 sq. miles (140,268 sq. km); water area, 11,339 sq. miles (29,367 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 5,686,986, an increase of 6.0% since 2000. July 2015 estimate, 5,771,337.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	All others	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	2,320,555	2,900	10,405	2,333,860	42.2
1980	4,443,035	182,592	80,015	4,705,642	86.4

Population of largest metropolitan areas, 2010 census: Milwaukee–Waukesha–West Allis, 1,555,908; Madison, 568,593; Green Bay, 306,241.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 68,487 (12.0 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 47,308 (8.3). Infant deaths, 2009, 6.1 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 30,300 (5.3 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 17,300 (3.0). Same-sex marriage became legal in Oct. 2014.

CLIMATE

Milwaukee, Jan. 19°F (-7.2°C), July 70°F (21.1°C). Annual rainfall 29" (727 mm). Wisconsin belongs to the Great Lakes climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution, which dates from 1848, has 141 amendments. The legislative power is vested in a Senate of 33 members elected for four years, one-half elected alternately, and an Assembly of 99 members all elected simultaneously for two years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Wisconsin sends eight members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Ronald Johnson (R. 2011–17) and Tammy Baldwin (D. 2013–19).

The capital is Madison. The state has 72 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Barack Obama took Wisconsin with 52.8% of the vote, having also won it in 2008.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Scott Walker (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $147,328).

Lieut.-Governor: Rebecca Kleefisch (R.), 2015–19 ($77,795).

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2014 was $268,677m. (provisional), ranking Wisconsin 20th in the United States. In 2014 state real GDP growth was 1.0% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In 2009 production was 59,959m. kWh, of which 37,280m. kWh was from coal.

Water

The total area covered by water is 11,339 sq. miles.

Minerals

Construction sand and gravel, crushed stone, industrial or specialty sand and lime are the chief mineral products. Mineral production in 2009 was valued at $546m.

Agriculture

In 2012 there were 76,800 farms with a total of 15m. acres and an average size of 195 acres. In 2013 the average value of farm real estate, including land and buildings, was $4,400 per acre. Farm income, 2009: from crops $2,831m.; from livestock and products, $4,779m. The net farm income in 2009 was $849m.

Dairy farming is important, with 1.27m. dairy cows in 2012. Production of cheese was 2.7bn. lb in 2012 and accounted for about a quarter of the USA's total. Other important commodities are corn, cattle, soybeans, potatoes and cranberries. Wisconsin is the leading cranberry producer, with 4.83m. bbls in 2012 accounting for 60% of the USA's total.

Forestry

Wisconsin had (2013) 17,101,000 acres of forested land, with 1,434,000 acres of national forest.

INDUSTRY

Wisconsin has much heavy industry, particularly in the Milwaukee area. Three-fifths of manufacturing employees work on durable goods. Industrial machinery is the major industrial group (17% of all manufacturing employment) followed by fabricated metals, food and kindred products, printing and publishing, paper and allied products, electrical equipment and transportation equipment. In 2012 the state's 20,532 manufacturing establishments had 984,000 employees, earning $48,309m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2009 was $58,900m.

Labour

Wyoming

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The territory was inhabited by Plains Indians (Arapahoes, Sioux and Cheyenne) in the early 19th century. There was some trading with white Americans, but very little white settlement. In the 1840s the great western migration routes, the Oregon and the Overland Trails, ran through the territory with Wyoming offering mountain passes accessible to wagons. Once migration became a steady flow forts were built to protect the route from American Indian attack.

In 1867 coal was discovered. In 1868 Wyoming was organized as a separate Territory and in 1869 the Sioux and Arapaho were confined to reservations. At the same time the route of the Union Pacific Railway brought railway towns to southern Wyoming. Settlement of the north was delayed until after the final defeat of hostile American Indians in 1876.

The economy was based on ranching. Cheyenne, made Territorial capital in 1869, also functioned as a railway town moving cattle. Casper, on the site of a fort on the Pony Express route, was also a railway town on the Chicago and North Western. Laramie started as a Union Pacific construction workers' shanty town in 1868. In 1890 oil was discovered at Casper, and Wyoming became a state the same year. Subsequently, mineral extraction became the leading industry, as natural gas, uranium, bentonite and trona were exploited as well as oil and coal.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Wyoming is bounded north by Montana, east by South Dakota and Nebraska, south by Colorado, southwest by Utah and west by Idaho. Total area is 97,813 sq. miles (253,335 sq. km) of which 97,093 sq. miles (251,470 sq. km) are land. The Yellowstone National Park occupies about 2.22m. acres; the Grand Teton National Park has 307,000 acres. The federal government in 2003 owned 49,268 sq. miles (50.6% of the total area of the state). The Federal Bureau of Land Management administers 17.4m. acres.

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 563,626, an increase of 14.1% since 2000. Wyoming has the smallest population of any of the states of the USA, but in the year 1 July 2008–30 June 2009 the state's population showed the largest percentage growth of any in the USA. July 2015 estimate, 586,107.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	140,318	2,235	1,486	1,926	145,965	1.5
			All others
1980	446,488	3,364		19,705	469,557	4.8
			American Indian/ Alaska Native	Asian/ Hawaiian/ Pacific Islander	Other	Total
1990	427,061	3,606	9,479	2,806	10,636	453,588	4.7
2000	454,670	3,722	11,133	3,073	21,184	493,782	5.1
2010	511,279	4,748	13,336	4,853	29,410	563,626	5.8

Of the total population in 2010, 287,437 were male and 428,224 were 18 years old or older. At the 2010 census the Hispanic population of Wyoming was 50,231, up from 31,669 in 2000 (an increase of 58.6%).

The largest towns (with 2010 census population) are Cheyenne (the capital), 59,466; Casper, 55,316; Laramie, 30,816; Gillette, 29,087; Rock Springs, 23,036; Sheridan, 17,444.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 7,556 (13.4 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 4,438 (7.9). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 6.0 per 1,000 live births. 2009 (provisional): marriages, 4,700 (8.2 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 2,800 (5.2). The abortion rate, at less than 1 for every 1,000 women aged 15 to 44 in 2008, is the lowest of any US state. Same-sex marriage became legal in Oct. 2014.

CLIMATE

Cheyenne, Jan. 25°F (−3.9°C), July 66°F (18.9°C). Annual rainfall 15" (376 mm). Yellowstone Park, Jan. 18°F (−7.8°C), July 61°F (16.1°C). Annual rainfall 18" (444 mm). Wyoming belongs to the Mountain States climate region (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution, drafted in 1890, has since had 76 amendments. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 30 members elected for staggered four-year terms, and a House of Representatives of 60 members elected for two years. It sits annually in Jan. or Feb. The Governor is elected for four years.

For the 114th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2015, Wyoming sends one member to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Michael Enzi (R. 1997–2021) and John Barrasso (R. 2007–19).

The capital is Cheyenne. The state contains 23 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2012 presidential election Mitt Romney took Wyoming with 69.3% of the vote (John McCain won it in 2008).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Matt Mead (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $105,000).

Secretary of State: Ed Murray (R.), 2015–19 ($92,000).

Oil and Gas

In 2014 Wyoming produced 76.1m. bbls of crude petroleum; marketed production of natural gas totalled 1,791bn. cu. ft (fifth in the USA behind Texas, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma and Louisiana).

Water

The total area covered by water is 720 sq. miles.

Minerals

In 2010 the output of coal was 442.1m. short tons; trona, 16.5m. short tons; uranium (2010 estimate), 1.8m. lb. Wyoming is the USA's leading coal and uranium producer, accounting for 40% of the country's coal output in 2010. It also has 40% of the country's recoverable coal reserves. Wyoming's recoverable coal reserves total more than 42bn. tons. Total value of non-fuel mineral production in 2010 was $1,860m.

Agriculture

Wyoming is semi-arid, and agriculture is carried on by irrigation and dry farming. In 2007 there were 11,069 farms and ranches; total farm area was 34.4m. acres; average size of farm in 2007 was 2,726 acres (the largest of any state). In 2007 the average value of farmland was $513 per acre.

Total value, 2008, of crops produced, $226m.; of livestock and products, $748m. The net farm income in 2008 was $92m. Principal commodities are cattle, hogs, hay, sheep, sugar beets, barley, wheat and corn. Animals on farms in 2007 included 1.31m. cattle, 413,000 sheep and lambs, and 107,000 hogs and pigs.

Forestry

The state had a forested area of 10,401,000 acres in 2012, of which 5,849,000 acres were national forest.

INDUSTRY

OUTLYING TERRITORIES

The outlying territories of the USA comprise the two Commonwealths of the Northern Mariana Islands and Puerto Rico, the incorporated territory of Palmyra Atoll, a number of unincorporated territories (including American Samoa, Guam and the US Virgin Islands) in the Pacific Ocean and one unincorporated territory in the Caribbean Sea.

Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1889 Spain ceded Guam (largest and southernmost of the Marianas Islands) to the USA and sold the rest to Germany. Occupied by Japan in 1914, the islands were administered by Japan under a League of Nations mandate until occupied by US forces in Aug. 1944. In 1947 they became part of the US-administered Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. On 17 June 1975 the electorate voted for a Commonwealth in association with the USA; this was approved by the US government in April 1976 and came into force on 1 Jan. 1978. In Nov. 1986 the islanders were granted US citizenship. The UN terminated the Trusteeship status on 22 Dec. 1990.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Northern Marianas form a single chain of 16 mountainous islands extending north of Guam for about 560 km, with a total area of 5,117 sq. km (1,976 sq. miles) of which 472 sq. km (182 sq. miles) are dry land, and with a population (2010 census) of 53,883.

The areas and populations of the islands are as follows:

Island(s)	Sq. km	2000 Census	2010 Census
Northern Group ¹	160	6	0
Saipan	119	62,392	48,220
Tinian (with Aguijan)	108 ²	3,540	3,136
Rota	85	3,283	2,527

¹Pagan, Agrihan, Alamagan and nine uninhabited islands.
²Including uninhabited Aguijan.

In 2003, 23% spoke Chinese, 22% Chamorro and 24% Filipino languages. English remains an official language along with Carolinian and Chamorro. The largest town is Chalan Kanoa on Saipan.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 1,072 (22.0 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2009, 203 (3.7). Infant mortality, 2002, 6 per 1,000 live births.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was approved by a referendum on 6 March 1977 and came into force on 9 Jan. 1978. The legislature comprises a nine-member Senate, with three Senators elected from each of the main three islands for a term of four years, and a 20-member House of Representatives, elected for a term of two years.

The Commonwealth is administered by a Governor and Lieut.-Governor. The term of the Governor is four years.

As from Jan. 2009 the Commonwealth sends one delegate to the US House of Representatives. The Congressman may participate but not vote on the House floor.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 4 Nov. 2014 independents won 13 seats in the House of Representatives and the Republican Party 7.

In the gubernatorial elections, also on 4 Nov. 2014, incumbent Eloy S. Inos received 46.0% of votes cast, Heinz S. Hofschneider 32.6%, Juan N. Babauta 17.5% and Edward M. Deleon Guerrero 3.9%. In a run-off on 21 Nov. between Inos and Hofschneider, Inos won with 57.0% of the vote to Hofschneider's 43.0%.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Water

The total area covered by water is 1,793 sq. miles, of which 6 sq. miles are inland.

Fisheries

In 2010 total catch was 536,000 lb (243 tonnes), entirely from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Labour

In 2014 there were 25,658 persons in employment including 3,848 in management, 3,189 in office and administrative support and 2,810 in sales and related activities.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2012 imports totalled $496m. and exports $268m. Major imports are mineral fuels, fabric, and articles of leather and travel goods. Major exports are apparel and clothing accessories, iron and steel, and fish, crustaceans and molluscs.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There are about 381 km of roads.

Civil Aviation

In 2011 there were three primary airports (commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually). The main airport, Francisco C. Ada/Saipan International, had 382,386 enplanements in 2011 (433,557 in 2010). The airports at Rota and Tinian have much smaller passenger numbers.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education

In fall 2007 there were 462 pupils enrolled in nursery school and pre-school, 689 in kindergarten, 6,989 in elementary school (grades 1–8), 3,159 in high school (grades 9–12) and 901 in higher education.

Health

There were 3.6 doctors per 10,000 inhabitants in 2008, 18.2 nursing personnel per 10,000 inhabitants and 0.7 midwifery personnel per 10,000. In 2007 there was one hospital with 86 beds and a public health wellness clinic. There are six private clinics.

RELIGION

The population is predominantly Roman Catholic.

CULTURE

Tourism

In 2011 there were 336,000 international tourist arrivals, excluding same-day visitors (375,000 in 2010).

Commonwealth of Puerto Rico

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A Spanish dependency since the 16th century, Puerto Rico was ceded to the USA in 1898 after the Spanish defeat in the Spanish-American war. In 1917 US citizenship was conferred and in 1932 there was a name change from Porto Rico to Puerto Rico. In 1952 Puerto Rico was proclaimed a commonwealth with a representative government and a directly elected governor.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Puerto Rico is the easternmost of the Greater Antilles and lies between the Dominican Republic and the US Virgin Islands. The total area is 13,791 sq. km (5,325 sq. miles), of which 8,868 sq. km (3,424 sq. miles) are dry land; the population, according to the census of 1 April 2010, was 3,725,789, a fall of 2.2% from 2000. July 2015 estimate, 3,474,182. The urban population was 3,595,521 in 2000, representing 94.4% (73.3% in 1995) of the total population. Population density was 1,088 per sq. mile in 2010. Of the total population in 2010, 1,940,618 were female. The UN gave an estimated population for 2015 of 3.68m.

Chief towns, 2010 census, are: San Juan (the capital), 395,326; Bayamón, 208,116; Carolina, 176,762; Ponce, 166,327; Caguas, 142,893.

The Puerto Rican island of Vieques, 10 miles to the east, has an area of 51.7 sq. miles and 9,301 (2010) inhabitants. The island of Culebra, between Puerto Rico and St Thomas, has an area of 10 sq. miles and 1,818 (2010) inhabitants. Both islands have good harbours.

Spanish and English are the joint official languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 42,153 (11.3 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 29,133 (7.8). Marriages, 2006, 23,185; infant mortality rate, 2009, 7.9 per 1,000 live births. Population growth rate, 2007–08, 0.3%. In 2006 the most popular age range for marrying was 20–24 for both males and females. Fertility rate, 2008, 1.6 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Warm, sunny winters with hot summers. The north coast experiences more rainfall than the south coast and generally does not have a dry season as rainfall is evenly spread throughout the year. San Juan, Jan. 25°C, July 28°C. Annual rainfall 1,246 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Puerto Rico is a self-governing commonwealth (Estado Libre Asociado) in association with the United States. The chief of state is the President of the United States of America. The head of government is an elected Governor. There are two legislative chambers: the 51-member House of Representatives and the 27-member Senate. Both houses meet annually in Jan. The executive power is exercised by the Governor, elected every four years, who leads a cabinet of 15 ministers.

A new constitution was drafted by a Puerto Rican Constituent Assembly and approved by the electorate at a referendum on 3 March 1952. It was then submitted to Congress, which struck out Section 20 of Article 11 covering the 'right to work' and the 'right to an adequate standard of living'; the remainder was passed and proclaimed by the Governor on 25 July 1952.

Puerto Rico broadly has authority over its internal affairs, but the USA controls areas generally regulated by the federal government. Puerto Ricans are US citizens and possess most of the rights and obligations of citizens from the 50 states, such as paying Social Security and receiving federal welfare. Differences include Puerto Rico's local taxation system and partial exemption from Internal Revenue Code, its lack of voting representation in either house of the US Congress (they have one non-voting representative) and the ineligibility of Puerto Ricans to vote in presidential elections. Puerto Rican men are subject to subscription in the US Armed Forces, but the commonwealth sends independent teams to the Olympics.

The US Constitution remains the supreme legal document. Puerto Rico's authority over internal affairs is subject to the agreement of the US Congress and may, in theory, be rescinded at any time. Its status has long been the subject of debate in Washington and San Juan, centred on the options of remaining as a Commonwealth or adopting statehood, a compact of Free Association or independence.

At a plebiscite on 14 Nov. 1993 on Puerto Rico's future status, 48.6% of votes cast were for Commonwealth (status quo), 46.3% for Statehood (51st State of the USA) and 4.4% for full independence. In a further plebiscite in Dec. 1998, some 52.2% of voters backed the opposition's call for no change, while 46.5% supported statehood. Independence was supported by 2.5%, while free association received 0.3%. A Presidential Task Force on Puerto Rico's Status was established by President Clinton in 2000 and continued to report during the tenures of George W. Bush and Barack Obama. President Obama has reiterated his commitment to its status being decided by the will of the people of Puerto Rico as expressed in a plebiscite or referendum.

A non-binding referendum of Puerto Rico's status was held on 6 Nov. 2012. Voters were asked two questions: firstly, whether they wished to continue with the current territorial status; and, secondly, which status they favoured of statehood, independence or sovereign nation in free association with the USA. Turnout approached 80%, with 54.0% voting no to the first question. Of those, 73.0% cast a vote on the second question, with 61.1% opting for statehood, 33.3% for sovereign free association and 5.5% for independence. Nonetheless, before Puerto Rico can become the 51st state of the USA, legislation would be subject to approval by the Congress in Washington before being signed off by the President.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the gubernatorial election on 6 Nov. 2012 Alejandro García Padilla (Popular Democratic Party/PPD) won with 47.8% of the vote, ahead of incumbent Luis Guillermo Fortuño (New Progressive Party/PNP) with 47.1% and Juan Dalmau Ramírez (Puerto Rican Independence Party/PIP) with 2.5%. A number of other candidates each received less than 1% of the vote.

In elections to the Chamber of Representatives on 6 Nov. 2012 the Popular Democratic Party (PPD) won 28 of the 51 seats and the New Progressive Party (PNP) 23 seats. In the Senate elections of the same day PPD took 18 seats, PNP 8 and PIP 1.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Alejandro García Padilla (PPD), 2013–17 (salary: $70,000).

Fisheries

The total catch in 2010 was 4,184,000 lb (1,898 tonnes), exclusively from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing contributed $46,113.9m. to total GDP in 2012, including $28,047.4m. from pharmaceutical and medicine manufacturing.

Labour

There were 1,035,000 people in employment in 2012, including 231,000 in wholesale and retail trade, 225,000 in public administration and 95,000 in manufacturing. The unemployment rate was 15.2% in fiscal year 2012.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2005 imports amounted to $38,905.2m., of which $19,133.7m. came from the USA; exports were valued at $56,543.2m., of which $46,703.0m. went to the USA.

Main imports in 2005 were (in $1m.): chemicals, 17,086.8; petroleum and coal products, 2,924.5; computers and electronic products, 2,833.8. Main exports in 2005 were (in $1m.): chemical products, 38,618.9; computer and electronic products, 7,452.1; medical equipment and supplies, 4,993.8.

Puerto Rico is not permitted to levy taxes on imports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 16,397 miles of roads and 2,531,199 registered motor vehicles.

Rail

There are 96 km of railroad, although no passenger service. There is a 17.2-km urban train system in use.

Civil Aviation

There were six primary airports in 2011 (commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually) with a combined total of 4,413,509 enplanements, down from 4,679,049 in 2010. By far the busiest airport is San Juan's Luis Muñoz Marín International, which had 3,983,130 enplanements in 2011.

Shipping

The leading ports are San Juan (which handled 11.3m. tons of cargo in 2009) and Ponce (2.2m. tons).

Telecommunications

In 2011 there were 826,100 landline telephone subscriptions (equivalent to 220.6 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 3,108,400 mobile phone subscriptions (or 829.9 per 1,000 inhabitants). In 2011, 48.0% of the population were internet users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Judicial power of the commonwealth is vested in a unified judicial system with regard to jurisdiction, operation and administration. It consists of the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals and the Court of First Instance, which jointly constitute the General Court of Justice. The Supreme Court is the court of last instance, and is composed of nine members (a chief justice and eight associate justices) named by the Governor with the consent of the Senate. Judgments on federal laws are subject to review by the US Supreme Court.

The Court of First Instance is a court of original general jurisdiction consisting of a Superior Court (253 judges) and municipal courts (85 judges). There are 13 judicial regions in the First Instance Court. Final judgments made by the Court of First Instance must be appealed at the Court of Appeals. The United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, based in Boston, Massachusetts, sits in San Juan for two weeks each year.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2011 was 11,452 (311 per 100,000 population).

Education

Education was made compulsory in 1899. The percentage of literacy in 2002 was 94.1% of those 15 years of age or older. Total enrolment in public day schools, 2004–05, was 575,993. All private schools had a total enrolment of 138,560 pupils in 2004–05. Puerto Rico has 20 specialized schools in music, arts, theatre, science and mathematics, and communication in radio and television.

In 2004–05 the University of Puerto Rico had eleven units with a total of 66,389 students. Other institutions of higher education in the public sector had a total of 4,655 students in 2004–05: San Juan Technology College, 936 students; Corporation of Music of Puerto Rico, 298 students; School of Plastic Arts, 461 students; Technology Institute of Puerto Rico of the Department of Education, 2,960 students. American Samoa

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first recorded visit by Europeans was in 1722. On 14 July 1889 a treaty between the USA, Germany and Great Britain proclaimed the Samoan Islands neutral territory, under a four-power government consisting of the three treaty powers and the local native government. By the Tripartite Treaty of 7 Nov. 1899, ratified 19 Feb. 1900, Great Britain and Germany renounced, in favour of the USA, all rights over the islands of the Samoan group east of 171° long. west of Greenwich. The islands to the west of that meridian, now the independent state of Samoa, were assigned to Germany. The islands of Tutuila and Aunu'u were ceded to the USA by their High Chiefs on 17 April 1900, and the islands of the Manu'a group on 16 July 1904. Congress accepted the islands under a Joint Resolution approved 20 Feb. 1929. Swain's Island, 210 miles north of the Samoan Islands, was annexed in 1925 and is administered as an integral part of American Samoa.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The islands (Tutuila, Aunu'u, Ta'u, Olosega, Ofu and Rose) are approximately 650 miles east-northeast of Fiji. The total area is 1,505 sq. km (581 sq. miles), of which 198 sq. km (76 sq. miles) are dry land; population (2010 census), 55,519, nearly all Polynesians or part-Polynesians. Population density was 278 per sq. km in 2010.

In 2010, 88% of the population lived in urban areas. The capital is Pago Pago, which had a population of 3,656 in 2010. The island's three Districts are Eastern (population, 2010, 23,030), Western (31,329) and Manu'a (1,143). There is also Swain's Island, with an area of 1.9 sq. miles and 17 inhabitants (2010), which lies 210 miles to the northwest. Rose Island (uninhabited) is 0.4 sq. mile in area.

The official languages are Samoan and English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 1,234 (22.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 224 (4.0). Infant mortality, 2006, 11.8 per 1,000 live births.

CLIMATE

A tropical maritime climate with a small annual range of temperature and plentiful rainfall. Pago Pago, Jan. 83°F (28.3°C), July 80°F (26.7°C). Annual rainfall 194" (4,850 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

American Samoa is constitutionally an unorganized, unincorporated territory of the USA administered under the Department of the Interior. Its indigenous inhabitants are US nationals and are classified locally as citizens of American Samoa with certain privileges under local laws not granted to non-indigenous persons. Polynesian customs (not inconsistent with US laws) are respected.

Fagatogo is the seat of the government.

The islands are organized in 15 counties grouped in three districts; these counties and districts correspond to the traditional political units. On 25 Feb. 1948 a bicameral legislature was established, at the request of the Samoans, to have advisory legislative functions. With the adoption of the constitution of 22 April 1960, and the revised Constitution of 1967, the legislature was vested with limited law-making authority. The lower house, or House of Representatives, is composed of 20 members elected by universal adult suffrage and one non-voting member for Swain's Island. The upper house, or Senate, is comprised of 18 members elected, in the traditional Samoan manner, in meetings of the chiefs. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor have been popularly elected since 1978. American Samoa also sends one delegate to the US House of Representatives. The Congressman may participate but not vote on the House floor.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At elections to the House of Representatives on 6 Nov. 2012, only non-partisans were elected.

At gubernatorial elections on the same day Lolo Matalasi Moliga received 33.5% of votes cast, Faoa Aitofele Sunia 33.1%, Afoa Moega Lutu 19.3%, Salu Hunkin-Finau 6.8%, Save Liuato Tuitele 5.8% and Tim Jones 1.4%. In the run-off between the two leading candidates held on 20 Nov. 2012, Moliga took 52.9% of the vote against 47.1% for Sunia.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Lolo Matalasi Moliga (ind.), 2013–17 (salary: $85,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Lemanu Peleti Mauga (ind.), 2013–17 ($75,000).

ECONOMY

Overview

The Economic Development and Planning Office promotes economic expansion and outside investment.

Budget

The chief sources of revenue are annual federal grants from the USA, local revenues from taxes, duties, receipts from commercial operations (enterprise and special revenue funds), utilities, rents and leases, and liquor sales. In 2004–05 revenues were $182.0m. and expenditures $192.5m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

American Samoa's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy in 2011 were the equivalent of 8.2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 41,000 kW in 2011. Production in 2011 was about 155m. kWh. Per capita consumption in 2011 was 2,804 kWh. All the Manu'a islands have electricity.

Water

The total area covered by water is 505 sq. miles, of which 8 sq. miles are inland.

Agriculture

Of the 48,640 acres of land area, 12,000 acres are used for tropical crops; most commercial farms are in the Tafuna plains and west Tutuila. Principal crops are coconuts, taro, bread-fruit, yams and bananas.

Livestock (2008): hogs and pigs, 16,904; chickens, 35,709.

Forestry

Forests covered a total area of 18,000 ha. in 2010, or 89% of the land area.

Fisheries

Total catch in 2010 was 11,599,000 lb (5,261 tonnes).

INDUSTRY

Fish canning is important, employing the second largest number of people (after government). Attempts are being made to provide a variety of light industries. Tuna fishing and local inshore fishing are both expanding.

Labour

In 2010 the civilian labour force numbered 18,300, of whom 16,616 were employed. The unemployment rate in 2010 was 9.2%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADEImports and Exports

Imports in 2006 totalled $579m. and exports $439m.

Chief imports are fish for canning, building materials, fuel oil, food, jewellery, machines and parts, alcoholic beverages and cigarettes. Chief exports are canned tuna, watches, pet foods and handicrafts.

There are about 150 km of paved roads and 200 km of unpaved roads in all. Motor vehicles registered, 2006, 9,215 (including 7,758 private vehicles).

Civil Aviation

American Samoa has one primary airport—a commercial service airport with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually. Pago Pago International had 45,486 enplanements in 2011.

Shipping

The harbour at Pago Pago, which nearly bisects the island of Tutuila, is the only good harbour for large vessels in American Samoa.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONSJustice

Judicial power is vested firstly in a High Court. The trial division has original jurisdiction of all criminal and civil cases. The probate division has jurisdiction of estates, guardianships, trusts and other matters. The land and title division decides cases relating to disputes involving communal land and Matai title court rules on questions and controversy over family titles. The appellate division hears appeals from trial, land and title, and probate divisions as well as having original jurisdiction in selected matters. The appellate court is the court of last resort. Two American judges sit with five Samoan judges permanently. In addition there are temporary judges or assessors who sit occasionally on cases involving Samoan customs. There is also a District Court with limited jurisdiction and there are 69 village courts.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2011 was 167 (equivalent to 240 per 100,000 population).

Education

Education is compulsory between the ages of six and 18. In 2006–07 there were 16,427 pupils in public elementary and secondary schools, of which 16,191 were in regular schools, 187 in vocational education and 49 in special education. There were 1,767 students in higher education in fall 2007.

RELIGION

According to the Pew Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life, in 2010 the population was an estimated 98.3% Christian. Around 61% of Christians are Protestants and 20% Catholics.

CULTURETourism

In 2011 there were 28,403 visitor arrivals, including 5,682 tourists.

GuamGuahan*KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Magellan is said to have discovered the island in 1521; it was ceded by Spain to the USA by the Treaty of Paris (10 Dec. 1898). The island was captured by the Japanese on 10 Dec. 1941 and retaken by American forces following the Battle of Guam (21 July–8 Aug. 1944). Guam is of strategic importance; substantial numbers of naval and air force personnel occupy about one-third of the usable land.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guam is the largest and most southern island of the Marianas Archipelago, in 13° 26' N. lat., 144° 45' E. long. Total area, 210 sq. miles (543 sq. km). Hagåtña (previously Agaña), the seat of government, is about eight miles from the anchorage in Apra Harbor. The census in 2010 showed a population of 159,358; density, 290 per sq. km. In 2010 an estimated 93.2% of the population lived in urban areas. The UN gives an estimated population for 2015 of 170,000. The Malay strain is predominant. Chamorro, the native language, and English are the official languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 3,416 (21.4 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2010 (provisional), 857 (5.4). Infant mortality rate, 2009, 10.5 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy at birth, 2005–10, was 73.3 years for males and 77.9 years for females. Fertility rate, 2010, 3.0 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Tropical maritime, with little difference in temperatures over the year. Rainfall is copious at all seasons, but is greatest from July to Oct. Hagåtña, Jan. 81°F (27.2°C), July 81°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 93" (2,325 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Guam's constitutional status is that of an 'unincorporated territory' of the USA. In Aug. 1950 the President transferred the administration of the island from the Navy Department to the Interior Department. The transfer conferred full citizenship on the Guamanians, who had previously been 'nationals' of the USA. There was a referendum on status on 30 Jan. 1982. 38% of eligible voters voted; 48.5% of those favoured Commonwealth status.

The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four-year terms. The legislature is a 15-member elected Senate; its powers are similar to those of an American state legislature. Guam sends one non-voting delegate (Madeleine Bordallo, D., 2015–17) to the US House of Representatives.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the election of 4 Nov. 2014 for the Guam Legislature the Democrats won nine seats and the Republicans won six. In gubernatorial elections, also held on 4 Nov. 2014, incumbent governor Eddie Calvo (Republican) won with 63.7% of the vote against Carl Gutierrez (Democrat) with 36.0%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Eddie Calvo (R.), 2015–19 (salary: $130,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Ray Tenorio (R.), 2015–19 ($110,000).

Government Website: <http://www.guam.gov>

ECONOMY

Budget

Total revenue (2010) $942.6m.; expenditure $1,081.6m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Guam's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy in 2011 were the equivalent of 12.7 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 0.6m. kW in 2011. Production was approximately 1,885m. kWh in 2011. Consumption per capita in 2011 was estimated at 11,718 kWh.

Water

The total area covered by water is 361 sq. miles, of which 8 sq. miles are inland.

Agriculture

The major products of the island are sweet potatoes, cucumbers, watermelons and beans. In 2002 there were approximately 5,000 acres of arable land and 9,000 acres of permanent cropland. Production (2002 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): coconuts, 52; copra, 2; watermelons, 2. Livestock (2002) included 1,000 goats and 5,000 pigs. There is an agricultural experimental station at Inarajan.

Forestry

There were 26,000 ha. of forest in 2010, or 47% of the total land area.

Fisheries

In 2010 total catch was 642,000 lb (291 tonnes), exclusively from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Guam Economic Development Authority controls three industrial estates: Cabras Island (32 acres); Calvo estate at Tamuning (26 acres); Harmon estate (16 acres). Industries include textile manufacture, cement and petroleum distribution, warehousing, printing, plastics and ship-repair. Other main sources of income are construction and tourism.

Labour

There were 121,570 persons of employable age at the end of 2013, of whom 70,490 were in the workforce. 5,940 were unemployed.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Guam is the only American territory which has complete 'free trade'; excise duties are levied only upon imports of tobacco, liquid fuel and liquor.

Imports and Exports

In 2012 imports were valued at $639m. and exports at $46m. Main export destinations in 2012 were Japan, 25%; Micronesia, 18%; Hong Kong, 13%. The USA is by far the biggest source of imports, ahead of Japan.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There are 674 km of all-weather roads. In 2002 there were 59,700 passenger cars and 20,100 commercial vehicles in use.

Civil Aviation

Guam has one primary airport (a commercial service airport with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually). Guam International, which is at Tamuning, had 1,369,586 enplanements in 2011.

Shipping

There is a port at Apra Harbor.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Organic Act established a District Court with jurisdiction in matters arising under both federal and territorial law; the judge is appointed by the President subject to Senate approval. There is also a Supreme Court and a Superior Court; all judges are locally appointed except the Federal District judge. Misdemeanours are under the jurisdiction of the police court. The Spanish law was superseded in 1933 by five civil codes based upon California law.

The population in penal institutions in June 2013 was 696 (432 per 100,000 population).

Education

Education is compulsory from five to 16. Bilingual teaching programmes integrate the Chamorro language and culture into public school courses. Total primary and secondary school enrolment in fall 2008 was 39,875, including 30,329 in the public system and 7,053 in private schools; there were 34 public schools and 27 private schools. The University of Guam is in Mangilao and Guam Community College is in Barrigada.

Health

There is a hospital, eight nutrition centres, a school health programme and an extensive immunization programme. Emphasis is on disease prevention, health education and nutrition.

RELIGION

About 75% of the Guamanians are Roman Catholics; the other 25% are Baptists, Episcopalians, Bahá'ís, Lutherans, Latter-day Saints (Mormons), Presbyterians, Jehovah's Witnesses and members of the Church of Christ and Seventh-day Adventists.

CULTURE

Tourism

In 2011, 1,227,000 overseas visitors—excluding those from Canada and Mexico—visited Guam (down from 1,318,000 in 2010 although up from 1,170,000 in 2006).

Virgin Islands of the United States

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Virgin Islands of the United States, formerly known as the Danish West Indies, were named and claimed for Spain by Columbus in 1493. They were later settled by Dutch and English planters, invaded by France in the mid-17th century and abandoned by the French c. 1700, by which time Danish influence had been established. St Croix was held by the Knights of Malta between two periods of French rule.

The Virgin Islands were purchased from Denmark by the United States for $25m. on 31 March 1917. Their value was wholly strategic, inasmuch as they commanded the Anegada Passage from the Atlantic Ocean to the Caribbean Sea and the approach to the Panama Canal. Although the inhabitants were made US citizens in 1927, the islands are constitutionally an 'unincorporated territory'.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Virgin Islands group, lying about 40 miles due east of Puerto Rico, comprises the islands of St Thomas (31 sq. miles), St Croix (83 sq. miles), St John (20 sq. miles) and 65 small islets or cays, mostly uninhabited. The total area is 1,898 sq. km (733 sq. miles), of which 348 sq. km (134 sq. miles) are dry land.

The population according to the 2010 census was 106,405; density 794 per sq. mile. In 2010, 95% of the population was urban.

Population (2010 census) of St Thomas, 51,634; St Croix, 50,601; St John, 4,170. In 2010, 46.7% of the population was native born.

The UN gave an estimated population for 2015 of 106,000.

The capital and only city, Charlotte Amalie, on St Thomas, had a population (2010 census) of 10,354. There are two towns on St Croix with 2010 census populations of: Christiansted, 2,433; Frederiksted, 859. The official language is English. Spanish is also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2010, 1,600 (15.1 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2009, 675 (6.3). Infant mortality, 2005–07, 11.5 per 1,000 live births.

CLIMATE

Average temperatures vary from 77°F to 82°F throughout the year; humidity is low. Average annual rainfall, about 45". The islands lie in the hurricane belt; tropical storms with heavy rainfall can occur in late summer.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Organic Act of 22 July 1954 gives the US Department of the Interior full jurisdiction; some limited legislative powers are given to a single-chambered legislature, composed of 15 senators elected for two years representing the two legislative districts of St Croix and St Thomas-St John.

The Governor is elected by the residents. Since 1954 there have been four attempts to redraft the Constitution, to provide for greater autonomy. Each has been rejected by the electorate. The latest was defeated in a referendum in Nov. 1981, with 50% of the electorate participating.

For administration, there are 14 executive departments, 13 of which are under commissioners and the other, the Department of Justice, under an Attorney-General. The US Department of the Interior appoints a Federal Comptroller of government revenue and expenditure.

The franchise is vested in residents who are citizens of the United States, 18 years of age or over. They do not participate in the US presidential election but they have a non-voting representative in Congress.

The capital is Charlotte Amalie, on St Thomas Island.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections for governor held on 18 Nov. 2014 Kenneth E. Mapp (ind.) won 62.7% of the vote, against 37.0% for Donna Christian-Christensen (Democrat) in a second round run-off. In Senate elections held on 4 Nov. 2014 the Democratic Party of the Virgin Islands won 11 out of 15 seats.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Kenneth E. Mapp (ind.), 2015–19 (salary: $150,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Osbert Potter (ind.), 2015–19 ($125,000).

US Virgin Islands Government: <http://ltg.gov.vi>

ECONOMY

Currency

United States currency became legal tender on 1 July 1934.

Budget

Under the 1954 Organic Act finances are provided partly from local revenues—customs, federal income tax, real and personal property tax, trade tax, excise tax, pilotage fees, etc.—and partly from Federal Matching Funds, being the excise taxes collected by the federal government on such Virgin Islands products transported to the mainland as are liable.

Per capita income, 2012, $35,844.

Revenues in 2004 totalled $557.9m.; expenditures were $592.0m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy in 2011 were the equivalent of 130.0 tonnes per capita, the second highest in the world.

Electricity

The Virgin Islands Water and Power Authority operates electrical generation and water desalination and reverse osmosis units on St Croix, St John and St Thomas. Production in 2011 was 951m. kWh. Per capita consumption in 2011 was 8,937 kWh. Installed capacity in 2011 was 345,000 kW.

Water

The total area covered by water is 599 sq. miles, of which 18 sq. miles are inland.

Agriculture

Land for fruit, vegetables and animal feed is available on St Croix, and there are tax incentives for development.

Livestock (2012 estimates): cattle, 8,000; goats, 4,000; pigs, 3,000; sheep, 3,000; chickens, 40,000.

Forestry

Forests covered 20,000 ha. in 2010, or 58% of the land area.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2010 was 1,867,000 lb (847 tonnes).

INDUSTRY

The main occupations on St Thomas are tourism and government service; on St Croix manufacturing is more important. Manufactures include rum (the most valuable product), watches, pharmaceuticals and fragrances. Industries in order of revenue: tourism, refining oil, watch assembly, rum distilling, construction.

Labour

At the end of 2014 the total labour force was 46,594, of whom 40,886 were employed. 5,708 were unemployed.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Imports, 2005, totalled $10,243m. and exports $10,476m. The main import is crude petroleum, while the principal exports are petroleum products.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2008 the Virgin Islands had an estimated 1,260 km of roads. There were 74,500 vehicles registered in 2010.

Civil Aviation

In 2011 there were two primary airports (commercial service airports with more than 10,000 passenger boardings annually). The main airport is Cyril E. King at Charlotte Amalie on St Thomas, which had 596,832 enplanements in 2011. The smaller Henry E. Rohlsen airport at Christiansted on St Croix had 184,331 enplanements in 2011.

Shipping

The whole territory has free port status. There is an hourly boat service between St Thomas and St John and a 75-minute catamaran service between St Croix and St Thomas two to three times a day.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The population in penal institutions in Jan. 2011 was 587 (539 per 100,000 population).

Education

In fall 2007 there were 10,770 in elementary school, 5,133 in high school and 2,384 students in higher education; there were 1,518 school teachers. In fall 2005 the University of the Virgin Islands (St Thomas and St Croix campuses, with an ecological research station on St John) had 2,392 students (1,263 full-time and 1,129 part-time) and 107 full-time instructional staff; 77% of the students were female.

Health

In 2004 there were 208 active physicians and 45 licensed dentists. The Roy Lester Schneider Hospital on St Thomas had 169 beds in 2008. The Governor Juan F. Luis Hospital, Christiansted serves St Croix, with 188 beds in 2008.

RELIGION

According to the Pew Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life, in 2010 the population was an estimated 94.8% Christian. Around 69% of Christians are Protestants and 29% Catholics. There are places of worship of the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths in St Thomas and St Croix, and Protestant and Roman Catholic churches in St John.

CULTURE

Tourism

Tourism accounts for some 70% of GDP. In 2010 there were 691,559 visitor arrivals by air (excluding resident arrivals and inter-island traffic but including excursionists), up from 664,249 in 2009 although down slightly from 693,372 in 2007. There were 1,858,946 cruise passenger arrivals in 2010 (when there were 680 cruise ship calls), again down from 2007—when there had been 1,917,878 cruise passengers—before the global economic crisis had set in.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

From around 4000 BC Uruguay was populated principally by Charrúa and Guaraní Indians. The Charrúa migrated seasonally between coastal and inland areas, while the Guaraní settled in the eastern forests and in the north. Smaller groups also settled the region and lands were fought over vigorously. In 1516 the first Europeans to enter the territory, Spanish navigator Juan Díaz de Solís and his party, were killed. Other Spanish and Portuguese expeditions followed and in the late 16th century the Spanish laid claim to the Río de la Plata. In 1603 Spanish governor Hernando Arias de Saavedra is said to have shipped cattle and horses from the Paraguay region into Río de la Plata, and Spanish, Portuguese and English settlers began livestock farming. The native peoples resisted the European colonizers but were killed in large numbers in warfare and by European disease.

In 1680 the Portuguese established the settlement of Colonia do Sacramento on the Río de la Plata. In 1726 the Spanish founded San Felipe de Montevideo as a fortified port and settled its hinterland. For the next 50 years the two powers fought over the coastal region and in 1776 the Spanish established the viceroyalty of the Río de la Plata, with Buenos Aires as its capital. While the Napoleonic wars were weakening Spain, an autonomous junta was established in Montevideo and in 1810 criollos (ethnic Spanish born in South America) seized power from the Spanish in Buenos Aires.

A federalist movement originating in the inland region of the Banda Oriental challenged both Montevideo and Buenos Aires. In the ensuing conflict Portuguese Brazil annexed the Banda Oriental from 1820–25, until Uruguayan federalists led a successful uprising and regained control. Banda Oriental declared its independence and its incorporation into the United Provinces of Río de la Plata on 25 Aug. 1825. Fighting continued until 1828 when negotiations began with Brazil and Argentina. On 18 July 1830 the constitution of the Oriental Republic of Uruguay was approved.

Conflict between the two main political parties, the colorados and blancos, dominated the next 90 years, factionalizing the nation and leading to the economically damaging War of the Triple Alliance (1864–70), fought between Paraguay and the unified forces of Uruguay, Argentina and Brazil. In 1905 the first democratic elections took place, returning the colorados to government under President José Batlle y Ordóñez. In the early 20th century ranching brought prosperity and an influx of immigrants, and a welfare state was developed. In 1919 a new constitution aimed to protect against dictatorship by providing for a plural executive known as a colegiado. However, economic depression led to instability and in 1933 presidential government and quadrennial elections were introduced.

Collective leadership returned from 1951–56 but a series of strikes and riots in the 1960s led to the extension of army influence. The military took repressive measures and the presidency was restored in 1967. Marxist urban guerrillas, the Tupamaros, fought a violent campaign against the regime but were finally defeated in 1972. The military took over the government in 1973. A period of harsh repression followed during which thousands were arrested and human rights abuses were rife. Economic difficulties in the 1980s weakened the military government and the country returned to civilian rule in 1985. Economic growth in the 1990s was followed by a downturn from 1999–2002. In 2005 Uruguay elected its first left-wing leader, Tabaré Vázquez of the Progressive Encounter-Broad Front-New Majority coalition.

The military ruler from 1981–85, Gregorio Álvarez, was sentenced to 25 years in prison in Oct. 2009 for murder and human rights abuses during his rule. The following month José Mujica, a former guerrilla leader, was elected president. In Feb. 2010 Juan María Bordaberry, president from 1972–76, received a 30-year sentence for murder and constitutional violations while in office. In Dec. 2013 Uruguay became the first country in the world to legalize the sale, cultivation and distribution of marijuana.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Uruguay is bounded on the northeast by Brazil, on the southeast by the Atlantic, on the south by the Río de la Plata and on the west by Argentina. The area is 176,215 sq. km (68,037 sq. miles), including 1,199 sq. km (463 sq. miles) of inland waters. The following table shows the area and the population of the 19 departments at census 2011:

Departments	Sq. km	Census 2011	Capital
Artigas	11,928	73,378	Artigas
Canelones	4,536	520,187	Canelones

The total population at the 2011 census was 3,286,314; density, 18.8 per sq. km.

The UN gave an estimated population for 2015 of 3.43m.

In 2011 Montevideo (the capital) accounted for 39.7% of the total population. It had a population in 2011 of 1,304,687. Other major cities are Salto (population of 104,011 in 2011) and Ciudad de la Costa (95,176 in 2011). 92.6% of the population lived in urban areas in 2011.

13% of the population are over 65; 24% are under 15; 63% are between 15 and 64.

The official language is Spanish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009: births, 47,152; deaths, 32,179. Rates (per 1,000 population), 2009: birth, 14.1; death, 9.6. Annual population growth rate, 2005–10, 0.3%. Infant mortality, 2010 (per 1,000 live births), 9. Life expectancy in 2013 was 73.7 years among males and 80.6 years among females. Fertility rate, 2013, 2.0 births per woman. Uruguay legalized same-sex marriage in Aug. 2013. In Oct. 2012 it became the second Latin American country (after Cuba) to legalize abortion for all women.

CLIMATE

A warm temperate climate, with mild winters and warm summers. The wettest months are March to June, but there is really no dry season. Montevideo, Jan. 72°F (22.2°C), July 50°F (10°C). Annual rainfall 38" (950 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was adopted on 27 Nov. 1966 and became effective in Feb. 1967; it has been amended in 1989, 1994, 1996 and 2004.

Congress consists of a Senate of 31 members and a Chamber of Deputies of 99 members, both elected by proportional representation for five-year terms although in the case of the Senate only 30 members are elected with one seat reserved for the Vice-President. The electoral system provides that the successful presidential candidate be a member of the party which gains a parliamentary majority. Electors vote for deputies on a first-past-the-post system, and simultaneously vote for a presidential candidate of the same party. The winners of the second vote are credited with the number of votes obtained by their party in the parliamentary elections. Referendums may be called at the instigation of 10,000 signatories. Voting is compulsory.

CURRENT LEADERS

Tabaré Vázquez

Position
President

Introduction

Following his election success in Oct. 2004, Tabaré Vázquez was sworn in as the first left-wing president in Uruguay's history on 1 March 2005 and remained in office until 2008. A cancer specialist and former mayor of the capital, Montevideo, he promised to focus on helping the poor and creating jobs. He was elected for another presidential term in Nov. 2014, succeeding his fellow Broad Front member José Alberto Mujica.

Early Life

Tabaré Ramón Vázquez was born in a poor district of Montevideo on 17 Jan. 1940, the son of an oil refinery worker. Having graduated in medicine from the capital's University of the Republic in 1969, he then specialized in oncology and radiotherapy, beginning work in 1972. In 1976 Vázquez obtained a scholarship from the French government to study further at the Institut Gustave Roussy in Paris.

In 1985, the year in which civilian government was restored in Uruguay after 12 years of military dictatorship, Vázquez was nominated director of the department of oncology and radiotherapy at the University of the Republic. He subsequently published more than 100 scientific papers and attended numerous international conferences. Affiliated with the central committee of the Socialist Party from late 1987, he then joined the Broad Front (a left-wing coalition formed in 1971) and stood as their candidate in the election for the mayorship of Montevideo in Nov. 1989. He won and went on to become a popular and successful figure, re-elected throughout the 1990s and early 2000s with increasing majorities.

In 1994 Vázquez came within a handful of votes of winning the presidency as the candidate of the Progressive Encounter–Broad Front (EP–FA) alliance, just losing to the Colorado Party's Julio María Sanguinetti. Vázquez entered the 1999 presidential election with high hopes, promising to create jobs with increased spending. The election went to a run-off but was won by the Colorado candidate, Jorge Batlle. However, support for the ruling party fell sharply when Uruguay's economy plunged into recession in 2002. In the presidential election of Oct. 2004, Vázquez received 50.4% of votes cast, avoiding the need for a run-off. The EP–FA–NM coalition (by then including New Majority) also emerged victorious in the legislative elections—the first parliamentary election win for the political left in Uruguay's history. On 1 March 2005 Vázquez was inaugurated as president.

Career in Office

Having campaigned on a promise to fight poverty and tackle unemployment, Vázquez embarked on his five-year term by launching a US$100m. 'social emergency programme'. He pledged to distribute wealth more evenly by strengthening educational institutions and introducing a national minimum wage. He also signed an economic agreement with Venezuela, restored diplomatic relations with Cuba and set out to strengthen ties with other members of the MERCOSUR trade bloc to reduce the country's foreign debt. Demonstrating his popular touch, he announced that he would continue to see cancer patients throughout his term in office.

Vázquez promised to investigate the fate of the many thousands who disappeared during the military dictatorship of the 1970s and in Dec. 2005 forensic investigations unearthed the remains of victims believed to have been killed during that time. In Nov. 2006 the former president, Juan María Bordaberry Arocena, was detained in connection with the deaths of 14 political opponents in the 1970s and was later sentenced to 30 years' incarceration before his death in 2011. Also in late 2006, the Uruguayan government repaid all its outstanding debt to the International Monetary Fund.

Uruguay's relations with Argentina deteriorated sharply at the end of 2007 after Vázquez authorized the opening of a controversial paper pulp mill on the Uruguay River, which forms the border between the two countries. The Argentine government maintained that the plant would degrade the river and local environment.

In Nov. 2008 the Senate passed legislation that would decriminalize abortion, prompting Vázquez's resignation from the Socialist Party after he refused to endorse the bill. Banned from running for re-election in 2009 but leaving office with a 60% approval rating, he refused to rule out a return in 2014 and in Nov. that year he won the run-off poll as the Broad Front candidate, claiming almost 57% of the vote against Luis Lacalle Pou of the centre-right National Party. Sworn in for a second presidential term on 1 March 2015, Vázquez was expected to maintain the generous social welfare policies of his Broad Front predecessor, José Mujica, but has faced growing public concern over rising crime, poor educational standards and a deteriorating fiscal deficit.

DEFENCE

Defence expenditure totalled US$445m. in 2013 (US$134 per capita), representing 0.9% of GDP.

Army

The Army consists of volunteers who enlist for one to two years' service. There are four military regions with divisional headquarters. Strength (2011), 16,200. In addition there are government paramilitary forces, numbering 818 in 2011.

Navy

The Navy includes two frigates. A naval aviation service, with 211 personnel in 2011, operates one combat-capable aircraft. Personnel in 2011 totalled 5,400 including 450 naval infantry and 1,800 coast guards. The main base is at Montevideo.

Air Force

Organized with US aid, the Air Force had (2011) 3,000 personnel and 15 combat-capable aircraft.

ECONOMY

Finance and real estate contributed 18.7% to GDP in 2010; followed by trade and hotels, 14.4%; manufacturing, 13.1%; services, 10.7%.

Overview

Agriculture contributes 12% of GDP and 70% of total exports. The creation of the Southern Common Market in the 1990s sealed trade relations with South American partners—notably Brazil, which buys 20% of exports. China is the next largest export market; in 2011 trade between the two countries was worth US$3.4bn., twenty times the level in 1988.

Annual GDP growth from 2004 to 2012 averaged 5.8%, despite negative growth in 2009 at the height of the global economic crisis. Unemployment stood at 6.6% in 2013; GDP per capita was US$14,728 in 2012. The economy is built on strong macro-principles of low debt, high domestic demand and diversified production. The government has also embarked on an economic liberalization programme, reducing tariffs, cutting government spending and encouraging private ownership. The government aimed to provide at least 90% of its electric energy from renewable sources by 2015 and has invested heavily in wind power. Renewable sources provided 84% of electricity in 2013. Tourism is a key growth sector.

In the long term the government must strive to reduce public debt and diversify export bases away from South American markets in order to avoid a repeat of 2001 when the economy suffered badly as a result of Argentina's debt default.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Uruguayan peso (UYU), of 100 centésimos, which replaced the nuevo peso in March 1993 at 1 Uruguayan peso = 1,000 nuevos pesos. In June 2002 Uruguay allowed the peso to float freely. Inflation, which had been over 100% in 1990, was 8.6% in 2013 and 8.9% in 2014. In July 2005 total money supply was 22,794m. pesos, foreign exchange reserves were US$2,578m. and gold reserves were 8,000 troy oz (1.8m. troy oz in Nov. 1999).

Budget

In 2011 budgetary central government revenues totalled 193,658m. pesos (of which taxes 176,951m. pesos) and expenditures 185,448m. pesos. Main items of expenditure by economic type in 2011: compensation of employees, 60,586m. pesos; grants, 37,919m. pesos; use of goods and services, 30,257m. pesos.

Standard rate of VAT is 22% (reduced rate, 10%).

Performance

Uruguay depends heavily on its two large neighbours, Brazil and Argentina. Uruguay suffered four successive years of negative growth between 1999 and 2002, culminating in the economy shrinking by 7.1% in 2002, as the general downturn in the world economy was exacerbated by Argentina's crisis. However, the economy has since recovered to achieve GDP growth rates of 3.3% in 2012, 5.1% in 2013 and 3.5% in 2014. Total GDP in 2014 was US$57.5bn.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank (President, Alberto Graña) was inaugurated on 16 May 1967. It is the bank of issue and supreme regulatory authority. In 2014 there were three state banks and ten private banks. In 2011 commercial banks had assets of US$28.9bn.

In 2010 foreign debt totalled US$11,347m., equivalent to 29.0% of GNI.

There is a stock exchange in Montevideo.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Uruguay's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy in 2011 were the equivalent of 2.5 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 2.8m. kW in 2011. Production in 2011 was 10.34bn. kWh; consumption per capita in 2011 was 3,192 kWh.

Agriculture

Rising investment has helped agriculture, which has given a major boost to the country's economy. Agricultural land makes up 87.2% of the country's land area. Some large estancias have been divided up into family farms; the average farm is about 250 acres. In 2012 there were approximately 1.76m. ha. of arable land and 39,000 ha. of permanent crops. 178,000 ha. were irrigated in 2010.

Main crops (in 1,000 tonnes), 2012 unless otherwise indicated: soybeans (2011), 1,830 (estimate); rice, 1,424; wheat, 982; maize, 528; sorghum, 372; sugarcane, 368; barley, 220; oranges, 140 (estimate); grapes, 130 (estimate); potatoes, 109; clementines, mandarins, satsumas and tangerines, 101 (estimate); apples, 80 (estimate); sweet potatoes, 76 (estimate); oats, 50 (estimate); lemons and limes, 40 (estimate).

Livestock, 2012 (estimates): cattle, 11.41m.; sheep, 8.23m.; horses, 407,000; pigs, 222,000; chickens, 18m.

Livestock products, 2011 estimates (in 1,000 tonnes): beef and veal, 479; lamb and mutton, 32; pork and pork products, 21; poultry meat, 86; milk 2,057; eggs, 54; greasy wool, 35. Slaughtering in 2013-14: cattle, 1.96m.; sheep, 1.66m.; pigs, 197,000; horses, 35,000.

Forestry

In 2010 the area under forests was 1.74m. ha. (mainly eucalyptus and pine), representing 10% of the total land area. In 2011, 10.43m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2010 was 73,105 tonnes, almost entirely marine fish.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing accounted for 13.1% of GDP in 2010. Industries include meat packing, oil refining, cement manufacture, foodstuffs, beverages, cigarettes, leather and textile manufacture, chemicals, light engineering and transport equipment.

Labour

In 1996 the retirement age was raised from 55 to 60 for women; it remains 60 for men. The labour force in 2013 was 1,750,000 (1,579,000 in 2003). 76.5% of the population aged 15-64 was economically active in 2013. In the same year 6.6% of the population was unemployed.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Goods imports in 2013 totalled US$11,642.4m. (US$11,652.1m. in 2012) and goods exports US$9,065.8m. (US$8,709.2m. in 2012).

Principal imports in 2013 were machinery and transport (30.4%), mineral fuels and lubricants, and chemicals; main exports in 2013 were food, animals and beverages (44.8%), crude materials and animal and vegetable oils, and manufactured goods.

In 2004 the main import suppliers were Argentina (22.2%), Brazil (21.7%), Russia (11.0%), USA (7.1%) and China (5.5%). Leading export destinations in 2004 were the USA (19.8%), Brazil (16.5%), Argentina (7.6%), Germany (5.2%) and Mexico (4.0%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2004 there were 77,732 km of roads, including 3,877 km of national roads and 4,819 km of regional roads. Passenger cars in 2007 numbered 553,200 (151 per 1,000 inhabitants in 2005). There were 150 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 2005.

Rail

The total railway system open for traffic in 2005 was 1,508 km of 1,435 mm gauge. Passenger services, which had been abandoned in 1988, were resumed on a limited basis in 1993. In 2007 the railways carried 600,000 passengers and 1.4m. tonnes of freight.

Civil Aviation

The largest international airport is at Montevideo (Carrasco). The national carrier, Pluna, ceased operations in July 2012. In 2003 it operated domestic services and maintained routes to Asunción, Buenos Aires, Madrid, Porto Alegre, Rio de Janeiro, Santiago and São Paulo. Since the demise of Pluna the largest Uruguayan airline is now BQB Líneas Aéreas. There were 11 international airports in 2014. Nine had paved runways, one was semi-paved and one unpaved. In 2010 airports in Uruguay handled 2,195,336 passengers, of which 2,011,601 were at Carrasco. 26,832 tonnes of freight passed through Carrasco in 2010. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Uruguay-based carriers flew 8m. km on international flights.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 25 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 53,000 GT. In 2004 vessels totalling 5,067,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 22,262,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications

There were 5,268,000 mobile phone subscriptions in 2013 (1,546.2 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 1,048,000 fixed telephone lines in the same year. In 2013 Uruguay had 720,000 fixed broadband internet subscriptions and 1,552,000 mobile broadband subscriptions. In March 2012 there were 1.5m. Facebook users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Supreme Court is elected by Congress; it appoints all other judges. There are six courts of appeal, each with three judges. There are civil and criminal courts. Montevideo has ten courts of first instance, Paysandú and Salto have two each and the other departments have one each. There are approximately 300 lower courts.

The population in penal institutions in July 2012 was 9,524 (281 per 100,000 of national population). 64.5% of prisoners had yet to receive a trial according to 2014 estimates by the International Centre for Prison Studies. In 2015 the World Justice Project Rule of Law Index, which provides data on how the rule of law is experienced by the general public across eight categories, ranked Uruguay 36th of 102 countries for criminal justice and 17th for civil justice.

Education

Adult literacy in 2006 was 98.3% (male, 97.6%; female, 98.6%). The female literacy rate is the second highest in South America, behind Chile. Primary education is obligatory; both primary and secondary education are free. In 2007 there were 122,089 pupils in pre-primary schools with 5,220 teaching staff, 359,439 primary school pupils with 23,175 teaching staff and at secondary level there were 294,852 pupils and 21,369 teaching staff.

There is one state university, one independent Roman Catholic university and one private institute of technology. In 2007 there were 158,841 students and 15,789 academic staff in tertiary education.

In 2006 public expenditure on education came to 3.0% of GNI and represented 11.6% of total government expenditure.

Health

In 2003 there were 13,071 physicians, 4,154 dentists, 3,118 nurses, 1,323 pharmacists and 572 midwives. There were 107 hospitals with 6,661 beds.

Welfare

The welfare state dates from the beginning of the 1900s. In 2013 there were 0.8m. recipients of pensions and benefits monthly. In Oct. 2013 the minimum monthly old-age pension was increased to 6,170 pesos. There is a mixed social insurance and individual account system (compulsory for employed and self-employed persons born after 1 April 1956 with monthly earnings greater than 31,618 pesos and optional for those with monthly earnings of 31,618 pesos or less) with a maximum monthly pension in 2013 of 26,085 pesos. A social insurance system only that covers all others had a maximum monthly pension in 2013 of 38,574 pesos.

RELIGION

State and Church are separate, and there is complete religious liberty. According to estimates by the Pew Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life, in 2010 the population was 57.9% Christian (mainly Catholics) with 40.7% not having any religious affiliation. In Feb. 2016 there was one cardinal.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Uruguay has two sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the Historic Quarter of the City of Colonia del Sacramento (inscribed on the list in 1995), founded in 1680 by the Portuguese; and Fray Bentos Industrial Landscape (inscribed on the list in 2015), a site that illustrates the whole process of meat sourcing, processing, packing and dispatching.

Press

In 2008 there were 34 paid-for dailies with an average circulation of 145,000. The newspaper with the highest circulation is El País, which sold a daily average of 46,000 copies in 2008.

Tourism

There were 2,857,000 international tourist arrivals—excluding same-day visitors—in 2011 (2,349,000 in 2010). Receipts from tourism in 2011 totalled US$2,203m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Evidence of human settlement from at least 2200 BC is believed to be that of the Oxus civilization which extended across central Asia from Turkmenistan to Tajikistan. The region came under the influence of the first Persian Empire, centred on Persepolis, from around 550 BC when it was known as Sogdiana. Alexander the Great conquered Sogdiana and the ancient Greek kingdom of Bactria in 327 BC, marrying Roxane, daughter of a Sogdian chieftain.

Turkic nomads entered the area from the 5th century AD and control subsequently passed to Arabs, who introduced Islam to Transoxiana in the 8th century. The Persian Samanid dynasty, centred on the cities of Bukhara, Samarkand and Herat, held sway from around AD 875 for over a century, before falling to the Khara-Khanid Khanate.

Much of present-day Uzbekistan came under the control of Seljuk Turks from the 11th century. Led by Alp Arslan, they went on to conquer Georgia, Armenia, Syria and most of Anatolia. Khwarazm in northwest Uzbekistan gained independence from the Seljuks in the late 12th century, expanding westward as far as the Caspian Sea. Genghis Khan's Mongol Hordes overran Central Asia from 1221 and retained power until the rise of Timur, who made his native Samarkand the capital of an empire that by 1405 stretched from western India to the Black Sea. The subsequent Timurid dynasty was ruled by Shahrukh and, from 1447, by Ulugh-beg. Located on the trade routes between Europe, Persia, India and China, the oasis cities of Samarkand, Bukhara and Tashkent became prosperous centres of culture and learning.

The Uzbeks were Turkic-speaking tribes who moved into the region from the steppes to the north of the Aral Sea from the early 16th century. They established separate principalities, notably the Emirate of Bukhara and the Khanates of Khiva and Kokand. The fall of the Timurid Empire presaged the gradual decline of the Central Asian trade routes, partly as a result of the opening of shipping lines between Western Europe and India and East Asia.

During the 1850s the Russian empire began to expand into central Asia. In 1865 Russian forces seized the city of Tashkent and a year later the Khanate of Kokand was dissolved and incorporated into the Governor-Generalship of Turkestan. The Khanate of Khiva and the Emirate of Bukhara became protectorates. Russian colonists, settling throughout Central Asia, developed the region's infrastructure while exploiting the abundant minerals and promoting the growth of cash crops such as cotton. There were periodic revolts against Russian rule, notably the Andizhan Uprising of 1898. The chaos surrounding the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917 precipitated the growth of an Uzbek guerrilla army, 'the Basmachis', although their efforts to establish a democratic republic were unsuccessful. In 1924 the Khorezm and Bukhara People's Republics were incorporated into the Uzbekistan Soviet Socialist Republic (SSR), which also included Tajikistan until it became a separate SSR in 1929. The Soviet period brought collectivization and rapid industrialization, particularly around the capital, Tashkent, leading to an influx of Russian migrant workers. Uzbekistan SSR became the primary cotton-producing region of the Soviet Union, although the large-scale diversion of rivers for irrigation had disastrous consequences for the Aral Sea, which lost two-thirds of its volume.

On 20 June 1990 the Supreme Soviet adopted a declaration of sovereignty, although the Communist Party, led by Islam Karimov, remained the only official political party. Following the collapse of the Soviet Union, Uzbekistan was declared an independent republic on 31 Aug. 1991. In Dec. 1991 Uzbekistan became a member of the Commonwealth of Independent States and Karimov was elected president by popular vote. He subsequently cracked down on political opponents, notably the Birlik party and the Islamic Renaissance Party, citing the need for 'stability'.

Bomb blasts in Tashkent, one of which almost killed the president in Feb. 1999, were blamed on extremists from the Islamist Movement of Uzbekistan (IMU), which operates largely in the Ferghana valley and aims to create a pan-Central Asian Islamic state. The IMU leader, Juma Namangoni, was reportedly killed in Aug. 2002. Nearly 50 people died in a series of bombings and shootings in March 2004, allegedly perpetrated by Islamic militants. Suicide bombers targeted the US and Israeli embassies in Tashkent in July 2004.

On 13 May 2005 several hundred demonstrators were killed in Andizhan after troops fired into a crowd protesting against the imprisonment of local businessmen. The USA joined calls for an international inquiry into the shootings. In Nov. 2005 the USA closed its military air base at Karshi-Khanabad which had been used for operations in Afghanistan.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Uzbekistan is bordered in the north by Kazakhstan, in the east by Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan, in the south by Afghanistan and in the west by Turkmenistan. Area, 444,103 sq. km (171,469 sq. miles), including 22,000 sq. km (8,500 sq. miles) of inland water. A census has not been held since 1989, when the population was 19,810,077. A 'mini-census' based on 10% of the population was conducted in April 2011 but there are no future plans for a full census. Estimate, Jan. 2014: 30,493,000, giving a density of density, 72 per sq. km. The vast majority of the population are Uzbeks, with small Tajik, Kazakh, Tatar and Russian minorities. In 2010, 63.8% of the population lived in rural areas.

The UN gave an estimated population for 2015 of 29.89m.

The areas and populations of the 12 regions, the Karakalpak Autonomous Republic (Karakalpakstan) and the city of Tashkent are as follows (Uzbek spellings in brackets):

Region	Area (in sq. km)	Population (2012 estimate)	Capital	Population (2009 estimate)
Andizhan (Andijon)	4,303	2,714,200	Andizhan	368,300
Bukhara (Bukhoro)	41,937	1,707,400	Bukhara	234,700
Dzhizak (Jizzakh)	21,179	1,186,600	Dzhizak	148,900
Ferghana (Farghona)	7,005	3,280,800	Ferghana	172,900
Khorezm (Khorazm)	6,464	1,629,100	Urgench (Urganch)	143,200

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was adopted on 8 Dec. 1992 stating that Uzbekistan is a pluralist democracy. The constitution restricts the president to standing for two five-year terms. In Jan. 2002 a referendum was held at which 91% of the electorate voted in favour of extending the presidential term from five to seven years. Voters were also in favour of changing from a single-chamber legislature to a bicameral parliament. Based on the constitution President Karimov's term of office that started in Jan. 2000 ended in Jan. 2007, but according to election law a vote must be held in Dec. of the year in which the president's term expires. Pro-Karimov legislators maintained that he was eligible to stand again in the Dec. 2007 elections as he had only served one seven-year term despite having been president since 1990.

Uzbekistan switched to a bicameral legislature in Jan. 2005 with the establishment of the 100-member Senate (with 16 members appointed by the president and 84 elected from the ranks of regional, district and city legislative councils). The lower house is the 150-member Oliy Majlis (Supreme Assembly). 135 seats are elected by popular vote for five-year terms and 15 are reserved for the Ecological Movement.

CURRENT LEADERS

Islam Abduganiyevich Karimov

Position

President

Introduction

Islam Karimov, a former Soviet official, has been president since Uzbekistan declared independence in 1990. His regime has been characterized by the suppression of domestic political and religious opposition, and his electoral victories have been questioned for their irregularities. Karimov has sought to build ties with the West, and won US favour for co-operation in the war against terrorism in the aftermath of the 11 Sept. 2001 attacks. However, reports of torture and other human rights violations, culminating in an alleged massacre of Uzbek civilians in Andizhan in May 2005, have provoked increasing international criticism of his regime. In Dec. 2007 he retained the presidency in an election widely condemned as undemocratic and constitutionally illegal, and was returned again for a further term in March 2015.

Early Life

Karimov was born on 30 Jan. 1938 in Samarkand. He qualified as a mechanical engineer at the Central Asian Polytechnical Institute and graduated in economics from the Tashkent Institute of National Economy. He then worked in Tashkent at farm machinery and aircraft plants. In 1966 he moved to the state planning committee of Uzbekistan, attaining the rank of vice-chairman.

In 1983 Karimov was appointed finance minister for Uzbekistan and three years later became deputy head of government, as well as chairman of the state planning committee. In 1989 he was named head of the Uzbek Communist Party. The following year Uzbekistan claimed sovereignty from the USSR and Karimov was chosen as president. Following the attempted coup against Mikhail Gorbachev in Moscow in 1991, Karimov declared full independence.

Career in Office

Against little organized opposition, Karimov dominated presidential elections and led Uzbekistan into the Commonwealth of Independent States. In 1992 he continued his campaign against domestic opposition, banning two leading parties—Birlik (Unity) and Erk (Freedom)—and imprisoning many members. In 1994 he agreed an economic integration treaty with Russia and signed a co-operation pact with Kazakhstan and Kyrgyzstan which was developed into a single economic community in 1996. In 1995 Karimov won a further five years in office by plebiscite.

In 1999 Tashkent was the scene of several car bombings which Karimov blamed on the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan (IMU). Government and IMU forces clashed several times, the culmination of growing tensions between the two sides since the mid-1990s. In the same year Karimov withdrew Uzbekistan from the CIS agreement on collective security, increasing the nation's isolation among Central Asian nations predominantly loyal to Moscow.

Karimov was re-elected to the presidency in 2000 with over 90% of the vote, although the electoral process was severely criticized by the international community, notably the opposition candidate's assertion that he himself would vote for Karimov. Following the 11 Sept. attacks in New York and Washington, Karimov permitted the USA to use Uzbek air bases for the war in Afghanistan. In the same year he signed up to the Shanghai Co-operation Society (with China, Russia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan), established to promote regional economic co-operation and fight religious and ethnic militancy.

In Jan. 2002 Karimov secured a constitutional change, accepted by referendum, extending the presidential term from five to seven years. His assistance in the US campaign in Afghanistan was meanwhile rewarded by US$160m. worth of aid from Washington. Also in 2002 a long-running border feud with Kazakhstan was settled.

In March 2004 a series of shootings and explosions in the Tashkent and Bukhara regions left dozens of people dead. Further bombings near the US and Israeli embassies and in the Prosecutor General's Office in Tashkent occurred in July. Karimov's government blamed Islamic militants. Then in May 2005 several hundred civilians, protesting against the trial of local businessmen accused of Islamic extremism, were reportedly killed by security forces in Andizhan. Unrest also spread to the towns of Paktabad and Kara Suu before troops reasserted government control. At the end of July, in a punitive response to international criticism of the massacre, Karimov gave the USA six months to close its military airbase in Uzbekistan. His relations with the European Union also became increasingly strained in the wake of the events in Andizhan and the subsequent convictions of those accused of instigating unrest. The EU imposed an arms embargo and a visa ban, and these sanctions were extended in 2006. Uzbekistan meanwhile sought to strengthen its military and economic co-operation with Russia.

In Dec. 2007 Karimov's re-election as president failed to meet democratic standards, according to international observers, and was condemned by opposition activists as a sham.

In late 2008 and early 2009 there was some improvement in relations with the West as Karimov allowed the USA and NATO to transport non-lethal supplies through Uzbekistan to their armed forces in Afghanistan and the EU eased sanctions despite continuing concerns about human rights. The EU's decision followed the release of some political prisoners and the abolition of the death penalty.

In mid-2009 two terrorist incidents in Andizhan and Khanabad were attributed to increasing Islamist militancy.

In Sept. 2012 Karimov warned of potential confrontations with neighbouring Tajikistan and Kyrgyzstan over their plans for large dam projects that he claimed would give the two countries unfair control of regional water resources.

In March 2013 the then 75-year-old Karimov was rumoured to have suffered a heart attack. This prompted speculation about potential successors, one of whom, his daughter Gulnara Karimova, was placed under house arrest and charged with corruption in 2014.

As in previous parliamentary elections, polling over two rounds in Dec. 2014 and Jan. 2015 returned only those political parties loyal to Karimov. At the presidential election of March 2015 he claimed over 90% of the vote to win a further term in office.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 12 months. Defence expenditure in 2010 totalled US$1,422m. (US$51 per capita), representing 3.7% of GDP.

Army

Personnel, 2011, 50,000. There are, in addition, paramilitary forces totalling up to 20,000.

Air Force

Personnel, 2011, 17,000. There were 135 combat-capable aircraft in operation (including Su-17s, Su-24s, Su-25s, Su-27s and MiG-29s) and 29 attack helicopters.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 19.5% of GDP in 2010, industry 35.4% and services 45.1%.

Overview

After the collapse of the Soviet Union, Uzbekistan embarked on a cautious economic reform. There is heavy dependence on state controls and planning, foreign exchange and trade restrictions and public investments aimed at achieving import-substitution industrialization and self-sufficiency in food and energy.

Heavily populated river valleys are intensely cultivated and irrigated. The land is rich in natural resources and primary commodities (cotton, gold, copper, energy resources and precious stones) account for the majority of exports. Uzbekistan is the world's second largest cotton exporter behind the USA. In recent years strong cotton and gold prices, with growing exports of natural gas and manufactured products, have strengthened the economy and its external financial position. Agriculture accounted for 18% of GDP in 2011, down from a third in the early 1990s. The business climate is gradually opening up, with the government planning to finance up to two-thirds of investment through external sources. Small and medium-sized private enterprises accounted for 53% of GDP growth in 2012.

The country receives significant remittances from citizens who work abroad, primarily in Russia and Kazakhstan. Uzbekistan has increasingly looked towards Russia, China and other central Asian countries to build economic links. The Central Asia–China pipeline that has opened in stages since 2009 is expected to secure higher long-term gas transit revenues, although regional tensions threaten security.

Economic growth averaged 4.0% from 1996 to 2003, rising to 8.4% between 2008 and 2012. Uzbekistan's limited exposure to financial markets largely shielded it from the global economic downturn although there was a 30% decline in remittances in 2009. The government aims to achieve upper-middle-income status by 2030 based on an increasingly more market-oriented economy.

Currency

A coupon for a new unit of currency, the soum (UZS), was introduced alongside the rouble on 15 Nov. 1993. This was replaced by the soum proper at 1 soum = 1,000 coupons on 1 July 1994. In 1994 inflation was 1,568%, but it reached more stable levels of 11.2% in 2013 and 8.4% in 2014.

Budget

In 2012 budgetary central government revenue amounted to 12,610bn. soums and expenditure to 10,837bn. soums.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 8.2% in 2012, 8.0% in 2013 and 8.1% in 2014. Total GDP in 2014 was US$62.6bn.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank is the bank of issue (Chairman, Faizulla Mullajanov). In 2015 there were 26 commercial banks, of which eight were privately owned. In 2010 foreign debt amounted to US$7,404m., equivalent to 19.0% of GNI.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Irrigation of arid areas has caused the drying up of the Aral Sea. Uzbekistan's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy in 2011 were the equivalent of 4.2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was an estimated 12.4m. kW in 2011. Production was 52.4bn. kWh in 2011 and consumption per capita 1,858 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Oil production was 3.2m. tonnes in 2012; natural gas output was 56.9bn. cu. metres. In 2012 there were proven oil reserves of 0.6bn. bbls and natural gas reserves of 1.1trn. cu. metres.

Minerals

Lignite production in 2011 was 3.78m. tonnes. In 2010 an estimated 90 tonnes of gold and 59 tonnes of silver were produced. There are also large reserves of uranium, copper, lead, zinc and tungsten; all uranium mined (an estimated 2,500 tonnes in 2011) is exported.

Agriculture

Farming is intensive and based on irrigation. In 2002 there were 4.48m. ha. of arable land and 0.34m. ha. of permanent cropland. Approximately 4.28m. ha. were irrigated in 2002.

Output of main agricultural products (2003, in 1,000 tonnes): wheat, 5,331; seed cotton, 2,856; cottonseed, 1,720; tomatoes, 1,100; cotton lint, 946; cabbage, 900; potatoes, 760; grapes, 510; apples, 503; watermelons, 460; rice, 311; cucumbers and gherkins, 300. Livestock, 2003 estimates: 8.2m. sheep; 5.4m. cattle; 820,000 goats; 14m. chickens. Livestock products, 2003 estimates (in 1,000 tonnes): meat, 508; milk, 3,790; eggs, 83.

Forestry

In 2010 the area under forests was 3.28m. ha., accounting for 8% of the total land area. In 2011, 30,000 cu. metres of timber were produced.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2009 was 6,051 tonnes, exclusively freshwater fish.

INDUSTRY

Major industries include fertilizers, agricultural and textile machinery, aircraft, metallurgy, chemicals, food processing, building materials and the manufacture of textiles. Industrial production grew by 4.2% in 2012.

Labour

The labour force in 2013 was 13,303,000 (10,084,000 in 2003). 64.7% of the population aged 15–64 was economically active in 2013. In the same year 10.8% of the population was unemployed.

Uzbekistan had 0.17m. people living in slavery according to the Walk Free Foundation's 2013 Global Slavery Index.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2008 imports were valued at US$7,504m. and exports at US$11,573m. Principal imports, 2002, were machinery and equipment, 41.4%; chemicals and chemical products, 15.1%; foodstuffs, 12.5%; ferro and non-ferro metals, 8.0%.

The main import sources in 2002 were Russia (20.5%), South Korea (17.4%), Germany (8.9%) and Kazakhstan (7.5%). Principal export markets in 2002 were Russia (17.3%), Ukraine (10.2%), Italy (8.3%) and Tajikistan (7.8%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Length of roads, 2005, was 84,400 km (85% paved).

Rail

The total length of railway in 2011 was 4,258 km of 1,520 mm gauge (727 km electrified). In 2011, 16.0m. passengers and 80.9m. tonnes of freight were carried. There is a metro in Tashkent.

Civil Aviation

The main international airport is in Tashkent (Vostochny). Andizhan, Namangan and Samarkand also have airports. The national carrier is the state-owned Uzbekistan Airways, which in 2003 operated domestic services and flew to Almaty, Amritsar, Ashgabat, Athens, Baku, Bangkok, Beijing, Birmingham, Bishkek, Chelyabinsk, Delhi, Dhaka, Ekaterinburg, Frankfurt, Istanbul, Kazan, Khabarovsk, Krasnodar, Krasnoyarsk, Kuala Lumpur, Kyiv, London, Mineralnye Vody, Moscow, New York, Novosibirsk, Omsk, Osaka, Paris, Rome, Rostov, St Petersburg, Samara, Seoul, Sharjah, Simferopol, Tel Aviv, Tokyo, Tyumen and Ufa. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Uzbekistan-based carriers flew 40m. km, carrying 1,466,000 passengers (1,048,000 on international flights). In 2001 Tashkent handled 1,387,000 passengers (884,000 on international flights) and 36,200 tonnes of freight.

Telecommunications

In 2012 there were 1,980,000 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscriptions numbered 20,274,000 in the same year (710.3 per 1,000 persons). In 2013 an estimated 38.2% of the population were internet users. In March 2012 there were 129,000 Facebook users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The upper level of the judicial system comprises the Constitutional Court, the Supreme Court and the High Economic Court. Lower court systems exist at the regional, district and town levels. The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2012 was approximately 42,000 (152 per 100,000 of national population). The death penalty, last used in 2005, was abolished in Jan. 2008. Uzbekistan was ranked 49th of 102 countries for criminal justice and 66th for civil justice in the 2015 World Justice Project Rule of Law Index, which provides data on how the rule of law is experienced by the general public across eight categories.

Education

In 2007 there were 562,000 pre-primary pupils with 60,642 teaching staff, 2-16m. primary pupils with 118,676 teaching staff and 4-60m. secondary pupils with 352,001 teaching staff. There were 288,550 students and 23,354 academic staff in tertiary education in 2007. There are universities and medical schools in Tashkent and Samarkand. Adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 99.3% (99.6% among males and 99.1% among females).

Health

In 2005 there were 52 hospital beds per 10,000 population and 70,564 physicians, 5,194 dentistry personnel and 290,162 nursing and midwifery personnel.

Welfare

There is a statutory pension system consisting of two pillars: a public pay-as-you-go defined-benefit pension scheme and (since 2005) a mandatory public funded defined-contribution scheme. The larger pay-as-you-go pillar provides income to approximately 2.8m. people.

RELIGION

In 2010 an estimated 96.7% of the population were Muslims (mainly Sunnis) according to the Pew Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life, with 2.3% Christians.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Uzbekistan has four sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Itchan Kala (inscribed on the list in 1990); the Historic Centre of Bukhara (1993); the Historic Centre of Shakhrisyabz (2000); and Samarkand—Crossroads of Cultures (2001).

Press

In 2008 there were four paid-for daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 30,000.

Tourism

There were 975,000 non-resident tourist arrivals in 2010 (1,215,000 in 2009), excluding same-day visitors.

Karakalpak Autonomous Republic (Karakalpakstan)

Area, 166,600 sq. km (64,320 sq. miles); population (2012 estimate), 1,692,800. Capital, Nukus (2009 estimate, 241,300). The Karakalpaks (Qoraqalpoghs) came under Russian rule in the second half of the 19th century. On 11 May 1925 the territory was constituted within the then Kazakh Autonomous Republic (of the Russian Federation) as an Autonomous Region. On 20 March 1932 it became an Autonomous Republic within the Russian Federation, and on 5 Dec. 1936 it became part of the Uzbek SSR. The main ethnic groups are Qoraqalpoghs, Uzbeks and Kazakhs.

Its manufactures are in the field of light industry—bricks, leather goods, furniture, canning and wine. The principal crops are rice and cotton.

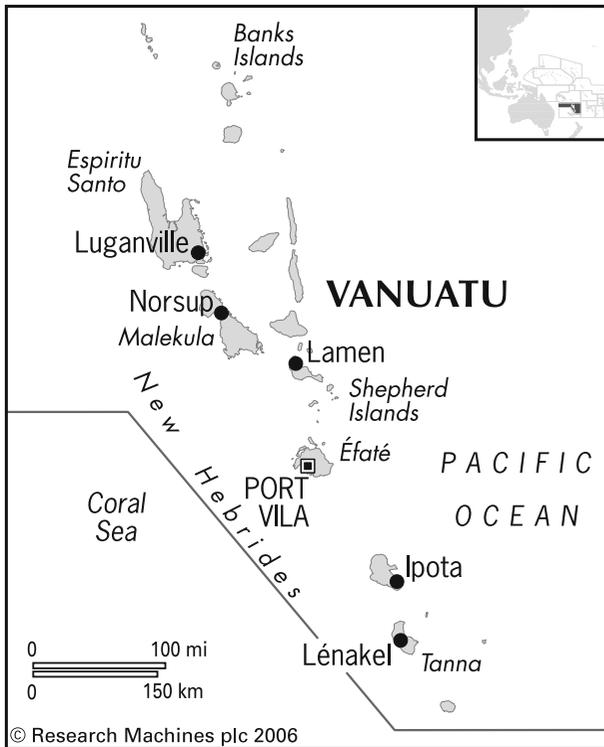

The shrinking of the Aral Sea has had a detrimental effect on agriculture and public health in the region. In 2002 the incidence of poverty was 36.4%, compared to 9.2% in Tashkent, the Uzbek capital. Estimates place unemployment at around the 70% mark.

In 2004–05 there were 6,800 students at Karakalpak State University. There is a branch of the Uzbek Academy of Sciences.

Total spending on health care in 2002 was US$10m., or US$6.50 per capita.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Vanuatu occupies the group of islands formerly known as the New Hebrides, in the southwestern Pacific Ocean. Capt. Bligh and his companions, cast adrift by the Bounty mutineers, sailed through part of the island group in 1789. Sandalwood merchants and European missionaries came to the islands in the mid-19th century and were then followed by cotton planters—mostly French and British—in 1868. In response to Australian calls to annex the islands, Britain and France agreed on joint supervision. Joint sovereignty was held over the indigenous Melanesian people but each nation retained responsibility for its own nationals according to a protocol of 1914. The island group escaped Japanese invasion during the Second World War and became an Allied base. On 30 July 1980 New Hebrides became an independent nation under the name of Vanuatu, meaning 'Our Land Forever'.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Vanuatu comprises 83 islands (65 of which are inhabited), which lie roughly 800 km west of Fiji and 400 km northeast of New Caledonia. The estimated land area is 12,190 sq. km (4,706 sq. miles). The larger islands of the group are: (Espiritu) Santo, Deputy Prime Minister, and Minister of Tourism, Trade, Commerce and ni-Vanuatu Business: Joe Natuman.

Charlot Salwai

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Charlot Salwai, a Francophone economist and politician, was elected prime minister by parliament at the head of a coalition government in Feb. 2016.

Early Life

A member of the French-speaking minority, Salwai was born on Pentecost Island. Having qualified as an accountant, he worked for a national development bank between 1988 and 1990. He then became private secretary to the then prime minister, Maxime Carlot Korman, until 1995, before taking up a variety of governmental and advisory positions.

He was initially elected to parliament in 2002 for the Pentecost constituency, and was returned again in 2004, 2008, 2012 and 2016. Over this period he variously served as minister for trade and industry, lands and natural resources, education, finance and economic management, and internal affairs. In 2012 he founded a political party, the Reunification of Movements for Change.

Career in Office

On 11 Feb. 2016 Salwai was elected prime minister, leading the Unity for Change coalition bloc comprising some ten political parties. His appointment resulted from a snap election held in Jan. 2016 following the dissolution of parliament in Nov. 2015 after numerous politicians were convicted of bribery.

Salwai is the third parliamentary representative from Pentecost to be premier since Vanuatu's independence in 1980. With two-thirds of parliament's members being newly elected, he has claimed that the people of Vanuatu have 'voted for change'. He has emphasized the need for national unity and has pledged to champion several infrastructure development projects. He must also tackle the damage wrought by a storm in March 2015 that destroyed many homes and crops.

DEFENCE

Vanuatu does not have an army but there is a Vanuatu Police Force and a paramilitary Vanuatu Mobile Force.

ECONOMY

In 2011 agriculture accounted for 25.2% of GDP, industry 10.7% and services 64.1%.

Overview

The largest economic sectors are agriculture, fishing, offshore financial services and tourism. Efforts have been made to boost tourism by improving air connections and cruise ship facilities. The export base is narrow, consisting mainly of copra, beef, cocoa, timber and coffee. Remittances from seasonal workers in New Zealand are the country's second largest foreign exchange earner. Australia and New Zealand are also the source of foreign aid.

GDP grew at over 5% per year between 2005 and 2008 and even reached 3.5% in 2009 at the height of the global financial crisis. Growth was particularly strong in telecommunications, agriculture and the hospitality sector. Public debt amounts to 21.5% of GDP.

Currency

The unit of currency is the vatu (VUV) with no minor unit. There was inflation in 2013 of 1.3% and 1.0% in 2014. Foreign exchange reserves in July 2005 were US$60m. and total money supply was 14,373m. vatu.

Budget

In 2010 (provisional) budgetary central government revenues totalled 16,715m. vatu (including taxes, 10,526m. vatu) and expenditures 15,109m. vatu (including compensation of employees, 7,831m. vatu).

VAT is 12.5%.

Performance

Vanuatu experienced a two-year recession in 2001 and 2002, when the economy contracted by 3.5% and 4.4% respectively. The economy has since recovered, and although it has slowed there were still GDP growth rates of 1.8% in 2012, 2.0% in 2013 and 2.3% in 2014. Total GDP in 2014 was US$0.8bn.

Banking and Finance

The Reserve Bank of Vanuatu (Governor, Simeon Athy) is the central bank and bank of issue. There is also the state-owned National Bank, plus three other banks—ANZ Bank Ltd, Westpac Banking Corp. and BRED. Total assets and liabilities of commercial banks at 31 Dec. 2009 were 80,527m. vatu.

External debt totalled US$148m. in 2010 and represented 20.9% of GNI.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Vanuatu's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy in 2011 were the equivalent of 0.6 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Electrical capacity in 2011 was 31,000 kW. Production in 2011 was about 68m. kWh and consumption per capita an estimated 280 kWh.

Agriculture

About 65% of the labour force are employed in agriculture. In 2007 there were approximately 20,000 ha. of arable land and 85,000 ha. of permanent crops. The main commercial crops are copra, coconuts, cocoa and coffee. Production (2003 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): coconuts, 206; copra, 23; bananas, 14; groundnuts, 2. 80% of the population are engaged in subsistence agriculture; yams, taro, cassava, sweet potatoes and bananas are grown for local consumption.

Livestock (2003 estimates): cattle, 130,000; pigs, 62,000; goats, 12,000; horses, 3,000.

Forestry

There were 0.44m. ha. of forest in 2010 (36% of the land area). In 2011, 119,000 cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries

Fish landings in 2010 totalled 97,807 tonnes. The principal catch is tuna.

INDUSTRY

Principal industries include copra processing, meat canning and fish freezing, a saw-mill, soft drinks factories and a print works.

In 2011 industry accounted for 10.7% of GDP, with manufacturing contributing 4.8%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Merchandise imports in 2011 totalled US$280.6m. (US$276.0m. in 2010) and merchandise exports US$63.5m. (US$46.2m. in 2010).

Principal imports in 2011 were food, animals and beverages (24.5%), machinery and transport equipment, and mineral fuels and lubricants; main exports in 2011 were crude materials and animal and vegetable oils (49.4%), food, animals and beverages, and chemicals.

In 2007 the main import suppliers were Australia, New Zealand, Singapore, Fiji and China. The main export destinations were the Philippines, New Caledonia, Fiji, Japan and Singapore.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2002 there were 1,070 km of roads, about 260 km paved, mostly on Efate Island and Espiritu Santo. There were estimated to be 8,200 passenger cars and 2,100 commercial vehicles in use in 2002.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Bauerfield Port Vila. In 2003 the state-owned Air Vanuatu flew to Auckland, Brisbane, Honiara, Nadi, Nouméa and Sydney. Domestic services were provided by Vanair, a subsidiary of Air Vanuatu. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Vanuatu-based carriers flew 3m. km, carrying 83,000 passengers (all on international flights).

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 57 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 1.41m. GT. Vanuatu is a 'flag of convenience' country. The chief ports are Port Vila and Santo.

Telecommunications

In 2012 there were 4,800 main (fixed) telephone lines; active mobile phone subscriptions numbered 146,000 in the same year (590.8 per 1,000 persons). In 2013 an estimated 11.3% of the population were internet users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The legal system is based on British common law and French civil law. There is a Supreme Court with a Chief Justice and a Magistrates Court.

The death penalty was abolished in 1980. The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2012 was 194 (76 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

In 2006 there were 1,316 pupils with 111 teaching staff in pre-primary schools. There were 38,000 pupils in primary schools in 2007 with 2,000 teaching staff, and 18,000 pupils in secondary schools in 2009. There is a campus of the University of the South Pacific at Port Vila and a Vanuatu Institute of Technology. The adult literacy rate in 2009 was an estimated 82.0%. In 2009 public expenditure on education came to 5.0% of GDP.

Health

There were 30 physicians and 360 nursing and midwifery personnel in 2004; and 41 hospital beds per 10,000 population in 2005.

RELIGION

In 2010 an estimated 93.3% of the population were Christians (mainly Protestants) and 4.1% folk religionists according to the Pew Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Vanuatu has one site on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Chief Roi Mata's Domain (inscribed on the list in 2008), three sites on the islands of Efate, Lelepa and Artok that contain the chief's residence and burial chamber.

Press

In 2008 there was one daily newspaper (the Vanuatu Daily Post) with a circulation of 3,000.

Tourism

In 2011 there were a record 248,898 non-resident visitor arrivals (154,938 by cruise ship and 93,960 by air), up from 237,648 in 2010 and 225,452 in 2009.

VATICAN CITY STATE

Stato della Città del Vaticano

Population estimate, 2011: 800

Internet domain extension: .va

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Ager Vaticanus was the name given to a marshy area to the west of the city of Rome, close to the river Tiber. Uninhabited for much of Rome's long history, the area was developed with villas and gardens during the first century, when the city expanded. At the peak of imperial power in the second century, Rome's population was estimated to have reached 1.6m.

Christian tradition holds that Saint Peter was crucified in Rome in AD 64 during a wave of Christian persecution ordered by Emperor Nero. Pilgrims flocked to his tomb, which, during the 4th century, became the centerpiece of a basilica commissioned by Emperor Constantine I. Constantine legalized Christianity in the Roman Empire in 313. A palace was constructed near the basilica early in the 5th century, during the pontificate of Pope Symmachus, although the Lateran Palace in southeast Rome served as the main papal residence for many centuries.

During the 7th century, as Byzantine power weakened across the Italian peninsula, the papacy—a major landowner—increasingly held sway over land beyond Rome. By 781 the pope had become temporal sovereign of territory (known as the Papal States) including Ravenna, the Duchy of the Pentapolis, parts of the Duchy of Benevento, Corsica, Lombardy, Tuscany and several Italian cities.

The papal court moved to Avignon in 1309, precipitated by a feud between Pope Boniface VIII and Philip IV of France. When Pope Gregory XI returned to Rome in 1377 his court took up residence at the Vatican, which remained the papal seat for the next two centuries. Plans to redevelop St Peter's basilica were drawn up in the mid-15th century but work did not begin until 1506, under Pope Julius II. The monumental new basilica—still the biggest church in Christendom—took 120 years to complete under the guidance of several designers and Renaissance masters, including Michelangelo.

When Rome was captured by Piedmont-led forces in 1871 and declared the capital of the Kingdom of Italy, papal temporal power was brought to an end. The Quirinale Palace, the papal residence since 1583, was confiscated and made the royal palace. Since then, popes have resided in the Vatican. On 11 Feb. 1929 a treaty with the Italian government recognized the sovereignty of the Holy See in the city of the Vatican. Both German and Allied forces respected the Vatican's neutrality during the Second World War.

In 1978 Karol Wojtyła, a Pole, was elected pope (taking the name John Paul II), becoming the first non-Italian to hold the position since 1523. When he died in 2005, he was succeeded by the German-born Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger (Pope Benedict XVI), who in 2013 became the first pope to resign the office since 1415. An Argentine cardinal, Jorge Bergoglio was elected next, adopting the papal name Francis. The first Latin American to be pope, he has faced the task of uniting a church beset by corruption and sexual abuse scandals and been confronted by a number of key doctrinal debates regarding the role of women in the church, the use of contraception and attitudes to same-sex marriage.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the Vatican City is 44 ha. or 0.44 sq. km (108.7 acres or 0.17 sq. miles), making it the smallest independent country in the world. It includes the Piazza di San Pietro (St Peter's Square), which is to remain normally open to the public and subject to the powers of the Italian police. It has its own railway station (for freight only), postal facilities, coins and radio. Twelve buildings in and outside Rome enjoy extra-territorial rights, including the Basilicas of St John Lateran, St Mary Major and St Paul without the Walls, the Pope's summer villa at Castel Gandolfo and a further Vatican radio station on Italian soil. Radio Vaticana broadcasts an extensive service in 40 languages from the transmitters in Vatican City and in Italy. The Holy See and the Vatican are not synonymous—the Holy See, referring to the primacy of the Pope, is located in Vatican City. The de facto official language is Latin.

Vatican City had about 800 inhabitants in 2011.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Vatican City State is governed by a Commission appointed by the Pope. The reason for its existence is to provide an extra-territorial, independent base for the Holy See, the government of the Roman Catholic Church. The Pope exercises sovereignty and has absolute legislative, executive and judicial powers. The judicial power is delegated to a tribunal in the first instance, to the Sacred Roman Rota in appeal and to the Supreme Tribunal of the Signature in final appeal.

A new Fundamental Law was promulgated by Pope John Paul II on 26 Nov. 2000 and became effective on 22 Feb. 2001; this replaced the first Fundamental Law of 1929. The Pope is elected by the College of Cardinals, meeting in secret conclave. The election is by scrutiny and requires a two-thirds majority.

CURRENT LEADERS

Pope Francis

Introduction

Jorge Bergoglio became Pope Francis after being elected head of the Roman Catholic Church on 13 March 2013 following the resignation of Benedict XVI. He is the first pope from Latin America and the first Jesuit to hold the post. Seen as an outsider untarnished by the internal power struggles within the Curia and free from the taint of association with the Church's sex abuse scandals, he is known for his austerity. Bergoglio chose his papal name in honour of St Francis of Assisi, famous for his pledge of poverty and humility.

Early Life

Jorge Mario Bergoglio was born in the Flores district of Buenos Aires on 17 Dec. 1936 to Italian immigrant parents. Having completed a high school diploma in chemistry, in 1955 he enrolled at the Inmaculada Concepción seminary in Buenos Aires. In March 1958 he joined the Society of Jesus (Jesuits) as a novice. In 1960 he graduated in philosophy from the Colegio Máximo San José.

On 13 Dec. 1969 Bergoglio was ordained as a priest. He completed his tertianship, a required period of strict discipline undertaken by Jesuits, at Alcalá de Henares in Spain and took his final vows on 22 April 1973. He served as the Jesuit Provincial Superior for Argentina from 1973–79 and as rector of the philosophical and theological faculty at the Jesuit University in San Miguel from 1980–86.

Bergoglio was appointed titular Bishop of Auca and Auxiliary of Buenos Aires in May 1992. In Feb. 1998 he became Archbishop of Buenos Aires. During his tenure, Bergoglio became known for his work with the poor and his tense relationship with the governments of Néstor Kirchner and Cristina Fernández de Kirchner, which championed liberal social measures including same-sex marriage. On 21 Feb. 2001 Bergoglio was proclaimed a Cardinal by John Paul II and at the 2005 conclave was regarded as a frontrunner for the papacy that eventually fell to Joseph Ratzinger. After Ratzinger resigned on 28 Feb. 2013, Bergoglio was elected his successor in the fifth ballot of the conclave.

Career in Office

Bergoglio's election was popularly received but his papacy has coincided with troubled times for the Church, including dwindling congregations and sex abuse and corruption scandals involving Catholic clergy and Vatican officials. He must also contend with the question of the role of women within the Church and clarify the Vatican's position on other social debates. At the end of 2014 he criticized obstructiveness within the Vatican bureaucracy and the Curia towards reform.

In 2015 and early 2016 Bergoglio made a series of observations and appeals on major global issues. In June he wrote an encyclical calling for international action to address environmental degradation and climate change, for which he blamed apathy, the reckless pursuit of profit and political shortsightedness. In Aug., commenting on the escalating influx into the European Union of refugees mainly from the Middle East and Africa, he branded the rejection of migrants fleeing violence 'an act of war'. In Jan. 2016, while acknowledging that Europe was struggling to deal with the unprecedented flow, he insisted that the continent had the capacity to absorb the refugees without sacrificing its security or culture. He also denounced all religiously-inspired violence.

In Nov. 2015 Bergoglio became the first pontiff in recent history to visit a war zone when he arrived in the Central African Republic, declaring himself 'a pilgrim of peace and an apostle of hope'.

ECONOMY

Overview

The economy is supported by voluntary donations (known as 'Peter's Pence') from Roman Catholics across the world, the sale of tourist souvenirs, admission fees to museums and publication sales. Other sources of income include investments in bonds and currencies, plus income from real estate. Amid the global economic downturn, 'Peter's Pence' donations fell from US$79.8m. in 2007 to US$67.7m. in 2010. However, in 2011 donations rose by 3% to US$69.7m.

The Vatican Bank, officially called the Institute for the Works of Religion (IOR), was established in 1942 and is used by Vatican agencies, church organizations, bishops and religious orders around the world. It offers currency exchange services and interest-bearing accounts, and has an investment portfolio. The Bank's surplus is used for charitable purposes, including disaster relief and the support of churches in the developing world.

In Sept. 2010 Italian treasury police investigated the then president of the IOR for money-laundering. In Dec. that year measures to bring the Bank into line with international standards on transparency were established by Pope Benedict XVI, and have been continued by his successor, Pope Francis, who ordered a fresh banking enquiry in 2013. Between May 2013 and May 2014 the Bank closed 544 accounts that did not meet new standards for clients. In 2014 it reported net profits of €69.3m. (US$76.1m.), more than 20 times the previous year's figure.

Currency

Since 1 Jan. 2002 the Vatican City has been using the euro (EUR). Italy has agreed that the Vatican City may mint a small part of the total Italian euro coin contingent with their own motifs.

Budget

Revenues in 2006 were €227.8m. and expenditures €225.4m.

COMMUNICATIONS

Civil Aviation

The Vatican inaugurated a charter flight service with Mistral Air in 2007 to fly pilgrims to holy sites across the world.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

In 2006 the Vatican City's legal system hosted 341 civil cases and 486 criminal cases. Most of the offences are committed by outsiders, principally at St Peter's Basilica and the museums.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

As the Vicar of Christ and the Successor of St Peter, the Pope is held to be by divine right the centre of all Catholic unity and exercises universal governance over the Church. He is also the sovereign ruler of Vatican City State. He has for advisers the Sacred College of Cardinals, consisting in March 2016 of 215 cardinals from 72 countries (one created by Pope Paul VI, 96 created by Pope John Paul II, 79 created by Pope Benedict XVI and 39 created by Pope Francis), of whom 116 are cardinal electors—those under the age of 80 who may enter into conclave to elect a new Pope. Cardinals, addressed by the title of 'Eminence', are appointed by the Pope from senior ecclesiastics who are either the bishops of important Sees or the heads of departments at the Roman Curia. In addition to the College of Cardinals, there is a Synod of Bishops, created by Pope Paul VI and formally instituted on 15 Sept. 1965. This consists of the Patriarchs and certain Metropolitans of the Catholic Church of Oriental Rite, of elected representatives of the national episcopal conferences and religious orders of the world, of the cardinals in charge of the Roman Congregations and of other persons nominated by the Pope. The Synod meets in both general (global) and special (regional) assemblies.

The central administration of the Roman Catholic Church is carried out by permanent organisms called Congregations, Council, Commissions and Offices. The Congregations are composed of cardinals and diocesan bishops (both appointed for five-year periods), with Consultors and Officials. There are nine Congregations, viz.: Doctrine, Oriental Churches, Bishops, the Sacraments and Divine Worship, Clergy, Religious, Catholic Education, Evangelization of the Peoples and Causes of the Saints. Pontifical Councils have replaced some of the previously designated Secretariats and Prefectures and now represent the Laity, Christian Unity, the Family, Justice and Peace, Cor Unum, Migrants, Health Care Workers, Interpretation of Legislative Texts, Inter-Religious Dialogue, Culture, Preserving the Patrimony of Art and History, and a Commission for Latin America.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

The Holy See has two sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Vatican City (inscribed on the list in 1984)—the centre of the Roman Catholic Church, it contains some of the greatest pieces of European art and architecture, including St Peter's Basilica.

The Historic Centre of Rome, the properties of the Holy See in that city enjoying extraterritorial rights (inscribed on the list in 1980 and 1990), is shared with Italy.

Press

In 2008 there was one daily evening paper, L'Osservatore Romano.

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES

In its diplomatic relations with foreign countries the Holy See is represented by the Secretariat of State and the Second Section (Relations with States) of the Council for Public Affairs of the Church. It maintains permanent observers to the UN.

VENEZUELA

Páez was succeeded by José Tadeo Monagas and then by his brother, José Gregorio Monagas, who governed Venezuela until he was overthrown in 1858. Gen. Antonio Guzmán Blanco came to power in the April Revolution of 1870 and dominated politics for the next 18 years. He improved education, modernized the country's infrastructure and forced the separation of church and state. Blanco's autocratic rule was followed by the dictatorships of Joaquín Crespo (1892–98) and Cipriano Castro (1899–1908). Castro's corrupt and inefficient administration led to civil strife and, in 1902, to a major international incident known as the Venezuela Claims when Great Britain, Germany and Italy dispatched a joint naval force to Venezuela to seek redress for unpaid loans.

The brutal dictatorship of Juan Vicente Gómez began in Dec. 1908 when he seized power from the ailing Castro. Gómez's tyrannical regime, which endured until his death in 1935 did, however, develop the nation's oil industry. The election of Isaías Medina Angarita as president on 28 April 1941 led to the re-establishment of political parties, including Acción Democrática (AD), founded in Sept. 1941. In 1945 a three-day revolt against the government of Gen. Isaías Medina led to constitutional and economic reforms. In 1947 the writer Rómulo Gallegos was elected president but it was to be a short-lived democratic spell as the government was overthrown in a military coup in Nov. 1948 and the subsequent dictatorship of Marcos Jiménez lasted until 1958.

In 1961 a new constitution provided for a presidential election every five years, a national congress, and state and municipal legislative assemblies. Twenty political parties participated in the 1983 elections, with the economy in crisis and corruption linked to drug trafficking widespread. In Feb. 1992 there were two abortive coups and a state of emergency was declared. In Dec. 1993 Dr Rafael Caldera Rodríguez's election as president reflected disenchantment with the established political parties. He took office in the early stages of a banking crisis that cost 15% of GDP to resolve. Fiscal tightening backed by the IMF brought rapid recovery. Hugo Chávez Frias, who became president in Feb. 1999, continued with economic reforms and amended the constitution to increase presidential powers. The country was given a new name—the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela. In Dec. 1999 the north coast of Venezuela was hit by devastating floods and mudslides which resulted in 30,000 deaths.

President Chávez was deposed and arrested on 12 April 2002 in a coup following a general strike but was back in the presidential palace within 48 hours. Opposition pressure intensified in 2002 and 2003 with more protests, a prolonged general strike and an attempt to petition for a referendum on the president's rule. Chávez faced a referendum on 15 Aug. 2004 and emerged victorious. Having held power for 14 years, he died on 5 March 2013 from a heart attack and after a long battle with cancer. His 'socialist revolution' and opposition to US policies won him support domestically and from regional partners but his long-term legacy is uncertain. His death triggered a presidential election in April 2013, narrowly won by the then acting president, Nicolás Maduro.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Venezuela is bounded to the north by the Caribbean sea with a 2,813 km coastline, east by the Atlantic and Guyana, south by Brazil, and southwest and west by Colombia. The area is 916,445 sq. km (353,839 sq. miles) including 72 islands in the Caribbean. Population at the 2011 census was 27,227,930 (13,678,178 females and 13,549,752 males); density, 29.7 per sq. km. KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Present-day Venezuela was inhabited by hunter-gatherers from at least 3000 BC. The Arawaks and Carib lived mainly in the north and around the Orinoco river system. Christopher Columbus landed at Macuro with three Spanish ships on 5 Aug. 1498. A year later the area was explored by Alonso de Ojeda and Amerigo Vespucci. They named it Venezuela (Little Venice) after the indigenous villages built on stilts over water. Spanish settlements were established on the Caribbean coast from the early 16th century and ruled from Santo Domingo (Dominican Republic). Santiago de León de Caracas, founded in 1567, became the seat of the government of the province of Venezuela in 1578. Cocoa plantations developed slowly and much of the forested interior remained unexplored.

In 1717 Venezuela came under the Spanish Viceroyalty of New Granada, centred on Bogotá. In May 1795 rumblings of discontent over Spanish rule erupted into a revolt, led by José Leonardo Chirino who was inspired by the French Revolution. Francisco de Miranda and Simón Bolívar led further rebellions from 1805 and, following Napoleon's defeat of Spain, independence was declared in 1811. Spanish control was restored but the colonial power's defeat in the battle of Carabobo in June 1821 ensured that Venezuela became part of the federal republic of Greater Colombia. Gen. José Páez opposed the Colombian leadership and led revolts, culminating in a congress in 1830 that created a constitution for a new Republic of Venezuela and elected Páez the first president.

highest percentage of urban population in South America, with 93.4% living in urban areas in 2010.

The UN gave an estimated population for 2015 of 31.11m.

The official language is Spanish. English is taught as a mandatory second language in high schools.

37.3% of all Venezuelans are under 15 years of age, 58.7% are between the ages of 15 and 64, and 4.0% are over the age of 65.

Caracas, Venezuela's largest city, is the political, financial, commercial, communications and cultural centre of the country. Caracas had a population of 1,942,652 in 2011. Maracaibo, the nation's second largest city (2011 population of 1,898,770), is located near Venezuela's most important petroleum fields and richest agricultural areas. Other major cities are Valencia, Barquisimeto and Ciudad Guayana.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 births, 581,480; deaths, 124,062. 2008 birth rate per 1,000 population, 20.8; death rate, 4.4. Annual population growth rate, 2008–10, 1.6%. Life expectancy, 2013, was 71.7 years for males and 77.7 years for females. Infant mortality, 2010, 16 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 2.5 births per woman. In 2011 the most popular age for marrying was 25–29 for both men and women.

CLIMATE

The climate ranges from warm temperate to tropical. Temperatures vary little throughout the year and rainfall is plentiful. The dry season is from Dec. to April. The hottest months are July and Aug. Caracas, Jan. 65°F (18.3°C), July 69°F (20.6°C). Annual rainfall 32" (833 mm). Ciudad Bolívar, Jan. 79°F (26.1°C), July 81°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 41" (1,016 mm). Maracaibo, Jan. 81°F (27.2°C), July 85°F (29.4°C). Annual rainfall 23" (577 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution was approved in a referendum held on 15 Dec. 1999. Venezuela is a federal republic, comprising 23 states and one federal district, plus 235 islands and 75 islets and cays that constitute the federal dependencies. Executive power is vested in the President. The ministers, who together constitute the Council of Ministers, are appointed by the President and head various executive departments. There are 29 ministries.

92% of votes cast in a referendum (the first in Venezuela's history) on 25 April 1999 were in favour of the plan to rewrite the constitution proposed by then President Hugo Chávez. As a result, on 25 July the public was to elect a constitutional assembly to write a new constitution, which was subsequently to be voted on in a national referendum. In Aug. 1999 the constitutional assembly declared a national state of emergency. It subsequently suspended the Supreme Court, turned the elected Congress into little more than a sub-committee, stripping it of all its powers, and assumed many of the responsibilities of government. In Dec. 1999 Chávez's plan to redraft the constitution was approved by over 70% of voters in a referendum. Consequently presidents were able to serve two consecutive six-year-terms instead of terms of five years which could not be consecutive, the Senate was abolished and greater powers were given to the state and the armed forces. Chávez effectively took over both the executive and the judiciary. The constitution provides for procedures by which the president may reject bills passed by Congress, as well as provisions by which Congress may override such presidential veto acts. In Aug. 2007 Chávez presented a set of constitutional reforms, including an end to presidential term limits. The proposals were rejected in a national referendum held on 2 Dec. 2007, with 49% of votes cast in favour of the amendments to the constitution and 51% against. However, a referendum on 15 Feb. 2009 to abolish presidential term limits (and those of various other elected officials including National Assembly deputies) was approved with 54% of votes cast in favour and 46% against.

Since the Senate was dissolved under the constitution adopted in Dec. 1999 Venezuela has become a unicameral legislature, the 167-seat National Assembly, with members being elected for five-year terms.

RECENT ELECTIONS

A special presidential election was held on 14 April 2013 following the death of President Hugo Chávez Frías on 5 March. Nicolás Maduro (Great Patriotic Pole/GPP, led by the United Socialist Party of Venezuela/PSUV) was elected president with 50.7% of the vote, ahead of Henrique Capriles Radonski (Democratic Unity Roundtable/MUD) with 49.1%. There were five other candidates. Turnout was 78.7%. Capriles refused to accept the result and demanded a recount.

In elections to the Congress, held on 6 Dec. 2015, all 167 seats were contested. The opposition Unidad Democrática (Democratic Unity Roundtable, MUD) won 109 seats and the Partido Socialista Unido de Venezuela (United Socialist Party of Venezuela, PSUV) 55 with the remaining three seats reserved for indigenous peoples. Turnout was 74.2%.

President

Introduction

Nicolás Maduro took office as interim president on 5 March 2013 following the death of Hugo Chávez. He was confirmed in the role when he won the presidential election held on 14 April 2013. A long-time ally of Chávez, he served as his minister of foreign affairs for seven years. From Dec. 2015 he was faced with a hostile majority in parliament following the opposition's overwhelming victory in National Assembly elections.

Early Life

Nicolás Maduro was born on 23 Nov. 1962 in Caracas. The son of a prominent union leader, he was schooled in the capital city before becoming a bus driver. As a public transport workers' trade unionist, Maduro met Chávez in 1992 after the latter was imprisoned for his involvement in an attempted coup. Maduro campaigned for his release, meeting his future wife, Chávez's defence attorney Cilia Flores, in the process.

After Chávez was released in 1994, Maduro helped him establish the Movement for a Fifth Republic, the Bolivarian party that launched Chávez to the presidency in 1998. In the same year Maduro was elected to the Chamber of Deputies, the lower house of the old bicameral parliament. The following year a unicameral parliament was introduced, with Maduro appointed its Speaker in 2005. In Aug. 2006 he was named foreign minister, a position he held until March 2013. His tenure was characterized by the 'oil diplomacy' that saw Venezuela provide subsidized oil to neighbouring South American countries. He also attracted international attention by stating his support for Muammar Gaddafi's regime in Libya and promoted the creation of a union of emerging economies to counter US influence.

When Chávez won a third presidential term in Oct. 2012, he selected Maduro as his vice-president. In Dec. 2012 Chávez announced he was again suffering from cancer and named Maduro as his preferred successor. Chávez died in March 2013 and Maduro succeeded him on an interim basis. In the presidential election of 14 April 2013 Maduro took 50.7% of the vote, defeating Henrique Capriles, the candidate for a coalition of opposition groups.

Career in Office

In the aftermath of Chávez's death, Maduro publicly venerated his predecessor. He was expected to maintain Chávez's political line, while attempting to address a soaring crime rate and rebalance an economy over-reliant on oil and subject to high inflation. In Nov. 2013 the National Assembly granted Maduro special powers to rule by decree for a year, prompting opposition protests.

Any rapprochement with the USA was undermined by Maduro's suggestion that Chávez's cancer (first diagnosed in June 2011) was the result of an attack by 'historic enemies' of the country and also by his expulsion of several US diplomats during 2013.

Attempts to curb popular anti-government protests in Feb. and March 2014 led to the deaths of more than 40 people. Grievances over food shortages and rising crime rates nevertheless continued through 2014 and 2015 as the oil-based economy was undermined by the rapidly falling international oil price, prompting a deepening recession and the risk of a debt default. Reflecting rising popular discontent with the government, parliamentary elections in Dec. 2015 returned the opposition Unidad Democrática (Democratic Unity Roundtable) with an overall majority. In Jan. 2016 Maduro conducted a major cabinet reshuffle, appointing new economy and finance ministers. He also sought to declare a 60-day state of economic emergency to address the country's worsening crisis, but this was rejected by the National Assembly.

DEFENCE

There is a 30-month conscript service obligation. Defence expenditure totalled US$5,240m. in 2013 (US$184 per capita), representing 1.5% of GDP.

Army

The Army has one general command, one aviation command and one logistics command, six divisions (four infantry, one armoured and one cavalry) and one combat engineer corps. Equipment in 2011 included 116 main battle tanks. Strength (2011) around 63,000. There were an additional 8,000 reserves.

A 23,000-strong volunteer National Guard is responsible for internal security.

Navy

Strength (2011) around 17,500 (3,200 conscripts). The combatant fleet comprises two submarines and six frigates. Naval Aviation, 500 strong, operated three combat-capable aircraft in 2011.

Air Force

The Air Force was 11,500 strong in 2011 and had 99 combat-capable aircraft. Main aircraft types are Su-30s, F-16A/Bs, F-5s, JL-8s and Embraer EMB 312s.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In March 2008 Venezuela sent large numbers of troops to the border with Colombia. The action was in sympathy with Ecuador, whose border was violated when Colombian troops crossed it to attack forces of the rebel FARC movement. Within seven days of the mobilization, a diplomatic solution saw the troops stand down.

ECONOMY

In 2010 industry accounted for 52% of GDP, services 42% and agriculture 6%.

Overview

Venezuela has the fifth largest economy in Latin America but since the turn of the century it has been among the worst performers. The country has the largest mineral and oil reserves in the region, with oil providing 12% of GDP, 96% of exports and nearly 50% of fiscal revenue. Over-reliance on the international oil price means that growth rates fluctuate wildly. The economy grew by 18.3% in 2004, but contracted by 3.2% in 2009 and 1.5% in 2010 as a result of the global financial crisis. Growth then averaged 3.7% between 2011 and 2013.

Revenues from oil have underpinned economic expansion and helped to redistribute resources among the poorer population. Those classified as living in 'moderate poverty' fell from 50% in 1998 to 30% in 2012. President Hugo Chávez portrayed himself as a hero of the poor before his death in 2013, introducing programmes of free health care, subsidized food and land reform. His long tenure saw large-scale nationalization in sectors including oil, banking and roads. The development of the private sector has been constrained as a result of corruption and the threat of government expropriation. The US Heritage Foundation ranked the nation's economy 175th out of 177 in its 2014 index of economic freedom.

The money supply nearly quadrupled between 2012 and 2014, with annual inflation reaching highs of 60% in the period. Chronic shortages of food and medicine saw their prices more than double between 2013 and 2014. The longer-term economic outlook is not promising, with oil prices having falling to a four-year low by Nov. 2014 prompting a 30% drop in foreign currency earnings. Venezuela meanwhile owed US$21bn. in trade-related bills in 2014, raising fears that it might default on its foreign-currency bonds.

Currency

The unit of currency is the bolívar fuerte (VEF) of 100 céntimos. It was introduced on 1 Jan. 2008, replacing the bolívar (VEB) at a rate of one bolívar fuerte = 1,000 bolívares. In Aug. 2009 foreign exchange reserves were US$18,559m., gold reserves were 11.46m. troy oz and total money supply was 186,679m. Bs.F. Exchange controls were abolished in April 1996. The bolívar was devalued by 12.6% in 1998, and in Feb. 2002 it was floated, ending a regime that permitted the bolívar to trade only within a fixed band. However, in Feb. 2003 it was pegged to the dollar at Bs 2.15 = US$1 (and after the introduction of the bolívar fuerte in Jan. 2008 officially at 2.15 Bs.F = US$1). In Jan. 2010 the bolívar was devalued by 17% to 2.6 Bs.F = US$1 and a second rate, known as the 'oil bolívar' for its aim of boosting revenue from oil exports, was introduced at 4.3 Bs.F = US$1. A further devaluation of the currency on 1 Jan. 2011 eliminated the rate of 2.6 Bs.F to the dollar and created a single official exchange rate of 4.3 Bs.F to the dollar. The currency was again devalued on 8 Feb. 2013, by 32%. As a result the official exchange rate became 6.3 Bs.F to the dollar although on the black market, which is unregulated, a dollar may sell for up to 90 Bs.F. Inflation rates (based on IMF statistics):

2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014
16.0%	13.7%	18.7%	30.4%	27.1%	28.2%	26.1%	21.1%	40.6%	62.2%

Inflation has not been in single figures since 1983.

Budget

The fiscal year is the calendar year. In 2006 revenue totalled Bs 117,326bn. and expenditure Bs 117,255bn. Petroleum income accounted for 52.9% of revenues in 2006; current expenditure accounted for 75.0% of expenditures. VAT is 12% (reduced rate, 11%).

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on IMF statistics):

2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010	2011	2012	2013	2014
10.3%	9.9%	8.8%	5.3%	-3.2%	-1.5%	4.2%	5.6%	1.3%	-4.0%

Total GDP in 2012 was US$381.3bn.

Banking and Finance

A law of Dec. 1992 provided for greater autonomy for the Central Bank. Its President, currently Nelson Merentes, is appointed by the President for five-year terms. Since 1993 foreign banks have been allowed a controlling interest in domestic banks. In 2003 there were 24 commercial banks and three foreign banks.

Venezuela's foreign debt totalled US$55,572m. in 2010, representing 14.3% of GNI.

The total stock of FDI at the end of 2012 was US$49.08bn.

There is a stock exchange in Caracas. It was the best-performing stock market in the world in 2011, 2012 and 2013 (when it recorded a gain of 452% during the year).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy in 2011 were the equivalent of 6.2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2011 was 25.7m. kW; production was 122.06bn. kWh in 2011 and consumption per capita 4,129 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Proven reserves of oil were 298.3bn. bbls in 2014, the most of any country and 17.5% of the world total. However, the reserves in Saudi Arabia—which ranks second behind Venezuela—are much more accessible. Venezuela has significant reserves of heavy crude oil, which is more expensive and difficult to extract than conventional crude oil. The oil sector was nationalized in 1976. Private and foreign investment were permitted after 1992, before then President Chávez instigated a ‘renationalization’ following strikes in Dec. 2002–Feb. 2003. In Feb. 2007 Chávez announced that the last foreign-controlled oil production sites would be brought under government control. Oil production in 2014 was 139.5m. tonnes. Oil provides about 50% of Venezuela’s revenues. Natural gas production in 2012 was 32.8bn. cu. metres. Natural gas reserves in 2014 were 5.6trn. cu. metres, the largest in Latin America.

Minerals

Output (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2004: iron ore, 19,196; limestone (2002), 13,434; coal, 6,748; bauxite, 5,842; alumina (2003), 1,882; gold, 9,690 kg. Estimated diamond production in 2005 was 115,000 carats.

Agriculture

Coffee, cocoa, sugarcane, maize, rice, wheat, tobacco, cotton, beans and sisal are grown. 50% of farmers are engaged in subsistence agriculture. There were approximately 2.44m. ha. of arable land in 2002 and 0.81m. ha. of permanent crops. About 575,000 ha. were irrigated in 2002.

Production in 2003 in 1,000 tonnes: sugarcane, 6,825; maize, 1,505; plantains, 760; rice, 701; bananas, 639; sorghum, 600; cassava, 490; pineapples, 384; oranges, 316; melons and watermelons, 308; potatoes, 298; onions, 237.

Livestock (2003): cattle, 16.07m.; pigs, 2.92m.; goats, 2.70m.; sheep, 820,000; horses, 500,000; chickens, 110m.

Forestry

In 2010 the area under forests was 46.28m. ha., or 52% of the total land area. Timber production in 2011 was 5.35m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

In 2012 the total catch was 213,072 tonnes (mostly from marine waters).

INDUSTRY

Production (2007 unless otherwise indicated, in tonnes): petrol, 16.4m.; residual fuel oil, 14.6m.; distillate fuel oil, 14.3m.; cement (2007 estimate), 11m.; crude steel (2006), 4.9m.; raw sugar (2005), 690,000.

Labour

The labour force in 2013 was 14,050,000 (11,877,000 in 2003). 68.8% of the population aged 15–64 was economically active in 2013. In the same year 7.5% of the population was unemployed.

Venezuela had 80,000 people living in slavery according to the Walk Free Foundation’s 2013 Global Slavery Index.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Trade in US$1m.:

	2008	2009	2010
Imports c.i.f.	47,450	38,677	32,343
Exports f.o.b.	83,478	56,583	66,963

The main import sources are the USA, China, Brazil, Mexico and Colombia. The leading export destinations are the USA, China, Colombia, the Netherlands and Brazil.

Exports of petroleum in 2010 accounted for 95% of all export revenues. Machinery and transport accounted for 38% of imports in 2010, and chemicals and related products 20%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2002 there were 96,155 km of roads, of which 33.6% were paved. There were 2,952,100 passenger cars in use in 2007 (107 per 1,000 inhabitants) plus 84,000 lorries and vans. There were 6,218 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 2006.

Rail

The railway network comprises 742 km of 1,435 gauge track. In 2004, 50.6m. tonnes of freight were carried. In 2006 Venezuela’s first inter-city passenger service in nearly 70 years was opened with the inauguration of a line from Caracas to Cúa. Several other new lines are planned or currently under construction.

There are metros in Caracas, Los Teques, Maracaibo and Valencia.

Civil Aviation

The main international airport is at Caracas (Simon Bolívar), with some international flights from Maracaibo. The national carrier is Conviasa, founded in 2004 as the successor to Viasa, which had ceased operations in 1997. In 2005 scheduled airline traffic of Venezuela-based carriers flew 31.0m. km, carrying 3,240,200 passengers.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 82 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 784,000 GT. La Guaira, Maracaibo, Puerto Cabello, Puerto Ordaz and Guanta are the chief ports. The principal navigable rivers are the Orinoco and its tributaries the Apure and Arauca.

Telecommunications

In 2012 there were 7,649,000 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscriptions numbered 30,569,000 in the same year (1,020.5 per 1,000 persons). In 2012, 49.1% of the population were internet users. In June 2012 there were 9.7m. Facebook users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

A new penal code was implemented on 1 July 1999. The new, US-style system features public trials, verbal arguments, prosecutors, citizen juries and the presumption of innocence, instead of an inquisitorial system inherited from Spain that included secretive trials and long exchanges of written arguments.

In Aug. 1999 the new constitutional assembly declared a judicial emergency, granting itself sweeping new powers to dismiss judges and overhaul the court system. The assembly excluded the Supreme Court and the national Judicial Council from a commission charged with reorganizing the judiciary. Then President Chávez declared the assembly the supreme power in Venezuela.

The court system is plagued by chronic corruption and a huge case backlog. The population in penal institutions in 2014 was approximately 55,000 (178 per 100,000 population), a 186% increase from 2006. In Oct. 1999 over 100 judges accused of corruption were suspended. Hundreds more were removed from office over subsequent months and years, amid accusations that many appointments and suspensions were politically motivated. The country suffers from a shortfall in both numbers of judges and prosecutors. The International Centre for Prison Studies estimated in 2014 that 68.4% of prisoners had yet to receive a trial. In 2015 the World Justice Project Rule of Law Index, which provides data on how the rule of law is experienced by the general public across eight categories, ranked Venezuela last of 102 countries for criminal justice and 100th for civil justice.

Under the provisions of the Dec. 1999 constitution, the Supreme Court (which had been the highest court in the land) was replaced by the Supreme Tribunal of Justice. In 2012 a new penal code (the seventh of Hugo Chávez’s tenure) allowed for trials to proceed in the event that a defendant fails to appear at court and that certain cases may be tried in private where a judge considers it necessary for the ‘normal development’ of the trial.

Venezuela's homicide rate in 2012 was 54 per 100,000 population, a rate only exceeded that year in Honduras.

Education

In 2007 there were 3,521,139 primary school pupils (184,409 teaching staff in 2005) and 2,174,619 secondary school pupils (187,737 teaching staff in 2005).

The leading institute of higher education is the Central University of Venezuela (Universidad Central de Venezuela), founded in 1721 in Caracas. The Bolivarian University of Venezuela (Universidad Bolivariana de Venezuela) was founded in 2003 by then President Chávez in order to give lower-income students the opportunity to study free of charge regardless of academic qualifications or prior education. More than 75% of students are from poor backgrounds. There were 1,381,126 students in tertiary education in 2006 with 108,594 academic staff.

Adult literacy was 95% in 2007.

Public expenditure on education came to 3.7% of GNI in 2007.

Health

In 2009 there were 11 hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants. In the period 2000–10 there were 19 physicians per 10,000 persons, 11 nursing and midwifery personnel for every 10,000 and six dentists for every 10,000. Expenditure on health in 2011 came to 4.5% of GDP.

Welfare

The official retirement age is 60 years (men) or 55 years (women). However, the pensionable age is lower for those in arduous or unhealthy employment. The old-age pension is the minimum wage (2,702.73 Bs.F a month), plus 30% of the reference salary (20% of covered earnings in the last five years or 10% in the last ten years—whichever is higher) and an increment of 1% of earnings for every 50-week period of contributions beyond 750 weeks. The minimum pension is equal to the legal monthly minimum wage.

Unemployment benefit is 60% of the insured person's average monthly earnings during the previous 12 months. The benefit is paid for up to five months.

RELIGION

In 2010 there were an estimated 22.50m. Catholics and 2.92m. Protestants according to the Pew Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life, with 2.90m. people having no religious affiliation. The Roman Catholic Church has nine ecclesiastical provinces, each headed by an archbishop. There was one cardinal in Feb. 2016.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Venezuela has three sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Coro and its Port (inscribed on the list in 1993); Canaima National Park (1994); and La Ciudad Universitaria de Caracas (2000).

Press

In 2008 there were 108 daily newspapers (106 paid-for and two free) with a circulation of 2.53m.

Tourism

In 2009 there were 615,000 non-resident tourists (excluding same-day visitors), down from 771,000 in 2007 and 745,000 in 2008. Of the 615,000 tourists in 2009, 340,000 were from elsewhere in the Americas and 241,000 were from Europe.

Festivals

Among the country's most celebrated festivals is the Procession of the Holy Shepherdess (Jan.), which has run annually since 1856. Its centrepiece is a grand procession taking a statue of the divine shepherdess from Santa Rosa to the city of Barquisimeto, before the return trip is made at Easter. Celebrations to mark the initial declaration of independence from Spain in 1810 fall on 19 April, which is also designated as Day of the Indian. The Festival Internacional de Teatro in Caracas takes place in April and the Festival Internacional de Música El Hatillo is in Oct. Independence Day is observed on 5 July while the birthday of Simón Bolívar is celebrated on 24 July.

VIETNAM

relative stability was restored by the Ly dynasty (1010–1225), notably under Emperor Ly Thanh Tong (1127–38) who adopted the name Dai Viet. The region's political structure remained Chinese-influenced but independent, although it came under attack from Sino-Mongol forces in 1285 and succumbed to Ming Dynasty control for 20 years from 1407.

From the late 1420s the Le dynasty expanded southward. In 1471 Le Thanh Tong seized control of much of the Kingdom of Champa (now Vietnam's central area), although complete defeat of the Cham took several centuries. By the 1500s the Le dynasty was in decline and was overthrown in 1527. The powerful Mac, Trinh and Nguyen families then fought for control. By 1590 the Trinh had established dominance in the north, centred on Thang Long (Hanoi)—the kingdom of Tonkin. The Nguyen ruled the southern provinces from Hue, a kingdom that became known as Cochinchina.

Both kingdoms benefited from growing trade with China and Japan and, to a lesser extent, in the 17th century with Portuguese, Dutch and English merchants. Catholicism, introduced from Europe, took root across much of Vietnam while the Nguyen pushed south into the Mekong Delta, which was home to thousands of Chinese refugees fleeing after the collapse of the Ming dynasty.

In 1749 Cambodia ceded the remainder of the lower Mekong delta to Nguyen control. In the 1770s a rebellion led by three brothers from the village of Tay Son, in Quy Nhan province, toppled the Nguyen and the Trinh, although the Nguyen wrested back control in 1802. At the end of the 18th century, France helped establish Emperor Gia-Long as ruler of a unified Vietnam. French forces captured Saigon in 1859 and took control of Cochinchina. Tonkin and Annam became French protectorates in 1884 and, with Cambodia already annexed (1863), a union of Indochina was formed in 1887, with Laos added six years later.

A Marxist/Leninist-inspired nationalist movement grew during the 1920s. In 1930 Nguyen Ai Quoc (Ho Chi Minh) established the Indochinese Communist Party, which became the Viet Minh movement. In 1940 Vietnam was occupied by Japan but after Japanese defeat in 1945, the Viet Minh established a republic with its capital in Hanoi. On 6 March 1946 France recognized the Democratic Republic of Vietnam as a 'Free State within the Indo-Chinese Federation'. In Nov. 1946 French forces attacked the Viet Minh in Haiphong, sparking a war of resistance until a peace agreement was reached in July 1954.

By the Paris Agreement of Dec. 1954 France transferred sovereignty to Vietnam, which was divided along the 17th parallel into Communist North Vietnam and non-Communist South. From 1959 the North promoted insurgency in the south, and in 1963 the Viet Cong (Communist guerrillas operating in the south) defeated several units of the South Vietnamese Army, prompting the overthrow and execution of President Ngo Dinh Diem. The Gulf of Tonkin incident, in which two US destroyers were allegedly attacked by North Vietnam, prompted retaliation by Washington. Aerial bombing raids began in March 1965 and the first combat troops soon followed, peaking at 540,000 in 1968. Opposition to the war in America mounted from 1967.

On 27 Jan. 1973 an agreement was signed in Paris ending the war although hostilities continued between North and South until the latter's defeat in 1975. Between 150,000 and 200,000 South Vietnamese fled the country. North and South Vietnam unified as the Socialist Republic of Vietnam on 2 July 1976. Vietnam invaded Cambodia in Dec. 1978, prompting a bloody but indecisive war with Chinese forces in Feb.–March 1979.

In 1986 Vietnam began a shift towards a multi-sectoral market economy under state regulation. In 1995 Vietnam normalized relations with the USA and in July that year joined ASEAN and

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Archaeological evidence suggests Neolithic settlements in northern Vietnam existed from around 5000 BC. There were small rice-dependent villages in the Red River Delta from around 2000 BC and by AD 1500 there was bronze working at Dong Dau, near present-day Hanoi.

Much of present-day northern Vietnam was closely linked with China from the third century BC, initially as part of Nam Viet, regionally-administered from Canton, and from 111 BC under Han dynasty control. Chinese rule of Vietnam's north continued under the Tsin (265–420), Sui (581–618) and T'ang (618–907) dynasties. There followed several short-lived kingdoms until signed landmark trade agreements with the EU. The economy suffered during the Asian economic crisis of the late 1990s but trade with the USA was normalized in 2001. In 2007 the country joined the World Trade Organization after 12 years of talks.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Vietnam is bounded in the west by Cambodia and Laos, north by China and east and south by the South China Sea. It has a total area of 330,951 sq. km and is divided into eight regions, 58 provinces and five municipalities (Can Tho, Da Nang, Hai Phong, Hanoi and Thanh Pho Ho Chi Minh). At the 2009 census the population was 85,846,997. July 2012 estimate: 88,772,900; density, 268 per sq. km. The areas and 2012 estimated populations were as follows:

Major cities (with 2009 populations): Ho Chi Minh City (5,880,615), Hanoi (2,316,772), Da Nang (770,911), Hai Phong (769,739), Can Tho (731,545).

86% of the population are Vietnamese (Kinh). There are also 53 minority groups thinly spread in the extensive mountainous regions. The largest minorities are: Tay, Thai, Muong, Khmer, Mong and Nung.

The official language is Vietnamese. Chinese, French and Khmer are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 1,494,000; deaths, 469,000. Estimated birth rate in 2008 was 17.2 per 1,000 population; estimated death rate, 5.4. Life expectancy, 2013, was 71.3 years for males and 80.5 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 1.3%. Infant mortality, 2010, 19 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 2.1 births per woman. Vietnam has had one of the largest reductions in its fertility rate of any country in the world in recent years, having had a rate of 5.8 births per woman in 1975. Sanctions are imposed on couples with more than two children. The rate at which Vietnam has reduced poverty, from 58% of the population in 1993 to 20% in 2004, is among the most dramatic of any country in the world.

CLIMATE

The humid monsoon climate gives tropical conditions in the south, with a rainy season from May to Oct., and sub-tropical conditions in the north, though real winter conditions can affect the north when polar air blows south over Asia. In general, there is little variation in temperatures over the year. Hanoi, Jan. 62°F (16.7°C), July 84°F (28.9°C). Annual rainfall 72" (1,830 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The National Assembly unanimously approved a new constitution on 15 April 1992. Under this the Communist Party retains a monopoly of power and the responsibility for guiding the state according to the tenets of Marxism-Leninism and Ho Chi Minh, but with certain curbs on its administrative functions. Vietnam is a one-party republic. The powers of the National Assembly are increased. The 500-member National Assembly is elected for five-year terms. Candidates may be proposed by the Communist Party or the Fatherland Front (which groups various social organizations), or they may propose themselves as individual Independents. The Assembly convenes three times a year and appoints a prime minister and cabinet. It elects the President, the head of state. The latter heads a State Council which issues decrees when the National Assembly is not in session.

The ultimate source of political power is the Communist Party of Vietnam, founded in 1930; it had 3.6m. members in 2011.

CURRENT LEADERS

Nguyen Phu Trong

Position

Secretary General of the Communist Party of Vietnam

Introduction

Nguyen Phu Trong was elected secretary general of the Communist Party of Vietnam in Jan. 2011 at the Party's 11th five-yearly national congress, replacing Nong Duc Manh. Chairman of the National Assembly since 2006, Trong was previously the party secretary for Hanoi. He was re-elected for a second term as secretary general in Jan. 2016 at the Party's 12th congress.

Early Life

Trong was born in Hanoi on 14 April 1944. He attended the Nguyen Gia Thieu school in Hanoi district and from 1963–67 studied linguistics at the Hanoi General University. After graduating, Trong became a civil servant and in 1968 was inducted into the Communist Party of Vietnam. From 1968–73 he worked on the Communist Review, the party's official journal, and was a prominent representative of the party's youth contingent. He then undertook post-graduate studies at Ho Chi Minh National Academy of Politics and Public Administration before returning as editor of the Communist Review in 1976. In 1983 he graduated with a history PhD from the Soviet Academy of Social Sciences. He returned to the Communist Review and held senior posts, joining the editorial board in 1991 and serving as editor-in-chief until 1996.

In 1994 Trong became a member of the Communist Party central committee and from 1996–98 was deputy secretary of its Hanoi section. In 1997 he joined the politburo, focusing on political research and theory. He was appointed head of 'ideological-cultural and scientific-educational affairs' and from 2001–06 served as chairman of the 'theoretical council'.

From 2000–06 he was party secretary in Hanoi and from 2002–06 a deputy in the National Assembly. In 2006 he was elected secretary of the Assembly's party organization, as well as chairman of the Assembly itself, and became a member of the council for defence and security.

Career in Office

At 67 years of age, Trong was past the mandatory retirement age when he became secretary general and was considered a conservative hard-liner. He has adopted a tough stance towards the media and moved against critical journalism, including banning the use of unnamed sources. However, against a background of continuing scandals in state-owned enterprises, he has acknowledged the government's failure to curb corruption in its top ranks. Within Vietnam's political structure, Trong liaises with the prime minister and the state president. In Jan. 2016 he was re-elected secretary general of the Communist Party after the more reformist outgoing prime minister, Nguyen Tan Dung, withdrew his candidacy.

While Trong has sought closer ties with China—on which Vietnam is economically dependent—there have been renewed bilateral tensions since 2014 over China's assertive sovereignty claims to contested islands in the South China Sea and its maritime oil drilling activities. Nevertheless, Trong and President Xi Jinping stressed the close links between their two countries during Trong's visit to China in April 2015. In July that year, Trong made an official visit to the USA at the invitation of President Barack Obama's administration.

Nguyen Xuan Phuc

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

On 7 April 2016 Nguyen Xuan Phuc became prime minister after he received over 90% support in a parliamentary vote. He is scheduled to serve a five-year term as part of a governing triumvirate with Communist Party secretary general, Nguyen Phu Trong, and President Tran Dai Quang.

Early Life

Nguyen was born on 20 July 1954 in the commune of Que Phu in south central Vietnam. He graduated in economics from the National Economics University, Hanoi in 1978, after which he joined the economic management committee of Quang Nam province.

He became a Communist Party member in 1982, rising through the party ranks. He held various regional party roles including director of the department of planning and investment for Quang Nam-Da Nang from 1993–96, vice-president and vice-chairman of the People's Committee of Quang Nam province from 1997–2001 and chairman from 2001–06. He also became a deputy chief government inspector in 2006.

In June 2006 he was elected to the party central committee and in Aug. the following year he was named minister-chairman of the government office. He became deputy prime minister in June 2011. At the 12th National Party Congress held in Jan. 2016 Nguyen was selected to succeed Nguyen Tan Dung as premier, with his election endorsed by parliament in April.

Career in Office

Nguyen's main focus is to introduce broad economic reforms as the government comes under increasing pressure to overhaul the scandal-hit state-owned sector and banking system. He is also expected to meet growth targets (at almost 7% for 2016) while tackling the country's over-reliance on foreign investment. In foreign policy, he is likely to continue his predecessor's challenge to China over maritime and territorial claims.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 18 months (army) or three years (air force and navy). For specialists it is also three years.

In 2013 defence expenditure totalled US$3,800m. (US$41 per capita), representing 2.4% of GDP.

Army

There are nine military regions (including the capital). Strength (2011) was estimated to be 412,000. Paramilitary Local Defence forces number around 5m. and include the People's Self-Defence Force (urban) and the People's Militia (rural). There is also a paramilitary Border Defence Corps numbering some 40,000.

Navy

In 2011 the fleet included two diesel submarines (although their serviceability was in doubt), two frigates and seven corvettes. Vietnam ordered six Kilo class submarines from Russia in 2009. The first five were handed over between Nov. 2013 and Feb. 2016. The remaining submarine was expected to be delivered by mid-2016. In 2011 personnel was estimated at 13,000 plus an additional Naval Infantry force of about 27,000.

Air Force

In 2011 the People's Air Force had 30,000 personnel, with 235 combat-capable aircraft (Su-22s, Su-27s, Su-30s and MiG-21s) and 26 attack helicopters.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 20.6% of GDP in 2010, industry 41.1% and services 38.3%.

Overview

GDP growth averaged 6.4% per year in the decade to 2012 but slowed to 5.4% in 2013. However, improvements in macro-economic stability saw inflation fall from a peak of 23% in Aug. 2011 to 4.2% in Aug. 2014, while exports flourished in 2014 compared with those of regional neighbours.

The economy is moving away from traditional labour-intensive manufacturing sectors (garments, footwear and furniture) towards high-technology, higher-value products. The Social Economic Development Strategy for 2011–20 lays out plans for structural reforms, environmental sustainability and social equity. In particular, it aims to promote human resources, skills development and infrastructure expansion. The 11th Congress of the Communist Party that met in Jan. 2011 called for greater international integration in a bid to raise living standards.

Currency

The unit of currency is the dong (VND). The dong was devalued by 5.4% in Nov. 2009, 3.4% in Feb. 2010, 2.1% in Aug. 2010 and 8.5% in Feb. 2011. Foreign exchange reserves were US$8,268m. in May 2005 and total money supply was 192,281bn. dong. Inflation was 23.1% in 2008, and more recently 6.6% in 2013 and 4.1% in 2014.

Budget

In 2008 revenues were 323trn. dong and expenditures 364trn. dong. Tax revenue accounted for 89.0% of revenues in 2008, non-tax revenue 9.9% and grants 1.1%; current expenditure accounted for 72.6% of expenditures and capital expenditure 27.4%.

VAT is 10% (reduced rate, 5%).

Performance

Real GDP growth rates have been consistently strong since 1994, and averaged 7.7% between 2001 and 2007. Although growth has slowed slightly since then it was still 5.2% in 2012, 5.4% in 2013 and 6.0% in 2014. GDP per head, which was US$98 in 1990, had risen to US$1,755 by 2012. Vietnam's total GDP in 2014 was US$186.2bn.

Banking and Finance

The central bank and bank of issue is the State Bank of Vietnam (founded in 1951; Governor, Le Minh Hung). There were 42 banks in 2011. The leading commercial banks are Vietnam Bank for Agriculture and Rural Development (usually referred to as Agribank), Vietinbank, Bank for Investment and Development of Vietnam (BIDV) and Joint Stock Commercial Bank for Foreign Trade of Vietnam (Vietcombank).

External debt totalled US$35,139m. in 2010, representing 36.5% of GNI. Foreign direct investment in Vietnam was US$8.9bn. in 2013, up from US$2.0bn. in 2005 although down from the high of US$9.6bn. in 2008.

There are stock exchanges in Ho Chi Minh City, which opened in July 2000, and Hanoi, which opened in March 2005.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Vietnam's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy were the equivalent of 1.5 tonnes per capita in 2011.

Electricity

Total installed capacity of power generation in 2011 was an estimated 25.7m. kW. In 2011, 105.22bn. kWh of electricity were produced (63-94bn. kWh thermal and 41-19bn. kWh hydro-electric); consumption per capita was 1,213 kWh. The proportion of households with electricity has doubled in the past 20 years, to 96.4% in 2012.

Oil and Gas

Oil reserves in 2012 totalled 4.4bn. bbls. In Aug. 2001 an offshore oil mine containing more than 400m. bbls of petroleum was discovered. Oil production in 2012, 17.0m. tonnes. Natural gas reserves in 2012 were 600bn. cu. metres; production was 9.4bn. cu. metres.

Minerals

Vietnam is endowed with an abundance of mineral resources such as coal (3.5bn. tonnes), bauxite (3bn. tonnes), apatite (1bn. tonnes), iron ore (700m. tonnes), chromate (10m. tonnes), copper (600,000 tonnes) and tin (70,000 tonnes); coal production was 34.1m. tonnes in 2005. There are also deposits of manganese, titanium, a little gold and marble. 2005 output (in 1,000 tonnes): sand and gravel, 146,400; lime, 1,718; salt, 925.

Agriculture

Agriculture employs 70% of the workforce. Ownership of land is vested in the state, but since 1992 farmers may inherit and sell plots allocated on 20-year leases. There were an estimated 6.35m. ha. of arable land in 2007 and 3.08m. ha. of permanent crops.

Production in 1,000 tonnes in 2003: rice, 34,519; sugarcane, 16,525; cassava, 5,228; maize, 2,934; sweet potatoes, 1,592; bananas, 1,221; coconuts, 920; coffee, 771; cabbage, 606; oranges, 500. Vietnam is the second largest coffee producer in the world after Brazil, and the second largest exporter of rice behind India.

Livestock, 2003: pigs, 24.89m.; cattle, 4.39m.; buffaloes, 2.84m.; goats, 780,000; chickens, 185m.; ducks, 69m.

Livestock products (2003): meat, 2,487,000 tonnes; eggs, 234,000 tonnes; milk, 158,000 tonnes.

There were 257 tractors and 365 harvester-threshers per 10,000 ha. of arable land in 2006.

Forestry

In 2010 forests covered 13.80m. ha., or 44% of the land area. An export ban on logs has been in place since 1992. Timber production was 27.10m. cu. metres in 2011, nearly all of it for fuel.

Fisheries

Total catch, 2010, 2,420,800 tonnes (92% from sea fishing). Vietnam's aquaculture production is the third largest in the world behind those of China and India, at 2,845,600 tonnes in 2011. Exports of fishery commodities were valued at US$6,242m. in 2011 (the fourth highest in the world) and imports at US$706m.

INDUSTRY

Estimated total industrial output in 2002 was 260,202.0bn. dong. In 2002 estimated production (in 1,000 tonnes) was: processed sea produce, 288,701; cement, 19,482; steel, 2,429; fertilizers, 1,176; sugar, 1,074; paper (2003), 800; detergents, 381; beer (2003), 1,049.8m. litres; clothes, 47.6m. items.

Labour

The labour force in 2013 was 53,444,000 (44,284,000 in 2003). 82.2% of the population aged 15-64 was economically active in 2013. In the same year 2.2% of the population was unemployed.

Vietnam had 0.25m. people living in slavery according to the Walk Free Foundation's 2013 Global Slavery Index.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In Feb. 1994 the USA lifted the trade embargo it had imposed in 1975, and in Nov. 2001 a trade agreement with the USA was ratified. The agreement allows Vietnam's exports access to the US market on the same terms as those enjoyed by most other countries. The 1992 constitution regulates joint ventures with western firms; full repatriation of profits and non-nationalization of investments are guaranteed.

Imports and Exports

Imports (c.i.f.) in 2010 totalled US$83,779m., up from US$36,761m. in 2005; exports (f.o.b.), US$72,237m., up from US$32,447m. in 2005. In 2009 the main imports were: machinery and transport equipment (31.3%), in particular electrical machinery, apparatus and appliances; manufactured goods (25.4%); chemicals and related products (14.6%); mineral fuels, lubricants and related materials (10.7%). Main exports in 2009: miscellaneous manufactured articles (34.8%), in particular articles of apparel and clothing accessories; food and live animals (20.1%); mineral fuels, lubricants and related materials (14.9%); machinery and transport equipment (13.0%).

The main import suppliers in 2009 were China (23.8%), Japan (10.7%), South Korea (10.0%) and Thailand (6.5%). Principal export markets in 2009 were the USA (20.0%), Japan (11.1%), China (9.5%) and Australia (4.2%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were 160,089 km of roads in 2007, of which 47.6% were paved. In 2007 there were 1,146,300 passenger cars in use and around 21.78m. motorcycles and mopeds. There were 13,200 fatalities in road accidents in 2007.

Rail

There were 2,347 km of railways in 2011, mostly metre gauge. Rail links with China were reopened in Feb. 1996. In 2011, 12.0m. passengers and 7.2m. tonnes of freight were carried.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Hanoi (Noi Bai) and Ho Chi Minh City (Tan Son Nhat) and 13 domestic airports. The national carrier is Vietnam Airlines, which provides domestic services and in 2003 had international flights to Bangkok, Beijing, Dubai, Guangzhou, Hong Kong, Kaohsiung, Kuala Lumpur, Kunming, Manila, Melbourne, Moscow, Osaka, Paris, Phnom Penh, Seoul, Siem Reap, Singapore, Sydney, Taipei, Tokyo and Vientiane. In 2005 scheduled airline traffic of Vietnam-based carriers flew 43.7m. km, carrying 3,762,200 passengers. The busiest airport is Ho Chi Minh City, which in 2012 handled 17,538,353 passengers and had 131,710 aircraft movements. Hanoi handled 11,341,039 passengers and had 84,304 aircraft movements in 2012.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 918 ships of 300 GT or over registered (including 769 general cargo ships and 76 oil tankers), totalling 2,683,000 GT. The major ports are Hai Phong, Ho Chi Minh City and Da Nang. There are regular services to Hong Kong, Singapore, Thailand, Cambodia and Japan. There are some 19,500 km of navigable waterways.

Telecommunications

In 2011 there were 10,175,000 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscriptions numbered 127,318,000 in the same year (1,416.0 per 1,000 persons). In 2011, 35.1% of the population were internet users. In June 2012 there were 9.7m. Facebook users. In March 2012 there were 3.2m. Facebook users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

A new penal code came into force on 1 Jan. 1986 'to complete the work of the 1980 constitution'. Penalties (including death) are prescribed for opposition to the people's power and for economic crimes. The judicial system comprises the Supreme People's Court, provincial courts and district courts. The president of the Supreme Court is responsible to the National Assembly, as is the Procurator-General, who heads the Supreme People's Office of Supervision and Control.

Vietnam does not divulge figures on its use of the death penalty, but Amnesty International reported that in 2015 a number of executions were carried out.

The population in penal institutions in mid-2010 (sentenced prisoners only) was 108,557 (122 per 100,000 of national population). Vietnam was ranked 39th of 102 countries for criminal justice and 76th for civil justice in the 2015 World Justice Project Rule of Law Index, which provides data on how the rule of law is experienced by the general public across eight categories.

Education

Adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 92.8% (95.2% among males and 90.5% among females). Primary education consists of a ten-year course divided into three levels of four, three and three years respectively. In 2007 there were 7,041,312 pupils and 344,547 teaching staff in primary schools, and 9,845,407 pupils and 451,165 teaching staff at secondary schools. About 75% of children of secondary school age were in school by 2003, up from around a third in 1990. There were 376 higher education institutions in 2009 (150 universities and 226 colleges), of which 81 (44 universities and 37 colleges) were private. In 2007 there were 1,587,609 students in higher education with 53,518 academic staff.

Health

In the period 2000–10 Vietnam had 12.2 physicians for every 10,000 population, 10.1 nursing and midwifery personnel per 10,000 population and 3.2 pharmaceutical personnel per 10,000. There were 29 hospital beds per 10,000 population in the period 2000–09.

RELIGION

Taoism is the traditional religion but Buddhism is widespread. At the census of 2009 the principal denominations were: Buddhists, 6,802,318; Catholics, 5,677,086; Hoa Hao (a tradition based on Buddhism), 1,433,252; Cao Dai (a synthesis of Christianity, Buddhism and Confucianism), 807,915; Protestants, 734,168; no religion, 70,193,377. In Feb. 2016 there were two cardinals. The Roman Catholic Church has 26 dioceses, including three archdioceses.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Vietnam has eight sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the Complex of Hue Monuments (inscribed on the list in 1993); Ha Long Bay (1994 and 2000); Hoi An Ancient Town (1999); My Son Sanctuary (1999); Phong Nha-Ke Bang National Park (2003 and 2015); the Central Sector of the Imperial Citadel of Thang Long Hanoi (2010); the Citadel of the Ho Dynasty (2011); and Trang An Landscape Complex (2014).

Press

In 2008 there were 55 paid-for daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 2.8m. The Communist Party controls all print media. In the 2015 World Press Freedom Index compiled by Reporters Without Borders, Vietnam was ranked 175th out of 180 countries.

Tourism

There were a record 6,014,000 international visitors in 2011 (up from 5,050,000 in 2010). Tourist numbers have doubled since 2003. The main nationalities of tourists in 2010 were China (905,000), South Korea (496,000) and Japan (442,000).

YEMEN

colonial communications with British India following Napoleon's conquest of Egypt. With the coming of the steamship, Britain's need for a military and refueling base in the region became more pressing. In 1839 the British captured Aden, attaching it administratively to India. In the 1850s the Perim, Kamaran and Kuria Muria islands were made part of Aden which became a free port. Britain also purchased areas on the mainland from local rulers and entered into protectionist agreements with them. The opening of the Suez Canal in 1869 further enhanced both Aden's strategic significance and British colonial consolidation.

In the early 1870s, tribal and religious warfare led the Ottoman Turks to reassert authority over northern Yemen, an occupation that lasted until the armistice of 1918. After the Ottoman evacuation, Imam Yahya, who had supported the Turks during the First World War despite leading an earlier revolt against them in 1911, sought to expand Yemeni territory. However, in 1934, after brief hostilities with Saudi Arabia (by then under the rule of Ibn Saud) and skirmishes with British forces from Aden, a trilateral treaty to fix Yemen's boundaries was agreed. The treaty heralded a period of generally peaceful coexistence, which lasted for the rest of Imam Yahya's reign. Aden, meanwhile, was formally made a British crown colony in 1937 and the surrounding region became known as the Aden protectorate.

Opposition to the theocratic and despotic rule of Imam Yahya led to his assassination in Feb. 1948. His son, Crown Prince Ahmad, succeeded him and put down the insurgents. Ahmad's reign was marked by further repression, renewed friction over the British presence in southern Yemen and growing pressure in the 1950s to support the Arab nationalist objectives of the new Nasser regime in Egypt. Following Ahmad's death his son, Muhammad al-Badr, was deposed a week after his accession in Sept. 1962 by revolutionary forces aided by Egypt. The rebels took control of the capital, Sana'a, and proclaimed the Yemen Arab Republic (YAR). Saudi Arabia and Jordan supported al-Badr's royalist forces against the new republic and conflict continued periodically until 1970. Despite its instability, the YAR regime retained power and secured international recognition.

In 1963 the Aden colony was merged into the Federation of South Arabia. A power struggle between rival nationalist groups after the British withdrawal in 1967 led to an independent Marxist state with Aden as the capital. This was renamed the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen (PDRY) in 1970. Mistrust and frequent border clashes between the YAR and the PDRY characterized the next decade, despite an accord in 1972 to merge the two entities.

A coup in the YAR brought Lieut.-Col. Ibrahim al-Hamadi to power in 1974. However, he was assassinated in Oct. 1977, as was his successor, Lieut.-Col. Ahmad al-Ghashmi, in June 1978. The following month Lieut.-Col. Ali Abdullah Saleh, the commander of the Ta'iz military area, was elected president by the Constitutional Assembly. Saleh's first months in power were turbulent. In early 1979 sporadic fighting erupted into full-scale war between North and South Yemen. Arab League mediation brought the hostilities to an end and both sides acknowledged the need to effect permanent Yemeni union. Saleh was meanwhile re-elected as YAR President by the Constituent Assembly in May 1983 and again in July 1988 by a new Consultative Council.

In the PDRY the chairman of the Presidential Council, Salem Rubayyi Ali, was overthrown in June 1978. Prime Minister Ali Nasser Muhammad briefly assumed the chairmanship before Abdul Fattah Ismail, a hard-line orthodox Marxist, was elected as head of state by the new Presidium of the People's Supreme Assembly in Dec. 1978. Ismail resigned unexpectedly in April 1980 and went to the Soviet Union, to be replaced by Ali Nasser

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

One of the earliest recorded pre-Islamic Arab civilizations was the Sabaeen culture, which flourished in what is now Yemen and southwestern Saudi Arabia during the 1st millennium BC. The wealth of the kingdom of Saba (or Sheba) was based on the incense and spice trade and on agriculture. Beginning in about 115 BC, the Himyarites gradually absorbed Saba and Hadhramaut (to the east) to claim control of all of the southwest Arabian peninsula by the 4th century AD. Himyarite dominance came to an end in the 6th century as Abyssinian (Ethiopian) forces invaded in AD 525. Abyssinian rule was overthrown in 575 by Persian military intervention, and Persian control then endured until the advent of Islam in 628.

Yemen became a province of the Muslim caliphate. Thereafter its fortunes reflected the fluctuating power of the imams (kings and spiritual leaders) of the Zaidi sect—who built the theocratic political structure of Yemen that endured from the 9th century until 1962—and of rival dynasties and conquerors. These included the Fatimid caliphs of Egypt, who occupied most of Yemen from about 1000 until 1175 and, subsequently, the Ayyubids, who ruled until about 1250. The Rasulids, who had served as governors of Yemen under the Ayyubid dynasty, then exercised a measure of sovereignty. However, central authority had fragmented by the time the Ottoman Turks, fearful of Christian Portuguese influence in southern Arabia, intervened in Yemen in the first half of the 16th century. They held nominal but tenuous sovereignty until the end of the First World War (when Yemen became independent), and conflict with the Zaidi imams was frequent.

The southern Yemeni port of Aden was a coveted commercial location on the trading routes to the wider East from ancient times. By the end of the 18th century its strategic importance had increased as Britain sought to contain the French threat to Muhammad. While maintaining South Yemen's close relations with the Soviet Union, Muhammad favoured reconciliation with moderate Arab states. In particular, he viewed improved relations with Saudi Arabia as necessary to further the proposed merger with the YAR. In Feb. 1985 Muhammad resigned as prime minister but remained head of state and secretary-general of the dominant Yemeni Socialist Party (YSP). The rest of that year was marked by the re-emergence of political rivalries, aggravated by the return of Ismail from the Soviet Union, which triggered a brief civil war in Jan. 1986. Ismail was killed and Muhammad fled into exile, after which a new government was formed.

In May 1988 the YAR and PDRY governments reached an agreement on renewing unification discussions and demilitarizing their borders. Their respective leaders, Ali Abdullah Saleh and Ali Salem Albidh, agreed in late 1989 a draft unity constitution (originally drawn up in 1981) and on 22 May 1990 the Republic of Yemen was declared. A five-member Presidential Council assumed power and Saleh was appointed as president for a transitional period. By 1993 relations between the North and South had again deteriorated, Vice President Albidh having withdrawn to Aden to demand political reforms. Sporadic military clashes escalated into full civil war in May 1994 between disaffected southern forces and Yemen's northern-based government. Southern officials announced their secession from Yemen on 21 May 1994, but northern forces quickly prevailed and Aden was captured on 7 July 1994. The former vice president and other southern leaders went into exile.

Confirmed in office by parliament in Oct. 1994 for a five-year term, President Saleh's political position was further consolidated when he was re-elected by popular vote in Sept. 1999 (though the turnout was low, particularly in the south). An extension of his term of office from five to seven years was approved in a referendum in Feb. 2001. In April 2003 Saleh's ruling General People's Congress retained power in parliamentary elections with over two-thirds of the seats in the 301-member Assembly of Representatives. However, the main opposition parties claimed that polling was tainted by ballot rigging and intimidation.

In foreign affairs Yemen suffered diplomatic isolation and economic sanctions in the early 1990s for its equivocal response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. In 1995 Yemen clashed with Eritrea over control of the Hanish Islands in the Red Sea. Following arbitration by an international panel, Yemen assumed control of the main islands in 1998.

Long-standing tensions with neighbouring Saudi Arabia were eased when a border dispute was settled in June 2000. Attacks on Western targets in Yemeni territory—most notably the suicide bombing of the US naval vessel USS Cole in Oct. 2000 and a bomb attack on a French supertanker, the Limburg, off the Yemeni coast in Oct. 2002—fuelled concerns that Yemen might be a haven for Islamic extremists. Nevertheless, President Saleh pledged full support for the USA's global campaign against terrorism in the wake of the events of 11 Sept. 2001.

Attacks linked to al-Qaeda continued throughout the decade. In Oct. 2010 parcel bombs intended for US-bound cargo planes were suspected of originating in the country. In Jan. 2011 the US government expressed its 'urgent concern' at Yemen's extremist links. Popular anti-government protests starting the same month led to President Saleh relinquishing power in Nov. 2011. He was succeeded by Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi, who won the presidential election held in Feb. 2012 unopposed. However, the country remained in a volatile and unstable state as an insurgency by Shia Muslim Houthi rebels gathered momentum. By early 2015 the rebels claimed to have seized power from the Hadi government, which provoked military air strikes against them by a coalition of Sunni Muslim states, led by Saudi Arabia.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Yemen is bounded in the north by Saudi Arabia, east by Oman, south by the Gulf of Aden and west by the Red Sea. The territory includes 112 islands including Kamaran (181 sq. km) and Perim (300 sq. km) in the Red Sea and Socotra (3,500 sq. km) in the Gulf of Aden. On 15 Dec. 1995 Eritrean troops occupied the islands of Greater and Lesser Hanish, and Yemen retaliated with aerial bombardments. A ceasefire was agreed at presidential level on 17 Dec. On 20 Dec. the UN resolved to send a good offices mission to the area. In an agreement of 21 May 1996 brokered by France, Yemen and Eritrea renounced the use of force to settle the dispute and agreed to submit it to arbitration. Following a ruling issued by the Permanent Court of Arbitration in The Hague, Yemen assumed control of the main islands in 1998. The area is 555,000 sq. km excluding the desert Empty Quarter (Rub Al-Khali).

A dispute with Saudi Arabia broke out in Dec. 1994 over some 1,500–2,000 km of undemarcated desert boundary. A memorandum of understanding signed on 26 Feb. 1995 reaffirmed the border agreement reached at Taif in 1934, and on 12 June 2000 a 'final and permanent' border treaty between the two countries was signed. An agreement of June 1995 completed the demarcation of the border with Oman.

At the last census, in 2004, the population was 19,685,161; density, 35 persons per sq. km. In 2011, 32.4% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gave an estimated population for 2015 of 26.83m.

In 2004 there were 20 governorates plus the capital city, Sana'a:

	2004 census population		2004 census population
Abyan	433,819	Hajjah	1,479,568

The official language is Arabic.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009 estimates: births, 886,000; deaths, 163,000. Rates, 2009 estimates (per 1,000 population): birth, 38; death, 7. Yemen has one of the youngest populations of any country, with 75% of the population under the age of 30 and 44% under 15. Life expectancy, 2013, was 61.8 years for males and 64.5 years for females. Infant mortality, 2010, 57 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 2003–13, 2.5%; fertility rate, 2013, 4.1 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A desert climate, modified by relief. Sana'a, Jan. 57°F (13.9°C), July 71°F (21.7°C). Aden, Jan. 75°F (24°C), July 90°F (32°C). Annual rainfall 20" (508 mm) in the north, but very low in coastal areas: 1.8" (46 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Parliament consists of a 301-member Assembly of Representatives (Majlis al-Nuwaab), previously elected for a six-year term in single-seat constituencies, and a new people's transitional council created in Feb. 2015 when the Assembly of Representatives was briefly suspended in the wake of the Houthi rebel uprising. The Assembly was reinstated following UN-brokered talks between rival factions.

The constitution was adopted in May 1991 but was drastically amended in 1994 following the civil war. On 28 Sept. 1994 the Assembly of Representatives unanimously adopted the amended constitution founded on Islamic law. It abolished the former five-member Presidential Council and installed a President elected by parliament for a five-year term, subsequently amended to a seven-year term through a referendum held on 20 Feb. 2001. As a result of the same referendum the term for MPs was extended from four to six years. After popular protests in 2011 unseated President Saleh, his successor, Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi, was expected to oversee the drafting of a new constitution. However, Hadi was himself the subject of a coup in early 2015 during which the Houthi rebels established a rival administration. Houthi representatives had earlier refused to enter negotiations on ratification of a draft constitution submitted in Jan. 2015.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In presidential elections held on 21 Feb. 2012 the sole candidate, Vice President Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi, won 99.8% of the vote. Turnout was 65%.

Parliamentary elections were last held on 27 April 2003, in which the General People's Congress (MSA) gained 238 seats (58.0% of the vote), Yemeni Congregation for Reform (Islah) 46 seats (22.6%), Yemeni Socialist Party 8 seats (3.8%), Nasserite Unionist People's Organization (TWSN) 3 seats (1.9%), the Arab Socialist Rebirth Party (Baath) 2 seats (0.7%) and ind. 4 seats. Turnout was 76.0%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

In Jan. 2015 President Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi and Prime Minister Khaled Mahfoodh Abdullah Bahah resigned following an uprising led by the Houthi rebel group. The cabinet was also forced to resign and an interim government was installed by the Houthis. However, in Feb. 2015 al-Hadi, who had fled to the southern region of Aden, retracted his resignation and claimed to be still in control of the country.

De jure President: Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi (since 25 Feb. 2012).

Head of the Revolutionary Committee: Muhammad Ali al-Houthi (since 6 Feb. 2015).

CURRENT LEADERS

Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi

Position

De jure President

Introduction

Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi became president in Feb. 2012, ending 33 years of rule by Ali Abdullah Saleh, who was toppled following months of mass protests inspired by the Arab Spring. A career military officer from southern Yemen, Hadi was considered a moderate and was granted two years to manage a transition towards stability and unity. He resigned in Jan. 2015 following a takeover by Iranian-backed Houthi rebels of the capital but a month later withdrew his resignation and sought to wrestle back control of the country from the Houthis.

Early Life

Hadi was born on 1 May 1945 in Thukian, Abyan, in southern Yemen. He attended Aden Protectorate Army School, a private establishment for the sons of army officers in the former British colony. Graduating in 1964, he won a scholarship to the UK's Royal Military Academy at Sandhurst.

Following South Yemen's independence in Nov. 1967, Hadi served as leader of an armoured division at the Al-Anad military base. He undertook further training in Cairo in 1970, before being posted to the Al-Dhale region and serving on the mediation committee that successfully resolved a conflict with North Yemen in 1972. For much of the 1970s he managed South Yemen's military training establishment and spent time in Moscow studying military leadership. Promoted to deputy chief of staff in 1983, he was responsible for military liaison with the then Soviet Union.

Following Yemen's unification in May 1990, Hadi was a leading figure in the republic's new army. During the 1994 civil war he supported Ali Abdullah Saleh (the president and former leader of North Yemen) and was subsequently appointed vice president and minister of defence—the most senior position in the government held by a southerner.

Saleh stood down in Nov. 2011 after more than ten months of popular unrest interspersed with violent government crackdowns. In accordance with a UN Security Council resolution, he agreed to transfer power to Hadi for an interim period ahead of presidential elections. On 21 Feb. 2012 Hadi, the sole candidate, was elected president, with a reported voter turnout of 65%.

Career in Office

Hadi was sworn in to office on 25 Feb. 2012. Initially a popular figure within Yemen, he also received support from many neighbouring states. However, he faced a trying tenure in view of continued threats from al-Qaeda, the Houthi rebellion, a secessionist movement in the south, a weak economy and crumbling infrastructure. A conference of 'national dialogue', convened in March 2013 in an effort to resolve Yemen's social, political and demographic divisions, came to an end in Jan. 2014 after inconclusive talks. Elections planned for Feb. 2014 were meanwhile postponed indefinitely.

Hadi resigned on 22 Jan. 2015 following the Houthi rebel takeover of the capital that saw Hadi placed under house arrest and a Houthi-run administration installed. Against a backdrop of calls from the UN for his reinstatement, a month later Hadi escaped to Aden, which he declared the de facto capital, and withdrew his resignation. From March 2015 a Saudi Arabian-led coalition of Gulf Arab states showed its support for his regime by launching an air campaign against Houthi strongholds, which had caused an estimated 6,000 Yemeni deaths by Jan. 2016 amid a humanitarian crisis.

Muhammad Ali al-Houthi

Position

Head of the Revolutionary Committee

Introduction

Muhammad Ali al-Houthi became head of the Revolutionary Committee in Feb. 2015, during an Iranian-backed rebellion in which Houthi leaders wrested control of Sana'a and some other cities from President Hadi's government. However, al-Houthi's claim to rule has not been recognized by the international community.

Early Life

Muhammad Ali al-Houthi was born in 1979 in Yemen's northern Sa'dah province. He is a relative of Hussein Badr al Din al-Houthi, who in the 1990s co-founded Ansar Allah, a theological group affiliated with the Zaydi Shia. Ansar Allah split into factions from which emerged the armed Houthi movement. From 2004 it was under Hussein's leadership but following his death, his brother Abdul Malik took control. The Houthis have since led periodic uprisings against the government, demanding greater autonomy for Sa'dah province.

In Sept. 2014 the Houthis seized control of the capital Sana'a and agreed to a UN-brokered deal to take part in a unity government. However, in Jan. 2015 they rejected proposals to divide the country into six regions, forced the resignation of President Hadi (which he later retracted) and a month later replaced the government with a presidential council. A constitutional declaration was issued, announcing that the council would form a transitional government, and was signed by Muhammad Ali al-Houthi in the capacity of head of the Revolutionary Committee.

Career in Office

From 26 March 2015 a Saudi Arabian-led coalition conducted air strikes against Houthi targets, although by Jan. 2016 the campaign had failed to re-establish the authority of the Hadi government. Muhammad Ali al-Houthi was reportedly injured in the first attack.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for two years. Defence expenditure in 2013 totalled US$1,812m. (US$71 per capita), representing 4.7% of GDP.

Estimates of the number of small arms in the country are around 12m., equivalent to 61 firearms for every 100 people, making Yemen second only behind the USA as the world's most heavily armed country.

Army

Strength (2011), 60,000 (including conscripts). In 2011 there were paramilitary tribal levies numbering at least 20,000 and a Ministry of Security force of 50,000.

Navy

Navy forces are based at Aden and Al-Hudaydah, with other facilities at Mukalla, Perim and Socotra. Personnel in 2011 numbered 1,700.

Air Force

Personnel (2011), 3,000. There were 79 combat-capable aircraft in 2011 (F-5s, Su-22s, MiG-21s and MiG-29s).

ECONOMY

Trade, restaurants and hotels accounted for 21.5% of GDP in 2009; crude petroleum and natural gas, 18.5%; transport and communications, 13.1%; and agriculture, forestry and fishing, 12.1%.

Overview

Yemen is among the poorest countries in the Middle East, with little arable land and limited natural resources. Almost half of the population live without food security, while water resources are below the average for the region. Long-standing political and social unrest continues to hinder economic stability, reflected in the rising poverty rate from 45.0% in 2009 to 54.5% in 2012.

The economy slipped into recession in 2011, with GDP shrinking by 12.7%, before recovering in 2012 with growth of 2.4%. Oil production remains the main export and income source for the government, despite declining reserves. The oil industry is supported by heavy investment from Saudi Arabian companies.

Currency

The unit of currency is the riyal (YER) of 100 fiils. During the transitional period to north-south unification the northern riyal of 100 fiils and the southern dinar of 1,000 fiils co-existed. There were three foreign exchange rates operating: an internal clearing rate, an official rate and a commercial rate. In 1996 the official rate was abolished. Total money supply in June 2005 was 372,105m. riyals, gold reserves totalled 50,000 troy oz and foreign exchange reserves were US$5,253m. Inflation was 11.0% in 2013, falling to 8.2% in 2014.

Budget

The fiscal year is the calendar year. General government revenues in 2011 were 1,690bn. riyals and expenditures 1,876bn. riyals. Oil revenue accounted for 58.3% of total revenues in 2009. The main items of expenditure in 2009 were wages and salaries (36.5%) and subsidies (26.9%).

Performance

Real GDP grew by 7.7% in 2010, but shrunk by 12.7% in 2011 in the wake of political turmoil in Yemen that year. The economy then began to recover, expanding by 2.4% in 2012 and 4.8% in 2013. It then contracted again in 2014, by 0.2%. Total GDP in 2013 was US$36.0bn.

Banking and Finance

The Governor of the Central Bank of Yemen is Mohamed Awad Bin Humam. Total reserves of the Central Bank were 81,089m. riyals in 2002 and there were 446,287m. riyals in deposits. In 2009 foreign debt amounted to US$6,370m., which represented 25.6% of GNI.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Yemen's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy were the equivalent of 0.8 tonnes per capita in 2011.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 1.5m. kW in 2011. Production in 2011 was 6.21bn. kWh; consumption per capita was 266 kWh.

Oil and Gas

In 2012 there were oil reserves of 3.0bn. bbls, mostly near the former north-south border. Oil production (2012): 8.3m. tonnes. Natural gas reserves in 2012 were 500bn. cu. metres; production was 7.6bn. cu. metres.

Minerals

In 2008, 65,000 tonnes of salt were produced. In 2008, 100,000 tonnes of gypsum were extracted and 4.95m. cu. metres of quarried stone (including marble).

Agriculture

In 2007 there were around 1.38m. ha. of arable land and 250,000 ha. of permanent cropland. 772,000 ha. were irrigated in 2006. In the south, agriculture is largely of a subsistence nature, sorghum, sesame and millet being the chief crops, and wheat and barley being widely grown at the higher elevations. Cash crops include cotton. Fruit is plentiful in the north. Estimated production (2003, in 1,000 tonnes): tomatoes, 273; sorghum, 260; alfalfa, 242; potatoes, 213; oranges, 191; grapes, 169. Livestock in 2003 (estimates): goats, 7.3m.; sheep, 6.5m.; cattle, 1.4m.; chickens, 35m. Livestock products, 2003 estimates (in 1,000 tonnes): milk, 237; meat, 215.

Forestry

There were 0.55m. ha. of forest in 2010 (1% of the total land area). Timber production in 2011 was 456,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries

Fishing is a major industry. Total catch in 2012 was 230,516 tonnes, exclusively marine fish.

INDUSTRY

Output (2007 unless otherwise indicated, in 1,000 tonnes): cement (2009), 2,118; petrol, 1,127; distillate fuel oil, 991; residual fuel oil, 676; wheat flour (2003), 667; jet fuel, 486; kerosene, 97. In 2001 industry accounted for 49.2% of GDP, with manufacturing contributing 6.7%.

Labour

The labour force in 2013 was 7,343,000 (4,824,000 in 2003). 50.4% of the population aged 15–64 was economically active in 2013. In the same year 17.7% of the population was unemployed.

Yemen had 41,000 people living in slavery according to the Walk Free Foundation's 2013 Global Slavery Index.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Trade in US$1m.:

	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009
Imports c.i.f.	5,399.9	6,080.9	8,510.7	10,546.2	9,184.8
Exports f.o.b.	5,607.7	6,654.1	6,298.9	7,583.8	6,259.0

Main import suppliers, 2009: United Arab Emirates, 9.9%; China, 9.3%; USA, 6.4%; Japan, 5.6%. Main export markets, 2009: China, 25.2%; India, 20.1%; Thailand, 18.4%; Singapore, 6.9%.

Oil and fish are major exports, the largest imports being food and live animals, and transport and machinery equipment. Oil and oil products account for nearly 90% of exports. A large transshipment and entrepôt trade is centred on Aden, which was made a free trade zone in 1991.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were 71,300 km of roads in 2005 (8.7% paved). In 2007 there were 777,700 vehicles in use.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Sana'a and Aden. In 2012 Sana'a handled 1,598,661 passengers (1,176,447 on international flights) and 18,119 tonnes of freight. The national carrier is Yemenia, which operates internal services and in 2003 had international flights to Abu Dhabi, Addis Ababa, Amman, Asmara, Bahrain, Beirut, Cairo, Damascus, Dar es Salaam, Djibouti, Doha, Dubai, Frankfurt, Jakarta, Jeddah, Khartoum, Kuala Lumpur, London, Marseille, Milan, Moroni, Mumbai, Paris, Riyadh and Rome. In 2003 Yemenia flew 18m. km, carrying 844,000 passengers (622,000 on international flights).

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were seven ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 17,000 GT. There are ports at Aden, Mokha, Al-Hudaydah, Mukalla and Nashtoon.

Telecommunications

In 2012 there were 1,104,000 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscriptions numbered 13,900,000 in the same year (582.8 per 1,000 persons). In 2013 an estimated 20.0% of the population were internet users. In March 2012 there were 437,000 Facebook users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

A civil code based on Islamic law was introduced in 1992. Amnesty International reported that there were at least eight executions in 2015 (at least 22 in 2014).

The International Centre for Prison Studies estimated in 2014 that 70.1% of prisoners had yet to receive a trial.

Education

In 2005 there were 17,993 children in pre-primary schools, 3.21m. pupils in primary schools and 1.46m. pupils in secondary schools. In 2006 there were 209,386 students in higher education. The adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 62.4% (79.9% among males but only 44.7% among females, one of the biggest differences in literacy rates between the sexes of any country).

In 2008 total expenditure on education came to 5.2% of GDP and accounted for 16.0% of total government expenditure.

Health

In the period 2000–09 Yemen had seven hospital beds per 10,000 population. In the period 2000–10 there were 3.0 physicians for every 10,000 population, 6.6 nursing and midwifery personnel per 10,000 population, 1.0 dentistry personnel per 10,000 and 1.3 pharmaceutical personnel per 10,000.

RELIGION

More than 99% of the population in 2010 was Muslim (60–65% Sunnis and 35–40% Shias) according to the Pew Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life, with small Hindu and Christian minorities—an estimated 150,000 and 40,000 respectively.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

There are four sites under Yemeni jurisdiction that appear in the UNESCO World Heritage List. They are (with year entered on the list): the old walled city of Shibam (1982); the old city of Sana'a (1986); the historic town of Zabid (1993); and the Socotra Archipelago (2008).

Press

In 2008 there were five daily newspapers with a combined average daily circulation of 40,000.

Tourism

There were 829,000 international tourist arrivals—excluding same-day visitors—in 2011 (1,025,000 in 2010). Receipts from tourism in 2011 totalled US$783m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The earliest known inhabitants were nomadic bushmen. From the 4th century AD, Bantu tribes farmed the region and established villages. Copper was mined for weapons and tools and from the 11th century, trade developed with neighbouring regions in copper and textiles. From 1500–1900 the region was divided into four tribal kingdoms: the Kazembe-Lunda in the north, the Bemba in the northeast, the Chewa in the east and the Barotse, later known as the Lozi, in the west. An inland region, it was not penetrated by non-Africans until the late 18th century, when Portuguese traders arrived near Lake Mweru. The Scottish explorer David Livingstone followed in the mid-19th century, and in the 1880s the British colonialist and mining magnate, Cecil Rhodes, arrived.

As part of his expansion north from the Transvaal, Rhodes persuaded the British government to secure Bechuanaland in 1885, and in 1888 he obtained mining rights in the territory of the Ndebele, which reached to the Zambezi river. In 1890 the chief of the Lozi, Lewanika, granted Rhodes mining rights in Lozi territory (known as Barotseland) in return for British protection. In 1891 the British government granted Rhodes' British South Africa Company a charter to administer the area from the Zambezi river to Lake Tanganyika.

From 1900 the territory was administered as two separate protectorates, Northwestern and Northeastern Rhodesia. Lead, zinc and copper were discovered, attracting more European prospectors. In 1911 the two protectorates were merged to become Northern Rhodesia and in 1924 the British Crown took over direct administration, while the British South Africa Company retained mineral rights. The territory was governed through a legislative council whose members were elected by the European population. The detection of rich copper seams—known as the Copper Belt—led to a huge increase in mining activity. The European population grew tenfold to 40,000 over the next three decades. Meanwhile, the African majority (98% of the country) was increasingly voicing its opposition to European rule. In 1948 some African members were added to the legislative council. In the same year the country's first African political party, the Northern Rhodesian Congress, was established by members of welfare societies from mining and rural communities. Connected to the African National Congress (ANC), in 1951 it renamed itself the Northern Rhodesian African National Congress.

In 1953 the British government imposed a federation consisting of Northern Rhodesia, its southern self-governing neighbour Rhodesia and Nyasaland. The Federation was welcomed by most Europeans in the territories as a means of consolidating their economic and political control but was opposed by most Africans for the same reason. Political dissent grew, with each region pressing its own claims for independence. In 1958 Kenneth Kaunda led a breakaway group from the Northern Rhodesian ANC to found the more radical Zambian African National Congress. After he was jailed for leading a civil disobedience campaign, the United National Independence Party (UNIP) was formed and elected Kaunda its leader on his release in Jan. 1960. Membership grew rapidly, convincing the British to accept it as a negotiating partner. At a London conference in Dec. 1960, Kaunda and other UNIP members secured a timetable for independence.

Elections in 1962 resulted in a UNIP–ANC coalition. The Federation was dissolved on 31 Dec. 1963 and in general elections held that year, with universal adult suffrage, UNIP won a clear victory. On 24 Oct. 1964 the country declared independence as the Republic of Zambia, named after the Zambezi river. The government took over mineral rights and oversaw a period of prosperity until copper prices collapsed in the 1970s. Further difficulties were caused by UN-imposed sanctions on Rhodesia—a key trading partner for Zambia—and rising oil prices, so that by the late 1970s Zambia was greatly indebted to the IMF.

In response to domestic dissent, Kaunda brought in a series of centralizing and authoritarian measures, including a new constitution making Zambia a one-party state. Living standards fell as copper production, Zambia's biggest foreign exchange earner, almost halved. Food riots and widespread unrest resulted in the 1991 electoral victory of the Movement for Multi-Party Democracy (MMD). However, allegations of corruption dogged the MMD government throughout successive terms, while the economy remained weak. Privatization of the copper mines in 2000 and other market-orientated reforms in the early 2000s reduced inflation but food security remained a serious issue. Failed harvests in 2001 resulted in the country receiving food aid.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Zambia is bounded by the Democratic Republic of the Congo in the north, Tanzania in the northeast, Malawi in the east, Mozambique in the southeast, Zimbabwe and Namibia in the south, and Angola in the west. The area is 752,612 sq. km (290,584 sq. miles). Population (2010 census), 13,092,666; population density, 17·4 per sq. km. In 2011, 35·9% of the population were urban.

The UN gave an estimated population for 2015 of 16·21m.

The republic is divided into ten provinces. Area, population at the 2010 census and chief towns:

Province	Area (in sq. km)	Population	Chief Town
Central	94,394	1,307,111	Kabwe
Copperbelt	31,328	1,972,317	Ndola
Eastern	51,620	1,592,661	Chipata
Luapula	50,567	991,927	Mansa

Southern	85,283	1,589,926	Livingstone
Western	126,386	902,974	Mongu

¹Muchinga Province, consisting of districts from Northern and Eastern provinces, was established in 2011.

The capital is Lusaka, which had a census population in 2010 of 1,747,152. Other major towns (with 2010 census population in 1,000) are: Kitwe, 501; Ndola, 451; Kabwe, 202; Chingola, 185; Mufulira, 151; Livingstone 134; Luanshya, 130.

The population consists of over 70 Bantu-speaking ethnic groups, with the main groups being the Bemba (18%), Tonga (10%), Nyanja (8%) and Lozi (6%). The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Estimates, 2008: births, 541,000; deaths, 218,000. Estimated birth rate in 2008 was 42.9 per 1,000 population; estimated death rate, 17.3. Zambia's life expectancy at birth in 2013 was 56.3 years for males and 60.0 for females. Life expectancy was declining for many years, largely owing to the huge number of people in the country with HIV, although it has now begun to rise again slowly. In 2009, 13.5% of all adults between 15 and 49 were infected with HIV. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.3%. Infant mortality, 2010, 69 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 5.8 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is tropical, but has three seasons. The cool, dry one is from May to Aug., a hot dry one follows until Nov., when the wet season commences. Frosts may occur in some areas in the cool season. Lusaka, Jan. 70°F (21.1°C), July 61°F (16.1°C). Annual rainfall 33" (836 mm). Livingstone, Jan. 75°F (23.9°C), July 61°F (16.1°C). Annual rainfall 27" (673 mm). Ndola, Jan. 70°F (21.1°C), July 59°F (15°C). Annual rainfall 52" (1,293 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Zambia has a unicameral legislature. The National Assembly consists of 158 members, of whom 150 are directly elected in single-member constituencies and eight are appointed by the president. The constitution was adopted on 24 Aug. 1991 and was amended in 1996 to restrict the president from serving more than two terms of office. Further amendments ratified in Jan. 2016 set a fixed date for elections (the second Thursday in Aug. every fifth year) and require the president to win an overall majority at the polls. Presidential candidates must also select a running-mate who automatically serves as vice president and succeeds the president in the event of the president's death while in office. Provision was also made for individuals to hold dual citizenship and for the establishment of a constitutional court.

National Anthem

'Lumbanyeni Zambia' ('Stand and Sing of Zambia'); words collective, tune by M. E. Sontonga.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections held following the death of incumbent president Michael Sata in Oct. 2014 took place on 20–21 Jan. 2015. Edgar Lungu (Patriotic Front/PF) won 48.3% of the vote, beating Hakainde Hichilema (United Party for National Development) with 46.7%. Nine other candidates received less than 1% of the vote each. Turnout was 32.4%.

In the parliamentary elections held on 20 Sept. 2011 the Patriotic Front gained 61 of the 150 elected seats in the National Assembly; the Movement for Multi-Party Democracy took 55, the United Party for National Development 29, the Alliance for Democracy and Development 1 and the Forum for Democracy and Development also 1. Three seats went to independents and two were vacant. Turnout was 54.0%.

Presidential and parliamentary elections were scheduled to take place on 11 Aug. 2016.

CURRENT LEADERS

Edgar Lungu

Position

President

Introduction

Edgar Chagwa Lungu became president in Jan. 2015, replacing Guy Scott, who served as interim president following the death of Michael Sata in Oct. 2014. Lungu, who leads the Patriotic Front (PF), is expected to serve out the rest of Sata's term until elections that were scheduled for Aug. 2016, when he was able to run for a five-year term. A lawyer by training, he served as minister of justice and minister of defence under Sata.

Early Life

Lungu was born on 11 Nov. 1956 and grew up in Kitwe. He enrolled as an officer cadet at the military training academy at Miltez, in Kabwe, but left to read law at the University of Zambia (UNZA). He graduated in 1982 and practised as a lawyer in the ministry of legal affairs before moving into the corporate sector. In 1983 he obtained a practising certificate from the Zambian Institute of Advanced Legal Education (ZIALE) and joined a law firm in Lusaka.

Lungu's political career began in 2001 when he joined Sata's newly-founded PF. When the PF won the 2011 elections, Lungu became a junior minister in the vice president's office. He was promoted to minister of home affairs in 2012, took over the defence portfolio a year later and was named minister of justice in 2014. He was acting president when Sata suffered a bout of illness in 2013 and 2014. In Nov. 2014 Guy Scott, then serving as interim president, dismissed Lungu as secretary-general of the PF but the decision was reversed and Lungu was subsequently elected party leader. In Jan. 2015 he narrowly won the presidential election.

Career in Office

Announcing his first cabinet in the same month, Lungu appointed Inonge Wina as Zambia's first ever female vice president. In Feb. 2015 he also appointed a new governor of the central bank in an attempt to redirect monetary policy in order to lower interest rates and boost business. His most pressing economic challenges include managing relations with mining companies facing significant rises in royalty payments from April 2015. He also aims to encourage increased investment from China.

Six weeks after taking office Lungu suffered a collapse and went for treatment in South Africa. He was released from hospital a week later.

DEFENCE

In 2013 defence expenditure totalled US$390m. (US$27 per capita), representing 1.7% of GDP.

Army

Strength (2011) 13,500. There are also two paramilitary police units totalling 1,400.

Air Force

In 2011 the Air Force had 18 combat-capable aircraft (MiG-21s and K-8s). Serviceability of most types is reported to be low. Personnel (2011) 1,600.

ECONOMY

In 2011 agriculture accounted for 19.5% of GDP, industry 37.4% and services 43.1%.

Overview

GDP growth averaged 5.8% in the decade to 2011 and the government has worked with the IMF to ensure macroeconomic stability, leading to a significant reduction in inflation. However, strong economic performance is yet to translate into significant poverty reduction, with 60% of the population living below the poverty line.

Copper accounts for the majority of export earnings, making the country vulnerable to relatively small fluctuations in the world copper price. The construction and communications sectors have been strong drivers of growth since the turn of the century but Zambia remains heavily dependent on foreign aid.

Currency

The unit of currency is the new kwacha (ZMW) of 100 ngwee. It replaced the kwacha (ZMK) on 1 Jan. 2013 at a rate of 1,000 old kwacha = 1 new kwacha. Foreign exchange reserves were US$477m. in July 2005. Inflation was 7.0% in 2013 and 7.8% in 2014. Total money supply in June 2005 was 2,140.3bn. kwacha.

Budget

The fiscal year is the calendar year. Budgetary central government revenues in 2010 totalled 15,173.3bn. kwacha and expenditures 13,323.9bn. kwacha. Taxes contributed 84.9% of revenue in 2010; wages and salaries accounted for 42.5% of expenditure, with use of goods and services accounting for 23.9%.

VAT is 16%.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 6.8% in 2012, 6.7% in 2013 and 5.6% in 2014. Total GDP in 2014 was US$27.1bn.

Banking and Finance

The central bank is the Bank of Zambia (Governor, Denny Kalyalya). In 2003 there were five commercial banks, six foreign banks and four development banks. The Bank of Zambia monitors and supervises the operations of financial institutions. Banks and building societies are governed by the Banking and Financial Services Act 1994. Foreign debt totalled US$3,689m. in 2010, representing 25.8% of GNI.

There is a stock exchange in Lusaka.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Zambia's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy in 2011 were the equivalent of 0.2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2011 was 2.0m. kW. Production in 2011 was 11.46bn. kWh, almost exclusively hydro-electric; consumption per capita was 799 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Oil and gas were both discovered in the northwest of Zambia in 2006. Exploration licenses have been issued both to local and to foreign companies.

Minerals

Minerals produced (in 1,000 tonnes): copper (2009), 697; cobalt (2009), 1.5; silver (2009 estimate), 6,000 kg; gold (2009 estimate), 3,100 kg. Zambia is well-endowed with gemstones, especially emeralds, amethysts, aquamarine, tourmaline and garnets. Zambia Consolidated Copper Mines, privatized in 2000, is the country's largest employer. In 2011, 220,000 tonnes of coal were produced.

Agriculture

70% of the population is dependent on agriculture. There were an estimated 5.26m. ha. of arable land in 2007 and 29,000 ha. of permanent crops. Principal agricultural products (2003 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 1,800; maize, 1,161; wheat, 100; seed cotton, 62; sweet potatoes, 53; groundnuts, 42.

Livestock (2003 estimates): cattle, 2.6m.; goats, 1.3m.; pigs, 340,000; sheep, 150,000; chickens, 30m.

Forestry

Forests covered 49.47m. ha. in 2010, or 67% of the total land area. Timber production in 2011 was 10.57m. cu. metres, most of it for fuel.

Fisheries

Total catch, 2010, 76,396 tonnes (exclusively from inland waters).

INDUSTRY

In 2011 industry accounted for 37.4% of GDP, with manufacturing contributing 8.4%. Industrial production grew by 4.4% in 2011. Zambia's economy is totally dependent upon its mining sector. Other industries include construction, foodstuffs, beverages, chemicals and textiles.

Labour

The labour force totalled 5,966,199 in 2012 (51.6% female); 52.2% of those in employment were engaged in agriculture. The unemployment rate was 7.8% in 2012.

Zambia had 96,000 people living in slavery according to the Walk Free Foundation's 2013 Global Slavery Index.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Goods imports in 2014 totalled US$9,539.0m. (US$10,161.8m. in 2013) and goods exports US$9,687.9m. (US$10,594.1m. in 2013).

Principal imports in 2014 were machinery and transport (31.7%), crude materials and animal and vegetable oils, and manufactured goods; main exports in 2014 were manufactured goods (79.3%), food, animals and beverages, and chemicals. Copper accounts for more than 60% of exports.

The leading import supplier in 2010 was South Africa (34.4%), followed by the Democratic Republic of the Congo and Kuwait; the leading export destination in 2010 was Switzerland (51.0%), followed by China and South Africa.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were, in 2001, 91,440 km of roads, including 4,222 km of highway. 131,100 passenger cars were in use in 2007 and there were 75,500 trucks and vans.

Rail

In 2005 there were 1,271 km of the state-owned Zambia Railways (ZR) and 891 km of the Tanzania-Zambia (Tazara) Railway, both on 1,067 mm gauge. A 27-km stretch of railway linking Chipata in the east of the country with Mchinji in Malawi was opened in Aug. 2010. This links with the existing railway to Nacala, one of Mozambique's leading ports.

Civil Aviation

The former flag carrier, Zambian Airways, operated internal flights and in 2007 flew to Dar es Salaam, Harare and Johannesburg as well as operating domestic services, but ceased flying in Jan. 2009. Lusaka is the principal international airport. In 2012 Lusaka International handled 925,077 passengers (684,548 on international flights) and 5,194 tonnes of freight. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Zambian-based carriers flew 2m. km, carrying 45,000 passengers (17,000 on international flights).

Telecommunications

In 2013 there were 116,000 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscriptions numbered 10,396,000 in the same year (715.0 per 1,000 persons). In 2013 an estimated 15.4% of the population were internet users. In June 2012 there were 236,000 Facebook users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Judiciary consists of the Supreme Court, the High Court and four classes of magistrates' courts; all have civil and criminal jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court hears and determines appeals from the High Court. Its seat is at Lusaka. The High Court exercises the powers vested in the High Court in England, subject to the High Court ordinance of Zambia. Its sessions are held where occasion requires, mostly at Lusaka and Ndola. All criminal cases tried by subordinate courts are subject to revision by the High Court.

The death penalty is authorized, although there have not been any executions since 1997. The population in penal institutions in Sept. 2013 was 17,021 (119 per 100,000 of national population). Zambia was ranked 65th of 102 countries for criminal justice and 71st for civil justice in the 2015 World Justice Project Rule of Law Index, which provides data on how the rule of law is experienced by the general public across eight categories.

Education

Schooling is for nine years. In April 2002 then President Mwanawasa announced the reintroduction of universal free primary education, abolished under former President Chiluba. In 2007 there were 2,790,312 pupils in primary schools with 56,557 teaching staff and 607,296 pupils in secondary schools with 14,246 teaching staff.

There are three universities and a National Institute of Public Administration. The University of Zambia, at Lusaka, was founded in 1965 and had 10,122 students in 2007. Copperbelt University, at Kitwe, founded in 1987, had 4,273 students in 2007. Mulungushi University, near Kabwe, was founded in 2008.

The adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 70.9% (80.6% among males and 61.3% among females).

In 2008 public expenditure on education came to 1.3% of GDP.

Health

In 2004 there were 1,264 physicians, 19,014 nurses, 2,996 midwives, 491 dentists and 1,039 pharmacists. There were 88 public hospitals in 2004, with a total of 22,800 beds (207 per 100,000 population).

RELIGION

In 1993 the then president declared Zambia to be a Christian nation, but freedom of worship is a constitutional right. In 2010 there were an estimated 8.87m. Protestants, 2.75m. Catholics and 1.1m. other Christians according to the Pew Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Zambia shares one site with Zimbabwe on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the Victoria Falls/Mosi-oa-Tunya (inscribed on the list in 1989), waterfalls on the Zambezi River.

Press

In 2008 there were three paid-for daily papers, The Post, the Times of Zambia and the Zambia Daily Mail. The Post is privately-owned and the Times of Zambia and the Zambia Daily Mail state-owned.

Tourism

There were a record 906,000 international tourist arrivals—excluding same-day visitors—in 2011 (815,000 in 2010 and 710,000 in 2009). Receipts from tourism in 2011 totalled US$146m.

Festivals

The N'cwala ceremony is held in Feb. by the Ngoni people to commemorate their arrival in Zambia in 1835 and the first produce of the year. The Kuomboka, in Feb. or March, is the canoe procession of the Lozi chief and his family from the palace at Lealui down the Zambezi to Limulunga for the rainy season. The National Fishing Competition is held at Lake Tanganyika in March. Likumbi Lya Mize, held at Mize in July, celebrates the Luvale tribe's cultural heritage. The Livingstone Cultural and Arts Festival, held annually in Sept. since 1994, brings together many of Zambia's tribes and their traditional rulers. Independence Day is celebrated on 24 Oct.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Archaeological evidence shows human settlement dating back several thousand years. The Khoisan people were early inhabitants of the region, followed from around AD 500 by the Bantu-speaking Gokomere. Trading civilizations flourished from the 9th century, culminating in the Mwene Mutapa Empire (Empire of Great Zimbabwe) from the 15th century. Its stronghold was a fortified stone town known as Great Zimbabwe ('houses of stone'), which was founded around 1000 and had a population of up to 18,000 at its peak. During the 16th and 17th centuries the area came under partial control by the Portuguese until the Shona people defeated them in 1693 and established the Rozwi Empire. This fell to the migrating Ndebele (Matabele) in 1834.

King Lobengula of Matabeleland signed the Rudd Concession on 13 Oct. 1888, giving the British mining rights. The British South Africa Company, under Cecil Rhodes, colonized the territory from 1890. European immigration increased after white settlers won the first Matabele war in 1893–94. Following unsuccessful Ndebele and Shona uprisings in 1896 and 1897, indigenous people were increasingly displaced from their land. In 1911 the region was divided into Southern and Northern Rhodesia (see ZAMBIA: Key Historical Events) and in 1923 became a self-governing colony. In 1953 Southern and Northern Rhodesia joined with Nyasaland to form the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, a move opposed by African nationalists who feared it would entrench white minority rule. The South Rhodesian African National Congress was founded in 1957 and campaigned for self-rule by the African majority until it was banned in 1960. After unrest mounted in Nyasaland and neighbouring states, the federation was dissolved on 31 Dec. 1963 and Southern Rhodesia reverted to self-governing colony status within the British Commonwealth under the name of Rhodesia.

On 11 Nov. 1965 Rhodesia's white-dominated government issued a unilateral declaration of independence (UDI) to forestall any British attempt to grant black majority rule. The British governor dismissed the prime minister, Ian Smith, and his cabinet, and the British government reasserted its formal responsibility for Rhodesia although the Smith cabinet was effectively left to run the country. Britain imposed economic sanctions, as did the UN in 1968. On 2 March 1970 the Smith government declared Rhodesia a republic and adopted a new constitution. From 1966–79 the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU) and its off-shoot, the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU)—both of which were banned—led a sporadic guerrilla campaign. On 3 March 1978 Smith signed a constitutional agreement with the internationally-backed nationalist leaders. A draft constitution was published in Jan. 1979 and accepted by the white electorate in a referendum. Following the Commonwealth Conference in Lusaka in Aug. 1979, elections in March 1980 resulted in victory for ZANU. Southern Rhodesia became the Republic of Zimbabwe on 18 April 1980.

Political conflict between ZANU and ZAPU supporters in Matabeleland led to allegations of atrocities by government forces in 1983–84. Land reform—the redistribution of good farming land from the minority white population to the African population—became a pressing issue. President Mugabe's government bought 3.5m. ha. of land from white farmers, with the UK funding the £44m. bill. However, only 70,000 families benefited amid allegations of government profiteering. In early 2000 a policy of land occupation began, with black settlers taking over white-owned farms by force. President Mugabe ignored international pressure to restore the rule of law and violence escalated. During campaigning for the 2002 presidential election, which failed to meet international democratic standards, the opposition leader, Morgan Tsvangirai, was charged with treason. Zimbabwe was suspended from the Commonwealth in March 2002 over the conduct of the election and when the suspension was extended in 2003 it pulled out altogether.

In the early 2000s agricultural production fell drastically, the result of drought and of the continuing land seizures. In Sept. 2005 President Mugabe nationalized all land and ended the right of landowners to challenge government expropriations in the courts. In May 2005 the government began the mass demolition of urban slums, claiming it would improve law and order. Around 700,000 people were left homeless. The conduct of parliamentary and Senate elections in 2005, which resulted in victory for President Mugabe's party, was criticized by the international community and in March 2007 evidence that Morgan Tsvangirai had been tortured by police caused an international outcry. In 2006 and 2007 the population experienced mass hunger, with UNICEF estimating that 4m. needed aid. The country's AIDS pandemic continued to worsen in 2007, with 24% of children under 17 orphaned by the disease.

In 2008 elections held against a backdrop of hyperinflation, Mugabe's ZANU-PF lost their parliamentary majority—to the Movement for Democratic Change (MDC)—for the first time since independence. Mugabe retained the presidency when Morgan Tsvangirai, leader of the MDC, pulled out of a run-off, claiming his supporters had suffered intimidation at the hands of Mugabe's supporters. An international outcry forced Mugabe into talks with Tsvangirai that resulted in a power-sharing agreement in Sept. 2008. The agreement faltered over the allocation of ministries until the composition of the new cabinet was finalized in Feb. 2009. By the end of 2008 millions of civilians relied on food relief, while a cholera outbreak had claimed over 2,000 lives by Jan. 2009, with 1,500 new cases a day being reported.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Zimbabwe is bounded in the north by Zambia, east by Mozambique, south by South Africa and west by Botswana and the Caprivi Strip of Namibia. The area is 390,757 sq. km (150,871 sq. miles). Population at the 2012 census, 13,061,239 (6,780,700 female); density, 33.4 per sq. km. In 2011, 38.8% of the population were urban. Although the population is still rising, it has done so at a lower rate than had been previously expected, partly owing to the large number of AIDS-related deaths and partly as a result of over 3m. Zimbabweans having left the country as President Mugabe's grip on power strengthened, with the vast majority choosing to live in South Africa. However, since 2010 the growth rate has accelerated again.

The UN gave an estimated population for 2015 of 15.60m.

There are eight provinces and two cities, Harare and Bulawayo, with provincial status. Area and population (2012 census):

	Area (sq. km)	Population
Bulawayo	479	653,337
Harare	872	2,123,132
Manicaland	36,459	1,752,698
Mashonaland Central	28,347	1,152,520
Mashonaland East	32,230	1,344,955
Mashonaland West	57,441	1,501,656
Masvingo	56,566	1,485,090
Matabeleland North	75,025	749,017
Matabeleland South	54,172	683,893
Midlands	49,166	1,614,941

Harare, the capital, had a population in 2012 of 1,485,231. Other main cities (with 2012 census populations) were Bulawayo (653,337), Chitungwiza (356,840), Mutare (186,208) and Epworth (167,462). The population is approximately 98% African, 1% mixed and Asian and there are around 70,000 whites. The main ethno-linguistic groups are the Shona (71%), Ndebele (16%), Ndaou (3%) and Nyanja (3%). Other smaller ones include Kalanga, Manyika, Tonga and Lozi.

The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 373,000; deaths, 199,000. Rates (2008 estimates, per 1,000 population); birth, 29.9; death, 16.0. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 0.0%. Zimbabwe's expectation of life at birth in 2013 was 60.8 years for females and 58.8 for males, up from an average of 42.9 years in 2003 thanks to a sharp decline in the HIV prevalence attributed mainly to changes in sexual behaviour and to some extent to effective preventive programmes. Overall life expectancy had reached 61.4 years in 1985 before Zimbabwe was affected by the HIV/AIDS epidemic. In 2009, 14.3% of all adults between 15 and 49 were infected with HIV. Infant mortality, 2010, 51 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 3.4 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Though situated in the tropics, conditions are remarkably temperate throughout the year because of altitude, and an inland position keeps humidity low. The warmest weather occurs in the three months before the main rainy season, which starts in Nov. and lasts until March. The cool season is from mid-May to mid-Aug. and, though days are mild and sunny, nights are chilly. Harare, Jan. 69°F (20.6°C), July 57°F (13.9°C). Annual rainfall 33" (828 mm). Bulawayo, Jan. 71°F (21.7°C), July 57°F (13.9°C). Annual rainfall 24" (594 mm). Victoria Falls, Jan. 78°F (25.6°C), July 61°F (16.1°C). Annual rainfall 28" (710 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

In May 2013 a new constitution was signed into law, replacing one that had been in force since 1980. In a referendum on 16 March 2013 it received 92.9% support and won the required two-thirds support in the House of Assembly and the Senate along with presidential approval two months later, having been supported by both ZANU-PF and the MDC.

Under its terms, the executive President is limited to two five-year terms (not to be implemented retrospectively, ensuring that the incumbent, Robert Mugabe, qualified for up to a further two terms despite having held office since 1980). The House of Assembly is elected by universal suffrage for five-year terms and comprises 210 members elected by secret ballot in 210 constituencies plus, for the first two parliaments, 60 seats for women elected by proportional representation. The Senate is made up of 80 members (six each from ten provinces elected by proportional representation, 18 Chiefs and two representatives of disabled persons).

The 2013 constitution also provided for a strengthened Bill of Rights, removed immunity for presidents once they have left office, strengthened the powers of the judiciary and established a National Peace and Reconciliation Commission.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential and parliamentary elections took place on 31 July 2013. Robert Mugabe won the presidential election with 61.1% of the vote. Morgan Tsvangirai finished second with 33.9%, Welshman Ncube third with 2.7% and two other candidates both received less than 1% of the vote. Tsvangirai accused Mugabe of fraud and rejected the result.

Of the 210 seats contested on the same day in the House of Assembly the Zimbabwe African National Union-Patriotic Front (ZANU-PF) won 160 seats, against 49 for the Movement for Democratic Change-Tsvangirai (MDC-T). The remaining seat was won by an independent. Of the 60 available seats in the Senate, the ZANU-PF won 37 and the MDC-T 21. The Movement for Democratic Change-Ncube (MDC-N) won the two remaining seats.

CURRENT LEADERS

Robert Mugabe

Position

President

Introduction

Robert Mugabe came to power as newly independent Zimbabwe's (formerly Rhodesia) first prime minister in 1980, becoming president in 1987. Although initially hailed as a democratic reformer, his economic mismanagement of the country, violent electoral campaigns and controversial programme of land seizures have tarnished his image at home and abroad. He has defended his land reform programme as the conclusion of the process of decolonization, but his policies have been widely perceived as short-term political expediency for the maintenance of personal power. In the wake of the disputed presidential elections in 2008, Mugabe conceded to power-sharing with the opposition Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) after protracted negotiations. He nevertheless maintained his autocratic grip on the country and was re-elected in July 2013.

Early Life

The son of a carpenter, Robert Gabriel Mugabe was born 21 Feb. 1924 at Kutama mission, northwest of Harare. After an early education at a Roman Catholic mission school, he studied at the University College of Fort Hare, South Africa, marking the beginning of an academic career boasting seven university degrees, three of which he completed during imprisonment. He worked as a primary school teacher in Ghana from 1956–60 when he returned to Rhodesia and joined Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU). In 1963 he became a founding member of the breakaway Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU) with Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole. A year later Mugabe was arrested for subversion and imprisoned, without trial, for ten years. Despite imprisonment, he remained politically active and was able to orchestrate, in 1974, a coup against Sithole to become party leader. In 1975, freed from prison, Mugabe joined Nkomo as joint leader of the Patriotic Front of Zimbabwe which waged a guerrilla war against Ian Smith's white Rhodesian Front government. In 1980 independence was achieved and parliamentary elections took place in which Mugabe, at the head of ZANU, won a landslide victory to become prime minister.

Career in Office

In office Mugabe appeared set to usher in a bright new era for the country. Having built a coalition government with ZAPU, he adopted a conciliatory stance towards the white, landowning minority. He introduced higher wages, credit programmes and food subsidies for poor farmers, a better infrastructure and equal land rights for women. Reform in the education system saw primary school enrolment trebled and secondary school enrolment increased fivefold during the first ten years of his rule (with Zimbabwe laying claim to the highest literacy rate of any African nation).

Troubles began in 1982 when ethnic turmoil between the Shona majority (represented by ZANU) and the Ndebele minority (represented by ZAPU) broke out after Mugabe dismissed Nkomo and ZAPU from government. The ensuing violence prompted much of the white population to emigrate, in turn creating an economic downturn. Centred in Matabeleland, the conflict drew international attention after the discovery of mass graves and alleged atrocities.

In 1987 Mugabe won the presidential elections and set about bringing ZAPU back into government. A unity agreement was signed and Nkomo became senior minister in a newly formed Zimbabwe African National Union-Patriotic Front (ZANU-PF) government. Mugabe was again re-elected in 1990 (in polling marred by violence) and 1996, but throughout the 1990s he adopted a series of unpopular policies. His military support for President Kabila's beleaguered government in the Democratic Republic of the Congo led to strikes within his own country. An announcement of pay increases for himself and his party officials in 1998 prompted rioting, coming as it did amidst a growing economic crisis. Plans to raise food and fuel prices and to introduce a tax to support war veterans from the 1970s were blocked by trades unions and further diminished his popularity.

In Feb. 2000 Mugabe lost a referendum in which he sought to increase his presidential powers. Blaming the white minority for the defeat, he then targeted the issue of land ownership. A programme of violent land seizure followed, with black settlers taking over white-owned farms. A court order to halt the seizures was ignored and Mugabe subsequently replaced high court judges with political allies. In June 2000 parliamentary elections were held. Mugabe won the elections, but only by a narrow margin and after a campaign of intimidation which led to more than 30 deaths.

Mugabe was re-elected president in March 2002. Final results gave him 56.2% of the vote against 42.0% for opposition rival, Morgan Tsvangirai, the leader of the MDC. However, the elections failed to meet international democratic standards. They were preceded by violence against opposition supporters, the passing of a law limiting press freedom, the withdrawal of the European Union monitoring team and the arrest of Mugabe's main political rival on charges of treason. As a result, Zimbabwe was suspended from the Commonwealth and a range of targeted sanctions from the UK, the USA and the EU were placed on Mugabe and his cabinet. In March 2003 the USA froze Zimbabwean assets and forbade US citizens from undertaking economic dealings with Mugabe and his government colleagues.

The state of political uncertainty and violence following the 2000 referendum damaged investor confidence, causing export prices to decline and unemployment and food shortages to rise. Coupled with this, severe drought in early 2002 raised the threat of mass starvation. In April 2002 Mugabe declared a state of disaster, allowing him the temporary use of 'extraordinary measures' to cope with the situation. Although little was done in practical terms to relieve the threat of famine, Mugabe pushed ahead with the land redistribution programme. In June 2002 he ordered almost 3,000 white farmers to leave their land within 45 days, or face imprisonment. In Sept. 2002 new legislation was passed allowing farmers only a week's notice after receiving an eviction order. In March 2003 Amnesty International reported that up to 500 people had been arrested following a general strike, with members of the MDC especially targeted. In the same month the Commonwealth extended Zimbabwe's suspension until at least Dec. 2003. In June 2003 police detained Tsvangirai, who had called for mass popular protests against Mugabe's government, and in Jan. 2004 he went on trial for treason. Although he was acquitted in Oct. 2004 of charges relating to an assassination plot against Mugabe, he still faced a separate treason charge. Meanwhile, relations with the international community worsened. In Dec. 2003 the Commonwealth (despite South African disapproval) again extended Zimbabwe's suspension, prompting Mugabe's withdrawal from the organization.

At the parliamentary elections in March 2005, ZANU-PF took 78 of 150 seats. The MDC claimed that there had been widespread vote rigging and intimidation. Then, in May, Mugabe's government launched a demolition of urban slum dwellings and illegal settlements, including business premises, around the country without compensation. The policy drew international condemnation as an estimated 700,000 people (according to the UN) lost their homes, or source of livelihood, or both. In Aug. 2005 parliament approved amendments to the constitution, including the reintroduction of the Senate, which had been abolished in 1990. Other changes provided for the government to confiscate passports of those deemed to pose a threat to national security and to strengthen control over land redistribution with no right of appeal. Also in Aug., the authorities dropped the remaining treason charge against Tsvangirai. ZANU-PF won the Nov. 2005 elections to the new Senate, securing an overwhelming majority of 66 seats amid low voter turnout and opposition calls for a boycott.

Repression of the MDC and wider opposition intensified from 2006, particularly in March 2007 when Tsvangirai was beaten by security forces and hospitalized after his arrest at a political rally. A meeting of regional leaders subsequently invited South Africa's president, Thabo Mbeki, to mediate in Zimbabwe's political and economic crisis. In Dec. 2007 Mugabe's presence at the EU-Africa summit in Lisbon provoked criticism of his regime's abuse of human rights.

Mugabe was endorsed as the ZANU-PF candidate for the March 2008 presidential (and parliamentary) elections. After a relatively peaceful campaign the MDC made a strong showing and ZANU-PF lost its legislative majority. Tsvangirai also claimed outright victory in the presidential race but Mugabe challenged the results. Despite international pressure, the electoral commission delayed the publication of results and a second round run-off was scheduled. There followed an orchestrated campaign of brutality against supporters of the opposition, which led to the withdrawal of Tsvangirai from the race in June. The international community was united in its condemnation of Mugabe's actions. The electoral crisis took place against a backdrop of economic meltdown.

Under international pressure, talks between Mugabe and Tsvangirai were brokered in Aug. 2008, which resulted in a deal the following month that saw Mugabe remain as president while Tsvangirai was to become executive prime minister. However, implementation of the agreement then stalled for several months over the allocation of cabinet posts between ZANU-PF and the MDC. The political deadlock was further exacerbated by the collapse of the economy and of basic services, which contributed to a serious outbreak of the disease cholera in Nov. 2008. In Jan. 2009, after months of acrimony and pressure from neighbouring states, Mugabe agreed to put power-sharing into effect and on 11 Feb. Tsvangirai was sworn in as prime minister. However, the failure of Mugabe's military and security service chiefs to attend the inauguration ceremony and the controversial detention of an MDC ministerial nominee did not represent an auspicious start for the new unity government.

In Sept. 2009 the EU sent its first high-level delegation to Zimbabwe for several years but refused to lift targeted sanctions. Donors were also cautious about releasing aid money to the government, fearing that it could be misused. In Oct. Mugabe called for improved relations with the West but added that the lifting of sanctions, which he blamed for ruining the country's economy, was an essential prerequisite. Mugabe's supporters had meanwhile continued to harass MDC activists, leading in Oct. to a stand-off between Mugabe and Tsvangirai in which the latter led an MDC boycott of cabinet meetings. The boycott was called off, however, after the intervention of the Southern African Development Community, which insisted that all 'outstanding issues' in the power-sharing pact be finally settled.

In Dec. 2009 Mugabe was re-elected as ZANU-PF leader for a further five years at a party congress in Harare. From 2010 he became increasingly outspoken about the shortcomings of the power-sharing agreement. He was again endorsed at the ZANU-PF congress in Dec. 2010 as the party's candidate for presidential elections that were scheduled to be held in 2013. In Feb. 2011, and again in Feb. 2012, the EU eased some sanctions on Zimbabwe but expressed concern at ZANU-PF's continuing failure to honour the unity government pact and at the reported rise in political violence and intimidation directed against the MDC.

In March 2013 a new constitution, which limited future presidents to two terms in office, was approved in a referendum, paving the way for elections at the end of July. Mugabe retained the presidency to extend his 33-year rule while ZANU-PF claimed an overwhelming majority of parliamentary seats, so ending the MDC's involvement in power-sharing. The results were denounced by Tsvangirai as fraudulent and a sham, and in Sept. the MDC boycotted the opening of the new parliament.

In Dec. 2014 Mugabe dismissed Joyce Mujuru as vice president and also sacked seven cabinet ministers, accusing them of corruption and plotting to kill him. Mujuru was replaced by justice minister Emmerson Mnangagwa.

In Jan. 2015 Mugabe was selected to serve as chairman for a year of the African Union. For the rest of that year speculation mounted in Zimbabwe and abroad about a likely successor to the ailing 91-year-old president.

DEFENCE

In 2013 military expenditure totalled US$356m. (US$27 per capita), representing 3.2% of GDP.

Army

Strength in 2011 was estimated at 25,000. There were a further 21,800 paramilitary police including a police support unit of 2,300.

Air Force

The Air Force (ZAF) had a strength in 2011 of about 4,000 personnel. The headquarters of the ZAF and the main ZAF stations are in Harare; the second main base is at Gweru, with many secondary airfields throughout the country. There were 46 combat-capable aircraft (including F-7s and K-8s) in 2011 although the serviceability of some aircraft was in doubt, and six attack helicopters.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 13% of GDP in 2012, industry 32% and services 55%.

Since Robert Mugabe came to power in 1980 the economy has collapsed with the country experiencing sustained periods of roaring inflation and heavy unemployment. Shortages of food and other necessities culminated in the authorities making an international appeal for food in July 2001. In Feb. 2000 the country ran out of gasoline because it could not pay the import bills.

Zimbabwe's 'shadow' (black market) economy is estimated to constitute approximately 63% of the country's official GDP, one of the highest percentages of any country in the world.

Overview

At independence Zimbabwe was the second largest economy in Africa but it deteriorated sharply after 1998. Between 1999 and 2008 output declined by more than 45%. According to the IMF the economic crisis was attributable to loose fiscal and monetary policies, an overvalued fixed exchange rate, excessive administrative controls and regulations, and chronic shortages of goods and foreign exchange. The effect of these policies was magnified by the collapsing health and education systems, weak infrastructure, high rates of HIV infection, a fast-track land reform programme and recurring droughts. Political instability and spiralling external debt, which amounted to US$10.7bn. in 2011, prompted most Western donors to reduce or withdraw operations and confine financial support to humanitarian aid. While China remains a major donor of both finance and food, it too made some aid cuts in 2007 under pressure from Western governments.

In 2007–08 Zimbabwe experienced hyperinflation as a result of excessive money supply and the economy contracted by 50.3%. Following a power-sharing agreement signed by in 2008 to strengthen domestic political stability, the economy grew for the first time in a decade in 2009. GDP growth averaged 7% between 2009 and 2012, with particularly strong performance in the mining and agricultural sectors. The multi-currency system adopted in 2009 helped restore price stability, with year-on-year inflation standing at 2.9% in Dec. 2012.

Zimbabwe is heavily dependent on aid to meet basic needs, with the IMF allocating US$328m. in Feb. 2010. Tourism has slowly recovered since 2000 but FDI, although growing, remains among the lowest in southern Africa. Unemployment and poverty rates remain high, particularly in rural areas, and ongoing political upheaval poses a major impediment to growth.

Currency

The use of the Zimbabwean dollar as an official currency was effectively abandoned on 12 April 2009, with currencies such as the South African rand, the Botswana pula, the pound sterling and the US dollar are used instead. The Zimbabwean dollar was officially withdrawn from circulation in Sept. 2015. Until 12 April 2009 the unit of currency was the Zimbabwe fourth dollar (ZWL), introduced on 2 Feb. 2009, with 12 zeros being removed to make 1trn. dollars (ZWR) equal to one new dollar. The Zimbabwe third dollar (ZWR) had replaced the Zimbabwe second dollar (ZWD) on 1 Aug. 2008, with a conversion rate of 1 revalued dollar = 10bn. old dollars (ZWD). The currency was devalued 17% in Jan. 1994 and made fully convertible. Its value dropped by 65% in 1998. It was devalued again in Aug. 2000 by 24%, in May 2005 by 45% and in July 2005 by 94%. It was further devalued by 60% in July 2006 and the following day the Zimbabwean new (second) dollar became the new currency. Inflation, which was 18.9% in 1997, rose to 133.2% in 2002 and 6,723.7% in 2007. The last official annual rate calculated in Zimbabwe dollars was 231,150,888.9% in July 2008. A multi-currency system was introduced in 2009. There was inflation of 1.6% in 2013 but then deflation of 0.2% in 2014. Total money supply was Z$425,445.0bn. in Dec. 2007, up from Z$0.4bn. in Dec. 2002 and Z$44.7bn. in Dec. 2005.

Budget

Revenues in 2009 totalled US$933.6m. and expenditures US$920.9m. Tax revenues accounted for 94.5% of total revenue in 2009; current expenditures accounted for 87.3% of total expenditure. VAT was reduced from 17.5% to 15% in Jan. 2006.

Performance

Real GDP growth was negative every year from 2002 through to 2008. However, from 2009–11 economic growth averaged 10.3%. The economy then expanded by 10.6% in 2012, although there was growth of only 4.5% in 2013 and 3.3% in 2014. Total GDP in 2014 was US$14.2bn.

Banking and Finance

The Reserve Bank of Zimbabwe is the central bank (established 1965; Governor, John Mangudya). It acts as banker to the government and to the commercial banks, is the note-issuing authority and co-ordinates the application of the government's monetary policy. The Infrastructure Development Bank of Zimbabwe focuses on the development and funding of both public and private sector infrastructure projects in all key sectors of the economy. In 2003 there were seven commercial and four merchant banks.

Zimbabwe's foreign debt totalled US$5,016m. in 2010, representing 71.8% of GNI.

In Aug. 2003 Zimbabwe's banks ran out of banknotes as inflation reached 360%.

There is a stock exchange in Harare.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption of energy were the equivalent of 0.8 tonnes per capita in 2011.

Electricity

Installed capacity was an estimated 2.1m. kW in 2011. Production in 2011 was 8.93bn. kWh. Consumption per capita in 2011 was 783 kWh.

Minerals

The mining sector accounts for about 4% of GDP. 2006 production: coal, 2.11m. tonnes; chromite (gross weight), 700,000 tonnes; asbestos, 97,000 tonnes; nickel, 8,825 tonnes; gold, 11.4 tonnes. Diamond production in 2005 totalled 251,152 carats. A huge diamond field was discovered near Mutare in 2006. In 2013 it provided about 13% of world rough diamond supply.

Agriculture

Agriculture is the largest employer, providing jobs for 25% of the workforce. In 2002 there were an estimated 3.22m. ha. of arable land and 0.13m. ha. of permanent crops. Approximately 117,000 ha. were irrigated in 2002. There were about 24,000 tractors in 2002 and 800 harvester-threshers.

A constitutional amendment providing for the compulsory purchase of land for peasant resettlement came into force in March 1992. A provision to seize white-owned farmland for peasant resettlement was part of the government's new draft constitution that was rejected in the referendum of Feb. 2000. Various deadlines were given for white farmers to abandon their property during Aug. and Sept. 2002. The government claims that 300,000 landless black Zimbabweans have been resettled on seized land.

The staple food crop is maize, but 2003 production (at 803,000 tonnes) was less than a half of the 2000 figure. Tobacco is the most important cash crop, although production fell from 237,000 tonnes in 2000 to 68,000 tonnes in 2004. Production of other leading crops, 2002, in 1,000 tonnes: sugarcane, 4,100; seed cotton, 200; cassava, 175; wheat, 150; cottonseed, 127; groundnuts, 110; oranges, 93; bananas, 85; soybeans, 83; sorghum, 80; cotton lint, 72.

Livestock (2003 estimates): cattle, 5.75m.; goats, 2.97m.; sheep, 610,000; pigs, 605,000; chickens, 22m. Livestock products (2003 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): milk, 280; meat, 206.

Forestry

In 2010 forests covered 15.62m. ha., or 40% of the total land area. Timber production in 2011 was 9.31m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

The catch in 2010 was approximately 10,500 tonnes (all from inland waters).

INDUSTRY

Metal products account for over 20% of industrial output. Important agro-industries include food processing, textiles, furniture and other wood products.

Labour

The labour force in 2013 was 7,533,000 (6,224,000 in 2003). 87.7% of the population aged 15–64 was economically active in 2013. In the same year 5.3% of the population was unemployed.

Zimbabwe had 94,000 people living in slavery according to the Walk Free Foundation's 2013 Global Slavery Index.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Goods imports in 2014 totalled US$6,379.8m. (US$7,704.2m. in 2013) and goods exports US$3,063.7m. (US$3,507.3m. in 2013).

Principal imports in 2014 were mineral fuels and lubricants (24.5%), machinery and transport equipment, and chemicals; main exports in 2014 were food, animals and beverages (35.2%), manufactured goods, and crude materials and animal and vegetable oils.

The leading import supplier in 2014 was South Africa (50.2%), followed by the USA and China; the leading export destination in 2013 was South Africa (54.2%), followed by the UAE and China.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

The road network covers some 97,000 km but much of it is in poor condition. Number of vehicles in use, 2007: passenger cars, 1,214,100; lorries and vans, 186,800; buses and coaches, 15,600; motorcycles and mopeds, 109,000. There were 1,037 road accident fatalities in 2006.

Rail

In 2005 the National Railways of Zimbabwe had 2,759 km (1,067 mm gauge) of route ways (483 km electrified). In 2005 the railways carried 3m. passengers and 6.1m. tonnes of freight (including the Beitbridge–Bulawayo Railway).

Civil Aviation

There are three international airports: Harare (the main airport), Bulawayo and Victoria Falls. Air Zimbabwe, the state-owned national carrier, ceased operations in Feb. 2012 but resumed flying on a limited basis in May. After the government took over Air Zimbabwe's debts it began flying on international routes again in Nov. 2012. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Zimbabwe-based carriers flew 6m. km, carrying 201,000 passengers (102,000 on international flights). In 2009 Harare handled 612,208 passengers (674,281 in 2008).

Shipping

Zimbabwe's outlets to the sea are Maputo and Beira in Mozambique, Dar es Salaam, Tanzania and the South African ports.

Telecommunications

In 2013 there were 304,000 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscriptions numbered 13,633,000 in the same year (963.5 per 1,000 persons). In 2013 an estimated 18.5% of the population were internet users. In June 2012 there were 236,000 Facebook users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The general common law of Zimbabwe is the Roman Dutch law as it applied in the Colony of the Cape of Good Hope on 10 June 1891, as subsequently modified by statute. Provision is made by statute for the application of African customary law by all courts in appropriate cases.

The death penalty is authorized. In 2003 there were four executions.

The Supreme Court consists of the Chief Justice and at least two Supreme Court judges. It is the final court of appeal. It exercises appellate jurisdiction in appeals from the High Court and other courts and tribunals; its only original jurisdiction is that conferred on it by the Constitution to enforce the protective provisions of the Declaration of Rights. The Court's permanent seat is in Harare but it also sits regularly in Bulawayo.

The High Court is also headed by the Chief Justice, supported by the Judge President and an appropriate number of High Court judges. It has full original jurisdiction, in both Civil and Criminal cases, over all persons and all matters in Zimbabwe. The Judge President is in charge of the Court, subject to the directions of the Chief Justice. The Court has permanent seats in both Harare and Bulawayo and sittings are held three times a year in three other principal towns.

Regional courts, established in Harare and Bulawayo but also holding sittings in other centres, exercise a solely criminal jurisdiction which is intermediate between that of the High Court and the Magistrates' courts. Magistrates' courts, established in 20 centres throughout the country, and staffed by full-time professional magistrates, exercise both civil and criminal jurisdiction.

Primary courts consist of village courts and community courts. Village courts are presided over by officers selected for the purpose from the local population, sitting with two assessors. They deal with specific classes of civil cases and have jurisdiction only where African customary law is applicable. Community courts are presided over by officers in full-time public service, who may also be assisted by assessors. They have jurisdiction in all civil cases determinable by African customary law and also deal with appeals from village courts. They also have limited criminal jurisdiction in respect of petty offences.

The population in penal institutions in Feb. 2013 was 16,902 (129 per 100,000 of national population). In 2015 the World Justice Project Rule of Law Index, which provides data on how the rule of law is experienced by the general public across eight categories, ranked Zimbabwe 72nd of 102 countries for criminal justice and 79th for civil justice.

Education

Education is compulsory. 'Manageable' school fees were introduced in 1991; primary education had hitherto been free to all. All instruction is given in English. In 2006 there were 2,445,520 pupils at primary schools (64,001 teaching staff) and 831,488 pupils at secondary schools (33,964 teaching staff in 2003). In May 2004 the 45 private schools were closed down for increasing fees without state approval although they have for the most part since reopened. Private school fees are out of reach of the majority of families. Tens of thousands of teachers have left Zimbabwe and thousands more have left the profession. In 2009 the adult literacy rate was an estimated 91.9%. Both the overall rate and the rate for males are the highest in Africa.

There are 12 universities, the oldest and largest of which is the University of Zimbabwe, founded in 1952. Although historically well-regarded, the university experienced a series of problems ranging from staff shortages to electricity supply issues that resulted in its closure for much of 2008 and 2009.

In 2003 there were 55,689 students in tertiary education.

Health

There were 30 hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants in 2006. All mission health institutions get 100% government grants-in-aid for recurrent expenditure. In 2004 there were 2,086 physicians, 310 dentistry personnel and 9,357 nursing and midwifery personnel. It is estimated that one in three adults is HIV infected.

Welfare

It is a statutory responsibility of the government in many areas to provide: processing and administration of war pensions and old age pensions; protection of children; administration of remand, probation and correctional institutions; registration and supervision of welfare organizations.

RELIGION

A study by the Pew Research Center's Forum on Religion & Public Life estimated that in 2010 there were 10.93m. Christians, 990,000 people with no religious affiliation, 480,000 folk religionists and 110,000 Muslims. Of the Christians in 2010, 85% were Protestants and 13% Catholics.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Zimbabwe has five sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Mana Pools National Park, Sapi and Chewore Safari Areas (inscribed on the list in 1984); the Great Zimbabwe National Monument (1986); the Khambiri Ruins National Monument (1986); and Matobo Hills (2003).

Zimbabwe shares with Zambia the Victoria Falls/Mosi-oa-Tunya (1989), waterfalls on the Zambezi River.

Press

In 2008 there were two daily newspapers, both controlled by the government, with a combined circulation of 28,000. In Jan. 2002 parliament passed an Access to Information Bill restricting press freedom, making it an offence to report from Zimbabwe unless registered by a state-appointed commission. In Sept. 2003 the independent Daily News was shut down for contraventions of the new press law. Zimbabwe's High Court ordered the government to allow its reopening but the order was ignored.

Tourism

International visitors numbered 2,423,000 in 2011 (2,239,000 in 2010 and 2,017,000 in 2009). Receipts in 2011 totalled US$664m.

Festivals

Of particular importance are the Harare International Festival of the Arts (April) and the Bulawayo Music Festival (May). The Zimbabwe International Film Festival is held in Harare in Aug./Sept.
