Total GDP in 2010 was US$203.4bn.

Banking and Finance

The Superintendencia de Bancos e Instituciones Financieras, affiliated to the finance ministry, is the banking supervisory authority. There is a Central Bank and a State Bank. The Central Bank was made independent of government control in March 1990. The Governor is Rodrigo Vergara. There were 21 domestic and six foreign banks in 2005. In Jan. 2005 deposits in domestic banks totalled 25,779,053m. pesos; in foreign banks, 2,163,183m. pesos, and in other finance companies, 4,829,090m. pesos.

There are stock exchanges in Santiago and Valparaíso.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Chile's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 3.9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 15.9m. kW in 2007. Production of electricity was 58.51bn. kWh in 2007, of which 40% was hydro-electric. Consumption per capita in 2007 was 3,623 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Production of crude oil, 2007, was 123,000 tonnes. Natural gas production, 2007, was 1.3bn. cu. metres. Chile imports nearly all of its oil and around 70% of the natural gas that it consumes.

Minerals

The wealth of the country consists chiefly in its minerals. Chile is the world's largest copper producer; copper is the most important source of foreign exchange and government revenues. Production, 2004, 5,418,800 fine tonnes. Coal is low-grade and mining is difficult, made possible by state subsidies. Production, 2004, 238,307 tonnes.

Output of other minerals, 2004 (in tonnes): iron ore, 8,003,491; limestone, 6,653,343; salt, 4,938,928; molybdenum, 41,883; zinc, 27,635; manganese, 7,188; silver, 1,360. Gold (39,986 kg in 2004), lithium, nitrate, iodine and sodium sulphate are also produced.

Agriculture

In 2007, 1.29m. ha. were arable land and 0.46m. ha. permanent crops. 0.96m. ha. were irrigated in 2007. There were 400 tractors and 66 harvester-threshers per 10,000 ha. of arable land in 2006.

Principal crops were as follows:

Crop	Area harvested, 1,000 ha		Production, 1,000 tonnes
	2004	2004	2004	2004
Sugar beets	31	2,598	Tomatoes	7
Wheat	420	1,852	Oats	77
Maize	134	1,508	Onions	6

Fruit production, 2004 (in 1,000 tonnes): apples, 1,300; grapes, 1,150; peaches and nectarines, 311; plums, 250; pears, 210; lemons and limes, 165; oranges, 140. Wine production in 2005 totalled 7,886,000 hectolitres.

Livestock, 2003: sheep, 4.1m.; cattle, 3.9m.; pigs, 3.2m.; goats, 1.0m.; horses, 700,000; poultry, 98m. Livestock products, 2003 (in 1,000 tonnes): pork, bacon and ham, 386; beef and veal, 190; poultry meat, 457; milk, 2,180; eggs, 116.

Since 1985 agricultural trade has been consistently in surplus. Wine exports rose from US$52m. in 1990 to US$844m. in 2004.

Forestry

In 2004, 15.64m. ha., or 20.7% of the total land area, was under forests. There were 13.4m. ha. of natural forest and woodland (larch, araucaria, lenga, coihue and oak are important species), representing 85.9% of the total forested area, and 2.1m. ha. of planted forest. Timber production in 2007 was 52.91m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

Chile has 4,200 km of coastline and exclusive fishing rights to 1.6m. sq. km. There are 220 species of edible fish. The catch in 2008 was 3,554,814 tonnes, entirely from sea fishing. Exports of fishery commodities in 2008 were valued at US$3.93bn., against imports of US$251m. Chile is one of the leading aquaculture producers, with 802,410 tonnes in 2006. Only Norway produces more farmed salmon.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Chile in March 2011 were: Falabella, a retail company (US$24.3bn.); and Copec, an oil and gas producer (US$22.7bn.).

Output of major products in 2003 unless otherwise indicated (in 1,000 tonnes): cement (2009), 3,876; distillate fuel oil (2007), 3,623; sulphuric acid, 2,866; residual fuel oil (2007), 2,445; petrol (2007), 2,349; cellulose, 1,430; fishmeal, 580; iron or steel plates, 403; sugar (2004), 401; newsprint, 177; paper and cardboard, 113. Output of other products: soft drinks, 796m. litres; beer (2007), 550m. litres; 20,136 motor vehicles (2001); 4.74m. motor tyres.

Labour

In 2005 there were 5,779,660 people in employment (1,997,690 women). In Sept. 2005, 1,678,880 persons were employed in social or personal services, 1,117,900 in trade, 765,580 in manufacturing, 683,100 in agriculture, forestry and fisheries, 470,110 in transport and communications and 447,480 in building. In 2005 there was a monthly minimum wage of 127,500 pesos. In Nov. 2011, 7.1% of the civilian workforce was unemployed (compared to 8.2% in 2010 as a whole).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$45,154m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Trade in US$1m.:

	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008
Imports c.i.f.	24,794	32,735	38,406	47,164	61,903
Exports f.o.b.	32,520	41,267	58,680	67,666	66,456

In 2004 the principal exports were (in US$1m.): minerals, 16,633.6 (of which copper, 14,358.4, equivalent to 87.2% of all exports); manufactures, 11,928.7; and agricultural products, 2,339.3. Principal imports in 2004 were (in US$1m.): manufactures, 17,928.7; minerals, 3,919.6; and agricultural products, 416.9. Major import suppliers (as % of total), 2004: Argentina, 18.5; USA, 15.1; Brazil, 12.4; China, 8.3; Germany 3.7. Major export markets, 2004: USA, 14.8; Japan, 12.0; China, 10.4; South Korea, 5.8; Netherlands, 5.4.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2004 there were 80,505 km of roads, but only 20.8% were hard-surfaced. There were 2,414 km of motorways and 16,785 km of main roads. In 2007 there were 1,701,036 passenger cars, 849,282 trucks and vans, 170,217 buses and coaches and 63,257 motorcycles and mopeds. In 2006 there were 2,280 road accident fatalities.

Rail

The total length of railway lines was (2004) 5,775 km, including 1,051 km electrified, of broad- and metre-gauge. The state railway (EFE) transported 11.3m. passengers in 2005. Freight operations are in the hands of the semi-private companies Ferronor, Pacifico and the Antofagasta (Chile) and Bolivia Railway (973 km, metre-gauge) which links the port of Antofagasta with Bolivia and Argentina. Passenger-km travelled in 2008 came to 759m. and freight tonne-km in 2006 to 3,660m.

There are metro systems in Santiago (46.2 km) and Valparaíso (42.5 km).

Civil Aviation

There are 389 airports, with nine international airports at Antofagasta, Arica, Coihaique, Concepción, Easter Island (Isla de Pascua), Iquique, Puerto Montt, Punta Arenas and Santiago (Comodoro Arturo Merino Benítez). The largest airline is LAN Airlines, formerly Línea Aérea Nacional Chile (LAN-Chile); in 2001 LAN-Chile flew 70.3m. km and carried 5,046,600 passengers. In 2004 Santiago handled 6,057,279 passengers (3,603,267 on international flights) and 269,660 tonnes of freight. In Dec. 2011 LAN Airlines agreed to merge with TAM, Brazil's largest airline.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 89 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 632,000 GT. The leading ports are Antofagasta, Arica, Iquique, Puerto Ventanas, San Antonio, Talcahuano/San Vicente and Valparaíso.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 3,252,000 main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year mobile phone subscribers numbered 14,797,000 (880.5 per 1,000 persons). There were 2.3m. PCs in use (147.5 for every 1,000 persons) in 2005 and 5.7m. internet users in 2006.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There is a High Court of Justice in the capital, 16 courts of appeal distributed over the republic, courts of first instance in the departmental capitals and second-class judges in the sub-delegations. There were 642 public prosecutors, 782 judges and 417 defence lawyers in 2002.

The population in penal institutions in Oct. 2008 was 51,244 (305 per 100,000 of national population).

The death penalty for ordinary crimes was abolished in 2001.

Education

In 2007-08 there were 402,000 children at pre-primary schools, 1.66m. primary school pupils and 1.59m. pupils at secondary level. Adult literacy rate in 2008 was 99%.

In 2004 there were 567,114 students in higher education. There were 162 universities with 403,370 students, 140 professional institutes with 101,674 students and 211 technical education centres with 62,070 students. The number of students at higher education institutions has doubled since 1990.

In 2007 public expenditure on education came to 3-8% of GNI and represented 18.2% of total government expenditure.

Health

There were 418 hospitals in 2008. In 2003 there were 15,006 doctors, 2,846 dentists and 6,900 university nurses in the public sector. In 2004 there were 20,776 junior doctors.

Welfare

In 1981 Chile abolished its state-sponsored pension plan and became the first country to establish private mandatory retirement savings. The system is managed by competitive private companies called AFPs (Pension Fund Administrators). Employees are required to save 13% of their pay. In April 2005 it had 7,132,983 members and assets of 35,051,470m. pesos. In 2005 about 65% of the population over the age of 14 had private health insurance.

RELIGION

At the 2002 census Chile had 7,853,428 Roman Catholics. In Jan. 2002 there were five archbishops, 25 bishops and two vicars apostolic. There were two cardinals in Feb. 2012. In 2002 there were 1,699,725 Evangelical Christians, 119,455 Jehovah's Witnesses, 103,735 Latter-day Saints, 14,976 Jews, 6,959 Orthodox Christians and 2,894 Muslims.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Chile's five UNESCO protected sites are the Rapa Nui National Park, the Churches of Chiloé, the Historic Quarter of the Seaport of Valparaíso, the Humberstone and Santa Laura Saltpeter Works, and the Sewell Mining Town. Entered on the list in 1995, the Rapa Nui National Park encompasses much of the coastline of Easter Island and protects the shrines and statues (Moai) carved between the 10th–16th centuries. On the island of Chiloé off the Región de Los Lagos coastline, wooden churches were built by Jesuit missionaries at the turn of the 17th century. The churches were entered on the list in 2000. The Valparaíso site was inscribed on the list in 2003 as a model of urban and architectural development in 19th-century Latin America. The Humberstone and Santa Laura Saltpeter Works were inscribed in 2005 and are where workers from Peru, Chile and Bolivia formed a distinctive communal pampinos culture. The Sewell Mining Town, inscribed in 2006, is an example of the company towns that existed in the early 20th century in many remote parts of the world.

Press

In 2005 there were 93 national daily newspapers; Chile's daily newspapers had total annual sales of 354m. copies. In 2004 a total of 3,151 book titles were published.

Tourism

There were 2,506,756 non resident overnight tourists in 2007. Tourist receipts were US$2,172m. in 2007.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

An embryonic Chinese state emerged in the fertile Huang He (Yellow River) basin before 4000 BC. Chinese culture reached the Chang Jiang (Yangtze) basin by 2500 BC and within 500 years the far south was also within the Chinese orbit. Four thousand years ago the Xia dynasty ruled in the Huang He basin. About 1500 BC it was supplanted by the Shang dynasty, the cultural ancestor of modern China.

Shang civilization spread out from the Huang He region. In the west, the Shang came into conflict with the Zhou, whose rulers replaced the Shang dynasty around 1000 BC. Under the Zhou, a centralized administration developed. In about 500 BC one court official, Kongfuzi (Confucius), outlined his vision of society. Confucianism, which introduced a system of civil service recruitment through examination, remained dominant until the mid-20th century.

The Zhou expanded the Chinese state south beyond the Chang Jiang. Dependent territories periodically rebelled against the central authority. In 221 BC the ruler of Qin became the first emperor of China. He built an empire extending from the South China Sea to the edge of Central Asia where work was begun on the Great Wall of China, a massive fortification to keep threatening nomads at bay. The Qin dynasty standardized laws, money and administration throughout the empire but it was short-lived. By 206 BC the state had divided into three.

Reunification came gradually under the Han dynasty (202 BC–AD 200) with its efficient, centralized bureaucracy. A nation with boundaries similar to those of modern China was created. But peripheral territories proved too distant to hold and the Han empire fell to rebellion and invasion. It was followed by the Jin (265–316) and Sui (589–612) dynasties, interspersed by internecine war and anarchy. Reunification was achieved by the Tang dynasty which brought prosperity to China from 618–907. Eventually the Tang empire fell victim to separatism.

Under the Song (960–1127), the balance of power shifted south. The Song state lost control of the area north of the Chang Jiang in 1126 when nomads from Manchuria invaded. A declining Song empire survived in the south until 1279.

Genghis Khan

The northern invaders were overthrown by the Mongols, led by Genghis Khan (c. 1162–1227), who went on to claim the rest of China. In 1280 Kublai Khan (1251–94), who had founded the Yuan dynasty in 1271, swept into southern China. The Mongol Yuan dynasty adopted Chinese ways but was overthrown by a nationalist uprising in 1368, led by Hongwu (1328–98), a former beggar who established the Ming dynasty.

The Ming empire collapsed in a peasants' revolt in 1644. The capital, Beijing (Peking), was only 64 km from the Great Wall and vulnerable to attack from the north. Within months the peasants' leader was swept aside by the invasion of the Manchus, whose Qing dynasty ruled China until 1911. Preoccupied with threats from the north, China neglected its southern coastal frontier where European traders were attempting to open up the country. The Portuguese, who landed on the Chinese coast in 1516, were followed by the Dutch in 1622 and the English in 1637.

The Qing empire expanded into Mongolia, Tibet, Vietnam and Kazakhstan. But by the 19th century, under pressure from rural revolts ignited by crippling taxation and poverty, the Qing dynasty was crumbling. Two Opium Wars (1838–42; 1856–58) forced China to allow the import of opium from India into China, while Britain, France, Germany and other European states gained concessions in 'treaty ports' that virtually came under foreign rule.

The Taiping Rebellion (1851–64) set up a revolutionary egalitarian state in southern China. The European powers intervened to crush the rebellion and in 1860 British and French forces invaded Beijing and burnt the imperial palace. Further trading concessions were demanded. A weakened China was defeated by Japan in 1895 and lost both Taiwan and Korea.

The xenophobic Boxer Rebellion, led by members of a secret society called the Fists of Righteous Harmony, broke out in 1900. The Guangxu emperor (1875–1908) attempted modernization in the Hundred Days Reform, but was taken captive by the conservative dowager empress who harnessed the Boxer Rebellion to her own ends. The rebellion was put down by European troops in 1901. China was then divided into zones of influence between the major European states and Japan.

With imperial authority so weakened, much of the country was ungovernable and ripe for rebellion. The turning point came in 1911 when a revolution led by the Kuomintang (Guomintang or Nationalist movement) of Sun Yet-sen (Sun Zhong Shan; 1866–1925) overthrew the emperor and the imperial system. The authoritarian Yuan Shih-kai ruled as president from 1913 to 1916. Following the overthrow of Yuan, China disintegrated into warlord anarchy.

In 1916 Sun founded a republic in southern China but the north remained beyond his control. Reorganizing the Nationalist party on Soviet lines, Sun co-operated with the Communists to re-establish national unity. But rivalry between the two parties increased, particularly after the death of Sun in 1925.

Nationalism and Communism

After Sun's death the nationalist movement was taken over by his ally Chiang Kai-shek (Jiang Jie Shi; 1887–1976). As commander in chief of the Nationalist army from 1925, Chiang's power grew. In April 1927 he tried to suppress the Chinese Communist Party in a bloody campaign in which thousands of Communists were slaughtered. The survivors fled to the far western province of Jiangxi. In 1928 Chiang's army entered Beijing. With the greater part of the country reunited under Chiang's rule, he made Nanjing the capital of China.

In 1934 the Communists were forced to retreat from Jiangxi province. Led by Mao Zedong (Mao Tse-tung; 1893–1976) they trekked for more than a year on the 5,600-mile Long March. Harried by the Nationalists they eventually took refuge in Shaanxi province.

In 1931 the Japanese invaded Manchuria. By 1937 they had seized Beijing and most of coastal China. The Nationalists and Communists finally co-operated against the invader but were unable to achieve much against the superior Japanese forces.

During the Second World War (1939–45), a Nationalist government ruled unoccupied China ineffectually from a temporary capital in Chongqing. At the end of the war, Nationalist-Communist co-operation was short-lived. The Soviet Union sponsored the Communist Party, which marched into Manchuria in 1946. So began the civil war which lasted until 1949. Although the Nationalist forces of Chiang Kai-shek received support from some western countries, particularly the United States, the Communists were victorious. On 1 Oct. 1949 Mao declared the People's Republic of China in Beijing.

Chiang fled with the remains of his Nationalist forces to the island of Taiwan, where he established a government that claimed to be a continuation of the Republic of China. At first, that administration was recognized as the government of China by most Western countries and Taiwan kept China's Security Council seat at the United Nations until 1971. Chiang's authoritarian regime was periodically challenged by Red China, which bombed Taiwan's small offshore islands near the mainland. In the 1960s and 1970s, Taiwan gradually lost recognition as the legitimate government of China and in 1978 the USA recognized the People's Republic of China.

Expansionism

In 1950 China invaded Tibet, independent since 1916. Chinese rule quickly alienated the Tibetans who rebelled in 1959. The Tibetan religious leader, the Dalai Lama, was forced to flee to India. Since then, the settlement of large numbers of ethnic Chinese in the main cities of Tibet has threatened to swamp Tibetan culture.

During the 1950s and 1960s China was involved in a number of border disputes and wars in neighbouring states. The Communists posted 'volunteers' to fight alongside Communist North Korea during the Korean War (1950–53). There were clashes on the Soviet border in the 1950s and the Indian border in the 1960s, when China occupied some Indian territory.

From the establishment of the Peoples' Republic of China, Communist China and the Soviet Union were allies. Communist China initially depended upon Soviet assistance for economic development. A Soviet-style five-year plan was put into action in 1953, but the relationship with Moscow was already showing signs of strain. The two Communist powers fell out over interpretations of Marxist orthodoxy. By the end of the 1950s the Soviet Union and China were rivals, spurring the Chinese arms race. Chinese research into atomic weapons culminated in the testing of the first Chinese atomic bomb in 1964.

Mao introduced rapid collectivization of farms in 1955. The plan was not met with universal approval in the Communist Party but its implementation demonstrated Mao's authority over the fortunes of the nation. In 1956 he launched the doctrine of letting a 'hundred flowers bloom', encouraging intellectual debate. However, the new freedoms took a turn Mao did not expect and led to the questioning of the role of the party. Strict controls were reimposed and free-thinkers were sent to work in the countryside to be 're-educated'.

In May 1958 Mao launched another ill-fated policy, the Great Leap Forward. To promote rapid industrialization and socialism, the collectives were reorganized into larger units. Neither the resources nor trained personnel were available for this huge task. Backyard blast furnaces were set up to increase production of iron and steel. The Great Leap Forward was a disaster. It is believed that 30m. died from famine. Soviet advice against the project was ignored and a breakdown in relations with Moscow came in 1963, when Soviet assistance was withdrawn. A rapprochement with the United States was achieved in the early 1970s.

Cultural Revolution

Having published his 'Thoughts' in the 'Little Red Book' in 1964, Mao set the Cultural Revolution in motion. Militant students were organized into groups of Red Guards to attack the party hierarchy. Anyone perceived to lack enthusiasm for Mao Zedong Thought was denounced. Thousands died as the students lost control and the army was eventually called in to restore order.

After Mao's death in 1976 the Gang of Four, led by Mao's widow Jiang Qing, attempted to seize power. These hard-liners were denounced and arrested. China effectively came under the control of Deng Xiaoping, despite the fact that he held none of the great offices of state. Deng pursued economic reform. The country was opened to Western investment. Special Economic Zones and 'open cities' were designated and private enterprise gradually returned, on a small scale at first.

Improved standards of living and a thriving economy increased expectations for civil liberties. The demand for political change climaxed in demonstrations by workers and students in April 1989, following the funeral of Communist Party leader Hu Yaobang. Protests were held in several major cities. In Beijing where demonstrators peacefully occupied Tiananmen Square, they were evicted by the military who opened fire, killing more than 1,500. Hard-liners took control of the government, and martial law was imposed from May 1989 to Jan. 1990.

Since 1989 the leadership has concentrated on economic development. Hong Kong was returned to China from British rule in 1997 and Macao from Portuguese rule in 1999. The late 1990s saw a cautious extension of civil liberties but Chinese citizens are still denied most basic political rights.

Beijing was chosen for the 2008 Olympic Games. China's treatment of Tibet came under the international spotlight in the build-up to the games, following violent protests in Tibet's capital city, Lhasa.

For the background to the handover of Hong Kong in 1997, see page 333.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

China is bounded in the north by Russia and Mongolia; east by North Korea, the Yellow Sea and the East China Sea, with Hong Kong and Macao as enclaves on the southeast coast; south by Vietnam, Laos, Myanmar, India, Bhutan and Nepal; west by India, Pakistan, Afghanistan, Tajikistan, Kyrgyzstan and Kazakhstan. The total area (including Taiwan, Hong Kong and Macao) is estimated at 9,572,900 sq. km (3,696,100 sq. miles). A law of Feb. 1992 claimed the Spratly, Paracel and Diaoyutasi Islands. An agreement of 7 Sept. 1993 at prime ministerial level settled Sino-Indian border disputes which had first emerged in the war of 1962.

China's sixth national census was held on 1 Nov. 2010. According to preliminary results, the total population of the 31 provinces, autonomous regions and municipalities and of servicemen on the mainland was 1,339,724,852 (652,872,280 females, representing 48.73%); density, 140 per sq. km. China's population in 2010 represented 19% of the world's total population. The population rose by 73,899,804 (or 5.84%) since the census in 2000. There were 665,575,306 urban residents, accounting for 49.68% of the population; compared to the 2000 census, the proportion of urban residents rose by 13.46% (reflecting the increasing migration from the countryside to towns and cities since the economy was opened up in the late 1970s).

China has a fast-growing ageing population. Whereas in 1980 only 5.2% of the population was aged 65 or over and by 2010 this had increased to 8.9%, by 2030 it is expected to rise to 16.5%. Long-term projections suggest that in 2050 as much as 23.8% of the population will be 65 or older. The population is expected to peak around 2025 and then begin to decline to such an extent that by around 2043 it will be back to the 2010 level. China is set to lose its status as the world's most populous country to India in about 2026.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 1,369.74m.

1979 regulations restricting married couples to a single child, a policy enforced by compulsory abortions and economic sanctions, have been widely ignored, and it was admitted in 1988 that the population target of 1,200m. by 2000 would have to be revised to 1,270m. Since 1988 peasant couples have been permitted a second child after four years if the first born is a girl, a measure to combat infanticide. In 1999 China started to implement a more widespread gradual relaxation of the one-child policy.

An estimated 55m. persons of Chinese origin lived abroad in 2005.

A number of widely divergent varieties of Chinese are spoken. The official 'Modern Standard Chinese' is based on the dialect of North China. Mandarin in one form or another is spoken by 885m. people in China, or around 70% of the population of mainland China. The Wu language and its dialects has some 77m. native speakers and Cantonese 66m. The ideographic writing system of 'characters' is uniform throughout the country, and has undergone systematic simplification. In 1958 a phonetic alphabet (Pinyin) was devised to transcribe the characters, and in 1979 this was officially adopted for use in all texts in the Roman alphabet. The previous transcription scheme (Wade) is still used in Taiwan and Hong Kong.

Mainland China is administratively divided into 22 provinces, five autonomous regions (originally entirely or largely inhabited by ethnic minorities, though in some regions now outnumbered by Han immigrants) and four government-controlled municipalities. These are in turn divided into 332 prefectures, 658 cities (of which 265 are at prefecture level and 393 at county level), 2,053 counties and 808 urban districts.

China has 56 ethnic groups. According to the 2010 census 1,225,932,641 people (91.51%) were of Han nationality and 113,792,211 (8.49%) were from national minorities (including Zhuang, Manchu, Hui, Miao, Uighur, Yi, Tujia, Mongolian and Tibetan). Compared with the 2000 census, the Han population increased by 66,537,177 (5.74%), while the ethnic minorities increased by 7,362,627 (6.92%). Non-Han populations predominate in the autonomous regions, most notably in Tibet where national minorities accounted for 96.8% of the population in 2006.

Tibet

After the 1959 revolt was suppressed, the Preparatory Committee for the Autonomous Region of Tibet (set up in 1955) took over the functions of local government, led by its Vice-Chairman, the Panchen Lama, in the absence of its Chairman, the Dalai Lama, who had fled to India in 1959. In Dec. 1964 both the Dalai and Panchen Lamas were removed from their posts and on 9 Sept. 1965 Tibet became an Autonomous Region. 301 delegates were elected to the first People's Congress, of whom 226 were Tibetans. The senior spiritual leader, the Dalai Lama (who announced in March 2011 that he was relinquishing his political role as head of the Tibetan government-in-exile), has remained abroad. He was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1989. Following the death of the 10th Panchen Lama (Tibet's second most important spiritual leader) in Jan. 1989, the Dalai Lama announced Gendun Choekyi Nyima (b. 1989) as the 11th Panchen Lama in May 1995. Beijing rejected the choice and appointed Gyaltzen Norbu (b. 1989) in his place. Gendun Choekyi Nyima has been missing since 1995. The borders were opened for trade with neighbouring countries in 1980. In July 1988 Tibetan was reinstated as a 'major official language', competence in which is required of all administrative officials. Monasteries and shrines have been renovated and reopened. There were some 46,000 monks and nuns in 2007. In 1984 a Buddhist seminary in Lhasa opened with 200 students. A further softening of Beijing's attitude towards Tibet was shown during President Bill Clinton's visit to China in June 1998. Jiang Zemin, China's president, said he was prepared to meet the Dalai Lama provided he acknowledged Chinese sovereignty over Tibet and Taiwan. In Sept. 2002 direct contact between the exiled government and China was re-established after a nine-year gap.

In March 2008 anti-Chinese protests in Lhasa, the regional capital, ended in violence, with dozens reportedly killed by the Chinese authorities. The episode focused international attention on China's human rights record ahead of the 2008 Olympic Games in Beijing.

The estimated population of Tibet in 2007 was 2.74m., of which 95% were Tibetans and the remainder from other ethnic groups. At the 2010 census the population had risen to 3.00m. The average population density was 2.26 persons per sq. km in 2008, although the majority of residents live in the southern and eastern parts of the region. Birth rate (per 1,000), 2006, 17.4; death rate, 5.7. Estimated population of the Lhasa (capital) region in 2007 was 460,470.

About 80% of the population is engaged in the dominant industries of farming and animal husbandry. In 2006 the total sown area was 233,000 ha. (including 171,700 ha. of grain crops). Output in 2006: total grain crops, 923,700 tonnes; vegetables, 450,000 tonnes. In 2005 there were 10.7m. sheep, 6.3m. cattle and buffaloes, 6.3m. goats and 0.4m. horses.

Tibet has over 2,000 mineral ore fields. Minerals output, 2006: copper, 1,260,000 tonnes; vanadium, 415,000 tonnes; chrome, 121,800 tonnes. Cement production, 2006: 1.66m. tonnes. Timber output, 2007: 356,800 cu. metres.

In 2006 there were 44,813 km of roads (21,842 km in 1990). There are airports at Lhasa, Bangda and (since 2006) Nyingchi providing external links. In 2006, 154,800 foreign tourists visited Tibet. In July 2006 a 1,142-km railway linking Lhasa with the town of Golmud opened. It is the highest railway in the world. Direct services have subsequently been introduced between Lhasa and a number of major Chinese cities, including Beijing and Shanghai. An extension from Lhasa to Shigatse, Tibet's second largest city, is under construction and scheduled for completion in 2014.

In Dec. 2006 Tibet had 890 elementary schools and 1,568 teaching centres (with 329,500 pupils), 93 junior middle schools (127,900 pupils), 13 senior middle schools (37,700 pupils) and ten secondary vocational schools (14,775 pupils). There were also six higher education institutes (including Tibet University, Tibet Nationalities Institute, Tibet Agriculture and Animal Husbandry College, and Institute of Tibetan Medicines) with 23,327 enrolled students. The illiteracy rate of young and middle-aged people fell from 39% in 2000 to below 10% in 2006.

In 2006 there were 10,746 medical personnel (including 4,310 doctors and 2,000 registered nurses) and 1,349 medical institutions, with a total of 7,496 beds.

SOCIAL STATISTICS—CHINA

Births, 2005, 16,210,000; deaths, 8,510,000. 2005 birth rate (per 1,000 population), 12.40; death rate, 6.51. In 2005 the birth rate rose for the first time since 1987. There were 9,450,000 marriages and 1,893,000 divorces in 2006. In April 2001 parliament passed revisions to the marriage law prohibiting bigamy and cohabitation outside marriage. The World Health Organization estimated in 2005 that the suicide rate in China was about 17.4 per 100,000 population. China is the only major country in which the suicide rate is higher among females—over half the world's female suicides occur in China. Life expectancy at birth, 2007, was 71.3 years for men and 74.7 years for women. Infant mortality, 2005, 23 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 2008, 1.8 births per woman. Annual population growth rate, 2000–10, 0.6%. According to the World Bank, the number of people living in poverty (less than US$1.25 a day) at purchasing power parity declined from 835m. in 1981 to 207m. in 2005.

CLIMATE

Most of China has a temperate climate but, with such a large country, extending far inland and embracing a wide range of latitude as well as containing large areas at high altitude, many parts experience extremes of climate, especially in winter. Most rain falls during the summer, from May to Sept., though amounts decrease inland. Monthly average temperatures and annual rainfall (2006): Beijing (Peking), Jan. 28.6°F (−1.9°C), July 78.6°F (25.9°C). Annual rainfall 12.5" (318 mm). Chongqing, Jan. 46.0°F (7.8°C), July 87.8°F (31.0°C). Annual rainfall 33.1" (840 mm). Shanghai, Jan. 42.3°F (5.7°C), July 84.9°F (29.4°C). Annual rainfall 45.3" (1,150 mm). Tianjin, Jan. 27.1°F (−2.7°C), July 78.6°F (25.9°C). Annual rainfall 16.3" (415 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 21 Sept. 1949 the Chinese People's Political Consultative Conference met in Beijing, convened by the Chinese Communist Party. The Conference adopted a 'Common Programme' of 60 articles and the 'Organic Law of the Central People's Government' (31 articles). Both became the basis of the Constitution adopted on 20 Sept. 1954 by the 1st National People's Congress, the supreme legislative body. The Consultative Conference continued to exist after 1954 as an advisory body. Three further constitutions have been promulgated under Communist rule—in 1975, 1978 and 1982 (currently in force). The latter was partially amended in 1988, 1993 and 1999, endorsing the principles of a socialist market economy and of private ownership.

The unicameral National People's Congress is the highest organ of state power. Usually meeting for one session a year, it can amend the constitution and nominally elects and has power to remove from office the highest officers of state. There are a maximum of 3,000 members of the Congress (and currently 2,987), who are elected to serve five-year terms by municipal, regional and provincial people's congresses. The Congress elects a Standing Committee (which supervises the State Council) and the President and Vice-President for a five-year term. When not in session, Congress business is carried on by the Standing Committee.

The State Council is the supreme executive organ and comprises the Prime Minister, Deputy Prime Ministers and State Councillors.

The Central Military Commission is the highest state military organ.

CURRENT LEADERS

Hu Jintao

Position

President

Introduction

Hu Jintao was nominated general secretary of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP) in Nov. 2002, formally succeeding Jiang Zemin as head of state in March 2003 and as chairman of the Central Military Commission in Sept. 2004. Although widely perceived as a conservative—having supported the Tiananmen Square massacres in the late 1980s and cracked down on separatism in Tibet—he has continued Jiang's cautious reformist policies. He has maintained the drive for rapid industrial growth and also further developed China's international contacts, undertaking visits as state president to Latin America, Australia, Canada, Central Asia, the UK, USA and, in particular, Africa.

Early Life

Much of Hu's early history is disputed. He is believed to have been born in Dec. 1942 in Jixi, Anhui Province. His mother died when he was six and he was subsequently raised by an aunt. In 1959 he began engineering studies at Qinghua University and graduated in 1964, the same year in which he joined the CCP. He then held a variety of posts at the university and the ministry of water conservancy.

He is reported to have distanced himself from Mao's Cultural Revolution of the mid-1960s and was sentenced to two months of 'reform through labour'. Later, he worked on large-scale engineering projects in Gansu province. By the late 1970s Hu was a favourite of Deng Xiaoping, who became China's effective leader. He settled in Beijing in 1980, and within two years he was the youngest member of the party's central committee. Having risen through the ranks of the Communist Youth League, in 1985 he was appointed provincial party secretary for Guizhou. In 1988 he became party secretary in charge of Tibet and authorized the killing of several independence protesters in March 1989. Shortly afterwards he declared martial law and oversaw the introduction of 100,000 troops into the region. Later in the year he was among the first of the provincial party secretaries to express his support for those who took part in the Tiananmen Square massacres.

In 1992 Hu was responsible for organizing Jiang's first party congress as leader, and soon after was designated a member of the Politburo Standing Committee. In 1998 he was named vice-president, from which point on he was Jiang's acknowledged successor. The following year he was prominent in protests at the US and British embassies in Beijing over the accidental bombing of the Chinese embassy in Belgrade during NATO military action against Serbia. He was also named deputy chairman of the Central Military Commission at that time.

Career in Office

At the CCP congress of Nov. 2002, Hu replaced Jiang as party general secretary and then succeeded him as state president in March 2003. Hu expressed his commitment to Jiang's Theory of Three Representations (treatise on Chinese political thought), suggesting a continuity of government style.

Hu has nevertheless pursued an active foreign policy, breaking from the Deng model which proscribed taking the lead in diplomatic negotiations. He has sought to resolve the issue of North Korea's nuclear ambitions through the ongoing six-nations talks between North and South Korea, China, Japan, Russia and the USA. He has also developed relations with neighbouring India and Pakistan, establishing military links with both countries in Nov. 2003. Earlier, in June 2003, Hu received the visiting Indian prime minister who conceded recognition of Tibet as an autonomous region of the People's Republic of China. As president, Hu has travelled widely, visiting Australia, Africa, Latin America, Canada and Central Asia in pursuit of closer economic and commercial links to supply the resources for China's industrial machine. In Nov. 2006 he hosted a Sino-African summit in Beijing attended by more than 40 African heads of state and government, and in 2007 undertook a tour of eight African countries to boost trade and investment. In July 2008 China and Russia finalized a treaty formally ending a 40-year-old border dispute that had provoked armed clashes during the Cold War.

Human rights, Taiwan, Tibet and trade have remained difficult issues in Sino-US relations. Perennial US accusations of 'backsliding' in human rights have been vigorously denied (although China reacted angrily to the award of the 2010 Nobel Peace Prize to imprisoned activist Liu Xiaobo), and Hu's government has pointed to US foreign policy as aggressive and harmful to the rights of civilians. Former President George W. Bush's less conciliatory attitude towards China over Taiwan led to a more turbulent relationship between the two countries, although Hu made a seemingly successful first presidential visit to the USA in April 2006. In Nov. 2009 US President Obama made his first visit to China, heralding declarations of bilateral co-operation on trade, climate change and other issues. At the CCP congress in Oct. 2007, Hu offered a peace agreement with Taiwan as long as the territory did not explicitly renounce its links with mainland

China, and in June 2008 the first formal bilateral talks since 1999 took place. In July 2009 Hu exchanged direct messages with the president of Taiwan, the first such exchange between the national leaders in more than 60 years. Chinese-US tensions resurfaced in 2010 over the US decision to go ahead with arms sales to Taiwan, which prompted China's suspension in Jan. of high-level military exchanges with the USA, and over US claims that China was distorting trade because its currency is undervalued—a claim that China has denied.

In March 2008 the worst ethnic violence in two decades in Tibet against continuing Chinese rule prompted a security crackdown against separatist protesters and widespread international criticism of Hu's government ahead of the summer Olympic Games staged in Beijing in Aug. Further ethnic violence erupted in July 2009 in Urumqi, the capital of China's northwestern Xinjiang province, between indigenous Muslim Uighurs and Han Chinese settlers, which left around 200 people dead and 1,700 injured.

In March 2011 the National People's Congress approved additional expenditure on China's internal security apparatus, suggesting official concern over any contagion from the concurrent political disaffection spreading across much of the Arab world and also uncertainty over the potential for further ethnic unrest in the provinces. Disturbances erupted in Inner Mongolia in May 2011 and in Xinjiang in July–Aug., while anti-Chinese agitation continued in Tibet as a new head of the Tibetan government-in-exile took over in Aug. following the Dalai Lama's decision to relinquish his political role.

Hu's domestic agenda has focused on continuing China's rapid economic development—maintaining annual GDP growth of around 10% in 2010 and 2011, but with high inflation—and alleviating the poverty of the peasant population. An anti-corruption drive included the sacking and even execution of high-ranking state officials. Hu's government also championed increases in agricultural subsidies and the eventual termination of agricultural taxes—a programme interpreted as an attempt to create a larger middle class, committed to the CCP hegemony.

Hu was re-elected for a further term in March 2008. In Oct. 2009 he oversaw celebrations to mark the 60th anniversary of the Communist Party's assumption of power, and similarly marked the 90th anniversary of the party's founding in July 2011. Hu is required to step down by March 2013 and is likely to be succeeded by Xi Jinping.

Wen Jiabao

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Wen Jiabao was confirmed as China's prime minister in March 2003. Although relatively low-profile, he has established a reputation for reliability and durability. A leading figure in the liberalization of China's economic and environmental policies in the 1990s, he has promoted the development of the traditionally poorer and less urban west of the country.

Early Life

Wen Jiabao was born in Tianjin in the east of China in Sept. 1942. In 1965 he obtained a degree from the Beijing Institute of Geology and joined the Chinese Communist Party (CCP). In 1968 he received his masters degree and began working with the geomechanics survey team at the Gansu provincial geological bureau (until 1982).

Wen then moved to Beijing to work at the ministry of geology and mineral resources. After heading the policy and research section he was appointed vice-minister. In 1985 he was made deputy director of the general office of the CCP central committee, working closely with the party chairman, Hu Yaobang. Wen emerged unscathed after Hu's 1987 purge and took over as director of the general office as well as becoming an alternate member of the Politburo of the CCP central committee and secretary of the central committee's work committee of departments.

In 1989 Wen was in attendance when General Secretary Zhao Ziyang visited Tiananmen Square during the student protests. Zhao was subsequently purged, but again Wen's position remained secure. In 1992 he took on additional roles within the CCP central committee. Having led the team responsible for drafting the national five-year plan in 1995, Wen won full membership of the Politburo of the central committee two years later.

Throughout the 1990s Wen was a prominent figure in the formation of the party's economic policy. He was involved in banking reform and the restructuring of the finance ministry. By the late 1990s he was increasingly involved in environmental and rural affairs. In March 2003 Wen was confirmed as Zhu Rongji's successor to the premiership with 99.3% support from the National People's Congress.

Career in Office

Although perceived as less charismatic than Zhu, Wen has won respect within the Chinese political establishment for his longevity and experience. His management style has traditionally been based on seeking consensus.

When he was in Gansu, Wen became one of the few leading Chinese politicians to work for an extended period in the economically less prosperous west of the country. He stated that his aim is to narrow the prosperity gap between the east and west of China. In addition, many observers hoped that he could confront the problems of China's economically weak agricultural sector. Under Jiang, Wen did much to promote the land rights of the rural peasant population. In addition, he has pushed for a reduction in the tax burden on rural communities and promoted freedom for farmers to sell their holdings.

Despite his contribution to banking reform in the 1990s, Wen was not expected to champion radical reforms to counter the crippling problem of bad debts. In 2002 he called for a 'gradual approach' to further deregulation and in 2003 he stated that China would not be pressured by the international community into a revaluation of the yuan (renminbi). Nevertheless, in July 2005 China did revalue the currency, abandoning its 11-year peg to the US dollar and linking it to a basket of currencies. In March 2010 Wen again resisted international pressure on China for further revaluation, branding it a form of 'trade protectionism'.

Wen's programme for assisting the rural poor took shape at the opening of the National People's Congress in March 2004. Stressing the importance of social development in poorer regions, he highlighted the damaging disparity in wealth between the rich, industrial coastal provinces and the poorer rural provinces of the interior. He promised investment in agriculture, emphasizing the need to increase overall grain production capability. His programme also included the recognition of private property, requiring an amendment to the constitution, designed to prevent the unlawful requisition of property by officials.

However, the government's slow reaction to SARS, originating in Guangdong in 2002 and 2003, was criticized by the international community as nearly 350 people died from the virus, despite quarantines and travel bans. Then the government was criticized for its attitude towards HIV/AIDS, prompting the health minister in 2004 to announce plans to combat the epidemic. Furthermore, in Sept. 2008 a scandal over tainted milk supplies, which caused around 50,000 children to fall ill, prompted a public apology by Wen.

In April 2007 Wen visited Japan and became the first Chinese premier to make a formal address to the Japanese legislature, in which he urged friendship and reconciliation after their countries' difficult shared history. Relations deteriorated, however, in Sept. and Oct. 2010 as Chinese fishermen were arrested off Japanese-controlled, but disputed, islands in the East China Sea.

Wen was re-elected for a further term in March 2008. In Nov. he disclosed that the effects of the global financial crisis on China were worse than had been expected, prompting the government to announce a US$586bn. spending stimulus to boost the economy. Nevertheless, by the second quarter of 2010 official figures suggested that China had overtaken Japan as the world's second largest economy. Earlier, in March 2009, China's central bank called for a new global reserve currency run by the International Monetary Fund to replace the US dollar and Wen, while voicing his confidence in the Chinese economy, expressed concern over China's significant holdings of US government bonds.

In June 2011 Wen travelled to Hungary, the UK and Germany to sign trade and investment agreements, and said that China would lend investment support to countries in the euro zone struggling with sovereign debt.

DEFENCE

The Chinese president is chairman of the State and Party's Military Commissions. China is divided into seven military regions. The military commander also commands the air, naval and civilian militia forces assigned to each region.

China's armed forces, totalling more than 2.2m. in 2006, are the largest of any country.

Conscription is compulsory, but for organizational reasons, is selective: only some 10% of potential recruits are called up. Service is for two years. A military academy to train senior officers in modern warfare was established in 1985.

Defence expenditure in 2008 was estimated at 590bn. yuan (US$84,900m., equivalent to US$63 per capita). Defence spending in 2007 represented an estimated 2.0% of GDP. Only the USA spent more on defence in 2008, but China's defence expenditure totalled around a seventh of that of the USA. In the period 2006–10 China's expenditure on major conventional weapons was the second highest in the world (after that of India) at US$7.7bn. In March 2007 it was announced that defence budget for the year would rise by 17.8%. Military spending rose by an estimated 194% in real terms between 1999 and 2008.

Nuclear Weapons

Having carried out its first test in 1964, there have been 45 tests in all at Lop Nur, in Xinjiang (the last in 1996). The nuclear arsenal consisted of approximately 200 operational warheads in Jan. 2011 according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. China has been helping Pakistan with its nuclear efforts. Despite China's official position, Deadly Arsenals, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, alleges that the Chinese government is secretly pursuing chemical and biological weapons programmes.

Army

The Army (PLA: 'People's Liberation Army') is divided into main and local forces. Main forces, administered by the seven military regions in which they are stationed, but commanded by the Ministry of Defence, are available for operation anywhere and are better equipped. Local forces concentrate on the defence of their own regions. There are 18 Integrated Group Armies comprising 42 infantry divisions, nine armoured divisions, 12 armoured brigades, one mechanized infantry, 22 motorized infantry brigades, seven artillery divisions, 14 artillery brigades, one anti-tank brigade, nine surface-to-air missile brigades and 12 anti-aircraft artillery brigades. Total strength in 2006 was 1.60m. including some 800,000 conscripts. Reserve forces are undergoing major reorganization on a provincial basis but are estimated to number some 800,000.

In Sept. 2003 it was announced that the strength of the PLA was to be reduced by 200,000 as part of a move to modernize the military.

There is a paramilitary People's Armed Police force estimated at 1.5m. under PLA command.

Navy

The naval arm of the PLA comprises one nuclear-powered ballistic missile armed submarine, four nuclear-propelled fleet submarines, one diesel-powered cruise missile submarine and some 51 patrol submarines. Surface combatant forces include 27 missile-armed destroyers, 44 frigates and some 52 missile craft. Sea trials of China's first aircraft carrier, a former Soviet warship, began in Aug. 2011.

There is a land-based naval air force of about 792 combat aircraft, primarily for defensive and anti-submarine service. The force includes H-5 torpedo bombers, Q-5 fighter/ground attack aircraft, J-6 (MiG-19) and J-7 (MiG-21) fighters.

The naval arm is split into a North Sea Fleet, an East Sea Fleet and a South Sea Fleet.

In 2006 naval personnel were estimated at 255,000, including 26,000 in the naval air force and 40,000 conscripts.

Air Force

There are 32 air divisions. Up to four squadrons make up an air regiment and three air regiments form an air division. The Air Force has an estimated 2,600 combat aircraft.

Equipment includes J-7 (MiG-21) interceptors and fighter-bombers, H-5 (Il-28) jet bombers, H-6 Chinese-built copies of Tu-16 strategic bombers, Q-5 fighter-bombers (evolved from the MiG-19) and Su-27 fighters supplied by Russia. About 165 of a locally-developed fighter designated J-8 (known in the West as 'Finback') are in service.

Total strength (2006) was 400,000 (150,000 conscripts), including 210,000 in air defence organization. The Air Force headquarters are in Beijing.

ECONOMY

In 2006 agriculture accounted for 11.7% of GDP, industry 48.1% and services 40.2%.

Overview

China's economic performance has been marked by high rates of growth for over 25 years. GDP growth in the early 2000s consistently exceeded 10% until suffering a slump following the global financial crisis. China holds the world's largest foreign reserves, at more than US$3trn. in mid-2011. It is among the top recipients of foreign direct investment and is the world's largest producer and consumer of coal. In 2005 China made the transition from receiver of foreign aid to donor. It is a key player in Africa's development, responsible for US$7.8bn. of direct investment by the end of 2008.

The first steps towards a more market-oriented economy were taken by Deng Xiaoping in the late 1970s. He opened the economy to foreign trade and investment, decentralized industrial management and allowed the private sector to flourish. In 2001 China became a member of the WTO, establishing trade relations with many countries. Much of China's recent dynamism has come from 'collective' enterprises, particularly those at township and village level run by managers under the auspices of local government. Local governments have an incentive to see enterprises run efficiently as officials are allowed to keep surplus revenues. However, this has led to abuses. In 2009 the government recovered more than US$13.8bn. in misdirected funds.

Private entrepreneurs and foreign investors have played an important role in manufacturing output. Even before 1978 the economy was heavily skewed towards manufacturing but thereafter output increased and there was a structural shift away from large state-owned enterprises (SOEs), although SOEs remain a significant part of the economy. Many new enterprises are labour-intensive as distinct from the capital-intensive SOEs. Growth has been fuelled by low added value and labour-intensive exports. But the country has moved up the added value curve and Chinese firms are predicted to become increasingly competitive with higher added value producers, such as South Korea. The Twelfth Five-Year Plan aims to shift the economy toward a consumer-based growth model.

There are threats to continued growth. Inefficient production and outmoded equipment have led to a deterioration of the environment, especially in the north. Air pollution, soil erosion and a declining water table are particular problems. The government aims to diversify its energy sources, relying less on coal and more on nuclear and alternative energy sources.

The global economic crisis of 2008 reduced the rate of growth and the inflow of FDI but China's recovery was among the earliest and most spectacular. GDP growth was 7.9% in the second quarter of 2009, up from a two-decade low of 6.1% in the first quarter of that year. Growth was rooted in a stimulus package of 4trn. yuan (US$586bn. or 13% of 2008 GDP), including fiscal spending and interest rate cuts, as well as expansionary monetary policy. Central government committed 1.18trn. yuan, with the rest coming from local government, banks and SOEs. Although exports declined by around 17% in 2009, other countries fared worse and China's share of world exports increased to nearly 10% (up from 3% in 1999), making it the world's largest merchandise exporter in 2010. Growth in 2010 stood at more than 10%, which saw China overtake Japan as the world's second largest economy. Inflation has been an important social and economic issue, with the consumer price index increasing by 5.4% in 2011 and food prices increasing by 11.8%.

Efforts to restructure the economy away from investment and export-led growth towards private consumption were interrupted by the global crisis. Nonetheless, structural reforms to redirect the export-oriented economy include increased worker mobility and improved public sector efficiency. SOEs continue to dominate 'strategic' industries and remain burdened by excess labour. China also faces the growing burden of an ageing population. Those aged 60 and over accounted for 13.7% of the total population in 2011, an increase of 0.47% from the previous year. This is projected to increase to about 31% of the total population by 2050. For continued long term growth, there is a need for further job creation. Other challenges include rising property costs, high levels of local government debt, the lack of enforcement of intellectual property rights and endemic corruption. Corruption is concentrated in sectors with a high degree of state involvement. The number of government officials caught embezzling more than 1m. yuan (US$146,000) increased by 19% in 2009, while in 2007 the US-based Carnegie Endowment for International Peace put the direct cost of corruption at US$86bn. per year.

The World Bank estimates that the number of people living below the poverty line declined from 65% in 1981 to 4% in 2007. After China joined the WTO in 2001, poverty declined from 16% to 4% in six years. However, those who still have consumption levels below one dollar a day are located mainly in remote and resource-poor regions, particularly in the west and the interior. In 2011 the income of urban households was more than three times as high as that of rural households. The number of migrant workers in 2011 increased by 10.6m. to 252.8m.

Currency

The currency is called Renminbi (i.e. People's Currency). The unit of currency is the yuan (CNY) which is divided into ten jiao, the jiao being divided into ten fen. The yuan was floated to reflect market forces on 1 Jan. 1994 while remaining state-controlled. For 11 years the People's Bank of China maintained the yuan at about 8.28 to the US dollar, allowing it to fluctuate but only by a fraction of 1% in closely supervised trading. In July 2005 it was revalued and pegged against a 'market basket' of currencies the central parities of which were determined every night. In July 2008, after three years of sharp appreciation, it was repegged at around 6.83 yuan to the dollar, leading to claims from some international observers that it was being kept unfairly low to boost exports. In June 2010 the government announced that the yuan would be allowed to move freely against the dollar as long as a rise or fall does not exceed 0.5% within a single day. In Aug. 2009 total money supply was 20,039.5bn. yuan, gold reserves were 33.89m. troy oz and foreign exchange reserves US$2,210.8bn. (US$75.4bn. in 1995). China's reserves are the highest of any country, having overtaken those of Japan in 2006.

Inflation rates (based on IMF statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
0.7%	-0.8%	1.2%	3.9%	1.8%	1.5%	4.8%	5.9%	-0.7%	3.3%

China's economy overheated in the early 1990s, leading to inflation rates of 14.7% in 1993, 24.1% in 1994 and 17.1% in 1995. The 2008 rate was the highest since 1996.

Budget

Total revenue and expenditure (in 1bn. yuan):

	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006
Revenue	1,890.4	2,171.5	2,639.6	3,164.9	3,876.0
Expenditure	2,205.3	2,465.0	2,848.7	3,393.0	4,042.3

Total revenue in the central budget for 2006 was 2,123.2bn. yuan, comprising 2,045.0bn. yuan in revenue collected by central government and 78.3bn. yuan transferred to central government from local authorities. Total expenditure in the central budget amounted to 2,348.2bn. yuan, of which 999.2bn. yuan of expenditure for the central government and 1,349.1bn. yuan in the form of subsidies for local authorities. Local government revenue in 2006 came to 3,177.2bn. yuan (1,828.1bn. yuan in revenue collected by local authorities and 1,349.1bn. yuan in central government subsidies) and expenditure amounted to 3,100.4bn. yuan (3,022.2bn. yuan of expenditure in local budgets and 78.3bn. yuan transferred to central government). The deficit in the central budget in 2006 was 275.0bn. yuan.

Performance

GDP totalled US$5,878.6bn. in 2010, the second highest behind the USA. China replaced Japan as the second largest economy in 2010. It is forecast that around 2020 China will overtake the USA to become the world's largest economy. As recently as 2000 the US economy was around eight times larger than China's. Real GDP growth rates (based on IMF statistics):

8.3%	9.1%	10.0%	10.1%	11.3%	12.7%	14.2%	9.6%	9.2%	10.3%

GDP growth in 2011 was 9.2% according to the National Bureau of Statistics. In spite of high growth in recent years, China's GDP per capita at purchasing power parity was $5,383 in 2007 compared to the very high human development average of $37,272.

Banking and Finance

The People's Bank of China is the central bank and bank of issue (Governor, Zhou Xiaochuan). There are three state policy banks—the State Development Bank, Export and Import Bank of China and Agricultural Development Bank of China—and four state-owned commercial banks (the Bank of China, Industrial and Commercial Bank of China, Agricultural Bank of China and China Construction Bank). The four state-owned commercial banks have all sold minority stakes to foreign investors. The Bank of China is responsible for foreign banking operations. In April 2003 the China Banking Regulatory Commission was launched, taking over the role of regulating and supervising the country's banks and other deposit-taking financial institutions from the central bank. Legislation of 1995 permitted the establishment of commercial banks; credit co-operatives may be transformed into banks, mainly to provide credit to small businesses. In Oct. 2005 there were 30,438 rural credit co-operatives and 626 urban credit co-operatives. In Sept. 2007 deposits in rural credit co-operatives amounted to 4,400bn. yuan and loans reached 3,200bn. yuan. Insurance is handled by the People's Insurance Company.

Savings deposits in various forms in all banking institutions totalled 30,020.9bn. yuan at the end of 2005; loans amounted to 20,683.8bn. yuan.

There are stock exchanges in the Shenzhen Special Economic Zone and in Shanghai. A securities trading system linking six cities (Securities Automated Quotations System) was inaugurated in 1990 for trading in government bonds.

China received US$95.0bn. worth of foreign direct investment in 2009 and US$105.7bn. in 2010.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

China's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 accounted for 21.5% of the world total (the biggest emissions producer having overtaken the USA in 2007) and were equivalent to 4.9 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked China 105th in the world out of 149 countries analysed, with 65.1%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources. Pollution is estimated to cost China about 10% of GDP annually.

Electricity

Installed generating capacity in 2005 was 510m. kW, compared with 254m. kW in 1997. In 2005 electricity output was 2,474,700 GWh, a 12.8% increase over 2004. Consumption per capita was 2,476 kWh in 2007, up from 1,688 kWh in 2004. Rapidly increasing demand has meant that more than half of China's provinces have had to ration power. Sources of electricity in 2005 as percentage of total production: coal, 81.5%; hydro-electric power, 16.0%; nuclear, 2.1%; others, 0.4%. In 2010 there were 13 nuclear reactors in use and 25 under construction. Generating electricity is not centralized; local units range between 30 and 60 MW of output. In Dec. 2002 China formally broke up its state power monopoly, creating instead five generating and two transmission firms. The Three Gorges dam project on the Yangtze river was launched in 1993 and is intended to produce abundant hydro-electricity (as well as helping flood control). The first three 700,000-kW generators in service at the project's hydro-power station began commercial operation in July 2003. The original specification was completed in Oct. 2008, although six more generators have been added in the meantime (bringing the total to 32). The final two generators were scheduled to become operational in mid-2012, giving the dam an overall capacity of 22.5 GW.

Oil and Gas

On-shore oil reserves are found mainly in the northeast (particularly the Daqing and Liaohe fields) and northwest. There are off-shore fields in the continental shelves of east China. Oil production was 189.7m. tonnes in 2008. China is the second largest consumer of oil after the USA. Ever-growing demand has meant that increasing amounts of oil are having to be imported. A 964-km pipeline from Skovorodino in Russia to Daqing in the northeast of China was inaugurated in Jan. 2011, allowing China to increase significantly its imports of oil from the world's largest producer. The 1,833-km Turkmenistan–China gas pipeline, bringing natural gas to Xinjiang in China via Kazakhstan and Uzbekistan, was inaugurated in Dec. 2009. This connects with China's Second West–East gas pipeline. Only the USA and Japan import more oil. Domestic production now accounts for only 55% of consumption, compared to nearly 85% in 1998. Proven reserves in 2008 were 15.5bn. bbls, but they are expected to be exhausted by 2019.

The largest natural gas reserves are located in the western and north-central regions. Production was 76.1bn. cu. metres in 2008, with proven reserves of 2,460bn. cu. metres.

Wind

China is one of the largest producers of wind-power. In 2010 total installed capacity amounted to 44,733 MW, the highest of any country and 22.7% of the world total.

Minerals

In 2006 there were 158 varieties of proven mineral deposits in China, making it the third richest in the world in total reserves. Recoverable deposits of coal totalled 3,334.8bn. tonnes, mainly distributed in north China (particularly Shanxi province and the Inner Mongolia Autonomous Region). Coal production was 2,320m. tonnes in 2006. Annual coal production has increased every year since 2000. Growing domestic demand meant that China became a net importer of coal in 2007, and now consumes three times more coal than any other country.

The iron ore reserve base was 46bn. tonnes in 2005. Deposits are abundant in the anthracite field of Shanxi, in Hebei and in Shandong, and are found in conjunction with coal and worked in the northeast. Production in 2006 was 601m. tonnes, making China the world's leading iron ore producer.

Tin ore is plentiful in Yunnan, where the tin-mining industry has long existed. Tin production was 126,000 tonnes in 2006.

China is a major producer of wolfram (tungsten ore). There is mining of wolfram in Hunan, Guangdong and Yunnan.

Salt production was 56.6m. tonnes in 2006; gold production was 245 tonnes. Output of other minerals (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2006: bauxite, 21,000; aluminium, 13,700; zinc, 2,840; lead, 1,330; copper, 873. Estimated diamond production in 2005, 1,060,000 carats. Other minerals produced: nickel, barite, bismuth, graphite, gypsum, mercury, molybdenum, silver. Reserves (in tonnes) of salt, 402,400m.; phosphate ore, 15,766m.; sylvite, 458m. China's gold production rose to 276 tonnes in 2007, in the process surpassing South Africa as the world's leading gold producer.

Agriculture

Agriculture accounted for approximately 11.7% of GDP in 2006, compared to over 50% in 1949 at the time of the birth of the People's Republic of China and over 30% in 1980. In 2009 areas harvested for major crops were (in 1m. ha.): maize, 31.20; rice, 29.88; wheat, 24.29; soybeans, 9.19; rapeseed, 7.28; sweet potatoes, 3.56. Intensive agriculture and horticulture have been practised for millennia. Present-day policy aims to avert the traditional threats from floods and droughts by soil conservancy, afforestation, irrigation and drainage projects, and to increase the 'high stable yields' areas by introducing fertilizers, pesticides and improved crops. In Aug. 1998 more than 21m. ha., notably in the Yangtze valley, were under water as China experienced its worst flooding since the 1950s. The 1998 flood season claimed over 4,100 lives.

'Township and village enterprises' in agriculture comprise enterprises previously run by the communes of the Maoist era, co-operatives run by rural labourers and individual firms of a certain size. Such enterprises employed 146.8m. people in 2006. There were 1,896 state farms in 2006 with 3.29m. employees. In 2005 there were 252.22m. rural households. The rural workforce in 2005 was 503.87m., of whom 299.76m. were employed in agriculture, fishing or land management. Net per capita annual peasant income, 2006: 3,587 yuan. Around 40% of the total workforce is engaged in agriculture, down from 68% in 1980. In 2006 rural residents accounted for 56.1% of the population (1996, 69.5%).

In 2009 there were an estimated 110.0m. ha. of arable land and 14.3m. ha. of permanent cropland; 64.5m. ha. were irrigated.

There were 1.4m. large/medium-sized tractors in 2006 and 550,000 combine harvesters.

Agricultural production of main crops (in 1m. tonnes), 2009: rice, 196.68; maize, 164.11; sugarcane, 116.25; wheat, 115.12; melons and watermelons, 77.23; sweet potatoes, 76.77; potatoes, 73.28; tomatoes, 45.37; cucumbers and gherkins, 44.25; cabbage, broccoli, etc., 30.22; aubergines, 25.91; onions, dry, 21.05; seed cotton, 19.13; garlic, 17.97; soybeans, 14.98; groundnuts, 14.76; chillies and green peppers, 14.52; pears, 14.42; rapeseeds, 13.66; tangerines and mandarins, 9.75. Tea production in 2009 was 1,376,000 tonnes. China is the world's leading producer of a number of agricultural crops, including rice, sweet potatoes, wheat, potatoes, watermelons, groundnuts and honey. The gross value of agricultural output in 2006 was 4,242,400m. yuan.

Livestock, 2009: pigs, 451,178,000; goats, 152,458,000; sheep, 128,557,000; cattle, 92,132,000 (estimate); buffaloes, 23,704,000 (estimate); horses, 6,752,000 (estimate); chickens, 4.70bn. (estimate); ducks, 771m. (estimate). China has more pigs, goats, sheep, horses and chickens than any other country. It is also home to nearly two-thirds of the world's ducks. Meat production in 2009 was estimated at 78.21m. tonnes; milk, 40.55m. tonnes; eggs, 27.90m. tonnes; honey, 367,000 tonnes. China is the world's leading producer of meat and eggs.

Powell, S. G., Agricultural Reform in China: from Communes to Commodity Economy, 1978-1990. 1992

Forestry

In 2010 the area under forests was 206.86m. ha., or 21.9% of the total land area. The average annual increase in forest cover of 2,763,000 ha. between 2005 and 2010 was the highest of any country in the world. Total roundwood production in 2007 was 294.40m. cu. metres, making China the world's third largest timber producer (8.2% of the world total in 2007). It is the world's leading importer of roundwood, accounting for 28.2% of world timber imports in 2007.

Fisheries

Total catch, 2008: 14,791,163 tonnes, of which 12,542,986 tonnes were from marine waters. China's annual catch is the largest in the world, and currently accounts for approximately 16% of the world total. In 1989 the annual catch had been just 5.3m. tonnes. China's aquaculture production is also the largest in the world, at 32,736,000 tonnes in 2008.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in China in March 2012 were PetroChina (US$276.8bn.); China Mobile (Hong Kong), a telecommunications company (US$223.9bn.); and China Construction Bank (US$196.7bn.). In Nov. 2007 PetroChina was briefly the world's largest company after its flotation on the Shanghai stock market, with a market capitalization in excess of US$1trn.; in March 2012 it ranked third after the USA's Exxon Mobil and Apple Inc.

Industry accounted for 48.1% of GDP in 2006, up from 21% in 1949 when the People's Republic of China came into existence. Cottage industries persist into the 21st century. Industrial output grew by 15.7% in 2010. Modern industrial development began with the manufacture of cotton textiles and the establishment of silk filatures, steel plants, flour mills and match factories. In 2006 there were 287,406 non-state-owned industrial enterprises with an annual revenue of more than 5m. yuan, and a combined gross industrial output value of 28,586.1bn. yuan. Of these enterprises, 226,534 were domestically funded, 31,691 were foreign funded and 29,181 were dependent on funds from Hong Kong, Macao and Taiwan. There were 14,555 state-owned industrial enterprises in total, with a gross output value of 3,072.8bn. yuan.

Output of major products, 2009 (in tonnes): cement, 1,644.0m.; rolled steel, 694.1m.; crude steel, 572.2m.; pig iron, 552.8m.; distillate fuel oil (2008), 134.1m.; paper and paperboard, 89.7m.; chemical fertilizers, 63.9m.; petrol (2008), 62.9m.; sulphuric acid, 59.6m.; yarn, 23.9m.; residual fuel oil (2008), 17.4m.; sugar, 13.4m.

Also produced in 2009: cloth, 75,342m. metres; beer, 41,621.8m. litres; 619.2m. mobile telephones; 150.1m. notebook PCs; 119.2m. watches (2008); 99.0m. colour TV sets; 84.6m. cameras; 80.8m. air conditioners; 59.3m. home refrigerators; 57.6m. bicycles; 49.7m. washing machines; 27.6m. motorcycles; 13.8m. motor vehicles. China is the world's leading cement, steel and pig iron manufacturer (producing 53% of the world's cement, 46% of crude steel and 58% of pig iron); since 2000 output of cement has doubled and production of crude steel and pig iron has quadrupled.

Labour

The employed population at the 1990 census was 647.2m. (291.1m. female). By 2005 it had risen to 758.3m. (6.3m. more than in 2004), of whom 484.9m. worked in rural areas (2.3m. fewer than in 2004) and 273.3m. in urban areas (8.6m. more than in 2004). By 2015 China's working age population will begin to decline as a consequence of the country's one-child policy. In Dec. 2010 China's registered urban jobless was 4.1%, with 9.08m. registered unemployed in the country's cities. In 2005 there were 312.06m. people working in agriculture, forestry and fisheries; 80.80m. in manufacturing; 49.66m. in wholesale and retail trade, restaurants and hotels; 45.22m. in community, social and personal services; and 40.77m. in construction.

In 2006 China had 149,736 private industrial enterprises employing almost 20m. people. It was not until the late 1970s that the private sector even came into existence in China.

The average non-agricultural annual wage in 2005 was 18,364 yuan: 11,283 yuan, urban collectives; 19,313 yuan, state-owned enterprises; 18,244 yuan, other enterprises. There is a 6-day 48-hour working week. Minimum working age was fixed at 16 in 1991. There were 693,000 labour disputes in 2008 involving 1,214,000 workers, up from 350,000 disputes and 650,000 workers in 2007. Strikes over pay have become ever more frequent in China, particularly at foreign-owned facilities.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$281,612m. in 2005.

There are five Special Economic Zones at Shenzhen, Xiamen, Zhuhai, Shantou and Hainan in which concessions are made to foreign businessmen. The Pudong New Area in Shanghai is also designated a special development area. Since 1979 joint ventures with foreign firms have been permitted. A law of April 1991 reduced taxation on joint ventures to 33%. There is no maximum limit on the foreign share of the holdings; the minimum limit is 25%.

In May 2000 the USA granted normal trade relations to China, a progression after a number of years when China was accorded 'most favoured nation' status. China subsequently joined the World Trade Organization on 11 Dec. 2001.

Imports and Exports

Trade in US$1m.:

	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
Imports	791,461	956,115	1,132,562	1,005,555	1,394,200
Exports	968,936	1,220,060	1,430,693	1,201,647	1,578,193

China is the second largest trading nation in the world after the USA, in 2009 accounting for 7.9% of global merchandise imports by value and 9.6% of global merchandise exports (up from 4.3% when it joined the WTO in 2001). It overtook Germany as the largest exporter of goods in 2009 and its imports are second only to those of the USA.

Main imports in 2010 (in US$1bn.): machinery and transport equipment, 550.0; inedible crude materials (except fuels), and animal and vegetable oil and fats, 219.7; mineral fuels, lubricants and related materials, 188.5; chemicals, 149.3. Major exports in 2010 (in US$1bn.): machinery and transport equipment, 781.3; miscellaneous manufactured articles, 376.9; manufactured goods classified chiefly by material, 249.2; chemicals, 87.6. Chinese imports and exports both increased fivefold between 2001 and 2010.

Main import suppliers, 2009: Japan, 13.0%; South Korea, 10.2%; USA, 7.7%; Germany, 5.5%. Main export markets in 2009: USA, 18.4%; Hong Kong, 13.8%; Japan, 8.1%; South Korea, 4.5%. Customs duties with Taiwan were abolished in 1980. Trade with the European Union is fast expanding, having increased from €258.7bn. in 2006 to €395.1bn. in 2010.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

The total road length in 2005 was 1,931,000 km, including 41,000 km of motorways (there had not been any motorways as recently as the mid-1980s). 14,663m. tonnes of freight and 18,605m. persons were transported by road in 2006. The number of civil motor vehicles was 31.60m. in 2005, including 21.32m. buses and cars and 9.56m. trucks. China is the world's fastest-growing car market. There were 378,871 traffic accidents in 2006, with 89,455 fatalities.

Rail

In 2009 there were 86,000 km of railway. The high speed network, at 9,676 km in June 2011, is the longest in the world. The railways carried 1.53bn. passengers in 2009 and 3.22bn. tonnes of freight. China's railways are the busiest in the world, carrying 24% of global rail traffic. There are metro systems in Beijing, Chengdu, Dalian, Guangzhou, Nanjing, Shanghai, Shenyang, Shenzhen, Tianjin and Wuhan. The first line of a metro system in Xian opened in Sept. 2011. Other lines are under construction.

Civil Aviation

There are major international airports at Beijing (Capital), Guangzhou (Baiyun), Hong Kong (Chek Lap Kok) and Shanghai (Hongqiao and Pudong). In 2006 there were 142 civil airports for regular flights. The national and major airlines are state-owned, except Shanghai Airlines and Shenzhen Airlines. The leading Chinese airlines operating scheduled services in 2006 were China Southern Airlines (49.2m. passengers), China Eastern Airlines (35.0m.) and Air China (34.0m.). Other Chinese airlines include Changan Airlines, Hainan Airlines, Shandong Airlines, Shanghai Airlines, Shanxi Airlines, Shenzhen Airlines, Sichuan Airlines and Xiamen Airlines. In Feb. 2010 Shanghai Airlines merged with China Eastern Airlines but they have both retained their brand and livery.

In 2007 the busiest airport was Beijing (Capital), with 53,611,747 passengers; followed by Hong Kong International (Chek Lap Kok), with 47,042,419 passengers; Guangzhou (Baiyun), with 30,958,467 passengers; and Shanghai (Pudong), with 28,920,432 passengers. Shanghai (Pudong) is the busiest airport for freight, with 2,559,246 tonnes of cargo handled in 2007. In 2006 China had a total of 1,336 scheduled flight routes, of which 1,068 were domestic air routes and 268 were international air routes. Total passenger traffic in 2006 reached 159.68m.; freight traffic totalled 3.49m. tonnes.

Regular direct flights between mainland China and Taiwan resumed in July 2008 for the first time since 1949.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 2,495 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 25.36m. GT. Of the 2,495 vessels registered, 1,022 were general cargo ships, 482 bulk carriers, 476 oil tankers, 178 passenger ships, 174 container ships, 83 liquid gas tankers and 80 chemical tankers.

Mainland China's busiest port in 2007 was Shanghai (561.5m. tonnes of cargo handled, up from 537.5m. tonnes in 2006), followed by Ningbo (344.0m. tonnes, up from 309.7m. tonnes), Guangzhou (Canton) (343.3m. tonnes, up from 302.9m. tonnes), Tianjin (309.5m. tonnes), Qingdao (265.0m. tonnes), Qinhuangdao (248.9m. tonnes) and Dalian (222.9m. tonnes). Shanghai is the second busiest container port in the world after Singapore, handling 26.2m. 20-ft equivalent units (TEUs) in 2007 (19.6m. in 2006). Shenzhen, mainland China's second busiest port for container traffic and the world's fourth busiest, handled 21.1m. 20-ft equivalent units (TEUs) in 2007. Hong Kong handled 24.0m. 20-ft equivalent units (TEUs) in 2007.

In Jan. 2001 the first legal direct shipping links between the Chinese mainland and Taiwanese islands in more than 50 years were inaugurated.

Inland waterways totalled 123,400 km in 2006; 2,487.0m. tonnes of freight and 220.47m. passengers were carried. In June 2003 the Three Gorges Reservoir on the Chang Jiang River, the largest water control project in the world, reached sufficient depth to support the resumption of passenger and cargo shipping.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 340,810,000 main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year mobile phone subscribers numbered 641,230,000 (479.5 per 1,000 persons), making China the biggest market for mobile phones in the world. The two main mobile operators are China Mobile and China Unicom. The main landline operators are China Telecom and China Netcom. In 1998 there were around 500,000 internet users, but by 2008 this had risen to 298.0m. China has by far the most internet users of any country. In 2006, 74.1m. PCs were in use.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Six new codes of law (including criminal and electoral) came into force in 1980, to regularize the legal unorthodoxy of previous years. There is no provision for habeas corpus. The death penalty has been extended from treason and murder to include rape, embezzlement, smuggling, fraud, theft, drug-dealing, bribery and robbery with violence. Capital punishment applies to a total of 55 offences including 31 non-violent crimes. China does not divulge figures on its use of the death penalty; however, Amnesty International reported that thousands of people were executed in China in 2011—more than the rest of the world put together. 'People's courts' are divided into some 30 higher, 200 intermediate and 2,000 basic-level courts, and headed by the Supreme People's Court. The latter, the highest state judicial organ, tries cases, hears appeals and supervises the people's courts. It is responsible to the National People's Congress and its Standing Committee. People's courts are composed of a president, vice-presidents, judges and 'people's assessors' who are the equivalent of jurors. 'People's conciliation committees' are charged with settling minor disputes. There are also special military courts. Procuratorial powers and functions are exercised by the Supreme People's Procuracy and local procuracies.

The number of sentenced prisoners in Dec. 2005 was 1,565,771 (119 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

An educational reform of 1985 brought in compulsory nine-year education consisting of six years of primary schooling and three years of secondary schooling, to replace a previous five-year system.

In mainland China the 2010 population census revealed the following levels of educational attainment: 119.63m. people had finished university education; 187.99m. had received senior secondary education; 519.66m. had received junior secondary education; and 358.76m. had had primary education. 54.66m. people over 15 years of age or 4.08% of the population were illiterate, although this compared favourably with a 15.88% rate of illiteracy in the 1990 census and a 6.72% rate in 2000. In 2009 adult literacy was estimated at 94.0% and youth literacy at 99.4%.

In 2006 there were 130,495 kindergartens with 22.64m. children and 776,500 teachers; 396,567 primary schools with 109.77m. pupils and 5.63m. teachers; 94,116 secondary schools (of which: 16,992 senior secondary; 62,431 junior secondary; 6,048 specialized; 5,765 vocational; and 2,880 technical) with 103.50m. pupils and 5.67m. teachers. There were also 363,000 children at 1,605 special education schools. Institutes of higher education, including universities, numbered 1,867 in 2006, with 17.39m. undergraduates and 1.10m. postgraduate level students, and 1.08m. teaching staff. In 2009, 25% of the population of tertiary age were in post-secondary education, compared to 3% at the beginning of the 1990s. A national system of student loans was established in 1999. The number of Chinese students studying abroad has exceeded 100,000 annually since 2002 (making the country the largest exporter of students in the world); in 2006 the figure was 134,000.

There are more than 1,300 non-governmental private higher education institutions (including 12 private universities) with 1.5m. students, or 39% of the total college and university students nationwide.

There is an Academy of Sciences with provincial branches. An Academy of Social Sciences was established in 1977.

In 2005 total expenditure on education came to 841,884m. yuan; government appropriation was 516,108m. yuan.

Health

Medical treatment is free only for certain groups of employees, but where costs are incurred they are partly borne by the patient's employing organization.

In 2006 there were 308,969 health institutions throughout China, comprising 60,037 hospitals and health centres, 264 sanatoriums, 212,243 clinics, 1,402 specialized prevention and treatment centres, 3,548 centres for disease control and prevention, 3,003 maternity and child care centres, 248 medical research institutions and 28,224 other institutions; the number of beds totalled 3.51m.

China's first AIDS case was reported in 1985. Approximately 740,000 Chinese were HIV-infected in 2009.

In the first half of 2003 China was struck by an epidemic of a pneumonia-type virus identified as SARS (severe acute respiratory syndrome). The virus was first detected in southern China and was subsequently reported in over 30 other countries. According to the Ministry of Health, by the time the outbreak had been contained a total of 5,327 cases had been reported on the Chinese mainland; 4,959 patients were cured and discharged from hospital, and 349 died.

In 2002 some 67% of males and 4% of females smoked; one in every three cigarettes consumed worldwide in 2002 was smoked in China, and about 3,000 people died each day due to smoking.

In the period 2004–06, 10% of the population were undernourished compared to 22% in 1979.

Welfare

In 2006 there were 30,199 social welfare enterprises with 1,512,000 inmates. Numbers (in 1,000) of beneficiaries of relief funds: persons receiving minimum living allowance and traditional relief in rural areas, 29,878; persons receiving minimum living allowance in urban areas, 22,401; persons receiving temporary relief in poor rural households, 9,638; persons receiving temporary relief in poor urban households, 1,230; persons in rural households entitled to 'the five guarantees' (food, clothing, medical care, housing, education for children or funeral expenses), 5,033. The official retirement age for men is 60 and for women 50 (or 55 in the case of civil servants and professionals).

RELIGION

The government accords legality to five religions only: Buddhism, Islam, Protestantism, Roman Catholicism and Taoism.

Confucianism, Buddhism and Taoism have long been practised. Confucianism has no ecclesiastical organization and appears rather as a philosophy of ethics and government. Taoism—of Chinese origin—copied Buddhist ceremonial soon after the arrival of Buddhism two millennia ago. Buddhism in return adopted many Taoist beliefs and practices. A more tolerant attitude towards religion had emerged by 1979, and the government's Bureau of Religious Affairs (since renamed the State Administration for Religious Affairs) was reactivated.

Ceremonies of reverence to ancestors have been observed by the whole population regardless of philosophical or religious beliefs.

A new quasi-religious movement, Falun Gong, was founded in 1992, but has since been banned by the authorities. The movement has claimed some 100m. adherents, although the Chinese government has disputed this.

Muslims are found in every province of China, being most numerous in the Ningxia-Hui Autonomous Region, Yunnan, Shaanxi, Gansu, Hebei, Henan, Shandong, Sichuan, Xinjiang and Shanxi.

Roman Catholicism has had a footing in China for more than three centuries. Two Christian organizations—the Chinese Patriotic Catholic Association, which declared its independence from Rome in 1958, and the Protestant Three-Self Patriotic Movement—are sanctioned by the Chinese government.

According to estimates (by the state-approved Xinhua news agency, the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences and the State Administration for Religious Affairs) there were 100m. Buddhists, 23m. Christians and more than 21m. Muslims in the country in 2009. Other official figures indicate that there are 5.3m. Catholics, although unofficial estimates are much higher.

Legislation of 1994 prohibits foreign nationals from setting up religious organizations.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

There are 41 sites in the People's Republic of China that appear on the UNESCO World Heritage List. They are (with year entered on list): the Great Wall of China (1987), Zhoukoudian, the Peking Man site (1987), Imperial Palaces of the Ming and Qing Dynasties in Beijing and Shenyang (1987 and 2004), mausoleum of first Qing dynasty emperor, Beijing (1987), Taishan mountain (1987), Mogao Caves (1987), Mount Huangshan (1990), Huanglong Scenic Reserve (1992), Jiuzhaigou National Reserve (1992), Wulingyuan Scenic Reserve (1992), Chengde mountain resort and temples (1994), Potala palace, Lhasa (1994, 2000 and 2001), ancient building complex in the Wudang Mountains (1994), Qufu temple, cemetery and mansion of Confucius (1994), Mount Emei Scenic Reserve, including the Leshan Buddha (1996), Lushan National Park (1996), Lijiang old town (1997), Ping Yao old town (1997), Suzhou classical gardens (1997 and 2000), Summer Palace, Beijing (1998), Temple of Heaven, Beijing (1998), Mount Wuyi (1999), Dazu rock carvings (1999), Mount Qincheng and Dujiangyan irrigation system (2000), Xidi and Hongcun ancient villages, Anhui (2000), Longmen grottoes (2000), Ming and Qing dynasty tombs (2000, 2003 and 2004), the Yungang Grottoes (2001), the Three Parallel Rivers of Yunnan Protected Areas (2003), the Capital Cities and Tombs of the Ancient Koguryo Kingdom (2004), the historic centre of Macao (2005), the Sichuan Giant Panda sanctuaries (2006), Yin Xu (2006), Kaiping Diaolou and villages (2007), South China Karst (2007), Fujian Tulou (2008), Mount Sanqingshan National Park (2008), Mount Wutai (2009), China Danxia, six sub-tropical areas of erosional landforms (2010), the Historic Monuments of Dengfeng (2010) and the West Lake Cultural Landscape of Hangzhou (2011).

Press

China has two news agencies: Xinhua (New China) News Agency (the nation's official agency) and China News Service. In 2006 there were 1,938 newspapers and 9,468 magazines; 42,500m. copies of newspapers and 2,850m. copies of magazines were published. In 1980 there were fewer than 400 newspapers. The Communist Party newspaper is Renmin Ribao (People's Daily), which had a daily circulation of 2.8m. in 2006. The most widely read newspaper is Cankao Xiaoxi, with a daily circulation of 3.2m. in 2006. China has the highest circulation of daily newspapers in the world, with an average daily total of 107.51m. in 2007. In the 2010 World Press Freedom Index compiled by Reporters Without Borders, China ranked 171st out of 178 countries.

In 2006, 6,410m. volumes of books were produced.

Tourism

In 2005 tourist numbers totalled 46.8m. The World Tourism Organization predicts that China will overtake France as the world's most visited destination by 2020. It is currently the fourth most visited destination after France, Spain and the USA. More than 31m. Chinese travelled outside mainland China in 2005, up from under 5m. in 1995. Income from tourists in 2005 was US$29.3bn., ranking it fifth behind the USA, Spain, France and Italy.

Festivals

The lunar New Year, also known as the 'Spring Festival', is a time of great excitement for the Chinese people. The festivities get under way 22 days prior to the New Year date and continue for 15 days afterwards. Dates of the lunar New Year: Year of the Dragon, 23 Jan. 2012; Year of the Snake, 10 Feb. 2013. Lantern Festival, or Yuanxiao Jie, is an important, traditional Chinese festival, which is on the 15th of the first month of the Chinese New Year. Guanyin's Birthday is on the 19th day of the second month of the Chinese lunar calendar. Guanyin is the Chinese goddess of mercy. Tomb Sweeping Day, as the name implies, is a day for visiting and cleaning the ancestral tomb and usually falls on 5 April. Dragon Boat Festival is called Duan Wu Jie in Chinese. The festival is celebrated on the 5th of the 5th month of the Chinese lunar calendar. The Moon Festival is on the 15th of the 8th lunar month. It is sometimes called Mid-Autumn Festival. The Moon Festival is an occasion for family reunion. China's largest rock festivals include the Midi Modern Music Festival in Beijing (May), Beijing Pop Festival (Sept.) and Modern Sky Festival, also in Beijing (Oct.).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Hong Kong island and the southern tip of the Kowloon peninsula were ceded in perpetuity to the British Crown in 1841 and 1860 respectively. The area lying immediately to the north of Kowloon known as the New Territories was leased to Britain for 99 years in 1898. Talks began in Sept. 1982 between Britain and China over the future of Hong Kong after the lease expiry in 1997. On 19

Dec. 1984 the two countries signed a Joint Declaration by which Hong Kong became, with effect from 1 July 1997, a Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China, enjoying a high degree of autonomy and vested with executive, legislative and independent judicial power, including that of final adjudication. The existing social and economic systems were to remain unchanged for another 50 years. This 'one country, two systems' principle, embodied in the Basic Law, became the constitution for the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Hong Kong ('Xianggang' in Mandarin Pinyin) island is situated off the southern coast of the Chinese mainland 32 km east of the mouth of the Pearl River. The area of the island is 81 sq. km. It is separated from the mainland by a fine natural harbour. On the opposite side is the peninsula of Kowloon (47 sq. km). The 'New Territories' include the mainland area lying to the north of Kowloon together with over 200 offshore islands (976 sq. km). Total area of the Territory is 1,104 sq. km, a large part of it being steep and unproductive hillside. Country parks and special areas cover over 40% of the land area. Since 1945 the government has reclaimed over 5,400 ha. from the sea, principally from the seafronts of Hong Kong and Kowloon, facing the harbour.

Based on the results of the 2006 population census Hong Kong's resident population in March 2006 was 6,864,346 and the population density 6,352 per sq. km. 60.3% of the population was born in Hong Kong, 33.5% in other parts of China and 6.2% in the rest of the world.

In 2005, 100% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 7.43m.

The official languages are Chinese and English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Annual population growth rate, 2006–11, 0.7%. Vital statistics, 2010: known births, 88,600; known deaths, 42,200; registered marriages, 52,600. Rates (per 1,000): birth, 12.5; death, 6.0; marriage, 7.4; infant mortality, 2010, 1.7 per 1 000 live births (one of the lowest rates in the world). Expectation of life at birth, 2010: males, 80.0 years; females, 85.9. The median age for marrying in 2010 was 33.2 years for males and 29.8 for females. Total fertility rate, 2010, 1.1 child per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is sub-tropical, tending towards temperate for nearly half the year, the winter being cool and dry and the summer hot and humid, May to Sept. being the wettest months. Normal temperatures are Jan. 60°F (15.8°C), July 84°F (28.8°C). Annual rainfall 87" (2,214.3 mm).

THE BRITISH ADMINISTRATION

Hong Kong used to be administered by the Hong Kong government. The Governor was the head of government and presided over the Executive Council, which advised the Governor on all important matters. The last British Governor was Chris Patten. In Oct. 1996 the Executive Council consisted of three ex officio members and ten appointed members, of whom one was an official member. The chief functions of the Legislative Council were to enact laws, control public expenditure and put questions to the administration on matters of public interest. The Legislative Council elected in Sept. 1995 was, for the first time, constituted solely by election. It comprised 60 members, of whom 20 were elected from geographical constituencies, 30 from functional constituencies encompassing all eligible persons in a workforce of 2.9m., and ten from an election committee formed by members of 18 district boards. A president was elected from and by the members.

At the elections on 17 Sept. 1995 turnout for the geographical seats was 35.79%, and for the functional seats (21 of which were contested), 40-42%. The Democratic Party and its allies gained 29 seats, the Liberal Party 10 and the pro-Beijing Democratic Alliance 6. The remaining seats went to independents.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

In Dec. 1995 the Standing Committee of China's National People's Congress set up a Preparatory Committee of 150 members to oversee the retrocession of Hong Kong to China on 1 July 1997. In Nov. 1996 the Preparatory Committee nominated a 400-member Selection Committee to select the Chief Executive of Hong Kong and a provisional legislature to replace the Legislative Council. The Selection Committee was composed of Hong Kong residents, with 60 seats reserved for delegates to the National People's Congress and appointees of the People's Political Consultative Conference.

On 21 Dec. 1996 the Selection Committee selected a provisional legislature which began its activities in Jan. 1997 while the Legislative Council was still functioning. In Jan. 1997 the provisional legislature started its work by enacting legislation which would be applicable to the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region and compatible with the Basic Law.

Constitutionally Hong Kong is a Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China. The Basic Law enables Hong Kong to retain a high degree of autonomy. It provides that the legislative, judicial and administrative systems which were previously in operation are to remain in place. The Special Administrative Region Government is also empowered to decide on Hong Kong's monetary and economic policies independent of China.

In July 1997 the first-past-the-post system of returning members from geographical constituencies to the Legislative Council was replaced by proportional representation. There were 20 directly elected seats out of 60 for the first elections to the Legislative Council following Hong Kong's return to Chinese sovereignty, increasing in accordance with the Basic Law to 24 for the 2000 election with 36 indirectly elected. In the Sept. 2004 Legislative Council election (and that of Sept. 2008) 30 of the 60 seats were directly elected. For the election scheduled for Sept. 2012 the number of seats will be increased to 70, with 35 directly elected and 30 indirectly elected by functional constituencies. There will also be five new functional constituency seats nominated by elected District Council members. The Chief Executive is chosen by a Beijing-backed 1,200-member election committee (800 prior to the March 2012 election), although it has been stated that universal suffrage is the ultimate aim—potentially in 2017 for the Chief Executive and 2020 for all Legislative Council seats.

In July 2002 a new accountability or 'ministerial' system was introduced, under which the Chief Executive nominates for appointment 14 policy secretaries, who report directly to the Chief Executive. The Chief Executive is aided by the Executive Council, consisting of the three senior Secretaries of Department (the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and the Secretary for Justice) and eleven other secretaries plus five non-officials.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the Legislative Council election held on 7 Sept. 2008 turnout was 45%, down from 56% at the 2004 vote. 30 of the 60 seats were directly elected, the other 30 being returned by committees and professional associations. Pro-Beijing parties won 35 of the 60 seats (34 in 2004) including 11 of the 30 that were directly elected; pro-democracy parties won 23 (25 in 2004), including 19 of the 30 that were directly elected. Independents won the remaining two seats (an independent took one seat in 2004).

Leung Chun-ying was elected chief executive on 25 March 2012, receiving 689 of 1,132 votes in the Election Committee. He was scheduled to take office on 1 July 2012.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

In March 2012 the government of the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region comprised:

Chief Executive: Donald Tsang, OBE; b. 1944 (since 24 June 2005, having previously been acting Chief Executive from 12 March 2005–1 June 2005; re-elected 25 March 2007).

ECONOMY

Trade accounted for 27.8% of GDP in 2005; finance, insurance and real estate 22.2%; public administration, defence and services 16.6%; and transport and communications 10.4%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Hong Kong ranked 12th in the world in a 2011 survey of the countries and regions with the least corruption in business and government. It received 8.4 out of 10 in the annual index.

Hong Kong adopted a flat tax rate in 1948. Income tax is a flat 16% and only 25% of the population pay any tax at all. 6% of the population pays 80% of the total income tax bill. Hong Kong represents 20% of China's total worth.

Overview

Hong Kong has a per capita GDP that compares favourably with other OECD countries. Its economic rise was founded on its role as an international trade emporium. After developing as a successful low-cost, labour-intensive manufacturing centre, the structure of the economy has now shifted towards services. The island is dependant on imports of food and other resources.

In 1998 and the first quarter of 1999 Hong Kong sank into recession as a result of the Asian financial crisis. A year later the economy bounced back and in 2000 grew by 10.2%, the highest rate since 1987. In the second quarter of 2001 the economy sank into recession for three consecutive quarters in response to the slowdown in the US and global economy. After briefly rebounding, it shrank again for one quarter in 2003 following the SARS outbreak. However, in 2004 and 2005 the economy grew strongly on the back of a rise in Chinese tourism, healthy global demand for its exports and improving domestic consumer confidence.

Growth moderated in 2006 and 2007 and GDP declined as a result of the 2008 financial crisis, although it remained robust. In late 2010 the Special Administrative Region government predicted GDP growth for the year of 6.5%. Merchandise exports grew by 20.8% year-on-year in the third quarter of 2010, thanks to strong domestic demand and expansion into Asian markets. Unemployment stood at 4.2% in 2010, the lowest since late 2008.

Hong Kong's main engine of growth is its re-export business to and from China. China is of overwhelming importance to the economy, with the USA the next biggest export destination. Tourist arrivals from mainland China have surged in recent years. Continued financial integration with mainland China and the recovery in Hong Kong's main markets is key to growth in the medium term.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Hong Kong dollar (HKD) of 100 cents. It is pegged at a rate of HK$7.8 to the US dollar. Banknotes are issued by the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation and the Standard Chartered Bank, and, from May 1994, the Bank of China. Total money supply was HK$529,161m. in July 2009. In Aug. 2009 gold reserves were 67,000 troy oz and foreign exchange reserves were US$223,211m.

Inflation rates (based on IMF statistics):

-1.6%	-3.0%	-2.6%	-0.4%	0.9%	2.0%	2.0%	4.3%	0.6%	2.3%

Budget

In 2007–08 revenue totalled HK$358.5bn. and expenditure HK$252.4bn. Earnings and profits taxes accounted for 37.3% of revenues in 2007–08 and indirect taxes 26.9%; education accounted for 21.3% of expenditures and social welfare 13.8%.

Performance

Total GDP was US$224.5bn. in 2010. Real GDP growth rates (based on IMF statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
0.5%	1.8%	3.0%	8.5%	7.1%	7.0%	6.4%	2.3%	-2.7%	7.0%

In the 2010 World Competitiveness Yearbook, compiled by the International Institute for Management Development, Hong Kong came second in the world ranking.

Banking and Finance

The Hong Kong Monetary Authority acts as a central bank. The Chief Executive is Norman Chan. As at Dec. 2009 there were 145 banks licensed under the Banking Ordinance, of which 23 were locally incorporated. There were also 26 restricted licence banks, 28 deposit-taking companies and 71 representative offices of foreign banks. Licensed bank deposits were HK$5,193,003m. in July 2007; restricted licence bank deposits were HK$22,065m. There are three banks of issue: Bank of China (Hong Kong); The Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation; and Standard Chartered Bank.

The principal regulator of Hong Kong's securities and futures markets is the Securities and Futures Commission. Hong Kong Exchanges and Clearing (HKEx), which was created in March 2000, owns and operates the only stock and futures exchange in Hong and their related clearing houses.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Hong Kong's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 12.0 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 12.6m. kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was 38.95bn. kWh. Hong Kong is a net importer of electricity. Consumption in 2007 was 45.87bn. kWh.

Agriculture

The local agricultural industry is directed towards the production of high quality fresh food through intensive land use and modern farming techniques. Out of the territory's total land area of 1,103 sq. km, only 60 sq. km is currently farmed. In 2006 local production accounted for 55% of live poultry consumed, 23% of live pigs and 4% of fresh vegetables. The gross value of local agricultural production totalled HK$1,184m. in 2006, with pig production valued at HK$585m., poultry production (including eggs) at HK$340m., and vegetable and flower production at HK$254m.

Fisheries

In 2006 the capture and mariculture fisheries supplied about 21% of seafood consumed in Hong Kong and pond fish farms produced about 5% of the freshwater fish consumed. The capture fishing fleet comprises some 3,900 fishing vessels, almost all mechanized. In 2006 the industry produced 155,000 tonnes of fisheries produce, valued at HK$1.6bn. There are 26 fish culture zones occupying a total sea area of 209 ha. with some 1,080 licensed operators. The estimated production in 2006 was 1,488 tonnes. The inland fish ponds, covering a total of 1,024 ha., produced 1,943 tonnes of freshwater fish in 2006.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Hong Kong in March 2012 were: China Mobile (Hong Kong), a mobile telecommunications company (US$223.9bn.); CNOOC, an oil and natural gas company (US$99.2bn.); and Tencent Holdings Ltd, an online service provider (US$47.5bn.).

Industry is mainly export-oriented. In Sept. 2001 there were 19,801 manufacturing establishments employing 209,329 persons. Other establishment statistics by product type (and persons engaged) were: printing, publishing and allied industries, 4,778 (42,963); textiles and clothing, 3,696 (58,821); plastics, 973 (5,938); electronics, 748 (20,939); watches and clocks, 347 (2,945); shipbuilding, 325 (3,173); electrical appliances, 49 (390).

Labour

In 2001 the size of the labour force (synonymous with the economically active population) was 3,427,100 (1,461,900 females). The persons engaged in Sept. 2001 included 1,027,000 people in wholesale, retail and import/export trades, restaurants and hotels, 437,000 in finance, insurance, real estate and business services, 209,000 in manufacturing, 177,000 in the civil service and 77,000 in construction sites (manual workers only). A minimum wage of HK$28 per hour was introduced for the first time on 1 May 2011.

Unemployment stood at 4.0% in 2007.

EXTERNAL ECONOMIC RELATIONS

Imports and Exports

In 2009 the total value of imports was HK$2,692,356m. and total exports HK$2,469,089m. The main suppliers of imports in 2009 were mainland China (46.4%), Japan (8.8%), Taiwan (6.5%), Singapore (6.5%) and USA (5.3%). In 2009, 51.2% of total exports went to mainland China, 11.6% to the USA, 4.4% to Japan, 3.2% to Germany and 2.4% to the United Kingdom.

The chief import items in 2009 were: electrical machinery, apparatus and appliances, etc. (26.8%); telecommunications, sound recording and reproducing equipment (13.7%); office machines and automatic data processing machines (9.2%); articles of apparel and clothing accessories (4.5%). The main exports in 2009 were: electrical machinery, apparatus and appliances, etc. (26.4%); telecommunications, sound recording and reproducing equipment (16.8%); office machines and automatic data processing machines (10.1%); articles of apparel and clothing accessories (7.2%).

Hong Kong has a free exchange market. Foreign merchants may remit profits or repatriate capital. Import and export controls are kept to the minimum, consistent with strategic requirements.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2005 there were 1,955 km of roads, around 50% of which were in the New Territories. There are 12 road tunnels, including three under Victoria Harbour. In 2005 there were 351,000 private cars, 111,000 goods vehicles, 19,000 buses and coaches, and 34,000 motorcycles and mopeds. There were 15,062 road accidents in 2005, 135 fatal. A total of 18.3m. tonnes of cargo were transported by road in 2005.

A 50-km bridge linking Hong Kong, Zhuhai in Guangdong Province in mainland China and Macao is currently under construction and is expected to be finished in 2016.

Hong Kong was ranked third for its road infrastructure in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2009–2010.

Rail

The railway network covers around 229 km. The electrified Kowloon-Canton Railway, East Rail, runs for 53.9 km from the terminus at East Tsim Sha Tsui in Kowloon to border points at Lo Wu and Lok Ma Chau. Ma On Shan Rail branches off the main East Rail at Tai Wai and runs to Wu Kai Sha. East Rail and Ma On Shan Rail together carried 337m. passenger in 2006; cargo transported in 2006 totalled 184,000 tonnes. Another passenger rail service, West Rail, runs for 30.5 km from Tuen Mun in the New Territories to Nam Cheong in West Kowloon. It carried 72m. passengers in 2006. A light rail system (36 km and 58 stops) is operated by the Kowloon-Canton Railway Corporation in Tuen Mun, Yuen Long and Tin Shui Wai; it carried 136m. passengers in 2006.

The electric tramway on the northern shore of Hong Kong Island commenced operating in 1904 and has a total track length of 16 km. The Peak Tram, a funicular railway connecting the Peak district with the lower levels in Victoria, has a track length of 1.4 km and two tramcars (each with a capacity of 120 passengers per trip).

A metro, the Mass Transit Railway system, comprises 91 km with 53 stations and carried 867m. passengers in 2006.

The Airport Express Line (35 km) opened in 1998 and carried a total of 9.6m. passengers in 2006.

In 2006 a total of 4.1bn. passenger journeys were made on public transport (including local railways, buses, etc.).

In the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2009–2010 Hong Kong ranked third for quality of rail infrastructure.

Civil Aviation

The new Hong Kong International Airport (generally known as Chek Lap Kok), built on reclaimed land off Lantau Island to the west of Hong Kong, was opened on 6 July 1998 to replace the old Hong Kong International Airport at Kai Tak, which was situated on the north shore of Kowloon Bay. More than 85 airlines now operate scheduled services to and from Hong Kong. In 2006 Cathay Pacific Airways, the largest Hong Kong-based airline, operated approximately 1,250 passenger and cargo services weekly to 96 destinations in Europe, the Far and Middle East, South Africa, Australasia and North America. Cathay Pacific carried 15,438,243 passengers and 1.12m. tonnes of cargo in 2005. Dragonair, a Cathay Pacific subsidiary, provided scheduled services to 21 cities in mainland China and ten other destinations in Asia in 2006, plus about 70 cargo services per week to Anchorage, New York, Osaka, Shanghai, Taipei and Xiamen. In 2006 Air Hong Kong, an all-cargo operator, provided scheduled services to and from Bangkok, Osaka, Penang, Seoul, Shanghai, Singapore, Taipei and Tokyo. Hong Kong International Airport handled more international freight in 2001 than any other airport. In 2006, 280,490 aircraft arrived and departed and 44.5m. passengers and 3.58m. tonnes of freight were carried on aircraft.

Hong Kong was second, behind only Singapore, in the rankings for air transport infrastructure in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2009–2010.

Shipping

The port of Hong Kong handled 23.5m. 20-ft equivalent units (TEUs) in 2006, making it the world's second busiest container port after Singapore. The Kwai Chung Container Port has 24 berths with 7,694 metres of quay backed by 275 ha. of cargo handling area. Merchant shipping in 2004 totalled 25,562,000 GRT, including oil tankers 5,416,000 GRT. In 2004, 35,900 ocean-going vessels, 117,540 river cargo vessels and 71,980 river passenger vessels called at Hong Kong. In 2004, 221m. tonnes of freight were handled. In 2004 vessels totalling 399,031,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 399,025,000 NRT cleared.

Only Singapore ranked ahead of Hong Kong for quality of port facilities in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2009–2010.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 4,099,900 main (fixed) telephone lines. The local fixed telecommunications network services (FTNS) market in Hong Kong was liberalized in 1995. In Oct. 2007 there were five mobile network operators in Hong Kong. There were ten wireline-based local FTNS operators in Oct. 2007 and one wireless-based FTNS operator. There were only 687,600 mobile phone subscribers in 1995, since when the sector has expanded substantially. In 2008 there were 11,580,100 mobile phone subscribers (1,658.5 per 1,000 population). The internet market has also seen considerable growth. In 2008 there were 4.7m. internet users, up from 1.9m. in 2000. There were 26.1 broadband subscribers per 100 inhabitants in June 2007. In 2006 there were 4.5m. PCs in use.

The external telecommunications services market has been fully liberalized since 1 Jan. 1999, and the external telecommunications facilities market was also liberalized starting from 1 Jan. 2000.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Hong Kong Act of 1985 provided for Hong Kong ordinances to replace English laws in specified fields.

The courts of justice comprise the Court of Final Appeal (inaugurated 1 July 1997), which hears appeals on civil and criminal matters from the High Court; the High Court (consisting of the Court of Appeal and the Court of First Instance); the Lands Tribunal, which determines on statutory claims for compensation over land and certain landlord and tenant matters; the District Court (which includes the Family Court); the Magistracies (including the Juvenile Court); the Coroner's Court; the Labour Tribunal, which provides a quick and inexpensive method of settling disputes between employers and employees; the Small Claims Tribunal, which deals with monetary claims involving amounts not exceeding HK$50,000; and the Obscene Articles Tribunal.

While the High Court has unlimited jurisdiction in both civil and criminal matters, the District Court has limited jurisdiction. The maximum term of imprisonment it may impose is seven years. Magistracies exercise criminal jurisdiction over a wide range of offences, and the powers of punishment are generally restricted to a maximum of two years' imprisonment or a fine of HK$100,000.

After being in abeyance for 25 years, the death penalty was abolished in 1992.

77,437 crimes were reported in 2005, of which 13,890 were violent crimes. 40,804 people were arrested in 2005, of whom 9,339 were for violent crimes. The prison population was 11,580 in Oct. 2006 (168 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Adult literacy was 93.5% in 2001 (96.9% among males and 89.6% among females). Universal basic education is available to all children aged from six to 15 years. In around three-quarters of the ordinary secondary day schools teaching has been in Cantonese since 1998–99, with about a quarter of ordinary secondary day schools still using English. In 2005 there were 149,141 pupils in 1,062 kindergartens, 425,864 full-time students in 720 ordinary primary day schools (26,958 in private schools) and 478,440 in 37 government, 375 aided and 89 private ordinary secondary day schools.

The Hong Kong Technical Institutes and the Hong Kong Technical Colleges were renamed the Hong Kong Institutes of Vocational Education in 1999. In the academic year 2005–06 there were 55,531 students enrolled in Hong Kong Institutes of Vocational Education.

The University of Hong Kong (founded 1911) had 11,377 full-time and 1,114 part-time students in 2005–06; the Chinese University of Hong Kong (founded 1963), 11,605 full-time and 931 part-time students; the Hong Kong University of Science and Technology (founded 1991), 6,598 full-time and 211 part-time students; the Hong Kong Polytechnic University (founded 1972 as the Hong Kong Polytechnic), 12,282 full-time and 3,241 part-time students; the City University of Hong Kong (founded 1984 as the City Polytechnic of Hong Kong), 11,334 full-time and 1,418 part-time students; the Hong Kong Baptist University (founded 1956 as the Hong Kong Baptist College), 4,894 full-time and 637 part-time students; the Lingnan University (founded 1967 as the Lingnan College), 2,288 full-time and ten part-time students; and the Hong Kong Institute of Education (founded 1994), 2,666 full-time and 4,153 part-time students.

Estimated total government expenditure on education in 2005–06 was HK$55.6bn. (24.0% of total government spending; 3.9% of GDP). In 2004–05: 22.9% of total government spending; 4.1% of GDP.

Health

The Department of Health (DH) is the Government's health adviser and regulatory authority. The Hospital Authority (HA) is an independent body responsible for the management of all public hospitals. In 2009 there were 12,424 registered doctors, equivalent to 1.8 doctors per 1,000 population. In 2009 there were 2,126 dentists, 38,641 nurses and 4,525 midwives. The total number of hospital beds in 2009 was 35,062, including 26,872 beds in 38 public hospitals under the HA and 3,818 beds in 13 private hospitals. The bed-population ratio was 5.0 beds per thousand population.

The Chinese Medicine Ordinance was passed by the Legislative Council in July 1999 to establish a statutory framework to accord a professional status for Chinese medicine practitioners and ensure safety, quality and efficacy of Chinese medicine. In 2009 there were 6,048 registered Chinese medicine practitioners.

Total expenditure on health in 2006–07 amounted to HK$75,048m., an increase of 6.1% in real terms over that in 2005–06.

Welfare

Social welfare programmes include social security, family services, child care, services for the elderly, medical social services, youth and community work, probation, and corrections and rehabilitation. 171 non-governmental organizations are subsidized by public funds.

The government gives non-contributory cash assistance to needy families, unemployed able-bodied adults, the severely disabled and the elderly. Caseload as at Aug. 2011 totalled 280,358. Victims of natural disasters, crimes of violence and traffic accidents are financially assisted. Estimated recurrent government expenditure on social welfare for 2011–12 was HK$42.2bn.

RELIGION

In 2001 there were 4,970,000 Buddhists and Taoists, 290,000 Protestants and 280,000 Roman Catholics. The remainder of the population are followers of other religions. Joseph Zen Ze-kian became Hong Kong's first cardinal in 2006. In Feb. 2012 the Roman Catholic church had two cardinals.

CULTURE

Press

In 2006 there were 48 newspapers of which 21 were Chinese-language dailies, 14 English dailies, eight bilingual dailies and five Japanese dailies. The newspapers with the highest circulation figures are all Chinese-language papers—Oriental Daily News, Apple Daily and The Sun. Circulation of dailies (including free papers) in 2006 was 3.2m. (2.0m. paid-for and 1.2m. free). Daily newspapers reached 75% of the population in 2005.

Tourism

There were a record 36,030,300 visitor arrivals in 2010. Expenditure associated to inbound tourism totalled HK$209,983.0m. in 2010.

Festivals

The Hong Kong Arts Festival takes place in Feb.–March and features music, theatre, dance and opera. The Hong Kong International Film Festival (Aug.–Sept.) has been running annually since 1977.

Macao

Região Administrativa Especial de Macau
(Macao Special Administrative Region)

Population projection, 2015: 601,000

GNI per capita, 2010: US$47,022

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Macao was visited by Portuguese traders from 1513 and became a Portuguese colony in 1557. Initially sovereignty remained vested in China, with the Portuguese paying an annual rent. In 1848–49 the Portuguese declared Macao a free port and established jurisdiction over the territory. On 6 Jan. 1987 Portugal agreed to return Macao to China on 20 Dec. 1999 when it would become a special administrative zone of China, with considerable autonomy.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Macao Special Administrative Region, which lies at the mouth of the Pearl River, comprises a peninsula (9.3 sq. km) connected by a narrow isthmus to the People's Republic of China, on which is built the city of Santa Nome de Deus de Macao, the islands of Taipa (6.5 sq. km), linked to Macao by a 2-km bridge, Colôane (7.6 sq. km) linked to Taipa by a 2-km causeway, and Cotai, a strip of reclaimed land between Colôane and Taipa (5.2 km). The total area of Macao in 2006 was 28.6 sq. km. Additional land continues to be reclaimed from the sea. The population at the 2006 by-census was 502,113 (256,946 females); density, 17,556 people per sq. km. Estimate, Dec. 2010: 552,300. According to UN estimates, the entire population lived in urban areas in 2007. The official languages are Chinese and Portuguese, with the majority speaking the Cantonese dialect. Only about 2,000 people speak Portuguese as their first language.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 601,000.

In 2009, 9,489 foreigners were legally registered for residency in Macao. There were 3,121 legal immigrants from mainland China.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009: births, 4,764 (8.8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 1,664 (3.1); marriages, 3,035 (5.6); divorces, 782 (1.4). Infant mortality, 2009, 2.1 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy at birth (2005–08), 82.1 years.

CLIMATE

Sub-tropical tending towards temperate, with an average temperature of 23.0°C. The number of rainy days is around a third of the year. Average annual rainfall varies from 47–87" (1,200–2,200 mm). It is very humid from May to Sept.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Macao's constitution is the 'Basic Law', promulgated by China's National People's Congress on 31 March 1993 and in effect since 20 Dec. 1999. It is a Special Administrative Region (SAR) of the People's Republic of China, and is directly under the Central People's Government while enjoying a high degree of autonomy.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections held on 20 Sept. 2009 the Union for Development won two of 12 elected seats with 14.9% of votes cast, the Association of United Citizens of Macau two with 12.0% and the Democratic Prosperous Macau Association two with 11.6%. Six other parties won a single seat each. Turnout was 59.9%.

Fernando Chui Sai-on was elected chief executive on 26 July 2009, receiving 282 out of 296 votes in the Election Committee.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Chief Executive: Fernando Chui Sai-on; b. 1957 (sworn in 20 Dec. 2009).

Government Website: <http://www.gov.mo>

ECONOMY

Gaming is of major importance to the economy of Macao. It accounted for 37.2% of total GDP in 2008 and provides billions of dollars in taxes. In 2009, 19.7% of the workforce was directly employed by the casinos. In 2006 Macao overtook Las Vegas as the world's largest gaming market.

Overview

Since its transfer of sovereignty to the People's Republic of China in 1999, Macao has achieved high growth thanks to the tourism and gaming sectors. China's relaxation of travel restrictions since 1999 has resulted in a large increase in mainland visitors, with the official total reaching nearly 27m. in 2007 (up from 7m. in 1999). The cessation of Stanley Ho's monopoly of the local gaming industry in 2001 and its opening up to foreign competition has led to an influx of foreign investment that saw Macao become the world's biggest gaming centre in 2006. Casino and gambling revenue totalled a record US$23.5bn. in 2010, up 57% on the previous year.

The economy grew an average 15.5% per year from 2003–09 according to the Economist Intelligence Unit. Over-dependence on the gaming sector leaves the economy susceptible to shocks, while plans for casinos in other countries in the region could affect future returns. Macao's traditional manufacturing industries have virtually disappeared following the transfer of much of the textile industry to the Chinese mainland and the 2005 termination of the Multi-Fiber Agreement.

Currency

The unit of currency is the pataca (MOP) of 100 avos which is tied to the Hong Kong dollar at parity. Inflation was 8.6% in 2008 and 1.2% in 2009. Foreign exchange reserves were US$18,350m. in 2009. Total money supply was 30,608m. patacas in 2009.

Budget

In 2008 revenues totalled 51,077m. patacas; expenditures, 25,943m. patacas. Revenues from gaming tax accounted for 82.0% of total revenue in 2008; current expenditure accounted for 85.7% of expenditure.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 6.9% in 2005, rising to 16.6% in 2006. Total GDP in 2010 was US$28.0bn.

Banking and Finance

There are two note-issuing banks in Macao—the Macao branch of the Bank of China and the Macao branch of the Banco Nacional Ultramarino. The Monetary Authority of Macao functions as a central bank (Chairman, Teng Lin Seng). Commercial business is handled (2009) by 26 banks, 11 of which are local and 15 foreign. Total deposits, 2009 (including non-resident deposits), 290,534.0m. patacas. There are no foreign-exchange controls within Macao.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Macao's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 4.4 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 0.47m. kW in 2007; production, 1.52bn. kWh. Macao imported 1,683m. kWh of electricity in 2007.

Oil and Gas

202,688,000 litres of fuel oil were imported in 2009.

Fisheries

The catch in 2005 was approximately 1,500 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Although the economy is based on gaming and tourism there is a light industrial base of textiles and garments. In 2009 the number of manufacturing establishments was 1,002 (textiles and clothing, 304; food products and beverages, 234; publishing, printing and recorded media, 126).

Labour

In 2009 a total of 317,500 people were in employment, including 62,700 (19.7%) in gaming (up from 12,500 in 1999); 43,700 (13.8%), hotels, restaurants and similar activities; 41,500 (13.1%), wholesale and retail trade, repair of motor vehicles, motorcycles and personal and household goods; 32,700 (10.3%), construction; 25,600 (8.1%), real estate, renting and business activities; 20,300 (6.4%), public administration, defence and compulsory social security. Employment in 2009 was 96.5% of the labour force; unemployment rate stood at 3.6% (3.0% in 2008).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2009 imports (c.i.f.) were valued at US$4,750.9m., of which the main products were telecommunications, sound recording and reproducing equipment; petroleum and petroleum products; and gold, silverware, jewellery and articles of precious materials. In 2009 the chief import sources (in US$1m.) were: mainland China (1,451.6); Hong Kong (505.4); Japan (381.9).

2009 exports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$960.7m., of which the leading products were articles of apparel and clothing accessories; gold, silverware, jewellery and articles of precious materials; and petroleum oils and oils obtained from bituminous minerals. In 2009 the main export markets (in US$1m.) were: Hong Kong (377.5); USA (163.8); mainland China (139.9).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 401 km of roads. In 2007 there were 68,800 passenger cars in use (143 cars per 1,000 inhabitants), 2,100 buses and coaches, 4,600 lorries and vans, and 85,400 motorcycles and mopeds. There were 17 fatalities in road accidents in 2007.

A 50-km bridge linking Macao, Zhuhai in Guangdong Province in mainland China and Hong Kong is currently under construction and is expected to be finished in 2016.

Civil Aviation

An international airport opened in Dec. 1995. In 2009 Macau International Airport handled 3,643,970 passengers and 52,464 tonnes of freight (including transit cargo). In 2003 Air Macau flew to Bangkok, Beijing, Chengdu, Guilin, Haikou, Kaohsiung, Kota Kinabalu, Kuala Lumpur, Kunming, Manila, Nanjing, Ningbo, Shanghai, Singapore, Taipei and Xiamen.

Shipping

Regular services connect Macao with Hong Kong, 65 km to the northeast.

Telecommunications

In 2005 there were 707,100 telephone subscribers (1,537.3 per 1,000 inhabitants), including 532,800 mobile phone subscribers. There were 170,000 internet users in 2005. In June 2007 there were 23.0 broadband subscribers per 100 inhabitants.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There is a judicial district court, a criminal court and an administrative court with 24 magistrates in all.

In 2009 there were 12,406 crimes, of which 6,462 were against property. There were 930 persons in prison in Dec. 2009.

Education

There are three types of schools: public, church-run and private. In 2008–09 there were 142 schools and colleges. ## Taiwan<sup>1</sup>

Zhonghua Minguo
(‘Republic of China’)

Capital: Taipei

Population, 2010: 23.2m.

GNI per capita: not available

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Taiwan, christened Ilha Formosa (‘beautiful island’) by the Portuguese, was ceded to Japan by China by the Treaty of Shimonoseki in 1895. After the Second World War the island was surrendered to Gen. Chiang Kai-shek who made it the headquarters for his crumbling Nationalist Government. Until 1970 the USA supported Taiwan’s claims to represent all of China. Only in 1971 did the government of the People’s Republic of China manage to replace that of Chiang Kai-shek at the UN. In Jan. 1979 the USA established formal diplomatic relations with the People’s Republic of China, breaking off formal ties with Taiwan. Taiwan itself has continued to reject attempts at reunification, and although there have been frequent threats of direct action from mainland China (including military manoeuvres off the Taiwanese coast) the prospect of confrontation with the USA supports the status quo.

In July 1999 President Lee Teng-hui repudiated Taiwan’s 50-year-old ‘One China’ policy—the pretence of a common goal of unification—arguing that Taiwan and China should maintain equal ‘state to state’ relations. This was a rejection of Beijing’s view that Taiwan is no more than a renegade Chinese province which must be reunited with the mainland, by force if necessary. In the presidential election of 18 March 2000 Chen Shui-bian, leader of the Democratic Progressive Party, was elected, together with Annette Lu Hsiu-lien as his Vice President. Both support independence although Chen Shui-bian has made friendly gestures towards China and has distanced himself from colleagues who want an immediate declaration of independence. Following his wife’s indictment on embezzlement charges in Nov. 2006, President Chen survived three parliamentary attempts to impeach him.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Taiwan lies between the East and South China Seas about 160 km from the coast of Fujian. The territories currently under the control of the Republic of China include Taiwan, Penghu (the Pescadores), Kinmen (Quemoy) and Lienchiang (the Matsu Islands), as well as the archipelagos in the South China Sea. Off the Pacific coast of Taiwan are Green Island and Orchid Island. To the northeast of Taiwan are the Tiaoyutai Islets. The total area of Taiwan Island, the Penghu Archipelago and the Kinmen area (including the fortified offshore islands of Quemoy and Matsu) is 36,188 sq. km (13,973 sq. miles). Population (2010), 23,162,123. The ethnic composition is 84% native Taiwanese (including 15% of Hakka), 14% of Mainland Chinese, and 2% aborigine of Malayo-Polynesian origin. There were also 494,107 aboriginals of Malay origin in Dec. 2008. Population density: 637 per sq. km.

Taiwan's administrative units comprise (with 2008 populations): two special municipalities: Taipei, the capital (2,622,923) and Kaohsiung (1,525,642); five cities outside the county structure: Chiayi (273,793), Hsinchu (405,371), Keelung (388,979), Taichung (1,066,128), Tainan (768,453); 16 counties (hsien) in Taiwan Province: Changhua (1,312,935), Chiayi (548,731), Hsinchu (503,273), Hualien (341,433), Ilan (460,902), Kaohsiung (1,243,412), Miaoli (560,397), Nantou (531,753), Penghu (93,308), Pingtung (884,838), Taichung (1,557,944), Tainan (1,104,552), Taipei (3,833,730), Taitung (231,849), Taoyuan (1,958,686), Yunlin (723,674); two counties in Fujian Province: Kinmen (84,570), Lienchiang (9,755).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

In 2006 the birth rate was 9.0 per 1,000 population; death rate, 6.0 per 1,000. Population growth rate, 2006, 0.5%. Life expectancy, 2006: males, 74.1 years; females, 80.2 years. Infant mortality, 2006, 5.8 per 1,000 live births.

CLIMATE

The climate is subtropical in the north and tropical in the south. The typhoon season extends from July to Sept. The average monthly temperatures of Jan. and July in Taipei are 59.5°F (15.3°C) and 83.3°F (28.5°C) respectively, and average annual rainfall is 84.99" (2,158.8 mm). Kaohsiung's average monthly temperatures of Jan. and July are 65.66°F (18.9°C) and 83.3°F (28.5°C) respectively, and average annual rainfall is 69.65" (1,769.2 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The ROC Constitution is based on the Principles of Nationalism, Democracy and Social Wellbeing formulated by Dr Sun Yat-sen, the founding father of the Republic of China. The ROC government is divided into three main levels: central, provincial/municipal and county/city, each of which has well-defined powers.

The central government consists of the Office of the President, the National Assembly, which is specially elected only for constitutional amendment, and five governing branches called 'yuan'—namely the Executive Yuan, the Legislative Yuan, the Judicial Yuan, the Examination Yuan and the Control Yuan. Beginning with the elections to the seventh Legislative Yuan held on 12 Jan. 2008 the Legislative Yuan has 113 members (formerly 225).

From 5 May to 23 July 1997 the Additional Articles of the Constitution of the Republic of China underwent yet another amendment. As a result a resolution on the impeachment of the President or Vice President is no longer to be instituted by the Control Yuan but rather by the Legislative Yuan. The Legislative Yuan has the power to pass a no-confidence vote against the premier of the Executive Yuan, while the president of the Republic has the power to dissolve the Legislative Yuan. The premier of the Executive Yuan is now directly appointed by the president of the Republic. Hence the consent of the Legislative Yuan is no longer needed.

In Dec. 2003 a law came into effect allowing for referendums to be held.

National Anthem

'San Min Chu I'; words by Dr Sun Yat-sen, tune by Cheng Mao-yun.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections took place on 14 Jan. 2012. Ma Ying-jeou (Nationalist Party/Kuomintang) won 51.6% of the vote and Tsai Ing-wen (Democratic Progressive Party) 45.6%.

Elections to the Legislative Yuan were also held on 14 Jan. 2012. The Nationalist Party won 64 seats with 44.5% of votes cast; the Democratic Progressive Party, 40 seats (34.6%); the Taiwan Solidarity Union, 3 seats (9.0%); the People First Party, 3 seats (5.5%).

Elections for an ad hoc National Assembly charged with amending the constitution were held on 14 May 2005. The Democratic Progressive Party took 127 of 300 seats (with 42.5% of the vote), the Nationalist Party 117 (38.9%), the Taiwan Solidarity Union 21 (7.1%), the People First Party 18 (6.1%) and the Jhang Ya Jhong Union 5 (1.7%). Turnout was 23.4%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

President: Ma Ying-jeou; b. 1950 (Nationalist Party/Kuomintang; sworn in 20 May 2008 and re-elected in Jan. 2012).

Vice President: Vincent Siew.

Prime Minister and President of the Executive Yuan: Sean Chen; b. 1949 (Kuomintang; sworn in 6 Feb. 2012). There are eight ministries under the Executive Yuan: Interior; Foreign Affairs; National Defence; Finance; Education; Justice; Economic Affairs; Transport and Communications.

Vice President of the Executive Yuan (Deputy Premier): Jiang Yi-huah. President, Control Yuan: Wang Chien-shien. President, Examination Yuan: Kuan John Chung. President, Judicial Yuan: Rai Hau-min. President, Legislative Yuan: Wang Jin-ping. Secretary General, Executive Yuan: Lin Yi-shih. Minister of Interior: Lee Hong-yuan. Foreign Affairs: Timothy Yang. National Defence: Kao Hua-chu. Finance: Christina Liu. Education: Chiang Wei-ling. Justice: Tseng Yung-fu. Economic Affairs: Shih Yen-shiang. Transport and Communications: Mao Chi-kuo. Ministers without Portfolio: Chang Jin-fu; James Cherng-Tay Hsueh; Lin Junq-tzer; Luo Ying-shay (also Chair of the Mongolian and Tibetan Affairs Commission); Huang Kuang-nan; Yang Chiu-hsing; Kuan Chung-ming; Chern Jenn-chuan (also Chair of the Public Construction Commission); Chang San-cheng.

A number of commissions and subordinate organizations have been formed with the resolution of the Executive Yuan Council and the Legislature to meet new demands and handle new affairs. ## DEFENCE

Conscription was reduced from 14 months to 12 months in 2009. The government has announced its intention to move towards a volunteer professional force—a process scheduled to start in 2011 and end in 2014. However, the costs involved mean that this transformation is unlikely to be viable. Defence expenditure in 2008 totalled US$10,495m. (US$458 per capita), representing 2.8% of GDP.

Army

The Army was estimated to number about 190,000 in 2000, including military police. Army reserves numbered 2.7m. In addition the Ministry of Justice, Ministry of Interior and the Ministry of Defence each command paramilitary forces totalling 25,000 personnel in all. The Army consists of Army Corps, Defence Commands, Airborne Cavalry Brigades, Armoured Brigades, Motorized Rifle Brigades, Infantry Brigades, Special Warfare Brigades and Missile Command.

Navy

Active personnel in the Navy in 2000 totalled 50,000. There are 425,000 naval reservists. The operational and land-based forces consist of four submarines, 16 destroyers and 21 frigates. There is a naval air wing operating 31 combat aircraft and 21 armed helicopters.

Air Force

Units in the operational system are equipped with aircraft that include locally developed IDF, F-16, Mirage 2000-5 and F-5E fighter-interceptors. There were 50,000 Air Force personnel in 2000 and 334,000 reservists.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

By a treaty of 2 Dec. 1954 the USA pledged to defend Taiwan, but this treaty lapsed one year after the USA established diplomatic relations with the People's Republic of China on 1 Jan. 1979. In April 1979 the Taiwan Relations Act was passed by the US Congress to maintain commercial, cultural and other relations between USA and Taiwan through the American Institute in Taiwan and its Taiwan counterpart, the Co-ordination Council for North American Affairs in the USA, which were accorded quasi-diplomatic status in 1980. The People's Republic took over the China seat in the UN from Taiwan on 25 Oct. 1971. In May 1991 Taiwan ended its formal state of war with the People's Republic. Taiwan became a member of the World Trade Organization on 1 Jan. 2002.

In March 2012 Taiwan had formal diplomatic ties with 23 countries after Malawi agreed to recognize the People's Republic of China instead. In Aug. 2007, 15 of the diplomatic allies sponsored an unsuccessful proposal for Taiwan to join the UN.

ECONOMY

Overview

Taiwan has made a successful transition from an agricultural economy to one based on high-tech electronics. Economic growth has averaged 8% during the last three decades, driven primarily by high value added manufacturing and exports, especially in electronics and computers. Taiwan has successfully diversified its trade, with China overtaking the USA as the prime export market.

In 1989 the government began to privatize government-owned enterprises, including banks, telecommunication firms and industrial firms. Though largely escaping the impact of the 1997 Asian financial crisis, the economy suffered setbacks in the 2000s, partly owing to policy co-ordination problems and bad debts in the banking system. The economy went into recession in 2001 with the first year of negative growth ever recorded and unemployment reaching record highs. Strong export performance stimulated a recovery, with annual GDP growth above 3% since 2004, unemployment falling below 4% in 2007 and inflation consistently low.

Owing to a heavy dependence on exports, Taiwan suffered a severe downturn as a result of the global financial crisis that began in late 2007. Major export industries such as semiconductors and memory chips declined, unemployment reached its highest levels since 2003 and, in 2008, the economy went into recession. However, a US$5.6bn. stimulus package was unveiled in late 2008 and by 2010 the economy was recording its highest growth rates for nearly three decades.

Currency

The unit of currency is the New Taiwan dollar (TWD) of 100 cents. Gold reserves were 13.61m. oz in Sept. 2005. There was inflation of 3.5% in 2008 but deflation of 0.9% in 2009. Foreign exchange reserves were US$241.7bn. in Dec. 2004.

Budget

In 2006 general government revenues totalled NT$2,172,436m. and expenditures NT$2,261,958m. Tax revenue accounted for 71.7% of revenues in 2006; education, science and culture accounted for 21.6% of expenditures, economic development 17.0% and general administration 15.3%.

Performance

Taiwan sustained rapid economic growth at an annual rate of 9.2% from 1960 up to 1990. The rate slipped to 6.4% in the 1990s and 5.9% in 2000; Taiwan suffered from the Asian financial crisis, though less than its neighbours. Consumer prices showed increasing stability, rising at an average annual rate of 6.3% from 1960 to 1989, 2.9% in the 1990s and 1.3% in 2000. In 2001 global economic sluggishness and the events of 11 Sept. in the USA severely affected Taiwan's economy, which contracted by 2.2%. Per capita GNP stood at US$12,876, while consumer prices remained almost unchanged. Subsequent economic recovery led to growth of 5.4% in 2006 and 6.0% in 2007. Although there was negative growth of 1.9% in 2009, the economy grew by 10.9% in 2010.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank of The Republic of China (Taiwan), reactivated in 1961, regulates the money supply, manages foreign exchange and issues currency. The Governor is Pong Fai-nan. The Bank of Taiwan is the largest commercial bank and the fiscal agent of the government. There are seven domestic banks, 38 commercial banks and 36 foreign banks.

There are two stock exchanges in Taipei.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Taiwan's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 13.3 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Output of electricity in 2001 was 188.5m. MWh; total installed capacity was 35,568 MW, of which 77.1% is held by the Taiwan Power Company. There were six units in three nuclear power stations in 2010. Consumption per capita stood at 4,257 litres of oil equivalent in 2001.

Oil and Gas

Crude oil production in 2004 was 2.8m. bbls; natural gas, 850m. cu. metres.

Minerals

Coal production ceased by 2001 because of competitive imports and increasing local production costs.

Agriculture

In 2001 the cultivated area was 848,743 ha., of which 438,974 ha. were paddy fields. Rice production totalled 1,396,274 tonnes. Livestock production was valued at more than NT$101,205m., accounting for 28.67% of Taiwan's total agricultural production value.

Forestry

Forest area, 2001: 2,101,719 ha. Forest reserves: trees, 357,492,423 cu. metres; bamboo, 1,109m. poles. Timber production, 26,401 cu. metres.

Fisheries

The catch in 2005 was 1,017,243 tonnes, almost exclusively from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

The largest companies in Taiwan by market capitalization in March 2011 were: Taiwan Semicon. Mnfg (US$62.2bn.), Hon Hai Precision Industry, an electronics manufacturer (US$33.8bn.); and HTC, a technology hardware company (US$32.0bn.).

Output (in tonnes) in 2005: cement, 19.9m.; crude steel, 18.6m.; sugar (2002), 0.2m.; cotton fabrics (1999), 1,061m. sq. metres; portable computers (1999), 9.95m. units; desktop computers (1999), 3.01m. units. Taiwan is the third largest information technology producer after the USA and Japan. The IT sector has replaced traditional industries as the engine for growth.

Labour

In Sept. 2002 the total labour force was 9.97m., of whom 9.44m. were employed. Of the employed population, 55.09% worked in the service sector (including 22.70% in trade and 16.11% in accommodation and eating and drinking establishments); 37.28% in industry (including 27.05% in manufacturing and 7.64% in construction); and 7.63% in agriculture, forestry and fisheries. The unemployment rate was 5.32%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Restrictions on the repatriation of investment earnings by foreign nationals were removed in 1994.

Imports in 2007 totalled US$219,252m. and exports US$246,677m.

In 2001 the main import suppliers were Japan (24.1%), USA (17.0%), South Korea (6.3%) and Germany (4.0%). The main export markets were the USA (22.5%), Hong Kong (21.9%), Japan (10.4%) and Germany (3.6%).

Principal imports (2001), in US$1bn.: machinery and electrical equipment, 47.55; minerals, 12.76; chemicals, 10.23; basic metals and articles, 7.78; precision instruments, clocks and watches, and musical instruments, 6.21; vehicles and transport equipment, 4.24; textile products, 2.36.

Principal exports (2001), in US$1bn.: machinery and electrical equipment, 66.85; textiles, 12.63; basic metals and articles, 11.33; plastic and rubber products, 7.99; vehicles and transport equipment, 4.44; toys, games and sports equipment, 1.79; footwear, headwear and umbrellas, 0.79. By 2001 high-tech products were responsible for more than 54% of exports.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

In 2006 there were 39,286 km of roads. In 2007, 5.7m. passenger cars, 117,100 buses and coaches, 1.0m. lorries and vans, and 13.9m. motorcycles and mopeds were in use. 1,007m. passengers and 594m. tonnes of freight were transported in 2006. There were 3,140 fatalities in road accidents in 2006.

Rail

In 2005 freight traffic amounted to 13m. tonnes and passenger traffic to 169m. Total route length was 1,450 km. There are metro systems in Taipei (opened in 1996) and in Kaohsiung (opened in 2008).

Civil Aviation

There are currently two international airports: Taiwan Taoyuan International Airport at Taoyuan near Taipei, and Kaohsiung International in the south. In addition there are 14 domestic airports: Taipei, Hualien, Taitung, Taichung, Tainan, Chiayi, Pingtung, Makung, Chimei, Orchid Island, Green Island, Wangan, Kinmen and Matsu (Peikan). A second passenger terminal at Taiwan Taoyuan International Airport opened in July 2000 as part of a US$800m. expansion project, which included aircraft bays, airport connection roads, a rapid transit link with Taipei, car parks and the expansion of air freight facilities, begun in 1989. In 2010 Taiwan Taoyuan International Airport handled 25,114,418 passengers, up from 18,681,462 in 2000.

In June 2002, 38 airlines including code-share airlines provided flights to destinations in Taiwan, of which 32 foreign and six Taiwanese carriers—China Airlines (CAL), EVA Airways, Mandarin Airlines (MDA; CAL's subsidiary), Trans Asia Airways (TNA), UNI Airways and the now defunct Far Eastern Air Transport Corp.—operated international services. In 2001, 44.1m. passengers and 1.3m. tonnes of freight were flown.

Regular direct flights between Taiwan and mainland China resumed in July 2008 for the first time since 1949.

Shipping

Maritime transportation is vital to the trade-oriented economy of Taiwan. In Jan. 2009 there were 154 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 2.59m. GT. Of the 154 vessels registered, 50 were general cargo ships, 39 bulk carriers, 30 oil tankers, 24 container ships, eight passenger ships and three chemical tankers. There are six international ports: Kaohsiung, Keelung, Taichung, Hualien, Anping and Suao. The first three are container centres, Kaohsiung handling 9.68m. 20-ft equivalent units in 2008, making it the world's 12th busiest container port in terms of number of containers handled. Suao port is an auxiliary port to Keelung. In Jan. 2001 the first legal direct shipping links between Taiwanese islands and the Chinese mainland in more than 50 years were inaugurated.

Telecommunications

In Sept. 2006 there were 36,491,200 telephone subscribers (1,597.8 per 1,000 inhabitants) and PCs numbered 13.1m. (575.2 per 1,000 inhabitants). Taiwan's biggest telecommunications firm, the state-owned Chunghwa Telecom, lost its fixed-line monopoly in Aug. 2001. In Sept. 2006 there were 22,978,100 mobile phone subscribers, equivalent to 1,006.1 per 1,000 persons. There were approximately 13.21m. internet users in 2005. There were 20.9 broadband subscribers per 100 inhabitants in June 2007.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

The Judicial Yuan is the supreme judicial organ of state. Comprising 15 grand justices, since 2003 these have been nominated and, with the consent of the Legislative Yuan, appointed by the President of the Republic. The grand justices hold meetings to interpret the Constitution and unify the interpretation of laws and orders. There are three levels of judiciary: district courts and their branches deal with civil and criminal cases in the first instance; high courts and their branches deal with appeals against judgments of district courts; the Supreme Court reviews judgments by the lower courts. There is also the Supreme Administrative Court, high administrative courts and a Commission on the Disciplinary Sanctions of Public Functionaries. Criminal cases relating to rebellion, treason and offences against friendly relations with foreign states are handled by high courts as the courts of first instance.

The death penalty is still in force. There were five executions in 2011 (four in 2010). The population in penal institutions in Oct. 2008 was 63,370 (276 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Since 1968 there has been compulsory education for six to 15-year-olds with free tuition. The illiteracy rate dropped from 7.1% in 1989 to 2.5% by 2006. There were 2,654 primary schools, 1,061 secondary schools and 156 vocational schools in 2008; and 102 universities, 45 colleges and 15 junior colleges. In 2005–06 there were 1,831,913 pupils with 101,682 teaching staff at elementary schools; 951,236 pupils and 48,816 teaching staff at junior high schools; 420,608 pupils and 34,112 teaching staff at senior high schools; and 331,604 students and 15,590 teaching staff at senior vocational schools. There were 1,259,490 students in universities and colleges in 2005–06 with 48,047 academic staff.

Health

In 2001 there was one physician serving every 733 persons, one doctor of Chinese medicine per 5,631 persons and one dentist per 2,505 persons. Some 114,179 beds were provided by the 92 public and 501 private hospitals, averaging nearly 57 beds per 10,000 persons. In addition to the 492 public and 17,136 private clinics, there were 369 health stations and 503 health rooms serving residents in the sparsely populated areas. In 2001 acute infectious diseases were no longer the number one killer. Cancers, cerebrovascular diseases, heart diseases, and accidents and adverse effects were the first four leading causes of death.

Welfare

A universal health insurance scheme came into force in March 1995 as an extension to 13 social insurance plans which cover only 59% of Taiwan's population. Premium shares among the government, employer and insured are varied according to the insured statuses. By the end of 2001 about 21.65m. people or 96% of the population were covered by the National Health Insurance programme.

RELIGION

According to the registered statistics of Municipality, County and City Government there were 827,135 Taoists in 2001 (and 7,714 temples), 382,437 Protestants (and 2,387 churches), 216,495 Buddhists (and 1,966 temples) and 182,814 Catholics (and 728 churches). In Feb. 2012 there was one cardinal.

CULTURE

Press

There were 23 daily newspapers in 2008 with a circulation of 4.2m. and 21 non-dailies with a circulation of 3.8m. The biggest circulation dailies are The Liberty Times and Apple Daily.

Tourism

In 2006, 3,520,000 international tourists visited Taiwan. Receipts totalled US$5,136m.

Festivals

The pop festival, Spring Scream, is held in April in Kenting.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Cundinamarca in central Colombia shows evidence of human habitation from 10,500 BC. The central highlands became the stronghold of the Chibcha people from 550 BC, with settlements based on the cultivation of corn, potatoes and beans. Much of the north, including the Caribbean coast, was associated with the Tairona civilization whose stone dwellings and ceremonial sites date from AD 1000.

Columbus explored South America's Caribbean coast in 1498, heralding the European influx. The port of Cartagena, founded in 1533 by Pedro de Heredia, became a leading administrative and commercial centre, its wealth derived from gold mined in the Cauca valley, Antioquia and the Choco. The Spanish explorer, Gonzalo Jiménez de Quesada, founded Bogotá in 1538 and within a decade the Chibcha were conquered and the New Kingdom of Granada declared. In 1564 the Spanish Crown appointed a president, loosely attached to the viceroyalty of Peru and centred on Bogotá, with jurisdiction over Colombia, Ecuador, Panama and Venezuela. Cartagena and the districts near the gold mines prospered, while other parts of the colony remained undeveloped.

Disputes with Lima led to the creation of the Viceroyalty of New Granada in 1719.

An independence movement followed the Napoleonic invasion of Spain in 1808. Antonio Nariño was a leading revolutionary figure, along with Francisco de Paula Santander and Simón Bolívar, who became an officer in the Patriot forces in 1811. Forced to flee to Jamaica when Gen. Pablo Morilla launched the Spanish reconquest in 1815, Bolívar settled in the Llanos (Colombia's eastern plains) and assembled a new army. Victory at Boyaca in 1819 secured Greater Colombia as an independent state. Following the Spanish surrender of Cartagena in 1821, Bolívar became president, ruling from Bogotá what is now Venezuela, Panama and (from 1822) Ecuador.

Separatist movements soon emerged and by 1826 Venezuela was autonomous. Ecuador withdrew three years later, with Colombia and Panama emerging as the Republic of New Granada, renamed the United States of Colombia following the signing of the Treaty of Rionegro in 1863. Politics was dominated by the reformist Liberal Party (PL) and the Conservatives, who sought to preserve Spanish and Roman Catholic heritage. Free trade led to the growth of exports, notably tobacco, quinine and coffee. Concerns over government weakness brought about a new Nationalist movement under Rafael Núñez. President from 1879, he introduced a constitution in 1886 that reversed the federalist trend and brought strong centralist control to the new Republic of Colombia. A Liberal revolt in 1899 sparked off the War of a Thousand Days, which had claimed over 100,000 lives by the time peace was achieved in 1902. The department of Panama became independent in 1903, backed by the USA, after plans for a canal across the isthmus were rejected by Colombia.

The rule of Gen. Rafael Reyes from 1904 was characterized by centralized power and industrial growth. Collapsing coffee prices caused economic hardship in the early 1930s but conditions improved under the Liberal governments of Enrique Olaya Herrera (1930–34) and Alfonso López Pumarejo (1934–38). After re-election in 1942, López Pumarejo faced a split in the PL, which culminated in an aborted coup and his resignation in 1945. The Conservatives took power the following year under Mariano Ospina Pérez, setting the stage for a civil war (La Violencia) that claimed 300,000 lives by 1957.

Conservatives and Liberals agreed to unite under the National Front in 1958, while other parties were banned. Several leftist guerrilla organizations emerged in the 1960s, including the Colombian Revolutionary Armed Forces (FARC), which aimed to install a Marxist regime. Generating wealth from the illegal drugs trade, it was especially influential in the rural south and east. Additionally, the National Liberation Army (ELN) was behind waves of kidnapping and violence in the mid-1990s.

In 1998 peace talks were started when a Conservative, Andrés Pastrana Arango, was elected president. FARC was granted a haven in the southeast. In 2000 Pastrana's 'Plan Colombia' initiative was launched, backed with US$1bn. from Washington to fight drug-trafficking. In 2001 FARC was accused of preparing attacks and conducting drug deals, and in Feb. 2002, following the kidnapping of a senator, Pastrana broke off peace talks. Three months later Álvaro Uribe Vélez, an independent, became president but within days declared a state of emergency after 20 died in bomb blasts in Bogotá. Relations with several rebel groups subsequently thawed, with talks with the rightist United Self-Defence Forces of Colombia (AUC) beginning in 2004 and with the ELN in 2005.

Parties loyal to Uribe secured victory in elections in 2006 and the president won a new term. In July 2007 hundreds of thousands of Colombians staged protests demanding the release of 3,000 people held hostage. The government made inroads into FARC territory in 2008 and secured the release of several high-profile hostages, including former presidential candidate Ingrid Betancourt. In July 2009 relations with Venezuela deteriorated over Colombia's plans to allow US military access to its bases and claims by Colombia that Caracas supplied arms to FARC. In June 2010 Juan Manuel Santos, a former defence minister, became president. In Dec. 2010 a state of emergency was declared following floods and landslides that killed almost 300 and affected over 2m. people.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Colombia is bounded in the north by the Caribbean Sea, northwest by Panama, west by the Pacific Ocean, southwest by Ecuador and Peru, northeast by Venezuela and southeast by Brazil. The estimated area is 1,141,748 sq. km (440,829 sq. miles). Population census (2005), 42,888,592; density, 37.6 per sq. km. More than 3.6m. Colombians protected and assisted by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees are displaced within the country as a consequence of continuing conflict involving left-wing guerrillas since the 1960s and right-wing paramilitaries and drug gangs since the 1980s.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 49.37m.

In 2005, 72.7% lived in urban areas. Bogotá, the capital (census 2005): 6,824,510.

The following table gives census populations for departments and their capitals for 2005:

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 918,000; deaths, 248,000. Rates, 2008 estimates (per 1,000 population): births, 20.4; deaths, 5.5. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 1.5%. Life expectancy at birth, 2007, was 69.1 years for men and 76.5 years for women. Infant mortality, 2005, 17 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 2.4 children per woman. Abortion is illegal.

CLIMATE

The climate includes equatorial and tropical conditions, according to situation and altitude. In tropical areas, the wettest months are March to May and Oct. to Nov. Bogotá, Jan. 58°F (14.4°C), July 57°F (13.9°C). Annual rainfall 42" (1,052 mm). Barranquilla, Jan. 80°F (26.7°C), July 82°F (27.8°C). Annual rainfall 32" (799 mm). Cali, Jan. 75°F (23.9°C), July 75°F (23.9°C). Annual rainfall 37" (915 mm). Medellín, Jan. 71°F (21.7°C), July 72°F (22.2°C). Annual rainfall 64" (1,606 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Simultaneously with the presidential elections of May 1990, a referendum was held in which 7m. votes were cast for the establishment of a special assembly to draft a new constitution. Elections were held on 9 Dec. 1990 for this 74-member 'Constitutional Assembly' which operated from Feb. to July 1991. The electorate was 14.2m.; turnout was 3.7m. The Liberals gained 24 seats, M-19 (a former guerrilla organization), 19. The Assembly produced a new constitution which came into force on 5 July 1991. It stresses the state's obligation to protect human rights, and establishes constitutional rights to health care, social security and leisure. Indians are allotted two Senate seats. Congress may dismiss ministers, and representatives may be recalled by their electors.

The President is elected by direct vote. In Oct. 2005 the constitution was amended to allow a president to be re-elected for a second term. A vice-presidency was instituted in July 1991.

The legislative power rests with a Congress of two houses, the Senate, of 102 members (including two elected from a special list set aside for American Indian communities), and the House of Representatives, of 166 members, both elected for four years by proportional representation. Congress meets annually at Bogotá on 20 July.

CURRENT LEADERS

Juan Manuel Santos Calderón

Position

President

Introduction

Juan Manuel Santos became president in Aug. 2010. He succeeded Álvaro Uribe, under whom he had served as defence minister. He is the head of the Partido de la U.

Early Life

Santos was born in Aug. 1951 in Bogotá into a prestigious family. His great uncle, Eduardo Santos, was president from 1938–42. His father, Enrique Castillo, was editor of a national newspaper, El Tiempo, for 50 years. Santos attended the private Colegio San Carlos and the Cartagena Naval School before graduating in economics and business administration from Kansas University in the USA in 1972.

He then returned to Colombia and worked for the Colombian Coffee Delegation, which he represented in London. During this time he completed further studies at the London School of Economics, Harvard University and the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy. In 1981 he joined El Tiempo.

He served as minister of foreign trade in César Gaviria's Liberal Party (PLC) government from 1990–94, resigning from El Tiempo in 1992 to dedicate himself to politics. Although not invited to join the 1994 administration of Ernesto Samper, he was involved in peace talks with FARC and was elected to the PLC's directorial committee in 1995. In 1999 Santos returned to El Tiempo and became head of the UN Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC).

After the 2002 presidential election, Santos became a dissident within the Liberal ranks when he came out in support of the non-partisan President Uribe. He expressed particular support for Uribe's tough 'democratic security' policy in the face of calls for further talks with FARC. In 2005 Santos left the PLC and founded the Social National Unity Party (the Partido de la U), a pro-Uribe party of which Uribe himself was not a member.

Uribe named Santos his defence minister in 2006. He took a tough line against FARC while strengthening US–Colombian military ties. In 2008 he oversaw the rescue of several hostages held by FARC, including former presidential candidate Ingrid Betancourt. In the same year the defence forces came under scrutiny for the killing of FARC's second-in-command, Raúl Reyes, in an unauthorized military operation within Ecuador's northern border. There was also a scandal after evidence surfaced that the armed forces had carried out extrajudicial executions to boost the number of guerrillas killed.

In 2010 Santos stood for president on a platform of maintaining the legacy of Uribe and fighting 'narco-terrorist' violence. He also promised ambitious land reforms and fairer wealth distribution. In all he outlined 109 policy proposals, framed around the ideas of 'democratic security' and 'democratic prosperity'. He won the election by the largest margin in Colombian history.

Career in Office

Santos pledged the creation of 2.4m. extra jobs to bring unemployment below 9% and the construction of a million new homes over four years. He also promised a cut in income and corporate taxes, and reforms to the revenue system, land possession and health imbalances. His government is expected to invest 10% of its revenues from natural resources into science and technology. He has created a ministry of justice, raised the minimum wage and re-established diplomatic relations with Venezuela.

In May 2011 Congress approved a law, described as historic by Santos, to compensate the many victims who have suffered in the country's internal armed conflicts. In Aug.–Sept., following a resurgence of FARC guerrilla activity, Santos replaced his defence minister and appointed new military commanders. In Nov. 2011 Alfonso Cano, the FARC leader, was killed in a gun battle with government forces.

DEFENCE

There is selective conscription for 12 to 24 months. In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$9,546m. (US$221 per capita), representing 3.9% of GDP. Colombia is the second largest military spender in South America, after Brazil.

Army

Personnel (2007) 217,000 (conscripts, 173,000); reserves number 54,700. The national police numbered (2007) 136,100.

Navy

The Navy has two diesel powered submarines, two midget submarines and four small frigates. Naval personnel in 2007 totalled 27,600. There are also two brigades of marines numbering 14,000. An air arm operates light reconnaissance aircraft.

The Navy's main ocean base is Cartagena with Pacific bases at Buenaventura and Málaga. There are in addition numerous river bases.

Air Force

The Air Force has been independent of the Army and Navy since 1943, when its reorganization began with US assistance. It has 115 combat capable aircraft and 31 attack helicopters. There are six combat air commands plus a command responsible for air operations in a specific geographical area. Total strength (2006), 8,600 personnel, including 1,900 conscripts.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

It was announced in Aug. 2000 that Colombia would receive US$1.3bn. in anti drug-trafficking aid (mostly of a military nature) from the USA as part of 'Plan Colombia', a five-year long series of projects intended to serve as a foundation for stability and peace of which the focal point is the fight against drugs. By May 2005 the USA had given aid amounting to US$4.5bn.

In March 2008 Colombian forces killed a high-level member of the rebel FARC movement during an unsanctioned raid over the Ecuadorian border. A week-long diplomatic incident ensued, in which both Ecuador and Venezuela massed military personnel on their respective borders with Colombia.

ECONOMY

In 2006 agriculture accounted for 12.0% of GDP, industry 35.7% and services 52.3%.

Overview

Colombia's economy has been blighted by guerrilla insurgencies, drug cartels, human rights violations and an unsustainable fiscal deficit. The country is the largest producer of cocaine in the world and it is estimated that trade in illegal drugs accounts for 3% of GDP, though production is declining.

Since the 1970s violence and crime have significantly diminished the economy. In 2008 the World Bank estimated that conflict had reduced growth by 2% per year since 1980, reducing GDP per capita by two-thirds. Poverty fell from 53.7% to 45.5% between 2002 and 2009, though income inequality remains at one of the highest levels in the region.

Colombia has a diversified economic base. It is one of the largest exporters of coffee in the world, has substantial oil reserves and is a major producer of gold, silver, emeralds, platinum and coal. FDI has surged in the last few years, especially within the oil sector, and reached US$10bn. in 2008. Colombia and the USA agreed a Free Trade Agreement in June 2007, which was approved by the Colombian Congress later that year. However, it was not ratified by the US Congress until Oct. 2011, with further delays expected before its implementation.

GDP grew at an average of 5.0% between 2002 and 2007, partly as a result of increased internal security. Economic policy reacted to overheating in 2008, prompting a slowdown in growth. The global financial crisis led to a reduction in private investment in 2009 but the economy has largely weathered the effects.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Colombian peso (COP) of 100 centavos. Inflation rates (based on IMF statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
8.0%	6.3%	7.1%	5.9%	5.0%	4.3%	5.5%	7.0%	4.2%	2.3%

In Sept. 2009 gold reserves were 221,000 troy oz and foreign exchange reserves US$22,926m. Total money supply was 41,403bn. pesos in Aug. 2009.

Budget

In 2007 revenues totalled 103,986bn. pesos and expenditures 110,014bn. pesos. Tax revenue accounted for 56.4% of revenues in 2007; grants accounted for 37.9% of expenditures and interest 25.1%.

The standard rate of VAT is 16%.

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on IMF statistics):

2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
3.9%	5.3%	4.7%	6.7%	6.9%	3.5%	1.5%	4.3%

Total GDP in 2010 was US$288.2bn.

Banking and Finance

In 1923 the Bank of the Republic (Governor, José Darío Uribe Escobar) was inaugurated as a semi-official central bank, with the exclusive privilege of issuing banknotes. Its note issues must be covered by a reserve in gold of foreign exchange of 25% of their value. Interest rates of 40% plus are imposed.

There are 24 commercial banks, of which 18 are private or mixed, and six official. There is also an Agricultural, Industrial and Mining Credit Institute, a Central Mortgage Bank and a Social Savings Bank. Demand deposits totalled 11,256bn. pesos in Dec. 2002. The Superintendencia Bancaria acts as a supervising body.

There are stock exchanges in Bogotá, Medellín and Cali.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

In 2008 Colombia's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 1.5 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked Colombia ninth in the world, with 88.3%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources.

Electricity

Installed capacity of electric power (2007) was 13.3m. kW. In 2007 production was 55.31bn. kWh and consumption per capita 1,146 kWh. Colombia exported 877m. kWh of electricity in 2007.

Oil and Gas

Oil production (2008) 30.5m. tonnes. Natural gas production in 2008 totalled 9.1bn. cu. metres. In 2008 there were proven oil reserves of 1.4bn. bbls and proven natural gas reserves of 110bn. cu. metres.

Minerals

Production (2005): gold, 35,785 kg; silver, 7,142 kg; platinum, 1,082 kg. Other important minerals include: copper, lead, mercury, manganese, nickel and emeralds (of which Colombia accounts for about half of world production).

Coal production (2007): 69.90m. tonnes; iron ore (2005): 498,623 tonnes; salt production (2005): 473,996 tonnes.

Agriculture

There is a wide range of climate and, consequently, crops. In 2002 there were 2.29m. ha. of arable land and 1.56m. ha. of permanent crops.

In 2002, 19.3% of the economically active population were engaged in agriculture. Production, 2002 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 35,800; plantains, 2,921; potatoes, 2,841; rice, 2,347; cassava, 1,768; bananas, 1,424; maize, 1,189; coffee, 691. Coca was cultivated in 2005 on approximately 144,000 ha., up from 34,000 ha. in 1988. Estimated coca leaf production in 2005 totalled 170,730 tonnes, making Colombia the world's largest producer of coca leaves, the raw material for cocaine. Production of cocaine was estimated at 640 tonnes.

Livestock (2002): 24.76m. cattle; 2.65m. horses; 2.26m. sheep; 2.23m. pigs; 1.10m. goats; 723,000 asses; 115m. chickens.

Livestock products, 2002: beef and veal, 6.76m. tonnes; poultry meat, 629,000 tonnes; pork, bacon and ham, 110,000 tonnes; milk, 6,021,000 tonnes; eggs, 314,000 tonnes.

Forestry

In 2005 the area under forests was 60.73m. ha., or 58.5% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 was 10.44m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

The estimated total catch (2008) was 135,000 tonnes, of which 85% was from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Production, 2007 unless otherwise indicated (in 1,000 tonnes): cement (2005), 9,959; distillate fuel oil, 4,395; residual fuel oil, 3,318; petrol, 3,164; raw sugar, 2,277; crude steel and semi-finished products, 1,245; jet fuel, 537; sawnwood, 382,000 cu. metres; passenger cars, 68,000 units.

Labour

The economically active workforce in 2001 was 18.65m., of which 16.62m. were employed. The main areas of activity in 2001 were: wholesale and retail trade, restaurants and hotels (employing 4.19m. persons); community, social and personal services (3.74m.); and agriculture, hunting, forestry and fishing (3.49m.). The unemployment rate in 2002 was 15.7%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign companies are liable for basic income tax of 30% and surtax of 7.5%. Since 1993 tax on profit remittance has started at 12%, reducing (except for oil companies) to 7% after three years. Foreign debt was US$37,656m. in 2005.

The Group of Three (G-3) free trade pact with Mexico and Venezuela came into effect on 1 Jan. 1995. In Nov. 2006 Colombia and the USA signed a free trade agreement that eliminates tariffs on each other's goods, but it has yet to be ratified and faces opposition in the USA from the Democrats.

Imports and Exports

In US$1m.:

	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007
Imports c.i.f.	13,881	17,100	21,204	26,162	32,897
Exports f.o.b.	13,092	16,730	21,190	24,391	29,991

Major import suppliers, 2006: USA (26.6%), Mexico (8.8%), China (8.5%), Brazil (7.2%). Major export markets, 2006: USA (40.8%), Venezuela (11.1%), Ecuador (5.1%), Spain (3.0%).

Main imports in 2006 were (in US$1m.): machinery and transport equipment (10,508.9), chemicals and related products (5,230.2), food and live animals (1,890.2), iron and steel (1,257.5), textile yarn and fabrics (863.5). Main exports in 2006 were (in US$1m.): petroleum and petroleum products (6,309.8), coal (2,807.2), chemicals and related products (2,024.4), coffee and coffee substitutes (1,633.7), machinery and transport equipment (1,519.8).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Total length of roads was 164,278 km in 2006 (including 14,143 km of main roads). In 2005 there were 2,686,000 vehicles in use, including 1,607,000 passenger cars. There were 5,486 road accident fatalities in 2006.

Rail

The National Railways (2,532 km of route, 914 mm gauge) went into liquidation in 1990. There are currently two concessions operating—Ferrocarril del Oeste and Red Férrea del Atlántico.

Ferrocarril del Oeste carried 360,000 tonnes of freight in 2007 and Red Férrea del Atlántico 22m. tonnes in 2006. Passenger services are very limited. Total length in 2007 was 1,663 km. A metro system operates in Medellín.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Barranquilla, Bogotá (Eldorado), Cali, Cartagena, Medellín and San Andrés. The main Colombian airline is Avianca. In 2005 scheduled traffic of Colombian-based carriers flew 132.5m. km and carried 9,933,100 passengers. The busiest airport is Bogotá, which in 2000 handled 7,154,312 passengers (5,234,807 on domestic flights) and 372,957 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 31 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 46,000 GT. The chief port is Cartagena, which handled 25.6m. tonnes of foreign cargo in 2008. The Magdalena River is subject to drought, and navigation is always impeded during the dry season, but it is an important artery of passenger and goods traffic. The river is navigable for 1,400 km; steamers ascend to La Dorada, 953 km from Barranquilla.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 8,054,000 main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year mobile phone subscribers numbered 41,365,000 (919.0 per 1,000 persons). There were 2,488,000 PCs in use in 2006 and 17,330,000 internet users in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The July 1991 constitution introduced the offices of public prosecutor and public defence. The Supreme Court, at Bogotá, of 20 members, is divided into three chambers—civil cassation (six), criminal cassation (eight), labour cassation (six). Each of the 61 judicial districts has a superior court with various sub-dependent tribunals of lower juridical grade. In Dec. 1997 the constitution was amended to allow the extradition of Colombian nationals.

In 2008 there were 16,140 murders, continuing a downward trend since the high of 28,837 in 2002. Colombia's murder rate, at 36 per 100,000 persons, although declining is still among the highest in the world. In 2008 the reported number of kidnappings totalled 437, down from 3,572 in 2000.

Colombia abolished the death penalty in 1997. The population in penal institutions in Sept. 2008 was 69,689 (149 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Education between the ages of five and 15 became compulsory in 1991. Schools are both state and privately controlled. In 2007 there were 49,538 teaching staff for 1,081,343 children in pre-primary schools; 187,821 teaching staff for 5,298,567 pupils in primary schools; and 4,657,360 pupils with 164,484 teaching staff in secondary schools. In 2008 there were 44,757 pre-primary schools, 57,711 primary schools and 18,412 secondary schools.

There were 32 public universities in 2007. The National University of Colombia (Universidad Nacional de Colombia), founded in 1867, is the leading institution in the tertiary sector. Colombia also has many private universities and colleges of art and music. In 2007 there were 1,372,674 students in total in higher education and 88,337 academic staff.

Adult literacy in 2008 was 93%.

In 2007 public expenditure on education came to 5.1% of GNI and represented 12.6% of total government expenditure.

Health

In 2003 there were 1,165 hospitals with 49,000 beds. Medical personnel (2002) was as follows: doctors, 58,761; dentists, 33,951; nurses and midwives, 103,158.

Welfare

The retirement age is 60 (men), or 55 (women) although it is set to be raised to 62 for men and 60 for women after 2014; to be eligible for a state pension 1,000 weeks of contributions are required. The minimum social insurance pension is equal to the minimum wage. If a private pension is less than the minimum pension set by law, the government makes up the difference.

Unemployment benefit is a month's wage for every year of employment.

RELIGION

The religion is Roman Catholic (41.02m. adherents in 2007), with the Cardinal Archbishop of Bogotá as Primate of Colombia and 20 other archbishoprics. There are also 94 bishops, 3,994 parishes and 8,312 priests. In Feb. 2012 there were two cardinals. Other forms of religion are permitted so long as their exercise is 'not contrary to Christian morals or the law'. In addition to Roman Catholics there are also some agnostics, atheists, Bahais, Ethnoreligionists and Spiritists.

World Heritage Sites

Colombia's heritage sites as classified by UNESCO (with year entered on list) are: the Port, Fortresses and Group of Monuments, Cartagena (1984)—on the Caribbean coast, Cartagena was one of the first cities to be founded in South America and has the most extensive fortifications in the continent; Los Katíos National Park (1994) covers 72,000 ha. in northwest Colombia; founded 200 km inland on the River Magdalena in the 1530s, the Historic Centre of Santa Cruz de Mompox (1995), or Mompós, was a focal point for colonization and a vital trade post between the Caribbean coast and the interior—its colonial aspect has been preserved; the National Archaeological Park of Tierradentro (1995) in the southwest contains statues and elaborately decorated underground tombs dating from the 6th–10th centuries; the San Agustín Archaeological Park (1995) protects religious monuments and sculptures from the 1st–8th centuries; the Malpelo Fauna and Flora sanctuary (2006) provides a critical habitat for internationally threatened marine species; and the Coffee Cultural Landscape of Colombia (2011) reflects a tradition of coffee growing in small plots in the high forests.

Press

There were 44 daily newspapers in 2008 (42 paid-for and two free), with daily circulation totalling 1.78m.

Tourism

In 2007 there were 1,195,000 non-resident visitors (including 944,000 from elsewhere in the Americas and 220,000 from Europe), bringing revenue of US$2,262m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The three islands forming the present state became French protectorates at the end of the 19th century and were proclaimed colonies in 1912. With neighbouring Mayotte they were administratively attached to Madagascar from 1914 until 1947 when the four islands became a French Overseas Territory, achieving internal self-government in Dec. 1961. In referendums held on each island on 22 Dec. 1974, the three western islands voted overwhelmingly for independence, while Mayotte voted to remain French.

There have been dozens of coups or attempted takeovers since independence. In April 1999 an agreement was brokered on a federal structure for the three main islands—Grand Comore, Anjouan and Mohéli—to be known as the Union of the Comoros. However, the delegates from Anjouan did not sign the agreement. Violence broke out in the capital, Moroni, against Anjouans living there. A military coup followed on 30 April 1999, led by Col. Azaly Assoumani. He subsequently dissolved the government and the constitution, declaring a transitional government.

A new constitution in 2001 kept the union in place but with greater autonomy for each constituent island. Col. Azaly Assoumani was elected president of the federation in April 2002, holding office until May 2006 when he was replaced by Ahmed Abdallah Mohamed Sambi. In May 2007 Mohamed Bascar, president of Anjouan, refused to stand down and held local elections in defiance of the federal government, prompting an African Union-led blockade. In March 2009 African Union and Comoran forces seized control of the island.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Comoros consists of three islands in the Indian Ocean between the African mainland and Madagascar with a total area of 1,862 sq. km (719 sq. miles). The population at the 2003 census was 575,660 (285,590 males), giving a density of 309 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 832,000.

In 2005, 63.0% of the population were rural.

The areas, populations and chief towns of the islands are:

	Area (sq. km)	Population (2003 census)	Chief town
Njazidja (Grande Comore)	1,148	296,177	Moroni
Nzwani (Anjouan)	424	243,732	Mutsamudu
Mwali (Mohéli)	290	35,751	Fomboni

Estimated population of the chief towns (2002): Moroni, 40,275; Mutsamudu, 21,558; Domoni, 13,254; Fomboni, 13,053.

The indigenous population are a mixture of Malagasy, African, Malay and Arab peoples; the vast majority speak Comorian, an Arabized dialect of Swahili and one of the three official languages, but a small proportion speak one of the other official languages, French and Arabic, or Makua (a Bantu language).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 births (estimates), 21,000; deaths, 4,000. Estimated birth rate in 2008 was 32.4 per 1,000 population; estimated death rate, 6.7. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.2%. Infant mortality, 53 per 1,000 live births (2005). Expectation of life in 2007 was 62.8 years among men and 67.2 among females. Fertility rate, 2008, 4.0 children per woman.

CLIMATE

There is a tropical climate, affected by Indian monsoon winds from the north, which gives a wet season from Nov. to April. Moroni, Jan. 81°F (27.2°C), July 75°F (23.9°C). Annual rainfall, 113" (2,825 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

At a referendum on 23 Dec. 2001, 77% of voters approved a new constitution that keeps the three islands as one country while granting each one greater autonomy.

The President of the Union is Head of State. The presidency rotates every four years among the three main islands.

There used to be a Federal Assembly comprised of 42 democratically elected officials and a 15-member Senate chosen by an electoral college, but these were dissolved after the 1999 coup. A new 33-member Federal Parliament was established following the elections of April 2004. In 2004 there were 15 deputies selected by the individual islands' parliaments and 18 by universal suffrage but this was changed to nine selected by the individual islands' parliaments and 24 by universal suffrage for the 2009 elections.

National Anthem

'Udzima wa ya Masiwa' ('The union of the islands'); words by S. H. Abderamane, tune by K. Abdallah and S. H. Abderamane.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the first round of presidential elections held on 7 Nov. 2010 on Mohéli, Ikililou Dhoinine (at the time one of the two Vice Presidents) won 28.2% of the vote, Mohamed Said Fazul 22.9%, Abdou Djabir 9.9% and Bianrifi Tarmidhi 9.3%. There were six other candidates. Turnout was 67.1%. A second round was held on 26 Dec. 2010. Ikililou Dhoinine won 61.1% of the vote, Mohamed Said Fazul 32.7% and Abdou Djabir 6.2%. Turnout in the second round was 52.8%.

Parliamentary elections were held on 6 and 20 Dec. 2009. The pro-presidential party and its allies won 20 of 33 seats while the opposition won four. The remaining nine were allocated to regional assembly representatives.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

President of the Union: Ikililou Dhoinine; b. 1962 (sworn in 26 May 2011).

CURRENT LEADERS

Ikililou Dhoinine

Position
President

Introduction

Ikililou Dhoinine was sworn in as the president on 26 May 2011, assuming power five months after securing electoral victory. Dhoinine had previously served for five years as vice president to the departing head of state, Ahmed Abdallah Mohamed Sambi. The 2001 constitution demands that the presidency rotates every four years between representatives of the three islands of which the archipelago is composed. Dhoinine is the first president to hail from the federation's smallest island, Mohéli, and his appointment was only the second peaceful handover of power.

Early Life

Ikililou Dhoinine was born in Djoïèzi, a village on Mohéli, on 14 Aug. 1962. Before entering government he qualified as a pharmacist. As vice president, he took responsibility for the budget and women's entrepreneurship. He also served for five days in March 2008 as provisional president of Anjouan (one of the Comorian islands) after a diplomatic crisis there resulted in an armed intervention by the federal government.

Following the second round of presidential elections on 26 Dec. 2010 the electoral commission announced that Dhoinine had won 61.1% of the popular vote. His closest rival, Mohamed Said Fazul, alleged electoral fraud but the election monitoring group concluded that any breaches of protocol had not been sufficient to alter the result. The opposition later complained that the five month gap between polling date and the new leader's swearing-in amounted to an extended and unconstitutional extension of office for the outgoing president. Sambi's tenure had exceeded its mandate by several months even before the election.

Career in Office

Dhoinine's assumption of the presidency marked a single peaceful cycle of rotation among representatives from the three islands, suggesting a degree of political stability that had hitherto eluded the country. Dhoinine has pledged to consolidate national unity while tackling the endemic corruption that has blighted the federation's governance since it gained independence. He campaigned specifically on a policy of much-needed infrastructure investment.

DEFENCE

Army

The Army numbered an estimated 1,060 in 2008.

Navy

There is no navy. The Army operates two small patrol boats that were supplied by Japan in 1982.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 45.2% of GDP in 2006 and industry 11.8%.

Overview

Economic development has been hampered by recurrent political crises. Agriculture, fishing, hunting and forestry contribute 40% to GDP and employ 80% of the labour force. Remittances help supplement GDP. Dependent on food imports (the largest is rice, the main staple), the Comoros is vulnerable to external shocks, with the global food price crisis having had a particularly strong impact. The primary sector is geared towards the production of three high-value export crops: vanilla, cloves and ylang-ylang, which provide up to 95% of export earnings.

The Comoros has had a large external debt for over two decades. In April 2010 a preliminary assessment by the World Bank and the IMF qualified the Comoros for assistance under the Enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Comorian franc (KMF) of 100 centimes. It is pegged to the euro at 491.96775 Comorian francs to the euro. Foreign exchange reserves were US$92m. In July 2005, total money supply was 24,096m. Comorian francs and gold reserves were 1,000 troy oz. There was inflation of 4.8% in both 2008 and 2009.

Budget

Revenues in 2007 were 33.9bn. Comorian francs and expenditures 37.3bn. Comorian francs.

VAT is 10%.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 1.8% in 2009 and 2.1% in 2010. In 2010 total GDP was US$0.5bn.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank of the Comoros (Governor, Mze Abdou Mohamed Chanfiou) is the bank of issue. Chief commercial banks include the Banque Internationale des Comores, the Banque de Développement des Comores and the Banque pour l'Industrie et le Commerce-Comores.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 0.2 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

In 2007 estimated installed capacity was 6,000 kW. Production was approximately 50m. kWh in 2007; consumption per capita was an estimated 70 kWh in 2007.

Agriculture

80% of the economically active population depends upon agriculture, which (including fishing, hunting and forestry) contributed 41% to GDP in 2002. There were about 80,000 ha. of arable land in 2002 and 52,000 ha. of permanent crops. The chief product was formerly sugarcane, but now vanilla, copra, maize and other food crops, cloves and essential oils (citronella, ylang-ylang, lemongrass) are the most important products. Production (2002 in 1,000 tonnes): coconuts, 77; bananas, 61; cassava, 55; rice, 17; taro, 9; copra, 8; sweet potatoes, 5.

Livestock (2003): goats, 115,000; cattle, 52,000; sheep, 21,000; asses, 5,000.

Forestry

In 2005 the area under forest was 5,000 ha., or 2.9% of the total land area. The forested area has been severely reduced because of the shortage of cultivable land and ylang-ylang production. In 2007, 9,000 cu. metres of timber were cut.

Fisheries

Fishing is on an individual basis, without modern equipment. The catch totalled 15,070 tonnes in 2005.

INDUSTRY

Branches include perfume distillation, textiles, furniture, jewellery, soft drinks and the processing of vanilla and copra.

Labour

The estimated economically active population in 2010 was 342,000 (53% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Total foreign debt was US$291m. in 2007.

Imports and Exports

In 2006 imports amounted to US$101.4m. (up from US$65.0m. in 2004) and exports to US$2.6m. (down from US$7.9m. in 2004).

Main import suppliers, 2006: United Arab Emirates, 30.7%; France, 21.3%; South Africa, 9.5%. Main export markets, 2006: France, 53.8%; India, 15.4%; Germany, 11.5%. The principal imports are machinery and transport equipment (35.0% of total imports in 2006), food and live animals (25.1% in 2006), cement (6.6% in 2006), petroleum and petroleum products, chemicals and related products, and iron and steel. Main exports are vanilla (53.8% in 2006) and cloves (30.8% in 2006).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2002 there were 880 km of roads, of which 76.5% were paved.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Moroni (International Prince Said Ibrahim). In 2001 it handled 108,000 passengers (78,000 on international flights).

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 184 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 625,000 GT.

Telecommunications

There were 33,000 telephone subscribers in 2005 (41.4 per 1,000 persons), including 16,100 mobile subscribers. Internet users numbered 20,000 in 2005.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

French and Muslim law is in a new consolidated code. The Supreme Court comprises seven members, two each appointed by the President and the Federal Assembly, and one by each island's Legislative Council. The death penalty is authorized for murder. The last execution was in 1996.

Education

After two pre-primary years at Koran school, which 50% of children attend, there are six years of primary schooling for seven- to 13-year-olds followed by a four-year secondary stage attended by 25% of children. Some 5% of 17- to 20-year-olds conclude schooling at lycées. There were 106,700 pupils with 3,050 teaching staff in primary schools in 2005 and 43,349 pupils at secondary schools with 3,138 teaching staff. At the tertiary level there were approximately 3,000 students in 2009.

The adult literacy rate in 2009 was an estimated 74.2% (79.7% among males and 68.7% among females).

In 2008 public expenditure on education came to 7.6% of GDP.

Health

In 2004 there were 115 physicians, 29 dentistry personnel and 588 nursing and midwifery personnel. In 2006 there were 17 hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants.

RELIGION

Islam is the official religion: 98% of the population are Muslims; there is a small Christian minority. Following the coup of April 1999 the federal government discouraged the practice of religions other than Islam, with Christians especially facing restrictions on worship.

CULTURE

Press

There was one daily newspaper in 2005. There were also five non-dailies.

Tourism

In 2006 there were 29,000 non-resident tourists, bringing revenue of US$27m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bantu tribes migrated to the Congo basin from the northwest in the first millennium AD, forming several kingdoms and many smaller forest communities. Congo emerged as a kingdom on the Atlantic coast in the 14th century. King Nzinga Mbemba entered into diplomatic relations with Portugal after 1492. The Luba kingdom was centred on the marshy Upemba depression in the southeast. Expansion began in the late 18th century under Ilungu Sungu. In central Congo the Kuba kingdom was established in the 17th century as a federation of Bantu groups. Agriculture became the mainstay of the Kuba economy, strengthened by the introduction of American crops by Europeans. Trade made the Kuba elite, especially the Bushoong group, wealthy and encouraged the development of art and decorated cloth. Kuba thrived until the incursions of the Nsapo in the late 19th century.

King Leopold II of the Belgians claimed the Congo Basin as a personal possession in 1885. Exploitation of the native population provoked international condemnation. The Belgian government responded by annexing the Congo in 1908. Political representation was denied the Congolese until 1957 when the colonial administration introduced the statut des villes in response to the revolutionary demands of the Alliance des BaKongo (Abako). Violence increased, instigated by the Mouvement National Congolais (MNC), led by Patrice Lumumba. Local elections were held in Dec. 1959 and in Jan. 1960 the Belgian government announced a rapid independence programme. After general elections in May, the Republic of the Congo became independent on 1 June 1960, with Lumumba as prime minister and Joseph Kasavubu, the Abako leader, as president.

Independence and Anarchy

The country descended into anarchy, with the mineral-rich Katanga region declaring independence. Lumumba was ousted and in 1961 assassinated. Only in 2002 did Belgium admit to participating in his murder. Lieut.-Gen. Joseph-Désiré Mobutu (later Sese Seko) seized power in 1965. At first he was seen as a strongman who could hold together a huge, unstable country comprising hundreds of tribes and language groups. He changed the country's name to Zaïre in 1971. In the 1970s he was feted by the USA, which used Zaïre as a springboard for operations into neighbouring Angola where western-backed Unita rebels were locked in civil war with a Cuban and Soviet-backed government. Because Mobutu was useful in the fight against Communism the brutality and repressiveness of his regime was ignored.

After armed insurrection by Tutsi rebels in the province of Kivu, the government alleged pro-Tutsi intervention by the armies of Burundi and Rwanda and on 25 Oct. 1996 declared a state of emergency. By Dec. the secessionist forces of Laurent-Désiré Kabila, the Alliance des Forces Démocratiques pour la Libération du Congo-Zaïre (AFDL), had begun to drive the regular Zaïrean army out of Kivu and an attempt was made to establish a rebel administration, called 'Democratic Congo'. In the face of continuing rebel military successes and the disaffection of the army, the Government accepted a UN resolution demanding the immediate cessation of hostilities. The Security Council asked the rebels to make a public declaration of their acceptance. However, they continued in their advance westwards, capturing Kisangani on 15 March 1997, then Kasai and Shaba, giving Kabila control of eastern Zaïre, and crucially the country's mineral wealth. After a futile attempt to deploy Serbian mercenaries, Mobutu succumbed to pressure from the USA and South Africa to meet Kabila, an occasion that had all the trappings of a symbolic surrender. Mobutu fled on the night of 15–16 May 1997. One of the most destructive tyrants of the African independence era, he died of cancer four months later.

On coming to power Kabila changed the name of the country to the Democratic Republic of the Congo. Hopes for democratic and economic renewal were soon disappointed. The Kabila regime relied too closely on its military backup, mainly Rwandans and eastern Congolese from the Tutsi minority who seemed more interested in eliminating tribal enemies in eastern border areas than in establishing democracy. As a result, Rwanda and Uganda switched support to rebel forces. When Zimbabwe and Angola sent in troops to help President Kabila, full-scale civil war threatened. A ceasefire was negotiated at a Franco-African summit in Nov. 1998 but the military build-up continued into the new year and violence intensified.

A ceasefire was signed by leaders from more than a dozen African countries in July 1999. Rival factions of the Rassemblement Congolais pour la Démocratie (RCD), the main rebel group opposed to the president, also signed the accord, but not until Sept.

Violence and Collapse

On 16 Jan. 2001 President Kabila was assassinated, allegedly by one of his own bodyguards. He was succeeded by his son, Joseph. Prospects for peace improved dramatically in Feb. 2001 when the UN Security Council approved the deployment of 3,000 UN-supported peacekeepers. In early 2002 talks between the government and rebels on how to end the conflict ended without agreement. However, in July 2002 the presidents of the Democratic Republic of the Congo and neighbouring Rwanda signed a peace deal that was expected to be the first stage towards ending a war that has claimed more than 3m. lives. In Oct. 2002 Rwanda completed the withdrawal of its forces. The Democratic Republic of the Congo and Uganda also signed a peace agreement.

The conflict, described as Africa's first continental war, had drawn in Zimbabwe, Angola and Namibia (and, for a time, Sudan and Chad) on the side of the government, which controls the west of the country, while Rwanda and Uganda backed other rival factions. The RCD, which controls areas in the east, was backed by Rwanda, while Uganda supported the Mouvement de Libération du Congo (MLC), based in the north and northeast of the country. Burundi also had troops in the country, allied to the Rwandans, although they stayed close to the border with Burundi. In addition to the huge death toll, large numbers of people were displaced and sought asylum in Tanzania and Zambia. In Dec. 2002 the government and leading rebel forces reached an agreement on power-sharing. Its terms allowed for Joseph Kabila to remain as president until elections which, after several postponements, were held in July 2006. Kabila was elected president in a second round run-off in Oct. 2006 that signalled the end of the period of transitional government.

In April 2007 the Democratic Republic of the Congo resurrected the Economic Community of the Great Lakes alongside Rwanda and Burundi. Political instability within the country continued, particularly in eastern areas. In Jan. 2008 the government signed a peace deal with militia groups, including that of the renegade Gen. Laurent Nkunda. However, fighting between the army and Rwandan Hutu militias had resumed by April. In Oct. the government accused Rwanda of secretly backing Nkunda. Fighting intensified and Goma, the provincial capital of Nord-Kivu, was paralysed as rebel forces encroached and some 200,000 people were displaced. In Jan. 2009 Rwandan forces arrested Nkunda, signalling a new diplomatic direction.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Democratic Republic of the Congo, sometimes referred to as Congo (Kinshasa), is bounded in the north by the Central African Republic, northeast by South Sudan, east by Uganda, Rwanda, Burundi and Lake Tanganyika, south by Zambia, southwest by Angola and northwest by the Republic of the Congo. There is a 37-km stretch of coastline that gives access to the Atlantic Ocean, with the Angolan exclave of Cabinda to the immediate north, and Angola itself to the south. Area, 2,344,860 sq. km (905,360 sq. miles), including 77,810 sq. km (30,040 sq. miles) of inland waters. At the last census, in 1988, the population was 34.7m. Estimate, 2010, 65.97m.; density, 29 per sq. km. 67.9% of the population was rural in 2005.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 75.19m.

Around 100,000 refugees who escaped the fighting between Hutus and Tutsis in Rwanda and Burundi in 1994 are still in the Democratic Republic of the Congo (out of 1m. who came originally), and there are also 84,000 Angolan refugees in the country.

Area and populations (1998 estimate) of the provinces (plus Kinshasa City), with their chief towns (2004 population estimates):

Province	Area (sq. km)	Population (in 1,000)	Chief town	Population
Bandundu	295,658	5,201	Bandundu	117,197
Bas-Congo	53,920	2,835	Matadi	245,862
Equateur	403,292	4,820	Mbandaka	262,814
Kasai Occidental	154,742	3,337	Kananga	720,362
Kasai Oriental	170,302	3,830	Mbuji-Mayi	1,213,726
Katanga	496,877	4,125	Lubumbashi	1,283,380
Maniema	132,250	1,247	Kindu	135,534
Nord-Kivu	59,483	3,564	Goma	249,862
Orientale	503,239	5,566	Kisangani	682,599

Province	Area (sq. km)	Population (in 1,000)	Chief town	Population
Sud-Kivu	65,070	2,838	Bukavu	471,789

Other large cities (with estimated 2004 population): Kolwezi (456,446), Likasi (367,219), Tshikapa (366,503), Kikwit (294,210).

The population is Bantu, with minorities of Sudanese (in the north), Nilotes (northeast), Pygmies and Hamites (in the east). French is the official language, but of more than 200 languages spoken, four are recognized as national languages: Kiswahili, Tshiluba, Kikongo and Lingala. Lingala has become the lingua franca after French.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 2,883,000; deaths, 1,090,000. Rates (2008 estimates, per 1,000 population); birth, 44.9; death, 17.0. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.9%. Infant mortality in 2005 was 129 per 1,000 live births. Expectation of life in 2007 was 46.1 years for men and 49.2 for females. Fertility rate, 2008, 6.0 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is varied, the central region having an equatorial climate, with year-long high temperatures and rain at all seasons. Elsewhere, depending on position north or south of the Equator, there are well-marked wet and dry seasons. The mountains of the east and south have a temperate mountain climate, with the highest summits having considerable snowfall. Kinshasa, Jan. 79°F (26.1°C), July 73°F (22.8°C). Annual rainfall 45" (1,125 mm). Kananga, Jan. 76°F (24.4°C), July 74°F (23.3°C). Annual rainfall 62" (1,584 mm). Kisangani, Jan. 78°F (25.6°C), July 75°F (23.9°C). Annual rainfall 68" (1,704 mm). Lubumbashi, Jan. 72°F (22.2°C), July 61°F (16.1°C). Annual rainfall 50" (1,237 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was adopted by the transitional parliament on 16 May 2005. It limits the powers of the president, who may now serve a maximum of two five-year terms and lowers the minimum age for presidential candidates from 35 to 30. It allows a greater degree of federalism and recognises as citizens all ethnic groups at the time of independence in 1960. It also called for presidential elections by June 2006. In a referendum held on 18–19 Dec. 2005, 83% of voters approved the constitution in the country's first free vote in 40 years. The constitution was promulgated on 18 Feb. 2006.

The 240-member Constituent and Legislative Assembly was appointed in Aug. 2000 by former President Laurent Désiré Kabila. In Aug. 2003 a new bicameral parliament of 500 members and 120 senators met in Kinshasa. The representatives were chosen from the groups that comprised the newly-formed transitional government. In accordance with the constitution of the time, for the 2006 presidential election the President was elected by direct popular vote to serve a five-year term. In the National Assembly, 60 members were elected by majority vote in single-member constituencies and 440 members by open list proportional representation in multi-member constituencies to serve five-year terms. The 108 members of the Senate were elected by indirect vote, by provincial deputies, to serve five-year terms.

National Anthem

'Debout Congolais' ('Stand up, Congolese'); words and tune by J. Lutumba and S. Boka di Mpsi Londi.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections, only the second since the Democratic Republic of the Congo's became independent in 1960, were held on 28 Nov. 2011. In the presidential election incumbent Joseph Kabila received 49.0% of votes cast and Étienne Tshisekedi 32.3%. There were nine other candidates. Owing to a change in election laws, a potential run-off on 26 Feb. 2012 was shelved. Elections were held under difficult conditions, with incidents of violence. Tshisekedi rejected the result and declared himself president raising fears of civil unrest.

In the parliamentary elections held on the same day Kaliba's People's Party for Reconstruction and Democracy (PPRD) won 62 of 500 seats and Tshisekedi's Union for Democracy and Social Progress (UDPS) 41. A total of 98 parties won seats, of which 46 only took one seat.

CURRENT LEADERS

Joseph Kabila

Position

President

Introduction

Joseph Kabila is the son of the former president Laurent Kabila who was assassinated on 16 Jan. 2001. Despite being little known outside his own group, Joseph Kabila was appointed president. He inherited a country divided by civil war which had spanned his father's tenure. Although promising unification in Congo, many need to be persuaded that Kabila has the necessary authority to restore peace to a country split along tribal lines and, despite its rich natural resources, suffering from poverty and economic instability. He was elected president following two rounds of voting held in July and Oct. 2006 and re-elected in Nov. 2011.

Early Life

Joseph Kabila was born on 4 Dec. 1971 at Laurent Kabila's anti-Mobutu guerrilla movement's headquarters (Hewa Bora) in the Fizi territory of Sud-Kivu. He was educated at a French-language school in Tanzania and then studied at the Makerere University in Uganda. He also did military training in China.

Career in Office

Following his father's death, Kabila replaced him as president. In his inaugural speech in 2001, he promised a ceasefire with rebel forces, an end to corruption and an improvement in living standards. He pledged to lead the country into multi-party democracy, and in May 2001 he lifted restrictions on political parties. Subsequently, over 200 parties were registered.

Peace negotiations brokered by South Africa in 2002 between the Kabila government and rebel factions led to agreement in Dec. on a power-sharing accord. Kabila was to remain as president pending future democratic elections, while his supporters, the civilian political opposition and two main rebel groups would each appoint a vice-president and seven ministers to serve under him on an interim basis. On 30 June 2003 Kabila announced the composition of the new transitional government. Although this was a major breakthrough, members of the new government feared for their safety in Kinshasa amid the mistrust between the various factions. The new government was inaugurated in Kinshasa in July 2003, but subsequent political progress was very slow and lawlessness and human rights abuses continued, particularly in the east and northeast of the country. Following a referendum on a new constitution in Dec. 2005, elections were scheduled for mid-2006. In the first round of the presidential poll in July, Kabila won 45% of the vote while his main rival, vice-president and former rebel Jean-Pierre Bemba, took 20%. In the Oct. 2006 run-off, Kabila claimed victory with 58%. The result was ratified by the Supreme Court the following month. Although Bemba denounced the outcome as rigged and his supporters reacted violently, he ultimately conceded defeat and in Dec. 2006 Kabila was sworn in as the country's first freely-elected president in more than 40 years.

Nevertheless, violence has persisted between government troops and rebel groups, resulting in the displacement and abuse of many thousands of civilians. The east of the country has suffered particularly, with lawlessness dominating despite the presence of the world's largest UN peacekeeping mission. Notably, instances of mass rape allegedly perpetrated by army troops and rebels have been reported in Nord-Kivu province.

In Jan. 2011 constitutional changes, strongly criticized by opposition figures, provided for presidential elections to take place in one round rather than two and for a candidate to win with a simple majority. In the elections that followed in Nov., Kabila retained the presidency with 49% of the vote.

DEFENCE

Following the overthrow of the Mobutu regime in May 1997, the former Zaïrean armed forces were in disarray. In June 2003 command of ground forces and naval forces were handed over to the RCD-Goma and MLC factions respectively as part of the power-sharing transitional government. Supreme command of the armed forces will remain in the hands of the former government faction.

A UN mission, MONUSCO, has been in the Democratic Republic of the Congo since 1999 (under the name of MONUC until June 2010). With 19,070 uniformed personnel in Jan. 2012 it is the second largest UN peacekeeping force in the world.

Defence expenditure totalled US$168m. in 2008 (US$3 per capita), representing 1.5% of GDP.

Army

The total strength of the Army was estimated at 125,000 (2007), including some 14,000 republican guards. There is an additional paramilitary National Police Force of unknown size. There are thought to be 14 infantry brigades, one mechanized infantry brigade and two commando regiments.

Navy

Naval strength (2007), 6,700.

Air Force

Personnel (2007), 2,500.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 45.7% of GDP in 2006 (one of the highest percentages of any country), industry 27.7% and services 26.6%.

Overview

The Democratic Republic of the Congo is a resource-rich economy that has suffered severe difficulties since the mid-1980s owing to socio-political unrest. It is ranked last of the 187 countries on the UN Human Development Index. Per capita income has dropped steadily since independence, from US$250 in 1960 to US$139 in 2006.

Ceasefire agreements in 1999 and 2001 led to economic and social reforms. Prudent macroeconomic policies and structural reforms under the transitional government between 2003 and 2006 brought hyperinflation under control and helped recovery. After a decade of contraction, growth increased to over 6.0% in 2008 before falling to 2.8% in 2009, following a decline in terms of trade resulting from the global financial crisis.

The debt situation is greatly improved thanks to IMF debt relief but remains high, with external debt representing 93% of GDP. Mineral smuggling, particularly of gold, costs the country millions of dollars.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Congolese franc (CDF) which replaced the former zaire in July 1998. The value of the new currency fell by two-thirds in the six months following its launch. Total money supply was 120,605m. Congolese francs in July 2005. Inflation, which reached 23,760% in 1994, had declined to 4.0% by 2004 before rising to 18.0% in 2008 and 46.2% in 2009, the highest rate of any country in 2009. In May 2001 the franc was floated in an effort to overcome the economic chaos caused by three years of state control and inter-regional war.

Budget

In 2008 revenues totalled 1,326.8bn. Congolese francs and expenditures 1,478.7bn. Congolese francs.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 2.8% in 2009 and 7.2% in 2010. In Feb. 1998 GDP was reported to be 65% lower than it was in 1960, when the country gained independence. Total GDP in 2010 was US$13.1bn.

Banking and Finance

The central bank, the Banque Centrale du Congo (Governor, Jean-Claude Masangu), achieved independence in May 2002. In 2010 there were 23 commercial banks, two specialized financial institutions, one savings bank and 120 co-operative banks. The largest bank in 2010 was the Banque Commerciale du Congo, in which the state has a 25.5% stake.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of less than 0.1 tonnes per capita in 2008. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked Democratic Republic of the Congo 142nd in the world out of 149 countries analysed, with 47.3%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources.

Electricity

Production (2007), 8.3bn. kWh. Installed capacity was an estimated 2.4m. kW in 2007. Consumption per capita was 114 kWh in 2007.

Oil and Gas

Production of oil in 2007 was 836,000 tonnes; reserves in 2007 were 180m. bbls. There is an oil refinery at Kinlao-Muanda.

Minerals

Production, 2004 (in 1,000 tonnes): coal, 108; copper, 70; cobalt (estimate), 20; gold (estimate), 10,500 kg. Diamond production, 2004: 29.5m. carats. Only Australia, Russia and Botswana produce more diamonds. The country holds an estimated 80% of the world's coltan (columbite-tantalite) reserves. Coal, tin and silver are also found. The most important mining area is in the province of Katanga.

Agriculture

There were, in 2001, 6.70m. ha. of arable land and 1.18m. ha. of permanent crops. 11,000 ha. were irrigated in 2001. There were 2,430 tractors in 2001. The main agricultural crops (2002 production in 1,000 tonnes) are: cassava, 14,929; sugarcane, 1,650; plantains (2001), 1,216; maize, 1,154; groundnuts, 355; yams, 320; rice, 315; bananas, 313. Livestock (2002): goats, 4,004,000; pigs, 953,000; sheep, 897,000; cattle, 761,000; poultry, 20m.

Forestry

Forests covered 133.61m. ha. in 2005, or 58.9% of the land area. Timber production in 2007 was 77.66m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

The catch for 2005 was approximately 220,000 tonnes, almost entirely from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

Output in 1,000 tonnes: cement (2001), 192; steel (2001), 80; sugar (2002), 65; soap (1995), 47; tyres (1995), 50,000 units; printed fabrics (1995), 15.73m. sq. metres; shoes (1995), 1.6m. pairs; beer (2003), 149.6m. litres.

Labour

The estimated economically active population in 2010 was 25.77m. (59% males), up from 21.79m. in 2005. Agriculture employs around 65% of the total labour force.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$10,600m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Imports in 2007 were US$5,257m.; exports were US$6,143m. Main commodities for import are consumer goods, foodstuffs, mining and other machinery, transport equipment and fuels; and for export: diamonds, copper, coffee, cobalt and crude oil. Main import sources in 2004 were South Africa, 18.5%; Belgium, 15.6%; France, 10.9%; USA, 6.2%. Main export markets (2004) were Belgium, 42.5%; Finland, 17.8%; Zimbabwe, 12.2%; USA, 9.2%.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

In 2004 there were 153,497 km of roads (1.8% paved). In 2007 there were around 312,000 vehicles in use.

Rail

Total route length was 4,499 km on three gauges in 2004, of which 858 km was electrified. However, the length of track actually in use has been severely reduced by the civil conflict and only amounted to 3,641 km. In 2008 the Société Nationale des Chemins de Fer du Congo (SNCC) carried 169,000 passengers and in 2007 the Office National des Transports carried 39,000 passengers. The SNCC carried 921,000 tonnes of freight in 2008.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Kinshasa (Ndjili). Other major airports are at Lubumbashi (Luano), Bukavu, Goma and Kisangani. The main carrier is Hewa Bora Airways. In 2001

Kinshasa handled 278,000 passengers (142,000 on international flights) and 41,500 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

The River Congo and its tributaries are navigable to 300-tonne vessels for about 14,500 km. Regular traffic has been established between Kinshasa and Kisangani as well as Ilebo, on the Lualaba (i.e. the river above Kisangani), on some tributaries and on the lakes. The Democratic Republic of the Congo has only 37 km of sea coast. In Jan. 2009 there were two ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 2,000 GT. Matadi, Kinshasa and Kalemie are the main seaports.

Telecommunications

In 2009 the Democratic Republic of the Congo had just 42,300 main (fixed) telephone lines, but there were 9,459,000 mobile phone subscribers (147.3 for every 1,000 persons). The Democratic Republic of the Congo has among the highest ratios of mobile phone subscriptions to fixed telephone lines. In 2005 there were 140,600 internet users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There is a Supreme Court at Kinshasa, 11 courts of appeal, 36 courts of first instance and 24 'peace tribunals'. The death penalty is in force.

The population in penal institutions in Jan. 2004 was approximately 30,000 (57 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

In 2007 there were 230,834 teaching staff in primary schools for 8-8m. pupils, and 2-8m. pupils in secondary schools with 179,635 teaching staff. In 2007 there were 237,836 students in higher education and 16,913 academic staff. The largest public universities are the University of Kinshasa, the University of Kisangani and the University of Lubumbashi.

Adult literacy rate was 67% in 2008.

Health

In 2004 there were 5,827 physicians, 159 dentistry personnel and 28,789 nursing and midwifery personnel.

The Democratic Republic of the Congo has been one of the least successful countries in the battle against undernourishment in the past 20 years. The proportion of the population classified as undernourished increased from 29% in 1990-92 to 75% by 2004-06.

RELIGION

In 2001 there were 21.99m. Roman Catholics, 16.95m. Protestants, 7.17m. Kimbanguistes (African Christians) and 0.75m. Muslims.

Animist beliefs persist. In Feb. 2012 there was one Roman Catholic cardinal.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

(With year entered on list). Virunga National Park (1979); Kahuzi-Biega National Park (1980); Garamba National Park (1980); Salonga National Park (1984); and Okapi Wildlife Reserve (1996).

Press

In 2006 there were 11 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 50,000.

Tourism

In 2007 there were 47,000 non-resident tourist arrivals by air.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

First occupied by France in 1882, the Congo became a territory of French Equatorial Africa from 1910–58, and then a member state of the French Community. Between 1940 and 1944, thanks to Equatorial Africa's allegiance to Gen. de Gaulle, he named Brazzaville the capital of the Empire and Liberated France. Independence was granted in 1960. A Marxist-Leninist state was introduced in 1970. Free elections were restored in 1992 but violence erupted when, in June 1997, President Lissouba tried to disarm opposition militia ahead of a fresh election. There followed four months of civil war with fighting concentrated on Brazzaville which became a ghost town. In Oct. Gen. Sassou-Nguesso proclaimed victory, having relied upon military support from Angola. President Lissouba went into hiding in Burkina Faso. A peace agreement signed in Nov. 1999 between President Sassou-Nguesso and the 'Cocoye' and 'Ninja' militias brought a period of relative stability.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Republic of the Congo, sometimes referred to as Congo (Brazzaville), is bounded by Cameroon and the Central African Republic in the north, the Democratic Republic of the Congo to the east and south, Angola and the Atlantic Ocean to the southwest and Gabon to the west, and covers 342,000 sq. km. At the census of 2007 the population was 3,697,490 (1,876,133 females); density, 11 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 4.51m.

In 2005, 60.2% of the population were urban.

Area, census population and county towns of the departments in 2007 were:

Region	Sq. km	Population	County town
Bouenza	12,266	309,073	Madingou
Capital District	100	1,373,382	Brazzaville
Cuvette	47,650	156,044	Owando
Cuvette Ouest	27,200	72,999	Ewo
Lékoumou	20,950	96,393	Sibiti
Likouala	66,044	154,115	Impfondo
Niari	25,941	231,271	Loubomo (Dolisie)
Plateaux	38,400	174,591	Djambala
Pool	33,955	236,595	Kinkala
Sangha	55,800	85,738	Ouessou

Census population of major cities in 2007: Brazzaville, the capital, 1,373,382; Pointe-Noire, 715,334; Loubomo (Dolisie), 83,798; N'Kayi, 71,620; Impfondo, 33,911; Ouesso, 28,179. Main ethnic groups are: Kongo (48%), Sangha (20%), Teke (17%) and M'Bochi (12%).

French is the official language. Kongo languages are widely spoken. Monokutuba and Lingala serve as lingua francas.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 125,000; deaths, 46,000. Rates, 2008 estimates (per 1,000 population): births, 34.5; deaths, 12.9. Infant mortality, 2005 (per 1,000 live births), 79. Expectation of life in 2007 was 52.5 years for males and 54.4 for females. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.2%. Fertility rate, 2008, 4.4 children per woman.

CLIMATE

An equatorial climate, with moderate rainfall and a small range of temperature. There is a long dry season from May to Oct. in the southwest plateaux, but the Congo Basin in the northeast is more humid, with rainfall approaching 100" (2,500 mm). Brazzaville, Jan. 78°F (25.6°C), July 73°F (22.8°C). Annual rainfall 59" (1,473 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was approved in a referendum held in Jan. 2002. Under the new constitution the president's term of office is increased from five to seven years. The constitution provides for a new two-chamber assembly consisting of a house of representatives and a senate. The president may also appoint and dismiss ministers. 84.3% of voters were in favour of the draft constitution and 11.3% against. Turnout was 78%, despite calls from opposition parties for a boycott. The new constitution came into force in Aug. 2002.

There is a 137-seat National Assembly, with members elected for a five-year term in single-seat constituencies, and a 72-seat Senate, with members elected for a six-year term (one third of members every two years).

National Anthem

'La Congolaise'; words by Levent Kimbangu, tune by François Jacques Tondra.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 12 July 2009. Incumbent Denis Sassou-Nguesso won with 78.6% of votes cast, against 7.5% for Joseph Kignoumbi Kia Mboungou and 7.0% for Nicéphore Antoine Fylla de Saint-Eudes. The turnout was 66.4%. There were ten other candidates. Six opposition candidates boycotted the elections, claiming that the electoral lists were flawed.

Parliamentary elections were held on 24 June and 5 Aug. 2007. President Denis Sassou-Nguesso's Congolese Labour Party won 46 out of 137 seats; Congolese Movement for Democracy and Integral Development, 11; Pan-African Union for Social Democracy, 11; Action Movement for Renewal, 5; Movement for Solidarity and Development, 5; Club 2002, 3; Take Action for Congo, 3. A total of 11 other parties won either one or two seats. The Congolese Labour Party and its allies won 124 seats in total, with only 11 going to the opposition (Pan-African Union for Social Democracy). There were also two vacant seats. A number of opposition parties boycotted the elections, claiming that they were not free and fair.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

President: Denis Sassou-Nguesso; b. 1943 (Congolese Labour Party; sworn in 25 Oct. 1997 for a second time and re-elected in March 2002 and July 2009, having previously held office 1979–92).

In March 2012 the government comprised:

Minister at the Presidency in Charge of Defence: Charles Zacharie Bowao. Minister at the Presidency in Charge of Special Economic Zones: Alain Akouala Atipault.

CURRENT LEADERS

Denis Sassou-Nguesso

Position

President

Introduction

A military leader from the 1960s, Denis Sassou-Nguesso ruled the Republic of the Congo between 1979–92, regaining power in 1997 in a coup. He maintained Congo's one-party Marxist-Leninist state—through the Congolese Labour Party (PCT; Parti Congolais du Travail)—until 1992, when he introduced free elections in which he was defeated. Much of his tenure since 1997 has been marred by civil war and economic crises.

Early Life

Sassou-Nguesso was born in 1943 in Edou. Joining the army in 1960, he trained at the General Leclerc military school in the Congo and the Saint-Maixent military school in France. In 1963 he was involved in the overthrow of Fulbert Youlou, the first president of independent Congo from 1959, and then of his successor Alphonse Massamba-Débat (1963–68). When Marien Ngouabi took power in 1969 he introduced a Marxist-Leninist state with the newly-created PCT at its core. Sassou-Nguesso joined the PCT in the same year.

In 1977 Sassou-Nguesso formed part of a military junta which took power following the assassination of Ngouabi by forces supposedly loyal to Massamba-Débat, before serving as defence minister under the leadership of Col. Joachim Yhombi-Opango (1977–79). At the same time he achieved the rank of colonel and became vice president of the military committee. Two years later Sassou-Nguesso replaced Yhombi-Opango as president.

Career in Office

On taking power, Sassou-Nguesso introduced a new constitution with the PCT continuing to lead a one-party government. Although reinforcing the Marxist-Leninist state introduced by Ngouabi, and despite signing a co-operation treaty with the USSR in 1981, Sassou-Nguesso sought a rapprochement with France and international investment in Congo's oil resources. In 1990 the party abandoned Marxism for democratic socialism and in 1992, following a referendum, free elections were introduced. The first multi-party elections saw the defeat of Sassou-Nguesso by Pascal Lissouba of the Pan-African Union for Social Development. Sassou-Nguesso came third with 16.9% of votes.

Thereafter, tension between the governing and opposition parties led to recurring violence between their respective militias, including the 'Cobra' militia loyal to Sassou-Nguesso. Violence increased ahead of elections scheduled for 1997, accelerating from June 1997 into four months of civil war. Sassou-Nguesso, with the aid of Angolan soldiers, finally ousted Lissouba. The latter went into hiding in Burkina Faso and Sassou-Nguesso was sworn in as president again in Oct. 1997. Between 10,000–15,000 people were killed in the conflict. Fighting erupted again in Jan. 1999 as 'Cocoye' rebels loyal to Lissouba attacked Brazzaville, and in April there was an attack on Pointe-Noire by the 'Ninja' rebels loyal to former prime minister Bernard Kolélas. Then in Aug. 1999 peace talks were held by Sassou-Nguesso, Lissouba and Kolélas at which a ceasefire was agreed.

In Jan. 2001 Sassou-Nguesso passed a new constitution which increased the president's term from five to seven years and strengthened presidential powers. In presidential elections held in March 2002, he won 89.4% of votes. The new constitution deemed Lissouba and Kolélas ineligible to stand, while another opposition candidate, Andre Milongo, refused to participate claiming 'irregularities'. The elections were marred by violence between the 'Ninja' rebels and government forces in the Pool area of the country, which caused the displacement of around 66,000 people. Legislative elections which followed in May and June 2002 resulted in a large parliamentary majority for the PCT and its allies, although the results were criticized by international observers and provoked further widespread militia violence. A peace agreement reached in March 2003 has remained fragile. Following the most recent parliamentary elections in mid-2007 the PCT remained the largest party in the National Assembly. In July 2009 Sassou-Nguesso was re-elected for a further seven-year presidential term, claiming 78.6% of the vote. The conduct of the poll was criticized by a European Commission delegation and the results were disputed, provoking street protests in Brazzaville that were dispersed by riot police.

In a cabinet reshuffle in Sept. 2009, Sassou-Nguesso abolished the post of prime minister and took over those duties himself under the mantle of the presidency.

In Aug. 2010 Sassou-Nguesso presided over national celebrations marking the 50th anniversary of the country's independence from France.

DEFENCE

In 2008 military expenditure totalled US$112m. (US$29 per capita), representing 0.9% of GDP.

Army

Total personnel (2007) 8,000. There is a Gendarmerie of 2,000.

Navy

Personnel in 2007 totalled about 800. The Navy is based at Pointe Noire.

Air Force

The Air Force had (2007) about 1,200 personnel and 24 aircraft although none are combat capable and their serviceability is questionable.

ECONOMY

Agriculture produced 4.0% of GDP in 2006, industry 70.2% and services 25.8%.

Overview

The economy is dominated by the oil sector (more than 60% of nominal GDP, 85% of exports and 75% of revenues) and is thus vulnerable to external shocks. The closing of one of the country's largest oil fields following an accident led to a recession in 2007, while the 2008 financial crisis prompted a sharp decline in oil prices. Sectors with strong growth potential include transport services, agriculture, forestry and mining.

Civil war and poor governance during the 1990s damaged the health and education systems as well as the transport infrastructure. Poverty remains a concern, running at 50.7% of the total population in 2005. In March 2006 the World Bank and the IMF approved Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) treatment, which the country completed in 2010.

Currency

The unit of currency is the franc CFA (XAF) with a parity of 655.957 francs CFA to one euro. Total money supply in June 2005 was 322,269m. francs CFA and foreign exchange reserves were US$226m. Gold reserves were 11,000 troy oz in July 2005. There was inflation 6.0% in 2008 and 4.3% in 2009.

Budget

In 2008 revenues were 2,465.9bn. francs CFA and expenditures 1,227.5bn. francs CFA. Petroleum revenue accounted for 85.9% of revenues in 2008; current expenditure accounted for 63.8% of expenditures.

Performance

Total GDP in 2010 was US$11.9bn. Real GDP growth was 7.5% in 2009 and 8.8% in 2010.

Banking and Finance

The Banque des États de l'Afrique Centrale (Governor, Lucas Abaga Nchama) is the bank of issue. There are four commercial banks and a development bank, in all of which the government has majority stakes. There is also a co-operative banking organization (Mutuelle Congolaise de l'Épargne et de Crédit).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 1.4 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was an estimated 112,000 kW in 2007. Total production in 2007 was 407m. kWh and consumption per capita 227 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Oil was discovered in the mid-1960s when Elf Aquitaine was given exclusive rights to production. Elf still has the lion's share but Agip Congo is also involved in oil exploitation. In 2008 production was 12.9m. tonnes. Proven reserves in 2008 were 1.9bn. bbls, including major off-shore deposits. Oil provides about 90% of government revenue and exports. There is a refinery at Pointe-Noire, the second largest city. There were proven natural gas reserves of 91bn. cu. metres in 2007.

Minerals

A government mine produces several metals; gold and diamonds are extracted by individuals. There are reserves of potash (4.5m. tonnes), iron ore (1,000m. tonnes), and also clay, bituminous sand, phosphates, zinc and lead.

Agriculture

In 2001 there were 175,000 ha. of arable land and 45,000 ha. of permanent crops. There were some 700 tractors and 85 thresher-harvesters in use in 2001. Production (2002, in thousand tonnes): cassava, 862; sugarcane, 459; bananas, 84; plantains, 71; mangoes, 25; groundnuts, 24; palm oil, 17; yams, 11; maize, 7.

Livestock (2002): goats, 294,000; sheep, 98,000; cattle, 93,000; pigs, 46,000; poultry, 2m.

Forestry

In 2005 equatorial forests covered 22.47m. ha. (65.8% of the total land area). In 2007, 3.71m. cu. metres of timber were produced, mainly okoumé from the south and sapele from the north. Timber companies are required to replant, and to process at least 60% of their production locally. Before the development of the oil industry, forestry was the mainstay of the economy.

Fisheries

The catch for 2005 was 58,368 tonnes, of which 56% was from inland waters and 44% from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

There is a growing manufacturing sector, located mainly in the four major towns, producing processed foods, textiles, cement, metal goods and chemicals. Industry produced 65.2% of GDP in 2001, including 4.1% from manufacturing. Production (2004): residual fuel oil, 295,000 tonnes; distillate fuel oil, 120,000 tonnes; petrol, 49,000 tonnes; kerosene, 19,000 tonnes; cigarettes (1994), 655m. cartons; beer (2003), 66.0m. litres; veneer sheets (2001), 12,000 cu. metres; cotton textiles (1993), 1.8m. metres.

Labour

In 2010 the estimated economically active population was 1,637,000 (56% males), up from 1,256,000 in 2000. More than 50% of the labour force in 2010 were engaged in agriculture.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$5,936m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	2001	2002	2003	2004	2005
Imports f.o.b.	681	691	831	969	1,356
Exports f.o.b.	2,055	2,289	2,637	3,433	4,730

Principal imported commodities are intermediate manufactures, capital equipment, construction materials, foodstuffs and petroleum products. Apart from crude oil, other significant commodities for export are lumber, plywood, sugar, cocoa, coffee and diamonds. In 2003 the main import suppliers were the Netherlands, France, USA, Italy and Germany. The main export markets were China, South Korea, USA, North Korea and France.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2004 there were 17,289 km of roads, of which 5.0% were surfaced. Passenger cars in use in 2007 numbered 56,000 (15 per 1,000 inhabitants). There were 214 deaths in road accidents in 2007.

Rail

A railway connects Brazzaville with Pointe-Noire via Loubomo and Bilinga, and a branch links Mont-Belo with Mbinda on the Gabon border. Total length in 2005 was 797 km (1,067 mm gauge). In 2006 passenger-km totalled 167m. and freight tonne-km 264m.

Civil Aviation

The principal airports are at Brazzaville (Maya Maya) and Pointe-Noire. In 2003 Trans Air Congo operated services to Abidjan, Cotonou and Lomé, as well as domestic services. Trans African Airlines flew to Abidjan, Bamako, Cotonou, Dakar and Lomé. In 2001 Brazzaville handled 433,000 passengers (341,000 on domestic flights) and 27,000 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

The only seaport is Pointe-Noire. There are some 5,000 km of navigable rivers, and river transport is an important service for timber and other freight as well as passengers.

Telecommunications

There were 9,800 fixed telephone lines in 2010 (2.4 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 3.80m. in 2010. There were 42.9 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Supreme Court, Court of Appeal and a criminal court are situated in Brazzaville, with a network of tribunaux de grande instance and tribunaux d'instance in the regions.

Education

In 2007 there were 10,631 teaching staff for 621,702 pupils at primary schools and (2004) 6,965 secondary school teaching staff for 232,026 pupils. There were 12,456 students at tertiary level in 2003 with 894 academic staff. Adult literacy rate in 2004 was 84.7%.

In 2005 public expenditure on education came to 1.8% of GDP and 8.1% of total government spending.

Health

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Discovered by Columbus in 1502 on his last voyage, Costa Rica (Rich Coast) was part of the Spanish viceroyalty of New Spain from 1540 to 1821, then of the Central American Federation until 1838 when it achieved full independence. Coffee was introduced in 1808 and became a mainstay of the economy, helping to create a peasant land-owning class. In 1948 accusations of election fraud led to a six-week civil war, at the conclusion of which José Figueres Ferrer won power at the head of a revolutionary junta. A new constitution abolished the Army. In 1986 Oscar Arias Sánchez was elected president. He promised to prevent Nicaraguan anti-Sandinista (contra) forces using Costa Rica as a base. In 1987 he received the Nobel Peace Prize as recognition of his Central American peace plan, agreed to by the other Central American states. Costa Rica was beset with economic problems in the early 1990s when several politicians, including President Calderón, were accused of profiting from drug trafficking.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Costa Rica is bounded in the north by Nicaragua, east by the Caribbean, southeast by Panama, and south and west by the Pacific. The area is estimated at 51,100 sq. km (19,730 sq. miles). The provisional population at the census of May 2011 was 4,301,712; density, 84.2 per sq. km. In 2005, 61.7% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 4.99m.

There are seven provinces (with provisional 2011 census population): Alajuela (847,660); Cartago (491,425); Guanacaste (326,821); Heredia (433,975); Limón (386,954); Puntarenas (410,914); San José (1,403,963). The largest cities, with estimated 2000 populations, are San José (346,600); Limón (62,000); and Alajuela (53,900).

Ethnic divisions (2000): White 77%, Mestizo 17%, Mulatto 3%, East Asian (predominantly Chinese) 2%, Amerindian 1%.

Spanish is the official language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

	Marriages	Births	Deaths
2005	25,631	71,548	16,139

2008	25,034	75,187	18,021

2008 rates per 1,000 population: births, 16.9; deaths, 4.0. Annual population growth rate, 2005–10, 1.6%. Life expectancy at birth, 2007, was 76.4 years for men and 81.3 years for women. Infant mortality, 2008, 9.0 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 2.0 children per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is tropical, with a small range of temperature and abundant rain. The dry season is from Dec. to April. San José, Jan. 66°F (18.9°C), July 69°F (20.6°C). Annual rainfall 72" (1,793 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was promulgated on 7 Nov. 1949. The legislative power is vested in a single-chamber Legislative Assembly of 57 deputies elected for four years. The President and two Vice-Presidents are elected for four years; the candidate receiving the largest vote, provided it is over 40% of the total, is declared elected, but a second ballot is required if no candidate gets 40% of the total. Since 2003 former presidents have been permitted to stand again. Elections are normally held on the first Sunday in Feb.

The President may appoint and remove members of the cabinet.

CURRENT LEADERS

Laura Chinchilla

Position
President

Introduction

Laura Chinchilla was elected Costa Rica's first female president in Feb. 2010, continuing the centre-right National Liberation Party's (PLN) hold on government. A former justice minister, she has won praise for her attempts to tackle drug networks and improve public security.

Early Life

Laura Chinchilla Miranda was born on 28 March 1959 in Desamparados, a suburb of the capital, San José. She graduated in political science from the University of Costa Rica in 1981 and went on to earn a masters in public administration from Georgetown University in the USA. Returning to Costa Rica, she worked as a consultant to various international organizations including the US Agency for International Development, the UN Development Program and the Inter-American Development Bank, on issues such as public safety, border security, human rights and judicial reform.

Consultancy for the ministry of national planning and economic policy in the early 1990s led to Chinchilla being offered a senior role in government. In May 1994 she was appointed deputy minister of public security in the administration of José

María Figueres Olsen, whose PLN had won the general election three months earlier. Chinchilla also led the national council of migration and foreign affairs and was a member of the board of the national drug council. She was promoted to minister for public security in 1996 and gained a reputation for her tough stance on criminal drugs activities.

Chinchilla was elected to the legislative assembly as a deputy for the province of San José in 2002 and served as vice-president under Oscar Arias of the PLN. Arias, who had served as president in the late 1980s and was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for his contribution to democracy and peace in central America, enjoyed popular support and won a further term in Jan. 2006. Chinchilla served as both vice-president and justice minister until she left office in Oct. 2008 to mount a presidential campaign. She emerged victorious after the first round on 7 Feb. 2010, taking 47% of the vote, well ahead of nearest rival Ottón Solís of the left-leaning Citizens' Action Party on 25%.

Career in Office

Chinchilla was sworn in on 8 May 2010. She pledged to make Costa Rica the first developed country in Central America, confirmed her commitment to carbon neutrality by 2021 and promised to improve health care, safety and security.

In Nov. 2010 a dispute with neighbouring Nicaragua over a river border area led to the deployment of security forces by both countries. In March 2011 the International Court of Justice ruled that all troops should be withdrawn from the area in a judgment viewed as favouring Costa Rica.

DEFENCE

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$156m. (US$37 per capita), representing 0.5% of GDP.

Army

The Army was abolished in 1948 and replaced by a Civil Guard numbering 4,500 in 2007. In addition there is a Border Security Police of 2,500 and a Rural Guard, 2,000-strong.

Navy

The paramilitary Coast Guard Unit numbered (2007) 400.

Air Wing

There is a 400-strong Air Surveillance Unit attached to the ministry of public security, equipped with ten light planes and two helicopters.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 8.8% of GDP in 2006, industry 29.4% and services 61.8%.

Overview

Growth rates dipped in the mid-1990s and early in the 2000s but otherwise the economy has grown at a healthy pace. Following the economic crisis of the 1980s, which was in part brought on by a fall in the prices of key exports (bananas, pineapples and coffee), the country diversified into manufacturing. Tax-free trade zones were established to attract foreign companies. Foreign direct investment (FDI) was initially for assembly plants producing clothing for the US market. Later, investment in skilled labour attracted electronics and telecommunications equipment manufacturers shifting production from the USA to lower-cost locations. The most significant foreign investment was the opening of an Intel computer chip assembly and testing plant in 1998. Since then other US manufacturing companies have chosen the country as an FDI destination because of its proximity, relative political stability and well-educated, English-speaking, population. On 1 Jan. 2009 the US–Central American Free Trade Agreement came into force.

The economy shrank by 1.1% in 2009 owing to reduced demand for exports and a reduction in investment. Central government expenditure has increased in response and the World Bank approved a US$500m. credit line in April 2009.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Costa Rican colón (CRC) of 100 céntimos. The official rate is used for all imports on an essential list and by the government and autonomous institutions, and a free rate is used for all other transactions. In July 2005 total money supply was 1,101.6bn. colones, foreign exchange reserves were US$2,215m. and gold reserves were 2,000 troy oz. Inflation was 13.4% in 2008 and 7.8% in 2009.

Budget

In 2006 central government revenues were 2,750.0bn. colones (2,189.2bn. colones in 2005) and expenditures 2,508.6bn. colones (2,168.8bn. colones in 2005).

There is a sales tax of 13%.

Performance

Costa Rica is considered to be amongst the most stable countries in Central America. Although the economy contracted by 1.1% in 2009 it grew by 4.2% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$34.6bn.

Banking and Finance

The bank of issue is the Central Bank (founded 1950) which supervises the national monetary system, foreign exchange dealings and banking operations. The bank has a board of seven directors appointed by the government, including ex officio the Minister of Finance and the Planning Office Director. The President is Dr Rodrigo Bolaños Zamora.

There are three state-owned banks (Banco de Costa Rica, Banco Nacional de Costa Rica and Banco Popular y de Desarrollo Comunal), 17 private banks and one credit co-operative.

There is a stock exchange in San José.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Costa Rica's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 1.7 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked Costa Rica fifth in the world, with 90.5%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources.

Electricity

Installed capacity was an estimated 2.1m. kW in 2007. Production was 9.05bn. kWh in 2007; consumption per capita in 2007 was 2,074 kWh.

Minerals

In 2005 gold output was 424 kg and salt production was an estimated 37,000 tonnes.

Agriculture

Agriculture is a key sector, with an estimated 327,000 people being economically active in 2007. There were about 0.2m. ha. of arable land in 2007 and 0.3m. ha. of permanent crops. The principal agricultural products are coffee, bananas and sugar. Cattle are also of great importance. Production figures for 2003 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 3,924; bananas, 1,863; pineapples, 725; oranges, 367; melons and watermelons, 292; rice, 180; coffee, 132; palm oil, 131; cassava, 94; potatoes, 82; plantains, 70.

Livestock (2003): cattle, 1.15m.; pigs, 500,000; horses, 115,000; chickens, 18m.

Forestry

In 2005 forests covered 2.39m. ha., or 46.8% of the land area. Timber production in 2007 was 4.61m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

Total catch in 2005 amounted to 22,340 tonnes, mostly from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

The main manufactured goods are foodstuffs, palm oil, textiles, fertilizers, pharmaceuticals, furniture, cement, tyres, canning, clothing, plastic goods, plywood and electrical equipment.

Labour

In July 2001 there were 1,552,920 people in employment. In July 2001 there were 100,397 unemployed persons, or 6.1% of the workforce. The main area of employment is transport, storage and communications (303,000 people in 2002), followed by agriculture, hunting, forestry and fisheries (243,000 in 2002).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

A free trade agreement was signed with Mexico in March 1994. Some 2,300 products were freed from tariffs, with others to follow over ten years. In 2007 a national referendum approved the adoption of the Central America-Dominican Republic-United States Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA-DR), which establishes a free trade zone with the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and the USA. It was approved by the Legislative Assembly in Nov. 2008 and subsequently entered into force on 1 Jan. 2009. External debt was US$6,223m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

The value of imports and exports in US$1m. was:

	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006
Imports f.o.b.	6,547.7	7,252.3	7,791.0	9,242.0	10,810.8
Exports f.o.b.	5,269.9	6,163.0	6,369.7	7,099.6	8,067.5

Principal imports: machinery and apparatus, chemicals and chemical products, mineral fuels, food. Chief exports: manufactured goods and other products, coffee, bananas, sugar, cocoa. Main import suppliers, 2006: USA, 39.6%; Japan, 5.3%; Venezuela, 5.3%; Mexico, 5.2%. Major export markets, 2006: USA, 42.5%; China, 7.7%; Hong Kong, 7.2%; Netherlands, 6.9%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 36,654 km of roads, including 7,640 km of main roads. On the Costa Rica section of the Inter-American Highway it is possible to drive to Panama during the dry season. The Pan-American Highway into Nicaragua is metalled for most of the way and a new highway between San José and Caldera opened in Jan. 2010. Passenger cars in use in 2007 numbered 525,400, buses and coaches 12,300, vans and lorries 139,600 and motorcycles and mopeds 100,100. There were 339 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 2007.

Rail

The nationalized railway system (Incofer) was closed in 1995 following an earthquake in 1991. Freight services and some commuter services have now been resumed. In 2007 passenger-km totalled 872,000 and freight tonne-km 230,000.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at San José (Juan Santamaria) and Liberia (Daniel Oduber Quirós). The national carrier is Líneas Aéreas Costarriquenses (LACSA). In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Costa Rican-based carriers flew 20m. km, carrying 750,000 passengers (584,000 on international flights). In 2001 San José handled 2,108,713 passengers (1,972,606 on international flights) and 67,858 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

The chief ports are Limón on the Atlantic and Caldera on the Pacific. In Jan. 2009 there were two ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 2,000 GT. In 2005 vessels totalling 2,012,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 2,012,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications

Costa Rica had 2,489,500 telephone subscribers in 2005 (575.3 per 1,000 inhabitants), including 1,101,000 mobile phone subscribers. There were 343.3 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2009. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 271,500 in 2009 (59.1 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Justice is administered by the Supreme Court and five appeal courts divided into five chambers—the Court of Cassation, the Higher and Lower Criminal Courts, and the Higher and Lower Civil Courts. There are also subordinate courts in the separate provinces and local justices throughout the republic. There is no capital punishment.

The population in penal institutions in Oct. 2008 was 8,924 (198 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

The adult literacy rate in 2005 was 97.4% (96.0% among males and 96.2% among females). Primary instruction is compulsory and free from six to 14 years; secondary education (since 1949) is also free. Primary schools are provided and maintained by local school councils, while the national government pays the teachers, besides making subventions in aid of local funds. In 2006 there were 4,026 public and private primary schools with 35,413 teachers and administrative staff and 521,505 enrolled pupils, and 752 public and private secondary schools with 24,445 teachers and 338,508 pupils. In 2004 there were 166,417 university students. The largest of the four public universities is the University of Costa Rica (Universidad de Costa Rica). There are also a number of private universities.

In 2006 public expenditure on education came to 4.9% of GNI, representing 20.6% of total government expenditure.

Health

In 2006 there were 6,987 doctors, 2,800 dentists, 6,943 nurses, 3,058 pharmacists and 29 hospitals. There were 14 beds per 10,000 inhabitants in 2006.

RELIGION

Roman Catholicism is the state religion; it had 3.38m. adherents in 2001. There is entire religious liberty under the constitution. The Archbishop of Costa Rica has six bishops at Alajuela, Ciudad Quesada, Limón, Puntarenas, San Isidro el General and Tilarán. There were 360,000 Protestants in 2001. The remainder of the population are followers of other religions.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Costa Rica has three sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Cocos Island National Park (1997 and 2002); and the Area de Conservación Guanacaste (1999 and 2004), an important dry forest habitat.

Costa Rica shares a UNESCO site with Panama: the Talamanca Range-La Amistad Reserves (1983 and 1990), an important cross-breeding site for North and South American flora and fauna.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

France obtained rights on the coast in 1842 but did not occupy the territory until 1882. In the early 1870s a French offer to exchange Côte d'Ivoire with the British for the Gambia, which bisected the French colony of Senegal, was refused. Rumours of gold later rekindled French interest and in 1889 Côte d'Ivoire was declared a French protectorate. Governors appointed from France administered the colony using a system of centralized rule that allowed little room for local participation. In 1946 Côte d'Ivoire's first political party, the Democratic Party of Côte d'Ivoire, was created under the leadership of Félix Houphouët-Boigny who eventually adopted a policy of co-operation with the French authorities. By the mid-1950s the country was the wealthiest in French West Africa and in 1958 Côte d'Ivoire became an autonomous republic within the French Community. Côte d'Ivoire achieved full independence on 7 Aug. 1960, with Félix Houphouët-Boigny as its first president.

On 23 Dec. 1999 President Henri Konan Bédié was ousted in a military coup led by Gen. Robert Guéï, the country's military chief from 1990 to 1995. On 6 Oct. 2000 a state of emergency was declared ahead of a Supreme Court announcement on the candidates allowed to stand for the presidential election on 22 Oct. 2000. After Robert Guéï declared himself the winner in the election, a violent uprising in which over 2,000 people were killed resulted in Gen. Guéï fleeing to Benin. The veteran opposition candidate Laurent Gbagbo was then declared the rightful winner. In Sept. 2002 there was a failed coup by mutinous soldiers that claimed more than 20 lives, including those of both Gen. Guéï and the interior minister. Côte d'Ivoire then descended further into civil war, with the country divided between the rebel-held north and the government-held south. A peace agreement was reached in Jan. 2003 but was not implemented in full. In April 2005 government, rebel and opposition leaders signed a deal to end the civil war and pledged to hold elections in Oct., but these were repeatedly postponed. Under a power-sharing peace deal agreed in March 2007 between the government and the New Forces rebels, the New Forces leader, Guillaume Soro, became prime minister. In Dec. 2010 the election commission declared Gbagbo had lost the presidency to Alassane Ouattara in a second round run-off held the previous month. Despite international pressure to leave office, Gbagbo refused to accept the result, leading to rising tensions as both candidates were sworn in as president by their respective factions. In April 2011 Ouattara's forces captured Gbagbo, effectively bringing the affair to an end.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Côte d'Ivoire is bounded in the west by Liberia and Guinea, north by Mali and Burkina Faso, east by Ghana, and south by the Gulf of Guinea. It has an area of 322,463 sq. km (including 4,460 sq. km of inland water). The population at the 1998 census was 15,366,672; density, 48.3 per sq. km. The population was 55.0% rural in 2005.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 22-02m.

Since 2000 the country has been divided into 19 regions comprising 58 departments.

Areas, populations (1998 census) and capitals of the regions are:

Region	Area (in sq. km)	Population	Capital
Agnéby	9,200	525,211	Agboville
Bafing	8,900	139,251	Touba
Bas-Sassandra	26,400	1,395,251	San-Pédro
Denguélé	21,000	222,446	Odienné
Dix-Huit Montagnes	16,800	936,510	Man
Fromager	6,900	542,992	Gagnoa
Haut-Sassandra	15,200	1,071,977	Daloa
Lacs	8,900	476,235	Yamoussoukro
Lagunes	13,300	3,733,413	Abidjan
Marahoué	8,700	554,807	Bouaflé
Moyen-Cavally	14,300	508,733	Guiglo
Moyen-Comoé	6,900	394,761	Abengourou
N'zi-Comoé	19,200	633,927	Dimbokro
Savanes	40,200	929,673	Korhogo
Sud-Bandama	10,700	682,021	Divo
Sud-Comoé	7,300	459,487	Aboisso
Vallée du Bandama	28,500	1,080,509	Bouaké
Worodougou	22,200	378,463	Séguéla
Zanzan	38,300	701,005	Bondoukou

In 2000 the population of Abidjan stood at 3,790,000. Other major towns (with 1998 census population): Bouaké, 461,618; Yamoussoukro, 299,243; Daloa, 173,107; Korhogo, 142,093.

There are about 60 ethnic groups, the principal ones being the Baoulé (23%), the Bété (18%) and the Sénoufo (15%). A referendum held in July 2000 on the adoption of a new constitution set eligibility conditions for presidential candidates (the candidate and both his parents had to be Ivorian). This excluded a northern Muslim leader and in effect made foreigners out of millions of Ivorians. The north of the country is predominantly Muslim and the south predominantly Christian and animist.

Approximately 30% of the population are immigrants, in particular from Burkina Faso, Mali, Guinea and Senegal.

French is the official language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 720,000; deaths, 223,000. Rates (2008 estimates, per 1,000 population); birth, 35.0; death, 10.8. Expectation of life in 2007 was 55.7 years for males and 58.3 for females. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.2%. Infant mortality, 2005, 118 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 4.6 births per woman. 29% of the population are migrants.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, affected by distance from the sea. In coastal areas, there are wet seasons from May to July and in Oct. and Nov., but in central areas the periods are March to May and July to Nov. In the north, there is one wet season from June to Oct. Abidjan, Jan. 81°F (27.2°C), July 75°F (23.9°C). Annual rainfall 84" (2,100 mm). Bouaké, Jan. 81°F (27.2°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 48" (1,200 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1960 constitution was amended in 1971, 1975, 1980, 1985, 1986, 1990, 1998 and 2000. The sole legal party was the Democratic Party of Côte d'Ivoire, but opposition parties were legalized in 1990. There is a 255-member National Assembly elected by universal suffrage for a five-year term. The President is also directly elected for a five-year term (renewable). He appoints and leads a Council of Ministers.

In Nov. 1990 the National Assembly voted that its Speaker should become President in the event of the latter's incapacity, and created the post of Prime Minister to be appointed by the President. Following the death of President Houphouët-Boigny on 7 Dec. 1993, the speaker, Henri Konan Bédié, proclaimed himself head of state till the end of the presidential term in Sept. 1995.

Following the coup of Dec. 1999 a referendum was held on 23 July 2000 on the adoption of a new constitution, which set eligibility conditions for presidential candidates (the candidate and both his parents must be Ivorian), reduced the voting age from 21 to 18, and abolished the death penalty. It also offered an amnesty to soldiers who staged the coup and the junta, but committed the junta to hand over power to an elected civilian head of state and parliament within six months of the proclamation of the text. Approximately 87% of votes cast were in favour of the new constitution. This was subsequently adopted on 4 Aug. 2000.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the first round of presidential elections on 31 Oct. 2010 incumbent Laurent Gbagbo won 38.0%, Alassane Ouattara 32.1% and former president Henri Konan Bédié 25.2%. There were 11 other candidates and voter turnout was 83.7%. In the second round on 28 Nov. Ouattara was declared the winner by the Independent Electoral Commission with 54.1% of the vote against 45.9% for Gbagbo. Turnout was 81.1%. However, Gbagbo refused to concede and the result was then overturned on the grounds of alleged fraud by the Constitutional Council. Gbagbo was credited with 51.5% and was sworn in for a new term on 4 Dec. Ouattara, with broad international support, nevertheless continued to claim victory.

In parliamentary elections held on 11 Dec. 2011, Ouattara's Rally of the Republicans won 127 of 255 National Assembly seats and his ally Henri Konan Bédié's Democratic Party of Côte d'Ivoire 77 seats. Independents took 35 seats, the Union for Democracy and Peace 7, the Rally of Houphouëtists for Democracy and Peace 4, the Movement of Forces of the Future 3 and the Union for Côte d'Ivoire 1. One seat was vacant. Turnout was 36.7%. The Ivorian Popular Front of ousted President Laurent Gbagbo boycotted the election.

CURRENT LEADERS

Alassane Ouattara

Position
President

Introduction

Alassane Ouattara was elected president in Nov. 2010 but was prevented from taking office when the incumbent, Laurent Gbagbo, disputed the result. An economist who formerly worked for the IMF, Ouattara draws his support largely from the Muslim north of the country. He spent the early months of his term under UN guard as conflict waged between his supporters and those of Gbagbo before the former president's capture in April 2011.

Early Life

Alassane Ouattara was born on 1 Jan. 1942 in Dimbokro to a family with links to Burkina Faso. After graduating in business administration from the Drexel Institute of Technology in the USA, he gained an MA in 1967 and a PhD in economics in 1972, both from the University of Pennsylvania. He worked as an economist at the IMF from 1968–73, before moving to the Paris office of the Central Bank of West African States (BCEAO), becoming vice governor in 1983. From 1984–88 he was director of the African department at the IMF and served as counsellor to the managing director from 1987–88. From 1988–93 he was governor of the BCEAO.

In April 1990 Côte d'Ivoire's president, Félix Houphouët-Boigny, appointed Ouattara chairman of an inter-ministerial committee responsible for the national economic recovery programme. From Nov. 1990–Dec. 1993 he served as prime minister, acting as president for the last nine months of that period when Houphouët-Boigny fell ill. Ouattara then returned to the IMF as deputy managing director until 1999. In July 1995 he was nominated by the opposition Rally of the Republicans (RDR) as its presidential candidate but was banned from standing by Gbagbo on the grounds that one of his parents was a foreign national.

In 2000, after becoming leader of the RDR, he was again banned on nationality grounds from contesting the presidency, leading to increased tensions between the Muslim north and predominantly Christian south that helped to precipitate the 2002 civil war. Ouattara finally became the RDR's presidential candidate in 2008, promising to rebuild the country and unite its people. He emerged victorious in the UN-supervised presidential election of Nov. 2010. However, Gbagbo disputed the result and refused to leave office; on 4 Dec., Gbagbo and Ouattara took rival presidential oaths.

Career in Office

The international community refused to recognize Gbagbo's presidency and on 8 Dec. 2010 the UN Security Council declared Ouattara the winner. He was also endorsed by the USA, European Union, African Union and ECOWAS. Gbagbo nonetheless remained in power, with escalating violence between the RDR and Gbagbo's supporters resulting in tens of thousands of civilians fleeing to neighbouring Liberia. By March 2011 Ouattara's forces had gained supremacy in much of the country and on 11 April captured Gbagbo and his inner circle after surrounding the presidential compound in Abidjan. Ouattara was inaugurated in May, and in Sept. a truth and reconciliation commission was set up with the aim of restoring national unity in the wake of the post-election violence.

DEFENCE

Defence expenditure totalled US$336m. in 2008 (US$17 per capita), representing 1.5% of GDP.

About 11,000 uniformed UN personnel are in the country to maintain a ceasefire.

Army

Total strength (2007), 6,500. In addition there is a Presidential Guard of 1,350, a Gendarmerie of 7,600 and a Militia of 1,500.

Navy

Personnel in 2007 totalled about 900 with the force based at Locodjo (Abidjan).

Air Force

There are six combat capable aircraft, although their serviceability is in doubt. Personnel (2007) 700.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 23.1% of GDP in 2006, industry 26.8% and services 50.2%.

Côte d'Ivoire's 'shadow' (black market) economy is estimated to constitute approximately 47% of the country's official GDP.

Overview

After a burst of economic expansion following independence from France in the 1960s, Côte d'Ivoire has seen little growth. The civil war that began in 2002 held growth rates at around 1% per year for most of the 2000s. The economy began to recover in 2008, spurred by the Ouagadougou Political Accord of 2007 that reunified the country. However, the political crisis following the disputed elections of Nov.–Dec. 2010 had a knock-on effect on the economy in 2011.

Export industries include cocoa beans, crude oil and manufactures. Côte d'Ivoire is the world's largest producer of cocoa but, since 2006, oil and gas production have become more important for the economy. Unemployment is estimated to be as high as 50%.

The economy constitutes 40% of the GDP of the West African Economic and Monetary Union (UEMOA), largely as a result of the dependence of several neighbouring countries (including Burkina Faso, Mali and Guinea) on Côte d'Ivoire for transport and remittances from migrant nationals.

Currency

The unit of currency is the franc CFA (XOF) with a parity of 655.957 francs CFA to one euro. Foreign exchange reserves were US$1,379m. in June 2005 and total money supply was 1,225.0bn. francs CFA. Inflation was 6.3% in 2008 and 1.0% in 2009.

Budget

Revenues in 2008 were 2,156bn. francs CFA (tax revenue, 76.0%) and expenditures 2,217bn. francs CFA (current expenditure, 84.8%).

VAT is 18%.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 3.8% in 2009 and 2.4% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$22.8bn.

Banking and Finance

The regional Banque Centrale des États de l'Afrique de l'Ouest is the central bank and bank of issue. The Governor is Tiémoko Meyliet Koné. In 2002 there were 13 commercial banks and six credit institutions. The African Development Bank is based in Abidjan.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 0.3 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was an estimated 1.5m. kW in 2007. Production in 2007 amounted to 5.63bn. kWh, with consumption per capita 240 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Petroleum has been produced (offshore) since 1977. Production (2007), 2.4m. tonnes. Oil reserves, 2007, 100m. bbls. Natural gas reserves, 2007, 28bn. cu. metres; production (2007), 1,220m. cu. metres.

Minerals

Côte d'Ivoire has large deposits of iron ores, bauxite, tantalite, diamonds, gold, nickel and manganese, most of which are untapped. Gold production totalled 6.9 tonnes in 2009. Estimated diamond production, 2005: 300,000 carats.

Agriculture

In 2002 the agricultural population was 9.09m., of whom 3.13m. were economically active. In 2002 agriculture accounted for 58% of exports. There were 3.10m. ha. of arable land in 2001 and 4.40m. ha. of permanent crops. 73,000 ha. were irrigated in 2001. There were 3,800 tractors in 2001 and 70 harvester-threshers.

Côte d'Ivoire is the world's largest producer and exporter of cocoa beans, with an output of 1.23m. tonnes in 2003 (more than 37% of the world total). It is also a leading coffee producer, although production dropped from 365,000 tonnes in 2000 to 160,000 tonnes in 2003. The cocoa and coffee industries have for years relied on foreign workers, but tens of thousands have left the country since the 1999 coup resulting in labour shortages. Other main crops, with 2001 production figures in 1,000 tonnes, are: yams (2,938), cassava (1,688), plantains (1,410), rice (1,212), sugarcane (1,155), maize (573).

Livestock, 2002: 1.52m. sheep, 1.48m. cattle, 1.19m. goats, 356,000 pigs and 33m. chickens.

Forestry

In 2005 the rainforest covered 10.41m. ha., or 32.7% of the total land area. Products include teak, mahogany and ebony. In 2007, 10.25m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced.

Fisheries

The catch in 2007 amounted to 47,289 tonnes, of which marine fish approximately 93% and freshwater fish 7%. Imports of fishery commodities were valued at US$398m. in 2008 and exports at US$199m.

INDUSTRY

Industrialization has developed rapidly since independence, particularly food processing, textiles and sawmills. Output in 2007 (in 1,000 tonnes): distillate fuel oil, 1,089; kerosene, 933; cement (2005 estimate), 650; petrol, 564; residual fuel oil, 500; sawnwood (2007), 456,000 cu. metres; veneer sheets (2007), 313,000 cu. metres.

Labour

In 2003 the workforce was 7.3m. (60% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$10,735m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

In 2007 imports (c.i.f.) totalled US$6.68bn. (US$5.82bn. in 2006); exports (f.o.b.), US$8.07bn. (US$8.15bn. in 2006). Main imports, 2007: petroleum and petroleum products, 30.0%; machinery and transport equipment, 19.7%; food and live animals, 15.3%; chemicals and related products, 11.0%; arms and ammunition, 3.9%. Principal exports, 2007: petroleum and petroleum products, 32.6%; cocoa, 26.4%; machinery and transport equipment, 4.9%; natural rubber, 4.4%; arms and ammunition, 4.0%. Main import suppliers, 2007: Nigeria, 24.1%; France, 21.7%; China, 6.6%; Venezuela, 3.2%. Main export markets, 2007: France, 20.5%; Netherlands, 9.1%; Nigeria, 8.0%; USA, 6.8%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 81,996 km of roads, including 142 km of motorways. There were 314,165 passenger cars, 78,575 vans and trucks, 38,105 motorcycles and mopeds and 17,512 buses and coaches in use in 2007.

Rail

From Abidjan a metre-gauge railway runs to Léraba on the border with Burkina Faso (660 km), and thence through Burkina Faso to Ouagadougou and Kaya. Operation of the railway in both countries is franchised to the mixed public-private company Sitarail. Across both countries Sitarail carried 156,569 passengers in 2004 and 759,957 tonnes of freight in 2005.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Abidjan (Félix Houphouët-Boigny Airport), which in 2001 handled 912,000 passengers (all on international flights) and 19,100 tonnes of freight. The national carrier is the state-owned Air Ivoire. It provides domestic services and in 2003 operated international flights to Accra, Bamako, Conakry, Cotonou, Dakar, Douala, Libreville, Lomé, Niamey and Ouagadougou. There were direct flights in 2003 with other airlines to Addis Ababa, Banjul, Beirut, Bobo Dioulasso, Brazzaville, Brussels, Cairo, Casablanca, Freetown, Johannesburg, Lagos, Monrovia, Nairobi, Nouakchott, Paris, Pointe-Noire and Tripoli. In 2001 scheduled airline traffic of Côte d'Ivoire-based carriers flew 1m. km, carrying 46,000 passengers (all on international flights).

Shipping

The main port is Abidjan, which handled 22.1m. tonnes of foreign cargo in 2008. In Jan. 2009 there were two ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 1,000 GT.

Telecommunications

There were 223,200 fixed telephone lines in 2010 (11 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 14.91m. in 2010. There were 26 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 18,000 in 2005 (one per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There are 28 courts of first instance and three assize courts in Abidjan, Bouaké and Daloa, two courts of appeal in Abidjan and Bouaké, and a supreme court in Abidjan. Côte d'Ivoire abolished the death penalty in 2000.

The population in penal institutions under government control was 10,621 (55 per 100,000 of national population) in Dec. 2007.

Education

The adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 55.3% (64.7% among males and 45.3% among females). There were, in 2007, 2,179,801 pupils with 53,161 teaching staff in primary schools and (2000-01) 663,636 pupils with 23,184 teachers at secondary schools. In 2007 there were 156,772 students in higher education. There were three state universities and six other public higher education institutions in 2003, plus seven private institutions of higher education.

In 2008 expenditure on education came to 4.6% of GDP and 24.6% of total government spending.

Health

In 2006 there were four hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants. In 2004 there were 2,081 physicians, 339 dentistry personnel and 10,180 nursing and midwifery personnel.

RELIGION

In 2001 there were 6.3m. Muslims (mainly in the north) and 4.3m. Christians (chiefly Roman Catholics in the south). Although Christians are in the majority among Ivoirians, when Côte d'Ivoire's large immigrant population is taken into account Muslims are in the majority. Traditional animist beliefs are also practised. In Feb. 2012 the Roman Catholic church had one cardinal.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

UNESCO world heritage sites in Côte d'Ivoire are: Taï National Park (inscribed on the list in 1982); the Comoé National Park (1983); and the Mount Nimba Strict Nature Reserve (1981 and 1982), shared with Guinea.

Press

In 2005 there were 21 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 190,000.

Tourism

There were 479,000 foreign tourists in 2002; spending by tourists in 2007 (excluding passenger transport) totalled US$104m.

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Croatia was united with Hungary in 1091 and remained under Hungarian administration until the end of the First World War. On 1 Dec. 1918 Croatia became a part of the new Kingdom of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, which was renamed Yugoslavia in 1929. During the Second World War an independent fascist (Ustaša) state was set up under the aegis of the German occupiers. During the Communist period Croatia became one of the six 'Socialist Republics' constituting the Yugoslav federation led by Marshal Tito. With the collapse of Communism, an independence movement gained momentum.

In a referendum on 19 May 1991, 94.17% of votes cast were in favour of Croatia becoming an independent sovereign state with the option of joining a future Yugoslav confederation. The Krajina and other predominantly Serbian areas of Croatia wanted union with Serbia and seized power. Croatian forces and Serb insurgents backed by federal forces became embroiled in a conflict throughout 1991 until the arrival of a UN peacekeeping mission at the beginning of 1992 and the establishment of four UN peacekeeping zones ('pink zones'). In early May 1995 Croatian forces retook Western Slavonia from the Serbs and opened the Zagreb-Belgrade highway. In a 60-hour operation mounted on 4 Aug. 1995 the former self-declared Serb Republic of Krajina was occupied, provoking an exodus of 180,000 Serb refugees. Croats who had left the area in 1991 began to return. On 12 Nov. 1995 the Croatian government and Bosnian Serbs reached an agreement to place Eastern Slavonia, the last Croatian territory still in Bosnian Serb control, under UN administration.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Croatia is bounded in the north by Slovenia and Hungary, in the east by Serbia and Bosnia and Herzegovina and in the southeast by Montenegro. It includes the areas of Dalmatia, Istria and Slavonia, which no longer have administrative status. Its area is 56,542 sq. km. 2011 provisional census population, 4,290,612; population density, 75.9 per sq. km. The United Nations population estimate for 2011 was 4.40m.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 4.36m.

In 2005, 56.5% of the population lived in urban areas.

The area, 2011 provisional census population and capital of the 20 counties and one city:

Zagreb, the capital, had a 2011 population (provisional) of 686,568. Other major towns (with 2011 provisional census population): Split (165,893), Rijeka (127,498) and Osijek (83,496).

The official language is Croatian.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2007: births, 41,910 (9.4 per 1,000 population); deaths, 52,367 (11.8); marriages, 23,140 (5.2); divorces, 4,785 (1.1); suicides, 776 (17.5 per 100,000). Infant mortality, 2005, 6 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 2004-07, 0.0%. In 2006 the most popular age range for marrying was 25-29 for both males and females. Life expectancy at birth, 2007, was 72.6 years for males and 79.4 years for females. Fertility rate, 2008, 1.4 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Inland Croatia has a central European type of climate, with cold winters and hot summers, but the Adriatic coastal region experiences a Mediterranean climate with mild, moist winters and hot, brilliantly sunny summers with less than average rainfall. Average annual temperature and rainfall: Dubrovnik, 16.6°C and 1,051 mm. Zadar, 15.6°C and 963 mm. Rijeka, 14.3°C and 1,809 mm. Zagreb, 12.4°C and 1,000 mm. Osijek, 11.3°C and 683 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was adopted on 22 Dec. 1990 and was revised in both 2000 and 2001. The President is elected for renewable five-year terms. There is a unicameral Parliament (Hrvatski Sabor), consisting of 151 deputies; 140 members are elected from multi-seat constituencies for a four-year term, eight seats are reserved for national minorities and three members representing Croatsians abroad are chosen by proportional representation. The upper house, the Chamber of Counties, was abolished in 2001.

CURRENT LEADERS

Ivo Josipović

Position

President

Introduction

Ivo Josipović was sworn in as president on 18 Feb. 2010 after winning the second round of elections on 10 Jan. 2010 on an anti-corruption platform. His five-year term is largely ceremonial and he is expected to preside over Croatia's entry into the European Union, while seeking improved relations with the country's ex-Yugoslav neighbours.

Early Life

Josipović was born on 28 Aug. 1957 in Zagreb. He studied law at the University of Zagreb, qualifying for the bar in 1980. He returned as a lecturer in 1984, specializing in criminal procedure and international crime. In 1985 he gained an MA in criminal law and in 1994 received his PhD in criminal sciences. Josipović also pursued musical interests, graduating from the composition department of the Zagreb Music Academy in 1983. From 1987–2004 he taught at the Academy and has written over 50 compositions and won several awards for his work.

He began his political career in 1980 when he joined the League of Communists of Croatia (SKH). The party rebranded its image in the early 1990s, with Josipović helping to write the first statutes of the new Social Democratic Party of Croatia (SDP). In 1994 he retired from politics to work as an international law specialist in cooperation with the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia in The Hague. He was a key author of Croatia's genocide case against Serbia before the International Court of Justice.

In 2003 Josipović returned to politics. Elected to parliament as an independent MP, he was selected as vice-president of the SDP Representatives' Group in parliament. In 2005 he became a representative in the City of Zagreb assembly and was re-elected to parliament in 2007, formally rejoining the SDP a year later. On 12 July 2009 he was selected as the SDP presidential candidate and on 27 Dec. 2009 won the first round of voting with 32% of the vote. He received 60% in the second round to secure the presidency.

Career in Office

Josipović's top priority has been to fight corruption, a pre-requisite to Croatia's membership of the EU (negotiations for which were completed in June 2011, with accession anticipated in 2013). He has also faced the challenge of mending ties with ex-Yugoslav neighbours in the wake of the Balkan wars of the 1990s—most notably Serbia, which in Jan. 2010 filed a counter-genocide complaint against Croatia. In April 2010 Josipović went to the Bosnian parliament and expressed regret over Croatia's part in the Bosnian conflict. In July he visited the Serbian capital of Belgrade, heralding an improvement in bilateral relations that was further encouraged by the Serbian president's visit in Nov. to the Croatian city of Vukovar, the site of wartime civilian killings by Serb forces.

Zoran Milanović

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Zoran Milanović became prime minister in Dec. 2011. A lawyer and diplomat, he has promised sweeping reforms after leading a centre-left bloc to a landslide victory in parliamentary elections.

Early Life

Zoran Milanović was born on 30 Oct. 1966 in Zagreb (then in Yugoslavia), the son of an economist and a teacher. He spent his childhood in Trnje, a suburb of Zagreb, and graduated in law from Zagreb University in 1991. He trained in the city's commercial court for two years, before joining the then recently independent Croatia's ministry of foreign affairs under future prime minister Ivo Sanader. Milanović served on a UN mission to the disputed former Soviet territory of Nagorno-Karabakh before moving to Brussels in 1996 to serve on Croatia's mission to the EU and NATO.

Returning to Croatia in 1999, which was then under the premiership of Franjo Tuđman and his right-wing Croatian Democratic Union (HDZ) administration, Milanović joined the opposition Social Democratic Party of Croatia (SDP). Following the party's victory (in coalition with the Croatian Social Liberal Party and four minor parties) at the Jan. 2000 parliamentary election, Milanović worked in various diplomatic roles within the ministry of foreign affairs. After the ruling coalition lost at elections in Nov. 2003, Milanović joined the SDP's executive in 2004 and grew close to the party's founder and leader, Ivica Račan.

When Račan resigned because of ill health in early 2007, Milanović ran for the party leadership and unexpectedly won, defeating the interim leader, Željko Antunović, and other more experienced candidates. The closely fought parliamentary elections of Nov. 2007 eventually resulted in Sanader forming an HDZ-led coalition, with Milanović leading the opposition. Milanović was re-elected president of the SDP at the party's convention in May 2008.

Milanović led a centre-left opposition bloc known as Kukuriku ('Cock-a-doodle-do') to victory in the legislative elections of 4 Dec. 2011, securing 81 seats in the 151-member parliament. The HDZ took 47 seats after presiding over a series of corruption scandals, a stagnating economy and soaring unemployment.

Career in Office

Milanović is poised to push through a raft of reforms and public spending cuts to avoid a potential downgrade by credit rating agencies ahead of Croatia's accession to the EU in 2013. He has urged Croats to work 'more, harder, longer' to turn the economy around.

DEFENCE

Conscription was abolished on 1 Jan. 2008. Defence expenditure in 2008 totalled US$1,090m. (US$243 per capita), representing 1.6% of GDP.

Army

Personnel, 2007, 12,300 (around 1,300 conscripts). Paramilitary forces include an armed police of 3,000. There are 95,000 reserves.

Navy

In 2007 the fleet included two tactical submarines and two missile-armed corvettes. Total personnel in 2007 numbered 1,700 (250 conscripts), including two companies of marines.

Air Force

Personnel, 2007, 1,800 (including Air Defence and 200 conscripts). There were 12 combat capable aircraft (MiG-21s) in 2007.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Croatia applied for European Union membership in 2003 and was accepted as an official candidate country in 2004. Having signed the accession treaty in Dec. 2011 a referendum was held on 22 Jan. 2012 in which 66.7% of votes cast were in favour of membership. Croatia is expected to become a member in 2013.

ECONOMY

Agriculture contributed 7.4% of GDP in 2006, industry 31.6% and services 60.9%.

Overview

In the 1990s the economy was rocked by war and international isolation. Increased political stability from 2000 onwards saw the economy expanding at 4–5% annually prior to the 2008 global financial crisis, with per capita income reaching about 63% of the EU average. Structural reforms included a privatization programme and modernization of the bankruptcy, company and labour laws. There was also strong investment in fixed capital that had been neglected in the previous decade.

Tourism potential has attracted investment. Household consumption has expanded at rates slightly below economic growth but has acted as an anchor for domestic demand. The banking sector is almost entirely owned by foreign banks that have benefited from borrowing at low external interest rates and lending at higher rates in Croatia.

However, the global financial crisis led to declines in investment and private consumption, resulting in a fall in GDP. Public debt increased to more than 52% of GDP. The economy continued to decline in early 2010 and an Economic Recovery Programme was adopted in April 2010. Croatia completed EU accession negotiations in June 2011.

Currency

On 30 May 1994 the kuna (HRK; a name used in 1941–45) of 100 lipa replaced the Croatian dinar at one kuna = 1,000 dinars. Foreign exchange reserves were US$8,529m. in July 2005 and total money supply was 38,305m. kuna. Inflation was 6.1% in 2008 and 2.4% in 2009.

Budget

Budgetary central government revenue and expenditure (1m. kuna):

	2004	2005	2006
Revenue	80,464	85,653	95,236
Expenditure	83,131	87,858	95,950

Principal sources of revenue in 2006 were: taxes on goods and services, 47,546m. kuna; social security contributions, 33,877m. kuna. Main items of expenditure by economic type in 2006: social benefits, 43,445m. kuna; compensation of employees, 24,314m. kuna.

VAT is 25%.

Performance

The economy shrank by 6.0% in 2009 and 1.2% in 2010. Total GDP was US$60.9bn. in 2010.

Banking and Finance

The National Bank of Croatia (Governor, Željko Rohatinski) is the bank of issue. In 2010 there were 32 registered banks. The largest banks are Zagrebačka Banka, with assets in Dec. 2009 of US$18.2bn., and Privredna Banka Zagreb. There is a stock exchange in Zagreb.

Total foreign direct investment in 2010 was US$583m., down from US$2,911m. in 2009.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Croatia's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 5.4 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007 was 3.9m. kW. Output was 12.24bn. kWh in 2007, with consumption per capita 4,141 kWh in 2007.

Oil and Gas

In 2007, 768,000 tonnes of crude oil were produced. Natural gas output totalled 2.9bn. cu. metres in 2007; reserves were 34bn. cu. metres in 2005.

Minerals

Production (in 1,000 tonnes): salt (2006), 30.

Agriculture

Agriculture and fishing generate approximately 6% of GDP. Some 4-6% of the workforce were engaged in agriculture, hunting and forestry in 2008. Agricultural land totalled 1.3m. ha. in 2009; there were 863,000 ha. of arable land and 87,900 ha. of permanent crops. Production (in 1,000 tonnes, 2008): maize, 2,505; sugar beets, 1,270; wheat, 858; potatoes, 256; grapes, 185; sunflower seeds, 120; soybeans, 108.

Livestock, 2008: pigs, 1,104,000; sheep, 643,000; cattle, 454,000; chickens, 6.7m. Livestock products, 2009: milk, 838,000 tonnes; meat, 227,000 tonnes; eggs, 48,000 tonnes; cheese, 28,000 tonnes.

Main exports in 2004 were: machinery and transport equipment, 32.3%; miscellaneous manufactured articles, 17.8%; manufactured goods, 14.8%; mineral fuels, 11.3%; chemicals, 9.4%; food and live animals, 6.3%.

In 2004 the main import suppliers were (in US$1m.): Italy (2,819); Germany (2,569); Russia (1,206); Slovenia (1,179); Austria (1,131). Main export markets (in US$1m.): Italy (1,834); Bosnia and Herzegovina (1,154); Germany (895); Austria (757); Slovenia (601).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were 29,333 km of roads in 2010 (including 1,126 km of motorways and 6,929 km of highways, national and main roads). In 2010 there were 1,515,449 passenger cars, 4,877 buses and coaches, and 157,731 goods vehicles. 56m. passengers and 75m. tonnes of freight were carried by road transport in 2010. There were 426 deaths in road accidents in 2010.

Rail

There were 2,722 km of 1,435 mm gauge rail in 2009 (985 km electrified). In 2009 railways carried 74m. passengers and 12m. tonnes of freight. In Sept. 2010 the state-owned railway companies of Croatia, Serbia and Slovenia announced the creation of a joint venture called Cargo 10 to improve the management of freight trains along the route known as Corridor 10 that passes through all three countries.

Civil Aviation

The biggest international airports are Zagreb (Pleso), Split and Dubrovnik. The national carrier is Croatia Airlines. In 2004 scheduled airline traffic of Croatian-based carriers flew 12m. km, carrying 1,336,411 passengers (886,215 on international flights). In 2004 Zagreb handled 1,389,537 passengers (926,011 on international flights) and 7,692 tonnes of freight, Dubrovnik 860,672 passengers (704,331 on international flights) and Split 768,706 passengers (575,019 on international flights).

Shipping

Figures for 2010 show that 27.5m. passengers and 24.3m. tonnes of cargo were transported. In 2010 merchant shipping (passenger and cargo ships) totalled 1,625,210 GT, including liquid bulk carriers 554,805 GT.

Telecommunications

There were 1.87m. fixed telephone lines in 2010 (423.7 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 6.36m. in 2010. There were 603.2 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 1.50m. in 2009 (339.7 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The population in penal institutions in July 2007 was 4,127 (93 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

In 2009-10 there were 1,444 pre-school institutions with 121,433 children and 16,216 childcare workers; 2,131 primary schools with 361,052 pupils and 32,083 teachers; 713 secondary schools with 180,582 pupils and 24,004 teachers. In 2009-10 there were 132 institutes of higher education with 149,853 students and 15,863 academic staff. In 2009-10 there were seven universities (Dubrovnik, Osijek, Pula, Rijeka, Split, Zadar and Zagreb). Adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 98.8% (male, 99.5%; female, 98.1%).

In 2008 public spending on education came to 4.3% of GDP.

Health

In 2010 there were 69 hospitals with 25,017 beds; and 12,341 physicians, 3,121 dentists, 23,447 nurses, 2,851 pharmacists and 1,553 midwives.

Welfare

The official retirement age is 65 years (men) and 60 years (women). It was gradually increased in six-month increments over ten years from the 1999 levels of 60 (men) and 55 (women). The old-age pension is dependent on wages earned in relation to the average wage of all employed persons. The minimum old-age pension is defined for every year of the qualifying period as 0.825% of the average gross salary of all employees in 1998, adjusted until the date of entitlement. This amount (56.59 kuna at July 2009) is adjusted for inflation. The average unemployment benefit was 1,477.54 kuna in 2009.

In 2001 there were 3,890,000 Roman Catholics, 250,000 Serbian Orthodox and 100,000 Sunni Muslims. The remainder of the population were followers of other religions. In Feb. 2012 there was one cardinal.

CULTURE*World Heritage Sites

Croatia has seven UNESCO protected sites: the Old City of Dubrovnik (entered on the List in 1979 and 1994), known as the 'Pearl of the Adriatic'; the Historic Complex of Split with the Palace of Diocletian (1979), including Roman Emperor Diocletian's mausoleum, now the cathedral; Plitvice Lakes National Park (1979 and 2000), a series of lakes and waterfalls and a habitat for bears and wolves; the Episcopal Complex of the Euphrasian Basilica in the Historical Centre of Poreč (1997); the Historic City of Trogir (1997), a Venetian city based on a Hellenistic plan; the Cathedral of St James in Šibenik (2000), built in the Gothic and Renaissance styles between 1431–1535; and Stari Grad Plain (2008), agricultural land on the island of Hvar that was first cultivated by the Greeks in the 4th century BC.

Press

In 2008 there were 16 daily newspapers, of which 14 were in Croatian, one in English and one in Italian. The newspapers with the highest circulation are Jutarnji list (daily average of 133,000 copies in 2006), Večerni list (daily average of 108,000 copies) and 24sata (99,000).

Tourism

In 2005, 8,467,000 tourists visited Croatia (7,912,000 in 2004). Receipts in 2005 totalled US$7.5bn., up from US$6.8bn. in 2004.

Festivals

Croatia has a number of cultural and traditional festivals, including the International Folk Dance Festival in Zagreb (July); the Zagreb Summer Festival (July–Aug.); Dubrovnik Summer Festival (July–Aug.); Split Summer Festival (July–Aug.); Alka Festival (traditional medieval tilting), Sinj (Aug.). The best-known music festivals include Mars Festival in Zagreb (May), INmusic Festival near Zagreb (June) and Garden Festival near Zadar (July).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Cuba's first inhabitants were the Taino, Ciboney and Guanahatabey tribes. Christopher Columbus landed in 1492 and a permanent settlement was established by Diego Velázquez in 1511. Within 50 years oppression and European diseases virtually exterminated the indigenous population and African slaves were imported as replacements. In 1607 Havana was declared the capital.

Resistance to Spanish rule grew after the removal of Cuban delegates from the Spanish Cortes in 1837. Repeated offers by the USA to buy Cuba were rejected. Slavery was suppressed from the 1850s though not abolished until 1886. The first rebellion, the Ten-Year War, broke out in 1868 and was led by Gen. Máximo Gómez. An assembly was granted in 1869. However, José Martí y Pérez created the Cuban Revolutionary Party from New York and launched an invasion of Cuba in 1895 with Gómez and Antonio Maceo. The USA intervened in 1898, winning control of Cuba from Spain at the Treaty of Paris. Municipal elections in 1900 rejected annexationist policies and Cuba achieved independence in 1902. The Platt Amendment allowed for US intervention to preserve independence and stability and awarded the USA control of Guantánamo Bay. At the request of President Estrada Palma, US forces were installed on the island between 1906 and 1909. In 1912 and 1917 there were further interventions by American forces.

Gerardo Machado's dictatorial presidency began in 1925 and was ended by a coup in 1933. The Revolt of the Sergeants brought Fulgencio Batista y Zaldívar to power. The Platt Amendment was revoked and in 1940 a socially progressive constitution was inaugurated. Batista was returned at disputed elections in 1940 but was voted out of office four years later. He ran for re-election in 1952 but, with little chance of victory, led a bloodless coup before elections could be held, suspending the constitution and instigating a repressive and corrupt regime.

Fidel Castro, imprisoned in 1953 after a failed revolt, arrived from Mexico with 80 supporters in 1956. Castro and Che Guevara led a guerrilla war from the Sierra Maestra mountains and, despite US financial support, Batista fled after revolutionaries seized Havana in Jan. 1959. The USA recognized the new regime but relations soon deteriorated. Castro, as prime minister, launched a nationalization programme, seizing American assets and outlawing foreign land ownership. In Oct. 1960 the USA's trade embargo began and diplomatic relations were broken in Jan. 1961. Close relations between Cuba and the USSR provoked covert US support for the doomed Bay of Pigs invasion in April 1961, in which an offensive by a group of exiled Cubans was defeated by Castro's troops. Castro declared Cuba to be a socialist state. In 1962 the USA and USSR neared nuclear conflict during the Cuban Missile Crisis, with the US Navy imposing a blockade on Cuba from 22 Oct. until 22 Nov. to force the USSR to withdraw Soviet missile bases. In return, the USA guaranteed not to invade Cuba and, in a secret deal, to withdraw missiles from Turkey. Between 1965 and 1973, 250,000 Cubans left for America on Freedom Flights agreed between the two nations. In 1976 a new constitution consolidated Castro's power as head of state, government and the armed forces.

Cuba continued to receive financial aid and technical advice from the USSR until the early 1990s when subsidies were suspended. This led to a 40% drop in GDP between 1989 and 1993. The USA has maintained an economic embargo against the island and relations between Cuba and the USA have remained embittered, although contact between the two countries has been growing in recent years. From Jan. 2002 suspected al-Qaeda and Taliban prisoners were brought from Afghanistan to the military prison at the American naval base at Guantánamo Bay.

In July 2006 Castro was hospitalized and temporarily handed power to his brother, Raúl. When Fidel failed to appear at a series of high-profile presidential appointments, there was speculation that the power transfer would become permanent. In Feb. 2008 Fidel announced his resignation and was immediately replaced by Raúl.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The island of Cuba forms the largest and most westerly of the Greater Antilles group and lies 215 km (135 miles) south of the tip of Florida, USA. The area is 109,886 sq. km, and comprises the island of Cuba (104,341 sq. km); the Isle of Youth (Isla de la Juventud, formerly the Isle of Pines; 2,419 sq. km); and some 1,600 small isles ('cays'; 3,126 sq. km). Population, census (2002), 11,177,743, giving a density of 100.8 per sq. km. Estimate, Dec. 2010: 11,241,000. In 2005, 75.5% of the population were urban. The United Nations estimates that the population peaked in 2007 and has been slowly falling since then.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 11.23m.

At the 2002 census the area and population of the 14 provinces and the special Municipality of the Isle of Youth (Isla de la Juventud) were as follows:

	Area (sq. km)	Population
Ciudad de La Habana	721	2,201,610
Santiago de Cuba	6,156	1,036,281
Holguín	9,293	1,021,321
Villa Clara	8,412	817,395
Granma	8,375	822,452
Camagüey	15,615	784,178
Pinar del Río	10,904	726,574
La Habana	5,732	711,066
Matanzas	11,803	670,427
Las Tunas	6,588	525,485
Guantánamo	6,168	507,118
Sancti Spiritus	6,737	460,328
Ciego de Avila	6,783	411,766
Cienfuegos	4,180	395,183
Isla de la Juventud	2,419	86,559

Two new provinces, Artemisa and Mayabeque, were created in Jan. 2011 and La Habana was abolished. Ciudad de la Habana was renamed La Habana. The capital city, Havana, had a population in 2002 of 2,201,610. Other major cities (2002 census populations in 1,000): Santiago de Cuba (423), Camagüey (302), Holguín (270), Santa Clara (210), Guantánamo (208), Bayamo (145), Las Tunas (144), Cienfuegos (141), Pinar del Río (139) and Matanzas (127).

The official language is Spanish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 births, 122,569; deaths, 86,357; marriages, 61,852; divorces, 35,882; suicides, 1,357. Rates, 2008 (per 1,000 population): birth, 10.9; death, 7.7; marriage, 5.5; divorce, 3.2; suicide, 12.1 per 100,000 population. Infant mortality rate, 2008, 4.7 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 2000–05, 0.2%. Life expectancy, 2005–07: 76.0 years for males and 80.0 for females. The fertility rate in 2008 was 1.6 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Situated in the sub-tropical zone, Cuba has a generally rainy climate, affected by the Gulf Stream and the N.E. Trades, although winters are comparatively dry after the heaviest rains in Sept. and Oct. Hurricanes are liable to occur between June and Nov. Havana, Jan. 72°F (22.2°C), July 82°F (27.8°C). Annual rainfall 48" (1,224 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A Communist Constitution came into force on 24 Feb. 1976. It was amended in July 1992 to permit direct parliamentary elections and in June 2002 to make the country's socialist system 'irrevocable'.

Legislative power is vested in the National Assembly of People's Power, which meets twice a year and consists of 614 deputies elected for a five-year term by universal suffrage. Citizens are entitled to vote at the age of 16. Lists of candidates are drawn up by mass organizations (trade unions, etc.). The National Assembly elects a 31-member Council of State as its permanent organ. The Council of State's President, who is head of state and of government, nominates and leads a Council of Ministers approved by the National Assembly.

National Anthem

'Al combate corred bayameses' ('Run, Bayamans, to the combat'); words and tune by P. Figueredo.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the National Assembly were held on 20 Jan. 2008. 50% of candidates must come from municipal assemblies, with the other 50% being candidates of national or provincial importance. All 614 candidates received the requisite 50% of votes for election.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

President: Gen. Raúl Castro Ruz (b. 1931) became President of the Council of State and of the Council of Ministers on 24 Feb. 2008. He is also First Secretary of the Cuban Communist Party.

In March 2012 the government comprised:

First Vice-President of the Council of State and of the Council of Ministers: José Ramón Machado.

Vice-Presidents of the Council of Ministers: José Ramón Fernández Álvarez, Ulises Rosales del Toro, Ramiro Valdés Menéndez, Ricardo Cabrisas Ruiz, Marino Murillo Jorge, Antonio Enrique Lusson Batlle. Secretary of the Council of Ministers: Brig. Gen. José Amado Ricardo Guerra.

CURRENT LEADERS

Raúl Modesto Castro Ruz

Position
President

Introduction

Raúl Castro was elected president by the National Assembly of People's Power on 24 Feb. 2008. His five-year term began when he replaced his brother, Fidel, who had held office for 49 years. While less charismatic than his brother, he has preserved the essence of Cuba's brand of socialism.

Early Life

Raúl Castro was born on 3 June 1931 in Birán, in the Oriente province (now Santiago de Cuba) in eastern Cuba. His father was a sugar plantation owner of Spanish origin and his mother a housemaid. After expulsion from his first school Raúl attended the Jesuit-run Colegio Dolores in Santiago and the Belén School in Havana, before graduating as a sergeant from military college. He attended the University of Havana until 1953, when his involvement in politics cut short his studies.

Raúl was a member of the Socialist Youth group, affiliated to the Moscow-orientated Popular Socialist Party. Although the party supported President Fulgencio Batista, Raúl's travels to the Soviet bloc in 1953 prompted him to turn against Batista which culminated that year in the failed 26 July attack on the Moncada barracks alongside brother Fidel. Both were imprisoned but then exiled to Mexico 22 months later, where Raúl reputedly introduced Che Guevara into his brother's circle. Raúl subsequently helped organize the 26 July Revolutionary Movement and the failed coup attempt of 1956.

Raúl found refuge in the Sierra Maestra mountains before taking charge of the military campaign in the east of the country. Military victory was achieved in 1959 and Batista went into exile. Raúl secured his place as Fidel's right hand man, politically and militarily. He was appointed minister for the Revolutionary Armed Forces (FAR) and played a key role during the Bay of Pigs invasion of 1961 and in the Cuban missile crisis the following year.

In 1965 he was promoted to the Cuban Communist Party (PCC) Politburo and made second secretary of the central committee behind Fidel. In 1972 he became first vice premier and four years later the new National Assembly of People's Power elected him vice president. The Castro hierarchy was endorsed with total support at each of the congressional party sessions from 1975–97. As vice president he was pivotal in the close relationship with the Eastern European communist bloc until the 1990s when he engineered the economic shift away from former Soviet dependency and introduced some freedom in the agricultural sector. From 2000–02 his public profile grew as he stood in for Fidel on diplomatic tours of China and South East Asia.

When Fidel underwent abdominal surgery in July 2006, Raúl became acting president. On 19 Feb. 2008 Fidel announced his formal resignation and Raúl was elected his successor by the National Assembly nine days later.

Career in Office

Raúl's key challenges have been economic and he promised to reduce red tape and to revise the dual-currency system. Early signs of greater market freedom included allowing Cubans to stay in tourist hotels and rent cars and the lifting of bans on ownership of consumer products such as mobile phones, computers and DVD players (although such products remain unaffordable to average citizens).

In mid-2008 the government relaxed restrictions on the amount of idle state-owned land available to private farmers and announced plans to abandon salary equality in a radical departure from Marxist principles. In the wake of two hurricanes in 2008 that devastated homes and crops in Cuba, a US offer of emergency aid was rejected by Raúl, who instead demanded a lifting of the longstanding US trade embargo.

In March 2009 and again in Jan. 2011 the Obama administration eased the US embargo, lifting restrictions on remittances and visits to Cuba by Cuban-Americans. Despite this slight thaw in relations and Cuba's acute economic problems, Raúl has continued to crack down on political dissent. Nevertheless, in Sept. 2010 he unveiled limited plans to further liberalize the economy by laying off thousands of state employees while legalizing self-employment in many areas and allowing more private enterprise. In Nov. he also announced the convening of a long-overdue PCC congress to be held in April 2011 (the first since 1997) to approve the plans, at which he was elected first secretary of the party.

In June 2009 the Organization of American States voted to end Cuba's diplomatic suspension dating back to 1962.

DEFENCE

The National Defence Council is headed by the president of the republic. Conscription is for two years.

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$2,296m. (US$201 per capita), representing 4.0% of GDP.

Army

The strength was estimated at 38,000 in 2006, with 39,000 reservists. Border Guard and State Security forces total 26,500. The Territorial Militia is estimated at 1m. (reservists), all armed. In addition there is a Youth Labour Army of 70,000 and a Civil Defence Force of 50,000.

Navy

Personnel in 2006 totalled about 3,000 including some 550 marines. The Navy has five patrol and coastal combatants, five mine warfare vessels and one support vessel. Main bases are at Cabañas and Holguín. The USA still occupies the Guantánamo naval base.

Air Force

In 2006 the Air Force had a strength of some 8,000 and about 130 combat aircraft of which only around 25 are thought to be operational. They include MiG-29, MiG-23 and MiG-21 jet fighters.

ECONOMY

Services account for about 68% of GDP, industry 27% and agriculture 5%.

Overview

Cuba is classified as a middle income country with a GDP per capita of US$2,500. After the withdrawal of annual subsidies worth US$4-6bn. from the USSR in 1990, the economy fell into deep recession and has had to cope with falling tourism, low export prices and hurricane damage. The US trade embargo, imposed in 1963, blocks access to funds from the IMF and the World Bank but the UN continues to operate in Cuba. The black market is bigger than the legal economy and basic economic activities (such as the sale of milk and bread) take place in the informal sector.

Following the collapse of the Soviet Union, the government helped stimulate growth through legalization of the US dollar in shops and other businesses. However, commercial transactions in dollars were banned in Nov. 2004 in response to tighter US sanctions. The economy has received substantial aid from Venezuela.

Damage from Hurricanes Gustav and Ike in 2008 resulted in damage valued at 20% of GDP. The global economic crisis also had a significant impact. A combination of higher food prices, a decline in the value of exports (particularly nickel, Cuba's principal export) and tighter conditions for external financing, led to a significant drop in growth during 2009. Fiscal revenues declined following the crisis, leading to policy-tightening measures from the government, including rationing of electricity. A US$600m. loan from China helped ease external debt pressures.

Currency

There are two currencies in Cuba. The official currency ('moneda nacional') is the Cuban peso (CUP) of 100 centavos. The Convertible peso (CUC), introduced in 1994 (pegged since April 2005 at 1 Convertible peso = US$1.08), is the 'tourist' currency. The US dollar ceased to be legal tender in 2004. 9,710m. pesos were in circulation in 1998. Inflation is low, averaging 1.8% between 1995-2002.

Budget

The 2006 revenue totalled 30,012m. pesos and expenditure 31,742m. pesos. Hard-currency earners and the self-employed became liable to a 10-50% income tax in Nov. 1995.

Performance

Cuba's economic growth was officially put as 4.3% in 2008, down from 7.5% in 2007 and 12.5% in 2006.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank of Cuba (President, Ernesto Medina Villaveirán) replaced the National Bank of Cuba as the central bank in June 1997. On 14 Oct. 1960 all banks were nationalized. Changes to the banking structure beginning in 1996 divested the National Bank of its commercial functions, and created new commercial and investment institutions. The Grupa Nueva Banca has majority holdings in each institution of the new structure. There were eight commercial banks in March 2002 and 18 local non-banking financial institutions. In addition, there were 13 representative offices of foreign banks and four representative offices of non-banking financial institutions. All insurance business was nationalized in Jan. 1964. A National Savings Bank was established in 1983.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Cuba's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 2.3 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 5.4m. kW in 2007. Production was 17.6bn. kWh in 2007; consumption per capita in 2007 was 1,564 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Crude oil production (2007), 2.91m. tonnes. There were known natural gas reserves of 71bn. cu. metres in 2005. Natural gas production (2007), 1.2bn. cu. metres.

Minerals

Iron ore abounds, with deposits estimated at 3,500m. tonnes; output (2006), 7.8m. tonnes. The output of salt was 180,000 tonnes in 2006; nickel, 74,000 tonnes (2005); chromite, 34,000 tonnes (2005); lime, 34,000 tonnes (2005). Other minerals are cobalt and silica. Nickel is Cuba's second largest foreign exchange earner, after tourism. Gold is also worked.

Agriculture

In 1959 all land over 30 caballerías was nationalized and eventually turned into state farms. In 2007 there were 3.0m. ha. of arable land and 1.8m. ha. of permanent crops. Under legislation of 1993, state farms were reorganized as 'units of basic co-operative production'. Unit workers select their own managers and are paid an advance on earnings. In 1963 private holdings were reduced to a maximum of five caballerías. In 1994 farmers were permitted to trade on free market principles after state delivery quotas had been met. In 2008 private farmers were granted access to underused government land in the form of ten-year leases in an effort to boost food production and curb dependence on imported produce.

During the 1980s average annual sugar production totalled 7.5m. tonnes making it one of the country's most important crops. However, the negative economic impact of the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991 followed by a series of weather disasters in subsequent years resulted in production shrinking to 3.2m. tonnes in 1998, the smallest crop for 50 years. In 2002 the government closed over half of the 156 sugar mills and by 2008 production had fallen to 1.4m. tonnes with the country relying on imports to meet domestic demand. Production of other crops in 2008 was (in 1,000 tonnes): bananas, 758; tomatoes, 576; rice, 436; sweet potatoes, 375; cassava, 340; maize, 326; oranges, 200; potatoes, 196; pomelos, 166.

In 2008 livestock included 3.8m. cattle; 1.9m. pigs; 1.1m. goats; 565,000 horses; 277,500 sheep; 29m. chickens.

Forestry

Cuba had 2.71m. ha. of forests in 2005, representing 24.7% of the land area. These forests contain valuable cabinet woods, such as mahogany and cedar, besides dye-woods, fibres, gums, resins and oils. Cedar is used locally for cigar boxes, and mahogany is exported. In 2007, 2.35m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced.

Fisheries

Fishing ranks among the most important export industries. The total catch was 29,710 tonnes in 2005, of which 28,149 tonnes were from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

In 2008 manufacturing accounted for 14% of GDP. All industrial enterprises used to be state-controlled, but in 1995 the economy was officially stated to comprise state property, commercial property based on activity by state enterprises, joint co-operative and private property. Production in 2007 (in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 1,812; raw sugar (2008), 1,446; residual fuel oil, 940; distillate fuel oil, 464; sulphuric acid, 428; petrol, 392; wheat and blended flour, 391; crude steel and steel semi-finished products, 247; televisions, 118,300 units; clay building bricks, 24.9m. units; cigarettes, 13.8bn. units; shoes, 721,000 pairs; soft drinks, 350.6m. litres; beer, 250.4m. litres; spirits and liqueurs, 95.1m. litres; mineral water, 33.2m. litres; cotton fabrics, 6.1m. sq. metres.

Labour

In 2005 the labour force was 6,679,900, with 4,722,500 in employment. Self-employment was legalized in 1993. Under legislation of Sept. 1994 employees made redundant must be assigned to other jobs or to strategic social or economic tasks; failing this, they are paid 60% of former salary.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt to non-communist countries was US$12.3bn. in 2000. Since July 1992 foreign investment has been permitted in selected state enterprises, and Cuban companies have been able to import and export without seeking government permission. Foreign ownership is recognized in joint ventures. A free-trade zone opened at Havana in 1993. In 1994 the productive, real estate and service sectors were opened to foreign investment. Legislation of 1995 opened all sectors of the economy to foreign investment except defence, education and health services. 100% foreign-owned investments and investments in property are now permitted.

The Helms-Burton Law of March 1996 gives US nationals the right to sue foreign companies investing in Cuban estate expropriated by the Cuban government.

Imports and Exports

In 2006 imports (c.i.f.) totalled US$10,173.6m. and exports (f.o.b.) US$2,980.2m. The principal exports are nickel, tobacco and medical products. Sugar used to account for more than half of Cuba's export revenues, but revenues have been gradually declining and constituted less than 1% of the total in 2006.

In 2005 the chief import sources (in US$1m.) were: Venezuela (2,021.5); China (926.2); Spain (702.9); USA (520.7); Canada (408.9). The chief export markets (in US$1m.) were: Netherlands (645.1); Canada (471.4); Venezuela (434.2); Spain (159.5); China (113.3).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2002 there were estimated to be 60,856 km of roads (including 638 km of motorways), of which 29,819 km were paved. Vehicles in use in 2008 included 236,881 passenger cars and 171,081 trucks and vans. There were 1,403 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 2008.

Rail

There were 4,066 km of public railway (1,435 mm gauge) in 2005, of which 140 km was electrified. Passenger-km travelled in 2007 came to 1,285m. and freight tonne-km to 783m. In addition, the large sugar estates have 7,162 km of lines in total on 1,435 mm, 914 mm and 760 mm gauges.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Havana (Jose Martí). The state airline Cubana operates all services internally, and in 2003 had international flights from Havana to Bogotá, Buenos Aires, Cancún, Caracas, Curaçao, Fort de France, Guatemala City, Guayaquil, Kingston, Las Palmas, London, Madrid, Mexico City, Montego Bay, Montreal, Moscow, Panama City, Paris, Pointe-à-Pitre, Quito, Rome, San José (Costa Rica), Santiago, Santo Domingo, São Paulo and Toronto. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Cuban-based carriers flew 19m. km, carrying 664,000 passengers (429,000 on international flights). In 2001 Havana Jose Martí International handled 2,472,300 passengers (2,056,500 on international flights) and 19,302 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

There are 11 ports, the largest being Havana, Cienfuegos and Mariel. In Jan. 2009 there were 15 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 32,000 GT.

Telecommunications

There were 984,400 telephone subscribers in 2005 (87.4 for every 1,000 persons), including 134,500 mobile phone subscribers. There were 377,000 PCs in use (33.5 for every 1,000 persons) in 2005 and internet users numbered 190,000.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There is a Supreme Court in Havana and seven regional courts of appeal. The provinces are divided into judicial districts, with courts for civil and criminal actions, and municipal courts for minor offences. The civil code guarantees aliens the same property and personal rights as those enjoyed by nationals.

The 1959 Agrarian Reform Law and the Urban Reform Law passed on 14 Oct. 1960 have placed certain restrictions on both. Revolutionary Summary Tribunals have wide powers.

The death penalty is still in force. There were three executions in 2003, but none since then.

The population in penal institutions in Nov. 2006 was approximately 60,000 (531 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Education is compulsory (between the ages of six and 14), free and universal. In 2007 there were 883,132 pupils in primary school and 91,530 teaching staff; and 898,833 secondary school pupils with 93,311 teaching staff. There were 864,846 students and 135,800 academic staff in higher education in 2007.

There are four universities, plus ten teacher training, two agricultural, four medical and ten other higher educational institutions.

The adult literacy rate was estimated at 99.8% in 2009.

In 2007 public expenditure on education came to 13.6% of GNI and 20.6% of total government spending.

Health

At 31 Dec. 2008 there were 74,552 physicians, 107,761 nurses and 2,962 pharmacists. There were 217 hospitals in 2008 with 43,434 beds. An additional 23,834 beds were provided by other health care units.

Free medical services are provided by the state polyclinics, though a few doctors still have private practices.

Welfare

The official retirement age is 60 (men) or 55 (women). However, the qualifying age falls to 55 (men) or 50 (women) if the last 12 years of employment or 75% of employment was in dangerous or arduous work. In 2008 plans were announced to raise the retirement ages to 65 (men) and 60 (women) by 2015. The minimum pension in 2003 was 59 pesos a month, or 79 pesos a month, or 80% of wages, depending on average earnings and the number of years of employment. The maximum pension is 90% of average earnings.

Cuba has a sickness and maternity support programme.

RELIGION

Religious liberty was constitutionally guaranteed in July 1992. 40% of the population was estimated to be Roman Catholic in 2001. In 1994 Cardinal Jaime Ortega (b. 1936) was nominated Primate by Pope John Paul II. In Feb. 2012 there was one cardinal. In 2002 there were 180 Roman Catholic priests, approximately half of them foreign nationals. There is a seminary in Havana which had 61 students in 1996. There is a bishop of the American Episcopal Church in Havana; there are congregations of Methodists in Havana and in the provinces as well as Baptists and other denominations. Cults of African origin (mainly Santería) still persist.

World Heritage Sites

There are nine UNESCO sites in Cuba: Old Havana and its fortifications (inscribed in 1982), Trinidad and the Valley de los Ingenios (19th century sugar mills; 1988), San Pedro de la Roca Castle in Santiago de Cuba (1997), Desembarco del Granma National Park (marine terraces; 1999), Viñales Valley (1999), the 19th-century coffee plantations at Sierra Maestra (2000), Alejandro de Humboldt National Park (2001), the urban historic centre of Cienfuegos (2005) and the historic centre of Camagüey (2008).

Press

There were (2006) four national daily newspapers and 14 regional and local dailies with a combined circulation of 1.8m. The most widely read newspaper is the Communist Party's Granma.

Tourism

Tourism is Cuba's largest foreign exchange earner. Between 2007 and 2008 tourist spending increased by 6%. There were 2,316,000 foreign tourists in 2008 (2,119,000 in 2007). Total receipts from tourism in 2008 amounted to 2,099bn. convertible pesos.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Cyprus has been settled since the early Neolithic period in the 9th millennium BC. During the 2nd millennium BC Greek colonies were established and Greek culture predominated. Cyprus then came under Assyrian and Egyptian rule, subsequently becoming part of the Persian Empire. In the 2nd and 1st centuries BC the island was Hellenized. It became a Roman province in 58 BC and remained within the Roman Empire for most of the next three centuries, when Christianity was adopted.

The island became part of the Byzantine Empire in AD 364. In 488 the Church of Cyprus was confirmed as independent. Successive Arab invasions in the 7th century led to joint rule by Arabs and Byzantines until 965, when Byzantium regained sole rule. From 1191 Cyprus was attacked by Crusaders and in 1193 it became a Frankish kingdom under Guy de Lusignan. The Venetians ruled it as a dependency from 1489–1571, when it was taken by the Ottoman Turks. Under the Ottomans, the population was divided between Muslim Turks and Christian Greeks. After Greece achieved independence in 1829, some Greek Cypriots called for a union between Cyprus and Greece. On 4 June 1878 Great Britain and the Ottomans signed the Cyprus Convention, which gave Cyprus to Britain as a protectorate, in return for Britain supporting Turkey against Russia. In 1914, in response to Turkey's alliance with Germany, Britain annexed Cyprus. On 1 May 1925 it became a Crown Colony.

In the 1930s Greek Cypriots began campaigning for union with Greece (enosis). In 1955 the EOKA (National Organization of Cypriot Fighters), an anti-British guerrilla movement, was formed, led by Archbishop Makarios, head of the Greek Orthodox Church in Cyprus. In 1959 Greek and Turkish Cypriots agreed a constitution for an independent Cyprus and Makarios was elected president. On 16 June 1960 Cyprus became an independent state.

In Dec. 1963 conflict over proposed changes to the power-sharing mechanisms led to the Turkish Cypriots withdrawing from government. Fighting broke out and a UN peacekeeping force was deployed in 1964. Further fighting occurred in 1967–68, after which the Turkish Cypriots formed a provisional administration to run their community's affairs. Some Turkish Cypriots began to call for taksim, division of the island. On 15 July 1974 the Greek Cypriot National Guard staged a coup, with backing from Athens, and deposed President Makarios. On 20 July 1974 Turkey invaded. Turkish forces rapidly occupied the northern third of the island and, as the coup collapsed, enforced partition between north and south. During the fighting, and later as part of a UN-supervised population transfer, 200,000 Greek Cypriots moved south, while an estimated 65,000 Turkish Cypriots migrated north.

In Dec. 1974 Makarios returned as president. In 1975 a Turkish Cypriot Federated State was proclaimed in the north, with Rauf Denktaş its president. In 1983 the Turkish state unilaterally proclaimed itself the 'Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus' ('TRNC'). UN-sponsored peace talks continued without success throughout the 1980s. In 1991 the UN rejected Rauf Denktaş' demands for recognition of the 'TRNC', including the right to secession. In 1998 the Greek and Cypriot governments rejected Denktaş' proposal that the Greek and Turkish communities should join in a federation recognizing 'the equal and sovereign status of Cyprus' Greek and Turkish parts'.

In 2002 Cyprus was one of ten countries to be granted EU membership starting in 2004; the 'TRNC' would be included only if UN-brokered talks to reunify the country succeeded. In Nov. 2002 the UN presented a peace plan to the Greek Cypriot and Turkish Cypriot leaders for a 'common' state with two 'component' states and a rotating presidency. In March 2003 UN-brokered talks to pave the way for reunification collapsed. However, as a goodwill measure the 'TRNC' opened the 'Green Line' separating the island's two sectors in April 2003. In a referendum held in the Greek-speaking and the Turkish-speaking areas on 24 April 2004, Turkish Cypriots voted in favour of a UN plan to reunite the island but Greek Cypriots voted overwhelmingly against. This result meant that after EU accession, EU benefits and laws would apply only to Greek Cypriots. On 1 May 2004, under these conditions, Cyprus became a member of the EU.

In Dec. 2004 Turkey extended its EU customs union agreement to Cyprus but declared that this did not amount to a recognition of Cyprus. In 2006 at UN-sponsored talks, a series of confidence building measures were agreed by Greek and Turkish Cypriots. However, in Nov. 2006 EU-Turkish talks on Cyprus broke down. Hopes of finding a solution were boosted with the election in March 2008 of President Dimitris Christofias who vowed to resurrect negotiations with Turkey. A month later the Ledra Street crossing that had symbolized the island's division since its closure 44 years earlier was reopened.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The island lies in the Mediterranean, about 60 km off the south coast of Turkey and 90 km off the coast of Syria. Area, 9,251 sq. km (3,572 sq. miles). The Turkish-occupied area is 3,355 sq. km. Population of Cyprus by ethnic group:

Ethnic group	1960 census	1973 census	1992	2002
Greek Cypriot	452,291	498,511	599,200	642,600
Turkish Cypriot	104,942	116,000	94,500 <sup>1</sup>	87,400 <sup>1</sup>
Others	16,333	17,267	20,000	72,500 <sup>2</sup>

The 2011 provisional census population (government-controlled area only) was 838,897.

69.3% of the population lived in urban areas in 2005. Principal towns with populations (2011 census, provisional): Nicosia (the capital), 238,547; Limassol, 179,937; Larnaca, 84,511; Paphos, 62,098.

As a result of the Turkish occupation of the northern part of Cyprus, 0.2m. Greek Cypriots were displaced and forced to find refuge in the south. The urban centres of Famagusta, Kyrenia and Morphou were completely evacuated. See below for details on the 'Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus'. (The 'TRNC' was unilaterally declared as a 'state' in 1983 in the area of the Republic of Cyprus, which has been under Turkish occupation since 1974, when Turkish forces invaded the island. The establishment of the 'TRNC' was declared illegal by UN Security Resolutions 541/83 and 550/84. The 'TRNC' is not recognized by any country in the world except Turkey). Nicosia is a divided city, with the UN-patrolled Green Line passing through it.

Greek and Turkish are official languages. English is widely spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009 births, 9,608; deaths, 5,182; marriages, 12,769; divorces, 1,738. Rates, 2009 (per 1,000 population): birth, 12.0; death, 6.5; marriage (residents of Cyprus only), 7.9; divorce, 2.2. Life expectancy at birth, 2007, was 77.3 years for males and 81.9 years for females. Population growth rate, 2009, 0.8%; infant mortality, 2009, 3.3 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 1.5 children per woman. In 2009 the average age of first marriage (residents of Cyprus only) was 29.5 years for men and 27.4 years for women.

CLIMATE

The climate is Mediterranean, with very hot, dry summers and variable winters. Maximum temperatures may reach 112°F (44.5°C) in July and Aug., but minimum figures may fall to 22°F (-5.5°C) in the mountains in winter, when snow is experienced. Rainfall is generally between 10" and 27" (250 and 675 mm) and occurs mainly in the winter months, but it may reach 48" (1,200 mm) in the Troodos mountains. Nicosia, Jan. 50°F (10.0°C), July 83°F (28.3°C). Annual rainfall 19.6" (500 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the 1960 constitution executive power is vested in a President elected for a five-year term by universal suffrage, and exercised through a Council of Ministers appointed by him or her. The House of Representatives exercises legislative power. It is elected by universal suffrage for five-year terms, and consists of 80 members, of whom 56 are elected by the Greek Cypriot and 24 by the Turkish Cypriot community. As from Dec. 1963 the Turkish Cypriot members have ceased to attend, and the 24 seats allocated to the Turkish Cypriot community are no longer contested. Voting is compulsory, and is by preferential vote in a proportional representation system with reallocation of votes at national level.

National Anthem

'Imnos eis tin Eleftherian' ('Hymn to Freedom'); words by Dionysios Solomos, tune by N. Mantzaros.

(Same as Greece.)

CURRENT LEADERS

Dimitris Christofias

Position

President

Introduction

Dimitris Christofias became the European Union's only communist head of state when he was sworn in as president in Feb. 2008. Christofias, the leader of the far-left Progressive Party of the Working People (AKEL), was elected after two rounds of presidential elections. He vowed to pursue talks with the 'Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus'/'TRNC' to find a solution to the division of the island.

Early Life

Christofias was born on 29 Aug. 1946 in Kato Dikomo, Kyrenia province, which is now under Turkish control. His father was a member of the Pancyprian Federation of Labour (PEO), an umbrella organization of trade unions in Cyprus with close ties to the AKEL. Christofias attended the Nicosia Commercial Lyceum where he joined the Pancyprian United Student Organization (PEOM) at the age of 14. In 1969 he became a member of AKEL, PEO and the United Democratic Youth Organization (EDON; AKEL's youth wing). At the fifth congress of EDON held the same year, he was elected to the central council. From 1969-74 Christofias studied at the Institute of Social Sciences and the Academy of Social Sciences in Moscow, where he graduated with a doctorate in history.

On his return to Cyprus in 1974, Christofias was elected to the post of central organizing secretary of EDON. In 1976 he was elected member of the Nicosia-Kyrenia district committee of AKEL and the following year became general secretary of EDON. He was appointed to the AKEL central committee in 1982 and was elected a member of the political bureau in 1986. In 1987 he resigned as general secretary of EDON to take on his new post on the secretariat of the AKEL central committee and in April 1988 was made general secretary, a post he still holds.

In the 1991 parliamentary elections Christofias was voted into the House of Representatives, winning re-election in 1996 and 2001. On 7 June 2001 he became president of the House and retained the post in 2006. In his capacity as AKEL general secretary and president of the House, Christofias was a member of the national council, the advisory body to the president on the 'Cyprus problem'.

Ahead of the 2008 presidential election Christofias campaigned on finding a solution to reunite the divided island—despite backing the 2004 rejection of a UN reunification plan. In the first round of voting he came second with 33.3% of the vote, displacing the incumbent Tassos Papadopoulos of DIKO (Democratic Party). In the second round he received the support of DIKO and defeated right-winger Ioannis Kasoulidis, obtaining 53.4%.

Career in Office

Despite widespread reservations about his communist background, Christofias promised to preserve the country's market economy. He also quickly kick-started talks with Northern Cyprus, meeting Turkish Cypriot leader Mehmet Ali Talat in March 2008. Agreement was reached on reopening a key crossing in the divided capital, Nicosia, and they declared their intention to relaunch formal reunification talks. Meeting again in May, they acknowledged their differences but reaffirmed their commitment to 'a bi-zonal, bi-communal federation with political equality'. Following a further review in July, Christofias and Talat met again in Nicosia in Sept. to begin direct intensive negotiations.

Substantive progress was nevertheless slow, reflecting the underlying fragility of the peace process and the complexity of the issues of contention, such as governance and power-sharing, territorial adjustment, property ownership and security guarantees. In addition, parliamentary and presidential elections in the 'TRNC', in April 2009 and April 2010 respectively, were won by the right-wing nationalist National Unity Party and its hardline leader Derviş Eroğlu, casting doubts on the prospects for further progress towards a reunification settlement.

Parliamentary elections for the House of Representatives in May 2011, which resulted in a narrow victory for the right-wing opposition DISI party, reduced Christofias' room for manoeuvre in negotiations. His political position was further undermined in Aug. when DIKO withdrew from the coalition government. At the same time, the already strained public finances came under increasing pressure in July following a munitions blast that knocked out the country's main power station, and in the same month Cyprus' international credit rating was downgraded.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 24 months. Defence expenditure in 2008 totalled US$537m. (US$503 per capita), representing 2.2% of GDP. In 1998 the president cancelled a US$450m. contract with Russia for the deployment of S-300 anti-aircraft missiles on the island and negotiated to place them on Crete instead.

National Guard

Total strength (2007) 10,000 (8,700 conscripts). There is also a paramilitary force of some 500 armed police.

There are two British bases (Army and Royal Air Force) and some 3,250 personnel. Greek (1,150) and UN peacekeeping (909 uniformed personnel; UNFICYP) forces are also stationed on the island.

There are approximately 36,000 Turkish troops stationed in the occupied area of Cyprus. The Turkish Cypriot Security Force amounts to around 5,000 troops, with 26,000 reservists and a paramilitary armed police of approximately 150.

Navy

The Maritime Wing of the National Guard operates six vessels. In the Turkish-occupied area of Cyprus the Coast Guard operates six patrol craft.

Air Force

The Air Wing of the National Guard operates a handful of aircraft and 16 attack helicopters, including 12 Mi-35s.

ECONOMY

Overview

The leading economic sectors are tourism, financial services and real estate. There is an active insurance market and a developing securities market. Following an invitation in 2002 to join the EU, Cyprus has adopted stringent policies to meet EU requirements. The southern part of Cyprus became an EU member in 2004 and adopted the euro as the national currency in Jan. 2008. Major changes in regulatory and institutional structures have been implemented since 2004, including low tax incentives targeted to attract international corporations to the island.

The economy expanded at around 4% per annum for several years before the global downturn but in 2009 it shrank by 1.7%. The tourism and construction sectors have experienced the brunt of this decline.

Though there have been attempts to develop the northern part of Cyprus, where the informal market comprises 30–40% of the economy, little progress has been made in bringing the economies together. The 'Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus' lacks an independent monetary policy, suffers from high inflation and relies on Turkey for fiscal transfers and trade. Turkey provides US$400m. annually in aid.

Currency

On 1 Jan. 2008 the euro (EUR) replaced the Cyprus pound (CYP) as the legal currency of Cyprus at the irrevocable conversion rate of £C0.585274 to one euro. Inflation was 2.2% in both 2006 and 2007, 4.4% in 2008 and 0.2% in 2009.

In July 2005 gold reserves were 465,000 troy oz, foreign exchange reserves were US$3,655m. and total money supply was £C1,504m.

Budget

Revenue in 2009 (2008) was €6.7bn. (€7.5bn.) and expenditure €7.8bn. (€7.3bn.). Tax revenue in 2009 totalled €4,452m. and non-tax revenue €2,291m.

Main divisions of expenditure in 2009 (in €1m.): wages and salaries, 2,644; social security payments, 2,251; other goods and services, 952.

Capital expenditure for 2009 totalled €849m., of which €690m. was investment expenditure.

The outstanding domestic debt at 31 Dec. 2009 was €5,841.9m. and the foreign debt was €3,984.5m.

Cyprus' budget deficit in 2010 was 5.3% of GDP (2009, 6.1%). In 2008 it had a surplus of 0.9%. The required target set by the EU is a budget deficit of no more than 3%.

VAT is 17.0% (reduced rates, 8.0% and 5.0%).

Performance

There was negative growth of 1.7% in 2009 but the economy grew by 1.0% in 2010. Total GDP in 2008 was US$24.9bn.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank of Cyprus, established in 1963, is the bank of issue. It regulates money supply, credit and foreign exchange and supervises the banking system. The Governor is Athanasios Orphanides.

In 2004 there were 14 domestic banks, 29 International Banking Units and one representative office of a foreign bank. The leading banks are Bank of Cyprus, Marfin Popular Bank and Hellenic Bank.

At 30 Sept. 2004 banks' total deposits and lending amounted to €C13,054m. and €C9,003m. respectively.

There is a stock exchange in Nicosia.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

In 2008, 4.1% of energy consumption came from renewables (wind power, solar power, hydro-electric power, tidal power, geothermal energy and biomass), compared to the European Union average of 10.3%. A target of 13% has been set by the EU for 2020.

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in Cyprus were the equivalent of 9.5 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 1.1m. kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was 4.87bn. kWh and consumption per capita 6,213 kWh.

Water

In 2004, €C16.3m. was spent on water dams, water supplies, hydrological research and geophysical surveys. A further €C16.7m. was spent on the production of desalinated sea water. Existing dams had (2004) a capacity of 327m. cu. metres.

Minerals

The principal minerals extracted in 2004 were (in tonnes): gypsum, 234,000; bentonite, 170,000; umber, 5,205; copper, 1,240.

Agriculture

21% of the government-controlled area is cultivated. There were 102,400 ha. of arable land in 2008 and 37,500 ha. of permanent crops. 24,400 ha. were irrigated in 2008. About 6.3% (2008) of the economically active population were engaged in agriculture.

Chief agricultural products in 2008 (1,000 tonnes): milk, 194.9; potatoes, 115.0; citrus fruit, 111.8; meat, 100.5; fresh fruit, 52.2; grapes, 32.4; olives, 15.6; eggs, 9.9; carobs, 6.5; cereals (barley, wheat and oats), 6.3; carrots, 1.9; almonds, 0.4; other vegetables, 71.9.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 the total length of roads in the government-controlled area was 12,246 km, of which 64.0% were paved. In 2007 there were 410,936 passenger cars, 117,498 trucks and vans, 3,292 buses and coaches and 41,211 motorcycles and mopeds. There were 89 deaths as a result of road accidents in 2007.

The area controlled by the government of the Republic and that controlled by the 'TRNC' are now served by separate transport systems, and there are no services linking the two areas.

Civil Aviation

Nicosia airport has been closed since the Turkish invasion in 1974. It is situated in the UN controlled buffer zone. There are international airports at Larnaca (the main airport) and Paphos. In 2009, 7,068,080 passengers, 59,092 aircraft and 38,502 tonnes of commercial freight went through these airports. Both airports have been expanded considerably to increase capacity, with new terminals at Paphos and Larnaca coming into operation in Nov. 2008 and Nov. 2009 respectively. In 2009 Larnaca handled 5,360,369 passengers (all on international flights) and 38,092 tonnes of freight, and Paphos handled 1,707,711 passengers (all on international flights) and 410 tonnes of freight. In 2009, 2,318,107 passengers arrived at the two airports on scheduled flights and 2,306,850 passengers departed. The national carrier is Cyprus Airways, which is 69.57% state-owned.

Shipping

The two main ports are Limassol and Larnaca. In 2009, 3,915 ships of 22,897,408 net registered tons entered Cyprus ports carrying 7,859,269 tonnes of cargo from, to and via Cyprus. In Jan. 2009 there were 867 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 20.03m. GT. Of the 867 vessels registered, 286 were bulk carriers, 216 general cargo ships, 192 container ships, 121 oil tankers, 33 passenger ships, 11 liquid gas tankers and eight chemical tankers. The port in Famagusta has been closed to international traffic since the Turkish invasion in 1974.

Telecommunications

Telephone subscribers numbered 1,138,900 in 2005 (1,363.9 for every 1,000 inhabitants), with 718,800 mobile phone subscribers. There were 529.9 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 190,900 in 2009 (175.1 per 1,000 inhabitants). The Cyprus Telecommunications Authority provides telephone and data transmission services nationally, and to 253 countries automatically.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There is a Supreme Court, Assize Courts and District Courts. The Supreme Court is composed of 13 judges, one of whom is the President of the Court. The Assize Courts have unlimited criminal jurisdiction. The District Courts exercise civil and criminal jurisdiction, the extent of which varies with the composition of the Bench.

A Supreme Council of Judicature, consisting of the President and Judges of the Supreme Court, is entrusted with the appointment, promotion, transfers, termination of appointment and disciplinary control over all judicial officers, other than the Judges of the Supreme Court. The Attorney-General (Petros Clerides) is head of the independent Law Office and legal adviser to the President and his Ministers.

The population in penal institutions in the government-controlled area in Aug. 2008 was 671 (83 per 100,000 of national population).

The death penalty was abolished for all crimes in 2002.

Education

Greek-Cypriot Education. Primary education is compulsory and is provided free in six grades to children between 5 years 8 months and 11 years 8 months. A one-year pre-primary education is compulsory and is provided free by the public kindergartens. There are also schools for the deaf and blind, and nine schools for disabled children. In 2008–09 the Ministry of Education and Culture ran 250 kindergartens for children in the age group 3–5 years 8 months; there were also 60 communal and 154 private kindergartens. There were 371 primary schools in 2008–09 with 55,552 pupils and 4,686 teachers.

Secondary education is also free and attendance for the first cycle (gymnasium) is compulsory. The secondary school lasts six years—three years at the gymnasium followed by three years at the lykeion (lyceum) or three years at one of the technical schools that provide technical and vocational education for industry. In 2008–09 there were 165 secondary schools with 7,652 teachers and 65,445 pupils.

Tertiary education is provided at nine public and 34 private institutions. There are three public universities: the University of Cyprus, the Open University of Cyprus and the Cyprus University of Technology, which admitted their first students in Sept. 1992, Sept. 2006 and Sept. 2007 respectively and had a combined total of 7,527 students in 2008–09. The other public institutions are the Higher Technical Institute, which provides courses lasting three to four years for technicians in civil, electrical, mechanical and marine engineering; the Cyprus Forestry College (administered by the Ministry of Agriculture, Natural Resources and Environment); the Higher Hotel Institute (Ministry of Labour and Social Insurance); the Mediterranean Institute of Management (Ministry of Labour and Social Insurance); the School of Nursing (Ministry of Health), which runs courses lasting two to three years; the Cyprus Police Academy, which provides a three-year training programme. Among the 34 private institutions are three private universities: the European University Cyprus, the University of Nicosia and the Frederick University. All three universities opened in Sept. 2007; they had a combined total of 10,367 students in 2008–09.

There are also various public and private institutions that provide non-formal education. These include the Apprenticeship Training Scheme and Evening Technical Classes, and other vocational and technical courses organized by the Human Resources Development Authority.

In 2008 the adult literacy rate was 98%. The percentage of the population aged 20 years and over that has attended school was 93.0% in 2008.

In 2008 public expenditure on education came to 7.5% of GDP and 16.9% of total government spending.

Health

In 2006 there were 1,950 physicians, 715 dentists, 3,361 nurses and midwives and 160 pharmacists. There were 84 registered private hospitals/clinics, five government hospitals, three rural hospitals, 25 rural health centres and one government psychiatric hospital in 2004.

Welfare

Cyprus has a compulsory earnings-related Social Insurance Scheme financed by tripartite contributions, which covers all the gainfully employed population. Employees in the broader public sector are covered by supplementary mandatory pension schemes or provident funds. A large proportion of the private sector's employees have supplementary coverage under non-statutory provident funds established by collective agreements.

RELIGION

The Greek Cypriots are predominantly Greek Orthodox Christians, and almost all Turkish Cypriots are Muslims (mostly Sunnis of the Hanafi sect). There are also small groups of the Armenian Apostolic Church, Roman Catholics (Maronites and Latin Rite) and Protestants (mainly Anglicans). See also CYPRUS: Territory and Population.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

There are three sites under Cypriot jurisdiction in the World Heritage List: Paphos (entered on the list in 1980); the churches of the Troodos region (1985, 2001); and Choirokoitia (1998). Paphos, inhabited since the Neolithic age, was a site of worship of the goddess Aphrodite and prehistoric fertility deities. The site has the remains of villas, palaces, theatres, fortresses and tombs. The Troodos region has one of the largest groups of Byzantine churches and monasteries. Decorated with murals and frescoes, they include the Church of St John Lampadistis, built between the 11th and 15th centuries. The Neolithic settlement of Choirokoitia, between Larnaca and Limassol and dating from the 7th to the 4th millennium BC, is one of the most important prehistoric sites in the eastern Mediterranean.

Press

In 2008 there were 22 paid-for dailies daily newspapers with a circulation of 103,000. The most widely read daily is Phileleftheros.

Tourism

There were 2,470,000 non-resident tourist arrivals in 2005. Visitors from the UK account for some 50% of all tourist arrivals. Tourist spending in 2005 totalled US$2,644m.

Festivals

The capital, Nicosia, is the focal point for Independence Day festivities each Oct. Limassol hosts many of the country's largest festivals, including a ten-day Carnival as part of the nationwide Apokreo festival that precedes Easter. Each May Anthestiria (a flower festival) is held, and there are annual festivals of Shakespearean and Ancient Greek theatre.

'Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus (TRNC)'

Kuzey Kıbrıs Türk Cumhuriyeti

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

See CYPRUS: Key Historical Events.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus occupies 3,355 sq. km (about 33% of the island of Cyprus) and its provisional population at the 2011 census was 294,906. Distribution of population by districts (2011 census, provisional): Lefkoşa (Nicosia), 98,739; Girne (Kyrenia), 72,284; Mağusa (Famagusta), 69,273; Güzeyurt (Morphou), 31,254; İskele (Trikomo), 23,356.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus was proclaimed on 15 Nov. 1983. The 50 members of the Legislative Assembly are elected under a proportional representation system.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 18 April 2010. Prime Minister Derviş Eroğlu (National Unity Party/UBP) won 50.4% against incumbent president, Mehmet Ali Talat (ind.), who claimed 42.9%. Turnout was 76.4%.

In parliamentary elections on 19 April 2009 the opposition National Unity Party won 44.1% of the vote (26 of 50 seats), the ruling Republican Turkish Party-United Forces 29.2% (15), the Democrat Party 10.7% (5), the Communal Democracy Party 6.9% (2) and the Freedom and Reform Party 6.2% (2). Turnout was 81.4%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

President: Derviş Eroğlu; b. 1938 (sworn in 23 April 2010).

In March 2012 the government consisted of:

Prime Minister: İrsen Küçük; b. 1940 (UBP; since 17 May 2010).

Minister for Agriculture and Natural Resources: Ali Çetin Amcaoğlu. Economy and Energy: Sunat Atun. Education, Youth and Sport: Kemal Dürüst. Finance: Erşin Tatar. Foreign Affairs: Hüseyin Özgürün. Health: Ahmet Kaşif. Interior and Local Administration: Nazim Çavuşoğlu. Labour and Social Security: Şerife Ünverdi. Public Works and Communications: Hamza Ersan Saner. Tourism, Environment and Culture: Unal Üstel.

DEFENCE

In 2007 around 36,000 members of Turkey's armed forces were stationed in the TRNC with eight main battle tanks (plus 441 tanks for training purposes). TRNC forces comprise seven infantry battalions with an estimated total personnel strength of 5,000. Conscription is for 15 months.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In April 2004 the European Union pledged to release almost US$310m. as a reward for approval of a UN plan to reunify the island. The TRNC voted in favour of reunification in a referendum but it was rejected by the Greek Cypriot south, which joined the EU separately on 1 May 2004. The aid package was approved in Feb. 2006 and aimed to improve economic growth and development in order to encourage reunification.

ECONOMY

Currency

The Turkish lira is used.

Budget

Revenue in 2008 (in US$1m.) was 1,457.9 (of which local revenues 1,235.9 and foreign aid and loans 222.1); expenditure, 1,787.5.

Performance

The economy grew by 13.5% in 2005.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area that is today the Czech Republic was originally inhabited by Celts around the 4th century BC. The Celtic Boii tribe gave the country its Latin name—Boiohaemum (Bohemia)—but was driven out by Germanic tribes. Slav tribes migrated to central Europe during the period known as the Migration of Peoples and were well established by the 6th century. The first half of the 7th century saw allied Slavonic tribes defending their territory from the Avar Empire in the Hungarian lowlands and from Frank attackers to the West.

Mojmir established The Great Moravian Empire in 830, comprising Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia. The Empire reached its height under Moravian ruler Svatopluk but was engulfed and destroyed by the Magyars around 903–07. In 1041, after the defeat of Prince Břetislav the Restorer by the German Emperor Henry III, Bohemia became a fief of the Holy Roman Empire. Dynastic squabbles, exacerbated by German interference, weakened the power of the dukes, but in 1212 Otakar I (1197–1230) was granted a hereditary kingship from the Holy Roman Emperor who also declared the indivisibility of Bohemia as a key independent state within the realm.

A period of prosperity followed, aided by the immigration of German miners and merchants. Bohemia expanded under the last Přemysl kings. Wenceslas I (1230–53) seized Austria in 1251, though it passed to the Habsburgs when Otakar II was killed at the battle of Marchfeld in 1278. His son Wenceslas II was elected king of Poland in 1300. Wenceslas III was assassinated in 1306, thus ending the Přemysl line. After four years of struggle John of Luxemburg succeeded the throne in 1310.

John's son Charles (1346–78) became Holy Roman Emperor as Charles IV (Charles I of Bohemia) in 1355. He declared Prague the capital of the German Empire, designating the Crownlands of Bohemia to include parts of modern Germany and Poland. The Golden Bull of Nürnberg in 1356 granted the king of Bohemia first place among the empire's electors.

In what became known as the Golden Age, Charles fostered the commercial and cultural development of Bohemia. In 1348 he founded Prague University, the first university in Central Europe. Work started on the building of St Vitus cathedral, Charles Bridge and the Czech castle of the Grail in Karlstejn during his reign.

Hussite Revolution

Dissatisfaction with the Catholic church in the 14th and 15th centuries climaxed with the Hussite Revolution, the clerical reform movement associated with Jan Hus. The movement had undertones of anti-German Czech nationalism and found support amongst the urban middle classes and lesser rural gentry as well as the urban poor and peasantry. Hus was condemned as a heretic and burnt at the stake in Constance in 1415. Anti-Hussite rulings by Wenceslas IV led to the first 'Defenestration of Prague' in 1419, when Catholic councillors were thrown from the Town Hall windows. In the ensuing Hussite wars Sigismund, the Hungarian Holy Roman Emperor, failed to recover the Bohemian crown. Five crusades were launched against the Hussites in the years 1420–31, all of which were defeated.

The Hussites were eventually weakened by divisions between moderates, the Utraquists, and radicals, the Taborites (originating from the town of Tabor in South Bohemia). The latter's militant leader, Jan Žižka, was defeated in the battle of Lipany in 1434 by the Prague faction supported by Sigismund. This victory allowed for a temporary agreement between Hussite Bohemia and Catholic Europe, known as the Compacts of Basle, which reunited the Utraquist faction with Rome in 1436. A degree of post-war recovery followed under the moderate Hussite king, George of Poděbrady (1457–71), who crushed the radical Taborite dissidents.

In 1471 Vladislav Jagellonský, son of King Casimir IV of Poland, was elected King of Bohemia. His son Louis inherited the throne but was killed at Mohács fighting the Turks in 1526. From 1490, Hungary and Bohemia were both ruled by the Jagiellon Dynasty. Under their rule, the provincial diet of three estates (nobility, gentry and burgesses) enhanced the power of the nobility at the expense of the burgesses. Animosity between the Hussite church and the minority Catholic Church continued.

In 1526, after the extinction of the Jagiellon line, Czech nobles elected Archduke Ferdinand. The advent of the Habsburgs saw Roman Catholicism reintroduced. When Rudolf II (1576–1611) left Vienna to make Prague the capital of the German Empire and the seat of a papal nuncio, the city became a centre of European culture. However, religious divisions with the beginnings of the Counter-Reformation led to the second Defenestration of Prague. Two Catholic governors and their secretary were thrown from a window of Prague Castle, an action which sparked off the Thirty Years' War (1618–48). This brought political disorder and economic devastation to the country with the Habsburg forces wiping out a third of the Bohemian population. The estates deposed Emperor Ferdinand II in favour of the Calvinist Frederick V but the latter's forces were defeated at the battle of White Mountain in 1620. A period of Habsburg hegemony ensued.

After the suppression of the Taborites, the only remaining Protestant Church in Bohemia was the Unity of Czech Brethren, to which Catholics, Utraquists and Lutherans were opposed. The Czech nobility was replaced by German-speaking adventurers, the burgesses lost their rights, the peasantry suffered hardships and citizens were forced to embrace the Catholic faith or emigrate. The throne of Bohemia was made hereditary in the Habsburg Dynasty and the most important offices transferred to Vienna.

Opposition was savagely repressed. The next two centuries became known as the Dark Ages.

Enlightened Despotism

In the Enlightenment of the late 18th century, Empress Maria Theresa and her son Joseph II granted freedom of worship and movement to the peasantry in 1781, a precondition for the industrial revolution of the next century which made Bohemia the most developed economy within the Empire. Bohemia and Moravia each became independent parts of the Habsburg Monarchy although, conversely, the reforms led to greater Germanization and centralization of power, threatening the Slavic identities of the Empire's subjects.

The revival of the Czech nation, which began as a cultural movement, soon progressed into a struggle for political emancipation. Calls for the promotion of the Czech language encouraged Czech nationalists to campaign for the formation of a new Czechoslovakia. It was a concept fostered by Tomáš Garrigue Masaryk, a philosophy professor at the University of Prague and Professor for Slavonic Studies at King's College, London, who was to become the first president of the Czechoslovak Republic.

Male suffrage was granted in 1906 but the chamber of deputies was constantly bypassed by the emperor. The First World War brought estrangement between the Czechs and the Germans, the latter supporting the war effort, the former seeing it as a clash of monarchy versus democracy. Masaryk went into exile in London, where he committed himself to enlisting the support of Britain, France, Russia and the United States in founding a post-war independent Czechoslovak state. He worked with other exiled Czechs and Slovaks, including Dr Edvard Beneš, who later also became president of Czechoslovakia. In 1916 a Czechoslovak National Council was set up in Paris under Masaryk's chairmanship.

In 1918 Masaryk secured the support of US president Woodrow Wilson for Czech and Slovak unity and in May the Pittsburgh agreement was signed in the USA by exiles of both lands. On 18 Oct. 1918 the National Council transformed itself into a provisional government, and was recognized by the Allies.

Creation of the State

Austria accepted President Wilson's terms on 27 Oct. 1918, and the next day a republic was proclaimed with Masaryk, almost 70, as president, and Beneš as foreign minister. In drawing up the frontiers of the new state the principles of Wilsonian self-determination were defeated by the ethnic mix; other criteria employed were the partial restoration of the historic provinces and the need to establish an economically viable and defensible state. Among the minorities were 3.25m. Sudeten Germans. Borders were confirmed in the Treaty of Versailles in June 1919 (although Hungary subsequently called for these to be reformed) along with the official recognition of the state of Czechoslovakia by the international community.

The constitution of 1920 provided for a two-chamber parliament with adult suffrage. The French Constitution and the American Declaration of Rights were both used as models. The electoral system worked so that all governments were coalitions. Slovakia was granted an assembly in 1927 but the state was basically centralist and the Slovaks maintained their own parties. Between the wars Czechoslovakia became one of the ten most developed and stable countries of the world, although it suffered severe economic depression in the 1930s.

In Nov. 1935 Masaryk was succeeded by Beneš. Meanwhile in Germany, Hitler's designs on expanding the Third Reich stirred up nationalist agitation among the Sudeten Germans. The 1930 census showed 22.3% of the Czechoslovak population were ethnic Germans. In 1933 the German National Socialist Worker's Party in Czechoslovakia, directly affiliated to the Nazi party in Germany, was banned. The Sudeten German Party, led by Konrad Henlein, was formed in its place and won 67% of the German vote in the parliamentary elections of 1935. Czechoslovakia had relied on its 1925 pact with France to defend it against the threat of German aggression, but in the Munich Conference of 29 Sept. 1938 France sided with Britain and Italy in stipulating that all districts with a German population of more than 50% should be ceded to Germany. This legitimized the annexing of the Czech Sudetenland to Germany.

On 5 Oct. 1938 Beneš resigned and went into exile in Britain, and on 15 March 1939 Hitler's troops invaded Prague, contravening the Munich agreement. Slovakia, though allied to the Germans, declared independence under the fascist leadership of Jozef Tiso. The Czech territory became the German Protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia.

Czechoslovakia suffered further territorial losses to Poland and Hungary under the Vienna Arbitration of 2 Nov. 1938. In all, it lost 30% of its territory and almost 34% of its population. Over 1m. Czechs, Slovaks and Ukrainians came under German, Polish and Hungarian rule. Hitler's declared aim was to drive the Czechs out of Central Europe. The Protectorate became a centre for arms production.

Nazi Occupation

Initial attempts at resistance were brutally crushed. On 17 Nov. 1939 German occupiers closed down all Czech universities, executed nine of the leaders of the student movement and transported scores of other students to concentration camps. In 1940 the Gestapo transformed the town of Terezín (Theresienstadt) near Prague into a concentration camp, evacuating the pre-war population to accommodate 140,000 Jews from all parts of the Reich, the majority from the Protectorate of Bohemia-Moravia. 85,000 were then transported to death camps in the East, chiefly to Auschwitz, and over 30,000 prisoners were held in the fortress. Many Communists and Czech resistance fighters also met their deaths there.

Mass expulsions were a regular feature of the Protectorate. In 1942, 30,000 people were forced to leave their homes in order to make way for the military. In another case around 5,000 families were expelled from around 30 villages in Moravia in an attempt to create an ethnic German enclave. Growing resistance led to the appointment of SS General Reinhard Heydrich, head of the Reich's Security Office, who launched a savage offensive against underground organizations and executed general Alois Elias, head of the Protectorate's government, for his connections with the Beneš government in Britain. The latter, along with the Allies, were in turn behind the assassination of Heydrich, carried out on 27 May 1942 by two paratroopers. The Nazis responded with a frenzy of terror known as the 'Heydrichiade'. Revenge murders of the entire populations of Lidice (on 10 June 1942) and Ležáky (24 June 1942) were carried out.

The Beneš government in exile in London, with Jan Šrámek as prime minister, was officially recognized by Britain and the USSR on 18 June 1941. A 20-year treaty of alliance with the USSR was signed on 12 Dec. 1943 and, in March 1945, Beneš went to Moscow to prepare for post-war government in the wake of the Soviet Army advance. Liberation by the Soviet Army and US forces was completed in 1945 following an insurrection on 5 May. Territories taken by Germans, Poles and Hungarians were restored to Czechoslovakia. Subcarpathian Ruthenia (now in Ukraine) was transferred to the USSR, creating a common border with the Soviet state.

The Sudeten Germans suffered brutal expulsions, during which up to 250,000 died, 6,000 of whom were murdered. The 'resettlement' of ethnic Germans was officially approved at the Potsdam Conference on 1 Aug. 1945, when the USA and Britain insisted on humane transfer, subsequently supervised by the Allies and the Red Cross. German or Hungarian Czechs had their citizenship taken away unless they were naturalized Czechs or Slovaks. In order to stay, German or Hungarian Czechs had to prove that they had remained faithful to the Czechoslovak Republic, had fought in the resistance or had personally suffered at the hands of fascists. Further decrees expropriated property and agricultural land. A total of 2,700,000 Germans were expelled, and in the Czech census of March 1991 only 47,000 claimed German as their nationality. A Czech–German Declaration of 21 Jan. 1997 saw both sides admit to and apologize for their atrocities during the period.

Soviet Domination

Beneš once again became president of Czechoslovakia but, under pressure from the USSR, measures were taken to confiscate and redistribute property and to take key industries into public ownership. Before 1939 the Communist party of Czechoslovakia (CPCz) had never gained more than 13% of the vote, but its patriotic stance in the late 1930s as well as its clear affiliation with the country's main liberator, the USSR, led to a sharp increase in popularity. In the elections of 26 May 1946 the Communists won almost 40% of the vote in Czech areas and 30% in Slovakia. This made the party the largest group in the new Constituent National Assembly, with 114 of the 300 seats and Klement Gottwald as premier. Its leaders pledged commitment to democratic traditions while pursuing a 'specific Czechoslovak road to socialism'.

The party's independence was first put to the test when Czechoslovakia was pressured by Stalin into withdrawing from the American Marshall Plan for European economic reconstruction, seen from Moscow as a threat to its own influence. Stalin's encouragement of the CPCz grew in the autumn of 1947 when a people's militia was formed and non-communist parties in the governing coalition found their influence eroded. In protest, 12 non-communist ministers handed in their resignations. The CPCz adroitly handled this situation to its own advantage, forcing President Beneš to appoint a predominantly communist government on 25 Feb. 1948.

A new constitution, declaring Czechoslovakia a 'people's democracy' was approved on 9 May 1948, and elections were held on 30 May with a single list of candidates, resulting in an 89% majority for the government. Beneš resigned on 2 June after refusing to ratify the Communist Constitution. 12 days later Gottwald succeeded him as President. Civil rights were severely restricted; from 1950 monasteries and convents were nationalized, with 219 monasteries being taken over by the People's Militia on the night of 13 April alone; monastic orders were abolished.

The secret service became one of the most systematic and omnipresent in the Soviet bloc. Unsubstantiated charges of treason and resistance to the communist cause led to a series of show trials and executions, with many victims from the CPCz itself. It is estimated that between 200,000 and 280,000 suffered death or persecution during the Stalin era. Stalin died on 5 March 1953, and Gottwald just a week later, but the communists maintained their grip. Workers' demonstrations in Plzeň and other Czech towns against price rises and currency reform, which devalued savings, were brutally suppressed by the military in June that year. Political trials of 'Slovak nationalists' in 1954 had many Slovak Communists imprisoned, including Gustáv Husák, who later went on to become secretary-general of the CPCz and president of Czechoslovakia.

The Soviet five-year economic plans emphasized engineering, arms production and heavy industry. A third of Czechoslovak output came from the arms industry. The service and consumer goods industries were virtually abolished and all farms collectivized. The founding of COMECON on 1 Jan. 1949 and the signing of the Warsaw Pact in 1955 limited Czechoslovakia's trading partners to the Eastern bloc.

A new constitution, introduced in 1960, reinforced the power of the Communist Party and changed the country's name to the Socialist Republic of Czechoslovakia (ČSSR).

Prague Spring

The failure of the third five-year plan to meet its targets gave a push to economic reform. A mixed economy was introduced which led to a period of cultural liberalization. Support for political reform grew within party ranks. Antonín Novotný was persuaded to resign as CPCz leader on 5 Jan. 1968. He was replaced by Alexander Dubček, leader of the Communist Party of Slovakia. On 22 March, Novotný resigned as president in favour of Gen. Ludvík Svoboda, who was elected by the National Assembly. Precipitating what became known as the Prague Spring, Dubček introduced many reforms in his pursuit of 'socialism with a human face'. New political bodies were formed, breaking up the monopoly of the Communist Party. Press censorship was abolished and restraints on freedom of expression relaxed.

The reforms caused consternation in Moscow. Brezhnev unsuccessfully put pressure on Czechoslovakia between May and Aug. He then ordered the invasion of Czechoslovakia by troops of the Warsaw Pact countries (with the exception of Romania) on 20–21 Aug. The Soviet intention of replacing Dubček and his government with more hard-line Communists failed when President Svoboda turned down Soviet nominees. Dubček and other party leaders were then abducted to Moscow and forced to sign an agreement to keep Soviet troops stationed in Czechoslovakia. The Prague Spring all but withered. The only surviving measure of reform was the introduction of the federal system on 1 Jan. 1969. Separate Czech and Slovak states came into force within a Czechoslovak federation, a move that satisfied the Slovaks who had been seeking autonomy for some time. Each state was awarded its own administration and a national council, and the National Assembly divided into two chambers. All other reforms of the Dubček administration were stamped out or reversed and the Soviet policy of 'normalization' took hold.

In protest at the Soviet repression, student Jan Palach set fire to himself in Wenceslas Square on 16 Jan. 1969. On 28 March when the Czechoslovak national ice hockey team beat the Soviets, celebrations turned into anti-Soviet demonstrations and led to many arrests. On 17 April Dubček was forced from office and replaced with the hard-liner, Gustáv Husák. Repression led to mass emigrations. So-called 'enemies of the state' were put under constant surveillance, blacklisted for jobs and their children denied university places. Freedom to travel abroad was no longer granted to ordinary citizens. Protest resurfaced again in 1977, with the signing of Charter 77 and founding of the Committee for the Defence of the Rights of the Unjustly Persecuted (VONS). These two organizations, led by artists and intellectuals, alerted the public to civil rights abuses and campaigned for civil and political rights.

Velvet Revolution

The advent of Mikhail Gorbachev's glasnost and perestroika in the mid-1980s initially changed little. Husák was replaced as leader of the CPCz by Miloš Jakeš, who had been responsible for Party purges in 1970. But there were renewed demonstrations in Aug. 1988 on the 20th anniversary of the Soviet invasion, in Oct. on the 70th anniversary of the founding of Czechoslovakia and in Jan. 1989 on the 20th anniversary of Jan Palach's suicide when the crowd was brutally dispersed and leading dissidents, including Václav Havel, arrested and imprisoned. Protests, petitions and further demonstrations followed in May, Aug. and Oct. of 1989. The fall of the Berlin Wall on 9 Nov. 1989 galvanized the pro-democracy movement. Another major demonstration by students on 17 Nov. led to further protests until the entire CPCz leadership resigned on 24 Nov. Civic Forum (OF) in the Czech Republic and the Public Against Violence (VPN) in Slovakia were formed to co-ordinate all pro-democratic forces, and an interim broad coalition 'Government of National Understanding' with a minority of Communists took over. This became known as the Velvet Revolution. Václav Havel was unanimously elected president of Czechoslovakia by the Federal Assembly on 29 Dec. 1989.

The first free elections since the Second World War were held in June 1990, with a turnout of 96.4%. The Communists were roundly defeated, and Civic Forum won 52% of the votes. Second parliamentary elections were fixed for mid-1992, by which time

Civic Forum (OF) and VPN had been replaced by fully-fledged parties across the political spectrum. In the Czech lands, the right wing emerged as the strongest element, with the Civic Democratic party (ODS) the largest coalition party. Its leader, Václav Klaus, who was also finance minister, became prime minister and stayed in the post until Nov. 1997.

By contrast, in Slovakia, Vladimír Mečiar's Democratic Slovakia party and other post-communists were successful in the elections. A continuing Slovak desire for independence from Prague, along with differences in opinion on economic policy and the role of the state, strained relations between the two federal partners. An agreement to a 'velvet divorce' was reached with the two devolving into separate sovereign states from 1 Jan. 1993. Economic property was divided in accordance with a federal law of 13 Nov. 1992 and real estate became the property of the republic in which it was located. Other property was divided by specially-constituted commissions in the proportion of 2 (Czech Republic) to 1 (Slovakia) on the basis of population. Military material was also divided on the 2:1 principle, and regular military personnel were invited to choose in which army they would serve.

The Czech Republic showed the greater eagerness to become westernized. Although many feared a precipitous move towards a market economy, Klaus argued that danger lay in delaying reform, and that the creation of a market economy would lead the 'return to Europe' and the opening up of new markets.

Klaus immediately embarked on a series of radical reforms, impressing Western investors with his Thatcherite rhetoric, policies and publications. A programme of mass privatization was implemented, at first successfully, and the early to mid-nineties were a time of economic boom, with the Czech Republic a leading contender for Western trade and investment. However, many of the tough policies were not fully implemented and an increasing number of financial scandals were associated with the Klaus administration. 1997 also saw a currency crisis, where the crown devalued 12% against the dollar. Klaus was forced to resign as prime minister on 18 Nov. 1997.

Josef Tošovský formed a caretaker government until 1998 when Miloš Zeman formed a minority Social Democratic government, the country's first left-wing government since the fall of socialism. The Czech Republic joined NATO in 1999 and in 2001 Vladimír Špidla succeeded Zeman as party leader and prime minister. The Czech Republic became a member of the EU on 1 May 2004.

Following an inconclusive election in June 2006 there were seven months of political deadlock when the country was without a government. A new centre-right coalition was formed under Mirek Topolánek in Jan. 2007.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Czech Republic is bounded in the west by Germany, north by Poland, east by Slovakia and south by Austria. Minor exchanges of territory to straighten their mutual border were agreed between the Czech Republic and Slovakia on 4 Jan. 1996, but the Czech parliament refused to ratify them on 24 April 1996. Its area is 78,867 sq. km (30,451 sq. miles), including 1,620 sq. km (625 sq. miles) of inland waters. The provisional population at the 2011 census was 10,562,214; density, 136.7 per sq. km. In 2005, 73.5% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 10.63m.

There are 14 administrative regions (Kraj), one of which is the capital, Prague (Praha).

Region	Chief city	Area in sq. km	2011 census population (provisional)
Jihočeský	České Budějovice	10,057	637,460
Jihomoravský	Brno	7,196	1,169,788
Karlovarský	Karlovy Vary	3,315	310,245
Královéhradecký	Hradec Králové	4,758	555,683
Liberecký	Liberec	3,163	439,262
Moravskoslezský	Ostrava	5,427	1,236,028

Region	Chief city	Area in sq. km	2011 census population (provisional)
Olomoucký	Olomouc	5,267	639,946
Pardubický	Pardubice	4,519	518,228
Plzeňský	Pilsen (Plzeň)	7,561	574,694
Prague (Praha)	—	496	1,272,690
Středočeský	Prague (Praha)	11,015	1,274,633
Ústecký	Ústí nad Labem	5,335	830,371
Vysočina	Jihlava	6,796	512,727
Zlínský	Zlín	3,964	590,459

The estimated population of the principal towns in Jan. 2010 (in 1,000):

Prague (Praha)	1,249	Olomouc	100	Havířov	83
Brno	371	Ústí nad Labem	95	Zlín	76
Ostrava	306	České Budějovice	95	Kladno	70
Pilsen (Plzeň)	170	Hradec Králové	94	Most	68
Liberec	102	Pardubice	90	Karviná	62

At the 2001 census 90.4% of the population was Czech, 3.7% Moravian and 1.9% Slovak. There were also (in 1,000): Poles, 52; Germans, 39; Roma (Gypsies), 12; Silesians, 11. Although only 12,000 people described themselves as being Roma in the 2001 census they are in reality estimated to number up to 300,000.

The official language is Czech.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009 births, 118,667; deaths, 107,421; marriages, 47,862; divorces, 29,133. Rates (per 1,000 population), 2009: birth, 11.3; death, 10.0; marriage, 4.6; divorce, 2.8. Life expectancy at birth, 2007, 73.2 years for males and 79.4 years for females. In 2009 the most popular age range for marrying was 30–34 for males and 25–29 for females. Annual population growth rate, 2000–05, –0.1%. Infant mortality, 2005, 3.4 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 1.4 children per woman.

CLIMATE

A humid continental climate, with warm summers and cold winters. Precipitation is generally greater in summer, with thunderstorms. Autumn, with dry clear weather, and spring, which is damp, are each of short duration. Prague, Jan. 29.5°F (–1.5°C), July 67°F (19.4°C). Annual rainfall 19.3" (483 mm). Brno, Jan. 31°F (–0.6°C), July 67°F (19.4°C). Annual rainfall 21" (525 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution of 1 Jan. 1993 provides for a parliament comprising a 200-member Chamber of Deputies, elected for four-year terms by proportional representation, and an 81-member Senate elected for six-year terms in single-member districts, 27 senators being elected every two years. The main function of the Senate is to scrutinize proposed legislation. Senators must be at least 40 years of age, and are elected on a first-past-the-post basis, with a run-off in constituencies where no candidate wins more than half the votes cast. For the House of Representatives there is a 5% threshold; votes for parties failing to surmount this are redistributed on the basis of results in each of the eight electoral districts.

There is a Constitutional Court at Brno, whose 15 members are nominated by the President and approved by the Senate for ten-year terms.

The President of the Republic is elected for a five-year term. He or she must be at least 40 years of age and must win the votes in both chambers of parliament to be declared the winner. If after two rounds of voting the houses cannot unite in their support for one candidate then the election proceeds to a ballot incorporating both chambers, in which a winner must gain the vote of over half the lawmakers present. If this does not give a conclusive result the whole process is repeated. The President names the Prime Minister at the suggestion of the Speaker.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Incumbent president and former prime minister Václav Klaus (Civic Democratic Party/ODS) was re-elected by parliament for a second term on 15 Feb. 2008. In the first round of voting, held on 8 Feb., he won the Senate 47–32, but his opponent Jan Švejnar (ind.) won the lower house 106–92. A second vote, held the following day, was also inconclusive. In the third round on 15 Feb., in which votes from both chambers were counted together, Klaus won a majority with 141 votes against 111 for Švejnar.

Elections to the National Assembly were held on 28 and 29 May 2010; turnout was 62.6%. The Czech Social Democratic Party (ČSSD) gained 56 seats with 22.1% of votes cast; ODS gained 53 with 20.2%; Tradition Responsibility Prosperity 09 (TOP 09), 41 with 16.7%; the Communist Party of Bohemia and Moravia (KSČM), 26 with 11.3%; Public Affairs (VV), 24 with 10.9%.

Elections for a third of the seats in the Senate were held on 15, 16, 22 and 23 Oct. 2010. As a result ČSSD had 41 seats in the Senate; ODS 25; the TOP 09–Mayors and Independents coalition 5; the Christian and Democratic Union–Czechoslovak People's Party coalition (KDU–ČSL) 5. Three other parties held two seats or fewer.

European Parliament

The Czech Republic has 22 (24 in 2004) representatives. At the June 2009 elections turnout was 28.2% (28.3% in 2004). The ODS won 9 seats with 31.5% of votes cast (political affiliation in European Parliament: European Conservatives and Reformists); ČSSD, 7 with 22.4% (Progressive Alliance of Socialists and Democrats); KSČM, 4 with 14.2% (European United Left/Nordic Green Left); KDU–ČSL, 2 with 7.6% (European People's Party).

CURRENT LEADERS

Václav Klaus

Position

President

Introduction

Dr Václav Klaus was the first Czech minister of finance following the Velvet Revolution of 1989. He was elected prime minister in 1992 and oversaw the Republic's transition from a state-planned economy to a free market system, initially outstripping the economic growth of the other post-communist nations in the region. Having resigned in 1997 following a party financing scandal, he succeeded Václav Havel as president in March 2003 and was re-elected in Feb. 2008. A noted eurosceptic, Klaus was the last head of state to sign the European Union's Lisbon Treaty on institutional and administrative reform in Nov. 2009.

Early Life

Born on 19 April 1941 in Prague, Klaus graduated from the Prague School of Economics in 1963, continuing his education in Naples, Italy and at Cornell University in New York. He was then a researcher at the Institute of Economics of the Czechoslovak Academy of Sciences until 1970, during which time he came into contact with Václav Havel, the dissident writer and future Czech president.

From 1971 until 1987, Klaus held posts at the Czechoslovak State Bank before joining the Academy of Sciences' Economic Forecasting Institute. On 17 Nov. 1989, in the infancy of the Velvet Revolution, Klaus discovered that his son had escaped a beating from police in Prague. Two days later he joined the Civic Forum movement that would be instrumental in the overthrow of the communist regime. He was appointed finance minister in the first post-revolution government in Dec. 1989, implementing a range of reformist policies.

The Civic Forum, as a loose anti-communist alliance, began to splinter and Klaus joined the centre-right ODS, which aimed to restructure, deregulate and liberalize the market. He became party chairman in April 1991, deputy premier in Oct. and prime minister in June 1992 following the ODS electoral victory.

Career in Office

Following the split with Slovakia, the Czech Republic underwent rapid reform and privatization, and Klaus was acclaimed internationally as the architect of an economic miracle. However, the ODS fared less well than expected at the July 1996 elections and the governing coalition lost its majority in the House of Representatives. Klaus' authority within the ODS was further weakened that year by a public feud with his foreign minister, Josef Zieleniec. The economy was also beginning to suffer, and there followed a series of crisis budgets, austerity measures and ultimately devaluation in 1997. Further problems for Klaus included the resignation of Zieleniec, popular protests against the government and damaging corruption allegations concerning ODS party funding. The charges concerned improper donations in return for preferential treatment in relation to privatization and Zieleniec publicly declared that Klaus had been aware of certain key donations. President Havel called for the government to step down and Klaus resigned on 29 Nov. 1997, although he denied any wrongdoing. However, he retained significant influence as speaker of the Chamber of Deputies from 1998–2002. In Jan. 2003 he twice stood for election to the presidency in succession to Havel but, despite winning most votes on both occasions, failed to secure the requisite 50%. Havel resigned on 3 Feb. 2003 and Klaus was chosen to succeed him at the third attempt.

In June 2003 membership of the EU, scheduled for 2004, won 77% approval in a national referendum. Klaus, however, had described entry into the EU as a 'marriage of convenience rather than love'. Parliamentary elections in June 2006 resulted in a political stalemate until Sept., when a centre-right minority administration took office under Mirek Topolánek of the ODS. However, this government collapsed the following month. In Nov. Klaus again designated Topolánek as prime minister and a new coalition took office in Jan. 2007. Klaus was re-elected for a second term in Feb. 2008.

Topolánek resigned in March 2009 after his government lost a parliamentary vote of confidence and Klaus appointed Jan Fischer, an economist, as interim prime minister. Meanwhile, with the Czech Republic having assumed the six-month presidency of the EU in Jan. 2009, Klaus made plain his distrust of the Union's Lisbon Treaty for national sovereignty reasons. However, having unsuccessfully sought a national opt-out from aspects of the treaty, Klaus eventually signed it in Nov. 2009 following a ruling by the Czech Constitutional Court on its legitimacy.

Following inconclusive parliamentary elections in May 2010, in which the Social Democrats (ČSSD) became the largest party but with insufficient support to form a government, Klaus asked Petr Nečas of the ODS, as the second largest party, to form a new centre-right coalition government that took office in July.

Petr Nečas

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Petr Nečas, leader of the Civic Democratic Party, was sworn in as prime minister on 13 July 2010 at the head of a coalition government. He had previously served as deputy minister for defence and deputy prime minister.

Early Life

Nečas was born in Nov. 1964 in Uherské Hradiště in the southeast of the country, near the current Slovak border. From 1983 he studied physics at the University of Brno, undertaking post-graduate studies in natural sciences. In 1988 he became an engineering researcher for Tesla Rožnov, an electronics manufacturer.

In 1992 he joined Václav Klaus' recently formed Civic Democratic Party (ODS), serving on committees for defence, intelligence and foreign/EU relations. His first government post came in 1995 when Klaus appointed him deputy minister of defence. In 2006, after a series of electoral defeats for the party, Mirek Topolánek defeated Nečas in the race to succeed Klaus as ODS leader. Topolánek formed a minority government in which Nečas served as his deputy prime minister.

Topolánek's government collapsed after a confidence vote in 2009. He resigned as ODS chairman in 2010 and Nečas was elected in his place. Despite the ODS suffering a 15% drop in support at the May 2010 elections, Nečas was able to negotiate a centre-right conservative coalition with the Public Affairs (VV) party and TOP 09 to form a government in July 2010.

Career in Office

Having campaigned on a platform of reforming social benefit and fighting corruption, Nečas has aimed for fiscal consolidation to reduce the public deficit and fulfil the criteria necessary to join the eurozone. He undertook a programme of austerity measures that included cutting public salaries by 10% and reducing expenditure on the health sector and pensions. In Dec. 2010 he joined in criticism, led by the UK, of EU plans to raise its own budget by 6%. His government also sought to save money by streamlining defence procurement procedures.

DEFENCE

Conscription ended in Dec. 2004 when the armed forces became all-volunteer. Defence expenditure in 2008 totalled US$3,165m. (US$310 per capita), representing 1.5% of GDP.

Army

Strength (2007) 16,960. There are also paramilitary Border Guards (3,000-strong) and Internal Security Forces (100).

Air Force

The Air Force has a strength of 6,130 including Air Defence Forces. There were 50 combat capable aircraft in 2007 (L-159s and JAS 39s) and 38 attack helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In 1974 the Federal Republic of Germany and Czechoslovakia annulled the Munich agreement of 1938. On 14 Feb. 1997 the Czech parliament ratified a declaration of German-Czech reconciliation, with particular reference to the Sudeten German problems.

The Czech Republic became a member of the EU on 1 May 2004. A referendum held on 13-14 June 2003 approved accession, with 77.3% of votes cast for membership and 22.7% against. In 2000 a visa requirement for Russians entering the country was introduced as one of the conditions for EU membership.

The Czech Republic's Senate approved the European Union's Treaty of Lisbon on 6 May 2009, after the Chamber of Deputies had done so on 18 Feb. 2009. However, President Klaus stated that he would not sign it until Ireland had ratified it (which happened after a second referendum held on 2 Oct. 2009). Klaus subsequently gave his presidential assent on 3 Nov. 2009, making the Czech Republic the last country to ratify it.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 2% of GDP in 2008, industry 38% and services 60%.

Overview

Until 1996 the Czech Republic was viewed as the most successful European transition economy. Industrial production and employment declined significantly after communism but job losses were contained by rising service sector employment and soft loans given to loss-making enterprises by state-banks. After four years of 3% average annual growth, the economy fell into recession in 1997-98. In May 1997 large current account deficits fuelled a speculative attack on the koruna, forcing the country to adopt a tight monetary policy and fiscal austerity. With a financial sector no longer able to subsidize loss-making industrial enterprises, industry was forced to make costly financial and enterprise reforms. Foreign direct investment began flowing from the West in 1999 and solid growth resumed in the 2000s without high inflation.

With strength in engineering, low labour costs, good infrastructure and a favourable geographical position, the diversified industrial export sector has been a key engine of growth. Integration with the EU and large-scale FDI further boosted export-oriented growth prior to the global financial crisis in 2008. The economy was severely hit by the crisis and, in particular, the downturn in Germany, the country's largest trading partner. Exports and investment declined, unemployment rose and the trade deficit widened while debt increased. In the longer term, the government must confront the challenges posed by an ageing population.

Currency

The unit of currency is the koruna (CZK) or crown of 100 haler, introduced on 8 Feb. 1993 at parity with the former Czechoslovakian koruna. Gold reserves were 415,000 troy oz in Sept. 2009 and foreign exchange reserves were US$39,101m. Total money supply was Kč. 1,736.0bn. in Aug. 2009.

Inflation rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
4.7%	1.8%	0.1%	2.8%	1.9%	2.6%	3.0%	6.3%	1.0%	1.5%

The koruna became convertible on 1 Oct. 1995. In May 1997 the koruna was devalued 10% and allowed to float.

Budget

Budgetary central government revenue in 2008 totalled Kč. 1,024.16bn. (Kč. 974.33bn. in 2007) and expenditure Kč. 1,083.83bn. (Kč. 1,019.36bn. in 2007).

Principal sources of revenue in 2008 were: social security contributions, Kč. 368.12bn.; taxes on goods and services, Kč. 299.81bn.; taxes on income, profits and capital gains, Kč. 222.13bn. Main items of expenditure by economic type in 2008: social benefits, Kč. 400.92bn.; grants, Kč. 304.95bn.; compensation of employees, Kč. 100.80bn.

The Czech Republic's budget deficit in 2010 was 4.8% of GDP (2009, 5.8%; 2008, 2.2%). The required target set by the EU is a budget deficit of no more than 3%.

VAT is 20% (reduced rate, 14%).

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
3.1%	2.1%	3.8%	4.7%	6.8%	7.0%	5.7%	3.1%	-4.7%	2.7%

Total GDP was US$192.2bn. in 2010.

Banking and Finance

The central bank and bank of issue is the Czech National Bank (Governor, Miroslav Singer), which also acts as banking supervisor and regulator. Decentralization of the banking system began in 1991, and private banks began to operate. The only legal form of domestically operating banks are joint stock companies and branches of foreign banks. The Commercial Bank and Investment Bank are privatized nationwide networks with a significant government holding. Specialized banks include the Czech Savings Bank and the Czech Commercial Bank (for foreign trade payments). Private banks tend to be on a regional basis, many of them agricultural banks. In 1997 the cabinet agreed to sell off large stakes in three of the largest state-held banks to individual foreign investors through tenders, in preparation for European Union entry. In 2000 the country's fourth largest bank, Československá obchodní banka (ČSOB), acquired the operations of the third largest bank, IPB (Investiční a Poštovní banka). The newly-formed institution (which retained the name ČSOB) is the largest bank in central and eastern Europe, with assets of US$50.2bn. in Sept. 2010. Other major banks are Česká Spořitelna (assets of US$49.3bn. in Sept. 2010) and Komerční banka (assets of US$38.5bn. in Sept. 2010). Other capital market participants are subject to the supervision of the Czech Securities Commission. Savings deposits were Kč. 2,698,236m. in 2007.

Foreign direct investment was US$6.8bn. in 2010 (US$2.9bn. in 2009).

A stock exchange was founded in Prague in 1992.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

In 2008, 7.2% of energy consumption came from renewables (wind power, solar power, hydro-electric power, tidal power, geothermal energy and biomass), compared to the European Union average of 10.3%. A target of 13% has been set by the EU for 2020.

Environment

The Czech Republic's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 9.9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 17.6m. kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was 88.2bn. kWh. 67% of electricity was produced by thermal power stations (mainly using brown coal) and 30% was nuclear. In 2010 there were six nuclear reactors in operation. Consumption per capita in 2007 was 6,940 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Natural gas reserves in 2005 totalled 4.0bn. cu. metres. Production in 2007 was 170m. cu. metres. In 2005 crude petroleum reserves were 15m. bbls; production was 330,000 tonnes in 2007.

Minerals

There are hard coal and lignite reserves (chief fields: Most, Chomutov, Kladno, Ostrava and Sokolov). Lignite production in 2007 was 55.0m. tonnes; hard coal production in 2007 was 7.7m. tonnes.

Agriculture

In 2002 there were 4,273,000 ha. of agricultural land. In 2002 there were 3.07m. ha. of arable land and 0.97m. ha. of permanent crops. Approximately 19,900 ha. were irrigated in 2007. Agriculture employs just 4.9% of the workforce—the smallest proportion of any of the ex-Communist countries in eastern Europe. A law of May 1991 returned land seized by the Communist regime to its original owners, to a maximum of 150 ha. of arable to a single owner. Main agricultural production figures, 2002 (1,000 tonnes): wheat, 3,867; sugar beets, 3,833; barley, 1,793; potatoes, 901; rapeseed, 710; apples, 339; maize, 304; rye, 119. Livestock, 2003: cattle, 1.47m.; pigs, 3.36m.; sheep, 103,000; poultry, 27m. In 2002 production of meat was 787,000 tonnes; cheese, 146,000 tonnes; milk, 2,728m. litres; 1,829m. eggs.

Forestry

In 2009 forests covered 2,655,212 ha., or 34% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 was 18.51m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

Ponds created for fish-farming number 21,800 and cover about 41,000 ha., the largest of them being two lakes in southern Bohemia. Fish landings in 2005 amounted to 4,242 tonnes, entirely from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies in the Czech Republic in March 2011 were ČEZ (České Energetické Závody a.s.), with a market capitalization of US$27.5bn.; Komerční banka (US$9.6bn.); and Telefónica O2 Czech Republic (US$7.5bn.).

In 2008 there were 1,747,020 small private businesses (of which 17,448 were incorporated), 311,309 companies and partnerships (of which 22,700 were joint-stock companies), 15,338 co-operatives and 526 state enterprises. Output (2008 unless otherwise indicated) includes: crude steel, 6.4m. tonnes; cement (2007), 4.9m. tonnes; pig iron, 4.7m. tonnes; 940,300 cars; soft drinks, 2,935.4m. litres; beer, 1,904.4m. litres.

Labour

In the fourth quarter of 2010 the economically active population numbered 5,281,800; 1.28m. persons worked in manufacturing; 589,400 in trade; 445,500 in construction; 338,300 in human health and social work activities; and 327,500 in public administration and defence. In Dec. 2011 the unemployment rate was 6.8% (down from 7.3% in 2010 as a whole). The average monthly gross wage was Kč. 23,004 in 2010. Pay increases are regulated in firms where wages grow faster than production. Fines are levied if wages rise by more than 15% over four years. There is a minimum wage of Kč. 8,000 a month.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Trading with EU and EFTA countries has increased significantly while trading with all post-communist states has fallen.

Trade, 2010, in US$1m. (2009 in brackets): imports c.i.f., 125,691 (104,850); exports f.o.b., 132,141 (112,884). Main import suppliers, 2005: Germany, 30.0%; Russia, 5.6%; Slovakia, 5.4%; China, 5.1%; Poland, 4.9%; Italy, 4.7%. Main export markets, 2005: Germany, 33.3%; Slovakia, 8.7%; Austria, 5.5%; Poland, 5.5%; France, 5.3%; United Kingdom, 4.6%. In 2005 other EU countries accounted for 70.8% of the Czech Republic's imports and 84.3% of exports.

In 2005 machinery and transport equipment accounted for 51.0% of the Czech Republic's imports and 40.2% of exports; chemicals, manufactured goods classified chiefly by material and miscellaneous manufactured articles 39.6% of imports and 42.4% of exports; food, live animals, beverages and tobacco 3.8% of imports and 5.1% of exports; mineral fuels, lubricants and related materials 3.1% of imports and 9.2% of exports; inedible crude materials (except fuels), and animal and vegetable oil and fats 2.6% of imports and 3.0% of exports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 657 km of motorways, 6,191 km of highways and main roads, 48,736 km of secondary roads and 72,927 km of other roads, forming a total network of 128,511 km. Passenger cars in use in 2007 numbered 4,280,100 (414 per 1,000 inhabitants), and there were also 555,200 lorries and vans and 20,400 buses and coaches. Motorcycles and mopeds numbered 860,100. There were 832 deaths as a result of road accidents in 2009.

Rail

In 2008 Czech State Railways had a route length of 9,486 km (9,464 km on 1,435 mm gauge), of which 3,078 km were electrified. Passenger-km travelled in 2008 came to 6.76bn. and freight tonne-km to 14.36bn. There is a metro (44 km) and tram/light rail system (496 km) in Prague, and also tram/light rail networks in Brno, Liberec, Most, Olomouc, Ostrava and Plzeň.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Prague (Ruzyně), Ostrava (Mošnov) and Brno (Turany). The national carrier is Czech Airlines, 91.75% of which is owned by the state. In 2007 it flew 82.9m. km and carried 5,492,200 passengers (5,379,500 on international flights). In 2007 Prague handled 12,436,254 passengers; there were a total of 174,662 take-offs and landings.

Shipping

In 2009, 804,000 tonnes of freight were carried by inland waterways.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 2,264,000 main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year mobile phone subscribers numbered 13,780,000 (1,335.4 per 1,000 persons). Český Telecom was sold to the Spanish telecommunications firm Telefónica in April 2005. It has since become Telefónica O2 Czech Republic. There were 2.8m. PCs in 2005 and 6.0m. internet users in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The post-Communist judicial system was established in July 1991. This provides for a unified system of civil, criminal, commercial and administrative courts. Commercial courts arbitrate in disputes arising from business activities. Administrative courts examine the legality of the decisions of state institutions when appealed by citizens. In addition, there are military courts which operate under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Defence. There is a Supreme Court, and a hierarchy of courts under the Ministry of Justice at republic, region and district level. District courts are courts of first instance. Cases are usually decided by senates comprising a judge and two associate judges, though occasionally by a single judge. (Associate judges are citizens in good standing over the age of 25 who are elected for four-year terms). Regional courts are courts of first instance in more serious cases and also courts of appeal for district courts. Cases are usually decided by a senate of two judges and three associate judges, although occasionally by a single judge. There is also a Supreme Administrative Court. The Supreme Court interprets law as a guide to other courts and functions also as a court of appeal. Decisions are made by senates of three judges. Judges are appointed for life by the National Council.

There is no death penalty. In 2008, 343,799 crimes were reported (33.0 per 1,000 inhabitants) of which 37.2% were solved. The population in penal institutions at 31 Dec. 2007 was 18,901.

Education

Elementary education up to age 15 is compulsory. 52% of children continue their education in vocational schools and 48% move on to secondary schools. In 2007 there were 462,820 children in primary schools with 24,713 teaching staff and 937,026 secondary school pupils with (2006) 91,622 teaching staff.

In 2009 there were 73 universities, of which 26 were public, 45 private and two state—the University of Defence and the Police Academy. Private universities have only existed since 1990. There were 389,231 students at the public and private universities in 2009.

In 2006 public expenditure on education came to 4.8% of GNI and 10.5% of total government spending.

The adult literacy rate is at least 99%.

Health

At 31 Dec. 2008 there were 192 hospitals with 63,263 beds. Another 54,472 beds were available in other health establishments. There were 34,437 physicians, 6,595 dentists, 77,956 nurses, 5,583 pharmacists and 3,842 midwives in 2007. In 2008 the Czech Republic spent 7.1% of its GDP on health.

Welfare

Since 1 Jan. 1996 the retirement age has been gradually increasing by two months per year for men and by four months per year for women. The retirement age, as of Sept. 2008, was 61 years 10 months (men) and 56 to 60 (women), according to the number of children. The target age was to be 63 by the end of 2013 for men and by the end of 2028 for childless women, and between 59 and 62 for women depending on the number of children. However, in Jan. 2010 the retirement age for anyone born after 1968 was increased to 65 for all men and between 62 and 65 for women depending on the number of children.

The old-age pension is calculated as a flat-rate basic amount of Kč. 1,310 plus an earnings-related percentage calculated on personal assessment and the number of years of insurance. As at 31 Dec. 2008 the average monthly old-age pension was Kč. 9,638. Early pensions are available up to three years before the standard date of retirement, with the claimant required to have at least 25 years of contributions.

To qualify for unemployment benefit the applicant must have been in employment for at least 12 months in the previous three years. The maximum unemployment benefit in 2006 was Kč. 11,050 per month.

RELIGION

In 2009 there were 25 registered churches and religious societies. In 2001 church membership was estimated to be: Roman Catholic, 2,740,800; Evangelical Church of the Czech Brethren, 117,200; Hussites, 99,100; Eastern Orthodox, 23,000; Silesian Evangelicals, 14,000. 6,040,000 persons were classified as atheist or non-religious, and there were 331,000 adherents of other religions.

Dominik Duka (b. 1943) was installed as Archbishop of Prague and Primate of Bohemia in April 2010. The national Czech church, created in 1918, took the name 'Hussite' (Czechoslovak Hussite Church) in 1972. It has a patriarch, five bishops and over 260 pastors (49% women). There are also around a dozen other Protestant churches, the largest being the Evangelical Church of Czech Brethren, which unites Calvinists and Lutherans and has about 115,000 members. In Feb. 2012 the Roman Catholic church had two cardinals.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Sites under Czech jurisdiction which appear on UNESCO's World Heritage List are (with year entered on list): Historic Centre of Prague (1992); Historic Centre of Český Krumlov (1992); Historic Centre of Telč (1992); Pilgrimage Church of St John of Nipomuk at Zelená Hora in Ždár nad Sázavou (1994); Kutná Hora—the Historical Town Centre with the Church of Saint Barbara and the Cathedral of our Lady at Sedlec (1995); Lednice-Valtice Cultural Landscape (1996); Holašovice Historical Village Reservation (1998); Gardens and Castle at Kroměříž (1998); Litomyšl Castle (1999); Holy Trinity Column in Olomouc (2000); Tugendhat Villa in Brno (2001); and the Jewish Quarter and St Procopius' Basilica in Třebíč (2003).

Press

There were 90 daily newspapers in 2006 (86 paid-for and four free) with a combined average daily circulation of 2,799,000. There were also 200 non-dailies in 2006. The newspaper with the highest circulation is Blesk (daily average of 477,000 copies in 2006).

Tourism

In 2005, 6,336,000 non-resident tourists stayed in holiday accommodation; receipts from tourism in 2005 were US$5,580m.

Festivals

The leading classical music festivals are the Prague Spring International Music Festival (May–June) and Smetana's Litomyšl International Opera Festival (June–July). The main popular music festivals are Rock for People in Hradec Králové (July) and Trutnov Open Air Music Festival (Aug.).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Evidence of habitation exists from the Bølling period (12500–12000 BC). By 7700 BC reindeer hunters were settled on the Jutland Peninsula and around 3900 BC agriculture developed. Metal tools and weapons were imported in the Dagger Period (c. 2000 BC) but trading stations on the coast did not appear until around AD 300. The first towns developed in the Germanic Iron Age (AD 400–750). The first trading market was held in the 8th century in Hedeby. Denmark was converted to Christianity in 860 when Ansgar built churches in Hedeby and Ribe.

Danish Vikings first attacked England's northeast coast in 793. In about 900 Harold Bluetooth became the first king of Denmark and Skåne. His grandson, Canute the Great, fought successfully to incorporate England into his North Sea Empire and from 1018–35, Denmark, England and Norway were one nation. However, civil war broke out and in 1146 the kingdom was divided between Magnus the Strong and Knud Lavard. In 1157 Knud's son Valdemar was recognized as the ruler of Denmark. By 1200 Skåne, Halland and Blekinge in the South of Sweden were part of the Danish kingdom. The southern border of Denmark extended to the Eider in what is today northern Germany. In 1219 Valdemar conquered Estonia. He also established a code of law and a land register (Jordebog). The first written constitution was a coronation charter signed by Erik V in 1282.

In the 13th century, agriculture was supplemented by the expansion of fishing to supply inland Europe. Other industries also benefited and this brought with it a passion for building, particularly cathedrals and churches. Economic growth strengthened German influence. The Hanseatic League of German entrepreneurs was granted trade concessions for herring, salt and grain and also played a leading role in the country's political affairs. Valdemar IV Atterdag was crowned king in 1340. He challenged the privileges of the Hanseatic League, and was brought into conflict with Sweden over the southern provinces of Skåne, Halland and Blekinge. In 1361 Valdemar Atterdag took Gotland in one of the bloodiest of Nordic battles. When the king died in 1375, his daughter Margaret (married to King Håkon of Norway) claimed the throne on behalf of her five-year-old son Olav. After Håkon's death in 1388 she also became regent of Norway. While resisting the Hanseatic League, she succeeded in defeating her opponent Albrecht of Mecklenburg, king of Sweden, thus clearing the way to a Nordic union. In 1397, after Olav's death, Margaret's nephew Erik of Pomerania became king of Denmark, Norway and Sweden. In 1412 Erik was opposed by the Swedish nobles who resented being taxed to finance Danish wars in northern Germany. When Erik abdicated, Christian I was elected king of Denmark and Norway in 1448.

By the 16th century Scandinavia was divided between Denmark–Norway (including Iceland and Greenland) and Sweden–Finland. In 1520 a power struggle in Sweden made the country vulnerable to a Danish invasion. Christian II was crowned king of Sweden in 1520 (having assumed the thrones of Norway and Denmark in 1513) but was soon challenged by Gustav Vasa, who replaced him in Sweden in 1521. In 1523 Christian was succeeded in Denmark and Norway by Frederick I, who ended the union with Sweden. Following the Lutheran Reformation, the monarchy enhanced its power by confiscating the property of the Roman Catholic Church.

Imperial Rise and Fall

Christian IV (1577–1648) is regarded as one of Denmark's greatest rulers. Around this time overseas colonies were established, including Tranquebar (India), Danish Gold Coast (Ghana) and the Danish West Indies (the US Virgin Islands). However, in 1626 Denmark was defeated in the Thirty Years' War. Denmark lost Gotland and the Norwegian territories of Jämtland and Härjedalen to Sweden. In 1660 Sweden gained Skåne, Halland and Blekinge. A new constitution proclaimed the Danish king absolute sovereign. In 1661 the Supreme Court was established and in 1683 the law was codified.

In the Great Northern War, Denmark allied itself with Russia, the Netherlands and France, a policy which lasted for the rest of the 18th century. In the Napoleonic Wars, Denmark, smarting under the British bombardment of Copenhagen, allied itself to Napoleon. The price Denmark had to pay was signing away its rights to Norway, which it did by the treaty of Kiel in 1814. Danish possessions were now reduced to Iceland, Greenland, the Faroes and Schleswig-Holstein. Holstein was lost to Germany in 1863 and Schleswig a year later. The surrender of so much rich agricultural land, with nearly 1m. inhabitants, brought Denmark to the edge of bankruptcy. But within a few years the country had pulled itself back from one of the lowest points in its history. The economy benefited from a land-reclamation programme in Jutland. Socially, Bishop Grundtvig (founder of the folk high-schools), who reconciled patriotism with a reduced status for Denmark in European affairs, had a great influence. There were demands for a liberal constitution. In 1846 Anton Frederik Tscherning founded the Society of the Friends of the Peasant (Bondevennernes Selskab), which later became the Liberal Party (Venstre).

Social Reform

In 1901 the Left Reform Party (Venstrereformparti) came to power to introduce free-trade, popular education and changes in the revenue system to make income rather than land the criterion for taxation. The First World War gave neutral Denmark an improved export market but there was a shortage of raw materials. In 1929 a Social Democrat government, with Thorvald Stauning as prime minister, combined rural and urban interests in one of the most ambitious programmes of social reforms ever mounted. The 1930s Great Depression led to unemployment made worse when Britain favoured Commonwealth food imports over those from Denmark. In the late 1930s trade improved and industry expanded.

In 1939 when the Second World War broke out, Denmark again declared neutrality. On 9 April 1940 German troops entered and occupied the country. The Germans permitted Danish self-government until growing resistance led to direct rule. After the liberation a Liberal government was elected with Knud Kristensen as prime minister. Kristensen's campaign for the return of southern Schleswig from Germany brought down his government in 1947. Denmark joined NATO in 1949.

With its share of the Marshall Plan, Denmark entered on a new industrial revolution. By the mid-1950s the value of manufacturing equalled that of agriculture. However, there was a high rate of inflation. In 1953 the Social Democrats came back to power where they remained until the mid-1960s. By then the rate of inflation was higher than in any comparable country. In 1968 a centre-right coalition was elected, led by Hilmar Baunsgaard. But the change of government did not signify a change in strategy. Taxes were kept high and the budget expanded to increase social welfare. After the 1971 election, the Social Democrat leader Jens Otto Krag negotiated entry into the European Union, making Copenhagen the bridge between the Nordic capitals and Brussels. In 1982 a Conservative-led minority government was formed, led by Poul Schlüter, the first Conservative prime minister since 1901. He remained in power until 1993 when a Social Democratic coalition led by Poul Nyrup Rasmussen took office. Following the 2001 election, a right-wing government came to power under Anders Fogh Rasmussen, whose campaign for entry into the EMU (European Monetary Union) was rejected in a referendum in 2000. In Nov. 2008 Greenland approved a referendum in favour of greater autonomy from Denmark. Anders Fogh Rasmussen left office in April 2009 to become Secretary General of NATO. He was replaced by Lars Løkke Rasmussen (no relation) as prime minister.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Denmark is bounded in the west by the North Sea, northwest and north by the Skagerrak and Kattegat straits (separating it from Norway and Sweden), and south by Germany. A 16-km long fixed link with Sweden was opened in July 2000 when the Øresund motorway and railway bridge between Copenhagen and Malmö was completed.

Regions	Area (sq. km)	Population 1 Jan. 2011	Population per sq. km 2011
Capital Region (Hovedstaden)	2,561	1,699,387	663.6
Central Jutland (Midtjylland)	13,124	1,260,993	96.1
North Jutland (Nordjylland)	7,933	579,829	73.1
Zealand (Sjælland)	7,273	819,763	112.7
South Denmark (Syddanmark)	12,206	1,200,656	98.4
Total	43,098	5,560,628	129.0

Denmark has not used a traditional census since 1970, but instead uses a register-based method of calculating the population. It was the first country in the world to implement such a change.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 5.65m.

In 2010 an estimated 86.7% of the population lived in urban areas. In 2010, 91.4% of the inhabitants were born in Denmark, including the Faroe Islands and Greenland.

On 1 Jan. 2011 the population of the capital, Copenhagen (comprising Copenhagen, Frederiksberg and Gentofte municipalities), was 1,199,224; Aarhus, 249,709; Odense, 167,615; Aalborg, 103,545; Esbjerg, 71,576; Randers, 60,656; Kolding, 57,197; Horsens, 53,807; Vejle, 51,341.

The official language is Danish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009	62,818	32,934	14,940	54,872	44,874	67,161

2009 rates per 1,000 population: birth, 11.4; death, 9.9. Births outside marriage: 2006, 46.4%; 2007, 46.1%; 2008, 46.2%; 2009, 46.5%. Average annual population growth rate, 2005–09, 0.5%. Suicide rate, 2006 (per 100,000 population) was 11.9 (men, 17.5; women, 6.4). Life expectancy at birth, 2008–09, was 76.5 years for males and 80.8 years for females. In 2007 the most popular age range for marrying was 30–34 for males and 25–29 for females. Denmark was the first country to legalize same-sex unions, in 1989. Infant mortality, 2009, 3.0 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 2009, 1.8 births per woman. In 2009 Denmark received 3,855 asylum applications, equivalent to 0.7 per 1,000 inhabitants. In July 2002 a controversial new immigration law was introduced in an attempt to deter potential asylum seekers.

A UNICEF report published in 2005 showed that 2.4% of children in Denmark live in poverty (in households with income below 50% of the national median), the lowest percentage of any country.

CLIMATE

The climate is much modified by marine influences and the effect of the Gulf Stream, to give winters that may be both cold or mild and often cloudy. Summers may be warm and sunny or chilly and rainy. Generally the east is drier than the west. Long periods of calm weather are exceptional and windy conditions are common. Copenhagen, Jan. 33°F (0.5°C), July 63°F (17°C). Annual rainfall 650 mm. Esbjerg, Jan. 33°F (0.5°C), July 61°F (16°C). Annual rainfall 800 mm. In general 10% of precipitation is snow.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution is founded upon the Basic Law of 5 June 1953. The legislative power lies with the Queen and the Folketing (parliament) jointly. The executive power is vested in the monarch, who exercises authority through the ministers.

The reigning Queen is Margrethe II, b. 16 April 1940; married 10 June 1967 to Prince Henrik, b. Count de Monpezat. She succeeded to the throne on the death of her father, King Frederik IX, on 14 Jan. 1972. Offspring: Crown Prince Frederik, b. 26 May 1968, married 14 May 2004 Mary Elizabeth Donaldson, b. 5 Feb. 1972 (offspring: Prince Christian Valdemar Henri John, b. 15 Oct. 2005; Princess Isabella Henrietta Ingrid Margrethe, b. 21 April 2007; Prince Vincent Frederik Minik Alexander, b. 8 Jan. 2011; Princess Josephine Sophia Ivalo Mathilda, b. 8 Jan. 2011); Prince Joachim, b. 7 June 1969, married 18 Nov. 1995 Alexandra Manley, b. 30 June 1964, divorced 8 April 2005 (offspring: Prince Nikolai William Alexander Frederik, b. 28 Aug. 1999; Prince Felix Henrik Valdemar Christian, b. 22 July 2002), married 24 May 2008 Marie Cavallier, b. 6 Feb. 1976 (offspring: Prince Henrik Carl Joachim Alain, b. 4 May 2009).

Sisters of the Queen. Princess Benedikte, b. 29 April 1944; married 3 Feb. 1968 to Prince Richard of Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburg; Princess Anne-Marie, b. 30 Aug. 1946; married 18 Sept. 1964 to King Constantine of Greece.

The crown was elective from the earliest times but became hereditary by right in 1660. The direct male line of the house of Oldenburg became extinct with King Frederik VII on 15 Nov. 1863. In view of the death of the king, without direct heirs, the Great Powers signed a treaty at London on 8 May 1852, by the terms of which the succession to the crown was made over to Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein-Sonderburg-Glücksburg, and to the direct male descendants of his union with the Princess Louise of Hesse-Cassel. This became law on 31 July 1853. Linked to the constitution of 5 June 1953, a new law of succession, dated 27 March 1953, has come into force, which restricts the right of succession to the descendants of King Christian X and Queen Alexandrine, and admits the sovereign's daughters to the line of succession, ranking after the sovereign's sons.

The Queen receives a tax-free annual sum from the state. This was 71.1m. kroner in 2011.

The judicial power is with the courts. The monarch must be a member of the Evangelical-Lutheran Church, the official Church of the State, and may not assume major international obligations without the consent of the Folketing. The Folketing consists of one chamber. All men and women of Danish nationality of more than 18 years of age and permanently resident in Denmark possess the franchise, and are eligible for election to the Folketing, which is at present composed of 179 members; 135 members are elected by the method of proportional representation in 17 constituencies. In order to attain an equal representation of the different parties, 40 additional seats are divided among such parties which have not obtained sufficient returns at the constituency elections. Two members are elected for the Faroe Islands and two for Greenland. The term of the legislature is four years, but a general election may be called at any time. The Folketing convenes every year on the first Tuesday in Oct. Besides its legislative functions, every six years it appoints judges who, together with the ordinary members of the Supreme Court, form the Rigsret, a tribunal which can alone try parliamentary impeachments.

CURRENT LEADERS

Helle Thorning-Schmidt

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Helle Thorning-Schmidt took office on 3 Oct. 2011, heading a Social Democrat-led coalition. She is the country's first female prime minister.

Early Life

Born on 14 Dec. 1966 in Rødovre, Helle Thorning-Schmidt completed her early education at Ishøj Gymnasium, Copenhagen. From 1987–94 she studied political science at the University of Copenhagen. In 1992 she was selected by the ministry of foreign affairs to attend the College of Europe in Bruges, Belgium, where she obtained a masters in European studies, specialising in policy and public administration. While in Belgium she became involved with the Social Democrats there and joined the Danish Social Democrats in 1993.

From 1994–97 Thorning-Schmidt headed the party's secretariat in the European parliament. She then joined the Danish Confederation of Trade Unions as a consultant before being elected to the European Parliament as a member of the Party of European Socialists in 1999. She subsequently sat on the employment and social committee and co-founded the Campaign for Parliament Reform (CPR).

In Feb. 2005 Thorning-Schmidt won a seat in the Folketing. On 12 April 2005 she was elected leader of the Social Democrats following Mogens Lykketoft's resignation. At the 2007 general election Thorning-Schmidt campaigned on relaxing immigration regulations, increasing welfare spending and ensuring that 45% of Denmark's energy requirements are met by renewable sources by 2025.

Despite electoral defeat, Thorning-Schmidt kept her post and the Social Democrats remained the largest opposition party. In 2011 she campaigned to raise taxes for high earners, increase public spending and liberalize immigration policies. Her centre-left coalition secured a narrow victory at the general election.

Career in Office

Thorning-Schmidt's primary aim is to revitalize the economy by creating jobs via education, green energy and infrastructure projects. However, building consensus within her coalition will be an ongoing challenge. When Denmark took the EU rotating presidency from 1 Jan. 2012, Thorning-Schmidt announced Danish support for EU treaty change in the interests of resolving the euro debt crisis, even though Denmark is outside the euro zone.

DEFENCE

Pursuant to the Defence Agreement covering 2005–09 the Danish defence system is being completely restructured. A new security mechanism is being built from scratch to make it relevant in today's security environment. The entire transformation process centres on increasing Denmark's deployable capabilities. The composition of armed forces personnel has changed to 60:40 in favour of operational elements. Change has been accomplished by establishing so-called functional services in a number of areas formerly run by each individual service, and by reducing the staff- and support structure.

Denmark will be able simultaneously to deploy 2,000 soldiers on international missions and offer considerable High Readiness forces to NATO or coalition partners. The Armed Forces as a whole have been professionalized. Formal conscription still exists, but no specific combat training takes place. New conscripts train for four months in basic Homeland Defence, for example fire fighting, relief work during force majeure and basic weapons handling. The 20% of conscripts expected to sign up for additional time undergo military training focusing on participation in international operations for eight months and then deploy on an international assignment for six months.

The overall organization of the Danish Armed Forces includes the Ministry of Defence (MoD), the Danish Defence Command, the Army, the Navy, the Air Force, Functional Services and Schools and several joint service institutions and authorities; to this should be added the Home Guard, which is an integral part of Danish military defence. The Chief of Defence (CHOD), answering to the Minister of Defence, is in full command of the Army, the Navy and the Air Force.

Denmark has a compulsory military service with mobilization based on the constitution of 1849. This states that it is the duty of every fit man to contribute to the national defence. In 2007 defence expenditure totalled US$3,788m. (US$692 per capita), representing 1.3% of GDP.

Army

The Danish Army is comprised of field army formations and local defence forces. The strength of the Danish Army is approximately 10,600. The Danish Army is organized in two brigades, the first made up of professional soldiers and the second functioning as a training structure for conscripts.

Navy

The strength of the Royal Danish Navy is approximately 3,500. The two main naval bases are located at Frederikshavn and Korsør.

Air Force

The strength of the Royal Danish Air Force is approximately 3,500. The Royal Danish Air Force consists of Tactical Air Command Denmark and the Danish Air Materiel Command.

Home Guard (Hjemmeværnet)

The overall Home Guard organization comprises the Home Guard Command, the Army Home Guard, the Naval Home Guard, the Air Force Home Guard and supporting institutions. The personnel are recruited on a voluntary basis. The personnel establishment of the Home Guard is approximately 50,000 soldiers.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In a referendum in June 1992 the electorate voted against ratifying the Maastricht Treaty for closer political union within the EU. Turnout was 82%. 50.7% of votes were against ratification, 49.3% in favour. However, a second referendum on 18 May 1993 reversed this result, with 56.8% of votes cast in favour of ratification and 43.2% against. Turnout was 86.2%. In a referendum held on 28 Sept. 2000 Danish voters rejected their country's entry into the common European currency, 53.2% opposing membership of the euro against 46.8% voting in favour. Turnout was 87.6%.

ECONOMY

In 2007 agriculture accounted for 1% of GDP, industry 26% and services 73%.

According to the Berlin-based organization Transparency International, Denmark ranked equal second in the world in a 2011 survey of countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 9.4 out of 10 in the corruption perceptions index.

Denmark gave US$2.8bn. in international aid in 2009, equivalent to 0.88% of GNI (making Denmark one of only five countries to exceed the UN target of 0.7%).

Overview

After weak growth during the Scandinavian banking crisis of 1991–93 the economy grew robustly from 1994–2007. In the period 2001–03 Denmark avoided recession even in the face of a global economic slowdown, although annual growth averaged less than 1%. The expansion of both foreign and domestic demand was instrumental in the economic revival from 2004, while income tax cuts and a thriving real estate market boosted consumer demand in 2005. Higher investment and a strong export performance also helped growth.

In early 2007 the housing boom ended and the economy began to slow, exacerbated by the global financial crisis. A 20% correction in house prices contributed to the economy shrinking by 5.2% in 2009, before growth rebounded by 1.7% in 2010. However, private consumption and business investment remained subdued.

Until the 1960s the economy was heavily based on a competitive agricultural sector. 57% of the labour force was employed in agriculture, fisheries, manufacturing and industry in 1960. By 2007 that figure had declined to 26%. Almost three-quarters of the workforce are now employed in services; the sector with the greatest proportional gain in employment in the last half-century is public services.

In the period 1993–2003 total research and development (R&D) expenditure nearly doubled, with expenditure in the private sector accounting for over two-thirds of total R&D spending. Since 2002 R&D expenditure as a share of GDP has been around 2.5% annually, well above both the EU and OECD averages. R&D is particularly high in manufacturing, knowledge services (such as information and communications technologies) and, increasingly, in financial services.

Denmark is ranked third in the world in terms of the Gini coefficient (a measure of income equality) and eighth in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report for 2011–12.

Currency

The monetary unit is the Danish krone (DKK) of 100 øre. Inflation rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
2.4%	2.4%	2.1%	1.2%	1.8%	1.9%	1.7%	3.4%	1.3%	2.3%

In Aug. 2009 foreign exchange reserves were US$67,774m., gold reserves were 2.14m. troy oz and total money supply was 832.2bn. kroner.

While not participating directly in EMU, the Danish krone is pegged to the euro in ERM-2, the successor to the exchange rate mechanism.

Budget

The following shows the actual revenue and expenditure in central government accounts for the calendar years 2006 and 2007, the approved budget figures for 2008 and the budget for 2009 (in 1,000 kroner):

	2006	2007	2008	2009
Revenue <sup>1</sup>	562,987,500	649,559,500	647,946,900	669,496,400
Expenditure <sup>1</sup>	459,623,500	535,301,500	556,050,500	597,606,700

The 2009 budget envisaged revenue of 335,266.7m. kroner from income and property taxes and 279,872.0m. kroner from consumer taxes. The central government debt on 31 Dec. 2007 amounted to 255,074m. kroner.

In 2007 tax revenues were 48.9% of GDP (the highest percentage of any developed country).

Denmark's budget deficit in 2010 was 2.6% of GDP (2009, 2.7%). In 2008 it had a surplus of 3.2%. The required target set by the EU is a budget deficit of no more than 3%.

VAT is 25%.

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
0.7%	0.5%	0.4%	2.3%	2.4%	3.4%	1.6%	-1.1%	-5.2%	1.7%

Total GDP was US$310.4bn. in 2010.

Banking and Finance

In 2009 the accounts of the National Bank (Governor, Nils Bernstein) balanced at 550,151m. kroner. The assets included official net foreign reserves of 370,861m. kroner. The liabilities included notes and coins totalling 60,761m. kroner. On 31 Dec. 2008 there were 138 commercial banks and savings banks, with deposits of 1,438,028m. kroner.

The two largest commercial banks are Danske Bank and Nordea Bank Danmark. The supervisory boards of all banks must include public representation.

There is a stock exchange in Copenhagen.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

In 2008, 18.8% of energy consumption came from renewables (wind power, solar power, hydro-electric power, tidal power, geothermal energy and biomass), compared to the European Union average of 10.3%. A target of 30% has been set by the EU for 2020.

Environment

Denmark's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 9.9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 13.0m. kW in 2007. Production (2008), 34,737m. kWh. Consumption per capita in 2007 was 6,505 kWh. In 2007 some 5,212 wind turbines produced 19.7% of output.

Oil and Gas

Oil production was (2008) 14.0m. tonnes with 800m. bbls of proven reserves. Production of natural gas was (2008) 10.1bn. cu. metres with 60bn. cu. metres of proven reserves.

Wind

Denmark is one of the world's largest wind-power producers, with an installed capacity of 3,734 MW at the end of 2010. Denmark generated 19.3% of its electricity from wind in 2009, the highest proportion of any country.

Agriculture

Agriculture accounted for 9.7% of exports and 2.5% of imports in 2009. Land ownership is widely distributed. In 2008 there were 43,413 holdings with at least 5 ha. of agricultural area (or at least a production equivalent to that from 5 ha. of barley). There were 10,214 small holdings (with less than 10 ha.), 18,465 medium-sized holdings (10–50 ha.) and 14,734 holdings with more than 50 ha. Approximately 5.1% of all agricultural land is used for organic farming. There were 24,675 agricultural workers in 2007. In 2007 Denmark had 2.30m. ha. of arable land and 8,000 ha. of permanent cultures.

In 2008 the cultivated area was (in 1,000 ha.): grain, 1,505; green fodder and grass, 705; root crops, 84; set aside, 71; other crops, 298; pulses, 5; total cultivated area, 2,668.

Chief crops	Area (1,000 ha.)				Production (in 1,000 tonnes)
	2006	2007	2008	2009	2006	2007	2008	2009
Wheat	686	689	638	739	4,802	4,519	5,019	5,940
Barley	679	632	717	593	3,270	3,104	3,396	3,394
Potatoes	39	41	41	39	1,361	1,626	1,705	1,618

Other root crops	46	43	41	43	2,585	3,518	2,525	2,278

Livestock, 2008 (in 1,000): pigs, 12,738; cattle, 1,564; sheep, 136; horses, 60; poultry, 15,106.

Production (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2009: pork, 1,898; beef, 137; milk, 4,733; cheese, 324; eggs, 73; butter, 37.

On 1 Jan. 2010 tractors numbered 99,700.

Forestry

The area under forests in 2006 was 534,000 ha., or 12.4% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 was 2.57m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

The total value of the fish caught was (in 1m. kroner): 1970, 854; 1980, 2,888; 1985, 3,542; 1990, 3,485; 1995, 3,020; 2000, 3,141; 2005, 2,781; 2008, 2,487; 2009, 2,154.

In 2009 the total catch was 738,094 tonnes, almost exclusively from sea fishing. Denmark is one of the leading fishing nations in the EU.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Denmark in March 2011 were: Novo Nordisk A/S, a health care company (US$62.0bn.); A. P. Møller-Mærsk, a shipping company (US$40.9bn.); and Danske Bank (US$20.7bn.).

The following table is of gross value added by kind of activity (in 1m. kroner; 2000 constant prices):

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Denmark proper had (1 Jan. 2009) 1,128 km of motorways, 3,790 km of other state roads and 69,500 km of other commercial roads. Motor vehicles registered at 1 Jan. 2010 comprised 2,120,322 passenger cars, 32,300 trucks, 462,359 vans, 14,509 buses and 147,373 motorcycles. There were 5,250 casualties in road accidents in 2009, resulting in 303 fatalities.

Rail

In 2008 there were 2,132 km of State railways of 1,435 mm gauge (619 km electrified), which carried 164m. passengers (2007) and 7.14m. tonnes of freight. There were also 514 km of private railways. A metro system was opened in Copenhagen in 2002.

Civil Aviation

The main international airport is at Copenhagen (Kastrup), and there are also international flights from Aalborg, Aarhus, Billund and Esbjerg. The Scandinavian Airlines System (SAS) resulted from the 1950 merger of the three former Scandinavian airlines. SAS Denmark A/S is the Danish partner (SAS Norge ASA and SAS Sverige AB being the other two). Denmark and Norway each hold 14.3% of the capital of SAS and Sweden 21.4%. The remaining 50% of SAS shares are listed on the stock exchanges of Copenhagen, Oslo and Stockholm.

On 1 Jan. 2009 Denmark had 1,122 aircraft with a capacity of 19,077 seats. Copenhagen (Kastrup) handled 9,848,000 departing passengers in 2009, Billund 1,151,000, Aalborg 561,000 and Aarhus 255,000.

Shipping

On 1 Jan. 2010 the merchant fleet consisted of 462 vessels (above 100 GT) totalling 10.7m. GT. In 2009, 40m. tonnes of cargo were unloaded and 29m. tonnes were loaded in Danish ports; traffic by passenger ships and ferries is not included.

Telecommunications

In 2009 there were 2,062,000 main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year mobile phone subscribers numbered 7,424,000 (134.1 per 100 persons). In 2010, 86% of the population had access to the internet at home and 88% had access to a computer at home. Denmark has one of the highest fixed broadband penetration rates, at 37.7 subscribers per 100 inhabitants in Dec. 2010.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The lowest courts of justice are organized in 24 tribunals (byretter), where minor cases are dealt with by a single judge. The tribunal at Copenhagen has one president and 42 other judges; and Aarhus one president and 13 other judges; the other tribunals have one to 11 judges. Cases of greater consequence are dealt with by the two High Courts (Landsretterne); these courts are also courts of appeal for minor cases. The Eastern High Court in Copenhagen has one president and 60 other judges; and the Western in Viborg one president and 39 other judges. From these an appeal lies to the Supreme Court in Copenhagen, composed of a president and 19 other judges. Judges under 65 years of age can be removed only by judicial sentence.

In 2009, 487,851 penal code offences were reported, including 56 homicides. In 2008 the daily average population in penal institutions was 3,679 (67.0 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Education has been compulsory since 1814. The first stage of the Danish education system is the basic school (education at first level). This starts with a pre-school year (education preceding the first level), which has been compulsory since the beginning of the 2009–10 school year, and continues up to and including the optional 10th year in the folkeskole (municipal primary and lower secondary school). In 2006, 649,000 pupils attended education at first level and second level, first stage. In 2010 the number of pupils beginning their education at pre-school was 67,174.

Of all students leaving basic school in 2007–08, 79% had commenced further education within three months. Over half of the students (53%) had elected to attend general upper-secondary education (general programmes of education at secondary level, second stage), while 25% opted for vocational education and training at secondary level, second stage.

Education that qualifies students for tertiary level education is called general upper-secondary education and comprises general upper-secondary education (general programmes of education at secondary level, second stage), such as gymnasium (upper-secondary school), higher preparatory examination and adult upper-secondary level courses as well as general/vocational upper-secondary education at the vocational education institutions. In 2008, 119,000 students attended general upper-secondary education and 125,000 students attended upper-secondary vocational education and training.

Higher education is divided into three levels: short-cycle higher education involves two years of training, sometimes practical, after completion of upper-secondary education (19,000 students in 2008); medium-cycle higher education involves two–four years of mainly theoretical training (64,000 students in 2008); long-cycle higher education requires more than four years of education, mainly theoretical, divided between a bachelor's degree, candidate programme and PhD programme (bachelor's students in 2008: 62,000; master's: 53,000; PhD: 6,800).

Universities have been reorganized as a result of several mergers in Jan. 2007. The universities ranked by student population are: the University of Copenhagen (founded 1479), 36,600 students; the University of Aarhus (1928), 30,100; the University of Southern Denmark (1964), 14,300; the Copenhagen

Business School, 13,900; the University of Aalborg (1974), 11,300; Roskilde University (1972), 8,100; the Technical University of Denmark, 6,200; the IT University of Copenhagen, 1,300.

Other types of post-secondary education have also been reorganized through mergers of institutions. Eight university colleges have been formed with student numbers ranging from 3,000 to 13,000. The university colleges encompass: schools of nursing; schools of midwifery education; colleges of physiotherapy; social education colleges; teacher training colleges; engineering colleges. There are also post-secondary educational institutions in the cultural sector in areas such as music, architecture, media and the visual arts.

In 2008 public expenditure on education was 15.0% of total government spending.

The adult literacy rate is at least 99%.

Health

In 2005 there were 17,350 doctors (321 per 100,000 persons), 4,634 dentists, 52,843 nurses, 27,072 auxiliary nurses and 1,304 midwives. There were 59 hospitals in 2005 (20,058 beds). In 2007 Denmark spent 9.8% of its GDP on health. In 2006 an estimated 26% of men and 23% of women smoked.

Welfare

The main body of Danish social welfare legislation is consolidated in seven acts concerning: (1) public health security, (2) sick-day benefits, (3) social pensions (for early retirement and old age), (4) employment injuries insurance, (5) employment services, unemployment insurance and activation measures, (6) social assistance including assistance to handicapped, rehabilitation, child and juvenile guidance, daycare institutions, care of the aged and sick, and (7) family allowances.

Public health security, covering the entire population, provides free medical care, substantial subsidies for certain essential medicines together with some dental care, and a funeral allowance. Hospitals are primarily municipal and treatment is normally free. All employed workers are granted daily sickness allowances; others can have limited daily sickness allowances. Daily cash benefits are granted in the case of temporary incapacity because of illness, injury or childbirth to all persons in paid employment. The benefit is paid up to the rate of 100% of the average weekly earnings. There is, however, a maximum rate of 3,415 kroner a week.

Social pensions cover the entire population. Entitlement to the old-age pension at the full rate is subject to the condition that the beneficiary has been ordinarily resident in Denmark for 40 years. For a shorter period of residence, the benefits are reduced proportionally. The basic amount of the old-age pension in Jan. 2007 was 174,720 kroner a year to married couples and 119,244 to single persons. Various supplementary allowances, depending on age and income, may be payable with the basic amount. The retirement age is 65, or 67 for those born before 1 July 1939. Depending on health and income, persons aged 60–64 (60–66 for those born before 1 July 1939) may apply for an early retirement pension. Persons over 65 (or 67) years of age are entitled to the basic amount. The pensions to a married couple are calculated and paid to the husband and the wife separately. Early retirement pension to a disabled person is payable at ages 18–64 (or 66) years, at a rate of 177,636 kroner to a single person. Early retirement pensions may be subject to income regulation. The same applies to the old-age pension.

Employment injuries insurance provides for disability or survivors' pensions and compensations. The scheme covers practically all employees.

Employment services are provided by regional public employment agencies. Insurance against unemployment provides daily allowances and covers about 85% of the unemployed. The unemployment insurance system is based on state subsidized insurance funds linked to the trade unions. The unemployment insurance funds had a membership of 2,065,700 in Jan. 2010.

The Social Assistance Act comprises three acts (the act on active social policy, the act on social service and the act on integration of foreigners). From these acts individual benefits are applied, in contrast to the other fields of social legislation which apply to fixed benefits. Total social expenditure, including hospital and health services, statutory pensions, etc. amounted in the financial year 2008 to 515,935-0m. kroner.

RELIGION

There is complete religious liberty. The state church is the Evangelical-Lutheran to which 80.9% of the population belonged in 2010. There are ten dioceses, each with a Bishop. The Bishop together with the Chief Administrative Officer of the county make up the diocesan-governing body, responsible for all matters of ecclesiastical local finance and general administration. Bishops are appointed by the Crown after an election by the clergy and parish council members. Each diocese is divided into a number of deaneries (107 in the whole country), each with its own Dean and Deanery Committee, who have certain financial powers. 81% of church finance derives from a voluntary tax paid by members, at a rate between 0.4–1.5% of income depending upon location. A further 12% comes from state subsidiaries and 7% from other sources, such as church lands.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Denmark has four sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the burial mounds, runic stones and church at Jelling (inscribed on the list in 1994); Roskilde Cathedral (1995); Kronborg Castle (2000); and Ilulissat Icefjord (2004), the sea mouth of Sermeq Kujalleq in Greenland.

Press

In 2009 there were 37 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 1.66m. The newspaper with the largest average circulation in the period Jan.–June 2009 was MetroXpress (a free paper; 228,000 on weekdays), followed by 24timer (also a free paper; 180,000 on weekdays) and Urban (again a free paper; 162,000 on weekdays).

Tourism

In 2009, 8,457,000 overnight tourists visited Denmark; foreign tourists spent some 35,482m. kroner in the same year. Foreigners spent 11,164,000 nights in holiday cottages, 4,258,000 nights in hotels and 2,750,000 nights at camping sites in 2009.

Festivals

Roskilde, one of Europe's largest music festivals, is held annually in July. Other festivals include the Winter Jazz Festival in late Jan./early Feb. which takes place across the country, Carnival in Aalborg, held every May, the Copenhagen Jazz Festival in July, Skanderborg festival (music) in Aug., Tønder Festival (folk music) in Aug., Aarhus Festival (performing arts) in Aug./Sept. and the Copenhagen International Film Festival in Sept./Oct.

The Faroe Islands

Føroyar/Færøerne

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A Norwegian province until the peace treaty of 14 Jan. 1814, the islands have been represented by two members in the Danish parliament since 1851. In 1852 they were granted an elected parliament which in 1948 secured a degree of home-rule. The islands are not part of the EU. Recently, negotiations for independence were given a push by the prospect of exploiting offshore oil and gas.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The archipelago is situated due north of Scotland, 300 km from the Shetland Islands, 675 km from Norway and 450 km from Iceland, with a total land area of 1,399 sq. km (540 sq. miles). There are 17 inhabited islands (the main ones being Streymoy, Eysturoy, Vágoy, Suðuroy, Sandoy and Borðoy) and numerous islets, all mountainous and of volcanic origin. Population in Jan. 2010 was 48,650; density, 34.8 per sq. km. In 2007 an estimated 59.1% of the population lived in rural areas. The capital is Tórshavn (12,375 residents in Jan. 2010) on Streymoy.

The official languages are Faroese and Danish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Birth rate per 1,000 inhabitants (2005), 14.8; death rate, 8.7. Life expectancy at birth (2001–05): 77.8 years.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

There is a 33-member parliament, the Løgting, which is elected by proportional representation by universal suffrage at age 18. Parliament elects a government of at least three members that administers home rule. Denmark is represented in parliament by the High Commissioner. A referendum was to be held on 26 May 2001 on the government's plan to move towards full sovereignty, but it was called off after the Danish prime minister at the time Poul Nyrup Rasmussen stated that subsidies would cease after four years if the islanders voted for independence.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 29 Oct. 2011: the Union Party (Sambandsflokkurin) won 8 seats with 24.7% of the vote; the People's Party (Fólkaflokkurin) 8 seats (22.5%); the Republic (Tjóðveldi) 6 (18.3%); the Social Democratic Party (Javnaðarflokkurin) 6 (17.7%); Progress (Framsókn) 2 (6.3%); the Centre Party (Miðflokkurin) 2 (6.2%); and the Self-Government Party (Sjálvstýrisflokkurin) 1 (4.2%). Turnout was 86.6%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

High Commissioner: Dan M. Knudsen (b. 1962; took office on 1 Jan. 2008).

Prime Minister: Kaj Leo Johannesen; b. 1964 (Union Party; took office on 26 Sept. 2008).

Office of the Prime Minister: <http://www.tinganes.fo>

ECONOMY

Currency

Since 1940 the currency has been the Faroese króna (kr.) which remains freely interchangeable with the Danish krone.

Budget

In 2008 revenues totalled 4,332m. kr. and expenditures 4,315m. kr. Tax revenue constituted 85.4% of revenues in 2008; current expenditure accounted for 95.2% of expenditures.

Performance

Total GDP in 2009 was US$2.2bn.

Banking and Finance

The largest bank is the state-owned Føroya Banki. There are four other banks.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 16.8 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was approximately 100,000 kW in 2007. Total production in 2007 was 269m. kWh, of which 39% was hydro-electric. There are five hydro-electric stations at Vestmanna on Streymoy and one at Eiði on Eysturoy. Consumption per capita was an estimated 5,554 kWh in 2007.

Agriculture

Only 2% of the surface is cultivated; it is chiefly used for sheep and cattle grazing. Potatoes are grown for home consumption. Livestock (2009 estimate): sheep, 68,000; cattle, 2,000.

Fisheries

Deep-sea fishing now forms the most important sector (90%) of the economy, primarily in the 200-mile exclusive zone, but also off Greenland, Iceland, Svalbard and Newfoundland and in the Barents Sea. Total catch (2005) 565,260 tonnes, primarily cod, coalfish, redfish, mackerel, blue whiting, capelin, prawns and herring.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Trade, 2006, in US$1m. (2005 in brackets): imports c.i.f., 783.2 (746.6); exports f.o.b., 631.0 (601.8). In 2006 machinery and transport equipment accounted for 28.3% of imports, mineral fuels 18.8% and manufactured goods 14.1%. Chilled and frozen fish constituted 61.1% of exports in 2006, salted and smoked fish 15.2% and feeding stuff for animals 11.4%. Denmark supplied 30.1% of imports in 2006, Norway 20.3% and Germany 7.6%; the United Kingdom took 27.2% of exports in 2006, Denmark 12.2% and Norway 10.3%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2005 there were 463 km of highways. At 1 Jan. 2006 there were 18,041 private cars and 4,017 lorries and vans.

Civil Aviation

The airport is on Vágoy, from which there are regular services to Aberdeen, Billund, Copenhagen and Reykjavík.

Shipping

The chief port is Tórshavn, with smaller ports at Klaksvik, Vestmanna, Skálafjørður, Tvøroyri, Vágur and Fuglafjørður. In Dec. 2007 there were 257 vessels of 20 GT or over (including 150 fishing vessels), totalling 252,000 GT.

Telecommunications

There were 66,400 telephone subscribers in 2005, including 42,500 mobile phone subscribers. In 2005 internet users numbered 33,000.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education

In 2008–09 there were 5,113 primary and 1,899 secondary school pupils (total of 649 teachers).

Health

In 2003 there were 83 physicians, 38 dentists and 360 nurses. In 2003 there were three hospitals with 290 beds.

RELIGION

About 80% are Evangelical Lutherans and 20% are Plymouth Brethren, or belong to small communities of Roman Catholics, Pentecostals, Adventists, Jehovah's Witnesses and Bahais.

CULTURE

Press

In 2006 there were two daily newspapers (Dimmalætting and Sosialurin) and five non-dailies (four paid-for and one free). The dailies had a combined circulation of 17,000.

Greenland

Grønland/Kalaallit Nunaat

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A Danish possession since 1380, Greenland became an integral part of the Danish kingdom on 5 June 1953. Following a referendum in Jan. 1979, home rule was introduced from 1 May 1979. In June 2009 laws providing for an extension of Greenland's autonomy came into force, providing Greenland with increased control over its energy resources and the adoption of Greenlandic as the sole official language.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Area, 2,166,086 sq. km (840,000 sq. miles), made up of 1,755,437 sq. km of ice cap and 410,449 sq. km of ice-free land. The population at 1 Jan. 2009 was 56,194, of whom 50,023 were born in Greenland and 6,171 were born outside Greenland; density 0.03 per sq. km. The population of the four communes in Jan. 2009 was as follows: Kujalleq, 7,631; Qaasuitsup, 17,678; Qeqqata, 9,686; Sermersooq, 20,955; and 244 not belonging to any specific municipality. The capital is Nuuk (Godthåb), with a population in Jan. 2007 of 14,719. In Jan. 2007, 47,000 persons were urban (83%).

The predominant language is Kalaallisut (Greenlandic), which since June 2009 has been the sole official language. Most of the population also speak Danish, which also had official status until June 2009.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Live births (2005), 887; deaths (2005), 466. Number of abortions (2005): 899. Birth rate per 1,000 population (2005), 15.7; death rate per 1,000 population (2005), 8.2. There were 49 suicides in 2005. Population growth rate (2005), -0.1%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

There is a 31-member Home Rule Parliament, which is elected for four-year terms and meets two to three times a year. The seven-member cabinet is elected by parliament. Ministers need not be members of parliament. In accordance with the Home Rule Act, the Greenland Home Rule government is constituted by an elected parliament, Landstinget (The Greenland Parliament), and an administration headed by a local government, Landsstyret (The Cabinet).

Greenland elects two representatives to the Danish parliament (Folketing). Denmark is represented by an appointed High Commissioner. Following a referendum in Nov. 2008 approved by 75.5% of voters and ratification by the parliaments of Greenland and Denmark, a series of autonomous reforms came into operation on 21 June 2009. These include extending Greenland's authority over its police force, courts and coastguard as well as revenues derived from its natural resources. Greenlandic is the sole official language. Denmark, meanwhile, has cut its annual subsidies to the island. The moves are considered a major staging post to independence.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At parliamentary elections held on 2 June 2009 the opposition Inuit Ataqatigiit (leftist) won 14 of 31 seats and 43.7% of votes cast, the ruling Siumut (Social Democratic) 9 and 26.5%, the Democrats 4 and 12.7%, Atæssut (Liberal) 3 and 10.9%, and the Association of Candidates 1 with 3.8%. As a result Siumut lost power after 30 years as the ruling party. Turnout was 71.3%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

A coalition government of Inuit Ataqatigiit, the Democrats and the Association of Candidates was formed in June 2009.

Prime Minister: Kuupik Kleist; b. 1958 (Inuit Ataqatigiit, in office since 12 June 2009).

High Commissioner: Mikaela Engell (appointed 2011).

ECONOMY

Currency

The unit of currency is the Danish krone.

Budget

The budget (finanslovsforslag) for the following year must be approved by the Home Rule Parliament (Landstinget) no later than 31 Oct.

The following table shows the actual revenue and expenditure as shown in Home Rule government accounts for the calendar years 2003–05 and the approved budget figures for 2006 and 2007. Figures are in 1m. kroner.

	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007
Revenue	5,315	5,395	5,648	5,834	5,808
Expenditure	5,184	5,294	5,341	5,473	5,670

Performance

In 2006 and 2007 the rate of economic growth quickened, primarily as a result of high growth rates in private consumption expenditure and investment in new buildings. However, owing to the global financial crisis growth then slowed and in 2009 the economy shrank by 5.4%. Total GDP was US$1.7bn. in 2008.

Banking and Finance

There are two private banks, Grønlandsbanken and Sparbank Vest.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

At a referendum held on 19 March 1967, 60% of the electorate voted for continued association with France rather than independence. France affirmed that the Territory of the Afars and the Issas was destined for independence but no date was fixed. Independence as the Republic of Djibouti was achieved on 27 June 1977. Afar rebels in the north, belonging to the Front for the Restoration of Unity and Democracy (FRUD), signed a 'Peace and National Reconciliation Agreement' with the government on 26 Dec. 1994, envisaging the formation of a national coalition government, the redrafting of the electoral roll and the integration of FRUD militants into the armed forces and civil service.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Djibouti is in effect a city-state surrounded by a semi-desert hinterland. It is bounded in the northwest by Eritrea, northeast by the Gulf of Aden, southeast by Somalia and southwest by Ethiopia. The area is 23,200 sq. km (8,958 sq. miles). The provisional population at the 2009 census was 818,159. In 2005, 86.1% of the population lived in urban areas. Around half the population in 2005 were Somali (Issa, Gadaboursi and Issaq), 35% Afar, with some Europeans (mainly French) and Arabs.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 975,000.

There are five administrative regions, plus the city of Djibouti (areas in sq. km): Ali-Sabieh (2,200); Arta (1,800); Dikhil (7,200); Djibouti (200); Obock (4,700); Tadjourah (7,100). The capital is Djibouti (2009 provisional population, 475,322).

French and Arabic are official languages; Somali and Afar are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 24,100; deaths, 9,300. Rates (2008 estimates, per 1,000 population); birth, 28.4; death, 11.0. 2006: marriages, 3,059; divorces, 723. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 1.9%. Infant mortality, 2008, 76 per 1,000 live births. Expectation of life, 2007: 53.7 years for men, 56.5 for women. Fertility rate, 2008, 3.9 children per woman.

CLIMATE

Conditions are hot throughout the year, with very little rain. Djibouti, Jan. 78°F (25.6°C), July 96°F (35.6°C). Annual rainfall 5" (130 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

After a referendum at which turnout was 70%, a new constitution was approved on 4 Sept. 1992 by 96.63% of votes cast, which permits the existence of up to four political parties. Parties are required to maintain an ethnic balance in their membership. The President is directly elected for a renewable six-year term. Parliament is a 65-member National Assembly elected for five-year terms. In April 2010 the constitution was amended to allow the president to stand for a third consecutive term. It also provided for the creation of a Senate.

National Anthem

'Hinjinne u sara kaca' ('Arise with strength'); words by A. Elmi, tune by A. Robleh.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the presidential election on 8 April 2011 Ismail Omar Guelleh was re-elected with 80.6% of the vote. Mohamed Warsama Ragueh took 19.4%. Turnout was 69.7%.

At the parliamentary elections of 8 Feb. 2008 the Union for a Presidential Majority—a coalition of RPP (People's Rally for Progress), FRUD (Front for the Restoration of Unity and Democracy), PND (National Democratic Party) and PPSD (Social Democratic People's Party)—won all 65 seats with 94.1% of votes cast. The opposition boycotted the election. Turnout was 72.6%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

CURRENT LEADERS

Ismail Omar Guelleh

Position

President

Introduction

Ismail Omar Guelleh was elected for a third six-year term as president in April 2011. He succeeded his uncle in 1999, becoming the country's second president since independence in 1977.

Early Life

Ismail Omar Guelleh was born on 27 Nov. 1947 in Dire Dawa, Ethiopia. He is the grandson of Guelleh Batal, one of the chiefs of the Issa clan who signed the 1917 agreement placing the Issa territories under French administration. From 1974 Guelleh became increasingly involved in the fight for independence as a member of the African Popular League for Independence (LPAI). Following Djibouti's declaration of independence on 27 June 1977, Guelleh was appointed principal private secretary to the president, his uncle, Hassan Gouled Aptidon.

Guelleh became head of the security services and joined the People's Rally for Democracy (RPP) when it was established in March 1979. He became head of the party's cultural commission in 1981, the year in which Gouled made the Issa-dominated RPP the country's only legal political party, causing resentment among the Afar community. Civil war followed in 1991. When Gouled announced that he would not contest the April 1999 presidential elections, Guelleh stood as the RPP candidate. He was sworn in as president on 8 May 1999.

Career in Office

In Feb. 2000 Guelleh signed a peace agreement with the radical faction of the Afar party, the Front for the Restoration of Unity and Democracy (FRUD), ending nine years of civil war. During the multi-party elections of Jan. 2003 the coalition supporting him—the Union for a Presidential Majority—won all 65 seats, prompting opposition accusations of vote-rigging. In the run-up to the April 2005 presidential election, Guelleh pledged to reduce poverty and the country's dependence on food imports while boosting women's rights and institutional accountability. The election was boycotted by the opposition and he was sworn in for a second six-year term with 100% of votes cast. In Feb. 2008 the Union for a Presidential Majority again won all 65 seats in parliamentary elections boycotted by the main opposition parties. A constitutional amendment permitting the president to seek a third term was approved by parliament in April 2010, and in April 2011 Guelleh was re-elected with about 80% of the vote.

In Sept. 2002, in support of the US-led war on terror, Guelleh allowed 900 US troops to be based in Djibouti. Although his government has denied interference in neighbouring Somalia's affairs, US air strikes in Jan. 2007 on the retreating Islamist militias that had earlier taken control of the Somali capital, Mogadishu, and much of the south of the country, were launched from the US base in Djibouti. In June 2008 border clashes between troops from Djibouti and Eritrea led Guelleh to declare war with the neighbouring state. However, following the imposition of sanctions against Eritrea by the UN Security Council in Dec. 2009, both sides agreed in June 2010 to resolve their border issues peacefully. Guelleh won a third term in the presidential election of April 2011.

DEFENCE

France maintains a naval base and forces numbering 2,000 under an agreement renewed in Feb. 1991. Defence expenditure totalled US$15m. in 2008 (US$22 per capita), representing 1.5% of GDP.

Army

There are three Army commands: North, Central and South. The strength of the Army in 2007 was approximately 8,000. There is also a paramilitary Gendarmerie of 1,400, and an Interior Ministry National Security Force of some 2,500.

Navy

A coastal patrol is maintained. Personnel (2007 estimate), 200.

Air Force

There is a small Air Force with no combat capable aircraft. Personnel (2007), 250.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 3.5% of GDP in 2006, industry 16.4% and services 80.1%.

Overview

The economy relies on Djibouti's status as a free trade hub, with the government encouraging foreign investment to create the principal trading hub for the Horn of Africa. Providing neighbouring, landlocked Ethiopia with its main access to the sea, imports and exports from Ethiopia represent 70% of port activity at Djibouti's container terminal. There are few natural resources and the manufacturing and agriculture sectors are both weak. Most foodstuffs are imported, making Djibouti vulnerable to external shocks. Food prices are relatively high and parts of the population depend on food aid.

Djibouti weathered the global economic crisis well, although real GDP growth slowed from 5.8% in 2008 to 5.0% in 2009 and FDI declined from 23.8% of GDP to 18.0%. Growth was driven mainly by expansion in construction, banking and shipping, as well as public investment. FDI and transshipment remain weakened.

Unemployment was around 60% in 2007 and recent growth has not translated into reduced unemployment rates. Pegged to the US dollar, the currency is overvalued. Other challenges to economic wellbeing include high population growth and a high risk of debt distress (with debt being sold on to third parties at below face value).

Currency

The currency is the Djibouti franc (DJF), notionally of 100 centimes. Foreign exchange reserves were US$90m. in July 2005 and total money supply was 49,822m. Djibouti francs. Inflation was 12.0% in 2008, falling to 1.7% in 2009.

Budget

Revenues in 2009 were 67.7bn. Djibouti francs and expenditures 69.8bn. Djibouti francs.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 5.0% in 2009 and 3.5% in 2010. Total GDP in 2009 was US$1.0bn.

Banking and Finance

The Banque Nationale de Djibouti is the bank of issue (Governor, Djama Mahamoud Haid). There are three commercial banks and a development bank.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Djibouti's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 2.6 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007 was an estimated 118,000 kW. Production in 2007 was 292m. kWh; consumption per capita was 350 kWh in 2007.

Agriculture

There were around 1,000 ha. of arable land in 2002. Production is dependent on irrigation which in 2002 covered 1,000 ha. Vegetable production (2003) 24,000 tonnes. The most common crops are tomatoes, mangoes, papayas and melons. Livestock (2005 estimates): goats, 512,000; sheep, 466,000; cattle, 297,000; camels, 69,000. Livestock products, 2005 estimates: meat, 11,000 tonnes; milk, 14,000 tonnes.

Forestry

In 2005 the area under forests was 6,000 ha., or 0.2% of the total land area.

Fisheries

In 2005 the catch was approximately 260 tonnes, entirely from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY*Labour

In 2007 the economically active population totalled 366,000. Unemployment in 2009 was estimated at 60%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt totalled US$472m. in 2007.

Imports and Exports

The main economic activity is the operation of the port. Exports are largely re-exports. In 2006 imports totalled US$335.7m. and exports US$55.2m. The chief imports are cotton goods, sugar, cement, flour, fuel oil and vehicles; the chief exports are hides, cattle and coffee (transit from Ethiopia).

Main import suppliers are Saudi Arabia, India, UAE and China. Main export markets are Saudi Arabia, Kenya, Egypt and Yemen.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

In 2002 there were estimated to be 2,890 km of roads, of which 12.6% were hard-surfaced. An estimated 15,700 passenger cars were in use in 2002 (23.5 per 1,000 inhabitants), plus 3,200 vans and trucks.

Rail

For the line from Djibouti to Addis Ababa, of which 97 km lie within Djibouti, see ETHIOPIA: Communications. Traffic carried is mainly in transit to and from Ethiopia.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Djibouti (Ambouli), 5 km south of Djibouti. Djibouti-based carriers are Daallo Airlines and Djibouti Airlines. They operated flights in 2003 to Addis Ababa, Asmara, Borama, Bossaso, Burao, Dire Dawa, Dubai, Galcaio, Hargeisa, Jeddah, London, Mogadishu, Paris and Ta'iz.

Shipping

Djibouti is a free port and container terminal. In 2008, 5.82m. tonnes of cargo were handled (7.33m. tonnes in 2007).

Telecommunications

There were 18,500 fixed telephone lines in 2010 (20.8 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 165,600 in 2010. There were 22.6 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2008. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 11,900 in 2010 (13.4 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

There is a Court of First Instance and a Court of Appeal in the capital. The judicial system is based on Islamic law. The death penalty was abolished for all crimes in 1994.

The population in penal institutions in 2005 was 1,479 (184 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Adult literacy in 2001 was 65.5% (76.1% of men; 55.5% of women). In 2007 there were 56,667 pupils and 1,597 teaching staff in primary schools, and 34,667 pupils and 1,021 teachers in secondary schools. In 2007 there were 2,192 students at tertiary education institutions and 121 academic staff.

In 2007 public expenditure on education came to 7.8% of GNI.

Health

In 2007 there were a total of 1,220 hospital beds. There were 85 physicians, nine dentists, 196 nurses, 90 midwives and eight pharmacists in 2007.

RELIGION

In 2001, 96% of the population were Muslim; there were small Roman Catholic, Protestant and Orthodox minorities.

CULTURE*Press

There are no daily newspapers; in 2006 the government-owned La Nation was published three times a week.

Tourism

There were 40,000 foreign tourists staying at hotels and similar establishments in 2006; tourist spending (excluding passenger transport) totalled US$9m.

Commonwealth of Dominica

Capital: Roseau

Population, 2001: 71,000

GNI per capita, 2011: (PPP$) 7,889

HDI/world rank: 0.724/81

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

When Christopher Columbus sighted Dominica on 3 Nov. 1493 it was occupied by Carib Indians, who are thought to have overrun the previous inhabitants, the Arawak, from around 1300. Dominica remained a 'Carib Isle' until the 1630s, when French farmers and missionaries established sugar plantations. Control was contested between the British and French until it was awarded to the British by the Treaty of Versailles in 1783. In March 1967 Dominica became a self-governing state within the West Indies Associated States, with Britain retaining control of external relations and defence. The island became an independent republic, the Commonwealth of Dominica, on 3 Nov. 1978.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Dominica is an island in the Windward group of the West Indies situated between Martinique and Guadeloupe. It has an area of 750 sq. km (290 sq. miles) and a population at the 2001 census of 71,474. The population density in 2001 was 95.0 per sq. km.

In 2005, 72.9% of the population were urban. The chief town, Roseau, had 14,847 inhabitants in 2001.

The population is mainly of African and mixed origins, with small white and Asian minorities. There is a Carib settlement of about 500, almost entirely of mixed blood.

The official language is English, although 90% of the population also speak a French Creole.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2006 estimates, 1,080 (rate of 14.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 540 (rate of 7.5); marriages (2009), 250; divorces (2009), 85. Life expectancy, 2007: male, 72 years; female, 76 years. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, -0.2%. Infant mortality rate, 2005, 13 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 2008, 2.1 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, with pleasant conditions between Dec. and March, but there is a rainy season from June to Oct., when hurricanes may occur. Rainfall is heavy, with coastal areas having 70" (1,750 mm) but the mountains may have up to 225" (6,250 mm). Roseau, Jan. 76°F (24.2°C), July 81°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 78" (1,956 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The head of state is the President, nominated by the Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition, and elected for a five-year term (renewable once) by the House of Assembly. The House of Assembly has 32 members, of whom 21 members are elected and nine nominated by the President in addition to the Speaker and the Attorney General.

National Anthem

'Isle of beauty, isle of splendour'; words by W. Pond, tune by L. M. Christian.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 18 Dec. 2009. The ruling Dominica Labour Party (DLP) won 18 of 21 elected seats (12 in 2005), the United Workers Party (UWP) won 3 seats (8 in 2005). The Dominica Freedom Party (DFP) did not win any seats.

CURRENT LEADERS

Dr Nicholas Liverpool

Position
President

Introduction

Dr Nicholas Liverpool became Dominica's eighth president in Oct. 2003, calling for national unity and emphasizing the importance of focusing on the needs of the nation's youth. In Oct. 2008 he began a second term in office.

Early Life

Nicholas Joseph Orville Liverpool was born in Grand Bay, Dominica in 1934. After studying law, he was called to the Bar in London in 1961 and completed a doctorate at Sheffield University in 1965. He then spent 18 years as a law lecturer at the University of the West Indies in Barbados and in 1992 became dean of its law school. He served as a regional judge and then an appeal court judge in several Caribbean countries including Belize and Grenada. He also served as a high court judge in Antigua and Montserrat and on a number of tribunals and commissions for legal reform. In 2002 he was chairman of the constitutional review commission for Grenada.

In 1998 Liverpool became Dominica's ambassador to the USA, serving under the United Workers Party administration and the succeeding Dominica Labour Party–Dominica Freedom Party (DLP–DFP) coalition. In Oct. 2003 all three main political parties backed his appointment as president.

Career in Office

Liverpool took office on 2 Oct. 2003. After becoming president he was awarded the Dominican award of honour for his contribution to law and jurisprudence in the Caribbean.

When Prime Minister Pierre Charles died suddenly in Jan. 2004 it fell to Liverpool to appoint his successor. He selected Roosevelt Skerrit on the recommendation of the ruling DLP–DFP coalition.

In 2005 Liverpool suggested changes to the constitution and the structure and role of parliament, proposing the merger of the presidential and prime ministerial roles into a single directly elected executive presidency. Following the joint nomination of the prime minister and leader of the opposition, he took office for a second presidential term in Oct. 2008.

Roosevelt Skerrit*Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Roosevelt Skerrit became Dominica's youngest ever prime minister in Jan. 2004 when he took office following the death of his predecessor, Pierre Charles. Appointed by parliamentary recommendation to lead the coalition government, he was returned as prime minister in the May 2005 general election when the Dominica Labour Party (DLP) won an outright majority, and again in Dec. 2009.

Early Life

Roosevelt Skerrit was born in 1972 and grew up in Vieille Case in northeast Dominica. From 1994–97 he studied psychology and English at the University of Mississippi and New Mexico State University. On his return to Dominica he worked as a teacher, first in a high school then at the Dominica Community College. In 1999 he entered politics and in 2000 was elected as a DLP representative to the House of Assembly.

In the coalition government of the DLP and the Dominica Freedom Party (DFP), Skerrit served as minister for sports and youth affairs and later also for education. When Pierre Charles died of a heart attack in Jan. 2004, President Liverpool appointed Skerrit as his replacement.

Career in Office

Skerrit inherited a small working majority and sought to maintain unity in the coalition government. Against a background of economic troubles, the government introduced unpopular austerity measures, with a combination of spending cuts and higher taxes prompting strikes. During his first year in office he pursued a Caribbean Community (CARICOM) initiative to raise US$50m. of aid and has subsequently been involved in developing a regional stabilization fund under the auspices of the Caribbean Development Bank.

In March 2004 Skerrit reversed Dominica's traditional policy of pursuing diplomatic ties with Taiwan in preference to relations with China, obtaining a six-year aid package from China worth US$117m. In an attempt to reduce Dominica's dependence on agriculture, the government has invested in tourism and major infrastructure projects.

In the election of 5 May 2005 Skerrit led the DLP to victory with 12 of 21 elected seats. In Sept. 2005 Dominica was one of several CARICOM countries to enter into an oil-purchasing deal with Venezuela and in Oct. 2005 he secured around US$2m. of direct US aid for public and private sector investment. The International Monetary Fund commended his government in Dec. 2006 for its successful economic programme, including significant progress in debt restructuring. In Feb. 2009 Skerrit announced that his government had secured US$49m. in grants from Venezuela within the framework of the ALBA (Alianza Bolivariana para los Pueblos de Nuestra América) trade group of leftist Latin American states. In the Dec. 2009 election Skerrit again led the DLP to victory, this time with 18 of the 21 elected seats.

Skerrit served a six-month tenure as chairman of CARICOM in the first half of 2010.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 18% of GDP in 2005, industry 24% and services 58%.

Overview

Dominica is highly vulnerable to external shocks and susceptible to a variety of natural disasters. Traditionally the economy has relied on bananas as its main export earner but has large potential for tourism. Having completed an IMF Poverty Reduction and Growth Facility (PRGF) in 2006, the economy's fiscal position stabilized and the public debt-to-GDP ratio fell to below 95% in 2007. In Aug. 2007 Dominica was struck by Hurricane Dean, causing damage estimated at 20% of GDP.

The global downturn has harmed tourism and caused a decline in foreign direct investment and remittance inflows. The state has responded by maintaining post-hurricane levels of capital spending and increasing social assistance, made possible by prudent fiscal management since 2005 and strong VAT returns since its introduction in 2006.

Currency

The East Caribbean dollar (XCD) and the US dollar are legal tender. Foreign exchange reserves were US$50m. in July 2005 and total money supply was EC$149m. Inflation was 6.4% in 2008 and 0.0% in 2009.

Budget

The fiscal year begins on 1 July. Revenues for the fiscal year 2005–06 were EC$325.0m. and expenditures EC$315.3m.

The standard rate of VAT is 15% (reduced rate, 10%).

Performance

The economy contracted by 0.7% in 2009 but grew by 0.3% in 2010. In 2010 total GDP was US$0.4bn.

Banking and Finance

The East Caribbean Central Bank based in St Kitts and Nevis functions as a central bank. The Governor is Sir Dwight Venner. In 2001 there were five commercial banks (four foreign, one domestic), a development bank and a credit union. Dominica is affiliated to the Eastern Caribbean Securities Exchange in Basseterre, St Kitts and Nevis.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 1.7 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was an estimated 24,000 kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was approximately 85m. kWh. Consumption per capita in 2007 was about 1,174 kWh. There is a hydro-electric power station.

Agriculture

Agriculture employs 26% of the labour force. In 2007 there were around 5,000 ha. of arable land and 16,000 ha. of permanent crops. Estimated production, 2003, in 1,000 tonnes): bananas, 29; grapefruit and pomelos, 17; coconuts, 12; taro, 11; yams, 8; oranges, 7; plantains, 6. Livestock (2003 estimates): cattle, 13,000; goats, 10,000; sheep, 8,000; pigs, 5,000.

Forestry

In 2005 forests covered 46,000 ha., or 61.3% of the total land area.

Fisheries

In 2005 fish landings were 579 tonnes (all from sea fishing).

INDUSTRY

Manufactures include soap (10,500 tonnes in 2001), coconut oil, copra, cement blocks, furniture and footwear.

Labour

Around 25% of the economically active population are engaged in agriculture, fishing and forestry. In 2006 the minimum wage was US$0.75 an hour. The unemployment rate in 2003 was 15.7%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Total foreign debt was US$290m. in 2007.

Imports and Exports

In 2010 imports (c.i.f.) totalled US$224.6m. and exports (f.o.b.) US$34.1m. Main imports in 2004 (in US$1m.): machinery and transport equipment, 36.6; manufactured goods, 24.7; food, 24.0; chemicals, 16.2. Main exports (2004, in US$1m.): soap, 12.7; bananas, 8.8. Fruit, perfumes and sand are also exported. Main import sources, 2004: USA, 36.7%; Trinidad and Tobago, 18.1%; UK, 6.5%; France, 5.0%. Main export markets, 2004: Jamaica, 20.1%; UK, 17.9%; Antigua and Barbuda, 9.9%; France, 9.4%.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

In 2002 there were an estimated 788 km of roads, of which 50.4% were paved. Approximately 10,300 passenger cars and 3,500 commercial vehicles were in use in 2002.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Melville Hall and Cane Field. In 2003 there were direct flights to Anguilla, Antigua, Barbados, British Virgin Islands, Grenada, Guadeloupe, Martinique, Puerto Rico, St Kitts, St Lucia, St Maarten, St Vincent, Trinidad and the US Virgin Islands.

Shipping

There are deep-water harbours at Roseau and Woodbridge Bay. Roseau has a cruise ship berth. In Jan. 2009 there were 60 ships of 300 GT or over registered (including 15 bulk carriers and nine oil tankers), totalling 936,000 GT.

Telecommunications

There were 15,500 fixed telephone lines in 2010 (228.5 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 98,100 in 2010. There were 474.5 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

There is a supreme court and 14 magistrates courts. Law is based on UK common law as exercised by the Eastern Caribbean Supreme Court on St Lucia. Final appeal lies to the UK Privy Council. Dominica was one of twelve countries to sign an agreement establishing a Caribbean Court of Justice to replace the British Privy Council as the highest civil and criminal court. The court was inaugurated at Port-of-Spain, Trinidad on 16 April 2005 although Dominica has yet to accept it as its court of final appeal.

The police force has a residual responsibility for defence. The population in penal institutions in Aug. 2007 was 254 (equivalent to 348 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

In 1998 adult literacy was 94%. Education is free and compulsory between the ages of five and 16 years. In 2007 there were 499 teaching staff and 8,643 pupils in primary schools, and 469 teaching staff and 7,481 pupils in general secondary level education. The leading higher education institution is Ross University School of Medicine, established in 1978. In 2007 public expenditure on education came to 5.5% of GNI.

Health

In 2005 there were 39 hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants. There were 38 physicians, ten dentists and 361 nurses in 2003. Large numbers of professional nurses take up employment abroad, especially in the USA, causing a shortage of health care workers in Dominica.

RELIGION

70% of the population was Roman Catholic in 2001.

CULTURE*World Heritage Sites

Dominica has one site on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Morne Trois Pitons National Park (1997), a tropical forest centred on the Morne Trois Pitons volcano.

Press

In 2006 there were three newspapers—The Chronicle, The Sun and The Tropical Star.

Tourism

During the 2007–08 cruise ship season a total of 366,692 passengers (233 cruise ship calls) visited Dominica. Tourism receipts in 2007 (excluding passenger transport) totalled US$71m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1492 Columbus discovered the island of Hispaniola, which he called La Isla Española, and which for a time was also known as Santo Domingo. The city of Santo Domingo, founded by his brother, Bartholomew, in 1496, is the oldest city in the Americas. The western third of the island—now the Republic of Haiti—was later occupied and colonized by the French, to whom the Spanish colony of Santo Domingo was also ceded in 1795. In 1808 the Dominican population routed the French at the battle of Palo Hincado. Eventually, with the aid of a British naval squadron, the French were forced to return the colony to Spanish rule, from which it declared its independence in 1821. It was invaded and held by the Haitians from 1822 to 1844, when the Dominican Republic was founded and a constitution adopted.

Thereafter the rule was dictatorship interspersed with brief democratic interludes. Between 1916 and 1924 the country was under US military occupation. From 1930 until his assassination in 1961, Rafael Trujillo was one of Latin America's legendary dictators using puppet presidents to remain in control of the country after his legal terms in office ended. The conservative pro-American Joaquín Balaguer was president from 1966 to 1978. In 1986 Balaguer returned to power at the head of the Socialist Christian Reform Party, leading the way to economic reforms. But there was violent opposition to spending cuts and general austerity. The 1996 elections brought in a reforming government pledged to act against corruption.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Dominican Republic occupies the eastern portion (about two-thirds) of the island of Hispaniola, the western division forming the Republic of Haiti. The area is 48,671 sq. km (18,792 sq. miles). The area and 2010 census populations (provisional) of the provinces and National District (Santo Domingo area) were:

	Area (in sq. km)	Population

CLIMATE

A tropical maritime climate with most rain falling in the summer months. The rainy season extends from May to Nov. and amounts are greatest in the north and east. Hurricanes may occur from June to Nov. Santo Domingo, Jan. 75°F (23.9°C), July 81°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 56" (1,400 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution came into force on 26 Jan. 2010, replacing one from 1966. The new constitution's provisions included the establishment of a Constitutional Court, Council of the Judiciary and Supreme Electoral Court. It also provides for recourse to instruments of direct democracy, including referenda and plebiscites. It outlaws same-sex marriages and abortion and defines Dominican nationals as the children of Dominican parents.

The President, who has executive power, is elected for four years by direct vote but is prohibited from serving consecutive terms. A second round of voting in a presidential election is authorized when no candidate secures an absolute majority in the first ballot. There is a bicameral legislature, the Congress, comprising a 32-member Senate (one member for each province and one for the National District of Santo Domingo) and a 183-member Chamber of Deputies, both elected for four-year terms. Citizens are entitled to vote at the age of 18.

CURRENT LEADERS

Dr Leonel Fernández

Position

President

Introduction

Dr Leonel Fernández first became president in 1996 and won further four-year terms in 2004 and 2008. He has won plaudits for easing the country's economic crisis, but poverty, unemployment and corruption persist.

Early Life

Leonel Antonio Fernández Reyna was born on 26 Dec. 1953 in Santo Domingo, the capital city. In 1962 his family moved to New York, where he attended school before returning to Santo Domingo in 1971. He enrolled at the Independent University of Santo Domingo (UASD) to study law. In 1973 Fernández joined the leftist Dominican Liberation Party (PLD), the movement founded by his professor and mentor, the former president, Juan Bosch. Following his graduation with a doctorate in 1978, Fernández worked as a political journalist. He subsequently lectured at the UASD and the Latin American Faculty of Social Science in Santo Domingo. Elected to the PLD's central committee in 1985, he rose through the party's administrative ranks and stood as Bosch's running mate at the 1994 presidential election (won by Joaquín Balaguer). Balaguer was barred from running in the May 1996 elections and Fernández defeated José Francisco Peña Gómez in a run-off a month later.

Career in Office

Sworn in as president on 16 Aug. 1996, Fernández brought in sweeping economic and judicial reforms. However, despite increased foreign investment, economic growth and infrastructural improvements, he was displaced as president by Hipólito Mejía of the Dominican Revolutionary Party (PRD) in Aug. 2000 amid discontent over power cuts in the previously privatized electricity industry. Mejía presided over a deepening economic crisis and spiralling crime and unemployment. Fernández was re-elected president on 16 May 2004 and introduced austerity measures and succeeded in stabilizing inflation and the currency. However, attempts to tackle poverty and corruption and to resolve the energy crisis were less successful. A free trade agreement with the USA and the countries of Central America was ratified by the government in 2005. In parliamentary elections in May 2006 and in May 2010 the PLD and its allies secured a majority of congressional seats, while in May 2008 Fernández was again re-elected to the presidency.

DEFENCE

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$278m. (US$29 per capita), representing 0.6% of GDP.

Army

There are five defence zones. The Army has a strength (2007) of 15,000 and includes a special forces unit and a Presidential Guard. There is a paramilitary National Police 15,000-strong.

Navy

The Navy is equipped with former US vessels. Personnel in 2007 totalled 4,000, based at Santo Domingo and Las Calderas.

Air Force

The Air Force, with HQ at San Isidoro, has 11 aircraft. Personnel strength (2007), 5,500.

ECONOMY

In 2006 agriculture accounted for 11.9% of GDP, industry 25.9% and services 62.1%.

Overview

The Dominican Republic is noted for its plantation crop exports of sugar, cocoa, coffee and tobacco. Although these products remain important, their combined share of total exports has declined to one-tenth. The pillars of the economy are now tourism, worker remittances from the USA and the free trade zones where in-bond factories (known as maquillas) produce clothing for big name brands.

Economic growth was interrupted in 2003 when a banking crisis, triggered by corruption, sent the sovereign debt to the brink of default while the peso depreciated dramatically and inflation soared. Tight fiscal and monetary policy measures, as well as renewed strength in the US economy (on which exports are heavily dependent), helped lift the country out of crisis. Real growth averaged 6.6% between 2004 and 2010, peaking at 10.7% in 2006. Strong fiscal consolidation has helped reduce public debt ratios.

In March 2007 the Dominican Republic–Central America–United States Free Trade Agreement (DR–CAFTA) came into effect, providing free access to the US market. A spate of natural disasters in late 2007 and the onset of the global economic slowdown threatened near-term growth. However, domestic banks' limited exposure to foreign credit lines and their strong liquidity position stand them in good stead to weather further shocks.

Currency

The unit of currency is the peso (DOP), written as RD$, of 100 centavos. Gold reserves were 18,000 troy oz in July 2005, foreign exchange reserves US$1,537m. and total money supply was RD$78,490m. Inflation spiralled to 51.5% in 2004, second in the world only to Zimbabwe, but has since slowed with rates of 10.6% in 2008 and 1.4% in 2009.

Budget

Budgetary central government revenue totalled RD$192,577m. and expenditure RD$183,795m. in 2006. Tax revenues in 2006 were RD$176,581m. Main items of expenditure by economic type in 2006 were compensation of employees (RD$44,270m.) and grants (RD$31,240m.).

Performance

Real GDP growth was 3.5% in 2009 and 7.8% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$51.6bn.

Banking and Finance

In 1947 the Central Bank was established (Governor, Héctor Valdez Albizu). Its foreign assets were US$3,337.6m. at Sept. 2010. In 2010 there were 13 commercial banks (two foreign).

The Santo Domingo Securities Exchange is a member of the Association of Central American Stock Exchanges (Bolcen).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 2.0 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 5.5m. kW in 2007. Production was 14.84bn. kWh in 2007; consumption per capita was 1,563 kWh. Power failures are frequent.

Minerals

Bauxite output in 1988 was 167,800 tonnes, but had declined to nil by 1992. Output: nickel (2005), 53,124 tonnes; gold (2009 estimate), 173 kg. Gold production had been in decline but in 2007 a new project launched by two Canadian companies revived the industry.

Agriculture

Agriculture and processing are the chief sources of income, sugar cultivation being the principal industry. In 2001 there were 1.1m. ha. of arable land and 500,000 ha. of permanent cropland. 275,000 ha. were irrigated in 2001.

Production, 2003 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 5,036; rice, 609; bananas, 481; plantains, 192; mangoes, 186; coconuts, 178; tomatoes, 155; avocados, 150; cassava, 124; pineapples, 110; oranges, 88.

Livestock in 2003: 2.16m. cattle; 578,000 pigs; 342,000 horses; 188,000 goats; 46m. chickens. Livestock products, 2003 (in 1,000 tonnes): poultry meat, 186; beef and veal, 72; pork, bacon and ham, 65; eggs, 83; milk, 520.

Forestry

Forests and woodlands covered 1.38m. ha. in 2005, representing 28.4% of the total land area. In 2007, 903,000 cu. metres of timber were cut.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2005 was 11,106 tonnes, mainly from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Production, 2007 unless otherwise indicated (in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 4,100; residual fuel oil, 753; raw sugar, 488; petrol, 404; distillate fuel oil, 359; kerosene, 158; rum (2005), 49.9m. litres; beer (2006), 213.4m. litres; cigarettes (2006), 1.4bn. units.

Labour

In 2005 the economically active population was 4,026,000. The unemployment rate in 2005 was 19.3%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

On 1 March 2007 the Central America–Dominican Republic–United States Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA–DR) entered into force between the Dominican Republic and El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and the USA. Costa Rica implemented the agreement on 1 Jan. 2009. Foreign debt was US$7,398m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Trade, 2009, in US$1m.: imports (f.o.b.), 12,054.4; exports (f.o.b.), 4,693.3. Principal imports in 2009 were: machinery and transport equipment, 22.2%; mineral fuels and lubricants, 20.9%; manufactured goods, 18.2%; chemicals and related products, 11.5%. Main exports in 2009 were: miscellaneous manufactured articles, 39.4%; food, live animals, beverages and tobacco, 24.6%; manufactured goods, 16.4%; machinery and transport equipment, 11.5%. Main import suppliers, 2005: USA, 50.0%; Colombia, 6.2%; Mexico, 5.8%. Main export markets, 2009: USA, 61.9%; Haiti, 13.8%; Netherlands, 2.2%.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

In 2002 the road network covered an estimated 19,705 km, of which 51.2% were paved. In 2007 there were 602,700 passenger cars (62 per 1,000 inhabitants), 525,400 lorries and vans, and 64,200 buses and coaches. Motorcycles and mopeds numbered 1.04m. In 2008 there were 1,648 fatal road accidents resulting in 1,846 deaths.

Rail

The railway system has been closed down with the exception of 142 km line from Guayubin to the port of Pepillo, used primarily for the banana trade.

There is a metro in Santo Domingo.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Santo Domingo (Las Americas), Puerto Plata and Punta Cana. In 2000 Santo Domingo was the busiest airport, handling 4,652,000 passengers, followed by Puerto Plata (estimated at 2,023,000 passengers) and Punta Cana (1,745,000).

Shipping

The main ports are Santo Domingo, Puerto Plata, La Romana and Haina. In Jan. 2009 there were five ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 5,000 GT.

Telecommunications

In 2005 there were 4,517,800 telephone subscribers (507.2 for every 1,000 inhabitants), of which 3,623,300 were mobile phone subscribers. There were 938,300 internet users in 2005.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

The judicial power resides in the Supreme Court of Justice, the courts of appeal, the courts of first instance, the communal courts and other tribunals created by special laws, such as the land courts. The Supreme Court, consisting of a president and eight judges chosen by the Senate, and the procurator-general, appointed by the executive, supervises the lower courts. Each province forms a judicial district, as does the National District, and each has its own procurator fiscal and court of first instance; these districts are subdivided, in all, into 97 municipalities, each with one or more local justices. The death penalty was abolished in 1924.

The population in penal institutions in Sept. 2008 was 16,457 (165 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Primary education is free and compulsory for children between five and 14 years of age; there are also secondary, normal, vocational and special schools, all of which are either wholly maintained by the State or state-aided. In 2007 there were 1,355,085 primary school pupils with 56,744 teaching staff and 920,494 pupils at secondary level with 31,710 teaching staff. The Universidad Autónoma de Santo Domingo, founded in 1914, is the leading public university; there were 158,534 students enrolled in 2005–06. The leading private university is the Universidad Tecnológica de Santiago, created in 1976. There were 293,565 students and 11,367 academic staff in tertiary education in 2004. Adult literacy was 88% in 2007.

In 2007 public expenditure on education came to 2.6% of GNI and 11.0% of total government spending.

Health

In 2007 there were 14,479 doctors. There were 136 hospitals in 2006 with a total of 9,517 beds. In 2005 there were 20 hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants.

RELIGION

The religion of the state is Roman Catholic; there were 7.11m. adherents in 2001. Protestants numbered 560,000 in 2001. In Feb. 2012 there was one cardinal.

CULTURE*World Heritage Sites

The Dominican Republic has one site on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the Colonial City of Santo Domingo (1990)—founded in 1492, it is the site of the first cathedral and university in the Americas.

Press

In 2006 there were 11 dailies with a combined circulation of 605,000.

Tourism

In 2006 there were 3,965,055 non-resident air arrivals and 303,489 cruise ship visitors. Tourism receipts in 2006 totalled US$3,917m. In 2005 there were 59,870 hotel rooms.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1532 the Spaniards founded a colony in Ecuador, then called Quito. In 1821 a revolt led to the defeat of the Spaniards at Pichincha and thus independence from Spain. On 13 March 1830, Quito became the Republic of Ecuador. Political instability was endemic. From the mid-1930s, President José María Velasco Ibarra was deposed by military coups from four of his five presidencies.

From 1963 to 1966 and from 1976 to 1979 military juntas ruled the country. The second of these juntas produced a new constitution which came into force on 10 Aug. 1979. Presidencies were more stable but civil unrest continued in the wake of economic reforms and attempts to combat political corruption.

In Jan. 2000 President Mahaud declared a state of emergency when protesters demanded his resignation over his handling of an economic crisis. There was a coup on 21 Jan. but, after five hours in control, the military junta handed power to the former vice-president, Gustavo Noboa.

In April 2005 President Lucio Gutiérrez was ousted by Ecuador's congress after public protest at his attempts to implement IMF-backed economic policies and his substitution of 27 out of 31 Supreme Court judges with his allies. The replacement judges promptly dropped corruption charges against two former presidents, increasing public outcry. Four days after being dismissed, Gutiérrez fled to Brazil. He was replaced by Alfredo Palacio, who immediately issued a warrant for Gutiérrez's arrest. Gutiérrez was arrested in Oct. 2005 and charged with endangering national security but was freed in March 2006 when a judge dismissed the claims. Palacio was defeated in the elections of Nov. 2006, with Rafael Correa taking over as president. He won a second term in April 2009. In Sept. 2010 he was hospitalized after being hit by tear gas fired by police and military personnel unhappy at austerity measures, claiming that he was then held against his will in hospital. Correa decried the events as an opposition-sponsored coup attempt and imposed a state of emergency.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Ecuador is bounded in the north by Colombia, in the east and south by Peru and in the west by the Pacific ocean. The frontier with Peru has long been a source of dispute. It was delimited in the Treaty of Rio, 29 Jan. 1942, when, after being invaded by Peru, Ecuador lost over half her Amazonian territories. Ecuador unilaterally denounced this treaty in Sept. 1961. Fighting between Peru and Ecuador began again in Jan. 1981 over this border issue but a ceasefire was agreed in early Feb. Following a confrontation of soldiers in Aug. 1991 the foreign ministers of both countries signed a pact creating a security zone, and took their cases to the UN in Oct. 1991. On 26 Jan. 1995 further armed clashes broke out with Peruvian forces in the undemarcated mutual border area (Cordillera del Cóndor). On 2 Feb. talks were held under the auspices of the guarantor nations of the 1942 Protocol of Rio de Janeiro (Argentina, Brazil, Chile and the USA) but fighting continued. A ceasefire was agreed on 17 Feb., which was broken, and again on 28 Feb. On 25 July 1995 an agreement between Ecuador and Peru established a demilitarized zone along their joint frontier. The frontier was reopened on 4 Sept. 1995. Since 23 Feb. 1996 Ecuador and Peru have signed three further agreements to regulate the dispute. The dispute was settled in Oct. 1998. Confirming the Peruvian claim that the border lies along the high peaks of the Cóndor, Ecuador gained navigation rights on the Amazon within Peru.

No definite figure of the area of the country can yet be given. One estimate of the area of Ecuador is 272,045 sq. km, excluding the litigation zone between Peru and Ecuador, which is 190,807 sq. km, but including the Galápagos Archipelago (8,010 sq. km), situated in the Pacific ocean about 960 km west of Ecuador, and comprising 13 islands and 19 islets. These were discovered in 1535 by Fray Tomás de Berlanga and had a population of 18,640 in 2001. They constitute a national park, and had approximately 122,000 visitors in 2005.

The population is an amalgam of European, Amerindian and African origins. Some 41% of the population is Amerindian: Quechua, Shiwiar, Achuar and Zaparo. In May 1992 they were granted title to the 1m. ha. of land they occupy in Pastaza.

The official language is Spanish. Quechua and other languages are also spoken.

Census population in 2010, 14,483,449; density, 53 per sq. km. In 2005, 62-8% lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 15-45m.

The population was distributed by provinces as follows in 2010 (census figures):

Province	Sq. km	Population	Capital	Population
Azuay	7,995	712,127	Cuenca	329,928

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 280,000; deaths, 70,000. Rates, 2008 estimates (per 1,000 population): birth, 20.8; death, 5.2. Life expectancy at birth, 2007, was 72.1 years for males and 78.0 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 1.1%. Infant mortality, 2005, 22 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 2.6 children per woman. In 2009 the most popular age for marrying was 20–24 for both men and women.

CLIMATE

The climate varies from equatorial, through warm temperate to mountain conditions, according to altitude, which affects temperatures and rainfall. In coastal areas, the dry season is from May to Dec., but only from June to Sept. in mountainous parts, where temperatures may be 20°F colder than on the coast. Quito, Jan. 59°F (15°C), July 58°F (14.4°C). Annual rainfall 44" (1,115 mm). Guayaquil, Jan. 79°F (26.1°C), July 75°F (23.9°C). Annual rainfall 39" (986 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

An executive President and a Vice-President are directly elected by universal suffrage. The president appoints and leads a Council of Ministers, and determines the number and functions of the ministries that comprise the executive branch. Legislative power is vested in a National Assembly of 124 members, popularly elected by province. One seat is reserved for overseas voters. Voting is obligatory for all literate citizens of 18–65 years.

A new constitution came into force on 20 Oct. 2008. It was drafted by a Constituent Assembly set up by President Correa in Nov. 2007 and was approved with 63.9% of the vote in a referendum on 28 Sept. 2008. It superseded the previous constitution that had been in place for ten years. The 2008 constitution, which includes 444 articles, allows a president to run for two consecutive four-year terms, dissolve parliament and call early elections, and set monetary policy. The National Congress was abolished and replaced by a new National Assembly. The constitution also allows for tighter control of key industries, the expropriation and redistribution of idle farm land, free health care for the elderly and the legalization of same-sex civil marriages. The government can also declare some foreign loans illegitimate.

In May 2011 a package of ten changes to the constitution was passed in a referendum. The proposals included giving the executive branch of government increased influence over the appointment of Supreme Court judges, creating a body to regulate media content, extending the legal period of detention without trial, outlawing 'unjustified' wealth and restricting gambling, requiring owners of banks and media organizations to declare other commercial holdings, and banning cock- and bull-fighting.

National Anthem

'Salve, Oh Patria, mil veces, Oh Patria' ('Hail, Oh Fatherland, a thousand times, Oh Fatherland'); words by J. L. Mera, tune by A. Neumane.

CURRENT LEADERS

Rafael Correa

Position

President

Introduction

Correa started his four-year presidential term in Jan. 2007. An economist educated in Europe and the USA, he has mostly enjoyed strong popular support and was re-elected in April 2009.

Early Life

Correa was born in April 1963 in Ecuador's second city, Guayaquil. He graduated in economics from the Catholic University of Guayaquil and worked for a year in an indigenous community in the Cotopaxi region. He went on to postgraduate studies at the Catholic University of Leuven (Belgium) and the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign (USA).

Correa embarked on an academic career, rising to become dean of economics at the private University San Francisco de Quito. An economic analyst known for his anti-neoliberal and nationalist stance, he worked as a consultant for the UN Development Programme and the Japanese Development Bank among others. He was a notable opponent of Ecuadorian dollarization in 2000.

When popular revolts forced Lucio Gutiérrez to resign as president in April 2005, his successor Alfredo Palacio appointed Correa as finance minister. Correa held the position for four months, during which time he was critical of the World Bank and IMF and advocated poverty reduction and economic sovereignty schemes. When the World Bank withheld a loan in protest at various economic policies, Correa resigned his office. In 2006 he founded the Alianza PAIS movement which allied itself with the Socialist Party in the run-up to general elections.

Career in Office

Correa campaigned for sustainable socio-economic revolution and Latin American integration. On taking office, he pledged a referendum on the establishment of a constitutional assembly to draft a new constitution, aimed at maintaining good relations with the USA (although his rejection of a free trade agreement, Ecuador's refusal to extend US use of the Manta military base in the Pacific and, in 2011, US allegations of corruption in the Ecuador police have strained ties) and promised that dollarization would remain in place during his tenure. He also guaranteed Ecuador's non-involvement in Colombia's internal conflict. Other policies included engagement with Colombia and Brazil in trade negotiations and talks with Argentina to renegotiate the terms of Ecuador's multi-billion dollar debt. In addition, Correa announced that he would renegotiate 'entrapping' oil contracts with transnational companies, consider Ecuador's re-entry into OPEC (which happened in Nov. 2007) and limit debt repayment in favour of social spending (although quick repayment of IMF debts would remain on the agenda).

In April 2007 he won referendum approval to set up a constituent assembly to rewrite the constitution. Elections to the assembly in Sept. resulted in a majority victory for Correa's allies over opposition parties that had dominated the Congress since the Oct. 2006 polls. In Nov. 2007 the assembly voted to dissolve the Congress and proceeded to act as a legislature. A new draft constitution increasing presidential powers and tenure, banning foreign military bases and enhancing state influence over the economy was approved by the assembly in July 2008 and endorsed in a national referendum on 28 Sept.

In March 2008 Ecuador's relations with Colombia were seriously undermined by a cross-border Colombian strike against a FARC guerrilla target in Ecuadorian territory, prompting Correa to cut diplomatic ties and send troops to the border. Relations worsened in July 2009 when a FARC military commander claimed that his organization had contributed funding to Correa's 2006 election campaign, and have remained strained.

Correa won an outright victory in the April 2009 presidential elections, avoiding the need for a second round run-off. His party won a legislative majority at the same time. However, in Sept. 2010 Correa was assaulted and then besieged in hospital by rebellious police officers protesting against pay cuts. The incident was denounced as a coup attempt by Correa and prompted the government to declare an indefinite state of emergency. In a further constitutional referendum in May 2011 voters approved a range of amendments, including extra presidential powers over the judiciary and media.

DEFENCE

Military service is selective, with a one-year period of conscription. The country is divided into four military zones, with headquarters at Quito, Guayaquil, Cuenca and Pastaza.

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$1,105m. (US$77 per capita), representing 2.0% of GDP.

Army

Strength (2007) 47,000.

Navy

Navy combatant forces include two diesel submarines (although their serviceability is in doubt) and two ex-UK frigates. The Naval Aviation has 12 aircraft but no combat capable aircraft. Naval personnel in 2007 totalled 6,100 including 1,500 marines.

Air Force

The Air Force had a 2007 strength of 4,000 personnel and some 57 combat capable aircraft, and includes Cessna A-37s, Mirage F-1s and Kfirs.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In March 2008 Ecuador responded to a Colombian incursion into its territory, during which a senior figure in the rebel FARC movement was killed, by sending troops to the border with Colombia. Venezuela made a similar gesture in sympathy before a diplomatic solution to the stand-off came into effect a week later.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 6.7% of GDP in 2008, industry 40.6% and services 52.7%.

Overview

In the 1980s and 1990s per capita income stagnated at a level above the Latin American average but below the world average. Heavily dependent on oil exports (oil and mining account for 14.2% of GDP), the fall in oil prices in the late 1990s combined with natural disasters to trigger a collapse in GDP and income levels. However, high oil prices throughout most of the 2000s reinvigorated growth.

In Dec. 2008 the government announced a default on its sovereign debt, representing 80% of its private external debt, which the government had labelled 'illegitimate'. It bought back the majority of its defaulted bonds in 2009.

The global financial crisis, along with a sharp drop in world oil prices and remittances, caused the economy to contract in 2009, with a recovery beginning in 2010. Some 46% of the population remains below the national poverty line. Oil output has faced regular industrial disruption and corruption remains endemic.

Currency

The monetary unit is the US dollar. Inflation was 8.4% in 2008 and 5.2% in 2009. In March 2000 the government passed a law to phase out the former national currency, the sucre, to be replaced by the US dollar, and in April bank cash machines began dispensing dollars instead of sucres. On 11 Sept. 2000 the dollar became the only legal currency. Foreign exchange reserves were US$1,398m. in July 2005 with gold reserves of 845,000 troy oz.

Budget

Revenues in 2006 totalled US$6,895m. and expenditures US$7,011m.

VAT is 12% and corporate tax 25%.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 0.4% in 2009 and 3.6% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$58.9bn.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank of Ecuador (President of the Directorate, Pedro Delgado), the bank of issue, with reserves of US$1,994.5m. in Dec. 2008, is modelled after the Federal Reserve Banks of the USA. There were 24 banks in Dec. 2006 with deposits of US$8,755m. Ecuador's largest private bank is Banco del Pichincha. All commercial banks must be affiliated to the Central Bank. The national monetary board is based in Quito.

There are stock exchanges in Quito and Guayaquil.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Ecuador's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 2.0 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 4.49m. kW in 2007. Production was 17.34bn. kWh in 2007; consumption per capita was 1,335 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Production of oil in 2008 was 26.2m. tonnes. Estimated reserves, 2008, 3.8bn. bbls. In 2007 natural gas production was 794m. cu. metres. Proven reserves (2007), 90bn. cu. metres.

Minerals

Main products are silver, gold, copper and zinc. The country also has some iron, uranium, lead, coal, cobalt, manganese and titanium.

Agriculture

There were 1.20m. ha. of arable land in 2007 and 1.22m. ha. of permanent crops. In 2007 the agricultural population was an estimated 2.86m., of which about 1.19m. were economically active.

Main crops, in 1,000 tonnes, in 2003: sugarcane, 5,691; bananas, 5,609; rice, 1,236; plantains, 860; maize, 677; potatoes, 427; palm oil, 244; oranges, 189; soybeans, 111.

Livestock, 2003: cattle, 4.98m.; pigs, 3.01m.; sheep, 2.65m.; horses, 530,000; asses, 280,000; goats, 279,000; chickens, 142m.

Forestry

Excepting the agricultural zones and a few arid spots on the Pacific coast, Ecuador is a vast forest. 10.85m. ha., or 39.2% of the land area, was forested in 2005, but much of the forest is not commercially accessible. In 2007, 6.08m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced.

Fisheries

Fish landings in 2008 were 434,239 tonnes (almost entirely from sea fishing). Exports of fishery commodities were valued at US$1.75bn. in 2008.

INDUSTRY

Industry produced 40.6% of GDP in 2008, including 9.7% from manufacturing. Manufacturing grew by 8.1% in 2008. Main products include (in 1,000 tonnes): cement (2007 estimate), 4,420; residual fuel oil (2007), 3,323; petrol (2007), 1,940; distillate fuel oil (2007), 1,603.

Labour

Out of 3,673,200 people in urban employment in 2001, 1,026,700 were in wholesale and retail trade/repair of motor vehicles, motorcycles and personal and household goods; 610,600 in manufacturing; 244,600 in transport, storage and communications; and 239,800 in agriculture, hunting and forestry. In June 2001, 10.4% of the workforce was unemployed, down from 14.1% in June 2000.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Most restrictions on foreign investment were removed in 1992 and the repatriation of profits was permitted. Foreign debt was US$17,129m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

In 2008 imports totalled US$18,692m. (US$13,565m. in 2007); exports, US$18,490m. (US$13,852m. in 2007). Main imports in 2004 were (in US$1m.): road vehicles, 835.2; telecommunications, sound recording and reproducing equipment, 615.3; iron and steel, 477.7; petroleum and petroleum products, 378.8; medicinal and pharmaceutical products, 377.1. Ecuador is the world's leading exporter of bananas (US$1,022.9m. in 2004), with approximately a third of world banana exports. Other major exports (2004, in US$1m.): petroleum and petroleum products, 4,233.8; fish and seafood, 734.6; cut flowers and foliage, 342.2; cocoa, 145.7. Main import suppliers, 2004: USA, 20.7%; Colombia, 14.6%; Venezuela, 6.8%; Brazil, 6.1%. Main export markets in 2004: USA, 42.9%; Peru, 7.9%; Italy, 4.6%; Colombia, 3.9%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 43,670 km of roads. There were 507,500 passenger cars in 2007 (38 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 323,500 lorries and vans. There were 1,848 fatalities in road accidents in 2007.

In 1998 storms and floods on the coast, caused by El Niño, resulted in 2,000 km of roads being damaged or destroyed.

Rail

The railway network, once 971 km long, now has a total length of just 204 km. In 2002 passenger-km travelled came to 33m.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Quito (Mariscal Sucre) and Guayaquil (Simón Bolívar). The main Ecuadorian carriers are Tame Línea Aérea del Ecuador and Icaro. In 2001 Quito handled 2,213,000 passengers (1,140,000 on domestic flights) and 105,400 tonnes of freight, and Guayaquil handled 1,416,000 passengers (749,000 on domestic flights) and 40,500 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

Ecuador has three major seaports, of which Guayaquil is the most important, and six minor ones. In Jan. 2009 there were 60 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 222,000 GT.

Telecommunications

Ecuador had 7,947,800 telephone subscribers in 2005, equivalent to 600.8 for every 1,000 persons, with 6,246,300 mobile phone subscribers. In 2005, 514,000 PCs were in use (38.9 for every 1,000 persons) and internet users numbered 616,000.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

The Supreme Court in Quito, consisting of a President and 30 Justices, comprises ten chambers each of three Justices. It is also a Court of Appeal. There is a Superior Court in each province, comprising chambers (as appointed by the Supreme Court) of three magistrates each. The Superior Courts are at the apex of a hierarchy of various tribunals. There is no death penalty.

The population in penal institutions in Aug. 2008 was 17,065 (126 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

There were an estimated 287,000 pre-primary pupils in 2007–08 and an estimated 19,000 pre-primary teachers in 2008–09. Primary education is free and compulsory. Private schools, both primary and secondary, are under some state supervision. In 2007 there were 2.04m. pupils and 90,366 teaching staff in primary schools; and 1.14m. pupils with 77,904 teaching staff in secondary schools. In the public sector in 2000–01 there were: 9 universities, 8 technical universities, 2 institutes of technology, 1 polytechnical university, 1 military polytechnic and 1 agricultural university; and in the private sector: 9 universities, 3 Roman Catholic universities, 4 institutes of technology, 2 polytechnic institutes and 1 technical university. There were 443,509 students in tertiary education in 2007 with 22,714 academic staff. Adult literacy was 84.2% in 2009 (male, 87.1%; female, 81.5%).

In 2000–01 total expenditure on education came to 1.7% of GNP and 8.0% of total government spending.

Health

In 2002 there were 3,496 hospitals and clinics with 14 beds per 10,000 inhabitants. There were 18,335 physicians, 2,062 dentists, 19,549 nurses and 1,037 midwives in 2000.

Welfare

Those who qualify for a pension must have at least 480 months of contributions (at any age), or be aged 60 with 360 months of contributions, 65 with 180 months of contributions or 70 with 120 months of contributions. In 2003 the minimum monthly pension was US$25, and the maximum pension was US$125.

Social insurance providing lump-sum benefits for unemployment is gradually being phased out in favour of a system linking payments to income and length of employment.

RELIGION

The state recognizes no religion and grants freedom of worship to all. In 2001 there were 11.91m. Roman Catholics. There were also small numbers of Protestants and followers of other faiths. In Feb. 2012 there was one Roman Catholic cardinal.

CULTURE*World Heritage Sites

Ecuador has four sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the Galápagos Islands (inscribed on the list in 1978 and 2001); the City of Quito (1978); Sangay National Park (1983); and the Historic Centre of Santa Ana de los Ríos de Cuenca (1999).

Press

There were 19 daily newspapers in 2006, with a circulation of 670,000.

Tourism

Foreign visitors numbered 861,000 in 2005, spending US$488m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

There is evidence of pastoralism and the cultivation of cereals in southwest Egypt from as early as 7000 BC. Settlements grew along the Nile valley, though Upper and Lower Egypt only united around 3100 BC under Pharaoh Menes. The subsequent Early Dynastic period was marked by flourishing trade with Sinai, the Levant and as far north as the Black Sea. The astonishing artistic and intellectual developments of the Old Kingdom began during the IVth dynasty (2575–2465 BC), when sun-worship took hold and temples and pyramids, including those at Giza, were constructed. Egypt was governed from the city of Memphis, south of modern Cairo, reaching its height during the VIth dynasty before losing power to local rulers from around 2200 BC.

Centralized power was restored at Thebes from 2134 BC. The Middle Kingdom (XIIth dynasty) saw Egypt expand south into Nubia under Amenemhat I. A cultural flowering included the invention of a writing system. The XIIth dynasty ended in 1786 BC when the region was invaded by the Hyksos, a nomadic Asiatic tribe. The New Kingdom came into being with the expulsion of the Hyksos around 1550 BC and lasted until 1050 BC. It was now that Egypt achieved its greatest territorial dominance, with Syria, Palestine and northern Iraq all under Egyptian jurisdiction. The conquests brought great prosperity and bold architecture, which reached its zenith under the XVIIIth dynasty pharaohs, Tuthmosis III and Tutankhamun.

Ancient Egyptian civilization began to fragment in conflict with Hittite invaders during the XIXth dynasty (around 1250 BC). The subsequent rise of Assyria to the northeast and Nubian conquests from the south hastened the decline. The last pharaoh was ousted by Persian invading forces led by Cambyses in 525 BC. The Persians remained in power until overrun by Alexander the Great in 332 BC. He founded the port of Alexandria, including its great lighthouse, and made the city the commercial and cultural centre of the Greek world. On his death in 305 BC, Ptolemy of Macedonia seized power, establishing a dynasty which lasted until 30 BC and the suicide of Cleopatra.

Egypt then became a province of the Roman Empire until Arabian forces invaded in AD 642, absorbing the Nile valley into the Umayyad Caliphate, centred on Damascus. The Arabic language became the official language of government in 706. The Abbasid defeat of the Umayyad dynasty in 750 brought a shift of Arab power to the new city of Baghdad. Abdullah bin Tahir sent a deputy to rule Egypt. The Fatimid caliphs, whose origins were in Tunisia, entered Egypt in 960 and founded Cairo as their capital, later establishing the Muslim university. Over the next 200 years they built an empire that stretched from Tunisia to Syria and Yemen, with extensive trade routes across the Mediterranean and into the Indian Ocean.

Weakened by the Christian Crusades, the Fatimid caliphate fell to the Ayyubid dynasty in 1169, led by Tikrit-born Saladin (Salahuddin al-Ayyubi). Operating from Damascus, he fought the Crusader States and by the end of the 12th century controlled much of the Eastern Mediterranean. Egypt was largely governed by his deputy, Karaksh. In 1250 Egypt was seized by Saif ad Din Qutuz, a Turkic former slave who founded the Mamluk Sultanate. There were frequent revolts and changes of leaders (beys, or princes), but the Sultanate survived until 1517 when Egypt was absorbed into the Ottoman empire.

Napoleonic forces seized the country between 1798 and 1801 but were forced out by a combined Anglo-Ottoman force. Muhammad Ali, appointed Egyptian pasha by the Ottoman emperor in 1805, swiftly destroyed the remnants of Mamluk power. He introduced sweeping political and social reforms and modernized agriculture. Like many of his predecessors he took control of Syria, Nubia and part of the Arabian peninsula. The opening of the Suez Canal during the reign of Muhammad Said Pasha in 1867 heralded an era of foreign intervention and domination, with Said selling his shares in the Suez Canal to the British in 1875. British forces occupied Alexandria and then Cairo in 1882, ruling the country through the consul general, Lord Cromer. During the First World War, Britain declared Egypt a British Protectorate, ousting the khedive, Abbas I, for supporting Germany. Calls for independence grew louder after the war ended and Fuad I ruled a partially independent Egypt from 1923.

Although Egypt was officially neutral until the last days of the Second World War, Britain was the dominant power. From 1940 it was the arena for the Desert War that saw Allied forces ultimately repel Axis attempts to occupy Egypt, take control of the Suez Canal and open up access to the oil fields of the Middle East. The decisive victory came when Gen. Montgomery's Eighth Army overpowered the German and Italian forces under Gen. Rommel at the Second Battle of El Alamein in July 1942.

Following a revolution in July 1952 led by Gen. Neguib, King Farouk abdicated in favour of his son but in 1953 the monarchy was abolished. Neguib became president but encountered opposition from the military when he attempted to move towards a parliamentary republic. Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser became head of state on 14 June 1954 (president from 1956). In 1956 Egypt nationalized the Suez Canal, a move which led Britain, France and Israel to mount military attacks against Egypt until UN and US pressure forced a withdrawal.

The 1960s and 1970s were years of conflict with Israel, notably the Six-Day War in June 1967, when Egypt (together with Syria and Jordan) declared war on Israel but were defeated despite having more troops and armaments. After the war Egypt received economic and military aid from the Soviet Union. Following Nasser's death in Sept. 1970 Muhammad Anwar Sadat took over as president. Having launched a peace initiative during a visit to Jerusalem in 1977, Sadat secured a treaty with Israel in March 1979. Sadat was assassinated on 6 Oct. 1981 and was succeeded by his vice-president, Lieut.-Gen. Muhammad Hosni Mubarak of the National Democratic Party (NDP). He gained a fifth consecutive term after emerging victorious in presidential elections in Sept. 2005 (the first multi-candidate presidential poll) to become the country's longest-serving leader since Muhammad Ali. In Jan. and Feb. 2011 he faced popular protests demanding his resignation. Despite attempts to appease the protesters through various concessions, on the 18th day of unrest Mubarak resigned and handed control to the Armed Forces Supreme Council.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Egypt is bounded in the east by Israel and Palestine, the Gulf of Aqaba and the Red Sea, south by Sudan, west by Libya and north by the Mediterranean. The total area is 1,009,450 sq. km (including 6,000 sq. km of inland water), but the cultivated and settled area, that is the Nile Valley, Delta and oases, covers only 35,000 sq. km. A number of new desert cities are being developed to entice people away from the overcrowded Nile valley, where 99% of the population lives. The 2006 census population was 72,798,031; density 72.5 per sq. km. The United Nations population estimate for 2006 was 75,568,000. Estimate, Jan. 2010: 77,775,000. In 2005, 57.2% of the population were rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 88.18m.

3.9m. Egyptians were living abroad in 2006.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births (est.), 2009, 2,217,000 (28.8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 477,000 (6.2). Annual population growth rate, 2000–05, 2.3%. In 2005, 80% of the population was under 40 years old. Life expectancy at birth, 2007, was 68.2 years for males and 71.7 years for females. Fertility rate, 2008, 2.9 births per woman; infant mortality, 2005, 28 per 1,000 live births. Egypt has made some of the best progress in recent years in reducing child mortality. The number of deaths per 1,000 live births among children under five was reduced from more than 100 in 1990 to 26 in 2005.

CLIMATE

The climate is mainly dry, but there are winter rains along the Mediterranean coast. Elsewhere, rainfall is very low and erratic in its distribution. Winter temperatures are comfortable everywhere, but summer temperatures are very high, especially in the south. Cairo, Jan. 56°F (13.3°C), July 83°F (28.3°C). Annual rainfall 1.2" (28 mm). Alexandria, Jan. 58°F (14.4°C), July 79°F (26.1°C). Annual rainfall 7" (178 mm). Aswan, Jan. 62°F (16.7°C), July 92°F (33.3°C). Annual rainfall (trace). Giza, Jan. 55°F (12.8°C), July 78°F (25.6°C). Annual rainfall 16" (389 mm). Ismailia, Jan. 56°F (13.3°C), July 84°F (28.9°C). Annual rainfall 1.5" (37 mm). Luxor, Jan. 59°F (15°C), July 86°F (30°C). Annual rainfall (trace). Port Said, Jan. 58°F (14.4°C), July 78°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 3" (76 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Following the popular uprising that led to President Hosni Mubarak being deposed in Feb. 2011, a Provisional Constitution came into force on 30 March 2011. Proposed by the Egyptian Supreme Council of the Armed Forces on 13 Feb. 2011, it won backing in a referendum on 19 March with 77.3% of votes cast in favour and 22.7% against. It superseded a previous constitution that dated from 1971.

Under the terms of the Provisional Constitution, Egypt is a democratic state within the Arab world, with the principles of Islamic law the chief source of its legislation. It provides for a multi-party political system and restricts the President to a maximum of two four-year terms. The President, who must be at least 40 years old and may not be married to a non-Egyptian, is obliged to appoint a Vice President within 30 days of election. There is a bicameral parliament consisting of the People's Assembly (which has 508 members of whom 498 are elected and ten appointed) and the Shura Council (270 members, of whom 180 are elected and 90 appointed). The People's Assembly sits for five-year terms and the Shura Council for six years. In March 2012 parliament began the selection process for a 100-member constitutional assembly charged with drafting a permanent constitution. The assembly is scheduled to complete its work within six months of its establishment, at which time the proposed constitution is to be put to a referendum.

Chairman of the Supreme Council of the Armed Forces

Introduction

Mohamed Hussein Tantawi became the de facto leader of Egypt on 11 Feb. 2011 after Hosni Mubarak resigned as president following mass demonstrations calling for him to step down. Field Marshal Tantawi, chairman of the Supreme Council of the Armed Forces, was expected to oversee a transitional period that would return power to a new parliament, government and head of state, elected in stages from Nov. 2011 through to mid-2012.

Early Life

Mohamed Hussein Tantawi Soliman was born on 31 Oct. 1935 to a Nubian family. He joined the army as an infantryman and received his officer's commission in 1956 after completing a masters degree in military science at the High War College at Nasser High Military Academy.

Tantawi served in the Sinai War of 1956, the Six-Day War of 1967 and the Yom Kippur War of 1973. Rising through the ranks, he was assigned as a military attaché to Pakistan and Afghanistan. In 1991, following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, Tantawi served as head of the Armed Forces Operation Room, a part of the Gulf War coalition forces. For his service, he received Kuwait Liberation medals from Egypt, Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. In 1991 he was appointed minister of defence and military production, and in 1993 was made field marshal. Two years later he became commander-in-chief of the Egyptian armed forces. Known as a traditionalist, Tantawi was a Mubarak supporter.

On 31 Jan. 2011, following Mubarak's sacking of the entire cabinet in the face of popular protests, Tantawi was named deputy prime minister while retaining the defence and military production portfolios. On 11 Feb. 2011 Mubarak resigned as president and handed authority over to the Supreme Council of the Armed Forces, headed by Tantawi. Although seen as part of the old regime, Tantawi was largely untarnished by the human rights abuses committed by the intelligence and police agencies. The military council was to govern the country alongside the supreme constitutional court until the election of a new parliament and president.

Career in Office

Following a referendum on 19 March 2011 that saw a 77% vote in favour of amendments to the 1971 constitution, Tantawi was mandated to oversee the preparation and conduct of fresh parliamentary and presidential elections. Ahead of the elections, his aim was to reassure Egypt's allies that it remained committed to pre-existing alliances and treaties, notably with the USA and Israel. As the year progressed, however, Tantawi and the military faced growing discontent among pro-democracy activists demanding the immediate transfer of political power to a civilian administration. Despite renewed violent clashes in Cairo and other cities between demonstrators and security forces, the military council pressed ahead with its schedule for national parliamentary elections in stages from Nov. 2011 to Jan. 2012.

Moderate Islamists aligned to the Muslim Brotherhood's Freedom and Justice Party emerged as the strongest political force in the elections and were predominant in the new parliament that held its inaugural session on 23 Jan. Widely perceived as increasingly unable to provide stability and security, Tantawi and the military council were expected to relinquish power following the anticipated election of a new state president in mid-2012.

DEFENCE

Conscription is selective, and for 12–36 months, depending on the level of education. Military expenditure totalled US$4,562m. in 2008 (US$59 per capita), representing 2.9% of GDP. According to Deadly Arsenals, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, Egypt has a chemical and biological weapons programme.

Army

Estimated strength (2007) 310,000 (around 205,000 conscripts). In addition there were 375,000 reservists, a Central Security Force of 325,000, a National Guard of 60,000 and 12,000 Border Guards.

Navy

Major surface combatants include one destroyer and ten frigates. A small shore-based naval aviation branch operates 20 helicopters. There are naval bases at Al Ghardaqah, Alexandria, Hurghada, Mersa Matruh, Port Said, Port Tewfik, Safaqa and Suez. Naval personnel in 2007 totalled an estimated 18,500 (including 10,000 conscripts and 2,000 coast guards).

Air Force

Until 1979 the Air Force was equipped largely with aircraft of USSR design, but subsequent re-equipment involves aircraft bought in the West, as well as some supplied by China. Strength (2007) is about 30,000 personnel (10,000 conscripts), 115 attack helicopters and 489 combat capable aircraft including F-7s, F-16s and Mirages.

ECONOMY

In 2006 agriculture accounted for 14.1% of GDP, industry 38.4% and services 47.5%.

Overview

Egypt, one of the most economically diversified countries in the Middle East, is beginning to recover after the economic turmoil that accompanied the overthrow of Hosni Mubarak in 2011.

The 1980s was a decade of macroeconomic disorder in Egypt before an IMF-backed reform programme in the 1990s helped it achieve economic stability. However, the late 1990s saw a downturn and privatization efforts stalled in the early 2000s. In 2004 an economically liberal cabinet was appointed and the reform agenda was revived, with President Mubarak investing political capital in structural reforms to generate jobs and promote foreign investment.

Growth in Egypt averaged 6.4% per year between 2005 and 2008, underpinned by record levels of foreign direct investment and a favourable external environment. The economy held up relatively well during the global financial crisis, with a decline in remittances and external demand partially offset by resilient domestic demand and strong performances in the construction, communications and trade sectors.

In the wake of the Jan. 2011 revolution, the economy slumped and GDP fell by 9% in the first quarter. Revenues from tourism collapsed, triggering a slide in foreign reserves. Political uncertainty in the post-Mubarak era continues to hinder economic stability, while long-term challenges include reducing the budget deficit and addressing high levels of poverty and youth unemployment.

Currency

The monetary unit is the Egyptian pound (EGP) of 100 piastres. Inflation rates (based on IMF statistics) for fiscal years:

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
2.4%	2.4%	3.2%	8.1%	8.8%	4.2%	11.0%	11.7%	16.2%	11.7%

Faced with slowing economic activity, the country devalued the Egyptian pound four times in 2001. In Jan. 2003 the Egyptian pound was allowed to float against the dollar after years of a government-controlled foreign exchange regime. In June 2009 foreign exchange reserves were US$29,278m., gold reserves totalled 2.43m. troy oz and total money supply was £E182,991m.

Budget

The financial year runs from 1 July. Budgetary central government revenues in 2008–09 (provisional) were £E282,505m. and expenditures £E308,070m. Taxes on income, profits and capital gains accounted for 28.4% of revenue and taxes on goods and services 22.2%. Main items of expenditure were subsidies (30.5%) and compensation of employees (24.7%).

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on IMF statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
3.5%	3.2%	3.2%	4.1%	4.5%	6.8%	7.1%	7.2%	4.7%	5.1%

Total GDP in 2010 was US$218.9bn.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank of Egypt (founded 1960) is the central bank and bank of issue. The Governor is Farouk el-Okdah.

In 2003, four major public-sector commercial banks accounted for some 77% of all banking assets: the National Bank of Egypt (the largest bank, with assets of £E299bn. in June 2010), the Banque Misr, the Bank of Alexandria and the Banque du Caïre. There were 40 banks in total in 2008. Foreign banks have only been allowed to operate since 1996.

Foreign direct investment inflows, which were just US$237m. in 2003, rose to US$11.6bn. in 2007, but since then have fallen and totalled US$6.4bn. in 2010.

There are stock exchanges in Cairo and Alexandria.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Egypt's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 2.1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 21.0m. kW in 2006–07. Electricity generated in 2006–07 was 128.13bn. kWh. Consumption per capita was an estimated 1,732 kWh in 2006–07. The use of solar energy is expanding. There are plans to build a nuclear power station to help meet the growing demand for electricity.

Oil and Gas

Oil was discovered in 1909. Oil policy is controlled by the state-owned Egyptian General Petroleum Corporation, whole or part-owner of the production and refining companies. Oil production in 2008 was 34.6m. tonnes with 4.3bn. bbls of proven reserves.

As a result of a series of new discoveries in 1999 and 2000 gas reserves have been steadily increasing. Egypt began exporting natural gas in 2003 and is now a major exporter. 2008 total production amounted to 58.9bn. cu. metres. There were proven natural gas reserves of 2,170bn. cu. metres in 2008.

Water

The Aswan High Dam, completed in 1970, allows for a perennial irrigation system.

The Mubarak Pumping Station, the world's largest, has been operational since Jan. 2003. Located behind the Aswan High Dam at Lake Nasser, since its inauguration it has been pumping 14.5m. cu. metres of water per day into a 67 km canal to irrigate approximately 540,000 feddans of desert land in Toshka.

Minerals

Production (2003–04, in tonnes): phosphate, 2.08m.; iron ore, 1.98m.; salt, 1.55m.; kaolin, 221,000; aluminium (2002 estimate), 190,000; quartz, 19,000; asbestos (2002 estimate), 2,000.

Agriculture

There were 2.86m. ha. of arable land in 2001 and 0.48m. ha. of permanent crops. In 1996, of the total cultivated area 18.4% was reclaimed desert. Irrigation is vital to agriculture and is being developed by government programmes; it now reaches most cultivated areas and in 2001 covered 3.34m. ha. The Nile provides 85% of the water used in irrigation, some 55,000m. cu. metres annually. There were 102,584 tractors in 2007 and 2,451 harvester-threshers.

In 1994 there were 5,214 agricultural co-operatives. 0.71m. feddan of land had been distributed by 1991 to 0.35m. families under an agrarian reform programme. In 2001, 5.07m. persons were engaged in agriculture. Cotton, sugarcane and rice are subject to government price controls and procurement quotas.

Output (in 1,000 tonnes), 2007: sugarcane, 17,014; tomatoes, 8,695; wheat, 7,379; maize, 6,930; rice, 6,877; sugar beets, 5,458; potatoes, 2,760; melons and watermelons, 2,121; oranges, 2,055; dry onions, 1,756; grapes, 1,485; dates, 1,314; aubergines, 1,160; bananas, 945; sorghum, 844. Egypt is Africa's largest producer of a number of crops, including wheat, rice, tomatoes, potatoes and oranges. In spite of being a significant producer of wheat, Egypt is also the largest importer.

Livestock, 2000: sheep, 4.45m.; goats, 3.30m.; buffaloes, 3.20m.; cattle, 3.18m.; asses, 3.05m.; camels, 120,000; chickens, 88m. Livestock products in 2000 (in 1,000 tonnes): buffalo's milk, 2,079; cow's milk, 1,645; meat, 1,391; eggs, 170. 464,000 tonnes of cheese were produced in 2000, making Egypt the largest cheese producer in Africa.

Forestry

In 2005 forests covered 67,000 ha., representing 0.1% of the total land area. In 2007, 17.44m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced.

Fisheries

The catch in 2005 was 349,553 tonnes, of which 242,100 tonnes were freshwater fish.

INDUSTRY

The largest companies by market capitalization in Egypt in April 2011 were: Orascom Construction Industries (US$8.0bn.); Telecom Egypt (US$4.6bn.); and Commercial International Bank (US$3.6bn.).

Almost all large-scale enterprises are in the public sector, and these account for about two-thirds of total output. The private sector, dominated by food processing and textiles, consists of about 150,000 small and medium businesses, most employing fewer than 50 workers.

Production, in 1,000 tonnes: cement (2007), 38,469; residual fuel oil (2007), 10,989; distillate fuel oil (2007), 8,803; crude steel (2008), 6,198; petrol (2005), 2,972; sugar (2001-02), 1,555; fertilizers (2002), 1,269; tobacco (1997-98), 595; paper and paperboard (2001), 460; cotton yarn (2000), 164. Motor vehicles (2002), 46,479 units; washing machines (1999), 252,000 units; cigarettes (2000), 53.0bn. units.

Labour

In 2002-03 the labour force was 19.9m. In 2003, 29.0% of employed persons were engaged in agriculture, hunting and forestry; 11.9% in wholesale and retail trade/repair of motor vehicles, motorcycles and personal and household goods; 11.2% in public administration, defence and compulsory social security; and 10.9% in manufacturing. Unemployment was 9.9% in 2003. The high birth rate of the 1980s has meant that there are now some 800,000 new entrants into the job market annually.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt totalled US$34,114m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006
Imports (f.o.b.)	12,879	13,189	18,895	23,818	28,984
Exports (f.o.b.)	7,118	8,987	12,320	16,073	20,546

Imports of principal commodities in 2004: machinery and apparatus, 15.9%; vegetable products, 11.4%; metal products, 10.0%; chemicals and chemical products, 9.1%. Exports, 2004: petroleum, 40.0%; finished goods, 27.2%; semi-manufactured goods, 14.1%; raw cotton, 6.3%. Egypt exports less than 20% of its manufactured goods.

Main import suppliers in 2004: Free zones, 11.8%; USA, 10.3%; Germany, 6.6%; China, 5.1%; Italy, 4.9%. Main export markets, 2004: Italy, 12.5%; Bunkers and ship's stores, 9.8%; USA, 7.5%; Free zones, 5.7%; Spain, 5.5%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2006 there were 99,672 km of roads, of which 81.0% were paved. Vehicles in use in 2006 (in 1,000): passenger cars, 2,372 (29 per 1,000 inhabitants in 2005); lorries and vans, 1,463; motorcycles and mopeds, 751; buses and coaches, 79. There were 12,295 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 2007.

Rail

In 2005 there were 5,063 km of state railways (1,435 mm gauge), of which 42 km were electrified. Passenger-km travelled in 2008 came to 40.8bn. and freight tonne-km to 3.8bn.

There are tramway networks in Cairo, Heliopolis and Alexandria, and a metro (63 km) opened in Cairo in 1987.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Cairo, Luxor, Alexandria, Hurghada and Sharm El-Sheikh. The national carrier is Egyptair. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Egyptian-based carriers flew 63m. km, carrying 4,181,000 passengers (2,916,000 on international flights). In 2003 Cairo handled 8,337,000 passengers and 187,280 tonnes of freight. Sharm El-Sheikh was the second busiest in 2003, with 3,423,000 passengers.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 100 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 923,000 GT. Of the 100 vessels registered, 39 were general cargo ships, 34 oil tankers, 11 bulk carriers, eight passenger ships, six chemical tankers and two container ships. The Egyptian-controlled fleet comprised 113 vessels of 1,000 GT or over in Jan. 2009, of which 59 were under the Egyptian flag and 54 under foreign flags. The leading ports are Adabeya, Alexandria, Damietta, Dekheila, Port Said and Sokhna.

Suez Canal

The Suez Canal was opened for navigation on 17 Nov. 1869 and nationalized in June 1956. By the convention of Constantinople of 29 Oct. 1888, the canal is open to vessels of all nations and is free from blockade, except in time of war. It is 190 km long, connecting the Mediterranean with the Red Sea. It has a maximum depth of 22.5 metres and a maximum width of 365 metres. Vessels of up to 210,000 DWT fully laden are able to pass through the canal.

In 2004, 16,850 vessels (net tonnage, 621m.) went through the canal. In 2004, 521m. tonnes of cargo were transported. Toll revenue in 2004 was US$3,085m.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 11,936,000 main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year mobile phone subscribers numbered 41,273,000 (506.2 per 1,000 persons). In Dec. 2005 the Egyptian government sold 20% of its holding in Telecom Egypt. There were 13,573,000 internet users in 2008 and 3,160,000 PCs were in use in 2006.

Justice

The court system comprises: a Court of Cassation with a bench of five judges which constitutes the highest court of appeal in both criminal and civil cases; five Courts of Appeal with three judges; Assize Courts with three judges which deal with all cases of serious crime; Central Tribunals with three judges which deal with ordinary civil and commercial cases; Summary Tribunals presided over by a single judge which hear minor civil disputes and criminal offences. Contempt for religion and what is judged to be a false interpretation of the Koran may result in prison sentences.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2006 was 64,378 (87 per 100,000 of national population). The death penalty is in force; there was one execution in 2011 (four in 2010).

Education

The adult literacy rate in 2005 was 71.4%. Free compulsory education is provided in primary schools (eight years). Secondary and technical education is also free. In 2002–03, 53.9% of girls and 46.1% of boys were enrolled in the primary school system. In 2004–05 there were 5,845 pre-primary schools with 494,334 pupils. In 2004–05 there were 16,369 primary schools with 8,634,115 pupils, 8,757 preparatory schools with 2,889,212 pupils and 2,170 general secondary schools with 1,299,233 pupils. In 2004–05 there were 788,017 students in 841 commercial secondary schools, 1,050,970 in 855 industrial secondary schools and 251,021 in 172 agricultural secondary schools.

Al Azhar institutes educate students who intend enrolling at Al Azhar University, one of the world's oldest universities and Sunni Islam's foremost seat of learning. In 2003–04 there were 6,690 institutes in the Al Azhar system with 1,449,048 pupils.

In 2002–03 there were 12 state universities, the Al Azhar university and five private universities including a French and a German university. There were 2.0m. students enrolled in university and higher education.

Public education expenditure in 2007 was 3.7% of GNI and 12.6% of total government spending.

Health

At 1 Jan. 2002 there were 1,112 hospitals with 80,519 beds. There were 157,000 physicians and 188,000 nurses in 2005. In 2004–05 health expenditure represented 3.4% of GDP.

Welfare

In 2003–04 there were 18.7m. welfare beneficiaries including, in 2002–03, 7.4m. recipients of pensions.

RELIGION

Islam is constitutionally the state religion. In 2001 there were 58.1m. Sunni Muslims (84% of the population); some 9% of the population are Coptic Christians, the remainder being Roman Catholics, Protestants or Greek Orthodox, with a small number of Jews. A Patriarch heads the Coptic Church, and there are 25 metropolitans and bishops in Egypt; four metropolitans for Ethiopia, Jerusalem, Khartoum and Omdurman, and 12 bishops in Ethiopia. The Copts use the Diocletian (or Martyrs') calendar, which begins in AD 284. In Feb. 2012 there was one cardinal in the Roman Catholic church.

World Heritage Sites

There are seven sites under Egyptian jurisdiction that appear on the UNESCO World Heritage List. The first five were entered on the list in 1979. They are: Memphis and its Necropolis (the Pyramid Fields from Giza to Dahshur); Ancient Thebes with its Necropolis; Nubian Monuments from Abu Simbel to Philae; Historic Cairo; and Abu Mena. Memphis was considered one of the Seven Wonders of the World. Ancient Thebes was the capital of Egypt during the period of the middle (c. 2000 BC) and new (c. 1600 BC) kingdoms. The Nubian monuments include the temples of Ramses II in Abu Simbel and the Sanctuary of Isis in Philae. Historic Cairo, founded in the 10th century, became the centre of the Islamic world. Abu Mena was an early Christian holy city.

The Saint Catherine Area was added to the list in 2002. It included Saint Catherine's Monastery, an outstanding example of an Orthodox Christian monastic settlement, dating from the 6th century AD. The area is centred on Mount Sinai (Jebel Musa or Mount Horeb). In 2005 Wadi Al-Hitan (Whale Valley) was inscribed on the list. The site is an area rich in fossil remains in Egypt's western desert.

Press

In 2008 there were 18 dailies (17 paid-for and one free) with a total average circulation of 2.74m. The leading dailies are Al-Ahram and Al-Gomhuriya.

Tourism

There were 8.24m. non-resident tourists in 2005; tourist spending in 2005 reached a record US$7.2bn. Tourism is the leading source of foreign revenue and contributes 7% of GDP.

Festivals

Annual film festivals are held in Alexandria (Sept.) and Cairo (Nov.–Dec.). The Arab Music Festival at the Cairo Opera House takes place in Aug.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Conquered by Spain in 1526, El Salvador remained under Spanish rule until 1821. Thereafter, El Salvador was a member of the Central American Federation comprising the states of El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica until this federation was dissolved in 1839. In 1841 El Salvador declared itself an independent republic.

The country's history has been marked by political violence. The repressive dictatorship of President Maximiliano Hernández Martínez lasted from 1931 to 1944 when he was deposed as were his successors in 1948 and 1960. The military junta that followed gave way to more secure presidential succession although left-wing guerrilla groups were fighting government troops in the late 1970s. As the guerrillas grew stronger, gaining control over a part of the country, the USA sent economic aid and assisted in the training of Salvadorean troops. A new constitution was enacted in Dec. 1983 but the presidential election was boycotted by the main left-wing organization, the Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front (FMLN). Talks between the government and the FMLN in April 1991 led to constitutional reforms in May, envisaging the establishment of civilian control over the armed forces and a reduction in their size. On 16 Jan. 1992 the government and the FMLN signed a peace agreement.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

El Salvador is bounded in the northwest by Guatemala, northeast and east by Honduras and south by the Pacific Ocean. The area (including 247 sq. km of inland lakes) is 21,040 sq. km. Population (2007 census), 5,744,113 (female 53%), giving a population density of 273 per sq. km. The United Nations population estimate for 2007 was 6,101,000.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 6-39m.

In 2007, 62.7% of the population were urban. Some 2.5m. Salvadoreans live abroad, mainly in the USA.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 births (est.), 112,000; deaths (est.), 32,000. Rates (2008, per 1,000 population): births (est.), 18.3; deaths (est.), 5.2. Life expectancy at birth in 2007 was 66.4 years for males and 75.9 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 2000-05, 1.8%. Infant mortality, 2005, 23 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 2.3 births per woman. Abortion is illegal.

CLIMATE

Despite its proximity to the equator, the climate is warm rather than hot, and nights are cool inland. Light rains occur in the dry season from Nov. to April, while the rest of the year has heavy rains, especially on the coastal plain. San Salvador, Jan. 71°F (21.7°C), July 75°F (23.9°C). Annual rainfall 71" (1,775 mm). San Miguel, Jan. 77°F (25°C), July 83°F (28.3°C). Annual rainfall 68" (1,700 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was enacted in Dec. 1983. Executive power is vested in a President and Vice-President elected for a non-renewable term of five years. There is a Legislative Assembly of 84 members elected by universal suffrage and proportional representation: 64 locally and 20 nationally, for a term of three years.

CURRENT LEADERS*Carlos Mauricio Funes CartagenaPosition*

President

Introduction

Mauricio Funes took office in June 2009 at the head of the left-wing Farabundo Martí National Liberation Front (FMLN) administration, ending 20 years of Nationalist Republican Alliance (ARENA) government.

Early Life

Funes was born on 18 Oct. 1959 in San Salvador. Schooled at the Colegio Centroamérica and the private Colegio Externado San José, he went in 1975 to study literature at the city's José Simón Cañas University.

In 1980 civil war broke out between the authoritarian government and leftist organizations, from which the FMLN was created. Mauricio's older brother was killed by police during a student demonstration. In 1986 Mauricio became a reporter for state television news. In 1997 he became head of news at Canal 12. However, after several run-ins—notably over criticism of the government after a 2001 earthquake—he left the station in 2005.

His public popularity paved the way for a move into politics, where he established a relationship with the FMLN. In Sept. 2007 the party chose him as its presidential candidate, a month before Funes' son was murdered in Paris. Funes is the first FMLN leader not to have fought as a guerrilla. At the presidential elections in March 2009 Funes defeated Rodrigo Ávila of ARENA, winning over 50% of the vote.

Career in Office

Amid claims that an FMLN victory would jeopardize US relations and turn the country into a satellite of Venezuela, Funes declared he would maintain a good relationship with Washington and that El Salvador would remain part of the Central American Free Trade Agreement, signed by ARENA in 2006. Meanwhile, he re-established ties with Cuba, cut off since 1961.

He offered ministerial portfolios to supporters from a range of political backgrounds. His primary challenges have been to address the troubled economy and reduce the large deficit (aided by loans from the IMF and development banks) and to cut crime, while maintaining the co-operation of a congress where the FMLN failed to secure an overall majority of seats at the elections in Jan. 2009 and March 2012. In Nov. 2009 he was also faced with the humanitarian consequences of a hurricane that left about 140 people dead and thousands homeless. In Sept. 2011 the ongoing problem of crime was highlighted as the US government added El Salvador to a blacklist of countries considered major producers of or transit routes for illegal drugs.

DEFENCE

There is selective conscription for 12 months. In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$115m. (US$16 per capita), representing 0.5% of GDP.

Army

Strength (2007): 13,850 (4,000 conscripts). The National Civilian Police numbers about 12,000.

Navy

There is a small coastguard force with 860 (2007) personnel including one company of Naval Infantry numbering 160 and one company of Commandos numbering 90.

Air Force

Estimated strength (2007): 950 personnel (200 conscripts). There are some 15 combat capable aircraft and 33 helicopters.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 10.9% of GDP in 2006, industry 29.4% and services 59.7%.

Overview

Economic performance in the early- to mid-2000s was the result of wide-ranging reforms initiated in the early 1990s, which called for more open trade, and changes to pension and fiscal policies. In 2001 the US dollar replaced the colón as the official currency. In March 2006 El Salvador was the first country to enter into the Central America–Dominican Republic–United States Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA–DR) with the USA, followed by Honduras, Nicaragua, Guatemala, the Dominican Republic and Costa Rica.

Key industries include coffee and textiles, making the economy vulnerable to external factors including the weather and variations in the international market. Remittances contributed 18% of GDP in 2007. 47% of exports go to the USA and remittance inflows from the USA are the largest in the region.

After achieving its highest growth rates in a decade in 2007, El Salvador was hit hard by the global financial crisis. Remittances decreased by nearly 10% while GDP contracted by 3.1% in 2009. A US$250m. assistance package to tackle the effects of the financial crisis was announced by the World Bank in July 2009.

Currency

The dollar (USD) replaced the colón as the legal currency of El Salvador in 2003. Inflation was 7.3% in 2008, falling to 0.4% in 2009. Foreign exchange reserves were US$1,741m. and gold reserves 326,000 troy oz in May 2005.

Budget

Budgetary central government revenue totalled US$2,711.9m. in 2006 and expenditure US$3,010.7m.

VAT is 13%.

Performance

The economy contracted by 3.1% in 2009 but grew by 1.4% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$21.8bn.

Banking and Finance

The bank of issue is the Central Reserve Bank (President, Carlos Acevedo), formed in 1934 and nationalized in 1961. There are 15 commercial banks (two foreign). Individual private holdings may not exceed 5% of the total equity.

There is a stock exchange in San Salvador, founded in 1992.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

El Salvador's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 0.9 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007 was 1,372,000 kW, of which 472,000 kW hydro-electric. Production in 2007 was 5.81bn. kWh; consumption per capita was 822 kWh in 2007.

Minerals

El Salvador has few mineral resources. In 2008 an estimated 1.2m. tonnes of limestone were produced. Annual marine salt production averages 30,000 tonnes.

Agriculture

27% of the land surface is given over to arable farming. There were about 682,000 ha. of arable land in 2007 and 237,000 ha. of permanent crops. In 2007 the agricultural population was an estimated 1,696,000, of which about 608,000 were economically active. Large landholdings have been progressively expropriated and redistributed in accordance with legislation initiated in 1980. Since the mid-19th century El Salvador's economy has been dominated by coffee. Output, in 1,000 tonnes (2003): sugarcane, 4,532; maize, 618; sorghum, 144; coffee, 92; melons and water-melons, 90; dry beans, 78; bananas, 65. Livestock (2003): 1.0m. cattle, 153,000 pigs, 96,000 horses, 8m. chickens.

Forestry

Forest area was 298,000 ha. (14.4% of the land area) in 2005. Balsam trees abound: El Salvador is the world's principal source of this medicinal gum. In 2007, 4.89m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries

The catch in 2005 was 41,114 tonnes (95% from marine waters).

INDUSTRY

Production in 1,000 tonnes: cement (2006), 1,311; sugar (2005), 633; residual fuel oil (2007), 477; distillate fuel oil (2007), 229; petrol (2007), 117; paper and paperboard (2006 estimate), 56. Traditional industries include food processing and textiles.

Labour

Out of 2,412,800 people in employment in 2002, 688,500 were in wholesale and retail trade/repair of motor vehicles, motorcycles and personal and household goods/hotels and restaurants; 458,400 in agriculture, forestry and hunting; 434,100 in manufacturing; and 155,400 in health and social work, and other community, social and personal service activities. There were 160,200 unemployed persons, or 6.2% of the workforce, in 2002.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 2004 El Salvador signed the Central America–Dominican Republic–United States Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA–DR), along with Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Guatemala, Honduras, Nicaragua and the USA. The agreement entered into force for El Salvador on 1 March 2006. External debt was US$7,088m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Imports and exports in calendar years (in US$1m.):

	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008
Imports c.i.f.	6,329	6,834	7,628	8,677	9,754
Exports f.o.b.	3,305	3,387	3,513	3,977	4,579

Principal import suppliers, 2004: USA, 46.3%; Guatemala, 8.1%; Costa Rica, 2.8%; Honduras, 2.5%. Principal export markets, 2004: USA, 65.4%; Guatemala, 11.7%; Honduras, 6.3%; Nicaragua, 3.9%. Main import commodities are chemicals and chemical products, transport equipment, and food and beverages; main export commodities are coffee, paper and paper products, and clothing.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2002 there were an estimated 10,029 km of roads, including 327 km of motorways. Vehicles in use in 2002: passenger cars, 112,700; trucks and vans, 234,500. There were 12,396 road accidents in 2009 resulting in 1,033 fatalities.

Rail

There are 555 km of 914 mm gauge railway. The railway was closed from 2002–06 but a limited service resumed in 2007 and continues to operate.

Civil Aviation

The international airport is El Salvador International in San Salvador. The national carrier is Taca International Airlines. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of El Salvador-based carriers flew 34m. km, carrying 2,271,000 passengers (2,182,000 on international flights). It flies to various destinations in the USA, Mexico and all Central American countries. In 2001 El Salvador International handled 1,294,864 passengers on international flights and 26,276 tonnes of international freight.

Shipping

The main ports are Acajutla (which handled 5.86m. tonnes of cargo in 2008) and Cutuco.

Telecommunications

The telephone system has been privatized and is owned by two international telephone companies. In 2005 there were 3,383,200 telephone subscribers (491.7 per 1,000 inhabitants), including 2,411,800 mobile phone subscribers. There were 350,000 PCs in use in 2005 and 637,100 internet users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Justice is administered by the Supreme Court (six members appointed for three-year terms by the Legislative Assembly and six by bar associations), courts of first and second instance, and minor tribunals. Following the disbanding of security forces in Jan. 1992 a new National Civilian Police Force was created that numbered 12,000 by 2007. The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2007 was 14,682 (208 per 100,000 of national population).

El Salvador had the second highest annual murder rate in the world in 2010 (after Honduras), at 65 per 100,000 people (4,004 homicides in total in 2010, although down slightly from 4,367 in 2009). The rate nearly doubled between 2002 and 2009.

Education

The adult literacy rate in 2009 was 84.1%. Education, run by the state, is free and compulsory. In 2007 there were 229,539 children in nursery schools, 1,075,041 in primary schools and 536,017 in secondary schools. The University of El Salvador (Universidad de El Salvador), founded in 1841, is the country's oldest and largest public university. There are also several private universities. In 2007 there were 132,246 students and 8,370 academic staff in tertiary education.

In 2007 public expenditure on education came to 3.1% of GNI and 13.1% of total government spending.

Health

In 2003 there were 30 hospitals with nine beds per 10,000 inhabitants. There were 8,171 physicians, 3,573 dentists and 11,777 nurses in 2002.

Welfare

There are old age, disability and survivors' pensions and sickness, maternity and work injury benefits. The official retirement age is 55 years (women) and 60 years (men). The minimum monthly old age pension is US$143.64. Maternity benefit is equal to 75% of average monthly earnings for up to 12 weeks.

RELIGION

In 2001 there were 4,880,000 Roman Catholics. Under the 1962 constitution, churches are exempted from the property tax; the Catholic Church is recognized as a legal person, and other churches are entitled to secure similar recognition. There is an archbishop in San Salvador and bishops at Santa Ana, San Miguel, San Vicente, Santiago de María, Usulután, Sonsonate and Zacatecoluca. There were about 1,070,000 Protestants in 2001 and 290,000 followers of other religions.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

El Salvador has one site on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the Joya de Cerén Archaeological Site (1993), a pre-Hispanic farming community preserved under volcanic ash.

Press

In 2005 there were five daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 250,000.

Tourism

There were 1,154,000 foreign tourists in 2005, spending US$838m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Equatorial Guinea consists of the island of Bioko, for centuries called Fernando Pó; other smaller islands and the mainland territory of Rio Muni. Fernando Pó was named after the Portuguese navigator Fernão do Pó. The island was ruled for three centuries by Portugal until 1778 when it was ceded to Spain. For some decades after taking possession, Spain did not have a strong presence. Britain established a naval base at Clarence (later Santa Isabel), which was central to the suppression of slave trading over a wide area. Spain asserted its rule from the 1840s when cocoa was cultivated on European-owned plantations using imported African labour. This traffic led to an international scandal in 1930 when Liberians were found to be held in virtual slavery. Later many Nigerians were employed, often in poor conditions.

African nationalist movements began in the 1950s. Internal self-government was granted in 1963. In 1969 Spain suspended the constitution but in 1969 agreed to a referendum which supported independence. The two parts of Equatorial Guinea were united under Macías Nguema who established single-party rule. During his bloody dictatorship up to a third of the population was killed or else left the country. Macías was declared President-for-Life in July 1972 but was overthrown by a military coup on 3 Aug. 1979.

A constitution approved by a referendum on 3 Aug. 1982 restored some institutions but a Supreme Military Council remained the sole political body until constitutional rule was resumed on 12 Oct. 1982.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The mainland part of Equatorial Guinea is bounded in the north by Cameroon, east and south by Gabon, and west by the Gulf of Guinea, in which lie the islands of Bioko (formerly Macías Nguema, formerly Fernando Pó) and Annobón (called Pagalu from 1973 to 1979). The total area is 28,051 sq. km (10,831 sq. miles) and the population at the 1994 census was 406,151. Another 110,000 are estimated to remain in exile abroad. Population estimate, 2010, 700,000; density, 25 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 802,000.

In 2005, 61.1% of the population were rural.

The seven provinces are grouped into two regions—Continental (C), chief town Bata; and Insular (I), chief town Malabo—with areas and populations as follows:

	Sq. km	Census 1994 (estimate)	Chief town
Annobón (I)	17	2,800	San Antonio de Palea
Bioko Norte (I)	776	75,100	Malabo
Bioko Sur (I)	1,241	12,600	Luba
Centro Sur (C)	9,931	60,300	Evinayong
Kié-Ntem (C)	3,943	92,800	Ebebiyin
Wele-Nzas (C)	5,478	62,500	Mongomo

In 2003 the capital, Malabo, had an estimated population of 92,900.

The main ethnic group on the mainland is the Fang, which comprises 85% of the total population; there are several minority groups along the coast and adjacent islets. On Bioko the indigenous inhabitants (Bubis) constitute 60% of the population there, the balance being mainly Fang and coast people. On Annobón the indigenous inhabitants are the descendants of Portuguese slaves and still speak a Portuguese patois. The official languages are French, Portuguese and Spanish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 25,000; deaths, 10,000. Rates (2008 estimates, per 1,000 population); birth, 38.0; death, 15.0. Life expectancy (2007): male, 48.7 years; female, 51.1. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.8%. Infant mortality, 2005, 123 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 5.3 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is equatorial, with alternate wet and dry seasons. In Rio Muni, the wet season lasts from Dec. to Feb.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A Constitution was approved in a plebiscite in Aug. 1982 by 95% of the votes cast and was amended in Jan. 1995. It provided for an 11-member Council of State, and for a 41-member House of Representatives of the People. The President presides over a Council of Ministers.

On 12 Oct. 1987 a single new political party was formed as the Partido Democrático de Guinea Ecuatorial. A referendum on 17 Nov. 1991 approved the institution of multi-party democracy, and a law to this effect was passed in Jan. 1992. The electorate is restricted to citizens who have resided in Equatorial Guinea for at least ten years. A parliament created as a result, the Cámara de Representantes del Pueblo (House of People's Representatives), has 100 seats, with members elected for a five-year term by proportional representation in multi-member constituencies.

In Nov. 2011 further constitutional amendments were approved by referendum. Official results indicated 97.7% support and turnout of 91.8%, although opposition parties alleged fraud. The amendments relaxed restrictions on the number of terms the President can serve and on the age of incumbents (previously set at between 40 and 75 years old), and provide for the creation of a Senate. A new position of Vice President was established, to be appointed by the President.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At parliamentary elections on 4 May 2008, boycotted by most opposition parties, the ruling Democratic Party of Equatorial Guinea (PDGE) won 89 of the 100 seats and its allies (the so-called 'democratic opposition') won 10. The Convergence for Social Democracy (CPDS) won the remaining seat.

Presidential elections were held on 29 Nov. 2009. President Nguema Mbasogo was re-elected with 95.4% of votes cast. His main rival, opposition candidate Plácido Micó Abogo of the CPDS, received 3.6% but refused to accept the result, citing fraud. Turnout was 93.5%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

President of the Supreme Military Council: Brig.-Gen. Teodoro Obiang Nguema Mbasogo; b. 1943 (PDGE; in office since 1979, most recently re-elected in 2009).

CURRENT LEADERS

Brig.-Gen. Teodoro Obiang Nguema Mbasogo

Position

President

Introduction

Brig.-Gen. Teodoro Obiang Nguema Mbasogo became president of Equatorial Guinea in Aug. 1979, having led a coup d'état against the dictatorial regime of his uncle, Macías Nguema. After introducing some liberalizing reforms, Obiang himself adopted an authoritarian form of government, leading to widespread allegations of civil rights abuses and electoral fraud. The discovery of major fossil fuel reserves in the mid-1990s created an economic boom, although Obiang has been criticized for the government's lack of transparency in administering this new wealth.

Early Life

Obiang, an ethnic Fang, was born on 5 June 1942 into the Esangui clan of Acoacán. He undertook military training in Spain and, following the election of his uncle as president of the newly-independent country, was made a lieutenant. He had stints as governor of Bioko, presidential aide-de-camp and head of the military, while Macías Nguema's regime became increasingly repressive, with around a third of the population leaving the country during the 1970s.

In Aug. 1979 Obiang ousted his uncle, who was subsequently put on trial and executed.

Career in Office

On assuming the presidency on 3 Aug. 1979 it was hoped that Obiang would implement a more liberal and democratic approach to government. One of his first acts was to call an amnesty on refugees and to free 5,000 political prisoners. However, he retained many of the powers of his uncle and soon came under criticism for his style of government. Local and national political appointments have been blighted by nepotism, which has led to some interfamilial feuding within the political and military establishments.

The discovery of large oil and gas reserves off Bioko in the mid-1990s led to a massive upturn in the economy as Equatorial Guinea became one of sub-Saharan Africa's leading oil exporters. However, it has been widely claimed that the benefits of this oil money have failed to reach the population at large. The IMF and the World Bank demanded increased transparency concerning government oil revenues, which Obiang claimed were a state secret, and warned against an over-reliance on the limited oil reserves.

The country's first multi-party elections in 1993 were won by Obiang's Democratic Party of Equatorial Guinea (PDGE), but boycotted by most of the opposition parties. Then, in the presidential election in Feb. 1996, he was returned with a reported 99% of the vote. At the presidential election of Dec. 2002 he again claimed over 97% of the vote and opposition parties accused the government of vote rigging. A government-in-exile formed by Obiang's opponents was established in Spain. Obiang's treatment of opposition politicians has received condemnation from, among others, the EU and Amnesty International and the president has been accused of using torture on political prisoners. There have also been high-profile public trials such as that in 2002 which resulted in the one-year imprisonment of opposition leader Fabian Nseu Guema for insulting Obiang on a website. In Nov. 2009 Obiang was again re-elected overwhelmingly as president in polling that was denounced by opposition figures as fraudulent and manipulated.

In foreign policy, Obiang has been in dispute with Gabon over the latter's long-term occupation of Mbagne, an island in the Bay of Corisco thought to contain further significant oil supplies.

In 2002 he signed an agreement with Nigeria for the development of the Zafiro-Ekanga oil field along their joint maritime border.

In 2004 a plane flying from Zimbabwe was intercepted after Obiang announced it was carrying mercenaries preparing a coup against him. Those accused of involvement included Mark Thatcher (son of former British prime minister Margaret Thatcher), who was arrested in South Africa and later fined and given a suspended prison term, and British mercenary Simon Mann, arrested in Zimbabwe. Obiang claimed that the arrests were evidence of a plot by the secret services of the USA, UK and Spain to overthrow him. In Feb. 2008 Mann was extradited from Zimbabwe to stand trial for his alleged role in the coup and in July was sentenced to 34 years' imprisonment. However, he was granted a presidential pardon in Nov. 2009 on humanitarian grounds.

The PDGE retained its dominance in parliamentary elections in April 2004, but most opposition parties boycotted the poll and foreign observers claimed that there were serious irregularities. In Aug. 2006 Obiang accepted the resignation of Abia Biteo's government, having accused it of corruption and poor leadership. Ricardo Mangué Obama Nfubea was appointed as the new prime minister, but he too submitted the resignation of his government in July 2008 after similar accusations by Obiang. He was replaced by Ignacio Milam Tang, who also tendered his administration's resignation in Jan. 2010 but was reappointed along with his key ministers. According to official results, voters in a referendum in Nov. 2011 overwhelmingly approved a new constitution based on the US presidential system, including a new vice-presidential office and Senate and a limitation on presidential terms of office. However, opposition figures dismissed the changes as a sham.

In 2011 Obiang served as chair of the African Union.

DEFENCE

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$11m. (US$18 per capita), representing 0.1% of GDP.

Army

The Army consists of three infantry battalions with (2007) 1,100 personnel. There is also a paramilitary Guardia Civil.

Navy

A small force, numbering an estimated 120 in 2007 and based at Malabo and Bata, operates five patrol and coastal combatants.

Air Force

There are no combat capable aircraft or armed helicopters. Personnel (2007), 100.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 2% of GDP in 2008, industry 96% (the highest percentage of any country) and services 2%.

Overview

Equatorial Guinea has been one of the world's fastest-growing economies since the discovery of oil in the 1990s. Oil revenues grew from US$3m. in 1993 to an estimated US$8.4bn. in 2009, making it the third largest oil producer in sub-Saharan Africa (behind Nigeria and Angola). GDP growth performance has been exceptional since the late 1990s, reaching a high of 150.0% in 1997. However, a recent slowdown in hydrocarbon production, which accounts for 73% of GDP, has seen GDP growth fall from an average of 28.9% annually between 2001–05 to 9.7% over the period 2006–09. Non-oil GDP growth has remained positive, with large public infrastructure investment and private housing construction the main drivers of growth. The oil boom has generated inflationary pressures, averaging 6% since the early 2000s, but public investment in infrastructure has helped offset the problem.

Despite per capita income rising to that of middle-income countries, living standards remain poor. Poverty is widespread, life expectancy low and access to safe water among the worst in the world. The economy is equipped to make socio-economic progress but a stronger institutional capacity to direct resources to priority areas is needed. Corruption remains a problem, with government officials and their families owning most businesses. An Extractive Industries Transparency Initiative (EITI) and a national poverty reduction strategy are now in place.

Currency

On 2 Jan. 1985 the country joined the Franc Zone and the ekpwele was replaced by the franc CFA (XAF) which now has a parity value of 655-957 francs CFA to one euro. Foreign exchange reserves were US$1,416m. in June 2005 and total money supply was 209,768m. francs CFA. Inflation was 4.3% in 2008 and 7.2% in 2009.

Budget

In 2009 revenue was 2,368bn. francs CFA and expenditure 2,828bn. francs CFA. Oil revenue accounted for 94.3% of revenues in 2005; capital expenditure accounted for 63.9% of total expenditures in 2005.

Performance

Equatorial Guinea was one of the world's fastest-growing economies during much of the 1990s and 2000s thanks to the rapid expansion of its oil sector. The economy grew by a record 150.0% in 1997. This strong performance continued with growth in both 2007 and 2008 among the highest in the world, at 21.4% and 10.7% respectively. However, it slowed significantly in 2009 to 5.7% and the economy contracted by 0.8% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$14.0bn.

Banking and Finance

The Banque des États de l'Afrique Centrale (Governor, Lucas Abaga Nchama) became the bank of issue in Jan. 1985. There are two commercial banks (Caisse Commune d'Épargne et d'Investissement Guinée Equatoriale; Société Générale des Banques GE) and two development banks.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 7.4 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was an estimated 31,000 kW in 2007. Production was around 95m. kWh in 2007; consumption per capita in 2007 was approximately 187 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Oil production started in 1992 and in 2005 totalled 17.6m. tonnes, up from 5.8m. tonnes in 2000. There were proven reserves of 1.8bn. bbls in 2005. Mobil is the biggest operator in the country but other US-based oil companies are investing heavily. Since oil in commercial quantities was discovered in 1995 Equatorial Guinea has attracted more than US$12bn. in foreign direct investment.

Natural gas reserves were 37bn. cu. metres in 2007.

Minerals

There is some small-scale alluvial gold production.

Agriculture

There were an estimated 130,000 ha. of arable land in 2007 and 90,000 ha. of permanent crops. Subsistence farming predominates. In 2007 the agricultural population was approximately 425,000 of which about 164,000 were economically active. The major crops (estimated production, 2003, in 1,000 tonnes) are: cassava, 45; sweet potatoes, 36; plantains, 31; bananas, 20; coconuts, 6; cocoa beans, 4; coffee, 4; palm oil, 4. Plantations in the hinterland have been abandoned by their Spanish former owners and, except for cocoa and coffee, commercial agriculture is in serious difficulties. Livestock, 2003 estimates: cattle, 5,000; goats, 9,000; pigs, 6,000; sheep, 38,000.

Forestry

In 2005 forests covered 1.63m. ha., or 58.2% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 totalled 606,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2005 was estimated to be 3,500 tonnes (71% from sea fishing). Tuna and shellfish are caught.

INDUSTRY

The once-flourishing light industry collapsed under the Macías regime. Oil production is now the major activity. Production of veneer sheets, 2007 estimate, 15,000 cu. metres. Food processing is also being developed.

Labour

In 2010 the estimated economically active population was 270,000 (69% males). The wage-earning non-agricultural workforce is small.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$260m. in 2002.

Imports and Exports

Imports for 2007 came to US$3,098m.; exports in 2007 were valued at US$10,095m.

Main import suppliers, 2003: USA, 30.6%; UK, 16.0%; France, 15.0%; Côte d'Ivoire, 11.9%; Spain, 8.2%. Main export markets, 2003: USA, 33.2%; Spain, 25.4%; China, 14.2%; Canada, 12.7%; Italy, 6.3%. Principal import commodities are machinery and transport equipment, and petroleum and petroleum products; principal export commodities are petroleum, cocoa and timber.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2002 the road network covered 2,880 km. Most roads are in a state of disrepair. There were 4,700 passenger cars (9.6 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 3,600 vans and trucks in 2002.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Malabo. There were international flights in 2003 to Cotonou, Douala, Libreville, Madrid, Yaoundé and Zürich. In 1998 Malabo handled 54,000 passengers.

Shipping

Bata is the main port, handling mainly timber. The other ports are Luba, formerly San Carlos, in Bioko, and Malabo, Evinayong and Mbini on the mainland. In Jan. 2009 there were seven ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 5,000 GT.

Telecommunications

In 2010 there were 13,500 main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year mobile phone subscribers numbered 399,000 (570.1 per 1,000 persons). There were 21.3 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2009. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 1,200 in 2005 (2.0 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Constitution guarantees an independent judiciary. The Supreme Tribunal, the highest court of appeal, is located at Malabo. There are Courts of First Instance and Courts of Appeal at Malabo and Bata. The death penalty is in force; there were four executions in 2010 but none in 2011.

Education

In 2007–08 there were 2,000 teachers for 40,000 children in pre-primary schools; (2009–10) 3,000 teachers for 85,000 pupils in primary schools; and (1999–2000) 21,000 secondary pupils with 800 teachers. In 1993 there were 2 teacher training colleges, 2 post-secondary vocational schools and 1 agricultural institute. Adult literacy was an estimated 93.3% in 2009 (male, 97.0%; female, 89.8%). In 2003 public expenditure on education came to 1.3% of GNP.

Health

In 2005 there were 22 hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants. There were 153 physicians, 15 dentistry personnel and 271 nursing and midwifery personnel in 2004.

RELIGION

Christianity was proscribed under President Macías but reinstated in 1979. In 2001 there were 390,000 Roman Catholics with the remainder of the population followers of other religions.

CULTURE

Press

There are no daily newspapers, although there are a number of periodicals that are published at varying degrees of regularity.

Tourism

Foreign tourists brought in revenue of US$14m. in 2001.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Italy was the colonial ruler from 1890 until 1941 when Eritrea fell to British forces. A British protectorate ended in 1952 when the UN sanctioned federation with Ethiopia. In 1962 Ethiopia became a unitary state and Eritrea was incorporated as a province. Eritreans began an armed struggle for independence under the leadership of the Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF) which culminated successfully in the capture of Asmara on 24 May 1991. Thereafter the EPLF maintained a de facto independent administration recognized by the Ethiopian government. Sovereignty was proclaimed on 24 May 1993. In 1999 fighting broke out along the border with Ethiopia, following a series of skirmishes the previous year. After the failure of international mediation, the 13-month long-truce between Eritrea and Ethiopia ended in May 2000. Ethiopia launched a major offensive. In June both sides agreed to an Organization of African Unity peace deal.

In 2003 the UN border commission's award of the disputed town of Badame to Eritrea was rejected by Ethiopia, leading to a standoff between the two nations. UN helicopters were banned from Eritrean airspace in Nov. 2005. The following month Eritrea expelled all North American and European UN representatives, with the UN threatening sanctions against both countries unless they adhered to the 2000 peace plan. Meanwhile, the international commission in The Hague judged that Eritrea's 1998 attacks on Ethiopia breached international law.

Eritrean relations with the UN deteriorated further throughout 2006, with five UN staff expelled on charges of spying in Sept. In Nov. 2007 Eritrea agreed to a new judgment by the international boundary commission, which Ethiopia rejected. In July 2008 the UN Security Council voted to end its peacekeeping mission along the border. The previous month there were skirmishes between troops from Eritrea and Djibouti over the disputed borderlands of Ras Doumeira. In Dec. 2009 Eritrea was the subject of UN sanctions amid accusations that it was backing Islamist insurgents in Somalia. In June 2010 Djibouti and Eritrea pledged to resolve their dispute diplomatically.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Eritrea is bounded in the northeast by the Red Sea, southeast by Djibouti, south by Ethiopia and west by Sudan. Some 300 islands form the Dahlak Archipelago, most of them uninhabited. For the dispute with Yemen over the islands of Greater and Lesser Hanish see YEMEN: Territory and Population. Its area is 117,600 sq. km (45,410 sq. miles), including 16,600 sq. km (6,410 sq. miles) of inland waters. There has not been a census since Eritrea became independent in 1993. Population estimate, 2010, 5.25m.; density, 52 per sq. km. 80.6% of the population was rural in 2005.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 6.08m.

In 2009 there were around 200,000 Eritreans living abroad, more than half of them as refugees in Sudan.

There are six regions: Anseba, Debub, Debubawi Keyih Bahri, Gash Barka, Maekelel and Semenawi Keyih Bahri. The capital is Asmara (2002 estimated population, 500,600). Other large towns (with 2002 populations) are Keren (74,800) and Adi Uгри (25,700). An agreement of July 1993 gives Ethiopia rights to use the ports of Assab and Massawa.

49% of the population speak Tigrinya and 32% Tigré, and there are seven other indigenous languages. Arabic is spoken on the coast and along the Sudanese border, and English is used in secondary schools. Arabic and Tigrinya are the official languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 births (estimates), 182,000; deaths, 42,000. Estimated birth rate in 2008 was 37.0 per 1,000 population; estimated death rate, 12.4. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 3.7%. Life expectancy at birth, 2007, was 56.8 years for males and 61.4 years for females. Infant mortality, 2005, 50 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 4.6 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Massawa, Jan. 78°F (25.6°C), July 94°F (34.4°C). Annual rainfall 8" (193 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A referendum to approve independence was held on 23–25 April 1993. The electorate was 1,173,506. 99.8% of votes cast were in favour.

The transitional government consists of the President and a 150-member National Assembly. It elects the President, who in turn appoints the State Council made up of 14 ministers and the governors of the ten provinces. The President chairs both the State Council and the National Assembly.

National Anthem

'Ertra, Ertra, Ertra' ('Eritrea, Eritrea, Eritrea'); words by S. Beraki, tune by I. Meharezghi and A. Tesfatsion.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the presidential and legislative elections in May 1997, President Afewerki was re-elected to office. National Assembly elections, postponed in 1998, were set to take place before the end of 2003 but have been put back indefinitely. In the meantime several dissident politicians have been jailed.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

President: Issaias Afewerki; b. 1945 (People's Front for Democracy and Justice, formerly the Eritrean People's Liberation Front; elected 22 May 1993 and re-elected in May 1997).

In March 2012 the ministers in the State Council were: Minister of Agriculture: Arefaine Berhe. Defence: Sebhat Ephrem. Education: Semere Russom. Energy and Mining: Ahmed Haj Ali. Finance: Berhane Abrehe. Foreign Affairs: Osman Saleh. Health: Amina Nurhusein. Information: Ali Abdu. Justice: Foza Hashim. Labour and Human Welfare: Salma Hassen. Land, Water and Environment: Tesfai Ghebreselassie. Marine Resources: Tewoldi Kelati. National Development: Giorgis Teklemikael. Public Works: Abraha Asfaha. Tourism: Askalu Menkerios. Trade and Industry: Vacant. Transport and Communications: Woldemikael Abraha.

CURRENT LEADERS

Issaias Afewerki

Position

President

Introduction

Issaias Afewerki has been president of Eritrea since it achieved independence from Ethiopia in 1993, having been a leading campaigner for secession since the mid-1960s. However, his tenure has been marked by civil rights abuses. In foreign policy he has overseen a bloody war with Ethiopia in 1999–2000, which has since threatened to reignite over an unresolved border dispute, as well as difficult relations with Djibouti and Sudan.

Early Life

Issaias Afewerki was born in 1945 in Asmara, Eritrea's capital, which was then under British administration. Eritrea became part of Ethiopia in 1962 and in 1966 Afewerki joined the secessionist Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF). Having received military training in China, he became a deputy divisional commander. In 1970 he helped found the Eritrean People's Liberation Front (EPLF), becoming its general secretary in 1987.

Following the collapse of the Mengistu military regime in Ethiopia in 1991, the new government agreed to a referendum on Eritrean independence. The referendum was held in 1993 and Eritrea declared independence in May of that year. Eritrea's National Assembly selected Afewerki as the country's first president.

Career in Office

The EPLF initially suggested a multi-party political system and in the early stages of his tenure Afewerki advocated close economic relations with Ethiopia. However, in Feb. 2002 the National Assembly, composed of EPLF representatives, refused to ratify a bill on the establishment of new political parties. Multi-party elections, previously scheduled for the end of 2001, were shelved.

In 2001 Afewerki authorized the arrest of critical journalists and political opponents. The move was condemned internationally and the Italian ambassador, who had voiced concerns over human rights violations, was expelled. International aid was consequently cut. In 2002 Afewerki set out his plans for the creation of a 'responsible' press, soon after an opposition party—the Eritrean People's Liberation Front Democratic Party—had emerged to challenge him. The party was believed to have been co-founded by Mesfin Hagos, Afewerki's former defence minister.

In 1999 border disputes escalated into full-scale war between Ethiopian and Eritrean forces which resulted in 70,000 deaths. A ceasefire was agreed in June 2000, with Ethiopia withdrawing its forces under UN supervision. A formal peace treaty was signed in Dec. 2000. Tensions remained, particularly concerning the ownership of the small border settlement of Badame, and in May 2001 the countries agreed to abide by the decision of an international boundary commission. The commission awarded Badame to Eritrea, but Ethiopia refused to accept the decision. Fears of a renewed conflict mounted in late 2005 after Eritrea expelled UN observers policing the militarized border region.

Relations with the UN deteriorated further during the autumn of 2006 as Eritrea expelled several UN peacekeeping staff for allegedly spying and moved troops into the buffer zone on the Ethiopian border in violation of the ceasefire. At the same time, the Eritrean government was accused of providing arms and supplies to the Islamist militias confronting the Ethiopian-backed transitional government in Somalia. In Nov. 2007 Eritrea accepted a border demarcation proposal by an independent boundary commission but Ethiopia rejected it. In Jan. 2008 the UN Security Council extended the mandate of its peacekeeping mission on the Eritrean-Ethiopian border for a further six months (despite Eritrean opposition), but brought it to a close at the end of July. Relations deteriorated again in March–April 2011 as Ethiopia accused Eritrea of terrorist infiltration and then declared openly that it would support Eritrean rebel forces aiming to overthrow Afewerki.

Afewerki meanwhile oversaw the restoration of diplomatic ties with Sudan and Djibouti, although relations with both countries remain unsettled. Eritrea has claimed that Islamic fundamentalist groups active within the country have received backing from Khartoum, and has also accused Djibouti of providing military support to Ethiopia, a claim denied by Djibouti. In June 2008 there were border clashes between troops from Djibouti and Eritrea following several weeks of rising tensions. However, following the imposition of sanctions against Eritrea by the UN Security Council in Dec. 2009, both sides agreed in June 2010 to resolve their border issues peacefully. In mid-2009 the African Union (AU) rebuked Afewerki's regime for continuing to aid Islamist insurgents in Somalia, so endangering civilians and AU peacekeeping forces.

DEFENCE

Conscription for 18 months was introduced in 1994 for all Eritreans between the ages of 18 and 40, with some exceptions. It has since been reduced to 16 months. The total strength of all forces was estimated at 201,750 in 2007.

Defence expenditure totalled US$65m. in 2005 (US$14 per capita and 6.3% of GDP).

Army

The Army had a strength of around 200,000 in 2007. There were also approximately 120,000 reservists available.

Navy

Most of the former Ethiopian Navy is now in Eritrean hands. The main bases and training establishments are at Massawa, Assab and Dahlak. Personnel numbered 1,400 in 2007.

Air Force

Personnel numbers were estimated at 350 in 2007. There were 18 combat capable aircraft including MiG-29s, MiG-23s and MiG-21s.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

A border dispute between Eritrea and Ethiopia broke out in May 1998. Eritrean troops took over the border town of Badame after a skirmish between Ethiopian police units and armed men from Eritrea. Ethiopia maintained that Badame and Sheraro, a nearby town, had always been part of Ethiopia and called Eritrea's action an invasion. An agreement ending hostilities was signed in June 2000, followed by a peace accord in Dec. A buffer zone has been created to separate the armies, but tensions do still arise from time to time, notably in late 2005 following a further dispute between the two countries over Badame.

ECONOMY

In 2007 agriculture accounted for 24.3% of GDP, industry 19.2% and services 56.5%.

Eritrea's resources are meagre, the population small and poorly-educated; communications are difficult and there is a shortage of energy.

Overview

In the half decade following Eritrea's declaration of independence in 1993 and after 30 years of war with Ethiopia, the average annual growth rate was 10.9%. However, renewed conflict with Ethiopia from 1998–2000 damaged much of the economic and social infrastructure and displaced a large part of the population. Eritrea now stands as one of the world's poorest countries, with an estimated two-thirds of the population living below the poverty line. Sustained real economic growth of above 7% is required to reduce the number living in long-term extreme poverty.

Subsistence agriculture is the main economic activity. Economic conditions are poor with growth averaging 1.2% per annum in the period 2005–08. A series of external shocks devastated the economy in 2008, including a drought that resulted in a harvest a quarter the size of the previous year, prompting emergency imports of food. As a net importer of food and oil products, Eritrea was also hit by a surge in international commodity prices. Inflation reached 33.0% in 2009 but is reported to be on a downward trend. Fiscal consolidation since the end of the border war has helped reduce the fiscal deficit though it remains high at 10% of GDP, with resulting macroeconomic imbalances managed through regulations and price controls.

Currency

The nakfa (ERN) replaced the Ethiopian currency, the birr, in 1997. However, its introduction led to tensions with Ethiopia, adversely affecting cross-border trade. Inflation was 19.9% in 2008, rising to 33.0% in 2009. Total money supply was 8,063m. nakfa in May 2005.

Budget

Revenues in 2008 were 4.46bn. nakfa and expenditures 9.84bn. nakfa.

Performance

Total GDP in 2008 was US$1.7bn. The economy expanded by 8.8% in 2001 following the end of the conflict with neighbouring Ethiopia but 2003, 2006 and 2008 all saw negative growth. There was real GDP growth of 3.9% in 2009 and 2.2% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$2.1bn.

Banking and Finance

The central bank is the National Bank of Eritrea (Acting Governor, Kibreab Woldemariam). All banks and financial institutions are state-run. There is a Commercial Bank of Eritrea with 15 branches, an Eritrean Investment and Development Bank with 13 branches, a Housing and Commercial Bank of Eritrea with seven branches and an Insurance Corporation.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 0.1 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

Installed capacity was an estimated 167,000 kW in 2007. Electricity is provided to only some 20% of the population. Total production was 288m. kWh in 2007.

Minerals

There are deposits of gold, silver, copper, zinc, sulphur, nickel, chrome and potash. Basalt, limestone, marble, sand and silicates are extracted. Oil exploration is taking place in the Red Sea. Salt production totals 200,000 tonnes annually.

Agriculture

Agriculture engaged approximately 77% of the economically active population in 2002. Several systems of land ownership (state, colonial, traditional) co-exist. In 1994 the PFDJ proclaimed the sole right of the state to own land. There were 500,000 ha. of arable land in 2001 and 3,000 ha. of permanent crops. 21,000 ha. were irrigated in 2001. There were 463 tractors in 2001 and 125 harvester-threshers.

Main agricultural products, 2003 (in 1,000 tonnes): sorghum, 64; potatoes, 33; millet, 17; barley, 9; wheat, 5; maize, 4.

Livestock, 2003: sheep, 2.1m.; cattle, 1.9m.; goats, 1.7m.; camels, 75,000; chickens, 1m.

Livestock products, 2003 (in 1,000 tonnes): beef and veal, 14; goat meat, 6; lamb and mutton, 6; poultry meat, 2; milk, 51.

Forestry

In 2005 forests covered 1.55m. ha., or 15.4% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 was 2.53m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2005 was 4,027 tonnes, exclusively from marine waters, but a joint French–Eritrean project to assess fish stocks in the Red Sea has suggested a sustainable yield of up to 70,000 tonnes a year.

INDUSTRY

Light industry was well developed in the colonial period but capability has declined. Processed food, textiles, leatherwear, building materials, glassware and oil products are produced. Industrial production accounted for 19.2% of GDP in 2007, with the manufacturing sector providing 5.5%.

Labour

In 2010 the estimated labour force was 2,230,000 (55% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Eritrea is dependent on foreign aid for most of its capital expenditure. Total external debt in 2005 was US$736m.

Imports and Exports

In 2009 imports (c.i.f.) were valued at US$540m. and exports (f.o.b.) at US$15m. The leading imports are machinery and transport equipment, basic manufactures, and food and live animals. The main exports are drinks, leather and products, textiles and oil products. Principal import suppliers, 2003: USA, 15.9%; UAE, 12.2%; Italy, 11.6%; Saudi Arabia, 10.5%; India, 6.3%. Principal export markets, 2003: Sudan, 19.7%; Italy, 12.1%; Singapore, 12.1%; Netherlands, 10.6%; India, 7.6%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were some 4,010 km of roads in 2000, of which 21.8% were paved. A tarmac road links the capital Asmara with one of the main ports, Massawa. In 2007 there were 6.4 passenger cars per 1,000 inhabitants. About 500 buses operate regular services.

Rail

In 2000 the reconstruction of the 117 km Massawa–Asmara line reached Embatkala, thus opening up an 80 km stretch from Massawa on the coast. In 2003 the line was rebuilt right through to Asmara.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Asmara (Yohannes IV Airport). In 2003 there were scheduled flights to Cairo, Djibouti, Dubai, Frankfurt, Jeddah, Milan, Nairobi and Sana'a. In 2001 Asmara handled 140,000 passengers (129,000 on international flights) and 3,200 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

Massawa is the main port; Assab used to be the main port for imports to Ethiopia. Both were free ports for Ethiopia until the onset of hostilities. In Jan. 2009 there were five ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 12,000 GT.

Telecommunications

International telephone links were restored in 1992. There were 78,200 telephone subscribers in 2005 (17.8 for every 1,000 inhabitants), including 40,400 mobile phone subscribers. Eritrea had 70,000 internet users in 2005 and 35,000 PCs were in use (8.0 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

The legal system derives from a decree of May 1993.

Education

Adult literacy was 65% in 2008. In 2007 there were 331,855 pupils and 6,933 teaching staff in primary schools, and 218,369 pupils at secondary schools with 4,425 teaching staff. There were 10,000 students and 1,000 academic staff in tertiary education in 2009–10. In 2006 public expenditure on education came to 2.4% of GNI.

Health

In 2006 there were 12 hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants. In 2004 there were 215 physicians, 16 dentistry personnel and 2,505 nursing and midwifery personnel.

Eritrea has one of the highest rates of undernourishment of any country. The proportion of the population classified as undernourished was 66% in the period 2004–06, down from 70% in 2000–02.

RELIGION

Half the population are Sunni Muslims (along the coast and in the north), and half Coptic Christians (in the south).

CULTURE*Press

In 2006 there were three government newspapers, one published three times a week and the others once a week. In Sept. 2001 the government closed down the country's eight independent newspapers. In the 2010 World Press Freedom Index, compiled by Reporters Without Borders, Eritrea ranked 178th and last out of 178 countries. A number of journalists have been jailed.

Tourism

There were 82,000 non-resident visitors in 2005; tourist spending totalled US$66m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

There is evidence of human habitation from around 8000 BC. Remnants of a 'comb' pottery culture show the arrival around 5000 BC of the ancestors of the Eestii, one of the first known peoples to inhabit the Baltic's eastern shores and the forerunners of modern Estonians. Before the arrival of Christianity the cult of Tharapita (or Taara), a god of war, was popular in northern Estonia and the island of Saaremaa.

The failed Danish invasion of Saaremaa in 1206 under the bishop of Lund marked the first attempt at the Christianization of Estonia. German invasions began in 1208 with the capture of Otepää in the southeast. The Sword Brothers, a military order that became the Livonian Order, took Livonia (including southern Estonia) in 1217. Valdemar II of Denmark invaded the north in 1219, establishing Tanin Lidna (later Tallinn) at Reval on the Gulf of Finland. Danish forces prevailed in 1227, taking Saaremaa (Ösel). In 1238 Wilhelm of Modena, the papal legate, negotiated the re-establishment of Danish power in the north after its seizure by the Sword Brothers, who shared the rest of the land with the prince-bishops of Ösel-Wiek and Dorpat (Tartu). The eastward expansion of the Sword Brothers was checked in 1242 at Lake Peipus by Alexander Nevsky, prince of Novgorod.

A large immigrant population of Coastal Swedes arrived from the mid-13th century and a German merchant class emerged in the towns. The St George's Night Uprising on 23 April 1343 saw Estonians revolt against Danish rule. The peasant army appealed to Swedish Finland for help but were defeated by the Danish vice-regents, who called on the Livonian Order. In 1346 Denmark's Valdemar IV sold his share of Estonia to the Teutonic Knights who gave control to the Livonian Order.

The Reformation reached Estonia's semi-autonomous cities in the 1520s but met resistance from the Livonian Order. In 1558 Tsar Ivan IV demanded taxes from the bishopric of Dorpat (Tartu) as a pretext to invading the Livonian Confederation and gaining access to the Baltic Sea. The weakened Livonian Order disbanded in 1561 and Estland was given to Sweden while Ösel was sold to Denmark. By 1600 Sweden, repelling the incursions of Muscovy, had strengthened its hold over Estland. Sweden's Gustavus Adolphus attempted to build a Reformist Baltic empire, winning all of Estonia in 1629 and reducing the power of German landowners while defending the country from Polish and Russian attacks. In 1645 the Danes ceded Ösel to the Swedes. Estonian territories were badly affected by the Great Famine of 1695–97, when over 70,000 people (around 20% of the population) died.

Russian ambitions to establish a Baltic base and Danish resentment of Swedish hegemony led to the Great Northern War (1700–21). Swedish forces won a string of victories under Charles XII, routing Peter the Great's army at Narva in 1700. However, Charles' over-ambitious attack on Poland led to a Swedish collapse. Peter seized Ingria (where he built St Petersburg) and ravaged Livonia. The Swedish defeat at Poltava in 1709 led to Estonia passing to Russia by the 1721 Treaty of Nystad.

Estonia remained dominated by German aristocrats after the reversal of Swedish land seizures and the reinforcement of serfdom. Estonian nationalism emerged in the mid-19th century. After nationalist success in the municipal elections of 1904, many Estonians joined the all-Russia workers' strikes of 1905, which were brutally suppressed. In the ensuing anti-landlord violence, about a fifth of German-owned manors were destroyed by ethnic Estonians.

Russia's provisional government amalgamated Estonia and Estonian-speaking northern Livonia in April 1917 and workers' and soldiers' Soviets came to prominence. Germany invaded in early 1918 and took Estonia by the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk but withdrew later that year to be replaced by Russian Bolsheviks. However, they were ejected in May 1919 (with British naval support) and the Estonians proclaimed a democratic republic.

Estonian incursions into Russia won slices of Estonian-speaking territories beyond the River Narva and in Pskov province. In March 1934 this regime was, in turn, overthrown by a fascist coup. The secret protocol of the Soviet-German agreement of Aug. 1939 assigned Estonia to the Soviet sphere of interest. An ultimatum in June 1940 saw the formation of the Estonian Soviet Socialist Republic but a German occupation lasted from June 1941–Sept. 1944. The return to Soviet control saw the loss of 2,200 sq. km of Estonian territory to Pskov Oblast. There followed a Sovietization programme that lasted until the mid-1980s. The Estonian Supreme Soviet declared a sovereign republic in Nov. 1988.

In a 1991 popular referendum 77.8% voted in favour of independence and the USSR recognized the new state on 6 Sept. 1991. Estonia was admitted to the Council of Europe in 1993 and all Russian troops were withdrawn by Aug. 1994, though a sizeable Russian/East Slavic population remains (around a third of the total). Estonia became a member of NATO in March 2004 and the European Union in May 2004.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Estonia is bounded in the west and north by the Baltic Sea, east by Russia and south by Latvia. There are 1,521 offshore islands, of which the largest are Saaremaa and Hiiumaa, but only 12 are permanently inhabited. Area, 45,227 sq. km (17,462 sq. miles). The census population in 2000 was 1,370,052; Jan. 2010 estimate, 1,340,127, giving a density of 29.6 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 1.34m.

In 2005, 69.1% of the population lived in urban areas. Of the whole population, Estonians accounted for 67.9%, Russians 25.6%, Ukrainians 2.1%, Belarusians 1.3% and Finns 0.9%. The capital is Tallinn (population, 397,200 or 29.3%). Other large towns are Tartu (101,200), Narva (67,800), Kohtla-Järve (46,800) and Pärnu (44,800). There are 15 counties, 47 towns and 202 rural municipalities.

The official language is Estonian.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009 registered births, 15,763; deaths, 16,081. Rates (per 1,000 population): birth, 11.8; death, 12.0. There were 9,394 reported abortions in 2006. Expectation of life in 2007 was 67.3 years for males and 78.3 for females. The annual population growth rate in the period 2000–05 was –0.3%. The suicide rate was 18.1 per 100,000 population in 2008 (rate among males, 30.6). The rate has more than halved in 13 years, having been 40.1 per 100,000 in 1995. Infant mortality in 2005 was six per 1,000 births. In 2008 total fertility rate was 1.7 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Because of its maritime location Estonia has a moderate climate, with cool summers and mild winters. Average daily temperatures in 2008: Jan. –1.5°C; July 17.0°C. Rainfall is heavy, 600–800 mm per year, and evaporation low.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A draft constitution drawn up by a constitutional assembly was approved by 91.1% of votes cast at a referendum on 28 June 1992. Turnout was 66.6%. The constitution came into effect on 3 July 1992. It defines Estonia as a 'democratic state guided by the rule of law, where universally recognized norms of international law are an inseparable part of the legal system.' It provides for a 101-member national assembly (Riigikogu) elected for four-year terms. There are 12 electoral districts with eight to 12 mandates each. Candidates may be elected: a) by gaining more than 'quota', i.e. the number of votes cast in a district divided by the number of its mandates; b) by standing for a party which attracts for all of its candidates more than the quota, in order of listing; c) by being listed nationally for parties which clear a 5% threshold and eligible for the seats remaining according to position on the lists. The head of state is the President, elected by the Riigikogu for five-year terms. Presidential candidates must gain the nominations of at least 20% of parliamentary deputies. If no candidate wins a two-thirds majority in any of three rounds, the Speaker convenes an electoral college, composed of parliamentary deputies and local councillors. At this stage any 21 electors may nominate an additional candidate. The electoral college elects the President by a simple majority.

Citizenship requirements are two years residence and competence in Estonian for existing residents. For residents immigrating after 1 April 1995, five years qualifying residence is required.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 6 March 2011; turnout was 63.5%. The Estonian Reform Party (Reform) won 33 of 101 seats (with 28.6% of the total votes); Estonian Centre Party (Kesk), 26 seats (23.3%); Union of Pro Patria and Res Publica (IRPL), 23 seats (20.5%); Social Democratic Party (SDE), 19 seats (17.1%). Six other parties failed to win seats.

On 29 Aug. 2011 Toomas Ilves was re-elected as president, winning 73 votes to Indrek Tarand's 25 in the 101-seat parliament.

European Parliament

Estonia has six representatives. At the June 2009 elections turnout was 43.9% (26.8% in 2004). Kesk won 2 seats with 26.1% of the vote (political affiliation in European Parliament: Alliance of Liberals and Democrats for Europe); Reform, 1 with 15.3% (Alliance of Liberals and Democrats for Europe); IRPL, 1 with 12.2% (European People's Party); SDE, 1 with 8.7% (Progressive Alliance of Socialists and Democrats). One independent was elected, with 25.8% (Greens/European Free Alliance).

CURRENT LEADERS

Toomas Hendrik Ilves

Position

President

Introduction

Toomas Ilves began his five-year largely ceremonial term as president on 9 Oct. 2006, replacing Arnold Rüütel, and was re-elected in Aug. 2011.

Early Life

Toomas Hendrik Ilves was born on 26 Dec. 1953 in Sweden, his parents having fled Estonia during the Soviet occupation in the 1940s. Ilves studied psychology in the USA, first at Columbia University before completing his MA at Pennsylvania University. He then lectured in Vancouver on Estonian literature and linguistics before working as an analyst and researcher for Radio Free Europe.

He returned to Estonia in 1993, two years after the country regained independence. In the late 1990s he served as ambassador to the USA, Canada and Mexico. He also had two spells as minister for foreign affairs and was chairman of the North American Institute. From 2004–06 he was a member of the European parliament, representing the Social Democratic Party.

Career in Office

Ilves' principal duty as president is to represent the country abroad. In Nov. 2006 George W. Bush became the first US president to visit Estonia. Ilves has justified the participation of Estonian forces in Afghanistan as a necessary duty of NATO membership, and an increase in the Estonian deployment was approved by parliament in June 2009.

Ilves has sought greater integration of Estonia's large Russian-speaking minority. Relations between Estonia and Russia were tense during the early months of his tenure, particularly over the relocation by the Estonian government of a prominent Soviet war memorial out of the centre of Tallinn. Ilves was re-elected for a second presidential term by parliament in Aug. 2011.

Andrus Ansip

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

When Andrus Ansip was sworn in as prime minister of Estonia on 13 April 2005, he took charge of the country's 12th government since its independence in 1991. A right-leaning former investment banker who was mayor of the second largest city, Tartu, for six years, Ansip pledged to implement policies that would attract investment and strengthen Estonia's position as a dynamic, post-industrial economy. His coalition government retained power in parliamentary elections in March 2007 and March 2011.

Early Life

Ansip was born in Tartu in the Soviet Republic of Estonia (ESSR) on 1 Oct. 1956. He attended local schools and graduated from the University of Tartu with a diploma in chemistry in 1979. He remained at the historic university to undertake further academic study, and later joined the municipal Committee of the Estonian Communist Party (ECP), which had been led, since 1978, by Karl Vaino, a Russian-born Estonian. The ESSR experienced increased Russification and 'Sovietization' in the early 1980s, in accordance with the policy of the Soviet leader, Leonid Brezhnev. By 1988 however, there was growing opposition to the communist leadership and, against a backdrop of gradual economic liberalization, Ansip joined Estkompexim, a 'joint-venture' specializing in the import and export of foodstuffs. He was head of Estkompexim's Tartu office during 1991, when, following the collapse of the USSR, Estonia was internationally recognized as an independent nation. The following year Ansip attended a business management course at the University of York in Toronto, Canada.

On his return to Estonia in 1993, Ansip entered the rapidly evolving banking and investment sector, serving as a member of the board of directors of Rahvapank (the People's Bank) until 1995 and then chairman of the board of Livonia Privatization. In 1997 he was chief executive officer of the investment fund, Fondiinvesteeringu Maakler AS, as well as chairman of the board of Radio Tartu. The following year he was elected Mayor of Tartu as a candidate of the centre-right Estonian Reform Party (Reform), established in 1994 by Siim Kallas, a former governor of Estonia's central bank. A popular mayor, Ansip was credited with attracting investment to the country's second city and overseeing developments such as the Baltic Defence College and a new biomedical research institute which capitalized on Tartu's long-standing reputation as an academic centre.

On 13 Sept. 2004, shortly after Estonia joined the EU and NATO, Ansip was nominated to replace Meelis Atonen as the minister of economic affairs and communications. Two months later, he became chairman of Reform, which had formed part of the Res Publica-led coalition government under Juhan Parts since March 2003. His appointment followed the departure of Reform's leader (and former prime minister), Siim Kallas, to Brussels to become an EU commissioner. When, in March 2005, the Riigikogu (parliament) passed a vote of no confidence in the country's justice minister over proposed anti-corruption measures, Parts resigned as prime minister. On 31 March 2005 the president, Arnold Rüütel, asked Ansip to form a new government. He succeeded in forging a coalition with the Estonian Centre Party (Kesk) and the Estonian Peoples' Union (Rahvaliid). Ansip was backed by 53 out of 101 members of the Riigikogu, and was inaugurated as prime minister on 13 April 2005.

Career in Office

Ansip confirmed Estonia's aspiration to adopt the single European currency. However, he acknowledged that it would be tough to fulfil the criterion of holding inflation to no more than 1.5 percentage points above that of the three lowest-inflation EU countries, given that Estonia's economy was growing at that time at around 7% a year and its exports had risen by 20% in its first 12 months in the EU. He pledged to maintain the previous government's tax-cutting agenda, as well as increasing social welfare measures to bridge the gap between the relatively wealthy, young urban population and poorer rural citizens whose skills date from the Soviet period. He retained the premiership following legislative elections in March 2007, forming a new Reform coalition with Union of Pro Patria and Res Publica (IRPL) and the Social Democratic Party.

Despite a sharp economic contraction in the wake of the global financial crisis that unfolded in the latter half of 2008, Estonia fared better than its Baltic neighbours in the ensuing downturn. The government acted quickly to implement spending cuts and adjustments to stem the rise in the budget deficit, while earlier prudent management of the public finances provided a buffer of fiscal reserves, with no requirement for support from the International Monetary Fund. Estonia became the 17th country to adopt the euro in Jan. 2011.

In May 2009 the government lost its parliamentary majority as Ansip dismissed the three Social Democratic ministers from the coalition cabinet in a dispute over economic policy, replacing them in June with IRPL members and continuing on a minority basis.

In foreign affairs, Ansip's government formally signed a border treaty agreement with Russia in May 2005. However, Russia subsequently withdrew from the agreement because Estonia had attached an unacceptable preamble to the text referring to the Soviet occupation. Relations with Russia soured further in early 2007 when the Estonian parliament passed legislation banning monuments glorifying Soviet rule and the government approved the removal of a Soviet war memorial in Tallinn.

Ansip secured another term in office when Reform won the March 2011 parliamentary election.

DEFENCE

The President is the head of national defence. Conscription is eight to 11 months for men and voluntary for women. Conscientious objectors may opt for 16 months civilian service instead.

Defence expenditure in 2008 totalled US$450m. (US$344 per capita), representing 1.9% of GDP.

The Estonian Defence Forces (EDF) regular component is divided into the Army, the Air Force and the Navy.

Army

The Army consists of seven battalions (three infantry, one reconnaissance, one artillery, one guard and one peacekeeping). The total number of personnel in the Army in 2007 was 3,600 (1,200 conscripts). There is a Border Guard numbering 2,600.

Navy

The Navy consists of the Naval Staff (Naval HQ), the Naval Base, and the Mine Countermeasures (MCM) Squadron. The total number of personnel in the Navy in 2007 was 300 including a platoon-sized conscript unit. Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania have established a joint naval unit 'BALTRON' (Baltic Naval Squadron), with bases at Tallinn in Estonia, Liepāja, Riga and Ventspils in Latvia, and Klaipėda in Lithuania.

Air Force

The Air Force consists of an Air Force Staff, Air Force Base and Air Surveillance Wing. The total number of personnel in the Air Force in 2007 was 200.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Estonia became a member of NATO on 29 March 2004 and of the EU on 1 May 2004. Estonia held a referendum on EU membership on 14 Sept. 2003, in which 66.9% of votes cast were in favour of accession, with 33.1% against.

ECONOMY

Agriculture contributed 3% of GDP in 2007, industry 30% and services 67%.

Overview

Estonia is a gateway for trade with the Nordic countries, especially Finland, the destination for 18.3% of Estonian exports in 2008. When Estonia gained independence in 1991 it was among the most competitive of the former Soviet Union countries, boasting the highest per capita income, strong infrastructure and high education levels compared to its neighbours.

The cornerstones of economic reform were the introduction of a new currency, tight budgetary control, privatization programmes and trade liberalization. Since independence, Estonia has been among the fastest growing of the EU accession countries (having joined in 2004). Performance has been driven in large part by low unemployment, strong domestic demand and buoyant exports, with GDP growth averaging 8% per year from 2003–07. Unemployment dropped from 11.0% in 2003 to 4.7% in 2007.

However, the economy began to slow in 2007 and fell into recession as the global financial crisis hit. Growth contracted by 13.9% in 2009. Despite this sharp contraction, the government persevered with efforts to join the euro area, requiring a fiscal adjustment of nearly 9% of GDP in 2009. The economy rebounded strongly in 2010, with growth resuming in the second quarter as a result of rising exports and rapid increases in manufacturing activity. Estonia joined the euro on 1 Jan. 2011 and continued its impressive recovery. Unemployment fell from 19.8% in the first quarter of 2010 to 14.4% in the first quarter of 2011, while government debt at 6.6% of GDP is the lowest in the EU.

Currency

On 1 Jan. 2011 the euro (EUR) replaced the kroon (EEK) as the legal currency of Estonia at the irrevocable conversion rate of 15.6466 krooni to one euro. Foreign exchange reserves were US$1,768m. in July 2005, gold reserves 8,000 troy oz and total money supply was 42,396m. krooni. Inflation was 10.4% in 2008 but there was deflation of 0.1% in 2009.

Budget

Budgetary central government revenue and expenditure in 1m. krooni for calendar years:

	2007	2008	2009
Revenue	69,206	67,853	69,577
Expenditure	58,479	68,793	67,481

Tax revenue provided 37,776m. krooni in 2009; social benefits (25,591m. krooni) were the main item of expenditure. There is a flat tax rate of 21%.

Estonia registered a budget surplus in 2010 of 0.2% of GDP. It had a deficit of 2.0% in 2009 and 2.9% in 2008. The required target set by the EU is a budget deficit of no more than 3%.

Performance

Estonia suffered particularly badly in the global downturn with the economy shrinking by 5.1% in 2008 and 13.9% in 2009 but there was growth of 3.1% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$18.7bn.

Banking and Finance

A central bank, the Bank of Estonia, was re-established in 1990 (Governor, Andres Lipstok). The Estonian Investment Bank was established in 1992 to provide financing for privatized and private companies. As of 30 June 2011 there were seven licensed credit institutions and 11 affiliated branches of foreign credit institutions in Estonia. The four largest institutions control 89% of the market. Total assets of Estonian credit institutions as of 30 June 2011 were €19,105m. The Estonian Banking Association was founded in 1992. It has 12 member banks that represent approximately 98% of the Estonian banking sector's assets.

In 2010 Estonia received US$1.5bn. worth of foreign direct investment.

A stock exchange opened in Tallinn in 1996.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

In 2008, 19.1% of energy consumption came from renewables (wind power, solar power, hydro-electric power, tidal power, geothermal energy and biomass), compared to the European Union average of 10.3%. A target of 25% has been set by the EU for 2020.

Environment

Estonia's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 15.8 tonnes per capita. Estonia's greenhouse gas emissions fell by 50.4% between 1990 and 2008, mainly owing to the decline of polluting industries from the Soviet era.

Electricity

Estonia is a net electricity exporter. In 2005 installed capacity was 2.7m. kW, with production of 9.1bn. kWh. Consumption per capita was 6,733 kWh in 2005. 91% of electricity was produced by burning oil shale. Production of hydro and wind energy accounted for about 0.7% of total electricity production. About 20% of net production was exported, mainly to Latvia.

Oil and Gas

Oil shale deposits were estimated at 4,898m. tonnes in 2006. A factory for the production of gas from shale and a 208 km-pipeline from Kohtla-Järve supplies shale gas to Tallinn, and exports to St Petersburg. Natural gas is imported from Russia.

Minerals

Oil shale is the most valuable mineral resource. Production volume has decreased (from 21m. tonnes in 1990 to 12m. tonnes in 2006) because of falls in exports and domestic electricity consumption, and an increase in the use of natural gas. Peatlands occupy about 22% of Estonia's territory; there are extensive deposits, totalling an estimated 1.64bn. tonnes in 2004. Phosphorites and super-phosphates are found and refined, and lignite (16.54m. tonnes in 2007), limestone, dolomite, clay, sand and gravel are mined.

Agriculture

Farming employed 6.1% of the population in 2003. In 2005 there were 27,747 holdings (55,748 in 2001). In 2007 there were 598,000 ha. of arable land and 9,000 ha. of permanent crops. Total agricultural output in 2003 was valued at 7,044m. krooni, including: animal production 3,388m. krooni; crop production,

2,616m. krooni; agricultural services and other non-agricultural production, 1,040m. krooni.

Output of main agricultural products (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2003: barley, 254; potatoes, 244; wheat, 145; rapeseed, 64; oats, 63; rye, 23.

In 2003 there were 340,800 pigs, 253,900 cattle, 29,900 sheep and 2,096,000 chickens.

Livestock products (in 1,000 tonnes), 2003: meat, 105; milk, 61; eggs, 15.

Forestry

In 2005, 2-28m. ha. were covered by forests (53-9% of the total land area), which provide material for sawmills, furniture, and the match and pulp industries, as well as wood fuel. Private, municipal and state ownership of forests is allowed. In 2007 the annual timber cut was 5-90m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

In Jan. 2006 the Estonian fishing fleet numbered 1,411 vessels (1,395 active) of 28,428 gross tonnes. The total catch in 2005 was 98,772 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Important industries are engineering, metalworking, food products, wood products, furniture and textiles. In 2005 manufacturing accounted for 18-5% of GDP.

Labour

The workforce in 2010 totalled 686,800, of whom 570,900 were employed. The average monthly gross wage in the fourth quarter of 2011 was €865. The unemployment rate in Sept. 2011 was 11-3% (down from 16-8% in 2010 as a whole).

Retirement age was 63 years for men and 61 years for women in 2010 although the female retirement age is to increase gradually to 63 by 2016.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$11,255m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Imports (c.i.f.) in 2007 (and 2006) were valued at US$15,458-8m. (US$13,285-1m.); exports (f.o.b.), US$11,009-7m. (US$9,607-5m.).

Principal imports are road vehicles, petroleum and petroleum products, and electrical machinery and equipment; principal exports are petroleum and petroleum products, road vehicles, and electrical machinery and equipment.

Main import suppliers in 2007: Finland, 15-9%; Germany, 12-8%; Russia, 10-2%; Sweden, 10-1%; Latvia, 7-6%. Main export markets, 2007: Finland, 18-0%; Sweden, 13-3%; Latvia, 11-4%; Russia, 8-9%; Lithuania, 5-8%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

As of 1 Jan. 2009 there were 16,487 km of national roads (28-4% of the total Estonian road network of 58,034 km). In Dec. 2010 there were 552,684 registered passenger cars in use, plus 81,204 lorries, 4,167 buses and 19,671 motorcycles. There were 1,340 road accidents and 78 fatalities in 2010.

Rail

Length of railways in 2009 was 919 km (1,520 mm gauge), of which 131 km was electrified. In 2009, 4-9m. passengers and 45-9m. tonnes of freight were carried.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Tallinn (Lennart Meri International Airport), which handled 1-3m. passengers (98% on international flights) and 21,000 tonnes of freight in 2009. The national carrier is Estonian Air, 90% state-owned. In 2010 Estonian Air operated services to Amsterdam, Athens, Berlin, Brussels, Copenhagen, Dublin, Hamburg, Kyiv, London, Milan, Minsk, Moscow, Nice, Oslo, Paris, Rome, St Petersburg, Stockholm and Vilnius as well as domestic flights. In 2007 Estonian-based airlines carried 1,141,600 passengers (1,120,900 on international flights).

Shipping

There were 11 commercial ports and five ports offering international passenger services in 2009. Tallinn handled 31-6m. tonnes of cargo traffic in 2009 (82% of total transport of freight through Estonian ports). The port of Tallinn makes most of its money by shipping out Russian oil and importing goods destined for Russia. In 2009, 7-26m. passengers travelled through the port of Tallinn (more than 80% on the Tallinn-Helsinki route). In Jan. 2009 the Estonian-controlled fleet comprised 108 vessels of 1,000 GT or over, of which 87 were under foreign flags.

Telecommunications

Estonia had 1,887,300 telephone subscribers in 2005 (1,420-1 per 1,000 persons), with 1,445,300 mobile phone subscribers. There were 650,000 PCs (489-1 per 1,000 persons) in use in 2005 and 690,000 internet users. In Feb. 2000 the Estonian parliament voted to guarantee internet access to its citizens.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

A post-Soviet criminal code was introduced in 1992. There is a three-tier court system with the State Court at its apex, and there are both city and district courts. The latter act as courts of appeal. The State Court is the final court of appeal, and also functions as a constitutional court. There are also administrative courts for petty offences. Judges are appointed for life. City and district judges are appointed by the President; State Court judges are elected by Parliament.

In 2008, 50,977 crimes were recorded; there were 12 murders and four attempted murders. In Jan. 2008, 3,467 persons were in penal institutions (259 per 100,000 of national population).

The death penalty was abolished for all crimes in 1998.

Education

Adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 99-8% (99-8% for both males and females). There are nine years of comprehensive school starting at age six, followed by three years secondary school. In 2010-11 there were 545 general education schools: 68 primary, 253 basic and 224 secondary/upper secondary. Of these, 454 were Estonian-language, 31 non Estonian-language and 60 mixed-language. There were 43 schools for children with special needs. The total number of pupils at basic school level in general education was 112,600 in 2010-11, with 33,300 in secondary education. At the start of the 2010-11 academic year there were 69,100 higher education students studying at six public universities, three private universities, ten state higher schools and 12 private higher schools; two vocational educational institutions also provide higher education.

In 2006 central government expenditure on education came to 4,510-5m. krooni. In 2008 public expenditure on education came to 5-7% of GDP.

Health

Estonia had 60 hospitals (22 private) in 2008, down from 78 hospitals (28 private) in 1999. There were 7,662 hospital beds in 2008. In Dec. 2008 there were 4,444 doctors, 1,156 dentists, 937 pharmacists and 10,338 nurses.

Welfare

In 2005 there were 0-38m. pensioners. The average monthly pension was 2,315 krooni in 2005. An official poverty line was introduced in 1993 (then 280 krooni per month). Persons receiving less than the subsistence level (750 krooni per month in 2005) are entitled to state benefit. Unemployment benefit was 400 krooni a month in 2005.

RELIGION

There is freedom of religion in Estonia and no state church, although most of the population is Lutheran. The Estonian Orthodox Church owed allegiance to Constantinople until it was forcibly brought under Moscow's control in 1940; a synod of the free Estonian Orthodox Church was established in Stockholm. Returning from exile, it registered itself in 1993 as the Estonian Apostolic Orthodox Church. By an agreement in 1996 between the Moscow and Constantinople Orthodox Patriarchates, there are now two Orthodox jurisdictions in Estonia. In 2000 there were 152,000 Lutherans and 144,000 Orthodox. Other Christian denominations, including Methodist, Baptist and Roman Catholic, are also represented.

CULTURE*World Heritage Sites

Estonia has two sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the Historic Centre (Old Town) of Tallinn (1997 and 2008) and the Struve Geodetic Arc (2005). The Arc is a chain of survey triangulations spanning from Norway to the Black Sea that helped establish the exact shape and size of the earth and is shared with nine other countries.

Press

In 2006 there were 13 daily newspapers (combined circulation of 334,000) and 29 non-dailies (250,000). The Baltic Times is an English-language weekly covering news from Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

Tourism

There were 1.9m. non-resident tourists in 2005 who spent US$1,207m.

Festivals

Festivals include: International Folklore Festival, BALTICA, which is staged every three years; Festival of Baroque Music; Jazz festival, JAZZKAAR; Pärnu International Documentary and Anthropology Film Festival and the Viljandi Folk Music Festival. Estonia's Song Festival, which was first held in 1869, is held every five years and is next scheduled to take place in 2014.

Baltoscandal, an international theatre festival which takes place every two years, celebrated its 11th staging in July 2010.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

From as early as 3000 BC Egyptian Pharaohs referred to northern Ethiopia as the Land of Punt, rich in precious resources including gold, myrrh and ivory. Its inhabitants are thought to have been predominantly Cushitic speakers. The region was in contact with southern Arabia by around 2000 BC, with settlers bringing Semitic languages and stone-building techniques. Early in the 1st century AD a prosperous and advanced civilization arose in the northern highlands, centred on Aksum. Christianity reached Aksum in the 4th century AD when King Ezana was converted by Frumentius of Tyre. At its height in the 6th century AD the Aksumite empire controlled much of the Red Sea coast and traded with the Mediterranean powers, as well as Persia and India.

Between the 8th–10th centuries the declining Aksumite realm shifted southwards, while northern Ethiopia increasingly came under Arabian influence. Christianity held sway in the highlands and was central to the culture of the post-Aksumite Zagwe kingdom, founded in 1137. The first of the rock-hewn churches at Lalibela were constructed at this time. The Zagwe were ousted around 1270 by Yekuno Amlak, an Amharic warrior who restored the Solomonic dynasty which claimed descent from Aksum, King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba. The kingdom expanded to the south, particularly under Zara Jakob (ruled 1434–68).

Portuguese mariners reached the Red Sea in the early 1500s and a diplomatic mission arrived in Ethiopia in 1508. Faced with raids from neighbouring Islamic states, Emperor Lebna Dengel sought an alliance with the Portuguese who, in 1543, assisted in defeating Ahmad ibn Ibrahim al Ghazi, the conqueror of much of southern and eastern Ethiopia. The Solomonic monarchy was reinstated in 1632 by Emperor Fasidas, who established a new capital at Gondar. The coastal provinces came largely under Ottoman rule. By 1700 Gondar was a leading centre of education and the arts.

Tigray and Amhara experienced sporadic civil wars until the emergence of Lij Kasa in the 19th century. Crowned Emperor Tewodros II in 1855, he set about unifying the country although his efforts to end the slave trade led to tensions with local rulers. Following disagreements with Britain, Tewodros arrested several British officials including the consul. Britain responded by sending 12,000 troops to Ethiopia under Robert Napier. When Napier overwhelmed the fortress at Magdala, Tewodros committed suicide, igniting civil war.

The opening of the Suez Canal in 1869 intensified the regional scramble for influence among the European powers. At the same time Ethiopia faced armed incursions from Egypt and the Madhists in Sudan. Menelik II, ruler of Shoa in central Ethiopia, increased his power base with Italian support and seized control of Ethiopia in 1889. He renounced Italian claims to Ethiopia and defeated the Italian army at Adwa in 1896 before founding a new capital at Addis Ababa. Menelik II centralized authority and developed the country's infrastructure. He was succeeded in 1913 by his grandson, Lij Iyasu, who was deposed three years later in favour of Empress Zawaditu, with Ras Tafari Makonnen as regent and heir apparent. Following Empress Zawaditu's death in 1930 Ras Tafari became emperor as Haile Selassie I, claiming direct descent from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba.

Although Ethiopia was recognized as independent in 1923, the League of Nations was unable to prevent Benito Mussolini from launching a second Italian invasion from Eritrea on 3 Oct. 1935. When Addis Ababa was captured in May 1936 Haile Selassie fled to Britain, only returning when Allied forces defeated the Italians in 1941. He brought in social and political reforms and established a national assembly. In 1950 Eritrea, an Italian colony under British military administration since 1941, was handed over to Ethiopia. A secessionist movement, the Eritrean Peoples' Liberation Front (EPLF), began a guerrilla war for independence. Following famine and economic decline, a military government (the Dergue) assumed power on 12 Sept. 1974 under Lieut. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam. It deposed Haile Selassie (who was murdered in prison in 1975), abolished the monarchy and mounted an agricultural collectivization programme.

In 1977 Somalia invaded Ethiopia and took control of the Ogaden region. After a counter offensive, with Soviet and Cuban support, the area was recaptured. Droughts in the late 1970s and early 1980s led to a devastating famine, which received international attention in 1984 when the death toll had already reached 200,000. War-torn Tigray and Eritrea were again at conflict in 1989. In 1991 the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front (EPRDF), led by Meles Zenawi, defeated the Ethiopian army, forcing Mengistu to flee to Zimbabwe. In July 1991 a conference of 24 political groups, called to appoint a transitional government, agreed a democratic charter. Eritrea seceded and became independent on 24 May 1993.

In 1994 a new constitution established a bicameral legislature and a judicial system. Meles Zenawi was elected prime minister in May 1995 with Negasso Gidada as president. The ongoing conflict with Eritrea flared up in 1999 and many thousands were killed before a peace deal was brokered in June 2000. Economic progress, including market-led reforms, raised hopes of higher living standards until three successive years of drought left food resources seriously depleted. Widespread malnutrition was alleviated by international aid. Zenawi's EPRDF won contested elections in May 2005, paving the way for his third five-year stint as prime minister.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Ethiopia is bounded in the northeast by Eritrea, east by Djibouti and Somalia, south by Kenya and west by South Sudan and Sudan. It has a total area of 1,127,127 sq. km. The secession of Eritrea in 1993 left Ethiopia without a coastline. An Eritrean–Ethiopian agreement of July 1993 gives Ethiopia rights to use the Eritrean ports of Assab and Massawa.

The first census was carried out in 1984: population, 42,616,876 (including Eritrea). 2007 census population: 73,750,932 (36,533,802 females); density, 65.4 per sq. km. The United Nations population estimate for 2007 was 77.72m. Ethiopia is Africa's second most populous country, after Nigeria. In 2007, 83.9% of the population lived in rural areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 92.00m.

Ethiopia has eleven administrative divisions—eight states (Afar, Amhara, Benshangul/Gumuz, Gambella, Oromia, the Peoples of the South, Somalia and Tigre) and three cities (Addis Ababa, Dire Dawa and Harar).

The population of the capital, Addis Ababa, was 2,739,551 in 2007. Other large towns (2007 populations): Dire Dawa, 233,224; Nazret, 220,212; Mekele, 215,914; Gonder, 207,044.

There are seven major ethnic groups (in % of total population in 2007): Oromo, 35%; Amhara, 27%; Somali, 6%; Tigrinya, 6%; Sidamo, 4%; Gurage, 3%; Welaita, 2%. The de facto official language is Amharic (which uses its own alphabet). Oromo is also widely spoken. In total there are around 80 local languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008 estimate, 3,086,000; deaths, 954,000. Rates per 1,000 population, 2008 estimates: births, 38.2; deaths, 11.8. Expectation of life at birth in 2007 was 53.3 years for males and 56.2 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.6%; infant mortality, 2005, 109 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 5.3 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The wide range of latitude produces many climatic variations between the high, temperate plateaus and the hot, humid lowlands. The main rainy season lasts from June to Aug., with light rains from Feb. to April, but the country is very vulnerable to drought. Addis Ababa, Jan. 59°F (15°C), July 59°F (15°C). Annual rainfall 50" (1,237 mm). Harar, Jan. 65°F (18.3°C), July 64°F (17.8°C). Annual rainfall 35" (897 mm). Massawa, Jan. 78°F (25.6°C), July 94°F (34.4°C). Annual rainfall 8" (193 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A 548-member constituent assembly was elected on 5 June 1994; turnout was 55%. The EPRDF gained 484 seats. On 8 Dec. 1994 it unanimously adopted a new federal constitution which became effective on 22 Aug. 1995. It provided for the creation of a federation of nine regions based (except the capital and the southern region) on a predominant ethnic group. These regions have the right of secession after a referendum. The President, a largely ceremonial post, is elected for a six-year term by both chambers of parliament (renewable once only). The lower house is the 547-member House of People's Representatives; the upper house the 135-member House of the Federation.

National Anthem

'Yazegenat keber ba-Ityp yachchen santo' ('In our Ethiopia our civic pride is strong'); words by D. M. Mengesha, tune by S. Lulu Mitiku.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 23 May 2010. Although the violence of the 2005 elections was not repeated, the results were disputed by the opposition parties and the poll failed to meet international standards. The Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front (EPRDF) won 499 seats. The EPRDF's allies took 46 seats: the Somali People's Democratic Party 24, the Benishengul Gumuz People's Democratic Party 9, the Afar National Democratic Party 8, the Gambella People's Unity Democratic Movement 3, the Harrari National League 1 and the Argoba Nationality Democratic Movement 1. The opposition Ethiopian Federal Democratic Unity Forum took one seat and there was one independent. Turnout was 93.4%.

Girma Wolde-Giyorgis was re-elected president on 9 Oct. 2007. He received 430 votes with 88 against and 11 abstentions in the Council of People's Representatives, having already won the required two-thirds majority in the Federal Council.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

CURRENT LEADERS

Meles Zenawi

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Meles Zenawi headed Ethiopia's transitional government from 1991–95. He was then appointed prime minister, the most important executive position in the country. He has had to cope with one of the world's weakest economies threatened by famine. His tenure has witnessed a border war with Eritrea, which officially ended in 2000 but remains a source of contention. Relations with Sudan have improved under Meles' guidance, but he remains troubled by separatist fighters in western Ethiopia. In late 2006 he launched a military offensive by Ethiopian forces to oust hostile Islamist militias that had taken control of much of neighbouring Somalia. Continuing insecurity prevented an early military withdrawal until late 2008 when, amid rising casualties and financial costs, Meles' government announced its decision to leave Somalia.

Early Life

Meles Zenawi Asres was born in Adwa, in Ethiopia's Tigre region in 1955. He attended school in Adwa and Addis Ababa. In 1972 he began studying medicine at Addis Ababa University but left two years later to join the Tigre People's Liberation Front (TPLF) to fight against the Dergue military government of Lieut. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam. He served on the organization's central committee between 1979 and 1983 and sat on the executive council from 1983 until 1989. In 1989 he was elected chairman of the TPLF and of the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front (EPRDF), an alliance formed that year between the TPLF and the Ethiopian People's Democratic Movement.

Career in Office

Alongside his role as EPRDF chair, Meles was president of Ethiopia's transitional government, established after the overthrow of the Mengistu regime, from 1991 until 1995. During this period he oversaw the secession of Eritrea and the drafting of a new constitution which divided Ethiopia into ethnic regions. In 1995 the EPRDF-dominated elections were boycotted by the major opposition groups. In Aug. 1995 Meles was elected prime minister of the newly established Federal Democratic Republic of Ethiopia, while Negasso Gidada took the largely ceremonial role of president. Meles was also voted chairman of the Organization of African Unity (now the African Union) for 1995–96.

In 2000 the EPRDF again dominated parliamentary elections and Meles was confirmed as prime minister. Despite the liberalization of the media and a move away from the human rights abuses of the Mengistu years, there remained opposition to Meles' government, and in 2001 there were mass protests in the capital against police brutality and political and academic oppression. In May 2005 Meles won a third term of office in further elections that were bitterly contested. Following allegations of fraud, there were violent protests and elections were rerun in some constituencies in Aug. In Sept. the Election Board confirmed the final results giving the EPRDF and its affiliates a solid parliamentary majority. Meanwhile, however, opposition parties and demonstrators continued to contest the outcome, clashing in June with security forces in Addis Ababa where 36 people were killed. In Nov. at least 46 more protesters died during renewed violence. In May 2006 anti-Meles political parties and armed groups formed an opposition Alliance for Freedom and Democracy at a meeting in the Netherlands. In July 2007 Meles pardoned 38 opposition figures who had earlier been sentenced to life imprisonment on charges relating to the protests that followed the 2005 elections. In Jan. 2009 legislation was passed banning foreign agencies from work related to human rights or conflict resolution in Ethiopia in an apparent move to deter outside interference. The EPRDF won a further landslide victory in parliamentary elections in May 2010, handing Meles a fourth term as premier, but the poll was criticized by international observers and the results were again contested by the opposition.

On the economic front, Meles—formerly an advocate of Marxist-Leninism—has adopted free market reforms that have generated considerable growth, although the country remains among the world's poorest. In 2002 an Economic Commission for Africa report highlighted excessive bureaucracy and the HIV/AIDS pandemic as major obstacles to sustained development.

In 1999 border fighting between Ethiopian and Eritrean forces escalated into a full-scale war, which cost 70,000 lives. A ceasefire was agreed in June 2000, with Ethiopia withdrawing its forces under UN supervision. A formal peace treaty was signed in Dec. 2000. Tensions remained, particularly concerning the control of the small border settlement of Badame. In May 2001 the countries agreed to abide by the decision of an international boundary commission. The commission awarded Badame to Eritrea, but Meles refused to accept the decision. Fears of a renewed conflict mounted in late 2005, after Eritrea expelled UN observers policing the militarized border region, and again in the autumn of 2006 as Eritrea moved troops into the buffer zone on the Ethiopian border in violation of the ceasefire. In Nov. 2007 Eritrea accepted a border demarcation proposal by an independent boundary commission but Ethiopia rejected it. In Jan. 2008 the UN Security Council extended the mandate of its peacekeeping mission on the border for a further six months (despite Eritrean opposition), but brought it to a close at the end of July. Relations deteriorated again in March–April 2011 as the Ethiopian government accused Eritrea of terrorist infiltration and then declared that it would support rebel forces aiming to overthrow Eritrea's President Afewerki.

Tensions with neighbouring Somalia took a new turn in Dec. 2006. Ethiopian troops launched an offensive in support of the weak, but internationally-recognized, transitional Somali administration (established in 2004) against Islamist militias that had seized control of the capital, Mogadishu, and much of the south of the country from clan warlords earlier in the year. Meles was determined not to allow an enemy Islamic state on Ethiopia's borders. The Islamist forces were initially defeated and dispersed by Jan. 2007, and nominal authority was restored to the transitional government. However, insecurity continued and in Nov. 2008, embroiled in a stalemate situation, the Ethiopian government announced that its troops would leave Somalia at the end of the year, raising the spectre of a renewed takeover of the country by Islamist groups. The troop withdrawal was completed in Jan. 2009, although the government disclosed in the middle of the year that it was maintaining reconnaissance operations in Somalia.

In 2011 Ethiopia was again threatened by mass hunger as the worst drought in several decades led the United Nations to declare a famine across the Horn of Africa and to appeal in July for emergency aid.

DEFENCE

In 2006 defence expenditure totalled US$366m. (US$4 per capita), representing 1.2% of GDP.

Army

Following the overthrow of President Mengistu's government Ethiopian armed forces were constituted from former members of the Tigray People's Liberation Front. The strength of the Army was 135,000 in 2007.

Air Force

Owing to its role in the war with Eritrea aircraft operability has improved. There were 48 combat capable aircraft in 2007, including MiG-21s and MiG-23s, and 25 attack helicopters. Personnel numbered 3,000 in 2007.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

A border dispute between Ethiopia and Eritrea broke out in May 1998. Eritrean troops took over the border town of Badame after a skirmish between Ethiopian police units and armed men from Eritrea. Ethiopia maintained that Badame and Sheraro, a nearby town, had always been part of Ethiopia and called Eritrea's action an invasion. An agreement ending hostilities was signed in June 2000, followed by a peace accord in Dec. A buffer zone has been created to separate the armies but tensions do still arise from time to time, notably in late 2005 following a further dispute between the two countries over Badame.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 46.3% of GDP in 2007, industry 13.3% and services 40.4%.

Overview

Ethiopia is among the poorest countries in the world. Ongoing conflict with Eritrea since the late 1990s, as well as frequent droughts, has stalled economic development.

In 2000 Ethiopia embarked on a poverty reduction programme sponsored by the IMF, aimed at restoring macroeconomic stability. Donor assistance increased significantly in 2004 under the IMF-World Bank Indebted Poor Country Initiative and the country qualified for debt relief under the Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative of Dec. 2005.

Despite many obstacles, economic growth averaged around 11% between 2005–08. The percentage of the population living below the poverty line fell from 56% in 1999–2000 to 39% in 2006–07. The IMF, however, estimates growth will drop to around 7% over the period 2009–14.

Currency

The birr (ETB), of 100 cents, is the unit of currency. The birr was devalued in Oct. 1992. In April 2005 total money supply was 24,297m. birr. Foreign exchange reserves were US$1,444m. in May 2005. There was inflation of 25.3% in 2008, rising to 36.4% in 2009.

Budget

The fiscal year ends on 7 July. Revenue, 2006–07, 30,274m. birrs; expenditure, 35,564m. birrs. Tax revenue accounted for 57.3% of revenues in 2006–07; capital expenditure accounted for 51.7% of expenditures.

VAT of 15% was introduced in 2003.

Performance

After the economy contracted by 2.1% in 2003 there was a recovery with growth of 11.7% in 2004. This strong performance has continued since with real GDP growth of 10.0% in 2009 and 8.0% in 2010. Ethiopia ranked among Africa's top half-dozen performing economies every year between 2004 and 2010. Total GDP was US$29.7bn. in 2010.

Banking and Finance

The central bank and bank of issue is the National Bank of Ethiopia (founded 1964; Governor, Teklewold Atnafu). The country's largest bank is the state-owned Commercial Bank of Ethiopia. The complete monopoly held by the bank ended with deregulation in 1994, but it still commands about 90% of the market share. There are eight other banks. On 1 Jan. 1975 the government nationalized all banks, mortgage and insurance companies.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 0.1 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007 was 0.8m. kW. Production in 2007 was 3.50bn. kWh. Hydro-electricity accounts for 96% of generation. Consumption per capita was 46 kWh in 2007. Supply: 220 volts; 50 Hz. In 2008 only 15% of the population had access to electricity, although the stated aim is for electricity to be available to the entire country by 2018.

Oil and Gas

The Calub gas field in the southeast of Ethiopia had proven reserves of 25bn. cu. metres in 2007.

Minerals

Gold and salt are produced. Lege Dembi, an open-pit gold mine in the south of the country, has proven reserves of over 62 tonnes and produces more than five tonnes a year.

Agriculture

Small-scale farmers make up about 85% of Ethiopia's population. There were 10.7m. ha. of arable land in 2001 and 750,000 ha. of permanent crops. 190,000 ha. were irrigated in 2001. There were 3,000 tractors in 2001 and 100 harvester-threshers. Land remains the property of the state, but individuals are granted rights of usage which can be passed to their children, and produce may be sold on the open market instead of compulsorily to the state at low fixed prices.

Coffee is by far the most important source of rural income. Main agricultural products (2002, in 1,000 tonnes): maize, 2,968; sugarcane, 2,232; sorghum, 1,566; wheat, 1,478; barley, 1,093; broad beans, 447; potatoes, 385; millet, 308; yams, 300; papayas, 226; coffee, 220. Teff (Eragrostis abyssinica) and durra are also major products.

Livestock, 2002: cattle, 35.5m.; sheep, 11.4m.; goats, 9.6m.; asses, 3.4m.; horses, 1.3m.; camels, 326,000; chickens, 38m.

Forestry

In 2005 forests covered 13.0m. ha., representing 11.9% of the land area. Ethiopia is Africa's leading roundwood producer, with removals totalling 100.06m. cu. metres in 2007.

Fisheries

The catch in 2005 was 9,450 tonnes, entirely from inland waters.

INDUSTRY

Most public industrial enterprises are controlled by the state. Industrial activity is centred around Addis Ababa. Processed food, cement, textiles and drinks are the main commodities produced. Industrial production accounted for 13.3% of GDP in 2007, including 5.0% from manufacturing.

Labour

The estimated labour force in 2010 was 41,310,000 (52% males), up from 28,996,000 in 2000. Coffee provides a livelihood to a quarter of the population.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$6,259m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006
Imports f.o.b.	1,455.0	1,895.0	2,768.5	3,700.9	4,105.6
Exports f.o.b.	480.2	496.4	678.3	917.3	1,024.7

Principal imports (2006): machinery and transport equipment (35.6%); petroleum and petroleum products (19.8%); manufactured goods (16.1%); chemicals and chemical products (11.0%). Principal exports (2006): coffee and coffee substitutes (40.8%); sesame seeds (15.4%); crude vegetable materials (12.4%); gold (6.2%). Other important exports include leather, chick-peas, hides and skins, and cattle.

Major import suppliers, 2006: Saudi Arabia, 17.9%; China, 12.3%; Italy, 7.7%. Main export markets, 2006: Germany, 12.6%; China, 9.7%; Japan, 8.4%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were 44,359 km of roads in 2007. Passenger cars in use in 2007 numbered 70,900 (one per 1,000 inhabitants) and there were also 149,000 lorries and vans, and 17,100 buses and coaches. In 2007 there were 2,517 deaths in road accidents.

Rail

The Ethiopian-Djibouti Railway has a length of 781 km (metre-gauge), but much of the route is in need of renovation. Passenger-km travelled in 2005 came to 145m. and freight tonne-km to 118m.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Addis Ababa (Bole) and Dire Dawa. The national carrier is the state-owned Ethiopian Airlines. In 2003 it served 43 international and 25 domestic destinations. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Ethiopian-based carriers flew 35m. km, carrying 1,147,000 passengers (881,000 on international flights). In 2001 Addis Ababa (Bole) handled 1,096,500 passengers and 26,490 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were nine ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 118,000 GT.

Telecommunications

There were 908,900 fixed telephone lines in 2010 (11.0 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 6.52m. in 2010.

There were 7.5 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 74,600 in 2009 (0.9 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The legal system is based on the Justinian Code. A new penal code came into force in 1958 and Special Penal Law in 1974. Codes of criminal procedure, civil, commercial and maritime codes have since been promulgated. Provincial and district courts have been established, and High Court judges visit the provincial courts on circuit. The Supreme Court at Addis Ababa is presided over by the Chief Justice. The death penalty is in force; there was one execution in 2007 but none since.

The population in penal institutions in Sept. 2007 was approximately 80,000 (98 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

The adult literacy rate in 2005 was an estimated 29.8%. Primary education commences at seven years and continues with optional secondary education at 13 years. Up to the age of 12, education is in the local language of the federal region. In 2007 there were 12.17m. pupils at primary schools and 3.43m. pupils at secondary schools. During the period 1990–95 only 19% of females of primary school age were enrolled in school but this had increased to 62% by 2006. There were 21 public universities in 2007, with many having just opened in the previous few years. There were 210,456 students in tertiary education in 2007 and 8,355 academic staff.

In 2007 public expenditure on education came to 5.5% of GNI and 23.3% of total government spending.

Health

In 2002 there were 1,971 physicians, 61 dentists, 13,018 nurses, 1,142 midwives and 125 pharmacists. In 2000 only 24% of the population had access to safe drinking water.

RELIGION

About 59% of the population are Christian, mainly belonging to the Ethiopian Orthodox Church, and 32% Sunni Muslims. Amhara, Tigreans and some Oromos are Christian. Somalis, Afars and some Oromos are Muslims. About 5% of the population follow traditional animist beliefs.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

There are nine sites in Ethiopia that appear on the UNESCO World Heritage List. They are (with the year entered on list): the Rock-hewn Churches at Lalibela (1978), 11 monolithic 13th century churches; Simien National Park (1978); Fasil Ghebbi, Gondar Region (1979), a 16th century fortress city; Aksum (1980), the capital of the ancient Kingdom of Aksum, containing tombs and castles dating from the first millennium AD; the Lower Valley of the Awash (1980), an important palaeontological site; the Lower Valley of the Omo (1980), where Homo gracilis was discovered; Tiya (1980), a group of archaeological sites south of Addis Ababa; Harar Jugol (2006), a fortified historic town; and the Konso Cultural Landscape (2011), an area of stone walled terraces and fortified settlements in the Konso highlands.

Press

In 2006 there were three daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 92,000 and 53 non-dailies.

Tourism

In 2005 there were 227,000 foreign visitors. Revenue from tourists totalled US$533m.

Calendar

The Ethiopian calendar is based on the ancient Coptic calendar; the year has 13 months (12 months with 30 days and one month with five or six, depending on the leap-year). It begins on 11 or 12 Sept. (Gregorian) and is seven or eight years behind the Gregorian calendar.

GNI per capita, 2011: (PPP$) 4,145

HDI/world rank: 0.688/100

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Fiji Islands were first recorded in detail by Capt. Bligh after the mutiny of the Bounty (1789). In the 19th century the demand for sandalwood attracted merchant ships. Deserters and shipwrecked sailors settled. Tribal wars were bloody and widespread until Fiji was ceded to Britain on 10 Oct. 1874. Fiji gained independence on 10 Oct. 1970. It remained an independent state within the Commonwealth with a Governor-General appointed by the Queen until 1987. In the general election of 12 April 1987 a left-wing coalition came to power with the support of the Indian population who outnumbered the indigenous Fijians by 50% to 44%. However, it was overthrown in a military coup. A month later, Fiji declared itself a Republic and Fiji's Commonwealth membership lapsed.

In 1990 a new coalition restored civilian rule but made it impossible for Fijian Indians to hold power. A rapprochement with Indian leaders led to an agreement to restore multi-racial government in 1998. Fiji rejoined the Commonwealth in 1997. On 27 July 1998 a new constitution changed the country's name from Fiji to Fiji Islands.

A coup was staged in May 2000 under the leadership of George Speight, a failed businessman. His main aim was to exclude Indians from the government. An interim government, excluding Speight supporters, was appointed on 3 July 2000 to rule for 18 months. On 26 July George Speight and 400 of his supporters were arrested. On 18 Feb. 2002 Speight was sentenced to death although this was subsequently commuted to life imprisonment.

On 5 Dec. 2006 the Fiji Islands suffered their fourth coup in less than 20 years when Commodore Frank Bainimarama ousted Prime Minister Laisenia Qarase, placing him under house arrest. Bainimarama assumed the powers of president and prime minister, although he subsequently restored his predecessor, Ratu Josefa Iloilo, to the presidency.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Fiji Islands comprise 332 islands and islets (about one-third are inhabited) lying between 15° and 22° S. lat. and 174° E. and 178° W. long. The largest is Viti Levu, area 10,429 sq. km (4,027 sq. miles); followed by Vanua Levu, 5,556 sq. km (2,145 sq. miles). The island of Rotuma (47 sq. km, 18 sq. miles), about 12° 30' S. lat., 178° E. long., was added to the colony in 1881. Total area, 18,333 sq. km (7,078 sq. miles). Total population (2007 census), 837,271 (females, 410,095); ethnic groups: Fijian, 475,739; Indian, 313,798; other Pacific islanders, 15,311; part-European/European, 13,724; Rotuman, 10,335; Chinese, 4,704; other, 3,660. Population density (2007), 45.7 per sq. km; 50.7% of the population lived in urban areas in 2007.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 896,000.

The population of the capital, Suva (including Nasinu), was 173,137 at the 2007 census. Other large towns are Lautoka (52,220), Nausori (47,604) and Nadi (42,284).

English, Fijian and Hindustani are all official languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009 estimates: births, 19,000; deaths, 6,000. Rates, 2009 estimates (per 1,000 population): birth, 22; death, 7. Annual population growth rate, 2000–05, 0.8%. Life expectancy at birth in 2007 was 66.5 years for males and 71.0 years for females. Infant mortality, 2005, 16 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 2.7 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, but oceanic influences prevent undue extremes of heat or humidity. The S. E. Trades blow from May to Nov., during which time nights are cool and rainfall amounts least. Suva, Jan. 80°F (26.7°C), July 73°F (22.8°C). Annual rainfall 117" (2,974 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The executive authority of the State is vested in the President. The Prime Minister is appointed by the President. The Prime Minister must establish a multi-party cabinet. The President's term of office is five years.

A new constitution unanimously passed by Parliament and assented to by the President came into force on 27 July 1998. The country's name was changed from Fiji to Fiji Islands and the people were to be known as Fiji Islanders instead of Fijians. The new constitution stated that it was no longer a condition to have an indigenous Prime Minister and established a 71-seat House of Representatives (Lower House), with 46 elected on a communal role and 25 from an open electoral roll. Of the 46, 23 are elected from a roll of voters registered as Fijians, 19 from a roll of voters registered as Indians, one from a roll of voters registered as Rotumans and three from a roll of voters registered who are none of these. The Upper House or Senate has 32 members.

Parliament was reopened in Oct. 2001, having been suspended following a coup in May 2000. In 2006 another coup brought Commodore Frank Bainimarama to power but on 9 April 2009 the court of appeal declared his government illegal and he stood down. The next day the president repealed the constitution and assumed all governing power. The court was disbanded and Bainimarama's government restored on 12 April for the next five years. Elections were delayed resulting in suspension from the Pacific Islands Forum. In May 2009 Bainimarama announced that the next elections would not be held before Sept. 2014. In March 2012 Bainimarama disbanded the Great Council of Chiefs, which had existed in name only since April 2007 when Bainimarama suspended its operations. It had previously been responsible for appointing the president and 14 members of the Senate.

National Anthem

'Meda Dau Doka' ('God Bless Fiji'); words and tune by M. Prescott.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Mahendra Chaudhry, the Fiji Labour Party leader, became the country's first Indian prime minister in 1999, but was ousted in the coup of May 2000 after just over a year in office. In parliamentary elections held between 6–13 May 2006, incumbent Prime Minister Laisenia Qarase's Fiji United Party won 36 of 71 available seats with 44.6% of votes cast, followed by the Fiji Labour Party with 31 (39.2%), the United People's Party 2 (0.8%) and ind. 2 (4.9%). Turnout was 87.7%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

President: Ratu Epeli Nailatikau; b. 1941 (sworn in 5 Nov. 2009, having been acting president since 30 July 2009).

In March 2012 the interim government comprised:

Prime Minister, Minister for Finance, Strategic Planning, National Development and Statistics, Public Service, People's Charter for Change and Progress, Information, I-Taukei, Provincial Development and Multi-Ethnic Affairs, Sugar Industry, and Lands and Mineral Resources (acting): Commodore Frank Bainimarama; b. 1954 (sworn in 5 Jan. 2007, then briefly ousted from 9–12 April 2009).

CURRENT LEADERS

Ratu Epeli Nailatikau

Position
President

Introduction

Ratu Epeli Nailatikau was sworn into office on 5 Nov. 2009. He had been acting president for the previous three months following the resignation of Ratu Josefa Iloilo on 30 July 2009.

Early Life

Nailatikau was born on 5 July 1941 to a family of politically powerful chieftains. After completing his education in Fiji, he joined the armed forces and was sent for training in New Zealand. In 1966 he was posted with the 1st Battalion, Royal New Zealand Infantry Regiment to Sarawak, Malaysia during the Indonesia–Malaysia confrontation. On his return to Fiji, he joined the Fiji Infantry Regiment, rising steadily through the ranks. By 1987 he was a Brigadier-General and Commander of the Royal Fiji Military Forces but was ousted in a military coup headed by Sitiveni Rabuka.

Pursuing a new career in the diplomatic service, Nailatikau completed the foreign service programme at the University of Oxford and was appointed High Commissioner to the United Kingdom, a portfolio that also included Denmark, Egypt, Germany, Israel and the Holy See. He went on to become Roving

Ambassador and High Commissioner to the member states of the South Pacific Forum and, in 1999, was appointed permanent secretary for foreign affairs and external trade.

Following a coup in 2000, which he had strongly opposed, Nailatikau was nominated as prime minister in the subsequent interim military government of Commodore Frank Bainimarama. However, within 24 hours Nailatikau had withdrawn in favour of Laisenia Qarase, instead taking the posts of deputy prime minister and minister for Fijian affairs. At the 2001 general election he put himself forward as speaker of the House of Representatives, a post he held until 2006. On 14 June 2005, Nailatikau was appointed the UNAIDS (The United Nations Joint Programme on HIV/AIDS) Special Representative for the Pacific. Outspoken in his campaign to tackle the AIDS crisis, he attracted controversy when he called for a public endorsement of safe sex.

In Jan. 2007 Nailatikau joined Bainimarama's interim government, formed in the wake of another coup d'état in Dec. 2006. He served as minister of foreign affairs, international co-operation and civil aviation. On 10 April 2007 he was nominated as vice-president by the newly reinstalled President Iloilo but his appointment was rejected by the Grand Council of Chiefs. Nailatikau took over the portfolio for provincial development and multi-ethnic affairs from Prime Minister Bainimarama in Oct. 2008, with his previous duties reassigned to the premier.

Nailatikau became vice-president on 17 April 2009 following a constitutional crisis in which the appeal court ruled that the military regime formed in 2006 was illegal, prompting Iloilo to repeal the constitution and sack the appeal court judges. With Bainimarama restored to the premiership, Nailatikau took over the presidency on 30 July 2009 in an acting capacity, until 5 Nov. 2009 when he was sworn in as Iloilo's successor.

Career in Office

Nailatikau's appointment, made behind closed doors, signalled that the military would continue to play a pivotal role in Fijian politics. On 29 Jan. 2010 Nailatikau signed an extension of the public emergency regulation, in place since April 2009 to give power to the authorities to stop events they deem to be a threat to national security.

Josaia Voreqe Bainimarama

Position
Prime Minister

Introduction

Voreqe Bainimarama, military commander of the Fiji Islands, became prime minister after leading a coup in Dec. 2006 against the incumbent, Laisenia Qarase. Previously a Qarase ally, Bainimarama was a key figure in defeating a coup attempt by George Speight in 2000 and installing Qarase to the premiership. Bainimarama's relationship with Qarase deteriorated in 2006 and Bainimarama deposed him. He appointed himself as president before relinquishing that position to become prime minister. He is popularly known in the Fiji Islands as 'Frank' Bainimarama.

Early Life

An ethnic Fijian, Bainimarama was born on 27 April 1954 on Bau Island and educated at the Marist Brothers High School. He enlisted in the navy in July 1975 and received his first command post in the early 1980s. He was promoted to lieutenant commander in Feb. 1986 and then served with the Multinational Force and Observers peacekeeping force in the Sinai Peninsula until returning to Fiji in Sept. 1987. He was appointed commander of the navy in Oct. 1988.

During his term as commander Bainimarama undertook extensive training, including in maritime surveillance, in disaster management and in exclusive economic zone management. He became acting chief of staff in Nov. 1997, and was promoted to the rank of commodore and appointed commander of the armed forces in March 1999.

In May 2000 George Speight led a coup with the declared aim of promoting Fijian nationalism and excluding ethnic Indians from government. Prime Minister Chaudhry was deposed and when President Mara fled, Bainimarama declared martial law. On 30 May he appointed an interim military government and appointed Laisenia Qarase as prime minister on 4 July. On 6 July the interim government responded to a military mutiny by signing an accord with Speight granting him immunity from prosecution. On 13 July it installed Iloilo as president, together with a pro-Speight vice-president, Jope Seniloli.

On 27 July the interim government revoked Speight's immunity, with Bainimarama claiming that the accord had been signed under duress. Speight and 369 others were arrested. On 2 Nov. pro-Speight soldiers mutinied in Suva, forcing Bainimarama to flee. The mutiny was quelled and Bainimarama accused a former prime minister, Sitiveni Rabuka, of involvement. He persisted in attempts to prove the involvement of Rabuka and other alleged conspirators and vehemently opposed Prime Minister Qarase's proposals in 2006 to offer amnesty to the rebels.

In Oct. 2006 Qarase attempted unsuccessfully to replace Bainimarama as commander of the armed forces while he was out of the country. Bainimarama then staged a coup on 5 Dec. 2006, with the support of senior military figures. Claiming he wanted to end corruption and stop racial divisions threatening national unity, he dismissed Qarase's government and appointed himself acting president. He placed government ministries under the control of their chief executive officers and appointed Jona Senilagakali as acting prime minister. International pressure forced Bainimarama to return the presidency to Iloilo on 4 Jan. 2007 and on 5 Jan. he replaced Senilagakali as interim prime minister.

Career in Office

Bainimarama's political legitimacy has since come under intense scrutiny domestically and internationally. Australia and New Zealand called for him to relinquish power and refused visas to members of his government. At home political opponents and leading institutions, including the influential Methodist Church, condemned the coup alleging human rights abuses although talks in Feb. 2007 led to the Methodist Church declaring its support for the interim government. Internationally, particularly within the Pacific islands region, pressure continued to mount. In Feb. 2007 Bainimarama promised to work towards democratic elections, but initially would not commit to a time-frame. Then, in Oct. 2007 at the Pacific Islands Forum annual summit in Tonga, he agreed to hold a general election by March 2009. However, in July 2008 he reneged on this commitment on the grounds that electoral reforms could not be completed in time.

Having briefly reimposed a state of emergency from Sept.–Oct. 2007 he claimed the following month to have foiled a plot to assassinate him. On 9 April 2009 Bainimarama stood down following a court of appeal judgment that his government was illegal. However, President Iloilo reinstated the cabinet on 12 April for another five years after having dismissed the judiciary and annulled the constitution.

In Sept. 2009 the Commonwealth suspended the Fiji Islands' membership and cut off all aid because of the country's lack of progress in re-establishing democracy. Bainimarama incurred further diplomatic reproach in Nov. when he accused Australia and New Zealand of interfering in the Fiji Islands' internal affairs and expelled their high commissioners.

In Sept. 2011 the Bainimarama government introduced a controversial decree severely restricting the rights of trade unions to strike in any industry designated by the authorities and nullifying existing collective bargaining agreements. However, in an apparently more liberal move, he announced the lifting of martial law in Jan. 2012 and set the stage for consultations on a new constitution and democratic elections.

DEFENCE

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$57m. (US$61 per capita), representing 1.8% of GDP.

As at Oct. 2009, 277 personnel (including 221 troops and 49 police) were deployed in UN peacekeeping operations although a ban preventing the Fiji Islands from joining any new UN peacekeeping forces was enacted in June 2009.

Army

Personnel in 2007 numbered 3,200 including 300 recalled reserves. There is an additional reserve force of around 6,000.

Navy

A small naval division of the armed forces numbered 300 in 2007.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 15.0% of GDP in 2006, industry 25.8% and services 59.2%.

Overview

The growing tourism sector, sugar exports and remittances from citizens working abroad have been the main sources of foreign exchange for the Fiji Islands over the last decade. Following a military coup in 2000 the economy experienced reduced growth of 2.8% , falling to 1% in 2001. GDP growth in 2005 was 0.7%, partly reflecting the loss of preferential trade agreements with the USA and the EU in the garment and sugar industries. After another coup in Dec. 2006, tourist arrivals fell by 6% in 2007 and the business climate deteriorated. The 2008 global financial crisis, adverse weather conditions and a weak domestic investment climate caused economic contraction from 2007–09. Subsequent growth has been slow while public debt is rising.

At independence in 1970, sugar accounted for 70% of export earnings, and in 1973 the government brought all four sugar mills under the Fiji Sugar Corporation (FSC), a majority state-owned company. The FSC has been operating at a loss since 2006 and during this period the government has provided guarantees on borrowing. Total guaranteed debt of the FSC stood at 3% of GDP at the end of 2010. Public debt rose to 56% of GDP in 2010. It is estimated that over 20% of the population still depend on the sugar industry for their livelihoods, though the industry's share of export earnings is declining.

Reducing public debt to below 50% of GDP, restructuring of the FSC and the sugar industry and improved debt management are key priorities. The weak business climate remains a major impediment to sustained growth.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Fiji dollar (FJD) of 100 cents. In June 2005 total money supply was $F1,082m., foreign exchange reserves were US$397m. and gold reserves 1,000 troy oz. Inflation was 7.7% in 2008 and 3.7% in 2009. The Fiji dollar was devalued by 20% in both Jan. 1998 and April 2009.

Budget

Revenues in 2008 totalled $F1,455m. and expenditures $F1,427m.

VAT of 10% was introduced in 1992 (increased to 12.5% in 2003 and 15% in 2011).

Performance

The economy contracted by 1.3% in 2009 but grew by 0.3% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$3.0bn.

Banking and Finance

The financial system in the Fiji Islands comprises the central bank, banking, insurance and superannuation industries, non-bank financial institutions (NBFIs), restricted foreign exchange dealers and money changers, and the South Pacific Stock Exchange.

The central bank and bank of issue is the Reserve Bank of Fiji (Governor, Barry Whiteside). Total assets at 31 Dec. 2007 were $F1,170m.

Total assets of commercial banks were $F3,957m. at the end of 2007. Total assets for the Fiji National Provident Fund (the sole player in the superannuation industry) at 31 Dec. 2007 were $F3,437m. Non-regulated financial institutions include the Fiji Development Bank, Housing Authority and Unit Trust of Fiji. Their assets totalled $F738m. in Dec. 2007.

The South Pacific Stock Exchange is based in Suva.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 2.9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

The Fiji Electricity Authority is responsible for the generation, transmission and distribution of electricity in most of the country. It operates 13 power stations, three of which are operated on hydro power, and one 10 MW wind farm. The largest energy project is one of hydro-electricity that is capable of generating 70% of the main island's electric needs. Two rural hydro schemes have been completed, one private generating 100 kW and the other—operated by the Authority—producing 800 kW.

Installed capacity in 2007 was about 184,000 kW. Production in 2007 was 836m. kWh with consumption per capita 999 kWh.

Minerals

The main gold-mine normally accounts for about a twelfth of the country's exports. Gold has for many years been one of the Fiji Islands' main exports. However, after an extended closure in 2006–07 gold production in 2007 was only 77 kg, valued at $F2.55m.

Agriculture

With a total land area of 1.8m. ha., only 16% is suitable for farming. In 2007 there were an estimated 170,000 ha. of arable land and 83,000 ha. of permanent crops. Arable land: 24% sugarcane, 23% coconut and 53% other crops. Production figures for 2003 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 3,300; coconut, 170; taro, 38; cassava, 33; rice, 16; copra, 14; bananas, 6; sweet potatoes, 6. Ginger is becoming increasingly important.

Livestock (2003): cattle, 320,000; goats, 248,000; pigs, 139,000; chickens, 4m. Products, 2003 (in 1,000 tonnes): beef and veal, 9; poultry meat, 9; pork, bacon and ham, 4; eggs, 3. Total production of milk was 58,000 tonnes in 2003.

Forestry

Forests covered 1.0m. ha.—54.7% of the land area—in 2005. Forestry contributed about 0.5% of GDP in 2007. It is the sixth most important export commodity, valued at $F48m. in 2007, of which $F27m. was in the form of wood chips. Hardwood plantations covered over 67,000 ha. in 2007. About 42,000 ha. of softwood plantations were held by Fiji Pine Ltd in 2007. There was no export of unprocessed timber. Roundwood production in 2007 was 509,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries

The catch in 2007 was 45,963 tonnes, of which 43,775 tonnes came from sea fishing. In 2007 fisheries accounted for around 2% of GDP, valued at $F101.3m. Mainstay of export fisheries are skipjack and albacore tuna for canning.

INDUSTRY

The main industries are tourism, sugar, fish, mineral water, garments and gold which in 2007 accounted for 12.6%, 3.4%, 1.9%, 1.9%, 1.8% and 0.5% of GDP respectively.

Output, 2007 (in tonnes): sugar, 240,000; cement, 144,000; flour, 52,677; animal feed, 37,820; coconut oil, 9,657; soap, 5,556; soft drinks, 213.4m. litres; beer, 19.0m. litres; cigarettes, 401m. units.

Labour

The labour force was estimated at 371,400 in 2003. In 2002 there were 23,000 people out of work and seeking employment—the number of unemployed people doubled between 1996 and 2002.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The Tax Free Factory/Tax Free Zone Scheme was introduced in 1987 to stimulate investment and encourage export-oriented businesses.

Foreign debt was US$387m. in 2007.

Imports and Exports

In 2009 imports (c.i.f.) totalled US$1,437.0m. and exports (f.o.b.) US$628.7m. Chief exports are clothing and apparel, sugar, gold, prepared and preserved fish, beverages, and cereal and cereal preparations.

In 2009 the chief import sources (in US$1m.) were: Singapore (397.7); Australia (317.8); New Zealand (228.2). The chief export markets (in US$1m.) were: Singapore (103.1); Australia (100.0); United Kingdom (94.4).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Total road length in 2002 was an estimated 3,440 km, of which almost half were surfaced. There were a total of 94,400 passenger cars and 48,000 lorries and vans in 2007. In 2006, 89 fatalities were caused by road accidents.

Rail

Fiji Sugar Cane Corporation runs 600 mm gauge railways at four of its mills on Viti Levu and Vanua Levu, totalling 597 km in 2005.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Nadi and Suva. The national carrier is Air Pacific (51% government-owned). In 2003 it provided services to Australia, Japan, New Zealand, USA and a number of Pacific island nations. Air Fiji only operates on domestic routes. In 2001 Nadi handled 911,000 passengers (808,000 on international flights).

Shipping

The three main ports are Suva, Lautoka and Levuka. The gross registered tonnage of ocean-going shipping entering the ports in 2007 totalled 8,361,785 GRT including liquid bulk carriers of 2,530,718 GRT. A total of 694 foreign vessels called into Suva port in 2007, 348 into Lautoka and 93 into Levuka. The inter-island shipping fleet is made up of private and government vessels.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 129,100 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscribers numbered 530,000 in 2008 (63.2 per 100 persons). There were 148.2 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 13,800 in 2007 (16.5 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

An independent Judiciary is guaranteed under the constitution. A High Court has unlimited original jurisdiction to hear and determine any civil or criminal proceedings under any law. The High Court also has jurisdiction to hear and determine constitutional and electoral questions including the membership of the House of Representatives. The Chief Justice of the Fiji Islands is appointed by the President after consultation with the Prime Minister. The substantive Chief Justice was removed from office following the Dec. 2006 military coup and was replaced by an Acting Chief Justice in Jan. 2007, who was made permanent in Dec. 2008. Following the abolition of the constitution and the dismissal of all judges in April 2009, the Chief Justice was reappointed to his post in May 2009.

The Fiji Islands' Court of Appeal, of which the Chief Justice is ex officio President, is formed by three specially appointed Justices of Appeal, appointed by the President after consultation with the Judicial and Legal Services Commission. Generally, any person convicted of an offence has a right of appeal from the High Court of Appeal. The final appellant court is the Supreme Court. Most matters coming before the Superior Courts originate in Magistrates' Courts.

The population in penal institutions in 2007 was 841 (100 per 100,000 of national population).

Police

In 2008 the Royal Fiji Police Force had a total strength of 2,655 established officers, 60 support staff and 1,600 Special Constables.

Education

Adult literacy rate was 93.2% in 2001 (95.2% among males and 91.2% among females). Total enrolment: pre-primary schools (2004), 8,628; primary schools (2005), 141,089 (with 5,006 teachers); secondary schools (2005), 68,521 (with 4,141 teachers); special schools (2005), 1,007 (with 103 teachers); teacher training (2005), 713 (with 87 teachers); technical/vocational education (2005), 2,115 (1,048 teachers in 2004). There were 531 pre-primary schools, 719 primary schools, 162 secondary schools, 17 special schools, 4 teacher training schools and 63 technical/vocational schools in 2005.

The University of the South Pacific, which is located in Suva, serves 12 countries in the South Pacific region. The Fiji Islands also has a college of agriculture, school of medicine and nursing, an institute of technology, a primary school teacher training college and an advanced college of education.

In 2005 public expenditure on education came to 6.2% of GDP.

Health

In 2007 there were 25 public hospitals with 1,727 beds, two private hospitals, 76 health centres and 101 nursing stations. There were 318 doctors, 196 dental staff and 1,820 nurses.

Through its national health service system, the government continues to provide the bulk of health services both in the curative and public health programmes.

RELIGION

In 2001 the population consisted of 53% Christians, 38% Hindus, 8% Muslims and 1% others.

CULTURE

Press

In 2006 there were three national dailies with a combined circulation of 40,000.

Tourism

There were 545,000 foreign tourists in 2006. Tourist spending totalled US$636m. in 2006.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Finland's first inhabitants moved northwards at the end of the Ice Age. Further waves of settlement came in 4000 BC and 1000 BC and social groups began to develop. During the Viking era Finland's location on the trade route between Russia and Sweden brought prosperity and conflict in equal measure, with attacks made on Finnish trading posts by the Swedes and the Danes.

In the 12th century economic and religious rivalry between Sweden and Russia was centred on Finland. Sweden, supported by the Papacy in Rome, began a succession of crusades to draw Finland into its sphere of control. The defeat of Birger Jarl in 1240 marked the end of the Swedish incursions but efforts at strengthening the Swedish presence in areas it already held were intensified. By 1323 Russia was forced to recognize a boundary marking off those parts of Finland that were under Swedish control including all of western and southern Finland. Finland remained a duchy of Sweden until 1581 when it was made a grand duchy.

In the 18th century Russian forces conquered the southeast territory. The rest of the country was ceded to Russia by the treaty of Hamina in 1809 when Finland became an autonomous grand duchy, retaining its laws and institutions but owing allegiance to the tsar.

Throughout the 19th century Finland remained in Russia's shadow while building on its status as a grand duchy. By the 1880s Finland had its own army. This proved too much for the Russian military, who feared that moves towards Finnish separatism would make more difficult their task of defending the long western border. With the appointment of Gen. Bobrikov as governor general in 1898 a start was made on bringing Finland back into the imperial fold. The army was put under Russian command, the Russian language was made compulsory for the civil service and for schools and decision-making reverted to the tsar's appointees. In June 1904 Bobrikov was assassinated and, as the Russian revolutionary movement gathered pace, the Marxists won an absolute majority in parliamentary elections. It was a short-lived victory but the far left held its popular appeal.

Civil War

Following the revolution, on 6 Dec. 1917 Finland declared independence. This was recognized by the Russian Bolsheviks on 31 Dec. By now, however, the left- and right-wing parties were in open conflict. In Jan. 1918 the Whites (the government forces) took the western, Russian-controlled province of Ostrobothnia while the Reds (supported by the Bolsheviks) seized power in the south. At the end of Jan. the Reds staged a coup and the Whites were forced to abandon Helsinki, relocating to Vaasa. But government forces, led by Gen. Gustaf Mannerheim and aided by German troops, prevailed.

A new constitution by which a German prince, Friedrich Karl, would become regent was abandoned with the collapse of Germany at the end of the First World War. In the summer of 1919 Finland became a republic with K. J. Ståhlberg as its first president.

Throughout the 1920s and early 1930s class antagonism inherited from the civil war remained the dominant political issue. As a conciliatory measure the Social Democrats were brought into government and the party formed a minority government in 1926–27. In the early 1930s fascism entered domestic politics with the emergence of the Lapua Movement. After an unsuccessful coup attempt in 1932 the movement was banned. Finland was hit by the pre-war depression but cushioned by the dominant role of agriculture in the Finnish economy.

Winter War

As Europe was anticipating German aggression, the Finns were more fearful of Moscow's territorial demands. Outnumbered and outmatched in arms and equipment, their hopes were pinned on foreign involvement. When this failed to materialize, there was no option but to concede all the Russians demanded, including the Karelian Isthmus. The 1940 treaty, which ended the Winter War, required the resettlement of 12% of the Finnish population. Fearing worse to come from the Soviet Union, Helsinki opened up contacts with the Germans, allowing transit for military traffic in return for food and armaments.

There followed the German invasion of Russia, a campaign which Mannerheim, justifying active participation, described as a 'holy war' to restore Finnish borders. Having achieved this objective, the Finns wanted out, a desire which became all the more determined as the German advance ground to a halt at Stalingrad. But there was no basis for a settlement and the Finns could only wait for the inevitable Russian counter-attack. When it came, retreating Germans took revenge by devastating everything in their path.

Having fought first against Russia then against Germany, the country emerged from the Second World War defeated, demoralized and in political disarray. The terms of the 1944 armistice included the surrender of one-twelfth of Finnish territory and reparations in goods valued at US$300m.

Revered as a national hero by the right, Mannerheim became president. Carl Enckell, a close associate for many years, took charge of foreign affairs while Juho Paasikivi was appointed premier. The 1945 election confirmed Paasikivi and Enckell in their jobs and a cabinet was formed giving roughly equal representation to the social democrats, communists and the farmers' party. When Mannerheim, who had turned 78 and ailing fast, was persuaded to stand down in mid-term of his presidency, Paasikivi was the obvious successor.

A peace treaty with Russia signed in Feb. 1947 confirmed what had already been agreed by the 1944 armistice. Finland lost 12% of her border territory to the Soviet Union, including the country's second largest city, Viipuri, and the port and province of Petsamo on the Arctic coast. With a large part of the province of Karelia taken over by the Russians the frontier was moved back from a distance of only 31 km from Leningrad to a new line 180 km from the former Russian capital. 400,000 people had to be resettled. The Åland Islands were to remain demilitarized and limitations were imposed on the size of the Finnish armed forces and its weaponry.

Pacifying Russia

An 'invitation' to negotiate a mutual assistance agreement suggested that only an administration answerable to Moscow would satisfy the Russians. Paasikivi argued that the interests of the Soviet Union on her northwestern border (the only part of Finland that really mattered to the Russian military) could best be served by a sovereign Finland whose sympathetic relations with her eastern neighbour precluded her territory being used as a platform for attack. Skilfully, this shifted the emphasis away from Russian ambitions for making Finland an ally towards the far more attractive prospect of the two countries' entering into a joint security arrangement allowing Finland to stand aside from big power politics. Finland promised to defend herself against an attack from Germany or an allied state, to confer with Russia in case of war or threat of war and, if necessary, to accept Russian aid. Great play was made of Finland's ambition 'to remain outside the conflicting interests of the great powers'.

The popular view in Europe was that Finland had tied herself to the Soviet Union and was as much under the control of Moscow as any of the communist satellites. Paasikivi tried to counteract this impression and reacted decisively if there was any hint of a threat to his own authority. When in the spring of 1948 there were rumours that the communists were planning to seize power, he dismissed the powerful minister of internal affairs, Yrjö Leino. But the president was hyper-sensitive to Moscow's needs for reassurances of Finnish good faith. The press was told to tone down criticism of the Soviet Union. Most of the nation's productive capacity had survived the war, and the export demand for wood products was strong. But in paying off reparations in goods the Russians wanted meant a transfer of resources to the engineering industry. All this had to be achieved without a share in Marshall Aid, though US loans totalling US$150m. were channelled in other ways. With skilled labour and consumer goods in short supply, wages and prices climbed steeply. In 1948 prices were eight times their pre-war level.

The communists were well placed to take advantage of the government's troubles. In the summer of 1949 they disrupted industry with a series of strikes, splitting the trade union movement and raising fears of an imminent coup. Paasikivi promptly replaced the social democrat government with one formed by the agrarians under the leadership of Urho Kekkonen. Like Paasikivi, Kekkonen worked hard to establish good personal relations with the USSR. In 1952 he put up a plan for 'a neutral alliance between the Scandinavian countries', which 'would remove even the theoretical threat of an attack ... via Finland's territory'. In reality, a Scandinavian alliance, neutral or otherwise, was impracticable since Denmark and Norway had only recently joined NATO. But the gain to Kekkonen was approval from the Soviet Union.

Defending Neutrality

In 1955, two years after the death of Stalin had brought the first signs of an easing in the cold war, Finland negotiated the return of the Porkkala base near Helsinki, which had been leased to the Soviet Union for 50 years. This meant the departure of the last Soviet troops on Finnish territory—the most powerful boost to national morale of the early post-war years. That same year Finland joined the United Nations but stayed out of the latest formation of Soviet defence, the Warsaw Pact. In 1956 Kekkonen succeeded Paasikivi as president. A succession of weak governments consolidated presidential power and confirmed Kekkonen as the only leader capable of handling the Russians.

His first move was to assert his country's freedom of action, by suggesting that Finland might come to a deal with the European Community. In response, the Soviet Union activated article 2 of the 1948 Treaty by demanding consultation on measures to ensure the defence of their frontiers. It was the most serious challenge yet to Finnish neutrality. It had been said that article 2 could be acted upon only when both parties agreed that a threat existed; it came as a shock to realize that a unilateral declaration of interest by the stronger partner was sufficient to start the process of military consultation. If the Soviet claim went uncontested Finnish independence would be seen as a sham.

Western observers expected the worst; nothing less than military bases on Finnish soil would satisfy Moscow. But Kekkonen called successfully for a postponement of military talks in favour of discussions aimed at reassuring the Kremlin that Finland would remain true to her foreign policy. This was accompanied by a warning that if military consultations went ahead there would be a war scare in Scandinavia, possibly leading to counter-measures by the West. When the Soviet Union backed down Kekkonen was feted as the country's saviour. He was elected for a second six-year term by an overwhelming majority on the first round of voting.

In 1981 the ailing Kekkonen was replaced by Mauno Koivisto. At first he adopted the foreign policy of his predecessor but with the collapse of the Soviet Union at the end of the 1980s he was able to move Finland towards closer ties with Western Europe. Koivisto played a major role in dismantling the 1948 Treaty and in the early 1990s fostered close relations with the EU. A referendum held in 1995 paved the way for Finland to join the EU.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Finland, a country of lakes and forests, is bounded in the northwest and north by Norway, east by Russia, south by the Baltic Sea and west by the Gulf of Bothnia and Sweden. The most recent ten-yearly census took place on 31 Dec. 2010. Finland has used a register-based method of calculating the population since 1990. The areas, populations and population densities of Finland and its regions on 31 Dec. 2009 (Swedish names in brackets) were as follows:

Regions	Area per sq. km <sup>1</sup>	Population	Population (sq. km)
Ahvenanmaa (Åland)	1,553	27,734	17.9

2009	60,430	24,697	205	29,836	49,883	12,151

In 2009 the rate per 1,000 population was: births, 11; deaths, 9; marriages, 6; infant deaths (per 1,000 live births), 2.6. Annual population growth rate, 1999–2009, 0.3%. In 2008 the suicide rate per 100,000 population was 30.7 among men and 8.5 among women, giving Finland one of the highest suicide rates in Europe. Life expectancy at birth, 2008, 76.3 years for males and 83.0 years for females. The most popular age range for marrying in 2008 was 25–29 for both males and females. Fertility rate, 2009, 1.9 births per woman. In 2008 Finland received 4,305 asylum applications, equivalent to 0.8 per 1,000 inhabitants.

A UNICEF report published in 2005 showed that 2.8% of children in Finland live in poverty (in households with income below 50% of the national median), the second lowest percentage of any country behind Denmark.

CLIMATE

A quarter of Finland lies north of the Arctic Circle. The climate is severe in winter, which lasts about six months, but mean temperatures in the south and southwest are less harsh, 21°F (–6°C). In the north, mean temperatures may fall to 8.5°F (–13°C). Snow covers the ground for three months in the south and for over six months in the far north. Summers are short but quite warm, with occasional very hot days. Precipitation is light throughout the country, with one third falling as snow, the remainder mainly as rain in summer and autumn. Helsinki (Helsingfors), Jan. 30.2°F (–1.0°C), July 68.4°F (20.2°C). Annual rainfall 27.9" (708.7 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Finland is a republic governed by the constitution of 1 March 2000 (which replaced the previous constitution dating from 1919). Although the president used to choose who formed the government, under the new constitution it is the responsibility of parliament to select the prime minister. The government is in charge of domestic and EU affairs with the president responsible for foreign policy 'in co-operation with the government'.

Parliament consists of one chamber (Eduskunta) of 200 members chosen by direct and proportional election by all citizens of 18 or over. The country is divided into 15 electoral districts, with a representation proportional to their population. Every citizen over the age of 18 is eligible for parliament, which is elected for four years, but can be dissolved sooner by the president.

The president is elected for six years by direct popular vote. In the event of no candidate winning an absolute majority, a second round is held between the two most successful candidates.

CURRENT LEADERS

Sauli Niinistö

Position
President

Introduction

Sauli Niinistö became president in March 2012, the first member of the conservative National Coalition Party (KOK) to hold the post since 1956. A fiscal conservative and pro-European, he is regarded as a pragmatist. He intends to maintain Finland's role as a 'responsible' member of the EU, advocating restraint on financial bailout packages and EU expansion.

Early Life

Born on 24 Aug. 1948 in Salo, Sauli Niinistö graduated in law from the University of Turku in 1974 before establishing his own law firm in Salo. In 1977 he was elected to Salo's municipal council, where he served until 1992. In 1987 he entered the national parliament as a member of the KOK, becoming chairman of the committee on constitutional law in 1993. He was elected leader of the KOK in 1994.

In the 'rainbow' coalition government led by social democrat Paavo Lipponen, he served as justice minister from 1995–96 and as finance minister from 1996–2003. Between 1995 and 2001 he was also deputy prime minister. As finance minister he tackled recession by cutting social spending and taxes, and took Finland into the single European currency in 1999. He was chair of the European Democratic Union (EDU) grouping from 1998 and became honorary president of the European's People Party (EPP), following its merger with the EDU in 2002.

After standing down as KOK leader in 2001, Niinistö left parliament in 2003 to become vice-chairman of the board of directors of the European Investment Bank, a post he held until 2007. In 2006 he unsuccessfully challenged for the Finnish presidency, narrowly losing to incumbent Tarja Halonen. He re-entered parliament in 2007 and served as speaker from 2007–11, supporting measures for administrative reform.

During the economic turmoil in the EU amid the global financial crisis, he advocated continuing Finnish membership of the EU but was sceptical on further expansion and critical of the financial bailouts proposed for struggling member states. In 2011 he again contested the presidency, arguing for fiscal discipline and measures to help young people into employment. He was elected in the second round, winning 63% of the vote to beat Pekka Haavisto of the Green League.

Career in Office

Niinistö took office on 1 March 2012, promising to use the presidency to consolidate Finland's place within the EU while strengthening relations with the USA and China. His chief domestic challenges arise from economic uncertainty, a growing youth unemployment rate and an ageing population. Internationally, he must respond to the continuing crises in the eurozone and aims to maintain good relations with Russia.

Jyrki Katainen

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Jyrki Katainen became prime minister in June 2011, heading a six-party coalition. Leader of the centre-right National Coalition Party (KOK) and a former finance minister, he is a fiscal conservative who, though broadly pro-European, has signalled caution on further EU financial bailouts.

Early Life

Born on 14 Oct. 1971 in Siilinjärvi, Jyrki Katainen studied social sciences at Tampere University. In 1993 he was elected to the Siilinjärvi municipal council as a member of the KOK and served as the council's second vice-chair from 1997–98. In 1998 he obtained a masters degree in social sciences and spent the 1990s working as a supply teacher and at the National Education Association.

In 1997 he became a member of the regional council of Northern Savo, serving as its first vice-chair from 2001–04. In 1999 he was elected to parliament for the KOK. He was vice-president of the European People's Party (EPP) youth organization from 1998–2000 and in 2005 was elected vice-president of the EPP as a whole. During the same period he rose within the KOK to become its deputy chair in 2001, before successfully challenging Ville Itälä for the leadership in 2004.

He served on the foreign affairs committee from 2004–07 in the government of Matti Vanhanen. Following the KOK's entry into coalition government with the Centre Party in 2007, Katainen was appointed finance minister and deputy prime minister. In the aftermath of the 2008 global economic crisis, he won international praise for controlling Finland's deficit and retaining its AAA credit rating. He continued to embrace fiscal discipline during recession in 2009. In 2010 he called for stronger IMF surveillance of financial systems and proposed a 'stability fee'. In April 2011 the KOK emerged from general elections as the largest party and, after complex negotiations, Katainen formed a coalition government with the centre-left Social Democratic Party and four smaller parties from across the political spectrum.

Career in Office

Katainen took office on 22 June 2011, pledging to rebuild the economy while limiting government borrowing. In late 2011 he signalled that Finland might require guarantees or stricter conditions before agreeing to further EU bailout measures. His chief challenges are continuing economic uncertainty at home and abroad, which he must confront while maintaining unity across his coalition in the face of strong opposition from the nationalist True Finns party.

DEFENCE

Conscript service is 6–12 months. Total strength of trained and equipped reserves is about 490,000 (to be 350,000).

In 2007 defence expenditure totalled €2,203m. (€416 per capita), representing 1.2% of GDP.

Army

The Army consists of one armoured training brigade, three readiness brigades, three infantry training brigades, three jaeger regiments, one artillery brigade, three brigade artillery regiments, two air defence regiments, one engineer regiment (including ABC school), three brigade engineer battalions, one signals regiment, four brigade signals battalions and a reserve officer school. Total strength of 37,700 (26,000 conscripts).

Frontier Guard

This comes under the purview of the Ministry of the Interior, but is militarily organized to participate in the defence of the country. It is in charge of border surveillance and border controls. It is also responsible for conducting maritime search and rescue operations. If necessary in the interests of defence capability, the frontier troops or parts thereof may be attached to the Defence Forces. Personnel, 2004, 3,200 (professional) with a potential mobilizational force of 22,000 (to be 8,500).

Navy

The organization of the Navy was changed on 1 July 1998. The Coastal Defence, comprising the coast artillery and naval infantry, was merged into the Navy.

About 50% of the combatant units are kept manned, with the others on short-notice reserve and reactivated on a regular basis. Naval bases exist at Upinniemi (near Helsinki), Turku and Kotka. Naval Infantry mobile troops are trained at Tammisaari. Total personnel strength (2006) was 6,600, of whom 4,300 were conscripts.

Air Force

Personnel (2006), 4,600 (1,500 conscripts). Equipment included 62 F-18 Hornets.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 3% of GDP in 2009, industry 28% and services 69%.

According to the Berlin-based organization Transparency International, Finland ranked equal second in a 2011 survey of countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 9.4 out of 10 in the corruption perceptions index.

Overview

The economy, once based on basic metals and forestry, has evolved to become a leading force in knowledge-based, high-tech production. Heavily reliant on exports, Finland is one of the world's leading information and communications technology (ICT) producers. In 2005–06 Finland was ranked first in the World Economic Forum's global competitiveness report but had dropped to seventh by 2010–11.

The emergence of venture capital financing in the 1990s created opportunities for high-risk technology start-ups. Research and development (R&D) also pushed the economic transformation. Expenditure on R&D has risen significantly since the 1980s. Its share of GDP was 3.9% in 2010, one of the highest in the world. The economy's structural transition began to produce significant results after the Scandinavian banking crisis and four years of negative growth in the period 1990–93. Strong global demand in the ICT sector in the late 1990s helped boost performance. From 1994–2000 real GDP growth averaged a robust 3.9% annually. By 2000 almost a third of Finnish exports were from the ICT sector.

The downturn in the demand for ICT goods slowed real GDP growth from 2001–03 but in 2004 an investment-led recovery pushed annual growth above 4%. Key sectors in the 2004 rebound were electronics, paper, forestry and metals. Even higher growth in 2006 and 2007 reflected a rebound in the paper sector following a labour dispute in 2005, together with buoyant exports to local trading partners and buoyant private consumption.

Growth prior to the 2008 financial crisis was well above the euro-area average but the country experienced the worst recession of any nation in the euro-area in 2009. Exports declined by 20% and there was a large reduction in investment. GDP fell by 8% in 2009 and unemployment rose from 6.5% to over 8%. Fiscal policy shifted to support growth, worsening the budget position. Recovery from the crisis has been slow and the rapidly ageing population presents long-term problems.

Currency

On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Finland at the irrevocable conversion rate of 5.94573 marks to one euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. On the introduction of the euro there was a 'dual circulation' period before the mark ceased to be legal tender on 28 Feb. 2002. Euro banknotes in circulation on 31 Oct. 2010 had a total value of €10.2bn.

Inflation rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
2.6%	1.6%	0.9%	0.2%	0.6%	1.6%	2.5%	4.1%	0.0%	1.2%

Foreign exchange reserves were US$7,002m. in Sept. 2009 and gold reserves were 1.58m. troy oz. Total money supply was €62,585m. in Aug. 2009.

Budget

Revenue and expenditure for the calendar years 2005–09 in €1m:

	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009
Revenue	39,023	40,979	43,212	44,292	47,798
Expenditure	41,247	40,871	43,252	44,923	46,897

Of the total revenue in 2009, 29% derived from value added tax, 22% from income and property tax, 22% from net loans, 11% from excise duties, 4% from other taxes and similar revenue and 12% from miscellaneous sources. Of the total expenditure, 2009, 21% went to health and social security, 13% to education, 6% to agriculture and forestry, 6% to defence, 5% to transport and 49% to other expenditure.

VAT was 23% in 2010 (reduced rates, 13% and 9%).

At the end of Dec. 2009 the central government debt totalled €64,281m. Foreign debt amounted to €45m. at the end of 2006.

Finland's budget deficit in 2010 was 2.5% of GDP (2009, also 2.5%). In 2008 it had a surplus of 4.3%. The required target set by the EU is a budget deficit of no more than 3%.

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
2.3%	1.8%	2.0%	4.1%	2.9%	4.4%	5.3%	1.0%	-8.2%	3.6%

Total GDP was US$238.8bn. in 2010.

Banking and Finance

The central bank is the Bank of Finland (founded in 1811), operating under the guarantee and supervision of parliament. The Bank is a member of the European System of Central Banks. As a member of the euro area, the Bank issues euro banknotes and coins in Finland by permission of the European Central Bank. The Governor is Erkki Liikanen.

The most important groups of banking institutions in 2009 were:

	Number of institutions	Number of branches	Deposits (€1m.)	Loans (€1m.)
Commercial banks	15	530	71,030	100,583
Savings banks	35	166	5,744	5,326
Co-operative banks	263	418	33,611	35,705
Foreign banks	15	57	—	—

The three largest banks are Nordea Bank Finland, Pohjola Bank and Sampo Bank. In 2009, 72% of the population between the ages of 16 and 74 were using online banking (one of the highest percentages of any country).

In 2010 Finland received US$4.3bn. worth of foreign direct investment (down from a record US$12.4bn. in 2007).

There is a stock exchange in Helsinki.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

In 2008, 30.5% of energy consumption came from renewables (wind power, solar power, hydro-electric power, tidal power, geothermal energy and biomass), compared to the European Union average of 10.3%. A target of 38% has been set by the EU for 2020.

Environment

Finland's carbon dioxide emissions in 2009 were the equivalent of 9.7 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked Finland fourth in the world, with 91.4%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 17.0m. kW at the beginning of 2009. Production was 68,711m. kWh. in 2009 (18% hydro-electric). Consumption per capita in 2008 was an estimated 16,420 kWh. In 2009 there were four nuclear reactors, which contributed 33% of production. In May 2002 parliament approved the construction of a fifth reactor, on the island of Olkiluoto, which is scheduled to become operational in 2014.

Water

Finland has abundant surface water and groundwater resources relative to its population and level of consumption. The total groundwater yield is estimated to be 10–30m. cu. metres a day, of which some 6m. is suitable for water supplies. Approximately 15% of this latter figure is made use of at the present time.

Minerals

Notable of the mines are Pyhäsalmi (zinc-copper), Pahtavaara (gold ore), Hitura (nickel) and Keminmaa (chromium). In 2008 the metal content (in tonnes) of the output of zinc ore was 27,800; of copper ore, 13,300; of nickel ore, 4,000; of chromium ore and concentrate, 614,500.

Agriculture

The cultivated area covers only 8% of the land, and of the economically active population 4.8% were employed in agriculture and forestry in 2009. In 2008 there were 2.28m. ha. of arable land. This arable area was divided into 65,802 farms (including 411 farms with under one hectare of arable land). The distribution of this area by the size of the farms was: less than 5 ha. cultivated, 5,401 farms; 5–20 ha., 22,750 farms; 20–50 ha., 23,379 farms; 50–100 ha., 10,952 farms; over 100 ha., 3,320 farms.

Agriculture accounted for 0.9% of exports and 2.8% of imports in 2009.

The principal crops (area in 1,000 ha., yield in 1,000 tonnes) were in 2009:

Crop	Area	Yield
Barley	600.7	2,171.0
Oats	342.6	1,114.7
Wheat	218.3	887.0
Potatoes	26.4	755.3
Hay	86.1	289.7

The total area under cultivation in 2008 was 2,275,282 ha. Approximately 6.6% of all agricultural land is used for organic farming. Production of dairy butter in 2007 was 48,283 tonnes; and of cheese, 94,156 tonnes.

Livestock (2008): pigs, 1,483,000; cattle, 915,000; reindeer, 193,000; horses, 69,000 (including trotting and riding horses, and ponies); poultry, 4,056,000.

Forestry

Forests covered 26.3m. ha. in 2008, or 86.3% of the total land area. The productive forest land covers 20.1m. ha. Timber production in 2009 was 41.4m. cu. metres. Finland is one of the largest producers of roundwood in Europe. Finland's per capita consumption of roundwood is the highest in the world, at 13.7 cu. metres per person in 2008.

Fisheries

The catch in 2007 was 122,355 tonnes, of which 117,857 tonnes came from sea fishing. In 2007 there were 201 food fish production farms in operation, of which 61 were freshwater farms. Their total production amounted to 13,031 tonnes. In addition there were 108 fry-farms and 235 natural food rearers, most of these in freshwater.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Finland in March 2011 were: Nokia, the world's leading mobile phone producer (US$32.1bn.); Fortum, an energy company (US$30.2bn.); and Sampo, an insurance company (US$17.9bn.).

Forests are still Finland's most crucial raw material resource, although the metal and engineering industry has long been Finland's leading branch of manufacturing, both in terms of value added and as an employer. In 2008 there were 28,339 establishments in industry (of which 25,799 were manufacturing concerns) with 420,241 personnel (of whom 400,421 were in manufacturing). Gross value of industrial production in 2008 was €141,417m., of which manufacturing accounted for €132,235m.

Labour

In 2009 the labour force was 2,678,000 (51% males). Of this total, 71.5% of the economically active population worked in services (including 15.9% in trade and restaurants) and 15.4% in manufacturing. In Dec. 2011 unemployment was 7.6%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

At the start of the 1990s a collapse in trade with Russia led to the worst recession in the country's recent history. Today, exports to Russia are about 9% of the total.

Imports and Exports

In 1960 the wood and paper industry dominated exports with 69% of the total, but today the electronics industry/metal and engineering industry sector is the largest export sector.

Imports and exports for calendar years, in €1m.:

	2006	2007	2008	2009

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

At 1 Jan. 2010 there were 78,161 km of public roads, of which 50,987 km were paved. At the end of 2009 there were 3,246,414 registered cars, 111,267 lorries, 332,645 vans and pick-ups, 13,017 buses and coaches and 12,821 special automobiles. Road accidents caused 279 fatalities in 2009.

Rail

In 2009 the total length of the line operated was 5,919 km (3,067 km electrified), all of it owned by the State. The gauge is 1,524 mm. In 2009, 67.6m. passengers and 32.9m. tonnes of freight were carried. There is a metro (21 km) and tram/light rail network (85 km) in Helsinki although extensions to both systems are scheduled to open between 2013–15.

Civil Aviation

The main international airport is at Helsinki (Vantaa), and there are also international airports at Turku, Tampere, Rovaniemi and Oulu. The national carrier is Finnair. Scheduled traffic of Finnish airlines covered 178m. km in 2007. The number of passengers was 11.0m. and the number of passenger-km 22,704m.; the air transport of freight and mail amounted to 508.6m. tonne-km. Helsinki-Vantaa handled 12,611,187 passengers in 2009 (10,238,302 on international flights) and 122,107 tonnes of freight and mail. Oulu is the second busiest airport, handling 688,860 passengers in 2009, and Tampere-Pirkkala the third busiest, with 628,105 in 2009.

Shipping

The total registered mercantile marine in 2009 was 644 vessels of 1,534,000 GRT. In 2009 the total number of vessels arriving in Finland from abroad was 30,238 and the goods discharged amounted to 45.1m. tonnes. The goods loaded for export from Finnish ports amounted to 37.5m. tonnes.

The lakes, rivers and canals are navigable for about 9,541 km. Timber floating has some importance, and there are about 9,149 km of floatable inland waterways. In 2005 bundle floating was about 0.5m. tonnes.

Finland was ranked fourth in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2009-2010 for the quality of its port facilities.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 1,650,000 main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year mobile phone subscribers numbered 6,830,000 (1,287.6 per 1,000 persons). In Aug. 2010 around 99% of Finnish households owned at least one mobile phone. In Nov. 2008 approximately 69% of Finnish households only had a mobile phone and did not have a fixed-line phone at all. The Finnish company Nokia is the world's biggest manufacturer of mobile phones, having a 38% share of the world mobile phone market. It is by far the biggest company in Finland, accounting for 21.7% of the country's GDP in 2005 and more than 30% of the value of its stock exchange. Finland has the lowest rates in Europe for both fixed and mobile phone calls.

There were 2.6m. PCs in use in 2005 (499.5 per 1,000 persons) and 4.4m. internet users in 2008. In Dec. 2010 there were 84.8 wireless broadband subscribers per 100 inhabitants and 28.6 fixed broadband subscribers per 100.

According to the World Economic Forum's Global Information Technology Report 2010-11 Finland is ranked third in the world in exploiting global information technology developments.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The lowest court of justice is the District Court. In most civil cases a District Court has a quorum of three legally qualified members. In criminal cases as well as in some cases related to family law the District Court has a quorum with a chair and three lay judges. In the preliminary preparation of a civil case and in a criminal case concerning a minor offence, a District Court is composed of the chair only. From the District Court an appeal lies to the courts of appeal in Turku, Vaasa, Kuopio, Helsinki, Kouvola and Rovaniemi. The Supreme Court sits in Helsinki. Appeals from the decisions of administrative authorities are in the final instance decided by the Supreme Administrative Court, also in Helsinki. Judges can be removed only by judicial sentence. Two functionaries, the Chancellor of Justice and the Ombudsman or Solicitor-General, exercise control over the administration of justice. The former acts also as counsel and public prosecutor for the government; the latter is appointed by Parliament.

At the end of 2008 the daily average number of prisoners was 3,526 of which 232 were women. The number of convictions in 2007 was 323,751, of which 26,671 carried a penalty of imprisonment. 10,423 of the prison sentences were unconditional.

Education

Number of institutions, teachers and students (2008):

Primary and Secondary Education

	Number of institutions	Teachers <sup>1</sup>	Students <sup>2</sup>
First-level Education (Lower sections of the comprehensive schools, grades I-VI)	3,580	53,157	364,223 <sup>2</sup>

Tertiary Education

Vocational education at tertiary education level was provided for 122 students in 2008. In 2008 polytechnic education was provided at 28 polytechnics with 132,501 students and 5,971 teachers (2007). In 2008, 26.9% of the population aged 15 years or over had been through tertiary education.

Adult Education

Adult education provided by educational institutions in 2008:

Type of institution	Participants <sup>1</sup>
General education institutions <sup>2</sup>	1,681,300
Vocational education institutions	411,900
Permanent polytechnics	76,700
Universities <sup>3</sup>	160,300
Summer universities	97,800
	2,428,000

In 2007 public expenditure on education came to 5.9% of GDP and 12.5% of total government spending.

The adult literacy rate in 2008 was almost 100%.

According to the OECD's 2009 PISA (Programme for International Student Assessment) study, 15-year-olds in Finland rank first in science and second in mathematics and reading among OECD countries. The three-yearly study compares educational achievement of pupils in the major industrialized countries. Although education is only compulsory until 16, 93% of pupils stay on at school to 18.

Health

In 2008 there were 19,114 physicians, 4,718 dentists and 30,097 hospital beds. In 2007, 26% of males and 17% of females aged 15 and over smoked on a daily basis. The average Finn aged 15 or over drank 10.5 litres of alcohol in 2007.

In 2008 Finland spent 8.4% of its GDP on health.

Welfare

The Social Insurance Institution administers old-age pensions (to all persons over 65 years of age and disabled younger persons) and health insurance. There is also a system of special assistance for resident immigrants over 65. The universal old-age pension paid between €11.38 and €510.80 per month in 2006. An additional system of compulsory old-age pensions paid for by employers is in force and works through the Central Pension Security Institute. Reforms of 2005 provided for pensions to be linked to life expectancy, early retirement to be phased out and the pension age to rise to 63. Incentives to encourage workers to carry on after retirement age are a bid to counter the problems posed by an ageing population and a shortage of younger workers. Pensioners are predicted to account for 25% of the population by 2020. Systems for other public aid are administered by the communes and supervised by the National Social Board and the Ministry of Social Affairs and Health.

The total cost of social security amounted to €48,572m. in 2008. Of this €22,248m. (46%) was spent on old age and disability, €12,654m. (26%) on health, €7,005m. (14%) on family allowances and child welfare, €3,346m. (7%) on unemployment and €3,317m. (7%) on general welfare purposes and administration. Out of the total expenditure, 38.4% was financed by employers, 25.1% by the State, 18.6% by local authorities, 11.2% by the insured and 6.7% by property income.

RELIGION

Liberty of conscience is guaranteed to members of all religions. National churches are the Lutheran National Church and the Greek Orthodox Church of Finland. The Lutheran Church is divided into nine dioceses (Turku being the archiepiscopal see) and some 460 parishes. The Greek Orthodox Church is divided into three bishoprics (Kuopio being the archiepiscopal see) and 27 parishes, in addition to which there are a monastery and a convent. Percentage of the total population at the end of 2009: Lutherans, 79.9; Greek Orthodox, 1.1; others, 1.3; not members of any religion, 17.7.

World Heritage Sites

There are seven UNESCO sites in Finland: Old Rauma harbour (inscribed in 1991); the sea fortress of Suomenlinna (1991); the old church of Petäjävesi (1994); Verla groundwood and board mill (1996); the Bronze Age burial site of Sammallahtenmäki (1999); the Kvarken Archipelago and High Coast (2000 and 2006), shared with Sweden; and the Struve Geodetic Arc (2005). The Arc is a chain of survey triangulations spanning from Norway to the Black Sea that helped establish the exact shape and size of the earth and is shared with nine other countries.

Press

Finland has 53 newspapers that are published four to seven times a week, nine of which are in Swedish, and 151 with one to three issues per week. The total circulation of all newspapers is 3.2m. There are 4,801 registered periodicals with a total circulation of over 15m. The bestselling newspapers in 2008 were Helsingin Sanomat (average daily circulation, 412,421 copies), Ilta-Sanomat (161,615) and Aamulehti (139,130). In 2008 a total of 13,419 book titles were published.

Tourism

There were 2,220,267 foreign tourists in 2009; the income from tourism was €2,022m. and the expenses were €3,136m.

Major international tourist attractions include Uspensky Cathedral, Helsinki Cathedral and Suomenlinna (all in Helsinki). Helsinki's churches and Santa Park in Rovaniemi are particularly popular among foreigners, who account for the majority of their visitors.

Festivals

Major music festivals include the Lakeside Blues Festival in Järvenpää, Pori Jazz Festival, Kaustinen Folk Music Festival, Ankkarock in Vantaa, Provinssirock in Seinäjoki, Ruisrock on the island of Ruissalo and Savonlinna Opera Festival. Other main festivals are the Helsinki Festival Week, the Maritime Festival in Kotka, Tampere Theatre Festival and Seinäjoki's Tango Festival.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Dordogne has evidence of Mousterian industry from 40,000 BC and of Cro-Magnon man of the Upper Paleolithic period. With the end of the Ice Age, agricultural settlement appeared around 7000 BC. By the beginning of the 8th century BC, Celtic tribes from Central Europe were inhabiting the Rhône valley of Gaul (now France) while the Greeks were building cities such as Massalia (Marseille) along the southern coast. The Romans crossed the Alps into southern France in 121 BC and Gaul was conquered by Julius Caesar in 52 BC. The country benefited from protected trade routes and from Roman infrastructure, speech and government. Roman rule was consolidated by the reign of Augustus at the end of the 1st century AD. But the Empire was threatened by Germanic ('barbarian') incursions from the north and east. Many of these tribes were assimilated as foederati (treaty nations) into the Gallo-Roman Empire but they assumed authority in their domains as Roman government receded in the 4th and 5th centuries. After the repulse of Attila and his Huns in 451, the Salian Franks emerged as the strongest of the Germanic tribes—their leader, Merovius, was the progenitor of the Merovingian dynasty that ruled France until the beginning of the 8th century.

On the death of Merovius' grandson, Clovis, the kingdom was divided between his three sons. The Merovingians remained in power for two centuries but their rule, weakened by internecine warfare, gave way to the Carolingian dynasty in 751. Having extended his empire over Germany and Italy, Charlemagne was crowned emperor of the West by the Pope in 800. He moved his seat of government to Aix-la-Chapelle (Aachen) where he presided over a revival of learning and education.

Charlemagne died in 814 and his empire was fought over by his grandsons before the 843 Treaty of Verdun officially split the territories. Charles le Chauve (823–77) inherited the western territories, an area roughly corresponding to modern day France. But by 912 Vikings had settled in Rouen, having laid siege to Paris. Further threats came from Muslim Saracens in the south and Hungarian Magyars in the east. The Carolingians struggled to keep their power for another century but they were weakened by unrest and disunity. In 987 Hugh Capet, the duke of the Franks, ousted the legitimate claimant to the throne, Charles of Lorraine, and appointed himself king. To control a diverse country, power was centralized on Paris.

Between 1150 and 1300 France underwent a period of economic expansion, though the 12th century also saw the Holy Land crusades and the expulsion of the Jews, followed by the bloody Albigensian Crusade against the heretical Cathars of Languedoc in 1209. The last Capetian king, Charles IV, died in 1328 (leaving only daughters) and the Capetian dynasty gave way to the House of Valois. However, King Edward III of England disputed Philippe de Valois' claim to the French throne, prompting the start of the Hundred Years War (1337–1453). With his son the Black Prince, Edward III's successful invasion led to the Treaty of Brétigny in 1360, which ceded Aquitaine to England. Edward renounced all claims to the French throne but the warfare continued until Charles V (ruled 1364–80) won back most of their territories.

In 1415 Henry V of England, with the backing of the Burgundians, defeated the French at Agincourt. He married the daughter of Charles IV and obtained the right of succession to the French throne. The war continued between his son Henry VI and the dauphin Charles (VI) who enlisted the help of Joan of Arc (Jeanne d'Arc). After leading a series of successful campaigns against the English, she was captured, tried as a heretic by a court of Burgundian ecclesiastics and burnt at the stake in Rouen in 1431. Nevertheless, French successes continued and eventually the English were driven from all their French possessions except Calais.

Rising Power

The reign of Louis XI (1461–83) saw a change from a medieval social system to a more modern state. Provincial governments were set up in major cities and nobles wielding independent power were crushed. In 1494 Charles VIII, encouraged to pursue his claim to the crown of Naples by Ludovico Sforza, duke of Milan, invaded Italy. The speed of his advance shocked the Italian cities into an alliance to expel his army. The appearance of Spanish power in Naples began the Habsburg-Valois wars that used Italy as a battlefield until the Peace of Cateau-Cambrésis in 1559. François I is considered the first Renaissance French king. He patronized some of Italy's greatest artists, commissioning palaces such as the Château de Chambord and rebuilding the Louvre and Château de Fontainebleau. To finance his cultural interests and his military failures in Italy—he was captured by Spanish forces at the Battle of Pavia in 1525—François imposed huge tax rises, severely straining the French economy.

Between 1562–98 the Wars of Religion raged in France between the Protestant Huguenots and the Spanish-supported Catholic League. The civil war reached its peak with the 1572 St Bartholomew's Day massacre, in which 20,000 Huguenots were killed, before ending with Henry of Navarre's conversion to Catholicism. He did not abandon his Huguenot roots, however, and the 1598 Edict of Nantes guaranteed Protestants political and religious rights.

After Henry's assassination in 1610 the young Louis XIII took the throne with his mother, Marie de Médicis, acting as regent. Between 1624–42 Cardinal Richelieu held the reins of government and set about establishing absolute royal power in France, with the suppression of Protestant influences. This policy was continued for the next twenty years by his successor Cardinal Mazarin. On Mazarin's death Louis XIV (1643–1715) was able to govern alone. Louis, the 'Sun King', attempted to impose a centralized absolutism, gathering the aristocracy around him and thus denying it traditional regional power. The king formally revoked the Edict of Nantes, Protestant churches were destroyed and religious minorities persecuted. His successor, Louis XV, married Maria, the daughter of the deposed king of Poland, who drew France into the War of the Polish Succession. Further costly military disasters followed including the Seven Years' War, in which France lost her colonies in India, North America and the West Indies.

When Louis XVI succeeded to the throne in 1774, financial crises caused by prolonged military failure coupled with a succession of bad harvests led to grain riots in 1787–88 in Paris, Lyon, Nantes and Grenoble. The subsequent reforms were rejected by the aristocracy (les privilégiés), the upper ranks of the clergy (the First Estate) and the majority of the nobility (the Second Estate), who feared a reduction in their tax-levying privileges. Meanwhile, Louis XVI supported the American colonies in their struggle for independence from Britain, a policy that was financially disastrous and also did much to disseminate revolutionary and democratic ideals in France.

Revolution

The French Revolution erupted in 1789 when the Third Estate (the non-priviliégiés) assumed power in the National Assembly and overthrew the government. Riots broke out across France, culminating in the storming of the Bastille in Paris on 14 July 1789. A new legislative assembly was formed and although the moderate Girondins held power at the start, the more extreme followers of Danton, Robespierre and Marat—the Jacobins—seized power and in 1792 declared a republic.

On 21 Jan. 1793 Louis XVI was guillotined in the Place de la Révolution. After his death a reign of terror led by Maximilien Robespierre followed in which thousands of people were guillotined. Despite the efforts of the royalists to re-establish a monarchy, in 1795 the 'Directory of Five' was appointed to run the country. As one of these five, Paul Barras had been responsible for the promotion of a young Corsican, Napoleon Bonaparte, to the rank of general. Over four years, Napoleon commanded the French troops in a series of successful campaigns against the Austrians and the British. On his return to Paris, he found the Directory in disarray and in 1799 overthrew the government and declared himself first consul. Napoleon immediately faced a hostile coalition of England, Austria and Russia. In 1805 he defeated Austria and Russia at the Battle of Austerlitz but the British naval victory at the Battle of Trafalgar earlier the same year gave Britain maritime supremacy. Napoleon's best troops were bogged down supporting his brother Joseph in the Peninsula War in Spain and his success at Borodino, Russia in 1812 was followed by the army's forced retreat from Moscow during the harsh winter months. The Prussian army retaliated at Leipzig, entered France and forced the surrender of Paris in March 1814. Napoleon abdicated at Fontainebleau on 20 April 1814 and retired to Elba. But when Louis XVIII returned from exile in England later that year, Napoleon left Elba to attempt to recover his empire. He marched north towards Paris, gathering support on the way. But his defeat in 1815 at Waterloo by the Allies led by the duke of Wellington ended his 'Hundred Days' reign. He was exiled to the island of St Helena where he died in 1821.

Second Empire

The monarchy was restored with the Bourbon family. A revolution in 1830 brought Louis Philippe, son of the duke of Orléans, to the throne as a constitutional monarch. This 'July Monarchy' was overthrown in 1848 and superseded by the Second Republic, with Louis Napoleon (nephew of Napoleon I) elected president. In 1852 he took the title of Emperor Napoleon III, and hence began the Second Empire. However, the defeat of France in the Franco-Prussian War (1870–71) led to Napoleon being deposed and the proclamation of the Third Republic in 1870. After a four-month siege, Paris capitulated in Jan. 1871. By Sept. 1873 the occupying troops had gone but Alsace and Lorraine had been lost and French politics, embittered by the Dreyfus Affair (1894–1906), in which forged evidence resulted in a Jewish general staff captain being falsely imprisoned for spying, went from crisis to crisis.

An entente cordiale was established between France and Britain in 1904, putting an end to colonial rivalry and paving the way for future co-operation. In 1905 the Church was separated from the State, a measure to counteract ecclesiastical influence over education.

European War

Although Paris was saved from occupation during the First World War, ten departments were overrun and four long years of trench warfare followed. The tide began to turn against Germany in 1916 with the Battle of the Somme, the French stand at Verdun and the arrival of the Americans in 1917; the Armistice was finally signed on 11 Nov. 1918. By the end of the war France had lost a total of 1.3m. men. The main thrust of France's efforts to rebuild her defences after the First World War was concentrated on the 'Maginot Line'—a supposedly impregnable barrier running along the German frontier, but which was sidestepped by the advancing German forces in 1939. Demoralized French troops, unable to resist the German advance, were forced to retreat towards Dunkerque (Dunkirk). The French government capitulated and a pro-German government presided over by Marshal Pétain (a hero of the Battle of Verdun) was established at Vichy. A truce was signed with Germany agreeing German occupation in the northern third of the country and collaborationist government control in the south. Gen. Charles de Gaulle established the Forces Françaises Libres (Free French Forces) and declared the Comité National Français to be the true French government-in-exile with its headquarters first in London and then in Algiers. With help from the Resistance in France, in Aug. 1944 de Gaulle returned at the head of the allied armies and liberated Paris. An armistice with Germany was signed in March 1945.

In Oct. 1946 the Fourth Republic, institutionally similar to the Third Republic, was established but during prolonged wrangling over the form of the new constitution Gen. de Gaulle retired. Despite frequent changes of government and defeat in Indo-China, France achieved economic recovery. In 1957 a European common market was established of which France, West Germany, Italy and the Benelux countries were founder members.

Fifth Republic

Between 1954–62 France was embroiled in a war of independence with Algeria that split public and political opinion. In 1958 de Gaulle prepared a new constitution and was persuaded to return first as prime minister and then, by popular election, as the first president of the newly declared Fifth Republic. The new constitution greatly enhanced the power of the president. The politics of the early Fifth Republic was dominated by the centre-right, with a succession of parties (including the Union of Democrats for the Republic, Union of Democrats for the V Republic, Union for the New Republic, Union for the French Republic-Democratic Union of Labour) working to a Gaullist agenda. There was an emphasis on national independence, government involvement in the economy and broadly conservative social policies.

In 1962 Algeria gained independence. De Gaulle continued to preside over a period of relative stability and economic growth but serious student riots in Paris in 1968 precipitated reforms to the authoritarian system of education. The students were joined by workers wanting better pay and conditions. The National Assembly was dissolved and, although the Gaullists were returned to power in the new election, de Gaulle's referendum proposing decentralization was defeated and in 1969 he resigned. Georges Pompidou, who had been de Gaulle's prime minister, succeeded him. Pompidou attempted to consolidate de Gaulle's legacy by concentrating on economic reform. When he died in office in 1974 he was succeeded by Valéry Giscard d'Estaing who continued right-wing policies, eventually precipitating a swing to the left. In 1981 the Socialist leader François Mitterrand was elected president. He immediately implemented widespread social reforms but a deep recession in 1983 forced him to take a series of unpopular deflationary measures.

When the ailing Mitterrand's term of office expired in 1995, Jacques Chirac was elected president with Alain Juppé as prime minister. After the Socialists won an assembly majority in 1997, Juppé resigned making way for the Socialist leader Lionel Jospin to take over as prime minister. The right and leftwing cohabitation lasted five years until Jospin retired after a disastrous result in the first round presidential elections. Chirac's second electoral success was consolidated by the moderate right taking an assembly majority in the 2002 legislative elections.

In Oct. 2005 the death of two youths of African origin led to several days of rioting in immigrant ghettos, prompting the government to declare a state of emergency, which was lifted in Jan. 2006. In May 2007 Nicolas Sarkozy was elected president. In 2009 he led France back into NATO's integrated military command after a 43-year absence. François Hollande was elected president in May 2012 to end 17 years of centre-right rule.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

France is bounded in the north by the English Channel (La Manche), northeast by Belgium and Luxembourg, east by Germany, Switzerland and Italy, south by the Mediterranean (with Monaco as a coastal enclave), southwest by Spain and Andorra, and west by the Atlantic Ocean. The total area of metropolitan France is 543,965 sq. km. Paris is the most populous agglomeration in Europe, with a population of over 10.1m. More than 14% of the population of Paris are foreign and 19% are foreign born.

The population was 58,518,395 at the census of 1999 and 62,465,709 on 1 Jan. 2009 (density, 114.9 persons per sq. km).

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 64.41m.

In 2005, 76.7% of the population lived in urban areas.

The growth of the population has been as follows:

Census	Population	Census	Population	Census	Population
1801	27,349,003	1954	42,777,174	1999	58,518,395
1861	37,386,313	1962	46,519,997	2006 <sup>1</sup>	61,399,733

In 2004 there were 4.96m. people of foreign extraction in France (8.1% of the population). The largest groups of foreigners with residence permits in 2004 were: Algerians (679,000), Moroccans (625,000) and Portuguese (567,000). France's Muslim population, at an estimated 5m., is the highest in Europe.

Controls on illegal immigration were tightened in July 1991. Automatic right to citizenship for those born on French soil was restored in 1997 by the new left-wing coalition government. New immigration legislation, which came into force in 1998, brought in harsher penalties for organized traffic in illegal immigrants and extended asylum laws to include people whose lives are at risk from non-state as well as state groups. It also extended nationality at the age of 18 to those born in France of non-French parents, provided they have lived a minimum of five years in France since the age of 11.

The areas, recorded populations and chief towns of the 22 metropolitan regions in Jan. 2009 were as follows:

Regions	Area (sq. km)	Population	Chief town
Alsace	8,280	1,843,053	Strasbourg

France (including its overseas territories) has nine national parks, 45 regional nature parks and 164 national nature reserves.

Languages

The official language is French. Breton and Basque are spoken in their regions. The Toubon legislation of 1994 seeks to restrict the use of foreign words in official communications, broadcasting and advertisements (a previous such decree dated from 1975). The Constitutional Court has since ruled that imposing such restrictions on private citizens would infringe their freedom of expression.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years (mainland France):

	Births	Deaths	Marriages	Divorces
2003	761,464	552,339	275,963	125,175
2004	767,816	509,429	271,598	131,335
2005	774,355	527,533	276,303	152,020
2006	796,896	516,416	267,260	135,910
2007	785,985	521,016	267,194	131,316
2008	796,044	532,131	258,739	129,379

Live birth rate (2008) was 12.8 per 1,000 population; death rate, 8.5; marriage rate, 4.2; divorce rate, 2.1. 50.7% of births in 2007 were outside marriage. In 2006 the average age at first marriage was 31.3 years for males and 29.3 years for females. Abortions were legalized in 1975; there were an estimated 209,700 in 2006. Life expectancy at birth, 2006, 77.2 years for males and 84.2 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 2000–05, 0.6%. In 2005 the suicide rate per 100,000 population was 17.6 (males, 26.4; females, 9.2). Infant mortality, 2007, 3.6 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 1.9 births per woman. In 2008 France received 35,404 asylum applications (59,768 in 2003), the second highest total after the USA.

CLIMATE

The northwest has a moderate maritime climate, with small temperature range and abundant rainfall; inland, rainfall becomes more seasonal, with a summer maximum, and the annual range of temperature increases. Southern France has a Mediterranean climate, with mild moist winters and hot dry summers. Eastern France has a continental climate and a rainfall maximum in summer, with thunderstorms prevalent. Paris, Jan. 37°F (3°C), July 64°F (18°C). Annual rainfall 22.9" (573 mm). Bordeaux, Jan. 41°F (5°C), July 68°F (20°C). Annual rainfall 31.4" (786 mm). Lyon, Jan. 37°F (3°C), July 68°F (20°C). Annual rainfall 31.8" (794 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution of the Fifth Republic, superseding that of 1946, came into force on 4 Oct. 1958. It consists of a preamble, dealing with the Rights of Man, and 89 articles.

France is a decentralized republic, indivisible, secular, democratic and social; all citizens are equal before the law (Art. 1). National sovereignty resides with the people, who exercise it through their representatives and by referendums (Art. 3). Constitutional reforms of July 1995 widened the range of issues on which referendums may be called. Political parties carry out their activities freely, but must respect the principles of national sovereignty and democracy (Art. 4).

A constitutional amendment of 4 Aug. 1995 deleted all references to the 'community' (communauté) between France and her overseas possessions, representing an important step towards the constitutional dismantling of the former French colonial empire.

The head of state is the President, who sees that the Constitution is respected; ensures the regular functioning of the public authorities, as well as the continuity of the state; is the protector of national independence and territorial integrity (Art. 5). As a result of a referendum held on 24 Sept. 2000 the President is elected for five years by direct universal suffrage (Art. 6). Previously the term of office had been seven years. The President appoints (and dismisses) a Prime Minister and, on the latter's advice, appoints and dismisses the other members of the government (Council of Ministers) (Art. 8); presides over the Council of Ministers (Art. 9); may dissolve the National Assembly, after consultation with the Prime Minister and the Presidents of the two Houses (Art. 12); appoints to the civil and military offices of the state (Art. 13). In times of crisis, the President may take such emergency powers as the circumstances demand; the National Assembly cannot be dissolved during such a period (Art. 16).

The annual salary of the president is €253,600.

Parliament consists of the National Assembly and the Senate. The National Assembly is elected by direct suffrage by the second ballot system (by which candidates winning 50% or more of the vote in their constituencies are elected, candidates winning less than 12.5% are eliminated and other candidates go on to a second round of voting); the Senate is elected by indirect suffrage (Art. 24). Since 1996 the National Assembly has convened for an annual nine-month session. It comprises 577 deputies, elected by a two-ballot system for a five-year term from single-member constituencies (including 11 constituencies for French residents abroad for the June 2012 election), and may be dissolved by the President.

The Senate comprises 348 senators (343 prior to the elections of Sept. 2011) elected for six-year terms (one-half every three years) by an electoral college in each Department or overseas dependency, made up of all members of the Departmental Council or its equivalent in overseas dependencies, together with all members of Municipal Councils within that area. The President of the Senate deputizes for the President of the Republic in the event of the latter's incapacity. Senate elections were last held on 25 Sept. 2011.

The Constitutional Council is composed of nine members whose term of office is nine years (non-renewable), one-third every three years; three are appointed by the President of the Republic, three by the President of the National Assembly, three by the President of the Senate; in addition, former Presidents of the Republic are, by right, life members of the Constitutional Council (Art. 56). It oversees the fairness of the elections of the President (Art. 58) and Parliament (Art. 59), and of referendums (Art. 60), and acts as a guardian of the Constitution (Art. 61). Its President is Jean-Louis Debré (appointed 5 March 2007).

The Economic, Social and Environmental Council advises on Government and Private Members' Bills (Art. 69). It comprises representatives of employers', workers' and farmers' organizations in each Department and Overseas Territory.

Constitutional amendments of 25 March 2003 and 1 March 2005 added provisions for European Union arrest warrants and allowed for a referendum on the European Union constitution.

Local Government

The traditional system of centralized government was overhauled in 1982 to provide local government with greater power. There are three basic layers of local government: régions (of which there are 22), départements (of which there are 96) and communes (which number about 36,000). Paris, Lyon and Marseille each have special status.

Régions—Mainland France comprises 22 régions, which are principally responsible for economic development, town and country planning and education. Government is through regional councils, with members elected every six years. The council works with an economic and social committee, which includes representatives from business and commerce, trade unions, voluntary bodies and other organizations. The council elects a president every three years.

Départements—Government at the department level is principally concerned with health and social welfare, rural capital works, highways and the administration of colleges. A prefect, appointed by the government, oversees the work of the department administration. Decision-making rests with a general council, with members elected every six years. Each department is divided into cantons (of which there are around 4,000 in France) to serve as electoral constituencies. The council elects a chairman who holds executive power.

Communes—These municipalities can vary greatly in size. Around 80% of communes have fewer than 1,000 citizens. As a result, smaller communes will often group themselves together, either as urban communities (communautés urbaines) or as associations called syndicats intercommunaux. Municipal government consists of a decision-making municipal council and a mayor, elected by the council, who wields executive power and also acts as the state's representative. The size of a municipal council is dependent on the size of the commune and members are elected every six years. The council oversees management in areas such as schools and the environment. In addition, the mayor has jurisdiction in security, public health and crime, as well as responsibility for registering births, deaths and marriages.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the first round of presidential elections on 22 April 2012 François Hollande, the Socialist Party candidate, gained the largest number of votes (28.63% of those cast) against nine opponents.

His nearest rivals were the incumbent president and candidate of the Union for a Popular Movement, Nicolas Sarkozy, who came second with 27.18% of votes cast, and the National Front candidate Marine Le Pen, with 17.90%. In the second round of voting, held on 6 May 2012, Hollande was elected president with 51.63% of votes cast against 48.37% for Sarkozy. Turnout was 80.3% in the second round (79.5% in the first round).

Elections to the National Assembly were held on 10 and 17 June 2007. The Union for a Popular Movement (UMP) won a slightly reduced majority, gaining 314 of the 577 available seats; the Socialist Party (PS), 185; the New Centre (NC), 22; the French Communist Party (PCF), 15; the Left Radical Party (PRG), 7; the Greens, 4; the Democratic Movement (MoDem), 3; the Movement for France (MPF), 2; and others, 22. A centrist 'Presidential Majority' grouping including the UMP, the New Centre and the Movement for France was formed following the election, giving Sarkozy the parliamentary support of 345 deputies. Only 107 of the 577 deputies elected in June 2007 were women.

Following the indirect election held on 25 Sept. 2011, the Senate was composed of (by group, including affiliates): the Socialist Party, 140; Union for a Popular Movement, 132; the Centrist Group, 31; Républiqueain, Communiste et Citoyen (RCC), 21; Democratic and Social European Rally, 16; unattached, 8. In Oct. 2011 Jean-Pierre Bel (PS) was elected President of the Senate for a three-year term. He is the first left-of-centre Senate President since the Fifth Republic was founded in 1958.

Parliamentary elections were scheduled to take place on 10 and 17 June 2012.

European Parliament

France has 72 (78 in 2004) representatives. At the June 2009 elections turnout was 40.6% (42.8% in 2004). The UMP won 29 seats with 27.8% of votes cast (political affiliation in European Parliament: European People's Party); PS 14 with 16.5% (Progressive Alliance of Socialists and Democrats); Europe Ecology 14 with 16.3% (Greens/European Free Alliance); MoDem, 6 with 8.4% (Alliance of Liberals and Democrats for Europe); Front de Gauche, 4 with 6.0% (European United Left/Nordic Green Left); Front National, 3 with 6.3% (non-attached); Libertas, 1 with 4.6% (Europe of Freedom and Democracy); Alliance des Outre-mers, 1 with 0.4% (European United Left/Nordic Green Left).

Introduction

François Hollande was elected the 24th president of the French Republic in May 2012. A Socialist Party veteran, Hollande's election returned the Left to the Élysée Palace for the first time since his one-time mentor, François Mitterrand, departed office in 1995. Renowned for his understated manner and dry wit, Hollande led the Socialist Party from 1997–2008 but had never served in a ministerial role.

Early Life

François Hollande was born on 12 Aug. 1954 in Rouen, Normandy. The son of a social worker and a doctor, he attended the Paris Institute of Political Studies ('Sciences Po') before continuing his studies at the HEC Paris business school. In 1978 he won a place at the École Nationale d'Administration (ENA), the elite graduate school for those aspiring to high office.

On leaving the ENA in 1980, Hollande joined François Mitterrand's second presidential election campaign. When Mitterrand was sworn in the following year as France's first socialist president under the Fifth Republic, Hollande was appointed an economic adviser. During his time at the Élysée Palace Hollande worked as chief of staff to the foreign minister, Roland Dumas, who would later give influential support to Hollande's run to become the Socialist Party's presidential candidate.

In 1988 Hollande was elected to the National Assembly as the representative for Corrèze, a rural department in south-central France. He served as mayor of the department's capital, Tulle, from 2001 until 2008. Corrèze was regarded as a power base for Jacques Chirac, the nemesis of the French Left, and Hollande's ability to build popularity there was considered a significant achievement.

Chirac's decision to call a snap parliamentary election in 1997 saw Lionel Jospin installed as prime minister, with Hollande selected to succeed him as leader of the Socialist Party. Hollande's long-term partner, Ségolène Royal—with whom he has four children—was appointed minister of schools by Jospin. Despite not being a member of the cabinet, Hollande was a close adviser to the premier at the same time as overseeing a programme of modernization in the Socialist Party comparable to that undertaken by the British Labour Party and the German Social Democrats.

In 2002 Jospin ran for the presidency, only to be defeated in the first round by the far-right candidate, Jean-Marie Le Pen. A committed pro-European, Hollande went on to secure his party's support for a 'yes' vote in the 2005 referendum to ratify the European Constitutional Treaty, although the electorate rejected the treaty. In 2007 Ségolène Royal stood as the Socialist Party's presidential candidate but was defeated by Nicolas Sarkozy. Hollande and Royal announced the end of their relationship soon afterwards. In 2008 Hollande stepped down as secretary-general of the Socialist Party, to be succeeded by Martine Aubry.

In 2011 the Socialist Party held its first ever open primary to select a presidential candidate. Dominique Strauss-Kahn, previously the strong favourite for the nomination, elected not to stand following his arrest in New York on charges of sexual assault. Hollande, who used the primary campaign to declare his intention to be a 'président normal', defeated Martine Aubry in a second round run-off on 16 Oct. 2011.

The contrast of his low-key approach with the belligerence of the presidential incumbent, Nicolas Sarkozy, was a cornerstone of Hollande's election campaign. In the first round of voting on 22 April 2012 Hollande took 28.6% of the vote, and in the second round on 6 May he defeated Sarkozy, taking 51.6% of the vote.

Career in Office

Hollande's electoral victory was set against the backdrop of the eurozone crisis and growing concern over France's economic health after ratings agency Standard & Poor's stripped it of its triple-A status in Jan. 2012. Hollande has pledged to renegotiate the terms of the 2011 EU treaty setting strict limits on state deficits, arguing that the euro crisis was symptomatic of a wider 'failure of European governance'.

DEFENCE

The President of the Republic is the supreme head of defence policy and exercises command over the Armed Forces. He is the only person empowered to give the order to use nuclear weapons. He is assisted by the Council of Ministers, which studies defence problems, and by the Defence Council and the Restricted Defence Committee, which formulate directives.

Legislation of 1996 inaugurated a wide-ranging reform of the defence system over 1997–2002, with regard to the professionalization of the armed forces (brought about by the ending of military conscription and consequent switch to an all-volunteer defence force), the modification and modernization of equipment and the restructuring of the defence industry. In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$65,675m. (equivalent to US$1,061 per capita), ensuring France overtook the UK as the country with the world's third highest defence expenditure. Defence spending as a proportion of GDP has fallen from 3.9% in 1985 to 2.3% in 2008.

In Nov. 2010 France and the UK signed a Defence and Security Cooperation Treaty providing for the creation of a rapid reaction force, with troops from both nations called up as required after a joint political decision. Aircraft carriers may be jointly used under certain circumstances and there will be joint training exercises, pooling of resources for the maintenance and logistics of the A400M transport aircraft, and joint work on several other projects. A separate Joint Radiographic/Hydrodynamics Facilities treaty will see the sharing of testing facilities at atomic weapons establishments in France (Valduc) and the UK (Aldermaston), and the development of a new joint hydrodynamic facility.

France rejoined NATO as a full member in April 2009, having withdrawn from its integrated military structure in 1966. In 2009 French military personnel were stationed in a number of countries outside France, including Afghanistan, Chad, Côte d'Ivoire, Djibouti, Kosovo and Lebanon. President Sarkozy announced in Jan. 2012 that all French troops would be withdrawn from Afghanistan by the end of 2013.

Conscription was for ten months, but France officially ended its military draft on 27 June 2001 with a reprieve granted to all conscripts (barring those serving in civil positions) on 30 Nov. 2001.

Nuclear Weapons

Having carried out its first test in 1960, there have been 210 tests in all. The last French test was in 1996 (this compares with the last UK test in 1991 and the last US test in 1993). The nuclear arsenal consisted of approximately 300 warheads in Jan. 2011 according to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute. In 2008 France announced a 33% reduction in the airborne component of its nuclear forces.

Army

The Army comprises the Logistic Force (CFLT), based in Monthléry with two logistic brigades, and the Land Force Command (CFAT), based in Lille. Apart from the Franco-German brigade, there are 13 brigades, each made up of between four and seven battalions, including one airmobile brigade.

Personnel numbered (2006) 133,500 including 14,700 marines and a Foreign Legion of 7,700. There were 11,350 army reservists in 2006. The 1997–2002 Programming Act provided for the following force at the end of the transitional period: 16,000 officers, 50,000 NCOs, 66,500 army enlistees, 5,500 volunteers, 34,000 civilians and 30,000 reservists. Equipment levels in 2006 included 926 main battle tanks and 393 helicopters.

Gendarmerie

The paramilitary police force exists to ensure public security and maintain law and order, as well as participate in the operational defence of French territory as part of the armed forces. On 1 Jan. 2009 budgetary responsibility for the Gendarmerie was transferred from the ministry of defence to the ministry of the interior. It consisted in 2006 of 102,322 personnel including 1,953 civilians. It comprises a territorial force of 66,537 personnel throughout the country, a mobile force of 16,859 personnel and specialized formations including the Republican Guard, the Air Force and Naval Gendarmeries, and an anti-terrorist unit.

Navy

The missions of the Navy are to provide the prime element of the French independent nuclear deterrent through its force of strategic submarines; to assure the security of the French offshore zones; to contribute to NATO's missions; and to provide on-station and deployment forces overseas in support of French territorial interests and UN commitments. French territorial seas and economic zones are organized into two maritime districts (with headquarters in Brest and Toulon).

The strategic deterrent force comprises four nuclear-powered strategic-missile submarines of the Triomphant class (Le Triomphant, Le Téméraire, Le Vigilant and Le Terrible, which entered service in 1997, 1999, 2004 and 2010 respectively).

The principal surface ship is the 40,000-tonne nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Charles de Gaulle, which was launched at Brest in 1994 and commissioned in May 2001. There is one cruiser, the Jeanne d'Arc, completed in 1964 and used in peacetime as a training vessel. Other surface combatants include 13 destroyers and 20 frigates. There are also six Rubis class nuclear-powered submarines.

The naval air arm, Aviation Navale, numbers some 6,400 personnel. Operational aircraft include Super-Étendard nuclear-capable strike aircraft, Étendard reconnaissance aircraft and maritime Rafale combat aircraft. A small Marine force of 1,550 Fusiliers Marins provides assault groups.

Personnel in 2006 numbered 43,995, including 10,265 civilians. There were 6,000 reserves in 2006.

Air Force

Created in 1934, the Air Force was reorganized in June 1994. The Conventional Forces in Europe (CFE) Agreement imposes a ceiling of 800 combat aircraft. In 2006 there were 304 combat aircraft, 157 transport aircraft and 342 aircraft for training purposes.

Personnel (2006) 63,600. Air Force reserves in 2006 numbered 4,300.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

At a referendum in Sept. 1992 to approve the ratification of the Maastricht treaty on European union of 7 Feb. 1992, 12,967,498 votes (50.8%) were cast for and 12,550,651 (49.2%) against. On 29 May 2005 France became the first European Union member to reject the proposed EU constitution, with 54.67% of votes cast in a referendum against the constitution and only 45.33% in favour.

France is the focus of the Communauté Francophone (French-speaking Community) which formally links France with many of its former colonies in Africa. A wide range of agreements, both with members of the Community and with other French-speaking countries, extend to economic and technical matters, and in particular to the disbursement of overseas aid.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 2% of GDP in 2008, industry 20% and services 78%.

Overview

France enjoys high per capita income but GDP growth has lagged behind other major European economies. Growth averaged 2% from 2003–07, driven by private consumption resulting from a steady increase in real disposable income, although the failure of domestic supply to keep up with demand resulted in a net external drag on growth of roughly 0.5% of GDP per year over the period. Since 2002, France has fallen from 12th to 23rd position in per capita GDP rankings at purchasing power parity according to IMF data.

Business sector productivity is high and from 1996–2005 labour productivity grew at an average annual rate of 1.23%, higher than Germany's average of 1.05% (reported by the Economist Intelligence Unit). By 2000, labour productivity had surpassed that of the USA. However, per capita income in France has remained below that of the USA primarily because the French, like other Europeans, work shorter hours.

The agricultural sector is large compared with other developed countries. An estimated 3-8% of the workforce was employed in agriculture in 2005. Having secured the common agricultural policy (CAP), which subsidizes European agriculture, as a condition for establishing the EU, France is the largest beneficiary, receiving 20% of total CAP spending in 2006. In 2003 CAP reform saw most subsidies converted from price supports to direct income payments. While this creates less trade distortion, farm support remains a major point of contention in EU budget and WTO trade negotiations.

Labour force participation is particularly low with structural unemployment high. The re-emergence of government-aided jobs and labour market reforms have aided employment growth but continued rises in the minimum wage have held back job creation. Having reached a low of 7.6% in March 2008, unemployment rose steeply from late 2008 owing to the global economic downturn. Unemployment rose to 9.5% of the labour force in 2009 and stood at 9.9% by the end of 2011, over 1% higher than the OECD average. Youth unemployment reached 22.6% in May 2010. The IMF suggests efforts to foster job creation, especially for young, low-skilled and senior workers, would aid efforts to boost growth and competitiveness, safeguard fiscal sustainability and reduce welfare spending.

The global financial crisis forced the economy into recession in 2008. Following four successive quarters of contraction, France emerged from recession in the second quarter of 2009 but GDP declined by 2.6% for the year as a whole. Policy response included a fiscal stimulus package comprising temporary investment expenditures and tax breaks, and measures to recapitalize banks to support liquidity. A gradual recovery began, although continued concerns over the eurozone debt crisis and flat growth at the end of 2011 sparked fears that the economy was entering a new recession.

In 2002 France breached the 3% GDP budget deficit limit set by the eurozone's growth and stability pact, causing public debt to exceed 60% of GDP in 2003. It reduced its deficit to less than 3% of GDP in 2005, while health care spending was on target for the first time in recent history and real government spending remained constant for four years running. With the global financial crisis, the government deficit again increased, from 3.3% of GDP in 2008 to 7.1% in 2010, while public debt increased from 68% to 84% of GDP. In Jan. 2012 Standard & Poor's stripped France of its triple-A credit rating. The government aims to reduce the overall fiscal deficit to 3% of GDP by 2013.

While tackling public debt and implementing structural reform are immediate priorities, efforts to address population ageing are key to long-term future growth. The average legal age of retirement across the OECD is between 63 and 64 but in France most people stop working before they are 60, and only 50% of people over 50 are employed. The French have the longest average retirement in the OECD at 28 years for women and 24 for men. Major pension reforms were passed in 2010 aimed at gradually increasing the retirement age.

The IMF reports that service sector liberalization is likely to raise economic efficiency, though proposed reforms were a primary reason for the rejection of the EU constitution in a 2005 referendum. The government has taken an increasingly conservative stance on EU issues and in late 2005 announced that it would protect 11 sectors of the economy from foreign acquisitions.

Currency

On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in France at the irrevocable conversion rate of 6.55957 francs to one euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. On the introduction of the euro there was a 'dual circulation' period before the franc ceased to be legal tender on 17 Feb. 2002. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €84.2bn.

Foreign exchange reserves were US$26,170m. in Sept. 2009 and gold reserves 78.30m. troy oz. Total money supply was €431,879m. in Aug. 2009. Inflation rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
1.6%	1.9%	2.1%	2.1%	1.7%	1.7%	1.5%	2.8%	0.1%	1.5%

Franc Zone

13 former French colonies (Benin, Burkina Faso, Cameroon, Central African Republic, Chad, Comoros, the Republic of the Congo, Côte d'Ivoire, Gabon, Mali, Niger, Senegal and Togo), the former Spanish colony of Equatorial Guinea and the former Portuguese colony of Guinea-Bissau are members of a Franc Zone, the CFA (Communauté Financière Africaine). Comoros uses the Comorian franc. The franc CFA is pegged to the euro at a rate of 655.957 francs CFA to one euro. The franc CFP (Comptoirs Français du Pacifique) is the common currency of French Polynesia, New Caledonia and Wallis and Futuna. It is pegged to the euro at 119.3317422 francs CFP to the euro.

Budget

Central government revenue and expenditure in €1m.:

	2007	2008	2009
Revenue	798,126	816,535	722,353
Expenditure	841,194	871,631	908,581

Principal sources of revenue in 2009 were: social security contributions, €308.06bn.; taxes on goods and services, €178.92bn. Main items of expenditure by economic type in 2009: social benefits, €459.23bn.; compensation of employees, €187.65bn.

France's budget deficit in 2010 was 7.1% of GDP (2009, 7.5%; 2008, 3.3%). The required target set by the EU is a budget deficit of no more than 3%.

The standard rate of VAT is 19.6% (reduced rates, 7.0%, 5.5% and 2.1%). In 2010 the top rate of income tax was 40.0% and corporate tax was 34.4%.

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
1.8%	0.9%	0.9%	2.3%	1.9%	2.7%	2.2%	-0.2%	-2.6%	1.4%

The real GDP growth rate in 2011 according to INSEE, the French National Institute for Statistics and Economic Studies, was 1.7%. Total GDP in 2010 was US$2,560.0bn.

Banking and Finance

The central bank and bank of issue is the Banque de France (Governor, Christian Noyer, appointed 2003 and reappointed 2009), founded in 1800, and nationalized on 2 Dec. 1945. The Governor is appointed for a six-year term (renewable once) and heads the nine-member Council of Monetary Policy.

The National Credit Council, formed in 1945 to regulate banking activity and consulted in all political decisions on monetary policy, comprises 51 members nominated by the government; its president is the minister for the economy; its vice-president is the governor of the Banque de France.

In 2008 there were 722 banks and other credit institutions, including 304 financial companies, 290 commercial banks and 104 mutual or co-operative banks. Four principal deposit banks were nationalized in 1945, the remainder in 1982. The banking and insurance sectors underwent a flurry of mergers, privatizations, foreign investment, corporate restructuring and consolidation in 1997, in both the national and international fields. The largest banks in April 2009 by assets were BNP Paribas (US$2,888.73bn.)

and Crédit Agricole (US$2,064.17bn.). In April 2010 the largest banks by market capitalization were BNP Paribas (US$68.44bn.) and Société Générale (US$34.25bn.).

The former state banks, the Caisses d'Épargne, became co-operative savings banks in 1999 although the group remains partly state-owned. There is a state-owned postal bank, La Banque Postale. Deposited funds are centralized by a non-banking body, the Caisse des Dépôts et Consignations, which finances a large number of local authorities and state-aided housing projects, and carries an important portfolio of transferable securities.

France attracted US$33.9bn. worth of foreign direct investment in 2010 (down from US$96.2bn. in 2007).

There is a stock exchange (Bourse) in Paris; it is a component of Euronext, which was created in Sept. 2000 through the merger of the Paris, Brussels and Amsterdam bourses.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

In 2008, 11.0% of energy consumption in mainland France came from renewables (wind power, solar power, hydro-electric power, tidal power, geothermal energy and biomass), compared to the European Union average of 10.3%. A target of 23% has been set by the EU for 2020.

Environment

France's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 6.5 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked France tenth in the world, with 87.8%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources.

Electricity

EDF is responsible for power generation and supply. It was privatized in Nov. 2005 when the government sold a 15.5% stake in the company. Installed capacity was 116.5m. kW in 2007. Electricity production in 2007: 569.84bn. kWh, of which 77.2% was nuclear. Hydro-electric power contributes about 11.2% of total electricity output. Consumption per capita in 2007 was 8,313 kWh. In 2007 France was the world's biggest exporter of electricity, with 67.6bn. kWh. EDF is Europe's leading electricity producer, generating 610.6bn. kWh in 2007.

France, not rich in natural energy resources, is at the centre of Europe's nuclear energy industry. In 2010 there were 58 nuclear reactors in operation—more than in any other country in the world apart from the USA—with a generating capacity of 63,236 MW. France has the highest percentage of its electricity generated through nuclear power of any country.

Oil and Gas

In 2007, 974,000 tonnes of crude oil were produced. The greater part came from the Parentis oilfield in the Landes. Reserves in 2007 totalled 122m. bbls. The importation and distribution of natural gas is the responsibility of GDF Suez, a company formed in July 2008 following a merger between Gaz de France and fellow utility group Suez. The French government has a 35.9% stake in the combined company.

Production of natural gas (2007) was 1.0bn. cu. metres. Natural gas reserves were 9.7bn. cu. metres in 2007.

Minerals

France is a significant producer of nickel, uranium, iron ore, bauxite, potash, pig iron, aluminium and coal. Société Le Nickel extracts in New Caledonia and is the world's third largest nickel producer.

France's last coal mine closed in April 2004. Production of other principal minerals and metals, in 1,000 tonnes (2006): salt, 9,371; aluminium, 442.

Agriculture

France has the highest agricultural production in Europe. In 2007 the agricultural sector employed about 1,020,000 people, down from 2,038,000 in 1988 and over 6m. in the mid-1950s. Agriculture accounts for 10.4% of exports and 8.3% of imports.

In 2007 there were 507,000 holdings (average size 54 ha.), down from over 1m. in 1988. There were 1,176,000 tractors and 80,000 harvester-threshers in 2005. Although the total number of tractors has been declining steadily in recent years, increasingly more powerful ones are being used. In 2005, 497,000 tractors in use were of 80 hp or higher, compared to 96,000 in 1979.

Of the total area of France (54.9m. ha.), the utilized agricultural area comprised 29.27m. ha. in 2009. 18.26m. ha. were arable, 9.87m. ha. were grassland and 1.06m. ha. were under permanent crops including vines (0.84m. ha.).

Area under cultivation and yield for principal crops:

	Area (1,000 ha.)			Production (1,000 tonnes)
	2006	2007	2008	2006	2007	2008
Wheat	5,246	5,239	5,492	35,364	32,764	39,002
Sugar beets	379	393	349	29,871	33,230	30,306
Maize	1,465	1,484	1,702	12,775	14,357	15,819

Production of principal fruit crops (in 1,000 tonnes) as follows:

	2006	2007	2008
Grapes	6,777	6,019	5,664
Apples	2,081	2,144	1,940
Peaches and nectarines	395	365	301
Melons	301	242	274
Pears	226	203	156
Plums and sloes	234	249	147

Total fruit and vegetable production in 2008 was 13,732,900 tonnes. Other important vegetables include tomatoes (714,683 tonnes in 2008), carrots (556,517 tonnes), sweetcorn (479,718 tonnes) and cauliflowers (392,648 tonnes). France is the world's leading producer of sugar beets. Total area under cultivation and yield of grapes from the vine (2008): 813,496 ha.; 5.7m. tonnes. Wine production (2008): 45,692,000 hectolitres. France was the second largest wine producer in the world in 2008 (16.1% of the world total) after Italy. Consumption in France has declined dramatically in recent times, from nearly 120 litres per person in 1966 to 53 litres per person in 2008.

In 2008 France set aside 583,800 ha. (2.1% of its agricultural land) for the growth of organic crops, compared to the EU average of 4.1% in 2007.

Livestock (2008, in 1,000): cattle, 19,887; pigs, 14,801; sheep, 8,171; goats, 1,228; horses, 420; chickens (estimate), 175,000; turkeys, 25,253; ducks, 22,848. Livestock products (2008, in 1,000 tonnes): pork, bacon and ham, 2,259; beef and veal, 1,496; lamb and mutton, 130; eggs, 11,618m. units. Milk production, 2008 (in 1,000 hectolitres): cow, 235,410; goat, 5,673; sheep, 2,442. Cheese production, 2008, 1,861,000 tonnes. France is the second largest cheese producer in the world after the USA.

Forestry

Forestry is France's richest natural resource and employs 550,000 people. In 2005 forest covered 15.55m. ha. (28.3% of the land area). In 1990 the area under forests had been 14.23m. ha., or 25.9% of the land area. 65% of forest is privately owned. 51,000 ha. of land in France is reforested annually. Timber production in 2007 was 62.76m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

In 2008 there were 7,389 fishing vessels (of which 4,979 were in mainland France), and (in 2006) 17,088 fishermen. Catch in 2005 was 574,358 tonnes, of which 572,248 tonnes were from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in France in March 2011 were: Total, an integrated oil company (US$143.2bn.); Sanofi-Aventis, a pharmaceuticals company (US$92.0bn.); and GDF Suez, a gas, water and multiutilities company (US$91.8bn.).

Chief industries: steel, chemicals, textiles, aircraft, machinery, electronic equipment, tourism, wine and perfume. In 2008 industry accounted for 20% of GDP, with manufacturing contributing 12%.

Industrial production (in 1,000 tonnes): distillate fuel oil (2007, including Monaco), 34,392; cement (2008), 21,443; crude steel (2007), 19,252; rolled steel (2006), 17,437; petrol (2007, including Monaco), 16,479; pig iron (2006), 13,013; residual fuel oil (2007, including Monaco), 11,441; jet fuel (2007, including Monaco), 5,536. France is one of the biggest producers of mineral water, with 12,159m. litres in 2005. In 2005 soft drinks production was 4,777m. litres, beer production 1,720m. litres and cigarette production 46.5bn. units.

Engineering production (in 1,000 units): cars (2009), 1,819; commercial vehicles (2009), 228; car tyres (2007), 54,000.

Labour

Of 25,628,000 people in employment in 2008, 46.9% were women. By sector, 74.5% worked in services (58.1% in 1980), 22.0% in industry and construction (33.1% in 1980) and 3.4% in agriculture (8.8% in 1980). Some 3.1m. people work in the public sector at national and local level.

A new definition of 'unemployed' was adopted in Aug. 1995, omitting persons who had worked at least 78 hours in the previous month. The unemployment rate was 9.9% in Dec. 2011. The rate among the under 25s is more than double the overall national rate.

Conciliation boards (conseils de prud'hommes) mediate in labour disputes. They are elected for five-year terms by two colleges of employers and employees. There were a total of 1,553,000 working days lost to strike action in 2007. Between 1996 and 2005 strikes cost France an average of 53 days per 1,000 employees a year. In Jan. 2012 the minimum wage (SMIC) was raised to €9.22 an hour (€1,398.37 month for a 35-hour week); it affected about 3.4m. wage-earners in July 2008. The average annual salary in the private and semi-public sectors was €31,932 in 2007. The minimum retirement age is gradually rising—having been lowered from 65 to 60 by then President Mitterrand in 1983. In Nov. 2010 President Sarkozy signed a bill to increase it gradually to 62 by 2018. In Nov. 2011 it was announced that the retirement age would rise from 60 to 62 by 2017 instead of 2018. For people born before 1 July 1951 the retirement age was 60 years; for those born between 1 July and 31 Dec. 1951 it was 60 years 4 months; for those born in 1952 it is 60 years 9 months; in 1953, 61 years 2 months; in 1954, 61 years 7 months; and in 1955, 62 years. The fully pensionable retirement age is scheduled to rise from 65 to 67. The average actual age for retirement was 59 in 2008. A five-week annual holiday is statutory.

In March 2005 the National Assembly voted by 350 to 135 to amend the working hours law restricting the legal working week to 35 hours, introduced by the former between 1998–2000. Under the new proposals employees can, in agreement with their employer, work up to 48 hours per week. There is no change in the legal working week: any increased hours are on a voluntary basis. The proposal also allows for the increase of overtime hours from 180 to 220 per year, payable at 125% of the normal hourly rate. To encourage the working of longer hours, payment of overtime work is now exempt from individual income tax, social contributions and social taxes (since 1 Oct. 2007).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2008 imports (c.i.f.) totalled US$696.65bn. (US$619.27bn. in 2007); exports (f.o.b.), US$596.10bn. (US$542.64bn. in 2007). Principal imports include: oil, machinery and equipment, chemicals, iron and steel, and foodstuffs. Major exports: metals, chemicals, industrial equipment, consumer goods and agricultural products.

In 2007 chemicals and manufactured goods accounted for 41.4% of France's imports and 42.6% of exports; machinery and transport equipment 35.0% of imports and 40.1% of exports; food, live animals, beverages and tobacco 7.3% of imports and 10.7% of exports; mineral fuels, lubricants and related materials 13.5% of imports and 3.9% of exports; inedible crude materials (except fuels), and animal and vegetable oil and fats 2.7% of imports and 2.6% of exports.

In 2007 the chief import sources (as % of total imports) were as follows: Germany, 16.6%; Italy, 8.5%; Belgium, 8.3%; Spain, 7.0%; China, 6.3%. The chief export markets (as % of total) were: Germany, 14.4%; Spain, 9.6%; Italy, 9.2%; UK, 8.4%; Belgium, 7.5%. Imports from fellow European Union members accounted for 62.0% of all imports, and exports to other European Union members constituted 65.5% of the total.

Trade Fairs

Paris ranks as the third most popular convention city behind Singapore and Brussels according to the Union des Associations Internationales (UAI), hosting 3.6% of all international meetings held in 2010.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 951,125 km of road, including 11,010 km of motorway and 9,115 km of highways and main roads. France has the longest road network in the EU. Around 90% of all freight is transported by road. In 2007 there were 30.70m. passenger cars (498 per 1,000 inhabitants), 6.27m. lorries and vans, and 83,000 buses and coaches. Road passenger traffic in 2007 totalled 775bn. passenger-km. In 2007 there were 4,620 road deaths, down from 8,445 in 1997.

Only Singapore ranked ahead of France for quality of road infrastructure in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2009–2010.

Rail

In 1938 all the independent railway companies were merged with the existing state railway system in a Société Nationale des Chemins de Fer Français (SNCF), which became a public industrial and commercial establishment in 1983. Legislation came into effect in 1997 which vested ownership of the railway infrastructure (track and signalling) in a newly established public corporation, the Réseau Ferré de France (RFF/French Rail Network). The RFF is funded by payments for usage from the SNCF, government and local subventions and authority capital made available by the state derived from the proceeds of privatization. The SNCF remains responsible for maintenance and management of the rail network. The legislation also envisages the establishment of regional railway services which receive funds previously given to the SNCF as well as a state subvention. These regional bodies negotiate with SNCF for the provision of suitable services for their area. SNCF is the most heavily indebted and subsidized company in France.

In 2010 the RFF-managed network totalled 29,473 km of track (15,424 km electrified). High-speed TGV lines link Paris to the southwest, southeast and east of France, and north from Paris and Lille to the Channel Tunnel (Eurostar). The high-speed TGV line appeared in 1981; it had 1,896 km of track in 2010, and another 2,000 km planned by 2020. Services from London through the Channel Tunnel began operating in 1994. Rail passenger traffic in 2008 totalled 98.3bn. passenger km and freight tonne-km came to 40.6bn.

The Paris transport network consisted in 2005 of 212 km of metro (297 stations), 115 km of regional express railways and 31 km of tramway. There are metros in Lille (67 km), Lyon (29 km), Marseille (19 km), Rennes (9 km) and Toulouse (12 km), and tram/light railway networks in Bordeaux (25 km), Caen (16 km), Clermont-Ferrand (14 km), Grenoble (28 km), Le Mans (15 km), Lille (22 km), Lyon (18 km), Marseille (12 km), Montpellier (12 km), Mulhouse (12 km), Nantes (40 km), Nice (9 km), Orléans (18 km), Rouen (15 km), St Étienne (9 km), Strasbourg (25 km) and Valenciennes (9 km).

France was ranked fourth for rail infrastructure in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2009–2010.

Civil Aviation

The main international airports are at Paris (Charles de Gaulle), Paris (Orly), Bordeaux (Mérignac), Lyon (Satolas), Marseille-Provence, Nice-Côte d'Azur, Strasbourg (Entzheim), Toulouse (Blagnac), Clermont-Ferrand (Aulnat) and Nantes (Atlantique). The following had international flights to only a few destinations in 2003: Brest, Caen, Carcassonne, Le Havre, Le Touquet, Lille, Pau, Rennes, Rouen and Saint-Étienne. The national airline, Air France, was 54.4% state-owned but merged in Oct. 2003 with the Dutch carrier KLM to form Air France-KLM. In the process the share owned by the French state fell to 44.2%. In Dec. 2004 the government sold off a further 18.4% to reduce its stake to 25.8%, and in the meantime the government's share has come down still further to 15.7%. In 2005 Air France carried 42.9m. passengers (25.9m. on international flights); passenger-km totalled 115.1bn. The main other French airline is Corsairfly. In 2008 Charles de Gaulle airport handled 60,874,681 passengers (55,825,413 on international flights) and 2,039,460 tonnes of freight. Only Heathrow handled more international passengers in 2008. Orly was the second busiest airport, handling 26,209,703 passengers (11,825,460 on domestic flights) and 95,770 tonnes of freight. Nice was the third busiest for passengers, with 10,382,566 (6,061,002 on international flights).

In April 2003 Air France announced that Concorde, the world's first supersonic jet which began commercial service in 1976, would be permanently grounded from Oct. 2003.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 232 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 6,025,000 GT. Of the 232 vessels registered, 88 were passenger ships, 58 oil tankers, 43 general cargo ships, 26 container ships, 13 liquid gas tankers, three bulk carriers and there was one chemical tanker. The French-controlled fleet comprised 285 vessels of 1,000 GT or over in Jan. 2009, of which 164 were under foreign flags and 121 under the French flag. The chief ports are Marseille, Le Havre, Dunkerque, Calais and Saint-Nazaire.

France has extensive inland waterways. Canals are administered by the public authority France Navigable Waterways (VNF). In 2006 there were approximately 8,800 km of navigable rivers and canals (the longest network in the EU), with a total traffic in 2009 of 68.0m. tonnes.

Telecommunications

France Télécom became a limited company on 1 Jan. 1997. In 2007 there were 34.8m. main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year mobile phone subscribers numbered 55.4m. (897.0 per 1,000 persons). The largest operators are Orange France, with a 46% share of the market, and SFR, with a 35% share. There were 40.0m. PCs in use in 2006 and 42.3m. internet users in 2008. The fixed broadband penetration rate in Dec. 2010 was 33.7 subscribers per 100 inhabitants.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The system of justice is divided into two jurisdictions: the judicial and the administrative. Within the judicial jurisdiction are common law courts including 473 lower courts (tribunaux d'instance, 11 in overseas departments), 181 higher courts (tribunaux de grande instance, 5 tribunaux de première instance in the overseas territories) and 454 police courts (tribunaux de police, 11 in overseas departments).

The tribunaux d'instance are presided over by a single judge. The tribunaux de grande instance usually have a collegiate composition, but may be presided over by a single judge in some civil cases. The tribunaux de police, presided over by a judge on duty in the tribunal d'instance, deal with petty offences (contraventions); correctional chambers (chambres correctionnelles, of which there is at least one in each tribunal de grande instance) deal with graver offences (délits), including cases involving imprisonment up to five years. Correctional chambers normally consist of three judges of a tribunal de grande instance (a single judge in some cases). Sometimes in cases of délit, and in all cases of more serious crimes, a preliminary inquiry is made in secrecy by one of 569 examining magistrates (juges d'instruction), who either dismisses the case or sends it for trial before a public prosecutor.

Within the judicial jurisdiction are various specialized courts, including 191 commercial courts (tribunaux de commerce), composed of tradesmen and manufacturers elected for two years initially, and then for four years; 271 conciliation boards (conseils de prud'hommes), composed of an equal number of employers and employees elected for five years to deal with labour disputes; 437 courts for settling rural landholding disputes (tribunaux paritaires des baux ruraux, 11 in overseas departments); and 116 social security courts (tribunaux des affaires de sécurité sociale).

When the decisions of any of these courts are susceptible of appeal, the case goes to one of the 35 courts of appeal (cours d'appel), composed each of a president and a variable number of members. There are 104 courts of assize (cours d'assises), each composed of a president who is a member of the court of appeal, and two other magistrates, and assisted by a lay jury of nine members. These try crimes involving imprisonment of over five years. The decisions of the courts of appeal and the courts of assize are final. However, the Court of Cassation (cour de cassation) has discretion to verify if the law has been correctly interpreted and if the rules of procedure have been followed exactly. The Court of Cassation may annul any judgment, following which the cases must be retried by a court of appeal or a court of assizes.

The administrative jurisdiction exists to resolve conflicts arising between citizens and central and local government authorities. It consists of 36 administrative courts (tribunaux administratifs, of which eight are in overseas departments and territories) and 15 administrative courts of appeal (cours administratives d'appel, of which eight are in overseas departments and territories). The Council of State is the final court of appeal in administrative cases, though it may also act as a court of first instance.

Cases of doubt as to whether the judicial or administrative jurisdiction is competent in any case are resolved by a Tribunal de conflits composed in equal measure of members of the Court of Cassation and the Council of State. In 1997 the government restricted its ability to intervene in individual cases of justice.

Penal code

A revised penal code came into force on 1 March 1994, replacing the Code Napoléon of 1810. Penal institutions consist of: (1) maisons d'arrêt, where persons awaiting trial as well as those condemned to short periods of imprisonment are kept; (2) punishment institutions – (a) central prisons (maisons centrales) for those sentenced to long imprisonment, (b) detention centres for offenders showing promise of rehabilitation, and (c) penitentiary centres, establishments combining (a) and (b); (3) hospitals for the sick. Special attention is being paid to classified treatment and the rehabilitation and vocational re-education of prisoners including work in open-air and semi-free establishments. Juvenile delinquents go before special judges in 139 (11 in overseas departments and territories) juvenile courts (tribunaux pour enfants); they are sent to public or private institutions of supervision and re-education.

A new post of Defender of Rights (Défenseur des droits) was created in March 2011 as a successor to the Ombudsman (Médiateur). The current Defender of Rights is Dominique Baudis.

Capital punishment was abolished in Aug. 1981. In metropolitan France the detention rate in 2006 was 98.4 prisoners per 100,000 population, up from 50 per 100,000 in 1975. The average period of detention in 2004 was 8.4 months. The principal offences committed were: theft, 21.1%; drink driving, 20.6%; assault (including rape), 16.8%; drug-related offences, 5.8%. The population of the 194 penal establishments (six for minors) in 2008 was 64,003, including 2,379 women.

Education

The primary, secondary and higher state schools constitute the 'Université de France'. Its Supreme Council of 84 members has deliberative, administrative and judiciary functions, and as a consultative committee advises respecting the working of the school system; the inspectors-general are in direct communication with the Minister. For local education administration France is divided into 25 academic areas, each of which has an Academic Council whose members include a certain number elected by the professors or teachers. The Academic Council deals with all grades of education. Each is under a Rector, and each is provided with academy inspectors, one for each department.

Compulsory education is provided for children of 6–16. The educational stages are as follows:

1. Non-compulsory pre-school instruction for children aged 2–5, to be given in infant schools or infant classes attached to primary schools.

2. Compulsory elementary instruction for children aged 6–11, to be given in primary schools and certain classes of the lycées. It consists of three courses: preparatory (one year), elementary (two years) and intermediary (two years). Children with special needs are cared for in special institutions or special classes of primary schools.

3. Lower secondary education (Enseignement du premier cycle du Second Degré) for pupils aged 11–15, consists of four years of study in the lycées (grammar schools), Collèges d'Enseignement Technique (CES) or Collèges d'Enseignement Général (CEG).

4. Upper secondary education (Enseignement du second cycle du Second Degré) for pupils aged 15–18: (1) Long, général or professionnel provided by the lycées and leading to the baccalauréat or to the baccalauréat de technicien after three years; and (2) Court, professional courses of three, two and one year are taught in the lycées d'enseignement professionnel, or the specialized sections of the lycées, CES or CEG.

The following table shows the number of schools in 2006–07 and the numbers of teaching staff and pupils in 2007:

	Number of schools	Teaching staff	Pupils
Nursery	17,410	141,476	2,594,074
Primary	38,257	216,654	4,105,628
Secondary	11,410	490,955	5,940,366

Higher education is provided by the state free of charge in universities and in special schools, and by private individuals in the free faculties and schools. Legislation of 1968 redefined the activities and workings of universities. Bringing several disciplines together, 780 units for teaching and research (UER—Unités d'Enseignement et de Recherche) were formed which decided their own teaching activities, research programmes and procedures for checking the level of knowledge gained. In 1984 they were reclassified as units for training and research (UFR—Unités de Formation et de Recherche). They and the other parts of each university must respect the rules designed to maintain the national standard of qualifications. The UFRs form the basic units of the 78 state universities in mainland France and three national polytechnic institutes (with university status), which are grouped into 25 administrative Académies. Private universities include seven Catholic universities, in Angers, Lille, Lyon, Paris, Rennes, Toulouse and La Roche-sur-Yon in the Vendée region. There were 2,179,505 students in higher education in 2007.

Outside the university system, higher education (academic, professional and technical) is provided by over 400 schools and institutes, including the 177 Grandes Écoles, which are highly selective public or private institutions offering mainly technological or commercial curricula. These have an annual output of about 20,000 graduates, and in 2004–05 there were also 73,147 students in preparatory classes leading to the Grandes Écoles; 230,275 students were registered in the Sections de Techniciens Supérieurs and 100,899 in the Écoles d'Ingénieurs.

The adult literacy rate is at least 99%.

In 2006 public expenditure on education came to 5.6% of GNI and represented 10.6% of total government expenditure.

Health

Ordinances of 1996 created a new regional regime of hospital administration and introduced a system of patients' records to prevent abuses of public health benefits. In 2007 there were 972 public and 1,800 private health care establishments with 316,551 and 174,925 beds respectively. There were 208,191 physicians, 41,444 dentists, 483,380 nurses, 70,498 pharmacists and 17,483 midwives in 2007.

In 2008 France spent 11.2% of its GDP on health (the highest percentage in the EU), with public spending amounting to 77.8% of the total.

In 2005 an estimated 19.2% of the population were regular smokers. The average French adult drinks 13.0 litres of alcohol a year.

Welfare

An order of 4 Oct. 1945 laid down the framework of a comprehensive plan of Social Security and created a single organization which superseded the various laws relating to social insurance, workmen's compensation, health insurance, family allowances, etc. All previous matters relating to Social Security are dealt with in the Social Security Code, 1956; this has been revised several times. The Chamber of Deputies and Senate, meeting as Congress on 19 Feb. 1996, adopted an important revision of the Constitution giving parliament powers to review annually the funding of social security (previously managed by the trade unions and employers' associations), and to fix targets for expenditure in the light of anticipated receipts.

In 2008 the welfare system accounted for €601bn., representing 31% of GDP. The Social Security budget had a deficit of some €20.2bn. in 2009.

Contributions. The general social security contribution (CSG) introduced in 1991 was raised by 4% to 7.5% in 1997 by the Jospin administration in an attempt to dramatically reduce the deficit on social security spending, effectively almost doubling the CSG. All wage-earning workers or those of equivalent status are insured regardless of the amount or the nature of the salary or earnings. The funds for the general scheme are raised mainly from professional contributions, these being fixed within the limits of a ceiling and calculated as a percentage of the salaries. The calculation of contributions payable for family allowances, old age and industrial injuries relates only to this amount; on the other hand, the amount payable for sickness, maternity expenses, disability and death is calculated partly within the limit of the 'ceiling' and partly on the whole salary. These contributions are the responsibility of both employer and employee, except in the case of family allowances or industrial injuries, where they are the sole responsibility of the employer.

Self-employed Workers. From 17 Jan. 1948 allowances and old-age pensions were paid to self-employed workers by independent insurance funds set up within their own profession, trade or business. Schemes of compulsory insurance for sickness were instituted in 1961 for farmers, and in 1966, with modifications in 1970, for other non-wage-earning workers.

Social Insurance. The orders laid down in Aug. 1967 ensure that the whole population can benefit from the Social Security Scheme; at present all elderly persons who have been engaged in the professions, as well as the surviving spouse, are entitled to claim an old-age benefit.

Sickness Insurance refunds the costs of treatment required by the insured and the needs of dependants.

Maternity Insurance covers the costs of medical treatment relating to the pregnancy, confinement and lying-in period; the beneficiaries being the insured person or the spouse.

Insurance for Invalids is divided into three categories: (1) those who are capable of working; (2) those who cannot work; (3) those who, in addition, are in need of the help of another person. According to the category, the pension rate varies from 30 to 50% of the average salary for the last ten years, with additional allowance for home help for the third category.

Old-Age Pensions for workers were introduced in 1910. Over the period 2003–08 the duration a private sector wage-earner or standard civil servant had to work in order to qualify for a pension was raised from 37½ years to 40 years. As a result, standard public sector workers were required to contribute for the same period as private sector workers. The contribution period rose to 41 years in 2012 and thereafter was scheduled to increase in line with rises in life expectancy, so maintaining the ratio of pension payment period to contribution period. Pensions are payable at 60 to anyone with at least 25% insurance coverage. A pension worth 50% of the adjusted average salary is provided to those who have paid a full 40 years (160 quarters) worth of insurance. The pension is proportionately reduced for coverage less than 160 quarters (or less than 150 quarters for those claiming their pension before 2004). The exception is the special retirement plan for which employees of several state-owned companies (notably the SNCF) and organizations including the military and the police are eligible, allowing them to claim a full pension after 37½ years' contribution. A law was passed in Nov. 2010 that will raise the minimum retirement age from 60 to 62 by 2017 (its initial target of 2018 was amended in Nov. 2011 as part of a package of austerity measures), with the fully pensionable retirement age rising from 65 to 67.

There is also an allowance payable to low-income pensioners, who also receive an old-age supplement at 65. A child's supplement, worth 10% of the pension, is awarded to those who have three or more children. Citizens who do not qualify for a pension may be allowed to claim an old-age special allowance.

Family Allowances. A controversial programme of means-testing for Family Allowance was introduced in 1997 by the new administration. The Family Allowance benefit system comprises: (a) Family allowances proper, equivalent to 25.5% of the basic monthly salary for two dependent children, 46% for the third child, 41% for the fourth child, and 39% for the fifth and each subsequent child; a supplement equivalent to 9% of the basic monthly salary for the second and each subsequent dependent child more than ten years old, and 16% for each dependent child over 15 years. (b) Family supplement for persons with at least three children or one child aged less than three years. (c) Antenatal grants. (d) Maternity grant is equal to 260% of basic salary. Increase for multiple births or adoptions, 198%; increase for birth or adoption of third or subsequent child, 457%. (e) Allowance for specialized education of handicapped children. (f) Allowance for orphans. (g) Single parent allowance. (h) Allowance for opening of school term. (i) Allowance for accommodation, under certain circumstances. (j) Minimum family income for those with at least three children. Allowances (b), (g), (h) and (j) only apply to those whose annual income falls below a specified level.

Workmen's Compensation. The law passed by the National Assembly on 30 Oct. 1946 forms part of the Social Security Code and is administered by the Social Security Organization. Employers are invited to take preventive measures. The application of these measures is supervised by consulting engineers (assessors) of the local funds dealing with sickness insurance, who may compel employers who do not respect these measures to make additional contributions; they may, in like manner, grant rebates to employers who have in operation suitable preventive measures. The injured person receives free treatment, the insurance fund reimburses the practitioners, hospitals and suppliers chosen freely by the injured. In cases of temporary disablement, the daily payments are equal to half the total daily wage received by the injured. In case of permanent disablement, the injured person receives a pension, the amount of which varies according to the degree of disablement and the salary received during the past 12 months.

Unemployment Benefits vary according to circumstances (full or partial unemployment) which are means-tested.

RELIGION

A law of 1905 separated church and state. In 2005 there were 96 Roman Catholic dioceses in metropolitan France and 106 bishops. In Feb. 2012 there were nine cardinals. A survey conducted by the French Institute of Public Opinion in 2010 estimated that some 64% of the population was Roman Catholic, 28% non-religious/atheist, 3% Protestant and 5% belonged to other religions. There are generally estimated to be about 5m.–6m. Muslims in France.

CULTURE

Marseille will be one of two European Capitals of Culture for 2013. The title attracts large European Union grants.

World Heritage Sites

There are 37 sites under French jurisdiction that appear on the UNESCO World Heritage List. They are (with year entered on list): Mont-Saint-Michel and its Bay, the Versailles Palace and Park, the church and hill at Vézelay, Burgundy (all 1979 and 2007); the prehistoric sites and decorated grottoes of the Vézère Valley (Dordogne) and Chartres Cathedral (both 1979); Fontainebleau Palace and Park, Amiens Cathedral, and the Roman and Romanesque monuments of Arles (all 1981); Fontenay's Cistercian Abbey and Orange's Roman theatre and Arc de Triomphe (both 1981 and 2007); from the Great Saltworks of Salins-les-Bains to the Royal Saltworks of Arc-et-Senans, Franche-Comté (1982 and 2009); the Place Stanislas, Place de la Carrière and Place d'Alliance in Nancy and the Gulf of Porto (the Gulf of Girolata, Scandola Nature Reserve and the Calanche of Piana) in Corsica (both 1983); the Church of Saint-Savin-sur-Gartempe in Poitou-Charentes (1983 and 2007); the Pont du Gard Roman aqueduct, Languedoc (1985 and 2007); Grande-Île, Strasbourg (1988); the Banks of the Seine and Reims' Notre Dame Cathedral, Abbey of Saint-Remi and Tau Palace (both 1991); Bourges Cathedral (1992); Avignon's historic centre (1995); the Canal du Midi, Languedoc (1996); the Historic Fortified City of Carcassonne (1997); Lyon's historic sites and the route of Santiago de Compostela (both 1998); Saint-Émilien Jurisdiction (1999); the Loire Valley between Sully-sur-Loire and Chalonnes-sur-Loire (2000); Provins, the Town of Medieval Fairs (2001); the city of Le Havre (2005); the historic centre of Bordeaux (2007); fortifications of Vauban and the lagoons of New Caledonia: reef diversity and associated ecosystems (both 2008); the Episcopal City of Albi, Languedoc and the Pitons, cirques and remparts of Réunion (both 2010); and the Causses and the Cévennes, Mediterranean agro-pastoral cultural landscapes (2011).

France shares the Pyrénées–Mount Perdu site (1997 and 1999) with Spain; the Belfries of Belgium and France (1999 and 2005) with Belgium; and the Prehistoric Pile dwellings around the Alps (2011) with Austria, Germany, Italy, Slovenia and Switzerland.

Press

There were 87 daily papers (18 nationals, 69 provincials) in 2008. The leading dailies are: Ouest-France (average circulation, 792,000), Le Figaro (average circulation, 333,000), Le Monde (average circulation, 332,000), Le Parisien, L'Équipe, Sud Ouest, Voix du Nord and Le Dauphiné Libéré. The Journal du Dimanche is the only national Sunday paper. In 2006 total average daily press circulation was 9.3m. copies. In 2010 a total of 67,278 book titles were published.

Tourism

There were 76,800,000 foreign tourists in 2009; tourism receipts were US$49.4bn. France is the most popular tourist destination in the world, and receipts from tourism in 2009 were exceeded only in the USA and Spain. The most visited tourist attractions in 2007 were Disneyland Paris (14.5m.), the Louvre (8.2m.) and the Eiffel Tower (6.8m.). Around 17m. foreigners a year visit Paris. In 2009, 85.0% of tourists were from elsewhere in Europe and 7.1% from the Americas. Most visitors come from the UK, Belgium/Luxembourg, Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and Switzerland. There were 614,532 classified hotel rooms in 17,721 hotels in 2008.

Festivals

Religious Festivals

Ascension Day (40 days after Easter Sunday), Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary (15 Aug.) and All Saints Day (1 Nov.) are all public holidays.

Cultural Festivals

The Grande Parade de Montmartre, Paris (1 Jan.); the Carnival of Nice (Feb.–March); the Fête de la Victoire (8 May), celebrates victory in World War Two; the May Feasts take place in Nice regularly throughout May; the prestigious Cannes Film Festival, which has been running since 1946, lasts two weeks in mid-May; the Fête de la Musique (21 June); the Avignon Festival is a celebration of theatre that attracts average attendances of 140,000 each year and runs for most of July; Bastille Day (14 July) sees celebrations, parties and fireworks across the country. The Festival International d'Art Lyrique, focusing on classical music, opera and ballet, takes place in Aix-en-Provence every July. There are annual festivals of opera at Orange (July–Aug.) and baroque music at Ambronay (Sept.–Oct.). Celtic music and dance is celebrated at the Festival Interceltique de Lorient (Aug.). The biggest pop and rock festivals are Eurockéennes in Belfort (July), Les Vieilles Charrues in Carhaix (July), Rock en Seine in Paris (Aug.) and La Route du Rock in Saint-Malo (Aug.).

French Guiana

Guyane Française

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A French settlement on the island of Cayenne was established in 1604 and the territory between the Maroni and Oyapock rivers finally became a French possession in 1817. Convict settlements were established from 1852, that on Devil's Island being the most notorious; all were closed by 1945. On 19 March 1946 the status of French Guiana was changed to that of an Overseas Department.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

French Guiana is situated on the northeast coast of Latin America, and is bounded in the northeast by the Atlantic Ocean, west by Suriname, and south and east by Brazil. It includes the offshore Devil's Island, Royal Island and St Joseph, and has an area of 85,534 sq. km. Recorded population in 2007: 213,031; density: 2.5 per sq. km. The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 262,000. In 2005 an estimated 75.6% lived in urban areas. The chief towns are (with 2007 recorded populations): the capital, Cayenne (58,008 inhabitants), Saint-Laurent-du-Maroni (34,149) and Kourou (25,688). About 58% of inhabitants are of African descent.

The official language is French.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 births, 6,247; deaths, 762. 40% of the population are migrants. Average annual population growth rate, 2000–05, 4.0%.

CLIMATE

Equatorial type climate with most of the country having a main rainy season between April and July and a fairly dry period between Aug. and Dec. Both temperatures and humidity are high the whole year round. Cayenne, Jan. 26°C, July 29°C. Annual rainfall 3,202 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

French Guiana is administered by a General Council of 19 members directly elected for five-year terms, and by a Regional Council of 31 members. It is represented in the National Assembly by two deputies and in the Senate by two senators, and on the Economic, Social and Environmental Council by one councillor. The French government is represented by a Prefect. There are two arrondissements (Cayenne and Saint Laurent-du-Maroni) subdivided into 22 communes and 19 cantons.

70.2% of voters rejected proposals for greater autonomy from France in a referendum on 10 Jan. 2010. However, a second referendum on 24 Jan. proposing a change in status from department to unique collectivity was passed with 57.5% of the vote and is scheduled to take effect in March 2014. The General Council and the Regional Council will be combined as a sole entity.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Prefect: Denis Labbé.

President of the General Council: Alain Tien-Long (Divers Gauche).

President of the Regional Council: Rodolphe Alexandre (Divers Gauche).

Government Website (French only):

ECONOMY

Currency

In 2009 the euro has been the official currency as in metropolitan France.

Performance

In 2007 GDP was €2,931m.; GDP per capita was €13,489. Real GDP growth was 3.4% in 2008.

Banking and Finance

In 2009 there were four commercial banks (Banque Nationale de Paris-Guyane, Banque Postale, Banque Française Commerciale Antilles/Guyane and Banque des Antilles Françaises), three co-operative or mutual savings banks and six other financial institutions.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

Installed capacity was 0.1m. kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was 435m. kWh.

Minerals

Placer gold mining is the most important industry in French Guiana. In 2005, 1,955 kg of gold were produced.

Agriculture

There were 12,930 ha. of arable land in 2008. Principal crops (2006, in 1,000 tonnes): cassava, 30; rice, 15; passion fruit, 8; sugarcane, 7.

Livestock (2008 estimates): 11,000 pigs; 9,300 cattle; 2,700 sheep; 900 goats; 200,000 chickens.

Forestry

The country has immense forests that are rich in many kinds of timber. In 2005 forests covered 8.06m. ha., or 91.8% of the total land area. Roundwood production (2007) 177,000 cu. metres. The trees also yield oils, essences and gum products.

Fisheries

The catch in 2005 was an estimated 5,265 tonnes. Shrimp account for nearly 55% of the total catch.

INDUSTRY

Important products include rum, rosewood essence and beer. The island has sawmills and one sugar factory.

Labour

In 2006 there were 47,500 people in paid work and 6,100 in unpaid work. In Jan. 2012 the minimum wage (SMIC) was raised to €9.22 an hour (€1,398.37 month for a 35-hour week). The unemployment rate was 20.2% in 2009; among the under 25s the rate was 37.6%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Imports (2006), €2,504m.; exports (2006), €489m. Main import suppliers are France, Trinidad and Tobago and Germany. Leading export markets are France, Switzerland and Italy.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were (2005) 464 km of national and an estimated 400 km of departmental roads. In 2006, 5,866 new vehicles were registered. In 2009 there were 339 road accidents that caused 457 injuries and 28 deaths.

Civil Aviation

In 2007 Rochambeau International Airport (Cayenne) handled 383,168 passengers. There are smaller airports at Maripasoula and Saul for internal flights. The base of the European Space Agency (ESA) is located near Kourou and has been operational since 1979.

Shipping

212 merchant ships arrived and departed in 2008; 193,300 tonnes of petroleum products and 372,500 tonnes of other products were discharged, and 29,100 tonnes of freight loaded. Chief ports: Cayenne, St-Laurent-du-Maroni and Kourou. There are also inland waterways navigable by small craft.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 51,000 main (fixed) telephone lines. Mobile phone subscribers numbered 98,000 in 2004. There were 33,000 PCs in use (180.3 for every 1,000 persons) in 2004 and 38,000 internet users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

At Cayenne there is a tribunal d'instance and a tribunal de grande instance, from which appeal is to the regional cour d'appel in Martinique.

The population in penal institutions in Oct. 2007 was 746 (365 per 100,000 population).

Education

Primary education is free and compulsory. In 2008-09 there were 40,890 pupils at pre-elementary and primary schools, and 28,758 at secondary level. In 2004-05 there were 1,775 students at the French Guiana campuses of the University of Antilles-Guyana.

Health

In 2007 there were 804 hospital beds. There were (2007) 363 doctors, 41 dentists, 89 pharmacists, 70 midwives and 744 nursing personnel.

RELIGION

In 2001 approximately 55% of the population was Roman Catholic.

CULTURE

Press

There were two daily newspapers in 2006 with a combined circulation of 15,000.

Tourism

Total number of non-resident tourists (2005), 95,000; receipts totalled US$45m.

Guadeloupe

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The islands were discovered by Columbus in 1493. The Carib inhabitants resisted Spanish attempts to colonize. A French colony was established on 28 June 1635, and apart from short periods of occupancy by British forces, Guadeloupe has since remained a French possession. On 19 March 1946 Guadeloupe became an Overseas Department. In Feb. 2009 there was widespread unrest and a general strike that ran for over a month in protest at high prices and low wages.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guadeloupe consists of a group of islands in the Lesser Antilles with a total area of 1,630 sq. km. The two main islands, Basse-Terre (to the west) and Grande-Terre (to the east), are joined by a bridge over a narrow channel. Adjacent to these are the islands of Marie-Galante (to the southeast), La Désirade (to the east), and the Îles des Saintes (to the south). The islands of St Martin (2007 population of 35,925) and St Barthélemy (2007 population of 8,450) seceded from Guadeloupe in Feb. 2007.

Island	Area (sq. km)	2007 populations	Chief town
Grande-Terre	590	197,600	Pointe-à-Pitre
Basse-Terre	848	186,600	Basse-Terre
Marie-Galante	158	11,939	Grand-Bourg

Mayotte

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Mayotte was a French colony from 1843 until 1914 when it was attached, with the other Comoros islands, to the government-general of Madagascar. The Comoro group was granted administrative autonomy within the French Republic and became an Overseas Territory. When the other three islands voted to become independent (as the Comoros state) in 1974, Mayotte voted against and remained a French dependency. In Dec. 1976, following a further referendum, it became a Territorial Collectivity. On 11 July 2001 Mayotte became a Departmental Collectivity—a constitutional innovation—as a result of a referendum. This was denounced by the Comorian authorities, who claim Mayotte as part of the Union of the Comoros. On 28 March 2003 it became an Overseas Collectivity. As a result of a further referendum held on 29 March 2009 the island became an Overseas Department on 31 March 2011.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Mayotte, southeast of the Comoros, had a total population at the 2007 census of 186,452 (population density of 499 persons per sq. km). The whole territory covers 374 sq. km (144 sq. miles). It consists of a main island (363 sq. km) with (2007 census) 162,036 inhabitants, containing the chief town, Mamoudzou (53,022 inhabitants in 2007); and the smaller island of Pamanzi (11 sq. km) lying 2 km to the east (24,416 in 2007) containing the old capital of Dzaoudzi (15,339 in 2007).

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 237,000.

The spoken language is Shimaoré (akin to Comorian, an Arabized dialect of Swahili), but French remains the official, commercial and administrative language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

There were 7,643 births and 572 deaths in 2004.

CLIMATE

The dry and sunniest season is from May to Oct. The hot but rainy season is from Nov. to April. Average temperatures are 27°C from Dec. to March and 24°C from May to Sept.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The island is administered by a General Council of 19 members, directly elected for a six-year term. The French government is represented by an appointed Prefect. In accordance with the legislation of 11 July 2001 executive powers were transferred from the prefect to the president of the General Council in March 2004. Mayotte is represented by two deputies in the National Assembly, by two senators in the Senate and by one councillor on the Economic, Social and Environmental Council. There are 17 communes, including two on Pamanzi.

RECENT ELECTIONS

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

There are three lower courts (tribunaux d'instance), two higher courts (tribunaux de grande instance), one appeal, one administrative court and one conciliation board.

The population in penal institutions in Jan. 2008 was 1,296 (162 per 100,000 population).

Education

In 2008–09 there were 122,298 pupils in primary schools and 101,262 in secondary schools. The Université Française de l'Océan Indien (founded 1971) had 12,267 students in 2007–08.

Health

In 2007 there were 1,359 hospital beds and 2,130 doctors. There were 105 general doctors per 100,000 inhabitants in 2007.

RELIGION

In 2001, 82% of the population was Roman Catholic.

CULTURE*World Heritage Sites

Réunion has one site on the UNESCO World Heritage List: its Pitons, cirques and remparts (inscribed on the list in 2010). At 100,000 ha. the site covers 40% of the island and incorporates a large area of the national park containing subtropical rainforests and cloud forests.

Press

There were three daily newspapers (Quotidien, Journal de l'Île and Témoignages) in 2006 with a combined circulation of 73,000.

Tourism

Tourism is a major resource industry. There were 381,000 non-resident tourists in 2007. Receipts in 2007 totalled US$446m. In 2008 there were 49 classified hotels with 2,127 rooms.

French Polynesia

Territoire de la Polynésie Française

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

French protectorates since 1843, these islands were annexed to France in 1880–82 to form 'French Settlements in Oceania', which opted in Nov. 1958 for the status of an overseas territory within the French Community. In March 2003 French Polynesia became an Overseas Collectivity.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The total land area of these five archipelagoes, comprising 121 volcanic islands and coral atolls (76 inhabited) scattered over a wide area in the eastern Pacific, is 3,521 sq. km. The population (2007 census) was 259,596; density, 74 per sq. km. In 2007 French forces stationed in Polynesia numbered 1,500 (based mostly on Tahiti). In 2005 an estimated 51.7% of the population lived in urban areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 285,000.

The official languages are French and Tahitian.

The islands are administratively divided into five subdivisions administratives as follows:

Windward Islands (Îles du Vent) (194,623 inhabitants, 2007) comprise Tahiti with an area of 1,042 sq. km and 178,132 inhabitants in 2007; Mooréa with an area of 132 sq. km and 16,191 inhabitants in 2007; Maiao (Tubuai Manu) with an area of 9 sq. km and 299 inhabitants in 2007; and the smaller Mehetia (uninhabited) and Tetiaroa (population of one). The capital is Papeete, Tahiti (26,017 inhabitants in 2007, excluding suburbs; urban area, 131,693).

Leeward Islands (Îles sous le Vent) comprise the five volcanic islands of Raiatéa, Tahaa, Huahine, Bora-Bora and Maupiti, together with four small atolls (Tupai, Mopelia, Scilly, Bellinghausen), the group having a total land area of 404 sq. km and 33,184 inhabitants in 2007. The chief town is Uturoa on Raiatéa. The Windward and Leeward Islands together are called the Society Archipelago (Archipel de la Société). Tahitian, a Polynesian language, is spoken throughout the archipelago and used as a lingua franca in the rest of the territory.

Marquesas Islands 12 islands lying north of the Tuamotu Archipelago, with a total area of 1,049 sq. km and 8,632 inhabitants in 2007. There are six inhabited islands: Nuku Hiva, Ua Pou, Ua Uka, Hiva Oa, Tahuata, Fatu Hiva; and six smaller (uninhabited) ones; the chief centre is Taiohae on Nuku Hiva.

Austral or Tubuai Islands lying south of the Society Archipelago, comprise a 1,300 km chain of volcanic islands and reefs. There are five inhabited islands (Rimatara, Rurutu, Tubuai, Raivavae and, 500 km to the south, Rapa), with a combined area of 148 sq. km (6,310 inhabitants in 2007); the chief centre is Mataura on Tubuai.

Tuamotu and Gambier Islands comprise the Tuamotu Islands, two parallel ranges of 76 atolls (53 inhabited) lying north and east of the Society Archipelago with a total area of 690 sq. km and 15,510 inhabitants in 2007; and the Gambier Islands to the southeast of the Tuamotu Islands with a total area of 36 sq. km and 1,337 inhabitants in 2007. The most populous atolls are Rangiroa (3,210 inhabitants in 2007), Manihi (1,379 in 2007) and Hao (1,342 in 2007).

The Mururoa and Fangataufa atolls in the southeast of the group were ceded to France in 1964 by the Territorial Assembly, and were used by France for nuclear tests from 1966–96. The Pacific Testing Centre (CEP) was dismantled in 1998. A small military presence remains to ensure permanent radiological control.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2005: births, 4,467; deaths, 1,239. Average annual population growth rate, 2000–05, 1.6%. Life expectancy at birth, 2005, 71.4 years for males and 76.4 years for females. Infant mortality, 2005, 6.3 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2.2 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Papeete, Jan. 81°F (27.1°C), July 75°F (24°C). Annual rainfall 83" (2,106 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the 1984 constitution, the Territory is administered by a Council of Ministers, whose President is elected by the Territorial Assembly from among its own members; the President appoints a Vice-President and 14 other ministers. French Polynesia is represented in the French Assembly by two deputies, in the Senate by two senators and on the Economic, Social and Environmental Council by one councillor.

The French government is represented by a High Commissioner. The Territorial Assembly comprises 57 members elected every five years from five constituencies by universal suffrage, using the same proportional representation system as in metropolitan French regional elections. To be elected a party must gain at least 5% of votes cast.

In Dec. 2003 French Polynesia's status was changed to that of an Overseas Country within the French Republic. However, the designation has no legal consequences and the 2004 status of French Polynesia acknowledged that it belongs to the category of Overseas Collectivity.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 27 Jan. and 10 Feb. 2008. The anti-independence Our Home alliance (To Tatou Aī'a) of former president Gaston Tong Sang won 27 seats (with 45.1% of the vote), the Union for Democracy alliance (UPD) 20 seats with 37.2% and the Popular Rally (Tahoera'a Huiraatira) 10 with 17.2%. An indirect presidential election was held on 11 Feb. 2009 in the Territorial Assembly. In the first round Oscar Temaru (Tavini Huiraatira/People's Servant Party) received 24 votes against 20 for outgoing president Gaston Tong Sang (To Tatou Aī'a), 12 for Edouard Fritch (Tahoera'a Huiraatira) and 1 for Sandra Levy-Agami (ind.). Temaru defeated Tong Sang in the second round by 37 votes to 20.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

High Commissioner: Richard Didier; b. 1961 (took office on 24 Jan. 2011).

President: Oscar Temaru; b. 1944 (Tavini Huiraatira; took office for a fifth time on 1 April 2011).

ECONOMY

Currency

The unit of currency is the franc CFP (XPF). Up to 31 Dec. 1998, its parity was to the French franc: 1 franc CFP = 0.055 French francs; from 1 Jan. 1999 parity was linked to the euro: 119.3317422 francs CPF = one euro.

Budget

Revenues totalled 143.1bn. francs CPF in 2007 and expenditures 144.5bn. francs CPF.

Performance

Total GDP was US$6,172m. in 2007; GDP per capita was US$23,488. Real GDP growth was 3.0% in 2007.

Banking and Finance

There are four commercial banks: Banque de Tahiti, Banque de Polynésie, Société de Crédit et de Développement de l'Océanie and the Banque Westpac.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

French Polynesia is heavily dependent on external sources for its energy.

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 3.8 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Production (2007) was 687m. kWh, of which approximately 24% was hydro-electric. Installed capacity in 2007 was an estimated 113,000 kW.

Agriculture

Agriculture used to be the primary economic sector but now accounts for only 2% of GDP. Important products are copra (coconut trees cover the coastal plains of the mountainous islands and the greater part of the low-lying islands) and the nono fruit, which has medicinal value. Production in tonnes (2007): copra, 9,508; fruit, 8,920; vegetables, 5,675; nono, 2,089; vanilla, 37. Tropical fruits, such as bananas, pineapples and oranges, are grown for local consumption.

Livestock (2006 estimates): cattle 12,000; goats 17,000; pigs 27,000; poultry 232,000.

Forestry

There were 105,000 ha. of forest in 2005, or 28.7% of the total land area.

Fisheries

Polynesia has an exclusive zone of 5.2m. sq. km, one of the largest in the world. The industry employs some 2,000 people, including 700 traditional fishermen. Catch (2005): 12,152 tonnes, almost exclusively from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Some 2,218 industrial enterprises employ 5,800 people. Principal industries include food and drink products, cosmetics, clothing and jewellery, furniture-making, metalwork and shipbuilding.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

French Polynesia imports a great deal and exports very little. Trade, 2008, in US$1m. (2007 in brackets): imports (c.i.f.), 2,237 (1,863); exports (f.o.b.), 207 (197).

The chief exports are pearls, aircraft and associated equipment, fruit and vegetables, precious jewellery and fish. Polynesia is among the world's largest producers of pearls. While pearl production remains the second largest industry in Polynesia after tourism, the number of pearl farms has shrunk in recent years from over 2,500 in 2001 to just 516 in 2006 as a result of over-production and declining pearl quality.

The major trading partner overall is France, although Japan (41% of pearl exports) is the leading export market. There is also a significant amount of trade with the USA and Australia. France accounted for 34% of imports and 14% of exports in 2004.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2009, 5,430 new cars were registered.

Civil Aviation

The main airport is at Papeete (Tahiti-Faa'a). Air France and nine other international airlines (including Air New Zealand, Qantas and LAN Airlines) connect Tahiti International Airport with Paris, Auckland, Honolulu, Los Angeles, Osaka, Santiago, Tokyo and many Pacific islands. In 2007, 1,788 flights landed at Papeete and 1,786 took off. 332,444 passengers arrived in 2007, 332,894 departed and 17,342 were in transit.

Shipping

Ten shipping companies connect France, San Francisco, New Zealand, Japan, Australia, southeast Asia and most Pacific locations with Papeete. In 2005 vessels totalling 19,749,378 GRT passed through Papeete's main port. Around 1.4m. people pass through the port each year.

Telecommunications

There were 54,900 fixed telephone lines in 2010 (202.9 per 1,000 inhabitants). Tikiphone, the sole provider of mobile phone services, had over 210,000 subscribers by mid-2010. In 2005 there were 28,000 PCs in use and 55,000 internet users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There is a tribunal de première instance and a cour d'appel at Papeete. The population in penal institutions in Oct. 2007 was 404 (153 per 100,000 population).

Education

In 2006–07 there were 165 primary schools and 99 secondary schools. 15,249 children attended pre-primary schools in 2006–07, 24,961 pupils primary schools and 33,845 pupils secondary schools. The University of French Polynesia (Université de la Polynésie Française) was formed from the Tahitian campus of the now-defunct French University of the Pacific (UFP) in 1999. In 2008–09 student enrolments numbered 2,664.

Health

In 2007 there were a total of 613 beds in public sector establishments and 260 in the private sector. Medical personnel in 2007 numbered 609 doctors, 1,123 nurses, 149 pharmacists, 128 midwives and 113 dentists.

RELIGION

In 2001 there were approximately 119,000 protestants (about 49% of the population) and 94,000 Roman Catholics (39%).

CULTURE

Press

In 2006 there were two daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 22,000.

Tourism

Tourism is the main industry. There were 218,241 tourist arrivals in 2007.

St Barthélemy

Saint-Barthélemy

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

There is evidence of habitation dating to 1000 BC. Columbus visited in 1493 but it was the French who settled St Barthélemy in 1648. The island came under Swedish rule in 1784, after which it prospered as a free port. The British briefly held sway in 1801–02 but the French regained control in 1878 and the island was administered by Guadeloupe until seceding on 22 Feb. 2007 to become a French overseas collectivity.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The island has an area of 21 sq. km and is situated 200 km northwest of Guadeloupe. 2007 recorded population, 8,450. The capital is Gustavia.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The laws of France are enforceable. Government on the island is by a 19-seat Territorial Council, elected by popular vote every five years. St Barthélemy is represented in the Senate in Paris by one senator and on the Economic, Social and Environmental Council by one councillor. The council elects a President and the French government appoints a Prefect.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the Territorial Council were held in July 2007. Saint Barth First!/UMP won 16 seats and three other parties won one seat each.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Prefect: Philippe Chopin.

President of the Territorial Council: Bruno Magras.

St Martin

Saint-Martin

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Sighted by Columbus in 1493, St Martin was settled by the Dutch in 1631. The Spanish claimed dominion in 1633 but by 1648 the island was divided between Dutch and French interests. The French part of the island was administered by Guadeloupe until it seceded on 22 Feb. 2007 to become a French overseas collectivity (encompassing several neighbouring islets including Île Tintamarre).

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

St Martin is situated 300 km southeast of Puerto Rico. The French-run part of the island covers roughly the northern two-thirds while the southern third (Sint Maarten) is an autonomous country within the Kingdom of the Netherlands. The French area is 53 sq. km; the recorded population in 2007 was 35,925. Marigot is the capital.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The laws of France are enforceable. Government on the island is by a 23-seat Territorial Council, elected by popular vote every five years. St Martin is represented in the Senate in Paris by one senator and on the Economic, Social and Environmental Council by one councillor. The council elects a President and the French government appoints a Prefect.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the Territorial Council were held in July 2007. Union for Progress/UMP won 16 seats; Rally Responsibility Success, 6; and Succeed Saint Martin, 1.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Prefect: Philippe Chopin.

President of the Territorial Council: Alain Richardson.

St Pierre and Miquelon

Saint-Pierre et Miquelon

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The only remaining fragment of the once-extensive French possessions in North America, the archipelago was settled from France in the 17th century. It was a French colony from 1816 until 1976, an overseas department until 1985, and is now an Overseas Collectivity.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The archipelago consists of two islands off the south coast of Newfoundland, with a total area of 242 sq. km, comprising the Saint-Pierre group (26 sq. km) and the Miquelon-Langlade group (216 sq. km). The recorded population at 2007 was 6,099, representing a decrease of 217 from the 1999 census. Approximately 90% of the population lives on Saint-Pierre. The chief town is St Pierre.

The official language is French.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009: births, 64; deaths, 45.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Overseas Collectivity is administered by a Territorial Council of 19 members directly elected for a six-year term. It is represented in the National Assembly in Paris by one deputy, in the Senate by one senator and on the Economic, Social and Environmental Council by one councillor. The French government is represented by a Prefect.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the Territorial Council elections on 19 March 2006, 16 seats went to Archipel Demain, 2 to Cap sur l'Avenir and 1 to SPM Ensemble.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Prefect: Patrice Latron.

President of the Territorial Council: Stéphane Artano.

Government Website (French only):

ECONOMY*Currency

Since 1 Jan. 2002 the euro has been the official currency as in metropolitan France.

Budget

Receipts of the Territorial Council in 2009 were €46.3m. and expenditures €38.9m.

Banking and Finance

Banks include the Banque des Îles Saint-Pierre et Miquelon, the Crédit Saint-Pierrais and the Caisse d'Épargne.

A Development Agency was created in 1996 to help with investment projects.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 12.9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Production (2009): 44,920 GWh. Consumption (2009): 46,584 GWh. Installed capacity (2007 estimate): 27,000 kW.

Agriculture

The islands, being mostly barren rock, are unsuited for agriculture, but some vegetables are grown and livestock is kept for local consumption.

Fisheries

In June 1992 an international tribunal awarded France a 24-mile fishery and economic zone around the islands and a 10.5-mile-wide corridor extending for 200 miles to the high seas. The 2005 catch amounted to 3,084 tonnes, chiefly snow crab, cod, lumpfish, shark and scallops. A Franco-Canadian agreement regulating fishing in the area was signed in Dec. 1994. The total annual catch has declined dramatically in the past 15 years.

INDUSTRY

In 2009 there were 528 businesses (including 122 commercial, 76 services, 64 construction, 63 real estate, 42 accommodation and restaurants, 37 primary sector and 28 transport). The main industry is fish processing. Diversification activities are in progress (aquaculture, sea products processing, scallops plant).

Labour

The economically active population in 2006 was 3,185. Of those in employment in 2006, 85.6% worked in the service sector. The unemployment rate was 7.7% in 2006. In Jan. 2012 the minimum wage (SMIC) was raised to €9.22 an hour (€1,398.37 month for a 35-hour week).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Trade in €1m. (2009): imports, 60.2; exports, 3.9.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2009 there were 117 km of roads. There were 5,773 vehicles in use in 2009; 380 new vehicles were registered in the course of the year.

Civil Aviation

Air Saint-Pierre connects St Pierre with Halifax, Moncton (New Brunswick), Montreal, Sydney (Nova Scotia) and St John's (Newfoundland). In addition, a new airport capable of receiving medium-haul aeroplanes was opened in 1999.

Shipping

St Pierre has regular services to Fortune in Canada. In 2009, 25,286 tonnes of freight (excluding petroleum products) were handled by St Pierre's ports.

Telecommunications

There were 4,800 main (fixed) telephone lines in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There is a court of first instance and a higher court of appeal at St Pierre.

Education

Primary instruction is free. In 2009 there were 644 pupils in pre-elementary education and primary education and 624 in secondary education. There were 155 teachers, 62% of whom were employed in the public sector.

Health

In 2009 there was one hospital with 40 beds, one retirement home with 60 beds and one care centre for the disabled with 20 beds.

exchanging their status to that of an overseas territory, which took effect from 29 July 1961. In March 2003 Wallis and Futuna became an Overseas Collectivity.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory comprises two groups of islands in the central Pacific (total area, 274 sq. km; census population, 13,445 in 2008). The Îles de Hoorn lie 255 km northeast of the Fiji Islands and consist of two main islands: Futuna (64 sq. km, 4,238 inhabitants) and uninhabited Alofi (51 sq. km). The Wallis Archipelago lies another 160 km further northeast, and has an area of 159 sq. km (9,207 inhabitants). It comprises the main island of Uvéa (60 sq. km) and neighbouring uninhabited islands, with a surrounding coral reef. The capital is Mata-Utu (2008 census population of 1,126) on Uvéa. Wallisian and Futunian are distinct Polynesian languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Estimates per 1,000 population, 2003: birth rate, 19.4; death rate, 5.9.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A Prefect represents the French government and carries out the duties of head of the territory, assisted by a 20-member Territorial Assembly directly elected for a five-year term, and a six-member Territorial Council, comprising the three traditional chiefs and three nominees of the Prefect agreed by the Territorial Assembly. The territory is represented by one deputy in the French National Assembly, by one senator in the Senate, and by one member on the Economic, Social and Environmental Council. There are three districts: Singave and Alo (both on Futuna), and Wallis; in each, tribal kings exercise customary powers assisted by ministers and district and village chiefs.

SUI GENERIS COLLECTIVITIES

Collectivités sui generis

New Caledonia

Nouvelle-Calédonie

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

From the 11th century Melanesians settled in the islands that now form New Caledonia and dependencies. Capt. James Cook was the first European to arrive on Grande Terre on 4 Sept. 1774. The first European settlers (English Protestants and French Catholics) came in 1840. In 1853 New Caledonia was annexed by France and was used as a penal colony, taking in 21,000 convicts by 1897. Nickel was discovered in 1863, the mining of which provoked revolt among the Kanak tribes. During the Second World War, New Caledonia was used as a military base by the USA. Having fought for France during the war, the Kanaks were awarded citizenship in 1946. Together with most of its former dependencies, New Caledonia was made an Overseas Territory in 1958. It became a Territorial Collectivity under the Nouméa Accord of May 1998, which agreed on a gradual handover of responsibilities and the creation of New Caledonian citizenship. New Caledonia became a Sui Generis Collectivity (one that does not conform to the normal administrative structure) in March 2003. A referendum on independence is set to be held between 2014 and 2018.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory comprises Grande Terre (New Caledonia mainland) and various outlying islands, all situated in the southwest Pacific (Melanesia) with a total land area of 18,575 sq. km (7,172 sq. miles). New Caledonia has the second biggest coral reef in the world. The population (2009 census, provisional) was 245,580; density, 13.2 per sq. km. The main ethnic groups are the native Melanesians (Kanak) and the Europeans (mostly French). There are also Wallisians and Futunians, Tahitians and Vietnamese and smaller minorities. In 2004 an estimated 63% of the population lived in urban areas. The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 270,000. The capital, Nouméa, had 7,579 inhabitants in 2009.

There are four main islands (or groups of):

Grande Terre An area of 16,372 sq. km (about 400 km long, 50 km wide) with a population (2004 census) of 205,939. A central mountain range separates a humid east coast and a drier temperate west coast. The east coast is predominantly Melanesian; the Nouméa region predominantly European; and the rest of the west coast is of mixed population.

Loyalty Islands 100 km (60 miles) east of New Caledonia, consisting of four large islands: Maré, Lifou, Uvéea and Tiga. It has a total area of 1,981 sq. km and a population (2004) of 22,080.

Isle of Pines A tourist and fishing centre 50 km (30 miles) to the southeast of Nouméa, with an area of 152 sq. km and a population (2004) of 1,840.

Bélep Archipelago About 50 km northwest of New Caledonia, with an area of 70 sq. km and a population (2004) of 930.

The remaining islands are very small and have no permanent inhabitants.

At the 1996 census there were 341 tribes (which have legal status under a high chief) living in 160 reserves, covering a surface area of 392,550 ha. (21% of total land), and representing about 28.7% of the population. 80,443 Melanesians belong to a tribe.

New Caledonia has a remarkable diversity of Melanesian languages (29 vernacular), divided into four main groups (Northern, Central, Southern and Loyalty Islands). There were 62,648 speakers in 2004. In 2006, eight Melanesian languages were taught in schools.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008: live births, 4,015; deaths, 1,173; marriages, 975; divorces (2005), 341. Population growth rate, 2008, 1.1%. Life expectancy at birth, 2007, 75.9 years. Infant mortality, 2007, 6 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2.2 births per woman.

CLIMATE

2006: Nouméa, Jan. 25.5°C, July 20.5°C (average temperature, 23.2°C; max. 33.8°C, min. 14.6°C). Annual rainfall 739 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Subsequent to the referendum law of 9 Nov. 1988, the organic and ordinary laws of 19 March 1999 define New Caledonia's new statute. In March 2003 New Caledonia became a Sui Generis Collectivity with specific status endowed with wide autonomy. New Caledonia's institutions comprise the congress, government, economic and social council (CES), the customary senate and customary councils. The congress is made up of 54 members called 'Councillors of New Caledonia' from the provincial assemblies. The 11-member government is elected by congress on a proportional ballot from party lists. The president is elected by majority vote of all members. Each member is allocated to lead and control a given sector in the administration. The government's mandate ends when the mandate of the Congress that elected it comes to an end. New Caledonia is represented by two deputies and two senators in the French parliament, and by two councillors on the Economic, Social and Environmental Council.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On 8 Nov. 1998 there was a referendum for the agreement of the Nouméa Accord. Nearly 72% of those who voted approved. Turnout was 74.2%. Voting was restricted to those people resident in New Caledonia before 1998.

In elections to the Territorial Congress on 10 May 2009 the conservative Rassemblement-UMP won 13 of 54 seats, Calédonie Ensemble 10, Union Calédonienne 8, Union Nationale pour l'Indépendance-Front de Libération Nationale Kanak et Socialiste (UNI-FLNKS) 8, Avenir Ensemble-Le Mouvement de la Diversité 6, FLNKS 3, Parti Travailliste 3, Rassemblement pour la Calédonie 2 and Libération Kanak Socialiste 1. Turnout was 72.3%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

High Commissioner: Albert Dupuy.

President of the Government: Harold Martin.

President of the Congress: Roch Wamytan.

ECONOMY

Currency

The unit of currency is the franc CFP (XPF), with a parity of 1,000 francs CFP = 8.38 euros. 344,036m. francs CFP were in circulation in Dec. 2006.

Budget

New Caledonia's expenditures in 2008 totalled 163,834m. francs CFP (of which direct taxes 36.3% and indirect taxes 29.1%) and receipts 184,661m. francs CFP (of which current expenditure 93.3%).

Performance

Total GDP was 737bn. francs CFP in 2008.

Banking and Finance

In 2006 the banks were: Banque Calédonienne d'Investissement (BCI), Banque de Nouvelle-Calédonie (BNC), Banque Nationale de Paris/Nouvelle-Calédonie (BNP/NC), Société Générale Calédonienne de Banque (SGCB) and Caisse d'Épargne.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 12.8 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Production (2007): 1,926m. kWh. Installed capacity was 0.4m. kW in 2007.

Minerals

A wide range of minerals has been found in New Caledonia including: nickel, copper and lead, gold, chrome, gypsum and platinum metals. The nickel deposits are of special value, being without arsenic, and constitute between 20–40% of the world's known nickel resources located on land.

Production of nickel ore (2006): 102,986 tonnes, of which saprolitic ore (80,794 tonnes) and lateritic ore (22,192).

Agriculture

In 2007 there were an estimated 9,000 ha. of arable land and 4,000 ha. of permanent crops. Estimated livestock, 2008: cattle, 90,000; pigs, 29,000; horses, 12,000; goats, 8,200; poultry, 600,000. The chief products are beef, pork, poultry, coffee, copra, maize, fruit and vegetables. Production (2008 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): coconuts, 17; yams, 13; maize, 4; cassava, 3; sweet potatoes, 3.

Forestry

There were 717,000 ha. of forest in 2005, or 39.2% of the total land area. Timber production (2007), 5,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries

Total catch in 2005 was 3,315 tonnes. In 2005 there were 216 fishing boats. Aquaculture (consisting mainly of saltwater prawns) provides New Caledonia's second highest source of export income after nickel.

INDUSTRY

Up until the end of the 1970s the New Caledonia economy was almost totally dependent on the nickel industry. Subsequently transformation or processing industries gained in importance to reach levels similar to those in metallurgic industries.

Labour

The employed population (2005) was 70,291. In Feb. 2010 the guaranteed monthly minimum wage was 132,000 francs CFP. In 2004 the unemployment rate stood at 16.3%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Trade, 2007, in US$1m.: imports c.i.f., 2,427; exports f.o.b., 1,648. In 2007, 26.6% of imports came from France, 13.6% from Singapore and 10.7% from Australia. In 2007, 24.1% of exports went to Japan, 15.8% to France and 12.1% to China. In 2007 machinery and transport equipment accounted for 34.0% of imports, mineral fuels and lubricants 14.1% and manufactured goods 11.3%. Ferro-nickel accounted for 57.5% of exports, and nickel ores and concentrates 24.4%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2006 there were 5,622 km of roads and 110,000 vehicles. In 2006 road accidents injured 878 and killed 56 persons.

Civil Aviation

New Caledonia is connected by air routes with Australia, Japan, Vanuatu, Wallis and Futuna, Fiji Islands, New Zealand and French Polynesia. Regular domestic air services are provided by Air Calédonie from Magenta aerodrome in Nouméa. In 2006 there were 297,257 passengers recorded at Magenta Aerodrome. Internal services with Air Calédonie link Nouméa to a number of domestic airfields.

In 2006, 414,990 passengers and 5,440 tonnes of freight were carried via La Tontouta International Airport, near Nouméa.

Shipping

In 2005, 235 vessels unloaded 1,566,000 tonnes of freight in New Caledonia; 341 vessels loaded 3,643,000 tonnes of cargo.

Telecommunications

In 2005 there were 189,600 telephone subscribers (799.9 per 1,000 inhabitants), of which 134,300 were mobile phone subscribers. In 2005 there were 76,000 internet users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There are courts at Nouméa, Koné and Wé (on Lifou Island), a court of appeal, a labour court and a joint commerce tribunal. There were 3,916 cases judged in the magistrates courts in 2005; 226 went before the court of appeal, 16 were sentenced in the court of assizes.

The population in penal institutions in 2005 was 285 (123 per 100,000 population).

Education

In 2005 there were 37,245 pupils and 1,883 teachers in 287 primary schools; 31,987 pupils and 2,727 teachers in 93 secondary schools; and 2,926 students at university with 111 teaching staff. By decree of 1999 the New Caledonia campus of the French University of the Pacific (UFP), established in 1987, was separated from the campus, to become University of New Caledonia (UNC).

Health

In 2008 there were 545 doctors, 125 dentists, 141 pharmacists, 1,091 nurses and 106 midwives. There were 701 hospital beds for short-term care in 2007.

Welfare

There are two main forms of social security cover: Free Medical Aid, which provides total sickness cover for non-waged persons and low-income earners; and the Family Benefit, Workplace Injury and Contingency Fund for Workers in New Caledonia (CAFAT). There are also numerous mutual benefit societies. In 2006 Free Medical Aid had 57,873 beneficiaries; CAFAT had 214,638 beneficiaries.

RELIGION

There were about 130,000 Roman Catholics in 2001.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

New Caledonia has one site on the UNESCO World Heritage List: its lagoons—reef diversity and associated ecosystems (inscribed on the list in 2008), some of the most extensive in the world.

Press

In 2010 there was one daily newspaper, Les Nouvelles Calédoniennes.

Tourism

In 2005 New Caledonia welcomed 101,000 tourists. In 2004 there were 91 hotels providing 2,295 beds.

Southern and Antarctic Territories

Terres Australes et Antarctiques Françaises (TAAF)

GENERAL DETAILS

The Territory of the TAAF was created on 6 Aug. 1955. It comprises the Kerguelen and Crozet archipelagoes, the islands of Saint-Paul and Amsterdam (formerly Nouvelle Amsterdam) and the Scattered Islands group, all in the southern Indian Ocean, plus Terre Adélie. It has been classified as a Sui Generis Collectivity (one that does not conform to the normal administrative structure) since 2007. The Scattered Islands were incorporated into the TAAF in Feb. 2007. Since 2 April 1997 the administration has had its seat in Saint-Pierre, Réunion; before that it was in Paris. The Administrator is assisted by a seven-member consultative council which meets twice yearly in Paris; its members are nominated by the government for five years. The 15-member Polar Environment Committee, which in 1993 replaced the former Consultative Committee on the Environment (est. 1982), meets at least once a year to discuss all problems relating to the preservation of the environment.

The French Institute for Polar Research and Technology was set up to organize scientific research and expeditions in Jan. 1992. The staff of the permanent scientific stations of the TAAF (approximately 200 in 2005) is renewed every 6 or 12 months and forms the only population.

Prefect: Pascal Bolot.

Amsterdam and Saint-Paul Islands Situated 38–39° S. lat., 77° E. long. Amsterdam, with an area of 54 sq. km (21 sq. miles) was discovered in 1522 by Magellan's companions; Saint-Paul, lying about 100 km to the south, with an area of 7 sq. km (2.7 sq. miles), was probably discovered in 1559 by Portuguese sailors. Both were first visited in 1633 by the Dutch explorer, Van Diemen, and were annexed by France in 1843. They are both extinct volcanoes. The only inhabitants are at Base Martin de Vivies (est. 1949 on Amsterdam Island), including several scientific research stations, a hospital, communication and other facilities (ranging from 25–45 persons). Crayfish are caught commercially on Amsterdam.

Crozet Islands Situated 46° S. lat., 50–52° E. long.; consists of five larger and 15 tiny islands, with a total area of 505 sq. km (195 sq. miles). The western group includes Apostles, Pigs and Penguins islands; the eastern group, Possession and Eastern islands. The archipelago was discovered in 1772 by Marion Dufresne, whose first mate, Crozet, annexed it for Louis XV. A meteorological and scientific station (ranging from 25–45 persons) at Base Alfred-Faure on Possession Island was built in 1964.

Kerguelen Islands Situated 48–50° S. lat., 68–70° E. long.; consists of one large and 85 smaller islands, and over 200 islets and rocks, with a total area of 7,215 sq. km (2,786 sq. miles) of which Grande Terre occupies 6,675 sq. km (2,577 sq. miles). It was discovered in 1772 by Yves de Kerguelen, but was effectively occupied by France only in 1949. Port-aux-Français has several scientific research stations (ranging from 70–110 persons). Reindeer, trout and sheep have been acclimatized.

Scattered Islands Situated in the Indian Ocean around Madagascar between 11–22° S. lat., 39–54° E. long., comprising Bassas da India, Europa Island, the Glorieuses Islands, Juan de Nova Island and Tromelin Island. Formerly French minor territories, the islands—which have a total area of 39 sq. km (15 sq. miles)—were incorporated into the TAAF in Feb. 2007. Sovereignty of individual islands is disputed, with the Comoros, Madagascar, Mauritius and the Seychelles all making claims. The population numbers around 50. The islands are designated as nature reserves and support a range of meteorological stations, military garrisons and radio stations. About 12,000 tonnes of guano are mined annually on Juan de Nova Island.

Terre Adélie Comprises that section of the Antarctic continent between 136° and 142° E. long., south of 60° S. lat. The ice-covered plateau has an area of about 432,000 sq. km (166,800 sq. miles) and was discovered in 1840 by Dumont d'Urville. A research station (ranging from 30–110 persons) is situated at Base Dumont d'Urville, which is maintained by the French Institute for Polar Research and Technology.

MINOR TERRITORIES

Dépendances

Clipperton Island

Île Clipperton

In the 18th century the island was the hideout of a pirate, John Clipperton, for whom it was named. In 1855 it was claimed by France, and in 1897 by Mexico. It was awarded to France by international arbitration in 1935. Clipperton Island is a Pacific atoll, 3 km long, some 1,120 km southwest of the coast of Mexico. It covers an area of 7 sq. km and is uninhabited. The island is administered by the Minister of Overseas France. The island is occasionally visited by tuna fishermen.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Between the 16th and 18th centuries, the Fang and other peoples in the region of present-day Gabon were part of a federation of chiefdoms. The country's capital, Libreville, grew from a settlement of slaves who were rescued from captivity by the French in 1849. Colonized by France around this period, the territory was annexed to French Congo in 1888. There was resistance by the indigenous people between 1905 and 1911 to the depredations of colonial rule, but the country became a separate colony in 1910 as one of the four territories of French Equatorial Africa. Gabon became an autonomous republic within the French Community on 28 Nov. 1958 and achieved independence on 17 Aug. 1960.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Gabon is bounded in the west by the Atlantic Ocean, north by Equatorial Guinea and Cameroon and east and south by the Republic of the Congo. The area covers 267,670 sq. km, including 10,000 sq. km of inland waters. Its population at the 2003 census was reported as 1,517,685, although this is believed to be an overcount. United Nations estimate, 2010, 1.51m.; density, 6 per sq. km. In 2005, 83.6% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 1.66m.

The capital is Libreville (538,195 inhabitants, 2003 census), other large towns (1993 census) being Port-Gentil (79,225), Franceville (31,183), Oyem (22,404) and Moanda (21,882).

Provincial areas, populations and capitals:

Province	Area in sq. km	Population 2003 census	Capital
Estuaire	20,740	662,028	Libreville
Haut-Ogooué	36,547	228,471	Franceville (Masuku)
Moyen-Ogooué	18,535	60,990	Lambaréné
Ngounié	37,750	101,415	Mouila
Nyanga	21,285	50,297	Tchibanga
Ogooué-Ivindo	46,075	64,163	Makokou
Ogooué-Lolo	25,380	64,534	Koulamoutou
Ogooué-Maritime	22,890	128,774	Port-Gentil
Woleu-Ntem	38,465	157,013	Oyem

The largest ethnic groups are the Fangs (25%) in the north and the Bapounou (24%) in the south. There are some 40 smaller groups. French is the official language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 39,000; deaths, 14,000. Estimated rates, 2008 (per 1,000 population): births, 27.3; deaths, 9.7. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.0%. Expectation of life at birth, 2007, 58.7 years for males and 61.5 years for females. Infant mortality, 2005, 59 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 3.3 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is equatorial, with high temperatures and considerable rainfall. Mid-May to mid-Sept. is the long dry season, followed by a short rainy season, then a dry season again from mid-Dec. to mid-Feb., and finally a long rainy season once more. Libreville, Jan. 80°F (26.7°C), July 75°F (23.9°C). Annual rainfall 99" (2,510 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 21 March 1997 the government presented to the Parliament legislation aimed at reforming the constitution in a number of key areas: notably, the bill mandated the creation of a Vice-President of the Republic, the extension of the presidential term of office from five to seven years, and the transformation of the Senate into an Upper Chamber of Parliament. Gabon has a bicameral legislature, consisting of a 120-member National Assembly (with members elected by direct, popular vote to serve five-year terms) and a 102-member Senate (elected for six-year terms in single-seat constituencies by local and departmental councillors). At a referendum on electoral reform on 23 July 1995, 96.48% of votes cast were in favour; turnout was 63.45%. The 1991 constitution provides for an executive President directly elected for a five-year term (renewable once only). In July 2003 Gabon's parliament approved an amendment to the constitution that allows the president to seek re-election indefinitely. The head of government is the Prime Minister, who appoints a Council of Ministers.

National Anthem

'La concorde' ('The Concord'); words and tune by G. Damas Aleka.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 30 Aug. 2009. The late president's son, Ali-Ben Bongo Ondimba, was elected with 41.7% of votes cast against 25.9% for Andre Mba Obame and 25.2% for Pierre Mamboundou. There were 15 other candidates. Bongo's victory was marred by accusations of vote-rigging and post-election violence.

Elections for the National Assembly were held on 17 Dec. 2011. The Gabonese Democratic Party (PDG) won 114 of 120 seats, the Rally for Gabon took three, and the Circle of Liberal Reformers, the Social Democratic Party and the Union for the New Republic one seat each. Turnout was 34.8%. A number of opposition parties withdrew from the election process and urged their supporters to boycott the elections.

Senate elections were held on 18 Jan. 2009. The PDG won 75 of 102 seats; Rally for Gabon, 6; Gabonese Union for Democracy and Development, 3. Independents claimed nine seats and the remaining nine went to minor parties.

CURRENT LEADERS

Ali-Ben Bongo Ondimba

Position
President

Introduction

Ali-Ben Bongo Ondimba was elected president in Aug. 2009 following the death of his father, Omar Bongo Ondimba (president from 1967–2009). Ali Bongo served as minister of foreign affairs under his father, as well as deputy of the National Assembly, minister of defence and vice-president of the Gabonese Democratic Party (PDG).

Early Life

Ali-Ben Bongo Ondimba is the oldest son of Omar Bongo, the country's longest-serving president. He was born Alain-Bernard Bongo in Feb. 1959 in Brazzaville, Republic of the Congo. His mother, Gabonese singer Josephine Kama (later Patience Dabany), was 15 at the time of his birth.

The family moved to Gabon in 1960, just after its independence from France. Alain-Bernard spent most of his youth in France, studying at a protestant primary school in Cévennes and then the Catholic College Notre-Dame de Sainte-Croix, on the outskirts of Paris. In 1973 Albert-Bernard Bongo and Alain-Bernard Bongo changed their names to Omar and Ali-Ben, taking the second name Ondimba as part of their conversion to Islam. Ali graduated in law from the Sorbonne before returning to Gabon in 1981. He went straight into the upper ranks of the PDG, presided over by his father.

In 1983 Ali Bongo was elected a member of the PDG central committee and in 1984 became his father's personal spokesman. In 1989 he was appointed minister of foreign relations, replacing his cousin Martin Bongo, who had been minister since 1976. At the 1990 elections Bongo was returned as representative for the province of Haut-Ogooué. Since the constitution of 1991, which allowed for multi-party politics, also set a minimum age of 35 for a minister, Bongo was replaced at the department of foreign relations.

In 1992 he organized the singer Michael Jackson's tour of Africa. Bongo was re-elected to represent Haut-Ogooué in 1996 and again in 2006. In 1999 he returned to the cabinet as minister for defence. He became party vice president in 2003 and in 2005 helped run his father's election campaign. After Omar Bongo died in Spain in June 2009, Bongo put himself at centre stage to run for the presidency in new elections in Aug.

In competition against 17 opponents, he won 42% of the vote. As with previous elections, the results were contested amid allegations of government electoral fraud and bribery. Thousands took to the streets in the capital, Libreville, and in the second city, Port-Gentil. A recount was held and the result upheld by the Supreme Court. Six newspapers were suspended for criticism of the government.

Career in Office

Bongo's first act as president was to reinstate Paul Biyoghé Mba as head of the cabinet and to cut down the number of ministers, having pledged to slash government expenditure. Ministers have undergone curbs on privileges and been subject to pay cuts. In Nov. 2009 Bongo travelled to Paris to meet French president Nicolas Sarkozy and in Dec. 2009 he made a state visit to the Vatican and Pope Benedict XVI.

Bongo pledged to fight corruption. Nonetheless, Transparency International and other NGOs have pushed for investigations into the Bongo family's finances.

In Dec. 2010 parliament adopted a controversial constitutional amendment allowing the president to extend his mandate in the case of an emergency. In early 2011 Bongo's main rival in the 2009 election, Andre Mba Obame, took refuge in the United Nations compound in Libreville. Mba Obame claimed to have been the rightful winner of the presidential poll, in response to which Bongo banned his party. In National Assembly elections in Dec. 2011 the PDG retained its substantial parliamentary majority.

Raymond Ndong Sima

Position
Prime Minister

Introduction

Raymond Ndong Sima, a former minister of agriculture, was appointed prime minister by President Ali-Ben Bongo Ondimba in Feb. 2012 following the victory of the ruling Gabonese Democratic Party (PDG) in parliamentary elections. Sima has combined careers in politics and private enterprise and is regarded as a key figure in Ondimba's plan to diversify the economy. Sima is the first person from Gabon's northern region to become prime minister.

Early Life

Raymond Ndong Sima was born on 23 Jan. 1955 in Oyem in the province of Woleu-Ntem in the north of Gabon. He was educated in Oyem, at Bessieux College in Libreville and in Algeria. In 1981 he received a masters degree in economics from the University of Paris IX-Dauphine in France. Returning to Gabon later that year, he worked as a researcher for the department of the economy.

In 1986, during an economic crisis, Sima joined the cabinet as minister for economy and planning. From 1992–94 he served as director general of the economy, managing Gabon's negotiations with the IMF and the World Bank. He was director of Hévégab, the state-owned rubber company, from 1994–98 and in the late 1990s was made director of Gabon's state railway operator, C.E.C.F.T., serving until 2001. In 2003 he founded a private bus company.

In 2009, following the victory of Ali-Ben Bongo Ondimba in presidential elections after the death of his father and presidential predecessor Omar Bongo Ondimba, Sima was appointed minister of agriculture, livestock, fisheries and rural development. He oversaw the introduction of a US$1.3m. agricultural development programme, backed by the European Union and the UN Food and Agriculture Organization. In Dec. 2011 he won a seat in parliament for the ruling PDG, representing the constituency of Kye in Woleu-Ntem province.

With the PDG retaining power at the legislative election, the incumbent prime minister, Paul Biyoghé Mba, stepped down. President Ondimba appointed Sima as his successor on 27 Feb. 2012, citing Sima's combination of business expertise and administrative experience as key to the appointment. It is viewed as significant since Sima is the first prime minister from the less developed north of the country.

Career in Office

On becoming prime minister Sima made substantial changes to the administration, bringing 14 newcomers into ministerial and deputy ministerial posts. One of his principal tasks is to implement Ondimba's 'Emerging Gabon' project to diversify the economy away from agriculture and to build up the services, industry and environmental sectors.

DEFENCE

In 2008 military expenditure totalled US$134m. (US$90 per capita), representing 0.9% of GDP.

Army

The Army totalled (2007) 3,200. A referendum of 23 July 1995 favoured the transformation of the Presidential Guard into a republican guard. There is also a paramilitary Gendarmerie of 2,000. France maintains 700 Army personnel in Gabon.

Navy

There is a small naval flotilla, about 500 strong in 2007. France maintains 1,560 Naval personnel in Gabon.

Air Force

Personnel (2007) 1,000. There are around 16 combat capable aircraft (including nine Mirage 5s) and five attack helicopters.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 4.9% of GDP in 2006, industry 61.2% and services 33.9%.

Gabon's 'shadow' (black market) economy is estimated to constitute approximately 47% of the country's official GDP.

Overview

Gabon is rich in natural resources and one of the largest oil producers in sub-Saharan Africa. Income per capita is greater than the sub-Saharan Africa average but, although extreme poverty has been cut drastically over the years, 33% of the population live under the poverty line and unemployment remains high.

Until the early 1970s when offshore oil deposits were discovered, principal exports were timber and manganese. Because of the heavy role played by the oil industry in the economy, the agricultural sector accounts for a small percentage of total output relative to other low-income countries. After the oil rush there was volatile growth marked by fiscal mismanagement that in 1994 led to a 50% currency devaluation. In the years following, an inflationary spike prompted French, US and IMF financial support. Among oil-exporting African nations, Gabon stands out as a growth laggard, averaging only 1.1% annual growth from 1996–2005 compared to a 9.1% average among the continent's top seven oil exporters.

Gabon has seen oil production drop in recent years, with few additional deposits predicted. The global economic crisis in 2008–09 had a knock-on effect on the price of oil and other exports. Given the reliance on the oil sector, economic diversification is key to further growth.

Currency

The unit of currency is the franc CFA (XAF) with a parity of 655.957 francs CFA to one euro. Foreign exchange reserves were US$466m. in June 2005 and total money supply was 416,653m. francs CFA. Gold reserves were 13,000 troy oz in July 2005. Inflation was 5.0% in 2007, 5.3% in 2008 and 2.1% in 2009.

Budget

In 2006 revenue totalled 1,582.6bn. francs CFA and expenditure 1,066.3bn. francs CFA. Oil revenues accounted for 64.0% of total revenue in 2006 and taxes on international trade 15.2%; current expenditure accounted for 77.6% of total expenditure.

The standard rate of VAT is 18% (reduced rate, 10%).

Performance

The economy contracted by 1.4% in 2009 but there was growth of 5.7% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$13.0bn.

Banking and Finance

The Banque des États de l'Afrique Centrale (Governor, Lucas Abaga Nchama) is the bank of issue. There are five commercial banks. The largest are Banque Internationale pour le Commerce et l'Industrie du Gabon, BGFIBANK and Union Gabonaise de Banque, which between them had 80% of the market share in 2003.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Gabon's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 3.1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 0.4m. kW in 2007. Production totalled 1.84bn. kWh in 2007 (approximately 57% thermal and 43% hydro-electric). Consumption per capita was an estimated 1,297 kWh in 2007.

Oil and Gas

Proven oil reserves (2008), 3.2bn. bbls. Production, 2008, 11.8m. tonnes. In 2007 exports of oil stood at 9.7m. tonnes. There were proven natural gas reserves of 28bn. cu. metres in 2007. Natural gas production (2007) was 158m. cu. metres.

Minerals

There are an estimated 200m. tonnes of manganese ore and 850m. tonnes of iron ore deposits. Gold, zinc and phosphates also occur. Output, 2006: manganese ore, 2.98m. tonnes.

Agriculture

In 2007 the agricultural population was approximately 415,000, of whom 192,000 were economically active. There were 325,000 ha. of arable land in 2001 and 170,000 ha. of permanent crops. 15,000 ha. were irrigated in 2001.

The major crops (estimated production, 2003, in 1,000 tonnes) are: plantains, 270; sugarcane, 235; cassava, 230; yams, 155; taro, 59; maize, 31; groundnuts, 20; bananas, 12; rubber, 11. Other important products include palm oil, sweet potatoes and soybeans.

Livestock (2002 estimates): 212,000 pigs; 195,000 sheep; 90,000 goats; 35,000 cattle; 3m. chickens.

In 2002 an estimated 32,000 tonnes of meat, 2,000 tonnes of eggs and 2,000 tonnes of fresh milk were produced.

Forestry

Equatorial forests covered 21.78m. ha. in 2005, or 84.5% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 was 3.93m. cu. metres.

Since 2002 a tenth of the country has been transformed into 13 national parks covering nearly 30,000 sq. km.

Fisheries

The catch in 2005 was 43,863 tonnes, of which 34,163 tonnes were from marine waters. Industrial fleets account for about 25% of the catch.

INDUSTRY

Most manufacturing is based on the processing of food (particularly sugar), timber and mineral resources, cement and chemical production and oil refining. Production figures in 1,000 tonnes: residual fuel oil (2007), 356; cement (2006), 260; distillate fuel oil (2007), 260; petrol (2007), 56; beer (2003), 75.4m. litres; soft drinks (2005), 60.7m. litres.

Labour

The economically active workforce in 2005 numbered 664,000 (59% males). The unemployment rate was 14.8% in 2005. In 2007 the legal minimum monthly wage was 80,000 francs CFA. There is a 40-hour working week.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$3,902m. in 2005. The government retains the right to participate in foreign investment in oil and mineral extraction.

Imports and Exports

Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006
Imports c.i.f.	745.2	770.0	964.9	1,471.9	1,724.9
Exports f.o.b.	2,411.1	319.9	2,780.0	5,068.5	6,015.2

Machinery and transport equipment accounted for 42.8% of imports in 2006, food and live animals 13.0%, chemicals and related products 9.2% and iron and steel 7.4%. Petroleum and petroleum products constituted 85.6% of exports in 2006, and cork and wood 6.3%.

Main import suppliers, 2006: France, 39.9%; Belgium, 14.2%; USA, 7.3%. Main export markets, 2006: USA, 58.4%; China, 10.6%; France, 7.1%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2004 there were an estimated 9,170 km of roads (10.2% of which were paved); and in 2002 some 25,600 passenger cars plus 17,000 trucks and vans. There were 293 deaths in road accidents in 2000.

Rail

The 669 km standard gauge Transgabonais railway runs from the port of Owendo to Franceville. Total length of railways, 2005, 649 km. In 2008 passenger-km travelled came to 95m. and freight tonne-km to 2,485m.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Libreville (Léon M'Ba Airport), Port-Gentil and Franceville (Masuku); scheduled internal services link these to a number of domestic airfields. Libreville, the main airport, handled 757,000 passengers and 17,700 tonnes of freight in 2001. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Gabonese-based carriers flew 8m. km, carrying 386,000 passengers (170,000 on international flights). Gabon Airlines was established in July 2006 as a successor to the bankrupt national carrier Air Gabon.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 12 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 6,000 GT. Owendo (near Libreville), Mayumba and Port-Gentil are the main ports. Rivers are an important means of inland transport.

Telecommunications

In 2005 Gabon had 688,900 telephone subscribers (497.8 per 1,000 inhabitants), including 649,800 mobile phone subscribers. 45,000 PCs were in use (32.5 per 1,000 inhabitants) in 2005 and internet users numbered 67,000.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There are Tribunaux de grande instance at Libreville, Port-Gentil, Lambaréné, Mouila, Oyem, Franceville (Masuku) and Koulamoutou, from which cases move progressively to a central Criminal Court, Court of Appeal and Supreme Court, all three located in Libreville. Civil police number about 900. The death penalty was abolished in Feb. 2010.

Education

The adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 87.7% (91.4% among males and 84.1% among females). Education is compulsory between 6–16 years. In 2000–01 there were 265,714 pupils and 5,399 teachers in primary schools, and 101,681 pupils with 2,727 (1996–97) teachers at secondary schools; in 1996–97 there were 6,703 students in 11 technical and professional schools and 76 students in two teacher-training establishments.

In 2009 there was one university at Libreville (the Omar Bongo University) and one university of science and technology at Franceville (Masuku). In 2004 a university of health sciences (previously part of the Omar Bongo University) was created in Libreville.

In 2000–01 total expenditure on education came to 4.6% of GNP.

Health

In 2004 there were 395 physicians, 66 dentistry personnel, 63 pharmaceutical personnel and 6,778 nursing and midwifery personnel. In 2006 there were 20 hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants.

RELIGION

In 2001 there were 0.69m. Roman Catholics, 0.22m. Protestants and 0.17m. followers of African Christian sects. The majority of the remaining population follow animist beliefs. There are about 12,000 Muslims.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Gabon has one site on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the ecosystem and relict cultural landscape of Lopé-Okanda (inscribed on the list in 2007), an area of rainforest and savannah containing the remains of Neolithic and Iron Age settlements.

Press

In 2006 there was one government-controlled daily newspaper (L'Union) with a circulation of 20,000. In the 2010 World Press Freedom Index, compiled by Reporters Without Borders, Gabon was ranked 107th out of 178 countries.

Tourism

358,000 non-resident tourists arrived at Libreville airport in 2008, up from 169,000 in 2001.

Festivals

Gabao Hip Hop Festival takes place in Libreville in June.

Republic of The Gambia

Capital: Banjul

Population projection, 2015: 1.98m.

GNI per capita, 2011: (PPP$) 1,282

HDI/world rank: 0.420/168

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Stone circles thought to have been constructed by ancestors of the Jola people are estimated to date from AD 600. Kingdoms of Mandinka-speaking people were established near the Gambia River from around 1100. State-building by the Jolof and Serer groups gathered pace from around 1400. Portuguese mariners entered the Gambia River in 1455 but the first permanent European settlement was founded by traders from the Baltic Duchy of Courland (Latvia) in 1651. English and French merchants subsequently vied for control of the region (Senegambia). The British Captain, Alexander Grant, established Bathurst (Banjul) as a garrison in 1816 and it was controlled from the Freetown Colony (Sierra Leone). The Gambia became an independent member of the British Commonwealth on 18 Feb. 1965 and an independent republic on 24 April 1970.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Gambia takes its name from the River Gambia, and consists of a strip of territory never wider than 10 km on both banks. It is bounded in the west by the Atlantic Ocean and on all other sides by Senegal. The area is 10,690 sq. km, including 2,077 sq. km of inland water. Population (census, 2003), 1,360,681; density, 158 per sq. km. In 2005, 53.9% of the population were urban.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 1.98m.

The largest ethnic group is the Mandingo, followed by the Wolofs, Fulas, Jolas and Sarahuley. The country is administratively divided into eight local government areas (LGAs).

The eight LGAs, with their areas, populations and chief towns are:

Division	Area in sq. km	Population 2003 census	Chief town
Banjul	12	35,061	Banjul
Basse	2,070	182,586	Basse Santa Su
Brikama	1,764	389,594	Brikama
Janjangbureh	1,428	107,212	Janjangbureh
Kanifeng	76	322,735	Kanifeng
Kerewan	2,255	172,835	Kerewan
Kuntaur	1,467	78,491	Kuntaur
Mansakonko	1,618	72,167	Mansakonko

The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 61,000; deaths, 19,000. Estimated birth rate in 2008 was 36.8 per 1,000 population; estimated death rate, 11.3. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 3.0%. Expectation of life, 2007, was 54.1 years for males and 57.3 for females. Fertility rate, 2008, 5.1 births per woman; infant mortality, 2005, 97 per 1,000 live births. The Gambia has made some of the best progress in recent years in reducing child mortality. The number of deaths per 1,000 live births among children under five was reduced from around 153 in 1990 to approximately 106 in 2008.

CLIMATE

The climate is characterized by two very different seasons. The dry season lasts from Nov. to May, when precipitation is very light and humidity moderate. Days are warm but nights quite cool. The SW monsoon is likely to set in with spectacular storms and produces considerable rainfall from July to Oct., with increased humidity. Banjul, Jan. 73°F (22.8°C), July 80°F (26.7°C). Annual rainfall 52" (1,295 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1970 constitution provided for an executive President elected directly for renewable five-year terms. The President appoints a Vice-President who is the government's chief minister. The single-chamber National Assembly has 53 members (48 elected by universal adult suffrage for a five-year term and five appointed by the President).

A referendum of 8 Aug. 1996 approved a new constitution by 70.4% of votes cast. It took effect in Jan. 1997 and thereby created the Second Republic. Under this, the ban on political parties imposed in July 1994 was lifted. Members of the ruling Military Council resigned from their military positions before joining the Alliance for Patriotic Reorientation and Construction (APRC).

National Anthem

'For the Gambia, our homeland'; words by V. J. Howe, tune traditional.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 24 Nov. 2011. President Jammeh (Alliance for Patriotic Reorientation and Construction) was re-elected with 71.5% of the vote, against 17.4% for Ousainou Darboe (United Democratic Party) and 11.1% for Hamat Bah (ind.).

Parliamentary elections were held on 29 March 2012. The Alliance for Patriotic Reorientation and Construction (APRC) won 43 seats, the National Reconciliation Party 1 and ind. 4. Turnout was 38.7%. Six parties boycotted the election.

CURRENT LEADERS

Retd Col. Yahya Jammeh

Position
President

Introduction

Former army colonel Yahya Jammeh came to power in a military coup in July 1994. Leading the APRC, he was elected to office in 1996 and re-elected in 2001, 2006 and 2011.

Early Life

Yahya A. J. J. Jammeh was born in the Foni Kansala district of The Gambia on 25 May 1965, the year in which the country gained independence from the United Kingdom. He joined the army in 1984, rising to captain by 1992, and on 22 July 1994 led a successful coup against Sir Dawda Jawara, the president since 1970.

Career in Office

In 1996 a new constitution was approved by referendum. Jammeh was confirmed as president in Sept. that year and his Alliance for Patriotic Reorientation and Construction (APRC) secured a majority of seats in parliamentary elections in Jan. 1997. He was re-elected president in Oct. 2001. The 2002 parliamentary elections, in which the APRC won nearly all the seats, were boycotted by the main opposition party.

Legislation passed in 2004 set jail terms for journalists guilty of libel, and broadcast news has remained tightly controlled. Jammeh was re-elected in Sept. 2006. Although the poll was considered free and fair on the day by observers the Commonwealth Secretariat noted 'abuses of incumbency' before the vote. Alleged coup attempts against the regime led to the imposition of death sentences on six military officials and two businessmen in July 2010 and of long prison terms on former army and navy chiefs in May 2011. Jammeh was overwhelmingly re-elected in Nov. 2011 and his APRC again won almost all of the seats at the March 2012 parliamentary election, which six opposition parties boycotted claiming that it was rigged.

DEFENCE

The Gambian National Army, 800 strong, has two infantry battalions, one engineer squadron and one company of presidential guards.

The marine unit of the Army consisted in 2007 of approximately 70 personnel operating four inshore patrol craft, based at Banjul.

Defence expenditure totalled US$16m. in 2008 (US$9 per capita), representing 2.2% of GDP.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 29% of GDP in 2007, industry 15% and services 56%.

Overview

With few natural resources and a limited agricultural base, remittances from workers overseas are crucial. Tourism is a key driver of the economy and the most significant foreign exchange earner. Agriculture, which is dominated by groundnuts, accounts for about 75% of employment and 60% of domestically produced exports. The main export commodities are peanut products, fish, cotton lint and palm kernels. Good groundnut and rice harvests helped offset a 10% decline in tourism and a 20% decline in remittances following the 2008 global financial crisis.

The Gambia continues to struggle with a high debt level, even after meeting the requirements of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative in Dec. 2007. Interest accounts for over 25% of overall government expenditures. The poverty rate is 58% and unemployment and underemployment rates remain high. The Gambia is ranked 168th out of 187 on the UN Human Development Index.

Currency

The unit of currency is the dalasi (GMD), of 100 butut. Inflation was 4.5% in 2008 and 4.6% in 2009. Foreign exchange reserves were US$90m. in July 2005. Total money supply in June 2005 was 3,256m. dalasis.

Budget

In 2007 revenues were 3,663.5m. dalasis and expenditures 3,635.0m. dalasis. Tax revenue accounted for 82.9% of revenues in 2007; current expenditure accounted for 71.1% of expenditures.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 6.7% in 2009 and 6.1% in 2010. Total GDP was US$0.8bn. in 2010.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank of The Gambia (founded 1971; Governor, Amadou Colley) is the bank of issue. There are six other banks: Standard Chartered, Trust Bank, Arab Gambian Islamic Bank, Continent Bank, First International and the International Bank for Commerce and Industry.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 0.2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 53,000 kW in 2007. Production was 229m. kWh in 2007; consumption per capita in 2007 was 140 kWh.

Oil and Gas

President Jammeh announced in Feb. 2004 that large quantities of oil had been discovered in waters off The Gambia's coast. Although the country has yet to strike crude oil, the president is still keen to turn The Gambia into an oil-producing state.

Minerals

Heavy minerals, including ilmenite, zircon and rutile, have been discovered in Sanyang, Batokunku and Kartong areas.

Agriculture

About 68% of the population depend upon agriculture. There were 0.25m. ha. of arable land in 2001 and 5,000 ha. of permanent crops. Almost all commercial activity centres upon the marketing of groundnuts, which is the only export crop of financial significance. Cotton is also exported on a limited scale. Rice is of increasing importance for local consumption. Major products (2002, in 1,000 tonnes), are: millet, 85; groundnuts, 72; rice, 20; maize, 19; sorghum, 15; cassava, 8.

Livestock (2002): 327,000 cattle, 262,000 goats, 146,000 sheep and 1m. poultry.

Forestry

In 2005 forests covered 471,000 ha., or 41.7% of the land area. Timber production in 2007 was 778,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2008 was estimated at 42,645 tonnes, of which marine fish approximately 90% and freshwater fish 10%.

INDUSTRY

Labour

The labour force in 1996 totalled 579,000 (55% males). Around 78% of the economically active population are engaged in agriculture.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$672m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

In 2006 imports (f.o.b.) were valued at US$221.8m. and exports (f.o.b.) at US$108.7m. Re-exports account for more than 70% of total exports. Chief imports in 2006 were: machinery and transport equipment, 25.2%; food and live animals, 22.8%; petroleum and petroleum products, 17.2%. In 2006 groundnuts accounted for 47.8% of domestic exports, fruit and vegetables 28.7% and machinery and transport equipment 9.6%. Main import sources, 2006: Denmark, 16.5%; USA, 12.0%; China, 9.3%; Côte d'Ivoire, 8.6%. Leading markets for domestic exports, 2006: UK, 48.7%; Senegal, 30.4%; France, 4.3%; Germany, 4.3%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were some 3,742 km of roads in 2004, of which 19.3% were paved. Number of vehicles (2007): 8,800 passenger cars; 2,600 lorries and vans.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Banjul (Yundum). The national carrier, Gambia International Airlines, ceased operations in 2007. Banjul handled 300,000 passengers in 2001 (all on international flights) and 2,700 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

The chief port is Banjul. Ocean-going vessels can travel up the Gambia River as far as Kuntaur. In Jan. 2009 there were five ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 32,000 GT.

Telecommunications

The Gambia had 291,500 telephone subscribers in 2005, or 192.1 per 1,000 population, of which 247,500 were mobile phone subscribers. There were 92.0 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 3,500 in 2007 (2.2 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Justice is administered by a Supreme Court consisting of a chief justice and puisne judges. The High Court has unlimited original jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters. The Supreme Court is the highest court of appeal and succeeds the judicial committee of the Privy Council in London. There are Magistrates Courts in each of the divisions plus one in Banjul and two in nearby Kombo St Mary's Division—eight in all. There are resident magistrates in provincial areas. There are also Muslim courts, district tribunals dealing with cases concerned with customary law, and two juvenile courts.

The death penalty, last used in 1981, was abolished in 1993 but restored by decree in 1995. The population in penal institutions in Sept. 2002 was 450 (32 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

The adult literacy rate in 2008 was 45%. In 2007 there were 218,341 pupils with 5,341 teaching staff at primary schools and 101,670 pupils with 4,475 teachers at secondary schools. Higher education institutes include The Gambia College, a technical training institute, a management development institute, a multimedia training institute and a hotel training school. In 2008 there were 6,000 students and 400 academic staff in tertiary education.

In 2009 public expenditure on education came to 3.8% of GDP.

Health

In 2005 there were eight hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants. There were 156 physicians, 43 dentistry personnel and 1,881 nursing and midwifery personnel in 2003.

RELIGION

More than 90% of the population is Muslim. Banjul is the seat of an Anglican and a Roman Catholic bishop. There is a Methodist mission. A few sections of the population retain their original animist beliefs.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

The Gambia has two sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: James Island and Related Sites (inscribed on the list in 2003), containing important evidence of early Afro-European encounters and the slave trade.

The Gambia shares a UNESCO site with Senegal: the Stone Circles of Senegambia (added in 2006) is a collection of 93 stone circles, tumuli and burial mounds from between the 3rd century BC and the 16th century AD.

Press

In 2006 there were two daily newspapers—the Daily Observer and the government-owned Gambia Daily.

Tourism

Tourism is The Gambia's biggest foreign exchange earner. In 2007 there were 143,000 non-resident charter tourists (excluding same-day visitors); spending by tourists totalled US$77m. in 2007.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

By the 1st millennium BC the Diakhi (Taokhi) and the Qolha (Colchis) tribal groups had developed bronze casting. A two-state confederation emerged as early as the 6th century BC, with Colchis (Egrisi) in the west and Kartli (Iberia) in the east. The Greeks established Black Sea colonies from the 6th century BC, including Phasis (present-day Poti), Gyenos (Ochamchire) and Dioscuras (Sukhumi). Parnavaz I ruled a united Kartli (or Georgia) from his citadel of Armaztsikhe from c. 302–237 BC.

The Romans under Pompey attacked Kartli in 65 BC, defeating King Artax and establishing a client state. In the first half of the 2nd century AD Kartli grew under Parsman II. Rome, realizing its value as an ally against Parthia (Iran), recognized Kartli's extended borders. In 298 the Sassanid Iranians acknowledged Roman jurisdiction over Kartli-Iberia and recognized King Mirian III (284–361), who adopted Christianity as the state religion. Christianity brought close ties with Rome's successor, Byzantium, though Persia controlled Kartli for much of the 4th–6th centuries.

Tbilisi fell to an Arab army in 645 but Kartli retained considerable autonomy under local Arab rulers. In 813 the Armenian prince Ashot I of the Bagrationi family took control of Georgia, beginning nearly a millennium of Bagratid rule. Bagrat V (1027–72) united west and east and David IV ('the Builder', 1099–1125) presided over a golden age, repulsing the Seljuk Turks and disseminating Georgian influence in the Caucasus.

The Mongols invaded in 1236 and the Turkic conqueror Timur destroyed Tbilisi in 1386. Turkish dominance was sealed when the Byzantine Empire collapsed. By the 18th century the Bagratids had regained autonomy under nominal Persian rule. In 1762 Herekle II took control of the eastern regions of Kartli and Kakhetia, reducing the powers of the Georgian nobility. Herekle opened channels with Russia to gain protection from the Turks, though Russo-Turkish rivalry soon afflicted Georgia. After the Persians sacked Tbilisi in 1795 Herekle again sought Russian protection, leading to annexation.

In 1801 Tsar Alexander I abolished the kingdom of Kartli-Kakhetia (Eastern Georgia). Western Georgia (Imeretia) was annexed in 1804 and the Georgian Orthodox Church lost its autocephalous status in 1811. Russification intensified in the second half of the 19th century but a national liberation movement emerged in the 20th century, with Russia declaring martial law in 1905 following peasant revolts and general strikes. Revolutionaries split between the gradualist Mensheviks and the radical Bolsheviks (led by Ioseb Jugashvili, later Joseph Stalin).

The Caucasus became a major battleground in 1915 when Russia invaded Turkey. In May 1918 Georgia declared independence under the protection of Germany (to prevent invasion by the Turks). Lenin gave recognition in May 1920 and the Menshevik-dominated government redistributed swathes of aristocratic landholdings. In 1921 the Bolshevik Red Army invaded Georgia. From 1922–36 Georgia was part of the Transcaucasian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic within the USSR. In 1936 the republic was divided into Armenia, Azerbaijan and Georgia.

Over 500,000 Georgians served in the Red Army in the Second World War and the autonomy of the Georgian Orthodox Church was restored in 1943. Stalin oversaw forced urbanization and industrialization and although he and Lavrenti Beria (chief of secret police) were Georgians, Georgia suffered greatly under his regime. Criticism of Stalin in Georgia gained momentum under Gorbachev's glasnost policy of the late 1980s. In 1972 Eduard Shevardnadze took control of the Georgian Communist Party. His clearout of officials prompted dissident nationalists (led by the academic, Zviad Gamsakhurdia) to warn of Russification. In 1978 leaders of the Abkhazian Autonomous Republic threatened to secede from Georgia. Shevardnadze took steps to diffuse the crisis, including an affirmative action programme for ethnic Abkhaz. When Shevardnadze became Soviet foreign minister in 1985 his successor, Jumber Patiashvili, removed some of the Shevardnadze appointees, forcing reformist leaders underground.

In April 1989 Soviet troops broke up peaceful demonstrations in Tbilisi and 20 Georgians were killed. Following the 'April Tragedy' Shevardnadze was sent to restore calm. Multiparty elections in Oct. 1990 saw Gamsakhurdia's Round Table/Free Georgia coalition win a solid majority. Supported by a referendum, parliament declared independence and declined to participate in the Commonwealth of Independent States.

In May 1991 Gamsakhurdia was elected president but the National Guard joined the opposition. When fighting in central Tbilisi in late Dec. forced Gamsakhurdia to flee to Chechnya, a military council took control and invited Shevardnadze to return in March 1992. Post-Soviet Georgia was dogged by separatism, especially in South Ossetia and Abkhazia. Relations with Russia were strained by its support for these insurgencies. In 1990 Gamsakhurdia had removed South Ossetia's autonomous status. When the South Ossetian regional legislature attempted to unite with Russian North Ossetia, Georgian forces invaded. Thousands died and tens of thousands were displaced before Yeltsin mediated a ceasefire in July 1992.

In Abkhazia the ethnic Abkhaz population feared cultural annihilation while the Georgian majority resented disproportionate allocation of political and administrative positions to the Abkhaz. In July 1992 the Abkhazian Supreme Soviet voted to separate from Georgia. In Aug. 1992 the National Guard seized the Abkhazian capital, Sukhumi. Hundreds died and refugees fled to Russia and other parts of Georgia. The Abkhazian government requested Russian intervention, retaking Sukhumi and forcing the Georgian army out in 1993. A ceasefire began in early 1994. When Gamsakhurdia invaded Mingrelia (his home region where he had retained support) Shevardnadze asked for Russian military assistance. Defeated, Gamsakhurdia committed suicide in Jan. 1994.

Opposition to Shevardnadze's increasingly corrupt rule grew in the late 1990s, despite advantageous relations with the West and a US$3bn. Baku-Tbilisi-Ceyhan oil pipeline deal. In Nov. 2003 Shevardnadze resigned after opposition forces, alleging electoral fraud, stormed parliament. Following the 'Rose Revolution' Mikheil Saakashvili became president in Jan. 2004. Saakashvili's presidency has been dominated by diplomatic sparring with Russia over Russian interference in Abkhazia and South Ossetia. Relations reached a new low in the months following Saakashvili's re-election in Jan. 2008. In March Abkhazia's separatist government requested the UN to recognize the region's independence and in April 2008 Moscow announced closer ties with both regions. In Aug. Saakashvili sent troops into South Ossetia to attack separatist forces. Russia claimed its citizens were under attack and responded by sending in several thousand troops. A week of fierce fighting was brought to an end by a French-brokered peace deal, with Russia recognizing independence for both South Ossetia and Abkhazia. Moscow was subsequently accused of delaying its troop withdrawal. Adjara, another autonomous region, was brought under Tbilisi's control with the ejection of its populist leader, Aslan Abashidze, in 2004.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Georgia is bounded in the west by the Black Sea and south by Turkey, Armenia and Azerbaijan. Area, 69,700 sq. km (26,900 sq. miles). Its census population in 2002 was 4,371,535 (excluding Abkhazia and South Ossetia). Jan. 2011 estimate (excluding Abkhazia and South Ossetia): 4,469,000; density (excluding Abkhazia and South Ossetia), 78 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 4.23m.

In 2005, 52.5% of the population lived in urban areas. The capital is Tbilisi (Jan. 2010 population estimate, 1.15m.). Other principal towns (with Jan. 2010 population estimates in brackets): Kutaisi (192,500), Batumi (123,500), Rustavi (119,500). After Russian-backed Abkhaz forces and their allies took Sukhumi in 1993, non-Abkhaz residents were ejected from the region. Sukhumi's population fell from 121,000 in 1991 to an estimated 45,000 in 2002.

Georgians accounted for 83.8% of the 2002 census population; others included 6.5% Azerbaijanis, 5.7% Armenians and 1.5% Russians. Georgia includes the Autonomous Republics of Abkhazia and Adjara and the former Autonomous Region of South Ossetia.

Georgian is the official language. Armenian, Russian and Azeri are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2005, 46,512; deaths, 42,984. Rates, 2005: birth, 10.7 per 1,000 population; death, 9.9 per 1,000. Annual population growth rate, 2000–05, –0.3%. Life expectancy, 2007, 68.1 years for males and 75.0 years for females. Infant mortality, 2005, 41 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 1.6 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The Georgian climate is extremely varied. The relatively small territory covers different climatic zones, ranging from humid subtropical zones to permanent snow and glaciers. In Tbilisi summer is hot: 25–35°C. Nov. sees the beginning of the Georgian winter and the temperature in Tbilisi can drop to –8°C; however, average temperature ranges from 2–6°C.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution of 24 Aug. 1995 defines Georgia as a presidential republic with federal elements. The head of state is the President, elected by universal suffrage for not more than two five-year terms. The 150-member Supreme Council is elected for four-year terms, with 75 members elected in single-seat constituencies and 75 by proportional representation. There is a 5% threshold.

National Anthem

'Tavisupleba' ('Freedom'); words by Dawit Magradse, tune by Zakaria Paliashvili.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the presidential election held on 5 Jan. 2008 Mikheil Saakashvili of the United National Movement was re-elected president with 53.5% of the vote. Levan Gachechiladze took 25.7% and Badri Patarkatsishvili 7.1%. Turnout was 56.2%.

At the parliamentary elections of 21 May 2008 the United National Movement won 119 of the 150 seats (with 59.2% of the vote). The Joint Opposition (a coalition of the National Council and New Rights) won 17 seats (17.7%), the Christian Democrats 6 (8.7%), the Labour Party 6 (7.4%) and the Party of Republicans 2 (3.8%). Turnout was 53.9%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

President: Mikheil Saakashvili; b. 1967 (United National Movement; since 20 Jan. 2008, having previously been president from Jan. 2004 to Nov. 2007).

CURRENT LEADERS

Mikheil Saakashvili

Position

President

Introduction

Mikheil Saakashvili was first elected president on 4 Jan. 2004. A former protégé of President Eduard Shevardnadze, he led opposition to the rigged parliamentary elections of Nov. 2003 and forced the president to resign. Saakashvili's peaceful management of the 'rose revolution' earned him respect at home and abroad and even the support of the ousted Shevardnadze. However, more recently he has been undermined by increasing domestic opposition, in response to which he imposed a state of emergency in Nov. 2007. He nevertheless secured re-election as president in Jan. 2008 but with a much reduced majority. Relations with Russia, already fragile, were shattered in Aug. 2008 when Georgian military action against the separatist enclave of South Ossetia provoked a retaliatory invasion by Russian forces. Saakashvili is fluent in Georgian, Russian, English, French and Ukrainian.

Early Life

Mikheil (Mikhail in Russian) Saakashvili was born on 21 Dec. 1967 in Tbilisi. He received law degrees from Kyiv University, Ukraine in 1992 and Columbia University, New York in 1994 and completed a doctorate in juridical science at George Washington University, Washington, D.C. He pursued further studies in Florence and Strasbourg.

While working for a New York law firm, Saakashvili was approached by Zurab Zhvania, speaker of the Georgian parliament. The Georgian leader, Eduard Shevardnadze, was seeking potential parliamentary candidates, unconnected to the Soviet system. Saakashvili returned home and was elected to parliament in Dec. 1995. As a member of Shevardnadze's Citizens' Union and a trained jurist, his political career developed rapidly. He served as chairman of the parliamentary committee on electoral reform and contributed to the drafting of the 1995 constitution. He led the Citizens' Union in parliament from 1998–99 and was appointed vice-president of the Council of Europe's parliamentary assembly in Jan. 2000.

Appointed justice minister in Oct. 2000, Saakashvili attempted an overhaul of the judicial system, condemned by international observers as highly corrupt. He also tried to reform the prison system and proposed a bill on illegal property confiscation, which was blocked by Shevardnadze. His programme was cut short when he openly accused the ministers for economics and state security and Tbilisi's head of police of corruption and profiteering. Shevardnadze, then president, refused to act on these charges, forcing Saakashvili to resign in Sept. 2001.

Having left the government, he continued his anti-corruption programme by forming a party, the United National Movement, to represent Georgia's reformist elements. Coalition partners included the small ideological Republican Party and the Union of National Forces. Support was widened by alliances with Zurab Zhvania's United Democrats and the Burjanadze-Democrats, led by Nino Burjanadze, Zhvania's replacement as speaker. Saakashvili was elected chairman of the Tbilisi Assembly in June 2002.

Saakashvili campaigned for the Nov. 2003 parliamentary elections on an anti-Shevardnadze platform, drawing large crowds with his energetic rhetoric, especially in Adjara, in the southwest, and Kvemo Kartli, a province in the southeast with a large Azeri minority. Despite OSCE sponsorship, the elections on 2 Nov. were chaotic and heavily rigged by the ruling Citizens' Union. The delayed announcement of provisional results provoked accusations of electoral fraud. Burjanadze and Zhvania agreed to form a coalition with Saakashvili—the United Opposition Front—and massive demonstrations were organized night after night in Tbilisi. After the results were announced, putting Saakashvili's United National Movement in third place, a boycott of parliament was declared by the coalition. Shevardnadze refused to compromise and opened parliament on 22 Nov. Saakashvili responded by summoning his national supporters to Tbilisi and demanded the president's resignation. During Shevardnadze's opening address Saakashvili burst into the assembly, brandishing a rose, the symbol of the peaceful demonstrations. His supporters occupied the chancellery, causing the president to declare a state of emergency.

Bereft of support from abroad and in his own government, Shevardnadze finally resigned on 23 Nov. His avoidance of a military solution was praised internationally and by the opposition leaders. In the wake of his resignation, Saakashvili, Burjanadze and Zhvania agreed to present a united front in immediate presidential elections, the former gaining the support from the other two in exchange for senior government positions. On 4 Jan. 2004 Saakashvili won the presidential election with just over 96% of the votes. His electoral promises were broad and ambitious: the abolition of taxes on small businesses, doubling of pensions and public sector salaries and swift punishment for the worst abuses of the previous regime. His campaign was strengthened by the co-operation of Shevardnadze, who voted for his successor.

Career in Office

Saakashvili declared his priorities in office as maintaining the territorial integrity of Georgia and his anti-corruption programme. He consolidated his political position in March 2004 when the National Movement–Democrats bloc won the parliamentary elections with a substantial majority of seats. Tension increased with Adjara's president, Aslan Abashidze, who declared a state of emergency in his jurisdiction and rejected the new central government's authority. Saakashvili reasserted direct control over Adjara in May 2004 after popular demonstrations in Batumi forced Abashidze to step down. Elsewhere, Saakashvili proposed giving greater autonomy—but not full independence—to the separatist regions of South Ossetia and Abkhazia.

Despite friction with Russia over its links with these regions, its military bases in Georgia and the conflict in Chechnya (where Russia has accused Georgia of aiding Chechen fighters), Saakashvili initially sought to improve relations between the two countries. Nevertheless, bilateral tensions resurfaced in 2006 as energy supplies from Russia were disrupted in Jan., Russia suspended imports of Georgian wine and mineral water on health grounds in March–May, and Georgia briefly detained and then expelled four Russian army officers on spying charges in Sept.–Oct. (in retaliation for which Russia imposed a transport blockade and adopted punitive measures against ethnic Georgians living in Russia). In Dec. 2006 the Georgian government accepted a doubling of the price of Russian natural gas supplies, but accused its powerful neighbour of political blackmail.

Tension continued through 2007, as Georgia accused Russia of violations of its airspace in Aug. and of orchestrating mass opposition demonstrations in Tbilisi against Saakashvili's government which in Nov. led to a police crackdown and temporary state of emergency. The protests were sparked particularly by allegations of corruption and murder against Saakashvili made by a former defence minister in Sept. Despite his apparent unpopularity and opposition claims of fraud and vote rigging, Saakashvili was re-elected as president in polling in Jan. 2008, and in May the ruling United National Movement won a landslide victory in parliamentary elections.

Meanwhile, suspicious of Georgia's aspirations to join NATO, Russia stated in April 2008 that it would strengthen its links with South Ossetia and Abkhazia. This prompted the Georgian government to accuse Russia of planning military intervention and annexation of the regions. In Aug. continuing tensions escalated into outright military conflict after Georgian troops had mounted an attack of separatist forces in South Ossetia. Russian forces occupied the enclaves and advanced deep into Georgian territory, destroying strategic targets, before agreeing a French-brokered ceasefire following diplomatic intervention by the European Union. Later in the month, Russia unilaterally recognized the independence of Abkhazia and South Ossetia, a move rejected by Saakashvili and the Western nations. In Sept. Russia announced that it would keep troops in Abkhazia and South Ossetia but completed the withdrawal from the rest of Georgia in Oct.

Also in Oct. 2008, Saakashvili's former ally, Nino Burjanadze, announced the creation of a new opposition group, claiming that the government was not capable of protecting the country and should face fresh elections. At the same time, Saakashvili dismissed Prime Minister Vladimir Gurgeniidze and nominated Grigol Mgaloblishvili to succeed him, an appointment confirmed by parliament the following month. However, Mgaloblishvili stepped down in 2009 owing to ill health and was replaced by Nika Gilauri in Feb. Opposition agitation against the president and his powers continued and in May 2009 the authorities quelled a military mutiny. In May 2011 riot police violently broke up a five-day rally in Tbilisi by opposition protesters, led by Burjanadze and calling on Saakashvili to resign.

Georgia's relations with Russia thawed in the first few months of 2010 as direct air traffic resumed in Jan. and a border crossing closed since 2006 was reopened in March. However, in Aug. Russia announced that it was deploying air defence systems in Abkhazia and South Ossetia in defiance of Georgian sovereignty.

DEFENCE

The total strength of the Armed Forces consisted of 21,150 personnel in 2007. The UN peacekeeping mission (United Nations Observer Mission in Georgia, or UNOMIG, which was established in Aug. 1993) ended in June 2009 owing to a lack of consensus among Security Council members on mandate extension. Following the collapse of the USSR in 1991 Russia maintained two bases in Georgia with some 4,000 personnel. The last Russian troops left Georgia in Nov. 2007. However, several thousand soldiers returned in Aug. 2008 when Moscow responded to Georgia's military attack on separatist forces in South Ossetia. Despite a subsequent withdrawal, some forces remain as part of a 'buffer zone' around South Ossetia and Abkhazia.

Georgia hopes to join NATO, although its bid to become a member is fiercely opposed by Russia.

Defence expenditure in 2008 totalled US$1,037m. (US$224 per capita), representing 8.1% of GDP (up from 4.4% of GDP in 2006).

Army

The Army totalled 17,767 (3,767 conscripts) in 2007. In addition there were 1,578 active reservists in the National Guard and 6,300 Ministry of the Interior troops. A paramilitary border guard exists, estimated at 5,400.

Navy

Former Soviet facilities at Poti have been taken over. The headquarters are at Tbilisi. Personnel, 2007, 495.

Air Force

Personnel, 2007, 1,310 (290 conscripts). There were nine combat capable aircraft in 2007 (mainly Su-25 fighter-bombers) and nine attack helicopters.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 10.0% of GDP in 2008, industry 21.2% and services 68.8%.

Georgia's 'shadow' (black market) economy is estimated to constitute approximately 62% of the country's official GDP, one of the highest percentages of any country in the world.

Overview

Georgia is a small, lower-income transition economy. After independence in 1991, civil war and the loss of markets in the former Soviet Union led to economic collapse, with exports declining by 90% and output falling by 70%. Political tensions, declining living standards and low tax revenues undermined the funding of basic services. Progress towards macroeconomic stabilization was made in the late 1990s but was disrupted by internal fragmentation, drought and the 1998 financial crisis in Russia. IMF-supported programmes from 2001-04 aided growth recovery and price stability.

Prudent macroeconomic policies and structural reforms, notably a privatization programme, helped achieve strong growth and single-digit inflation. Anti-corruption initiatives and government efforts to create a more business-friendly environment saw the World Bank label the economy as the world's number one reformer in a 2006 'Doing Business' survey. Sanctions imposed by Russia, its major export market, have been offset by reform-led growth momentum but uncertainty remains over their future effects and Georgia's ability to generate greater foreign inflows.

Military conflict with Russia in Aug. 2008 and the global financial crisis damaged the economy. Falling FDI, a sharp credit squeeze and a collapse in confidence resulted in the economy contracting by 4% in 2009. A strong fiscal policy response with 10% of GDP injected into the economy during 2008 and 2009 led to broad-based economic growth across all sectors, driven by a rebound of credit to the private sector and strong export demand. However, FDI inflows remain far below pre-crisis levels and public debt is high at 39% of GDP as a result of the fiscal response.

Currency

The unit of currency is the lari (GEL) of 100 tetri, which replaced coupons at 1 lari = 1m. coupons on 25 Sept. 1995. Inflation was 10.0% in 2008 and 1.7% in 2009, having been 163% in 1995 and 15,606% in 1994. Gold reserves are negligible. Total money supply was 882m. laris in July 2005.

Budget

Revenues in 2007 totalled 5,159m. laris and expenditures 5,237m. laris. Tax revenue accounted for 72.4% of total revenues; defence accounted for 28.6% of total expenditures, and social security and welfare 14.8%.

VAT is 18%.

Performance

The economy contracted by 3.8% in 2009 but there was growth of 6.4% in 2010.

Total GDP was US$11.7bn. in 2010 (excluding Abkhazia and South Ossetia).

Banking and Finance

The President of the Central Bank is Giorgi Kadagidze. In 2005 there were 19 commercial banks. Two foreign banks had representative offices.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in Georgia were the equivalent of 1.2 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

The many fast-flowing rivers provide an important hydro-electric resource. Installed capacity was around 4.4m. kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was 8.33bn. kWh (82% hydro-electric); consumption per capita in 2007 was 1,853 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Output (2007) of crude petroleum, 57,000 tonnes. A 930 km long oil pipeline from an offshore Azerbaijani oilfield in the Caspian Sea across Azerbaijan and Georgia to a new oil terminal at Supsa, near Poti, on the Black Sea Coast started pumping oil in early 1999; the US$600m. pipeline allowed Georgia to create 25,000 new jobs. However, Georgia is still heavily dependent on Russia for natural gas. Accords for the construction of a second oil pipeline through Georgia were signed in Nov. 1999, to take oil from Azerbaijan to Turkey via Georgia. Work on the pipeline began in Sept. 2002 and it was officially opened in May 2005. Natural gas production was 16m. cu. metres in 2007.

A gas pipeline from Baku through Georgia to Erzurum in Turkey was commissioned in June 2006.

Minerals

Manganese deposits are calculated at 250m. tonnes. Other important minerals are barytes, clays, gold, diatomite shale, agate, marble, alabaster, iron and other ores, building stone, arsenic, molybdenum, tungsten and mercury.

Agriculture

Agriculture plays an important part in Georgia's economy, contributing 12.8% of GDP in 2006. In 2001 there were 795,000 ha. of arable land and 268,000 ha. of permanent crops. 469,000 ha. were irrigated in 2001.

Output of main agricultural products (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2003: maize, 450; potatoes, 425; wheat, 225; grapes, 200; tomatoes, 185; cabbage, 148; onions, 98; apples, 86; wine, 80; watermelons (including melons, pumpkins and squash), 60. Livestock, 2003: cattle, 1,216,000; sheep, 611,000; pigs, 446,000; chickens, 10m.

Livestock products, 2003 (in 1,000 tonnes): meat, 109; milk, 762; eggs, 24.

Forestry

There were 2.76m. ha. of forest in 2005, or 39.7% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 was 616,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries

The catch in 2008 was 26,512 tonnes, down from 147,688 tonnes in 1989.

INDUSTRY

Industry accounted for 21.2% of GDP in 2008. There is a metallurgical plant and a motor works. There are factories for processing tea, creameries and breweries. There are also textile and silk industries.

Production, 2008 unless otherwise specified (in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 1,351; flour, 218; refined sugar (2006), 123; nitrogenous fertilizer (2004), 99; footwear, 28,290 pairs; beer, 62.5m. litres; spirits (2007), 2.6m. litres; cigarettes, 5,156m. units.

Labour

The economically active workforce numbered 1,991,800 in 2009 (1,071,300 males). In 2007, 53.4% of employees were engaged in agriculture, 10.4% in industry and 36.0% in services. The unemployment rate was 16.9% in 2009. Approximately 500,000 Georgians, or a tenth of the population, work in Russia, but in Dec. 2000 Russia began requiring Georgians to have a visa to visit the country.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Total foreign debt was US$1,911m. in 2005. The debt was mainly as a result of the importing of natural gas from Turkmenistan.

Imports and Exports

Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008
Imports c.i.f.	1,846	2,490	3,678	5,217	6,066
Exports f.o.b.	647	865	993	1,240	1,507

Major commodities imported are machinery and transport equipment, food products and mineral fuels. Major commodities for export are iron and steel products, food and beverages, and machinery.

The leading import suppliers in 2004 were: Russia, 14.0%; Turkey, 10.9%; UK, 9.3%; Azerbaijan, 8.5%. Principal export markets in 2004 were: Turkey, 18.3%; Turkmenistan, 17.7%; Russia, 16.1%; Armenia, 8.4%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were 20,329 km of roads in 2007 (94.1% hard-surfaced). Passenger cars in use in 2007 numbered 416,300, and there were also 51,500 lorries and vans and 42,800 buses and coaches. In 2007 there were 737 road deaths.

Rail

Total length in 2005 was 1,522 km of 1,520 mm gauge (1,481 km electrified). In 2005 railways carried 19m. tonnes of freight and 3.6m. passengers. There is a metro system in Tbilisi.

Civil Aviation

The main airport is at Tbilisi (Novo-Alexeyevka). The main Georgian carrier is Georgian Airways. In 2007 it had flights to Amsterdam, Athens, Dubai, Frankfurt, Kyiv, Minsk, Moscow, Paris, Tel Aviv and Vienna. In 2001 Tbilisi airport handled 250,000 passengers (all on international flights) and 4,300 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 199 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 617,000 GT. The principal port is Poti, which handled 8.1m. tonnes of cargo in 2008 (7.7m. tonnes in 2007).

Telecommunications

There were 544,000 main line telephone subscribers in 2005, or 124.6 per 1,000 persons; mobile phone subscribers numbered 1,544,800. There were 200.7 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2009. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 176,500 in 2009 (40.4 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The population in penal institutions in Jan. 2008 was 18,170 (415 per 100,000 of national population). The death penalty was abolished in 1997.

Education

In 2005 there were 1,214 public pre-primary schools with 6,883 teachers for 76,416 pupils. In 2005–06 there were 2,744 public and private schools with 74,300 teachers and 634,700 pupils (326,600 at primary level and 308,100 at secondary). In 2005–06 there were 171 higher education institutions with 144,300 students and 11,280 academic staff; the largest is Tbilisi State University with 35,000 students in 2005–06. Adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 99.7%.

Public spending on education in 2007 came to 2.6% of GNI and 7.8% of total government expenditure.

Health

Georgia had 13,600 hospital beds in 2009. In 2009 there were 20,609 physicians and 12,933 nurses; there were 1,269 dentistry personnel in 2006.

Welfare

In 2005 there were 549,900 old age and 352,200 other pensioners.

RELIGION

The Georgian Orthodox Church has its own organization under Catholics (Patriarch) Ilia II who is resident in Tbilisi. In 2001 there were 1.8m. Georgian Orthodox, 550,000 Sunni Muslims, 280,000 Armenian Apostolic (Orthodox) and 130,000 Russian Orthodox.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Georgia has three sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: City-Museum Reserve of Mtskheta (inscribed on the list in 1994), churches of the former Georgian capital; Bagrati Cathedral and Gelati Monastery (1994); and Upper Svaneti (1996), a mountainous area of medieval villages.

Press

In 2006 there were ten dailies with a combined circulation of 24,000, as well as 81 non-dailies.

Tourism

Investment in tourism has increased substantially in recent years, and large numbers of hotels have been built. In 2005 there were 560,000 non-resident tourists, spending US$288m.

Abkhazia

GENERAL DETAILS

Area, 8,600 sq. km (3,320 sq. miles); population (Jan. 2004 est.), 178,600. Capital, Sukhumi (2002 population, 45,000). This area, the ancient Colchis, saw the establishment of a West Georgian kingdom in the 4th century and a Russian protectorate in 1810. In March 1921 a congress of local Soviets proclaimed it a Soviet Republic, and its status as an Autonomous Republic, within Georgia, was confirmed on 17 April 1930 and again by the Georgian Constitution of 1995.

Around 300,000 ethnic Georgians were displaced as a result of the 1992–94 war and ethnic Abkhazians are now thought to constitute the majority population followed by Armenians and Russians with Georgians in the minority.

In July 1992 the Abkhazian parliament declared sovereignty under the presidency of Vladislav Ardzinba and the restoration of its 1925 constitution. Fighting broke out as Georgian forces moved into Abkhazia. On 3 Sept. and on 19 Nov. ceasefires were agreed, but fighting continued into 1993 and by Sept. Georgian forces were driven out. On 15 May 1994 Georgian and Abkhazian delegates under Russian auspices signed an agreement on a ceasefire and deployment of 2,500 Russian troops as a peace-keeping force. On 26 Nov. 1994 parliament adopted a new constitution proclaiming Abkhazian sovereignty. CIS economic sanctions were imposed in Jan. 1996. Parliamentary elections were held on 23 Nov. 1996. Neither the constitution nor the elections were recognized by the Georgian government or the international community. Fighting flared up between rival militia forces again in May 1998 after Abkhazian forces ejected thousands of ethnic Mingrelian and Georgian refugees who had returned to the southern Abkhazian region of Gali. After the fighting in 1998, the worst in five years, both sides declared a ceasefire. Up to 20,000 Georgians lost their homes. Abkhazia has expressed a desire to join the Russian Federation. In March 2008 Abkhazia appealed to the UN to have its independence recognized. Following fighting between Russian and Georgian forces in Aug. 2008, after Tbilisi sent troops into South Ossetia, Russia confirmed its recognition of Abkhazia as an independent state (as have Nauru, Nicaragua, Tuvalu, Vanuatu and Venezuela in the meantime).

President: Aleksandr Ankvab (in office since 29 May 2011—acting until 26 Sept. 2011). In elections held on 26 Aug. 2011 Aleksandr Ankvab took 54.9% of the vote, Sergey Shamba 21.0% and Raul Khadjimba 19.8%. Turnout was 71.9%. The USA, the European Union and Georgia refused to recognize the election.

Prime Minister: Leonid Lakerbaya (appointed on 27 Sept. 2011).

The unit of currency is the Russian rouble (RUB), of 100 kopeks. Imports, 2006: 3,270.2m. roubles; exports, 2006: 627.2m. roubles. Since 1997 the EU has provided over €20m. in funding for humanitarian projects. The European Commission provided €9.4m. for the restoration of the Inguri hydro power station, which was inaugurated in Oct. 2006 having fallen into severe disrepair in the early 1990s.

The republic has coal, electric power, building materials and light industries. Tourism is an important growth industry. In the first nine months of 2009, 88,865 tourists stayed in Abkhazian hotels and resorts (up from 68,905 for 2008 as a whole).

All agricultural land is owned by the state and private ownership is forbidden under still prevailing Soviet-era regulations. 90% of all households keep cattle. During the Soviet era Abkhazia provided 15–20% of tea for the USSR but since its collapse the industry has declined by around 80%. Tobacco production has also virtually ceased. Peak annual production levels were 120,000 tonnes of citrus fruits, 110,000 tonnes of tea and 14,000 of tonnes of tobacco. Current cash crops are citrus fruits and hazelnuts.

There is a university at Sukhumi.

Adjara

Area, 2,900 sq. km (1,160 sq. miles); census population (2002): 376,016. Density, 129 per sq. km. Capital, Batumi (2002 population, 121,806, mostly Sunni Muslim). Adjara, which is bounded by Turkey to the south, fell under Turkish rule in the 17th century, and was annexed to Russia (rejoining Georgia) after the Berlin Treaty of 1878. On 16 July 1921 the territory was constituted as an Autonomous Republic within the Georgian SSR, a status confirmed by the Georgian Constitution of 1995. In Jan. 2004 Adjaran leader Aslan Abashidze refused to acknowledge the central government of Mikheil Saakashvili and declared a state of emergency. Fearing a Georgian invasion, Abashidze destroyed road and rail links to the rest of Georgia but was forced to step down on 6 May after popular demonstrations in Batumi. Saakashvili imposed direct rule over Adjara. Elections were held on 20 June 2004. Saakashvili's Victorious Adjara group took 72.1% of the vote and 28 of the 30 seats in the Supreme Council, Adjara's parliament. Two seats went to the Republican Party (13.5% of the vote). The last Russian troops left the military base in Batumi in Nov. 2007.

Ethnic groups at the 2002 census: Georgians, 93.4%; Russians, 2.4%; Armenians, 2.3%.

Chairman of the Supreme Council: Mikheil Makharadze.

Prime Minister: Levan Varshalomidze.

Adjara specializes in sub-tropical agricultural products. These include tea, citruses, bamboo, eucalyptus and tobacco. Livestock (Dec. 2003): 128,400 cattle, 1,900 pigs, 16,100 sheep and goats.

There is a port and a shipyard at Batumi, oil-refining, food-processing and canning factories, clothing, building materials and pharmaceutical factories. The reconstructed Batumi airport opened in May 2007 with flights to Turkey and Ukraine.

Approximately 166,300 persons were in paid employment in 2003; the unemployment rate was 12.1%.

South Ossetia

Area, 3,900 sq. km (1,505 sq. miles); population (Jan. 2004 est.), 49,200. Ethnic groups include Ossetians, Georgians, Russians and Armenians. The capital, Tskhinvali, had a population of approximately 30,000 before the 2008 conflict with Georgia. The UN High Commission for Refugees reported that some 30,000 people were displaced within South Ossetia as a result of the 2008 conflict.

This area was populated by Ossetians from across the Caucasus (North Ossetia), driven out by the Mongols in the 13th century. The region was set up within the Georgian SSR on 20 April 1922. Formerly an Autonomous Region, its administrative autonomy was abolished by the Georgian Supreme Soviet on 11 Dec. 1990, and it has been named the Tskhinvali Region.

Fighting broke out in 1990 between insurgents wishing to unite with North Ossetia and Georgian forces. By a Russo-Georgian agreement of July 1992 Russian peacekeeping forces moved into a seven-km buffer zone between South Ossetia and Georgia pending negotiations. An OSCE peacekeeping force has been deployed since 1992.

At elections not recognized by the Georgian government on 10 Nov. 1996, Lyudvig Chibirov was elected president. Though maintaining a commitment to independence, President Chibirov came to a political agreement with the Georgian government in 1996 that neither force nor sanctions should be applied. In July 2003 his successor, President Eduard Kokoyty, asked Vladimir Putin to let South Ossetia become a member of the Russian Federation. Georgian President Mikheil Saakashvili, who took office in Jan. 2004, has made clear his wish to revive the authority of the Georgian government in the regions. In Aug. 2008 he sent in troops against the region's separatist forces. Moscow responded by mobilizing troops, leading to a week of fierce fighting. Russia subsequently recognized South Ossetian independence, as have Nauru, Nicaragua, Tuvalu, Vanuatu and Venezuela in the meantime.

President: Leonid Tibilov (in office since 19 April 2012).

Prime Minister: Vadim Brovtsev (in office since 5 Aug. 2009).

In presidential elections held on 25 March 2012, Leonid Tibilov won 42.5% of the votes cast, David Sanakoyev 24.6%, Dmitriy Medoyev 23.8% and Stanislav Kochiyev 5.3%. Turnout was 70.3%. In the second round on 8 April, Tibilov won 54.1% of the vote against 42.7% for Sanakoyev. Turnout was 71.3%. Parliamentary elections were held on 31 May 2009. The ruling Unity Party won 17 of 34 seats, the People's Party of South Ossetia 9 and the Communist Party of South Ossetia 8. Neither Georgia nor NATO, the USA or the EU recognized either the presidential election of March/April 2012 or the parliamentary election of May 2009.

Main industries are mining, timber, electrical engineering and building materials.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

From the 8th century BC the Celtic peoples inhabited most of present-day Germany but by about 500 BC Germanic tribes had pushed their way north and settled in the Celtic lands. The expanding Roman Empire established its boundaries along the Rhine and the Danube rivers but attempts to move further east had to be abandoned after the Roman provincial Governor Varus was defeated in AD 9 by the Germanic forces under Arminius. For the next thousand years the towns of Trier, Regensburg, Augsburg, Mainz and Cologne, founded by the Romans, formed the main centres of urban settlement. Christianity was introduced under Emperor Constantine and the first bishopric north of the Alps was established in Trier in AD 314.

At the start of the 5th century the Huns forced the indigenous Saxons north, towards Britain. However, the Franks, who came from the lowlands and were to become the founders of a German state, gradually asserted themselves over all the other Germanic people. Towards the end of the 5th century a powerful Rhenish state was founded under King Clovis, a descendant of Merovech (Merovius), a Salian Frankish king. The Merovingian dynasty eventually gave way to the Carolingians, whose authority was strengthened by papal support.

Charlemagne succeeded to the throne in 768, founding what was later known as the First Reich (Empire). The Franks continued to thrive until their influence stretched from Rome to the North Sea and from the Pyrenees to the River Elbe. The Pope crowned Charlemagne emperor on Christmas Day 800, creating what was to become known as the Holy Roman Empire. But the empire was too unwieldy to survive Charlemagne. On his death in 814 it began to break up. The Treaty of Verdun in 843 divided the French and German people for the first time, creating a Germanic Central Europe and a Latin Western Europe. The first king of the newly formed eastern kingdom was Ludwig the German and under him a specific German race and culture began to take shape. The last of Charlemagne's descendants died in 911 and with it the Carolingian dynasty. Power shifted, via Conrad I, duke of Franconia, to Henry I, duke of Saxony. Henry's son Otto the Great crushed the power of the hereditary duchies and by making grants of land to the Church he strengthened ties with Rome. His coronation as emperor of the Romans in 962 was the first to associate German kingship with the office of the Holy Roman Emperor.

Over two centuries, powerful dynasties emerged to threaten the emperor. After an intense feud the Hohenstaufens (of Swabia) gained supremacy over the Guelfs (the counts of Bavaria; later denoting anti-imperial loyalties and the papal faction) and managed to keep the upper hand for well over a century. Frederick Barbarossa, descended from both dynasties, led several expeditions to subjugate Italy and died on the Third Crusade. The Knights of the Teutonic Order set about converting Eastern Europe to Christianity and by the 14th century they had conquered much of the Baltic. By controlling the lucrative grain trade Germany grew rich.

Habsburg Rule

The Golden Bull of 1356 established the method for electing an emperor by setting up an Electoral College composed of seven princes or electors. Three of these were drawn from the church (the archbishops of Cologne, Mainz and Trier), and four from the nobility (the king of Bohemia, the duke of Saxony, the margrave of Brandenburg and the count palatine of the Rhine), all of whom had the right to build castles, mint their own coinage, impose taxes and act as judges. The title of Holy Roman Emperor nearly always went to an outsider and increasingly to members of the Austrian Habsburg dynasty. In 1273 Count Rudolph IV was the first Habsburg to be crowned king of the Germans. The Great Schism of 1378–1417, which resulted in rival popes holding court in Rome and Avignon, effectively ended the church's residual power over German affairs.

The Hundred Years War between France and England benefited the growing number of Free Imperial Cities along the German trading routes. Merchants and craftsmen organized themselves into guilds, wresting control of civic life away from the nobility and laying the foundations for a capitalist economy. Founded as a defence and trading league at Lübeck, the Hanseatic League combated piracy and established Germanic economic and political domination of the Baltic and North Sea. German communities were founded in Scandinavia and along the opposite coast as far as Estonia.

In the 14th century the bubonic plague wiped out a quarter of the German population. Rather than put the onus on their own tradesmen returning from Asia, it was the Jews, living in tightly-knit segregated communities, who were blamed. Excluded from guilds and trades they took to money lending, an occupation forbidden to Christians, and one which engendered envy and suspicion.

In 1273 Count Rudolph IV was the first Habsburg to be crowned king of the Germans. Over two centuries the Habsburg dynasty became increasingly powerful, retaining the title of Holy Roman Emperor from 1432 until its abolition nearly four centuries later. Succeeding to the title in 1493 Maximilian I gained the Netherlands by his marriage to Mary of Burgundy and control of Hungary and Bohemia by other marital alliances. Spain was added to the Habsburg dominions by the marriage of Maximilian's son, Philip, to Juana the Mad.

Reformation

In the early part of the 15th century the unpopularity of the church was linked to the corrupt sale of indulgences. Land taxes were levied to pay for St Peter's Church and other sacred buildings in Rome. In 1517 an Augustinian monk named Martin Luther, professor of theology at the University of Wittenberg, made his famous protest with 95 Theses or arguments against indulgences. This open attack on the Church of Rome marked the beginning of the Reformation. Luther challenged the power of the pope, the privileged position of the priests and the doctrine of transubstantiation that had always been at the heart of Catholic dogma. But for the death of Maximilian I in 1519 and the subsequent power struggle for the title of Holy Roman Emperor, Luther might well have been executed as a heretic.

Following Maximilian's death, Francis I of France staked a claim to the succession in an attempt to avoid the concentration of power that would result in the election of the Habsburg candidate, Charles I of Spain. To placate the electors of Germany, the pope named Luther's patron, Frederick the Wise of Saxony, as a compromise candidate. This gained Luther only a temporary reprieve as, after much intrigue, the king of Spain was elected. Although Luther was excommunicated in 1520, he had the right to a hearing before an Imperial Diet (court). This was convened at Worms and although he was branded an outlaw and his books were ordered to be burned, he was given haven in Wartburg Castle where he translated the Bible into German. Thanks to the revolutionary system of printing invented by Johannes Gutenberg, Luther's ideas spread quickly throughout Germany. His doctrine of 'justification by faith alone', with its apparent invitation to resist the authority of the church, was one of the main causes of the Peasants' War of 1524–25 that led to wholesale destruction of monasteries and castles. To the surprise of the rebels, Luther aligned himself with the authorities and the uprising was crushed. The Reformation thus gained political authority. By 1555 so many of the small independent German states had joined the Protestant cause that Charles V admitted defeat and abdicated, retiring to a monastery in Spain. His brother Ferdinand succeeded him and signed the Peace of Augsburg. This agreement gave the secular rulers of each state the right to decide on religious practices (cuius regio, eius religio), so dividing Germany between Catholics and Lutherans.

Thirty Years War

Martin Luther died in 1546. The Catholics then launched a Counter-Reformation following the church reforms agreed at the Council of Trent. Bavaria's annexation of the mostly Protestant free city of Donauwörth in 1608 led to the formation of the Protestant Union, an armed alliance under the leadership of the Palatinate. The Catholic League was set up by the Bavarians the following year. Rudolf II, who reigned as emperor for 36 years, chose Prague as his power base, thus weakening his authority over his more distant territories. After he was deposed in 1611 a series of dynastic and religious conflicts set in train the Thirty Years' War. The countryside was laid waste, towns were pillaged and mass slaughter reduced the population by as much as a third. Although the Catholics were the early victors, Denmark and Sweden as well as Catholic France (who preferred the Protestants to the Habsburgs) backed the Protestants while Spain supported the Catholics. After repeated attempts to end the war, the Peace of Westphalia (signed in 1648) brought peace but deprived the emperor of much of his authority. Power was divided between 300 principalities and over 1,000 other territories.

In the 17th and 18th centuries the German princes consolidated their power. The Hanoverian branch of the Welf family inherited the British Crown in 1714; a royal union that was to last until 1837.

Meanwhile, the Habsburgs were struggling to hold on to the title of Holy Roman Emperor. The Turks reached Vienna in 1683 but after they were repulsed, the Austrians pushed eastwards and began to build up an empire in the Balkans. This left their western borders vulnerable where the French, who had long regarded the Rhine as the natural limit of their territory to their east, annexed Alsace and Strasbourg in 1688 and 1697. To the north, the presence of Brandenburg-Prussia under the Hohenzollern family was beginning to be felt. Throughout the 18th century Prussia was built up into a powerful independent state with its capital in Berlin. Strong militarism and a strict class-dominated society helped Prussia to become a major European power. When Frederick the Great came to the throne in 1740, he softened his country's military image by introducing reforms and by creating a cultured life at his court. His main preoccupation, however, continued to be expansion by force. His annexation of Silesia (under an old Brandenburg claim) provoked the Habsburgs to retaliate and, backed by Russia and France, they launched the Seven Years' War. Frederick had only the tacit support of Hanover and Britain to fall back on and, within three years, the Prussian armies were seriously overextended. But Frederick engineered a dramatic change in his fortunes by swelling the ranks of his armies with fresh recruits and in 1772, helped by the collapse of the alliance between Austria and Russia, he annexed most of Poland.

Unification

Revolutionary France had expanded east and when the left bank of the Rhine fell under French control during the War of the First Coalition of 1792–97 the way was paved for the unification of Germany. After Napoleon Bonaparte defeated Austria in 1802 he redrew the map of Germany. All but a few of the free German cities and all the ecclesiastical territories were stripped of their independence. In their place he created a series of buffer states. Bavaria, Württemberg and Saxony were raised to the status of kingdoms, with Baden and Hesse-Darmstadt as duchies. In 1806 the Holy Roman Empire was ended. The Habsburgs promoted themselves from archdukes to emperors of Austria and set about consolidating their position in the Balkans. After the defeat of Prussia and the occupation of Berlin by Napoleon, the country was forced to sign away half its territory. In the aftermath, Prussia abolished serfdom and allowed the cities their own municipal governments. Prussia played a critical role in the defeat of Napoleon at Waterloo in 1815. The Congress of Vienna, which met to determine the structure of post-Napoleon Europe, established Prussian dominance in German affairs. Westphalia and the Rhineland were added to its territories and although there were still 39 independent states, much of Napoleon's original vision for the reorganization of the Holy Roman Empire was ratified. A German Confederation was established, each state was represented in the Frankfurt-based Diet and Austria held the permanent right to the presidency with Prussia holding the vice-presidency.

The dominant political forces in Germany after the Congress of Vienna were conservative but the rapid advance of the industrial revolution brought about the emergence of a new social order, with wage-earning workers and a growing bourgeoisie. The workers were quick to agitate for better working conditions and the middle classes for political representation. Adding to the social unrest was the peasant class, whose poor living standards were made worse by the failed harvests of the late 1840s. By 1848 violence had erupted all over Europe, forcing the Prussian king to allow elections to the National Assembly in Frankfurt. Although this presented an opportunity for the electorate to introduce liberal social reforms, the middle class members of the Assembly blocked all radical measures. When armed rebellions broke out in 1849, the National Assembly was disbanded and the Prussian army, backed by other German kingdoms and principalities, seized power. From the 1850s, Prussia was in an unassailable position. Realizing the importance of industrial might, Prussia became the driving force for creating a single German market.

Bismarck

In 1862 Wilhelm I appointed Otto von Bismarck as chancellor. Although a leading member of the Junker class, he set about introducing widespread reforms. In order to unite the liberal and conservative wings, he backed the demands for universal male suffrage and, in return for the Chancellor's support for a united Germany, the liberals supported his plans for modernizing the army. Bismarck persuaded Austria to back him in a war against Denmark, which resulted in the recapture of Schleswig and Holstein, and in a subsequent row with Austria over the spoils (the Seven Years' War) Austria was crushed by the superior strength of Prussian arms and military organization. Austria was forced out of German affairs and the previously neutral Hanover and Hesse-Kassel joined the other small German states under Prussia to form a North German Confederation. Bismarck still needed to bring the southern German states into the fold and, in 1870, he rallied all the German states to provoke a war with France. The outcome of the Franco-Prussian War of 1870–71 was the defeat of France and the creation of a united Germany (including the long disputed provinces of Alsace and Lorraine). Wilhelm I of Prussia was named kaiser and the empire was dubbed the Second Reich, commemorating the revival of German imperial tradition after a hiatus of 65 years.

At home, Bismarck continued with his liberal reforms. Uniform systems of law, currency, banking and administration were introduced nationwide, restrictions on trade and labour movements were lifted and the cities were given civic autonomy. These measures were designed to contain the liberals while he set about trying to undermine the influence of the Catholic Church. Although he forced the Catholics to support his agricultural policies designed to protect the interests of the Junker landowners, he had to back down on other issues. Despite the introduction of welfare benefits, opposition to Bismarck grew with the formation of the Social Democratic Party (SPD) in 1870.

Meanwhile, Bismarck was competing with Britain and France in the acquisition of colonies in Africa and the Pacific. In Germany he managed a political balancing act, on one hand creating an alliance of the three great imperial powers of Germany, Russia and Austria and on the other a Mediterranean alliance with Britain to prevent Russia from expanding into the Balkans. When Wilhelm I died in 1888, he was succeeded by his son, Friedrich III, who died after only a few months, and then by his grandson Kaiser Wilhelm II, a firm believer in the divine right of kings. After dismissing Bismarck from office in 1890, he appointed a series of 'yes men' to run his government, thereby seriously undermining the strength and stability that had been built up under Bismarck in the previous decade. Britain had long been an ally of Germany, bound by the ties of dynasty and common distrust of France but after the Kaiser came out in open support of the South African Boers, with whom Britain was in conflict, relations between the two countries plummeted and the European arms race accelerated. Bismarck's juggling of alliances collapsed and Europe was divided into two hostile camps. On one side, Germany was allied once more with Austria (who needed help in propping up her collapsing Eastern Empire) and with Italy. On the other, France and Russia, united in common mistrust of the German-speaking nations, drew Britain closer to them. The European war that was brewing was set in motion in 1914 when a Bosnian nationalist assassinated the Austrian Archduke Franz Ferdinand at Sarajevo. Austria sent a threatening memo falsely accusing Serbia of causing the assassination. This led Russia to mobilize in defence of her Slavic neighbours. Seeing this as an excuse to strike first, Germany attacked France. Belgium's neutrality (which had been guaranteed by Britain) was violated when the German armies marched through on their way to France and Britain declared war on Germany in 1914.

First World War

The German generals miscalculated the strength of the resistance from France and Russia. They had counted on a quick victory and when this did not happen, they were fighting on two fronts. A new form of warfare emerged with the digging of trenches all along Northern France and Belgium. The injury and loss of life suffered by both sides during the next four years was to devastate an entire generation of young men all over Europe. In 1917 the United States entered the war and although the Bolshevik revolution in Russia that same year gained Germany a reprieve, allowing the transfer of vast numbers of troops from the eastern to western fronts, the respite was short-lived. Troops returning from Russia agitated against the war. At the same time, the German lines were weakened by over-extension. On 8 Aug. 1918 the German defences were finally broken. In 1916 the Kaiser had handed over military and political power to Generals Paul von Hindenburg and Erich Ludendorff. As the threat of defeat came closer and in an attempt to minimize the potential damage of a harsh peace treaty, Ludendorff left peace negotiations to a parliamentary delegation. He felt they would be more likely to gain lenient terms and this might serve to nip a possible Bolshevik-style revolution in the bud. Two months of frenzied political activity followed which resulted in the abdication of the Kaiser and the announcement of a new German republic. The First World War ended on 11 Nov. 1918.

The Elections that followed confirmed the Social Democratic Party as the new political force in Germany. Friedrich Ebert, leader of the SPD, was made president, with Philipp Scheidemann as chancellor. In 1919 a new constitution was drawn up at Weimar and a republican government under Chancellor Ebert attempted to restore political and economic stability. But the Treaty of Versailles had exacted painful losses. The rich industrial regions of Saarland and Alsace-Lorraine were ceded to France and Upper Silesia was given to a resurrected Poland. A Polish corridor to the sea effectively cut off East Prussia from the rest of the country and all Germany's overseas colonies were confiscated. The Rhineland was declared a demilitarized zone and the size of the armed forces was severely limited. The German economy was burdened with a heavy reparation bill.

Feeling betrayed by what they saw as a harsh settlement, the German military fostered the 'stab in the back' excuse for failure, which was readily accepted by a disillusioned public. Scheidemann was forced to resign and in the elections of 1920 the SPD withdrew altogether, leaving power in the hands of minorities drawn from the liberal and moderate conservative parties. When, in 1923, reparation payments were withheld, France occupied the industrial region of the Ruhr. Passive resistance brought production to a halt and inflation ruined the middle class as the currency became worthless. Although the Weimar Republic seemed bound to fail, a new chancellor, Gustav Stresemann, ended passive resistance in the Ruhr and negotiated loans from the United States to help rebuild Germany's economy.

Rise of Hitler

By Oct. 1924 the currency was re-established at more or less its former value. Near full employment and general prosperity followed. Scheidemann went on to serve as foreign secretary when he re-established Germany as a world power. Reparation payments were scaled down and more US aid was negotiated. Even with the ailing and aged Hindenburg elected president, the German Republic seemed secure.

The National Socialist German Workers' Party was founded in 1918. Its first leader, a locksmith named Anton Drexler, was soon ousted by Adolf Hitler, a former soldier from Austria whose fanaticism had been fed by defeat in 1918. The party attracted political extremists and misfits whose views mixed the extremes of right and left wing opinion.

Putting his followers into uniform as the Brown Shirts or Storm Troopers (SA), Hitler led a failed Putsch in Bavaria in 1923. He was arrested and convicted of high treason. He served only nine months of his sentence and emerged having used his time in prison to write his political manifesto, Mein Kampf. Initially, sales of Mein Kampf were negligible and Hitler's views were treated as something of a joke. Only the power of his personality, and Joseph Goebbels' propaganda skills, sustained the National Socialists on the German political scene.

The recession of the late 1920s proved fertile ground for Hitler's ideas, which began to appeal to wounded national pride and seemed to offer an attractive solution to the growing economic crisis. Elections were held in 1930 and the Nazi party gained an astonishing 6.4m. votes, becoming the country's second largest party.

The young, the unemployed and the impoverished middle classes were Hitler's main supporters but it was the decision of the right wing traditionalists to back Hitler in order to gain control over his supporters that gave him respectability. Financial support from leading industrialists and giant corporations followed, enabling the Nazi party to fight a strong campaign in the 1932 presidential elections. Hindenburg, backed by the SPD and other democratic parties, scraped a victory. Appointed chancellor, Heinrich Brüning introduced a series of economic reforms, negotiated the end of reparation payments and regained Germany's right to arms equality. But his attempt to introduce land reform lost him the support of the landowners, who undermined his efforts to make the Republic work. Two short-term chancellors followed—Franz von Papen and Gen. Kurt von Schleicher. In 1932 one inconclusive election followed another. Hitler, greatly helped by a campaign of terror by his storm troopers, won increased support. Von Papen, who plotted to persuade Hindenburg to declare Hitler chancellor, mistakenly believed that his party's majority in the Reichstag would enable him to retain control. Hitler was sworn in as chancellor on 30 Jan. 1933.

No sooner had Hitler assumed power than he set about destroying all opposition, stepping up the campaign of terror, which was now backed by the apparatus of the state. He was greatly helped by Hermann Göring who, as Prussian minister of the interior, had control of the police. A month later, the Reichstag was burned down and Hindenburg was obliged to declare a state of emergency, giving Hitler the excuse to silence his opponents legally. Hitler was now the country's dictator, declaring himself president of the Third Reich in 1934.

Race to War

Hitler's policies embraced a theory of Aryan racial supremacy by which, during the following decade, millions of Jews, gypsies, and other non-Aryan 'undesirables' were persecuted, used as slave labour, shipped off to concentration camps, murdered and their assets confiscated. Hitler's expansionism led to his annexation of Austria (the Anschluss) and German-speaking Czechoslovakia (the Sudetenland) in 1938. The following year he declared all of Bohemia-Moravia a German protectorate and invaded Poland, attempting to restore the authority exercised there by Prussia before 1918. After the invasion of Czechoslovakia, Britain and France signed an agreement with Germany sacrificing Czech national integrity in return for what they believed would be world peace. Interpreting this as a sign of weakness, Hitler ordered the invasion of Poland, signed a non-aggression pact with Russia and expected a similar collapse of resistance on the part of other western powers. However, by now Britain and France had realized that the Munich agreement was a humiliating sham and that Hitler's invasion of Poland on 1 Sept. 1939 meant that he would pursue his expansionist policy of Lebensraum ('living space'). Two days after German tanks rolled into Poland, Britain and France declared war on Germany and the Second World War began.

Germany was well prepared for conflict and to begin with the war went well for Hitler. The fall of Poland was quickly followed by the defeat of the Low Countries and in 1940 France was forced to sign an armistice with Germany and to set up a puppet government in Vichy. Hitler bombarded Britain from the air but held back from invasion. Instead, he turned to the east, subduing the Balkans and, in 1941, planned an invasion of the Soviet Union. In Dec. 1941, after Hitler's Japanese allies attacked the United States naval base at Pearl Harbor, America declared war on the Axis powers. By this time, Germany was hopelessly overextended. Defeat in North Africa, in May 1943, was followed by the halt of the German advance on Russia. The Allies invaded France in June 1944, liberating Paris in Aug. while Russian troops advanced from the east. Hitler was faced with certain defeat but refused to surrender, ordering the German people to defend every square inch of German territory to the death. On 30 April 1945, as Soviet forces marched into Berlin, Hitler committed suicide in his bunker. Germany surrendered unconditionally on 7 May 1945, bringing the Third Reich to an end.

Post-War Period

The Allied forces occupied Germany—the UK, the USA and France holding the west and the USSR the east. By the Berlin Declaration of 5 June 1945 each was allocated a zone of occupation. The zone commanders-in-chief together made up the Allied Control Council in Berlin. The area of Greater Berlin was also divided into four sectors.

At the Potsdam Conference of 1945 northern East Prussia was transferred to the USSR. It was also agreed that, pending a final peace settlement, Poland should administer the areas east of the rivers Oder and Neisse, with the frontier fixed on the Oder and Western Neisse down to the Czechoslovak frontier.

By 1948 it had become clear that there would be no agreement between the occupying powers on the future of Germany. Accordingly, the western allies united their zones into one unit in March 1948. In protest, the USSR withdrew from the Allied Control Council, blockaded Berlin until May 1949, and consolidated control of eastern Germany, establishing the German Democratic Republic (East Germany).

A People's Council appointed in 1948 drew up a constitution for the German Democratic Republic (GDR) that came into force in Oct. 1949, providing for a communist state of five Länder with a centrally planned economy. In 1952 the government marked the division between its own territory and that of the Federal Republic of Germany (West Germany), with a three-mile cordon fenced along the frontier. Berlin was closed as a migration route by the construction of a concrete boundary wall in 1961. In 1953 there were popular revolts against food shortages and the pressure to collectivize. In 1954 the government eased economic restraints, the USSR ceased to collect reparation payments, and sovereignty was granted. The GDR signed the Warsaw Pact in 1955. Socialist policies were stepped up in 1958, leading to flight to the West of skilled workers.

Meanwhile, a constituent assembly met in Bonn in Sept. 1948. A Basic Law, which came into force in May 1949, created the Federal Republic of Germany. The occupation forces retained some powers, however, and the Republic did not become a sovereign state until 1955 when the Occupation Statute was revoked.

The Republic consisted of the states of Schleswig-Holstein, Hamburg, Lower Saxony, Bremen, North Rhine-Westphalia, Hessen, Rhineland-Palatinate, Baden-Württemberg, Bavaria and Saarland, together with West Berlin.

The first chancellor, Konrad Adenauer (1949–63), was committed to the ultimate reunification of Germany and refused to acknowledge the German Democratic Republic. It was not until 1972 that the two German states signed an agreement of mutual recognition and intent to co-operate, forged by West German Chancellor Willy Brandt.

The most marked feature of post-war West Germany was rapid population and economic growth. Immigration from the German Democratic Republic, about 3m. since 1945, stopped when the Berlin Wall was built in 1961; however, there was a strong movement of German-speaking people from German settlements in countries of the Soviet bloc. Industrial growth also attracted labour from Turkey, Yugoslavia, Italy and Spain.

Reunification

The Paris Treaty, which came into force in 1955, ensured the Republic's contribution to NATO and NATO forces were stationed along the Rhine in large numbers, with consequent dispute about the deployment of nuclear missiles on German soil. Even before sovereignty, the Republic had begun negotiations for a measure of European unity, and joined in creating the European Coal and Steel Community in 1951 and the European Economic Community in 1957. In Jan. 1957 the Saarland was returned to full German control. In 1973 the Federal Republic entered the UN.

In the autumn of 1989 movements for political liberalization in the GDR and reunification with the Federal Republic of Germany gathered strength. Erich Honecker and other long-serving Communist leaders were dismissed in Oct.–Nov. The Berlin Wall was breached on 9 Nov. Following the reforms in the GDR in Nov. 1989 the Federal Chancellor Helmut Kohl issued a plan for German confederation. The ambassadors of the four wartime allies met in Berlin in Dec. After talks with Chancellor Kohl on 11 Feb. 1990, Soviet General Secretary Mikhail Gorbachev said the USSR would raise no objection to German reunification. The Allies agreed a formula for reunification talks to begin after the GDR elections on 18 March. On 18 May the Federal Republic of Germany and the GDR signed a treaty extending the Federal Republic's currency, together with its economic, monetary and social legislation, to the GDR as of 1 July. On 23 Aug. the Volkskammer (the parliament of the GDR) by 294 votes to 62 'declared its accession to the jurisdiction of the Federal Republic as from 3 Oct. according to article 23 of the Basic Law', which provided for the Länder of pre-war Germany to accede to the Federal Republic. On 12 Sept. the Treaty on the Final Settlement with Respect to Germany was signed by the Federal Republic of Germany, the GDR and the four wartime allies: France, the USSR, the UK and the USA.

The single most important event in German post-war history took place on 3 Oct. 1990 with the reunification of the Federal Republic and the former GDR. That it happened at all was remarkable enough but that it was achieved without major social and political disruption was a huge tribute to the strength of a still young democracy. That is not to say that reunification has been trouble free. Notwithstanding the injection of billions of Deutsche Marks of public subsidy which transformed the infrastructure and restored urban areas, the easterners found the transition from communism to capitalism more painful than they had anticipated. Part of the problem was the adoption of the Deutsche Mark which, by virtue of its strength as an international currency, inspired confidence but at the same time made it harder for export markets in central and eastern Europe to afford to buy German. The collapse of much traditional industry in the east was hastened by wage equalization deals, pushing up labour costs.

The Federal Assembly (Bundestag) moved from Bonn to the renovated Reichstag in Berlin in 1999. As a psychological factor, the government move to Berlin was calculated to do much to bring eastern Germany back into the centre of national life as an equal part of the country. Gerhard Schröder served as chancellor from 1998 until 2005, when he was replaced by Angela Merkel of the Christian Democratic Union. She headed a 'grand coalition' of the Christian Democratic Union and the Social Democratic Party until securing a further term in 2009 with the Free Democratic Party as coalition partners.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Germany is bounded in the north by Denmark and the North and Baltic Seas, east by Poland, east and southeast by the Czech Republic, southeast and south by Austria, south by Switzerland and west by France, Luxembourg, Belgium and the Netherlands. Area: 357,121 sq. km. Population estimate, 31 Dec. 2010: 81,752,000 (41,639,000 females); density 229 per sq. km. Of the total population of 81,752,000 in Dec. 2010, 65,426,000 lived in the former Federal Republic of Germany (excluding West Berlin), 12,865,000 in the five new states of the former German Democratic Republic and 3,461,000 in Berlin. In 2010, 73.8% of the population lived in urban areas. There were 40.30m. households in 2010 of which 16.20m. were single-person. Germany has an ageing population. The proportion of the population over 60 has been steadily rising, and that of the under 20s steadily declining. By the mid-1990s the number of over 60s had surpassed the number of under 20s and now stands at 25% of the total population.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 81.47m.

On 14 Nov. 1990 Germany and Poland signed a treaty confirming Poland's existing western frontier and renouncing German claims to territory lost as a result of the Second World War.

The capital is Berlin; the Federal German government moved from Bonn to Berlin in 1999.

The Federation comprises 16 Bundesländer (states). Area and population:

On 31 Dec. 2010 there were 6,753,621 resident foreigners, including 1,629,480 Turks, 517,546 Italians, 419,435 Poles, 276,685 Greeks and 220,199 Croats. More than 1.6m. of these were born in Germany. In 2010 Germany received 41,332 asylum applications, up from 19,164 in 2007 but down from 438,200 in 1992. The main countries of origin in 2010 were Afghanistan (5,905), Iraq (5,555), Serbia (4,978), Iran (2,475) and Macedonia (2,466). Tighter controls on entry from abroad were applied as from 1993. At the end of 2010 there were 594,000 refugees, a figure exceeded only in Pakistan, Iran and Syria. 96,122 persons were naturalized in 2009, of whom 24,647 were from Turkey. In 2009 there were 733,800 emigrants and 721,000 immigrants. In 2008 emigration exceeded immigration for the first time since the reunification of Germany in 1990. New citizenship laws were introduced on 1 Jan. 2000, whereby a child of non-Germans will have German citizenship automatically if the birth is in Germany, if at the time of the birth one parent has made Germany his or her customary legal place of abode for at least eight years, and if this parent has had an unlimited residence permit for at least three years. Previously at least one parent had to hold German citizenship for the child to become a German national.

The official language is German. Minor orthographical amendments were agreed in 1995. An agreement between German-speaking countries on 1 July 1996 in Vienna provided for minor orthographical changes and established a Commission for German Orthography in Mannheim. There have been objections within Germany, particularly in the North, and many Bundesländer are to decide their own language programmes for schools. Generally, both old and new spellings are acceptable.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Calendar years:

	Marriages	Live births	Of these to single parents	Deaths	Divorces
2004	395,992	705,622	197,129	818,271	213,691
2005	388,451	685,795	200,122	830,227	201,693
2006	373,681	672,724	201,519	821,627	190,928
2007	368,922	684,862	211,053	827,155	187,072
2008	377,055	682,514	218,887	844,439	191,948
2009	378,439	665,126	217,758	854,544	185,817

The annual number of births declined every year between 1997 and 2006 before rising in 2007, but it then fell again and the 2009 figure was a post-war low. Of the 378,439 marriages in 2009, 26,540 involved a foreign male and 32,492 involved a foreign female. The average age of bridegrooms in 2009 was 37.2 years, and of brides 34.0. The average first-time marrying age for men was 33.1 and for women 30.2.

Rates (per 1,000 population), 2009: birth, 8.1; death, 10.4; marriage, 4.6; divorce, 2.3; infant mortality, 3.5 per 1,000 live births; stillborn rate, 3.5 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy, 2007–09: men, 77.3 years; women, 82.5. Suicide rates, 2007, per 100,000 population, 11.4 (men, 17.4; women, 5.7). Annual population growth rate, 2005–10, –0.2%; fertility rate, 2010, 1.4 births per woman (one of the lowest rates in the world).

Since 1 Aug. 2001 same-sex couples have been permitted to exchange vows at registry offices. The law also gives them the same rights as heterosexual couples in inheritance and insurance law.

A UNICEF report published in 2005 showed that 10.2% of children in Germany live in poverty (in households with income below 50% of the national median).

CLIMATE

Oceanic influences are only found in the northwest where winters are quite mild but stormy. Elsewhere a continental climate is general. To the east and south, winter temperatures are lower, with bright frosty weather and considerable snowfall. Summer temperatures are fairly uniform throughout. Berlin, Jan. 31°F

(–0.5°C), July 66°F (19°C). Annual rainfall 22.5" (563 mm). Cologne, Jan. 36°F (2.2°C), July 66°F (18.9°C). Annual rainfall 27" (676 mm). Dresden, Jan. 30°F (–0.1°C), July 65°F (18.5°C). ## CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Basic Law (Grundgesetz) was approved by the parliaments of the participating Bundesländer and came into force on 23 May 1949. It is to remain in force until 'a constitution adopted by a free decision of the German people comes into being'. The Federal Republic is a democratic and social constitutional state on a parliamentary basis. The federation is constituted by the 16 Bundesländer (states). The Basic Law decrees that the general rules of international law form part of the federal law. The constitutions of the Bundesländer must conform to the principles of a republican, democratic and social state based on the rule of law. Executive power is vested in the Bundesländer, unless the Basic Law prescribes or permits otherwise. Federal law takes precedence over state law.

Legislative power is vested in the Bundestag (Federal Assembly) and the Bundesrat (Federal Council). The Bundestag is currently composed of 622 members and is elected in universal, free, equal and secret elections for a term of four years. A party must gain 5% of total votes cast in order to gain representation in the Bundestag, although if a party has three candidates elected directly, they may take their seats even if the party obtains less than 5% of the national vote. The electoral system combines relative-majority and proportional voting; each voter has two votes, the first for the direct constituency representative, the second for the competing party lists in the Bundesländer. All directly elected constituency representatives enter parliament, but if a party receives more 'indirect' than 'direct' votes, the first name in order on the party list not to have a seat becomes a member—the number of seats is increased by the difference ('overhang votes'). Thus the number of seats in the Bundestag varies, but is 598 regular members (for the 2009 election, the same as in 2005 and 2002, but down from 656 for the previous elections since reunification) plus the 'overhang votes' (24 at the 2009 election, giving a total of 622 members). The Bundesrat consists of 69 members appointed by the governments of the Bundesländer in proportions determined by the number of inhabitants. Each Bundesland has at least three votes.

The Head of State is the Federal President, who is elected for a five-year term by a Federal Convention specially convened for this purpose. This Convention consists of all the members of the Bundestag and an equal number of members elected by the Bundesländer parliaments in accordance with party strengths, but who need not themselves be members of the parliaments. No president may serve more than two terms. Executive power is vested in the Federal government, which consists of the Federal Chancellor, elected by the Bundestag on the proposal of the Federal President, and the Federal Ministers, who are appointed and dismissed by the Federal President upon the proposal of the Federal Chancellor.

The Federal Republic has exclusive legislation on: (1) foreign affairs; (2) federal citizenship; (3) freedom of movement, passports, immigration and emigration, and extradition; (4) currency, money and coinage, weights and measures, and regulation of time and calendar; (5) customs, commercial and navigation agreements, traffic in goods and payments with foreign countries, including customs and frontier protection; (6) federal railways and air traffic; (7) post and telecommunications; (8) the legal status of persons in the employment of the Federation and of public law corporations under direct supervision of the Federal government; (9) trade marks, copyright and publishing rights; (10) co-operation of the Federal Republic and the Bundesländer in the criminal police and in matters concerning the protection of the constitution, the establishment of a Federal Office of Criminal Police, as well as the combating of international crime; (11) federal statistics.

In the field of finance the Federal Republic has exclusive legislation on customs and financial monopolies and concurrent legislation on: (1) excise taxes and taxes on transactions, in particular, taxes on real-estate acquisition, incremented value and on fire protection; (2) taxes on income, property, inheritance and donations; (3) real estate, industrial and trade taxes, with the exception of the determining of the tax rates.

Federal laws are passed by the Bundestag and after their adoption submitted to the Bundesrat, which has a limited veto. The Basic Law may be amended only upon the approval of two-thirds of the members of the Bundestag and two-thirds of the votes of the Bundesrat.

RECENT ELECTIONS

On 18 March 2012 Joachim Gauck was elected Federal President by the Federal Convention with 991 votes, against 126 for Beate Klarsfeld and 108 abstentions.

Bundestag elections were held on 27 Sept. 2009. The Christian Democratic Union/Christian Social Union of Chancellor Angela Merkel (CDU/CSU; the CSU is a Bavarian party where the CDU does not stand) won 239 seats with 33.8% of votes cast (226 with 35.2% in 2005); the Social Democratic Party (SPD) won 146 with 23.0% (222 seats with 34.2%); the Free Democratic Party (FDP), 93 with 14.6% (61 with 9.8%); the Left Party (former Party for Democratic Socialism), 76 with 11.9% (54 with 8.7%); the Greens, 68 with 10.7% (51 with 8.1%). Turnout was 70.8% (77.7% in 2005). The CDU formed a coalition with the FDP to create Germany's first centre-right government since 1998.

European Parliament

Germany has 99 representatives. At the June 2009 elections turnout was 43.3% (43.0% in 2004). The CDU/CSU won 42 seats—CDU 34 and CSU 8—with 37.9% of votes cast (political affiliation in European Parliament: European People's Party); the SPD, 23 with 20.8% (Progressive Alliance of Socialists and Democrats); the Greens, 14 with 12.1% (Greens/European Free Alliance); the FDP, 12 with 11.0% (Alliance of Liberals and Democrats for Europe); the Left Party, 8 with 7.5% (European Left/Nordic Green Left).

CURRENT LEADERS

Joachim Gauck

Position
President

Introduction

Joachim Gauck was elected president on 18 March 2012. His appointment alongside Chancellor Angela Merkel meant that the two most senior positions in government were held by East Germans for the first time since reunification. Gauck is best known as a pro-democracy activist who has exposed crimes committed by the secret police in former German Democratic Republic.

Early Life

Joachim Gauck was born on 24 Jan. 1940 in the maritime town of Rostock. In 1951 his father was arrested by Soviet forces on charges of espionage and served three years in a Soviet Gulag, an event that moulded Joachim's political beliefs.

Gauck refused to join the communist Free German Youth movement and was therefore denied the opportunity of becoming a journalist. Instead, he studied theology and became a Lutheran pastor, a position which brought him into conflict with the ruling regime and to the attention of the Stasi.

In 1989 Gauck became spokesman for the New Forum, a pro-democratic opposition movement, taking part in a series of peaceful demonstrations that led the way to the regime's collapse. After the dissolution of the German Democratic Republic on 3 Oct. 1990 the federal government appointed him as a special representative to research the Stasi archives. In this role, which he held until 2000, he investigated crimes perpetrated by the secret police in the period of communist rule.

Gauck ran for the presidency in 2010 backed by the opposition Social Democrats (SDP) and the Greens. He was narrowly defeated by the governing coalition candidate, Christian Wulff, after three parliamentary ballots. When Wulff resigned on 17 Feb. 2012 in the wake of a corruption scandal, Gauck was again put forward by the SDP and Greens and this time gained the support of Merkel's coalition. He faced one opponent, 'Nazi hunter' Beate Klarsfeld, who was proposed by the Left Party. In a vote by the Federal Assembly on 18 March, Gauck took 991 votes against 126 for Klarsfeld, with 108 abstentions.

Career in Office

Gauck came to power as Germany sought to negotiate a route through the eurozone crisis. A charismatic and popular figure, his election was seen by some commentators as threatening the authority of Chancellor Merkel, who had opposed his candidacy in 2010.

Angela Merkel

Position

Chancellor

Introduction

Angela Merkel became Germany's first female chancellor in Nov. 2005. Her appointment came after three weeks of negotiations following elections that failed to give a parliamentary majority to either her party, the Christian Democrats (CDU), or the Social Democrats (SPD) of incumbent Gerhard Schröder. Despite her initial success in re-energizing Germany's economy, global turmoil in financial markets led to recession in 2008, which highlighted considerable differences in her uneasy CDU-SPD coalition over the appropriate policy response. She was nevertheless re-elected Chancellor in the elections of Sept. 2009.

Early Life

Angela Dorothea Kasner was born on 17 July 1954 in Hamburg, West Germany, the daughter of a Lutheran pastor and a teacher. Later in 1954 her father received a pastorship in East Germany (GDR) and the family moved to Templin, 50 km north of Berlin. Merkel was educated in Templin before studying physics at the University of Leipzig from 1973-78. Having married Ulrich Merkel in 1977, she continued her studies at the Academy of Sciences in East Berlin, receiving a doctorate in 1986, and subsequently combined research in quantum chemistry with lecturing.

Following the fall of the Berlin Wall in Nov. 1989 and the democratic elections in the GDR on 18 March 1990, Merkel became a member of the East German Christian Democratic Union (CDU) and deputy spokesperson of the new government under Lothar de Maizière. She was elected to the Bundestag in the first post-unification general elections in Dec. 1990, representing the united CDU in a Baltic coast constituency encompassing Rügen and the city of Stralsund. She was also appointed to Chancellor Helmut Kohl's cabinet as minister for women and youth, a position she held until being promoted to minister for the environment in 1994.

Merkel lost ministerial office in 1998 when the CDU were defeated in federal elections but later that year was appointed secretary-general of the CDU. She oversaw a string of CDU provincial election victories in 1999, although it was a party funding scandal implicating the CDU's chairman, Wolfgang Schäuble, and Kohl himself, which thrust Merkel into the limelight. She criticized Kohl (who was later stripped of his title of the CDU's honorary chairman), called for a fresh start for the party and was duly elected president of the CDU on 10 April 2000.

Unable to garner sufficient support to challenge Chancellor Schröder in the 2002 federal elections, Merkel ceded that role to Edmund Stoiber, leader of the CDU's sister party, the Bavarian Christian Social Union (CSU). Following Stoiber's narrow defeat, Merkel became leader of the conservative opposition in the Bundestag. She advocated institutional reform through simplifying the tax code and lowering taxes and overhauling health care and pensions. She also argued for a loosening of labour law and, in 2003, controversially backed the US-led invasion of Iraq.

In May 2005 Merkel won the CDU/CSU nomination to challenge Schröder in the 2005 elections. In the elections on 18 Sept. the CDU/CSU won 35.2% of the vote to the SPD's 34.2%. Both Merkel and Schröder claimed victory and weeks of wrangling ensued. A deal for a grand coalition was eventually reached whereby Merkel would become chancellor and the SPD would hold eight of the 14 cabinet posts. Merkel was elected chancellor by a majority of delegates in the Bundestag on 22 Nov. 2005.

Career in Office

Merkel won plaudits for brokering an EU budget deal between France's Jacques Chirac and Britain's Tony Blair within weeks of becoming chancellor. However, countering high unemployment and the sluggish German economy, and delivering health care and tax reforms, were likely to prove difficult. Nevertheless, by Aug. 2006 she claimed that the country had 'turned the corner' with a reduction in the budget deficit and lower unemployment, and in the first half of 2007 the public sector recorded a surplus for the first time since unification in 1990. Meanwhile, in Jan. 2007 Germany took over the six-month rotating presidency of the EU and Merkel was instrumental in facilitating agreement among the heads of government on a new draft treaty streamlining the Union's institutional structure and decision-making process (which, officially concluded as the Treaty of Lisbon in Dec. 2007, eventually entered into force in Dec. 2009).

In March 2008 Merkel made an historic address to the Israeli parliament, the first by a German head of government, during a visit marking the 60th anniversary of the founding of Israel.

As the global financial crisis began to bite through 2008, Germany's economy slipped into recession. In the autumn the government stepped in to prevent the collapse of one of the country's largest banks, Hypo Real Estate, and made €500bn. available in loan guarantees and capital to bolster the banking system. Merkel remained unconvinced, however, about the wisdom of the huge economic stimulus packages unveiled by many of her EU partners and said that Germany would not engage in a 'pointless race to spend billions'. This apparent inaction in the face of a worsening recession generated external and internal opposition, and Merkel subsequently endorsed a co-ordinated economic recovery package (and joint action on global warming) agreed at a summit of EU leaders in mid-Dec. 2008. Also in Dec., Merkel was re-elected overwhelmingly as the leader of the CDU.

The CDU emerged as the largest party in the German elections to the European Parliament in June 2009 and increased its majority in the Federal Assembly in general elections in Sept. In Oct. Merkel was sworn in as chancellor for a second term at the head of a new centre-right coalition with the Free Democratic Party (FDP). However, her political authority has since been undermined. In June 2010 her preferred candidate for the post of federal president, Christian Wulff, was elected by parliament but only after three rounds of voting, highlighting dissension within her government and party. Wulff then attracted widespread criticism at the end of 2011 after it emerged that he had tried to suppress media coverage about a personal loan that he had accepted while premier of Lower Saxony. He subsequently resigned in Feb. 2012 and a month later Joachim Gauck was elected the new federal president.

In addition, the growing debt crisis in the eurozone has led to large and costly bail-out packages for some eurozone partner states, which Merkel has reluctantly endorsed. This has been unpopular with the German public, prompting CDU losses in regional elections in several states (including North Rhine-Westphalia, Hamburg, Baden-Württemberg and Mecklenburg-West Pomerania). Merkel strived throughout 2011 and early 2012 to build a political consensus on containing Europe's debt problems, and helped negotiate a treaty change proposing greater fiscal union in the eurozone (but not the EU as a whole following a British veto in Dec.). She has nevertheless maintained her opposition to the European Central Bank issuing eurobonds backed by all eurozone members.

In contrast to British and French policy towards the popular uprising in Libya against the Gaddafi regime, Germany abstained in the United Nations Security Council vote in March 2011 sanctioning NATO military intervention to protect Libyan civilians.

Following the disaster in Japan at the Fukushima nuclear power plant, Merkel's government announced in May 2011 that all of Germany's nuclear power stations would be phased out by 2022.

DEFENCE

Germany officially ended its compulsory military service on 1 July 2011. In July 1994 the Constitutional Court ruled that German armed forces might be sent on peacekeeping missions abroad. Germany has increased the number of professionals available for military missions abroad and sent troops to Afghanistan as part of the international alliance against terrorism in the aftermath of 11 Sept. 2001. The first time that German armed forces were deployed in this way since the Second World War, the move provoked controversy in Germany. In 2006 there were over 8,000 German troops abroad. In addition to those in Afghanistan (nearly half of all German troops deployed abroad) there were German peacekeepers in various parts of the world including Kosovo, Lebanon, Bosnia and Sudan. Since Jan. 2001 women have been allowed to serve in all branches of the military on the same basis as men.

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$46,759m. (US$568 per capita). In 2007 defence spending represented 1.3% of GDP. Military spending fell by 11.0% in real terms between 1999 and 2008.

Arms Trade

Germany was the world's third largest exporter after the USA and Russia in 2008, with sales worth US$2,900m. or 9.1% of the world total.

Army

The Army is organized in the Army Forces Command. The equipment of the former East German army is in store. Total strength was (2006) 191,350 (conscripts 73,450). There are Army reserves of 297,300.

The Territorial Army is organized into five Military Districts, under three Territorial Commands. Its main task is to defend rear areas and remains under national control even in wartime.

Navy

The Fleet Commander operates from a modern Maritime Headquarters at Glücksburg, close to the Danish border.

The fleet includes 14 diesel coastal submarines and 14 frigates. The main naval bases are at Wilhelmshaven, Olpenitz, Kiel, Eckernförde and Warnemünde.

The Naval Air Arm, 3,700 strong, is organized into two wings and includes 16 combat aircraft (Atlantics) and 29 armed helicopters.

Personnel in 2006 numbered 20,700, including 4,950 conscripts.

Air Force

Since 1970 the Luftwaffe has comprised the following commands: German Air Force Tactical Command, German Air Force Support Command (including two German Air Force Regional Support Commands—North and South) and General Air Force Office. Personnel in 2006 was 51,400 (16,100 conscripts). There were 426 combat aircraft, including Tornados, F-4Fs, T-37Bs and T-38As.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

A treaty of friendship with Poland signed on 17 June 1991 recognized the Oder-Neisse border and guaranteed minorities' rights in both countries.

ECONOMY

Services accounted for 69% of GDP in 2007, industry 30% and agriculture 1%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Germany ranked equal 14th in the world in a 2011 survey of the countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 8.0 out of 10 in the annual index.

Germany gave US$12.1bn. in international aid in 2009, equivalent to 0.35% of GNI (compared to the UN target of 0.7%).

Overview

Germany is Europe's largest economy and the world's second largest exporter, behind China. However, the reunification of the two Germanies in 1989 proved costly for the more prosperous West Germans. GDP growth averaged 4.5% per annum in the 1960s but slowed to under 1% in the first half of the 2000s, the lowest in the eurozone alongside Italy. In 2006 the economy recorded its highest growth since 2000, spurred by an increase in exports and a burst of domestic demand prior to a 3% VAT increase implemented in Jan. 2007.

The principal manufacturing is in the auto and chemical industries, with telecommunications an increasingly important sector. Manufacturing (especially of automobiles) and related services rank higher in the economy than in other developed countries. This leaves the country vulnerable to slowdowns or recessions in its principal export markets.

The post-Second World War economic miracle (Wirtschaftswunder) was marked by prudent fiscal and monetary policy, the growth of a globally competitive manufacturing sector and good industrial relations. The economy is described as a 'social market' in that it embraces enlightened company management and social welfare. Companies are managed on the 'stakeholder' concept, which means they are responsible not only to their shareholders but also to employees, customers, suppliers and local communities. However, the system is changing in response to the internationalization of ownership, corporate mergers, the revitalization of the stock exchange and the ending of large cross-shareholdings by companies and banks.

Relatively low growth in the post-unification years has been attributed to weaknesses in the labour market and the high cost of restructuring the economy of the former GDR. Employment flexibility has diminished owing to high labour costs, generous unemployment benefits and early retirement policies. Unemployment benefits and social security have been merged for long-term claimants (known as the Hartz IV reforms).

The global financial crisis that began in 2007 put significant strain on the economy and the government was required to intervene in the markets on several occasions. In Oct. 2008 the finance ministry agreed a €50bn. plan to rescue Hypo Real Estate, one of the country's biggest banks, while in Jan. 2009 Commerzbank became the first German bank to be partly nationalized via a government bail-out fund. The government also announced a €50bn. stimulus package of public investment and tax cuts aimed at halting a descent into severe recession, alongside a €100bn. fund to underwrite fresh credit to companies starved of new loans. In the period April–June 2009 the economy emerged from recession, growing by 0.4% on the back of increasing exports, government fiscal stimulus and stronger private consumption. Though there was an overall contraction of 5.1% in 2009, the economy rebounded strongly in 2010 with growth of 3.6% following a pick-up in global trade and strong household and government spending. However, economic activity slowed during the second half of 2011 and Germany faced a new period of uncertainty reflecting low world trade growth and a loss of confidence as a result of the eurozone debt crisis.

Having achieved a balanced budget in 2008, Germany's budget deficit reached 3.5% of GDP in the first half of 2010, rising above the 3% target set by the EU's Stability and Growth Pact for the first time in five years. The government committed to reducing it to less than 2% by 2013 and in June 2010 Chancellor Merkel announced €80bn. worth of cuts, including lower spending on welfare and unemployment benefits, a proposed slash to defence spending and a flight tax on air travel. The measures aimed to reduce the structural deficit from 2.5% of GDP in 2010 to 0.35% by 2016, as required by an amendment to the constitution and to 'set an example' for the rest of Europe.

Reforms of the labour market prompted by the global crisis, including increased working-hour flexibility and reduced structural unemployment, have contributed to the lowest overall jobless rate in decades and the lowest youth unemployment in Europe. However, increasing full-time female labour participation—by lowering fiscal disincentives for second earners and improving the supply of childcare—are crucial in the medium-term given an ageing population. According to the OECD, only South Korea is predicted to have a faster increasing dependency ratio than Germany.

Currency

On 1 Jan. 1999 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency in Germany at the irrevocable conversion rate of 1.95583 DM (Deutsche Mark) to one euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. It was still possible to make cash transactions in German marks until 28 Feb. 2002, although formally the mark had ceased to be legal tender on 31 Dec. 2001. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €254.2bn.

Foreign exchange reserves were US$37,492m. in Sept. 2009 and gold reserves were 109.56m. troy oz. Only the USA, with 261.50m. troy oz, had more in Sept. 2009. Total money supply was €934,352m. in Aug. 2009.

Inflation rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
1.9%	1.5%	1.0%	1.7%	1.5%	1.6%	2.3%	2.6%	0.4%	1.1%

The inflation rate in 2011 according to Destatis, the Federal Statistical Office, was 2.3%.

Budget

After winning the 2009 election, Chancellor Merkel's CDU agreed upon a coalition agreement with the liberal FDP based on major tax cuts. In June 2011 the government announced plans to introduce tax cuts worth up to €10bn. within two years. In the space of ten years corporate taxes were cut from 51.6% in 2000 to 29.8% in 2010, a drop of almost 22%.

VAT is (since 1 Jan. 2007) 19% (reduced rate, 7%). In 2006 the federal government and the Bundesländer each received 42.5% of income tax and the local authorities 15%. Corporation tax was equally split between the federal government and the Bundesländer. In 2007 the federal government received approximately 55% of VAT, the Bundesländer around 43% and the local authorities about 2%.

Germany's budget deficit in 2010 was 4.3% of GDP (2009, 3.2%; 2008, 0.1%). The required target set by the EU is a budget deficit of no more than 3%.

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
1.6%	0.0%	-0.4%	0.7%	0.8%	3.9%	3.4%	0.8%	-5.1%	3.6%

In 2002 real GDP growth was 0.0%, the lowest since 1993, and in 2003 the economy contracted by 0.4%, although Germany came out of recession in the second half of the year. Germany had four quarters of negative growth from the second quarter of 2008 but emerged from recession in the second quarter of 2009. The real GDP growth rate in 2011 according to Destatis, the Federal Statistical Office, was 3.0%. Total GDP in 2010 was US$3,309.7bn., the fourth highest in the world.

Banking and Finance

The Deutsche Bundesbank (German Federal Bank) is the central bank and bank of issue. Its duty is to protect the stability of the currency. It is independent of the government but obliged to support the government's general policy. Its Governor is appointed by the government for eight years. The President is Jens Weidmann. Its assets were €373,535m. in Dec. 2006. The largest private banks are the Deutsche Bank, Commerzbank, Dresdner Bank and DZ Bank. In April 2001 Dresdner Bank accepted a takeover offer from Allianz, the country's largest insurance company. Commerzbank in turn agreed to buy Dresdner Bank from Allianz in Aug. 2008. In June 2005 Italy's UniCredit finalized an agreement to acquire HypoVereinsbank in Europe's biggest cross-border banking takeover.

In 2010 there were 2,093 credit institutes, including 300 banks, 429 savings banks, 23 mortgage lenders and 1,141 credit societies. They are represented in the wholesale market by nine public sector Landesbanken. Total assets, 2009, €7,509,829m. Savings deposits were €628,154m. in 2010. In 2007 approximately 39% of the German population were using e-banking.

A single stock exchange, the Deutsche Börse, was created in 1992, based on the former Frankfurt stock exchange in a union with the smaller exchanges in Berlin, Bremen, Düsseldorf, Hamburg, Hanover, Munich and Stuttgart. Frankfurt processes 90% of equities trading in the country.

Germany attracted US$46.13bn. worth of foreign direct investment in 2010, up from US$37.62bn. in 2009 but down from the record US$198.28bn. of 2000.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

In 2008, 8.9% of energy consumption came from renewables (wind power, solar power, hydro-electric power, tidal power, geothermal energy and biomass), compared to the European Union average of 10.3%. A target of 18% has been set by the EU for 2020.

Environment

Germany's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 10.1 tonnes per capita in 2008. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked Germany 13th in the world, with 86.3%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources.

Germany is one of the world leaders in recycling. In 2004, 56% of all household waste was recycled.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2009 was 118.62m. kW. In 2009 there were 17 nuclear reactors in operation. Production of electricity was 524.60bn. kWh in 2009, of which about 26% was nuclear. There is a moratorium on further nuclear plant construction, and the SPD–Green coalition government agreed in 2000 to begin phasing out nuclear power, with the final plant closure scheduled for 2022. After the CDU/CSU–FDP coalition came to power following the Sept. 2009 election this date was extended to 2036. However, in the wake of Japan's nuclear incidents in March 2011, Chancellor Angela Merkel suspended the extension and temporarily shut down seven of Germany's oldest reactors. Electricity consumption per capita was 7,543 kWh in 2007. In April 1998 the electricity market was liberalized, leading to huge cuts in bills for both industrial and residential customers. In June 2000 Veolia and Viag merged to form E.ON, which became the world's largest private energy service provider. Germany is the second largest exporter of electricity in the world (after France), with 62.5bn. kWh in 2007.

Oil and Gas

The chief oilfields are in Emsland (Lower Saxony). In 2010, 1.91m. tonnes of crude oil were produced. Natural gas production was 13.0bn. cu. metres in 2008. Natural gas reserves were 120bn. cu. metres in 2008; crude petroleum reserves were 367m. bbls in 2007.

Wind

Germany is one of the world's largest wind-power producers. By the end of 2010 there were 21,607 wind turbines with a total rated power of 27,215 MW (14.0% of the world total), ranking Germany third behind China and the USA. Production of wind-generated electricity in 2010 totalled 37.3bn. kWh.

Minerals

The main production areas are: North Rhine-Westphalia (for coal, iron and metal smelting-works), Central Germany (for lignite) and Lower Saxony (Salzgitter for iron ore; the Harz for metal ore).

Production (in 1,000 tonnes): lignite (2010), 174,847; salt (2009), 18,939; coal (2009), 13,766. In 2009 proved coal reserves were 6.7bn. tonnes. Germany is the world's largest lignite producer and the third largest salt producer after China and the USA.

Agriculture

In 2010 there were 11.85m. ha. of arable land. Sown areas in 2010 (in 1,000 ha.) included: wheat, 3,297.7; corn for silage, 1,828.9; barley, 1,641.4; rape, 1,461.2; rye and maslin, 627.1; maize, 466.6; triticale, 413.3; grassland, 386.9; sugar beets, 364.1; potatoes, 254.4; oats, 141.4. Crop production, 2008 (in 1,000 tonnes): fodder, 75,876; wheat, 26,001; sugar beets (2010), 22,441; barley, 11,972; potatoes (2010), 10,143; maize, 5,158; rapeseed, 5,154; rye, 3,743; oats, 793. Germany is the world's largest producer of hops (39,700 tonnes in 2008) and the second largest producer of rye.

In 2008, 5.4% of agricultural land was farmed organically in Germany. Organic food sales for Germany in 2008 were valued at €5.8bn. (the second highest in the world behind the USA).

In 2010 there were 299,100 farms, of which 27,400 were between two and five ha. and 33,600 over 100 ha. In 2010 there were 274,600 farmers assisted by 293,600 household members and 529,500 hired labourers (334,000 of them seasonal).

Wine production was 690.6m. litres in 2010 (down from 922.8m. litres in 2009).

Livestock, 2010 (in 1,000): pigs, 27,571.4; beef cattle, 12,534.5; milch cows, 4,164.8; sheep, 2,088.5; horses (2007), 541.9; poultry, 128,899.8. Livestock products (in 1,000 tonnes): milk (2009), 29,199; meat (2010), 6,719; cheese (2008) (except soft cheese and cottage cheese), 1,487; eggs, 8,007m. units.

Forestry

Forest area in 2009 was 10,753,400 ha., of which about half was owned by the State. Timber production was 54.42m. cu metres in 2010. In recent years depredation has occurred through pollution with acid rain.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2008 was 229,499 tonnes (207,437 tonnes from marine waters). In 2008 the fishing fleet consisted of 1,828 vessels totalling 69,135 GT. About 3,700 people were engaged in fisheries in 2005. Imports of fishery commodities were valued at US$4,502m. in 2008 and exports at US$2,472m.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Germany in March 2011 were: Siemens, an engineering conglomerate including industry, energy and health care (US$125.5bn.); BASF, a chemicals company (US$79.5bn.); and Daimler, an automobile company (US$75.4bn.).

In 2010 a total of 862,986 firms were registered (728,978 in 2001).

Output of major industrial products, 2010 unless otherwise indicated (in 1,000 tonnes): distillate fuel oil (2008), 48,709; crude steel, 43,830; rolled steel products, 36,827; cement, 29,661; petrol (2008), 24,822; pig iron (2009), 20,104; plastics, 17,747; paper, 12,832; residual fuel oil (2008), 12,023; flour, 5,365; jet fuel (2008), 4,760; sulphuric acid, 1,690; nitrogenous fertilizers, 1,373; synthetic fibre, 373; passenger cars, 6,065,000 units; household dishwashing machines, 3,024,000 units; refrigerators, 2,739,000 units; glass bottles, 8,535m. units; TV sets, 416,000 units; beer, 8,674m. litres; soft drinks (excluding milk-based beverages), 22,031m. litres.

Labour

Retirement age was traditionally 65 years, but is being raised gradually to 67 in a process that started at the beginning of 2012 and is to continue through to 2029. In 2010 the workforce was 43.32m., of whom 40.38m. were working and 3.24m. (1.48m. females) were registered as unemployed. In 2010 there were 35.96m. employees and 4.41m. self-employed (including those helping family members). Of the total workforce in 2010 the year average for the number of employees in each industry was as follows: 7,384,000 in the mining, processing and manufacturing industries; 5,196,000 in the vehicle trade and maintenance; 4,905,000 in real estate and corporate services (2009); 3,913,000 in health, veterinary and social services (2009); 2,654,000 in the civil service and armed forces (2009); 2,314,000 in education (2009); 2,067,000 in transport and communications; 1,767,000 in the construction industry; 1,604,000 in the hotel and catering industries; 1,042,000 in banking and insurance (2009); and 461,000 in agriculture, forestry and fisheries. In 2010 there were 359,038 job vacancies.

By 2000 there was a shortfall of 75,000 people in the information technology industry. In Aug. 2000 Germany launched a 'Green Card' project, aimed at attracting 20,000 telecommunication and information technology specialists from non-European Union countries in a bid to make up for the shortfall in qualified personnel. The card authorized the holder to unrestricted employment in Germany for five years. By July 2003 more than 14,000 recruits had found work. The scheme was halted at the end of 2004 and a new Immigration Act came into effect from 1 Jan. 2005 which provides a legislative framework for controlling and restricting immigration. The standardized unemployment rate was 5.5% in Dec. 2011 (down from 7.1% in 2010 as a whole). Unemployment in 2011 was at its lowest level since the reunification of Germany in 1990. Youth unemployment (under 25) was just 8.3% in Jan. 2011, compared to the EU average of 20.6%, helped by the fact that a quarter of employers provide formal apprenticeship schemes for young people. Long-term unemployment is particularly high, with 47.4% of the labour force in 2010 having been out of work for more than a year. In Jan. 2005 the number of people out of work reached 5m., the highest total since the 1930s, although by Oct. 2010 it had fallen to below 3m. as Germany made a strong recovery from the recession. The gross annual earnings of full-time employees in the industry and services sector amounted to an average of €41,509 per person in 2008. There is no national minimum wage in Germany.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 2007 Germany had its highest ever annual trade surplus at €195.3bn. for the year, although it has declined since then.

Imports and Exports

Trade in €1m.:

	2007	2008	2009	2010 <sup>1</sup>
Imports	769,887	805,842	664,615	806,164

Main import sources in 2010 (provisional trade figures in €1m.): China, 76,528; Netherlands, 68,767; France, 61,751; USA, 45,063; Italy, 43,667; UK, 38,594; Austria, 34,315; Belgium, 33,700; Switzerland, 32,485; Russia, 31,780. Main export markets in 2010 (provisional trade figures in €1m.): France, 90,694; USA, 65,570; Netherlands, 63,235; UK, 59,487; Italy, 58,477; Austria, 53,721; China, 53,636; Belgium, 46,407; Switzerland, 41,712; Poland, 38,053.

Distribution of imports and exports by commodities in 2010 (provisional, in €1m.) includes: finished goods, 540,935 and 808,205; semi-finished goods, 71,699 and 52,273; foodstuffs, 50,422 and 41,888; raw materials, 80,864 and 9,671; alcohol and tobacco, 8,981 and 8,985; live animals, 1,275 and 959.

Germany is the third largest trading nation in the world after the USA and China. In 2003 it took over from the USA as the world's leading exporter and in 2009 accounted for 9.0% of global exports. However, China took over as the largest exporter of goods in 2009 in spite of Germany's share increasing from 8.1% in 2008.

Trade Fairs

Germany has a number of major annual trade fairs, among the most important of which are Internationale Grüne Woche Berlin (International Green Week Berlin—Exhibition for the Food Industry, Agriculture and Horticulture), held in Berlin in Jan.; Ambiente (for high quality consumer goods and new products), held in Frankfurt in Feb.; ITB Berlin (International Tourism Exchange), held in Berlin in March; CeBit (World Business Fair for Office Automation, Information Technology and Telecommunications), held in Hanover in March; Hannover Messe (the World's Leading Fair for Industry, Automation and Innovation), held in Hanover, in April; Internationale Funkausstellung Berlin (Your World of Consumer Electronics), held in Berlin in late Aug./early Sept.; and Frankfurter Buchmesse (Frankfurt Book Fair) held in Frankfurt in Oct. Hanover's trade fair site is the largest in Europe and Frankfurt's the second largest.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2010 the total length of the road network was 230,969 km, including 12,813 km of motorway (Autobahn), 39,887 km of federal highways and 86,615 km of secondary roads. The motorway network is the largest in Europe. On 1 Jan. 2011 there were 50,902,131 motor vehicles, including: passenger cars, 42,301,563 (approximately one car for every two persons); lorries, 2,441,377; buses, 76,500; motorcycles, 3,827,900. In 2010, 8,892m. passengers were transported by scheduled road transport services. There were 288,297 accidents in 2010 resulting in injuries to passengers. Road casualties in 2010 totalled 374,818, with 371,170 injured and 3,648 killed. In 2010 there were 4.5 fatalities per 100,000 population.

Germany was ranked fifth for its road infrastructure in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2009–10.

Rail

Legislation of 1993 provides for the eventual privatization of the railways, but the state-owned Deutsche Bahn still dominates the market. On 1 Jan. 1994 West German Bundesbahn and the former GDR Reichsbahn were amalgamated as the Deutsche Bahn, a joint-stock company in which track, long-distance passenger traffic, regional passenger traffic, goods traffic and railway stations/services are run as five separate administrative entities. These were intended after 3–5 years to become companies themselves, at first under a holding company, and ultimately independent. In 2009 the total length of railway track of all kinds was 41,104 km (nearly all 1,435 mm gauge track); 56% of the network was electrified. 2,370m. passengers and 355.7m. tonnes of freight were carried in 2010.

There are metros in Berlin (152 km), Hamburg (101 km), Munich (101 km) and Nuremberg (35 km), and tram/light rail networks in over 50 cities.

In the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2009–10 Germany ranked fifth for quality of rail infrastructure.

Civil Aviation

Lufthansa, the largest carrier, was set up in 1953 and was originally 75% state-owned. The government sold its final shares in 1997. Other airlines include Air Berlin (Germany's second largest airline and Europe's third largest low-cost carrier), Condor, Eurowings, Germanwings and TUIfly. In 2005 Lufthansa carried 49.0m. passengers (35.7m. on international flights); passenger-km totalled 112.8bn. In 2010 civil aviation had 799 aircraft over 20 tonnes (772 jets).

In 2010 there were 94.97m. passenger arrivals and 95.04m. departures. Main international airports: Bremen, Cologne-Bonn, Düsseldorf, Frankfurt am Main, Frankfurt (Hahn), Hamburg (Fuhlsbüttel), Hanover, Munich, Nuremberg, Stuttgart, Weeze (Niederrhein) and two at Berlin (Tegel and Schönefeld). Secondary airports in terms of passenger numbers include Dortmund, Dresden, Karlsruhe, Leipzig, Münster and Paderborn.

In 2010 Frankfurt am Main handled 52.95m. passengers and 2,304,000 tonnes of freight. It is the busiest airport in Europe in terms of freight handled. Munich was the second busiest German airport in terms of passenger traffic in 2010 (34.6m.) but fourth for freight. Leipzig was the second busiest in 2010 for freight, with 663,000 tonnes, but only 14th for passenger traffic.

Shipping

At 31 Dec. 2010 the mercantile marine comprised 571 ocean-going vessels of 15,526,000 GRT. Sea-going ships in 2010 carried 276.0m. tonnes of cargo. The busiest port, Hamburg, handled 104.5m. tonnes of cargo in 2010 (42.6m. tonnes loaded and 61.9m. tonnes discharged), ranking it third in Europe behind Rotterdam and Antwerp. Hamburg is Europe's second busiest container port after Rotterdam. Navigable rivers and canals have a total length of 7,707 km. The inland-waterways fleet on 31 Dec. 2010 included 917 motor freight vessels totalling 1.17m. tonnes and 419 tankers of 759,454 tonnes. 229.6m. tonnes of freight were transported in 2010.

Germany was ranked fifth in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2009–10 for the quality of its port facilities.

Telecommunications

Telecommunications were deregulated in 1989. On 1 Jan. 1995, three state-owned joint-stock companies were set up: Deutsche Telekom, Postdienst and Postbank. The partial privatization of Deutsche Telekom began in Nov. 1996; in 2010 the German government held only 15.0% of shares directly, and a further 17.0% indirectly through the government bank KfW.

In 2010 there were 45.6m. main (fixed) telephone lines, down from 54.8m. in 2005. Mobile phone subscribers numbered 104.6m. in 2010 (1,270.4 per 1,000 persons), up from 79.3m. in 2005. T-Mobile and D2 Vodafone are the largest networks, with 36% and 32% of the market share respectively. There were 54.0m. PCs in use in 2006. Germany has the highest number of internet users in Europe, with 62.0m. in 2008. The fixed broadband penetration rate in Dec. 2010 was 31.9 subscribers per 100 inhabitants.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Justice is administered by the federal courts and by the courts of the Bundesländer. In criminal procedures, civil cases and procedures of non-contentious jurisdiction the courts on the state level are the local courts (Amtsgerichte), the regional courts (Landgerichte) and the courts of appeal (Oberlandesgerichte).

Constitutional federal disputes are dealt with by the Federal Constitutional Court (Bundesverfassungsgericht) elected by the Bundestag and Bundesrat. The Bundesländer also have constitutional courts. In labour law disputes the courts of the first and second instance are the labour courts and the Bundesland labour courts, and in the third instance the Federal Labour Court (Bundesarbeitsgericht). Disputes about public law in matters of social security, unemployment insurance, maintenance of war victims and similar cases are dealt with in the first and second instances by the social courts and the Bundesland social courts and in the third instance by the Federal Social Court (Bundessozialgericht). In most tax matters the finance courts of the Bundesländer are competent, and in the second instance the Federal Finance Court (Bundesfinanzhof). Other controversies of public law in non-constitutional matters are decided in the first and second instance by the administrative and the higher administrative courts (Oberverwaltungsgerichte) of the Bundesländer, and in the third instance by the Federal Administrative Court (Bundesverwaltungsgericht).

For inquiries into maritime accidents the admiralty courts (Seeämter) are competent on the state level and in the second instance the Federal Admiralty Court (Bundesoberseeamt) in Hamburg.

The death sentence was abolished in the Federal Republic of Germany in 1949 and in the German Democratic Republic in 1987.

The population in penal institutions at 30 Nov. 2010 was 69,385 (of which 3,755 women) including 8,852 in open prisons. In 2009, 6,054,000 crimes were recorded by the police (6,633,000 in 2004). There were 690 murders in 2010, down from 757 in 2007.

Education

Education is compulsory for children aged six to 15, although between the ages of 15 and 18 young people are obliged to pursue at least part-time vocational secondary education. After the first four (or six) years at primary school (Grundschulen) children attend post-primary (Hauptschulen), secondary modern (Realschulen), grammar (Gymnasien), or comprehensive schools (Integrierte Gesamtschulen). Secondary modern school lasts six years. Grammar school traditionally lasted nine years but this is in the process of being reduced to eight years (although Rhineland-Palatinate is retaining the nine-year system). Entry to higher education is by the final Grammar School Certificate (Abitur—Higher School Certificate). There are also schools for children with physical disabilities and those with other special needs (Sonderschulen).

In 2009–10 there were 1,568 kindergartens with 27,863 pupils and 2,517 teachers; 16,305 primary schools with 2,914,858 pupils and 189,465 teachers; 3,306 special schools with 387,792 pupils and 72,975 teachers; 7,614 secondary modern schools with 2,099,471 pupils and 144,551 teachers; 3,094 grammar schools with 2,475,371 pupils and 176,296 teachers; 999 comprehensive schools with 610,947 pupils and 47,151 teachers.

In 2009–10 there were 670,927 working teachers, of whom 470,284 were female.

The adult literacy rate is at least 99%.

In 2006 total expenditure on education came to €142.9bn. In 2008 public expenditure on education came to 4.6% of GDP and represented 10.4% of total government expenditure.

Vocational education is provided in part-time, full-time and advanced vocational schools (Berufs-, Berufsaufbau-, Berufsfach- and Fachschulen, including Fachschulen für Technik and Schulen des Gesundheitswesens). Occupation-related, part-time vocational training of six to 12 hours per week is compulsory for all (including unemployed) up to the age of 18 years or until the completion of the practical vocational training. Full-time vocational schools comprise courses of at least one year. They prepare for commercial and domestic occupations as well as specialized occupations in the field of handicrafts. Advanced full-time vocational schools are attended by pupils over 18. Courses vary from six months to three or more years.

In 2009–10 there were 8,935 full- and part-time vocational schools with 2,768,771 students and 124,306 teachers.

Higher Education. In the winter term of the 2010–11 academic year there were 418 institutes of higher education (Hochschulen) with 2,214,112 students, including 105 universities (1,441,921 students), six teacher training colleges (22,381), 16 theological seminaries (2,411), 51 schools of art (33,021), 211 technical colleges (684,856) and 29 management schools (29,522). Only 385,348 students (17.4%) were in their first year. It is for individual Bundesländer to decide whether to charge tuition fees. Some do but the majority offer tuition-free higher education (although they may charge registration fees).

Health

In 2009 there were 325,945 doctors, 67,157 dentists and 57,832 pharmacists. There were 2,084 hospitals in 2009 with 503,341 beds (61.5 for every 10,000 people). In 2008 Germany spent 10.5% of its GDP on health, with public spending amounting to 76.8% of the total. In 2009 total expenditure on health came to €278.4bn.

Welfare

Social Health Insurance (introduced in 1883). Wage-earners and apprentices, salaried employees with an income below a certain limit and social insurance pensioners are compulsorily insured within the state system. Voluntary insurance is also possible.

Benefits: medical treatment, medicines, hospital and nursing care, maternity benefits, death benefits for the insured and their families, sickness payments and out-patients' allowances. Economy measures of Dec. 1992 introduced prescription charges related to recipients' income.

As part of a series of measures to tackle a funding shortfall in the health service, a patient charge of €10 was introduced from Jan. 2004, payable for the first visit only per quarter to a doctor.

51.37m. persons were insured in 2010 (30.06m. compulsorily). Number of cases of incapacity for work (2009) totalled 33.66m., and the number of working days lost were 218.34m. (men) and 208.18m. (women). A total of €160,398m. was paid to beneficiaries in 2009.

Accident Insurance (introduced in 1884). Those insured are all persons in employment or service, apprentices and the majority of the self-employed and the unpaid family workers.

Benefits in the case of industrial injuries and occupational diseases: medical treatment and nursing care, sickness payments, pensions and other payments in cash and in kind, surviving dependants' pensions.

Number of insured in 2009, 61.43m.; number of current pensions, 984,092. A total of €10,225m. was paid to beneficiaries in 2009.

Workers' and Employees' Old-Age Insurance Scheme (introduced in 1889). All wage-earners and salaried employees, the members of certain liberal professions and—subject to certain conditions—self-employed craftsmen are compulsorily insured. The insured may voluntarily continue to insure when no longer liable to do so or increase the insurance.

Benefits: measures designed to maintain, improve and restore the earning capacity; pensions paid to persons incapable of work, old age and surviving dependants' pensions.

Number of current pensions in July 2010, 24.89m. (including old age pensions, 17.57m.; pensions to widows and widowers, 5.38m.). A total of €246,285m. was paid to beneficiaries in 2009.

Family Allowances. €33.53bn. were dispensed to 8.82m. recipients (1.08m. foreigners) in 2010 on behalf of 14.51m. children. Paid child care leave is available for three years to mothers or fathers.

Unemployment Allowances. In 2010, 1.02m. persons (0.43m. women) were receiving unemployment benefit and 6.71m. (3.37m. women) basic cost-of-living benefit for jobseekers. Total expenditure on these and similar benefits (e.g. short-working supplement, job creation schemes) was €45.21bn. in 2010. Unemployment assistance was abolished in Jan. 2005 and replaced with a new so-called 'Unemployment benefit II'. The new benefit is no longer tied to the former income of the recipient but is around the same flat-rate level as the social assistance benefit.

Public Welfare. In 2009, €23.03bn. were distributed to 2,270,000 recipients (1,156,000 women).

Public Youth Welfare. For supervision of foster children, official guardianship, assistance with adoptions and affiliations, social assistance in juvenile courts, educational assistance and correctional education under a court order. A total of €26.51bn. was spent on recipients in 2009.

Pension Reform. A major reform of the German pension system became law on 11 May 2001. The changes entail a cut in the value of the average state pension from 70% to approximately 67% of average final earnings by 2030. There will be incentives in the form of tax concessions and direct payments to encourage individuals to build up supplementary provision by contributing up to 4% of their earnings into private-sector personal pensions. In the long term these could supply up to 40% of overall pension income, with 60% coming from the state as opposed to 85% prior to the changes.

The retirement age is being increased gradually from 65 to 67 in a process that started in Jan. 2012. By 2029 Germans will only be eligible for a state pension at the age of 67.

RELIGION

In 2009 there were 24,909,000 Roman Catholics in 12,000 parishes, 24,195,000 Protestants in 15,281 parishes; and in 2010, 104,024 Jews with 56 rabbis and 96 synagogues. The Federal Ministry of the Interior estimated in 2007 that there were between 3.1m. and 3.4m. Muslims resident in Germany, a number exceeded in the EU only in France.

There are seven Roman Catholic archbishoprics (Bamberg, Berlin, Cologne, Freiburg, Hamburg, Munich and Freising, Paderborn) and 20 bishoprics. Chairman of the German Bishops' Conference is Robert Zollitsch, Archbishop of Freiburg im Breisgau. A concordat between Germany and the Holy See dates from 10 Sept. 1933. In April 2005 Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, former archbishop of Munich and Freising, was elected Pope as Benedict XVI. In Feb. 2012 there were nine cardinals.

The Evangelical (Protestant) Church (EKD) consists of 22 member-churches comprising nine Lutheran Churches, 11 United-Lutheran-Reformed Churches and two Reformed Churches. Its organs are the Synod, the Church Conference and the Council under the chairmanship of Nikolaus Schneider. The Free Evangelical Church (BFEG) has some 420 communities.

THE BUNDESLÄNDER

Baden-Württemberg

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Bundesland is a combination of former states. Baden (the western part of the present Bundesland) became a united margravate in 1771, after being divided as Baden-Baden and Baden-Durlach since 1535; Baden-Baden was predominantly Catholic, and Baden-Durlach predominantly Protestant. The margrave became an ally of Napoleon, ceding land west of the Rhine and receiving northern and southern territory as compensation. In 1805 Baden became a grand duchy and in 1806 a member state of the Confederation of the Rhine, extending from the Main to Lake Constance. In 1815 it was a founder-state of the German Confederation. A constitution was granted by the grand duke in 1818, but later rulers were less liberal and there was revolution in 1848, put down with Prussian help. The Grand Duchy was abolished and replaced by a Bundesland in 1919.

In 1949 Baden was combined with Württemberg to form three states; the three joined as one in 1952.

Württemberg, having been a duchy since 1495, became a kingdom in 1805 and joined the Confederations as did Baden. A constitution was granted in 1819 and the state remained liberal. In 1866 the king allied himself with Austria against Prussia, but in 1870 joined Prussia in war against France. The monarchy came to an end with the abdication of William II in 1918, and Württemberg became a state of the German Republic. In 1945 the state was divided between Allied occupation authorities but the divisions ended in 1952.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Baden-Württemberg comprises 35,742 sq. km, with a population (at 30 June 2011) of 10,768,624 (5,461,175 females, 5,307,449 males).

The Bundesland is divided into four administrative regions, nine urban and 35 rural districts, and numbers 1,101 communes.

The capital is Stuttgart, with a population (31 Dec. 2009) of 601,600.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

	Live births	Marriages	Divorces	Deaths
2007	92,823	47,233	22,145	94,079
2008	91,909	48,612	22,792	96,431
2009	89,678	48,378	22,100	97,556
2010	90,965	48,927	21,958	98,807

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Baden-Württemberg is a merger of Baden, Württemberg-Baden and Württemberg-Hohenzollern, which were formed after 1945. The merger was approved by a plebiscite held on 9 Dec. 1951, when 70% of the population voted in its favour. It has six votes in the Bundesrat.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Bavaria

Bayern

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bavaria was ruled by the Wittelsbach family from 1180. The duchy remained Catholic after the Reformation, which made it a natural ally of Austria and the Habsburg Emperors.

The present boundaries were set during the Napoleonic wars, and Bavaria became a kingdom in 1806. Despite the granting of a constitution and parliament, radical feeling forced the abdication of King Ludwig I in 1848. Maximilian II was followed by Ludwig II who allied himself with Austria against Prussia in 1866, but was reconciled with Prussia and entered the German Empire in 1871. In 1918 the King Ludwig III abdicated. The first years of republican government were filled with unrest, attempts at the overthrow of the state by both communist and right-wing groups culminating in an unsuccessful coup by Adolf Hitler in 1923.

The state of Bavaria included the Palatinate from 1214 until 1945, when it was taken from Bavaria and added to the Rhineland. The present Bundesland of Bavaria was formed in 1946. Munich became capital of Bavaria in the reign of Albert IV (1467–1508) and remains capital of the Bundesland.

Berlin

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

After the end of World War II, Berlin was divided into four occupied sectors, each with a military governor from one of the victorious Allied Powers (the USA, the Soviet Union, Britain and France). In March 1948 the USSR withdrew from the Allied Control Council and in June blockaded West Berlin until May 1949. In response, the allies flew food and other supplies into the city in what became known as the Berlin Airlift. On 30 Nov. 1948 a separate municipal government was set up in the Soviet sector which led to the political division of the city. In contravention of the special Allied status agreed for the city, East Berlin became 'Capital of the GDR' in 1949 and thus increasingly integrated into the GDR as a whole. In West Berlin, the formal authority of the western allies lasted until 1990.

On 17 June 1953 the protest by workers in East Berlin against political oppression and economic hardship was suppressed by Soviet military forces. To stop refugees, the east German government erected the Berlin Wall to seal off West Berlin's borders on 13 Aug. 1961.

The Berlin Wall was breached on 9 Nov. 1989 as the regime in the GDR bowed to the internal pressure which had been building for months. East and West Berlin were amalgamated on the reunification of Germany in Oct. 1990. In April 1994 the Bundesland governments of Berlin and Brandenburg agreed to merge the two Bundesländer in 1999 or 2002, subject to the approval of their respective parliaments, and of their electorates in referendums held in May 1996. In Berlin 53-4% of votes were cast in favour, but in Brandenburg 62-8% were against.

With the move of the national government, the parliament (Bundestag), and the federal organ of the Bundesländer (Bundesrat) in 1999, Berlin is once again a capital city.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Brandenburg

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

For the proposed merger with Berlin see BERLIN: Key Historical Events.

Brandenburg surrounds the capital city of Germany, Berlin, but the people of the state voted against the recommendations of the Berlin House of Representatives and the Brandenburg State Parliament that the two states should merge. The state capital, Potsdam, is the ancient city of the Emperor Frederic II 'The Great' who transformed the garrison town of his father Frederic I 'The Soldier' into an elegant city.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 29,483 sq. km. Population on 31 Dec. 2010 was 2,503,273 (1,262,720 females), including 66,952 foreigners. There are four urban districts, 14 rural districts and 419 communes (31 Dec. 2010).

Bremen

Freie Hansestadt Bremen

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state is dominated by the Free City of Bremen and its port, Bremerhaven. In 1815, when it joined the German Confederation, Bremen was an autonomous city and Hanse port with important Baltic trade. In 1827 the expansion of trade inspired the founding of Bremerhaven on land ceded by Hanover at the confluence of the Geest and Weser rivers. Further expansion followed the founding of the Nord-deutscher Lloyd Shipping Company in 1857. Merchant shipping, associated trade and fishing were dominant until 1940 but there was diversification in the post-war years. In 1939 Bremerhaven was absorbed by the Hanoverian town of Wesermünde. The combined port was returned to the jurisdiction of Bremen in 1947.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the Bundesland, consisting of the two urban districts and ports of Bremen and Bremerhaven, is 419 sq. km. Population, 31 Dec. 2010, 660,706 (321,940 males, 338,766 females).

The capital, Bremen, had a population of 547,340 at 31 Dec. 2010 and Bremerhaven had a population of 113,366.

Hessen

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Bundesland consists of the former states of Hesse-Darmstadt and Hesse-Kassel, and Nassau. Hesse-Darmstadt was ruled by the Landgrave Louis X from 1790. He became grand duke in 1806 with absolute power, having dismissed the parliament in 1803. However, he granted a constitution and bicameral parliament in 1820. Hesse-Darmstadt lost land to Prussia in the Seven Weeks' War of 1866, but retained its independence, both then and as a state of the German Empire after 1871. In 1918 the grand duke abdicated and the territory became a state of the German Republic. In 1945 areas west of the Rhine were incorporated into the new Bundesland of Rhineland-Palatinate, areas east of the Rhine became part of the Bundesland of Greater Hesse.

Hesse-Kassel was ruled by the Landgrave William IX from 1785 until he became Elector in 1805. In 1807 the Electorate was absorbed into the Kingdom of Westphalia (a Napoleonic creation), becoming independent again in 1815 as a state of the German Confederation. In 1831 a constitution and parliament were granted but the Electors remained strongly conservative.

In 1866 the Diet approved alliance with Prussia against Austria; the Elector nevertheless supported Austria. He was defeated by the Prussians and exiled and Hesse-Kassel was annexed to Prussia. In 1867 it was combined with Frankfurt and some areas taken from Nassau and Hesse-Darmstadt to form a Prussian province (Hesse-Nassau). In 1801 Nassau west of the Rhine passed to France; Napoleon also took the northern state in 1806. The remnant of the southern states allied in 1803 and three years later they became a duchy. In 1866 the duke supported Austria against Prussia and the duchy was annexed by Prussia as a result. In 1944 the Prussian province of Hesse-Nassau was split in two: Nassau and Electoral Hesse, also called Kurhessen. The following year these were combined with Hesse-Darmstadt as the Bundesland of Greater Hesse which became known as Hessen.

Lower Saxony

Niedersachsen

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Bundesland consists of the former states of Hanover, Oldenburg, Schaumburg-Lippe and Brunswick. It does not include the cities of Bremen or Bremerhaven. Oldenburg, Danish from 1667, passed to the bishopric of Lübeck in 1773; the Holy Roman Emperor made it a duchy in 1777. As a small state of the Confederation after 1815 it supported Prussia, becoming a member of the Prussian Zollverein (1853) and North German Confederation (1867). The grand duke abdicated in 1918 and was replaced by an elected government.

Schaumburg-Lippe was a small sovereign principality. As such it became a member of the Confederation of the Rhine in 1807 and of the German Confederation in 1815. Surrounded by Prussian territory, it also joined the Prussian-led North German Confederation in 1867. Part of the Empire until 1918, it then became a state of the new republic.

Brunswick, a small duchy, was taken into the Kingdom of Westphalia by Napoleon in 1806 but restored to independence in 1814. In 1830 the duke, Charles II, was forced into exile and replaced in 1831 by his more liberal brother, William. The succession passed to a Hanoverian claimant in 1913 but the duchy ended with the Empire in 1918.

As a state of the republican Germany, Brunswick was greatly reduced under the Third Reich. Its boundaries were restored by the British occupation forces in 1945.

Hanover was an autonomous Electorate of the Holy Roman Empire whose rulers were also kings of Great Britain from 1714 to 1837. From 1762 they ruled almost entirely from England. After Napoleonic invasions Hanover was restored in 1815. A constitution of 1819 made no radical change and had to be followed by more liberal versions in 1833 and 1848. Prussia annexed Hanover in 1866; it remained a Prussian province until 1946. On 1 Nov. 1946 all four states were combined by the British military administration to form the Bundesland of Lower Saxony.

Mecklenburg-West Pomerania

Mecklenburg-Vorpommern

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Pomerania was at one time under Swedish control while Mecklenburg was an independent part of the German Empire. The two states were not united until after the Second World War, and after a short period when it was subdivided into three districts under the GDR, it became a state of the Federal Republic of Germany in 1990. The people of the region speak a dialect known as Plattdeutsch (Low German). The four main cities of this state are Hanseatic towns from the period when the area dominated trade with Scandinavia. Rostock on the North Sea coast became the home of the GDR's biggest shipyards.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 23,191 sq. km. It is divided into two urban districts, six rural districts and 814 communes. Population on 31 Dec. 2010 was 1,642,327 (829,044 females). It is the most sparsely populated of the German Bundesländer, with a population density of 71 per sq. km in 2010.

The capital is Schwerin, with a population (31 Dec. 2009) of 95,000.

North Rhine-Westphalia

Nordrhein-Westfalen

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Historical Westphalia consisted of many small political units, most of them absorbed by Prussia and Hanover before 1800. In 1807 Napoleon created a Kingdom of Westphalia for his brother Joseph. This included Hesse-Kassel, but was formed mainly from the Prussian and Hanoverian lands between the rivers Elbe and Weser.

In 1815 the kingdom ended with Napoleon's defeat. Most of the area was given to Prussia, with the small principalities of Lippe and Waldeck surviving as independent states. Both joined the North German Confederation in 1867. Lippe remained autonomous after the end of the Empire in 1918; Waldeck was absorbed into Prussia in 1929.

In 1946 the occupying forces combined Lippe with most of the Prussian province of Westphalia to form the Bundesland of North Rhine-Westphalia. On 1 March 1947 the allied Control Council formally abolished Prussia.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Bundesland comprises 34,092 sq. km. It is divided into five administrative regions, 22 urban districts, 31 rural districts and 396 communes. Population, 31 Dec. 2010, 17,845,154 (9,133,296 females, 8,711,858 males).

The capital is Düsseldorf, with a population (31 Dec. 2009) of 586,200.

Rhineland-Palatinate

Rheinland-Pfalz

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Bundesland was formed from the Rhenisch Palatinate and the Rhine valley areas of Prussia, Hesse-Darmstadt, Hesse-Kassel and Bavaria.

From 1214 the Palatinate was ruled by the Bavarian house of Wittelsbach, with its capital as Heidelberg. In 1797 the land west of the Rhine was taken into France, and Napoleon divided the eastern land between Baden and Hesse. In 1815 the territory taken by France was restored to Germany and allotted to Bavaria. The area and its neighbours formed the strategically important Bavarian Circle of the Rhine. The rule of the Wittelsbachs ended in 1918 but the Palatinate remained part of Bavaria until the American occupying forces detached it in 1946. The new Bundesland, incorporating the Palatinate and other territory, received its constitution in April 1947.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Rhineland-Palatinate has an area of 19,854 sq. km. It comprises 12 urban districts, 24 rural districts and 2,306 other communes. Population (at 31 Dec. 2010), 4,003,745 (2,036,639 females).

The capital is Mainz, with a population (31 Dec. 2009) of 197,800.

Saarland

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Long disputed between Germany and France, the area was occupied by France in 1792. Most of it was allotted to Prussia at the close of the Napoleonic wars in 1815. In 1870 Prussia defeated France and when, in 1871, the German Empire was founded under Prussian leadership, it was able to incorporate Lorraine. This part of France was the Saar territory's western neighbour so the Saar was no longer a vulnerable boundary state. It began to develop industrially, exploiting Lorraine coal and iron.

In 1919 the League of Nations took control of the Saar until a plebiscite of 1935 favoured return to Germany. In 1945 there was a French occupation, and in 1947 the Saar was made an international area, but in economic union with France. In 1954 France and Germany agreed that the Saar should be a separate and autonomous state, under an independent commissioner. This was rejected by referendum and France agreed to return Saarland to Germany; it became a Bundesland of the Federal Republic on 1 Jan. 1957.

Saxony

Freistaat Sachsen

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The former kingdom of Saxony was a member state of the German Empire from 1871 until 1918, when it became the state of Saxony and joined the Weimar Republic. After the Second World War it was one of the five states in the German Democratic Republic until German reunification in 1990. It has been home to much of Germany's cultural history. In the 18th century, the capital of Saxony, Dresden, became the cultural capital of northern Europe earning the title 'Florence of the North', and the other great eastern German city, Leipzig, was a lively commercial city with strong artistic trends. The three cities of Dresden, Chemnitz and Leipzig formed the industrial heartland of Germany which, after World War II, was the manufacturing centre of the GDR.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 18,420 sq. km. It is divided into three administrative regions, three urban districts, ten rural districts and 470 communes. Population on 31 Dec. 2010 was 4,149,477 (2,117,847 females, 2,031,630 males); density, 225 per sq. km.

The capital is Dresden, with a population (31 Dec. 2009) of 517,100.

Saxony-Anhalt

Sachsen-Anhalt

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Saxony-Anhalt has a short history as a state in its own right. Made up of a patchwork of older regions ruled by other states, Saxony-Anhalt existed between 1947 and 1952 and then, after reunification in 1990, it was re-established. Geographically, it lies at the very heart of Germany and despite the brevity of its federal status, the region has some of the oldest heartlands of German culture.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area is 20,450 sq. km. It is divided into three county-free cities, 11 rural districts and 300 communes. Population on 31 Dec. 2010 was 2,356,006.

Schleswig-Holstein

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Bundesland is formed from two states formerly contested between Germany and Denmark. Schleswig was a Danish dependency ruled since 1474 by the King of Denmark as Duke of Schleswig. He also ruled Holstein, its southern neighbour, as Duke of Holstein, but he did so recognizing that it was a fief of the Holy Roman Empire. As such, Holstein joined the German Confederation in 1815.

Disputes between Denmark and the powerful German states were accompanied by rising national feeling in the duchies, where the population was part-Danish and part-German. There was war in 1848–50 and in 1864, when Denmark surrendered its claims to Prussia and Austria. Following her defeat of Austria in 1866 Prussia annexed both duchies.

North Schleswig (predominantly Danish) was awarded to Denmark in 1920. Prussian Holstein and south Schleswig became the present Bundesland in 1946.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of Schleswig-Holstein is 15,799 sq. km. It is divided into four urban and 11 rural districts and 1,127 communes. The population (estimate, 31 Dec. 2010) numbered 2,834,259 (1,388,912 males, 1,445,347 females).

The capital is Kiel, with a population (31 Dec. 2009) of 238,300.

Thuringia

Thüringen

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Thuringia with its capital Erfurt is criss-crossed by the rivers Saale, Werra and Weisse Elster and dominated in the south by the mountains of the Thuringian Forest. Martin Luther spent his exile in Eisenach where he translated the New Testament into German while he lived in protective custody in the castle. Weimar became the centre of German intellectual life in the 18th century. In 1919 Weimar was the seat of a briefly liberal Republic. Only ten miles from Weimar lies Buchenwald, the site of a war-time Nazi concentration camp, which is now a national monument to the victims of fascism.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Hunter gatherers inhabited Ghana from 8,000 BC. There was animal husbandry and agriculture from 1,500 BC, with iron technology developing from 100 BC. A centuries-long migration from the north was led by the Guan who moved south from present-day Burkina Faso. The northern Dagomba and Mamprusi kingdoms traded with western Sudanese counterparts from the 12th century, coming under the influence of Islam. In the early 15th century gold and kola nuts from the forested south were exchanged for goods from the savannah regions at towns including Begho.

Portuguese navigators reached Edina (Elmina) on the coast in 1482 and traded with Akan-speaking clans including the Denkyira and Asante. The Portuguese built the São Jorge fort in 1482 and named the region Costa da Mina (Gold Coast). Centred on Tafo and Kumasi, Asante power grew from the 16th century through the supply of gold, ivory, timber and, increasingly, slaves. By the 18th century around 5,000 slaves were shipped annually from European-controlled fortresses on the Gold Coast to plantations in the Caribbean and North America.

After Dutch forces captured Elmina from the Portuguese in 1642, the Dutch West India Company vied with rivals from Britain, Denmark, Sweden and Prussia for control of maritime trade. More than 40 fortresses built along the coast over the next 150 years were frequently attacked.

Britain became the dominant European power on the Gold Coast in the 19th century, focusing trade on timber, ivory and other natural resources. British forces clashed with the expanding Asante kingdom, ruled by Osei Bonsu (1800–24) and then Osei Yaw Akoto (1824–34), until peace was declared in 1831. This gave Britain control over the coastal provinces in return for Asante access to maritime trade. Disputes over control of the gold trade reignited in the 1860s. In 1874 British forces captured Kumasi and proclaimed the Gold Coast Colony, governed from Accra. Following the exile of the Asante king, the British annexed his kingdom and the Northern Territories in Jan. 1902, establishing boundaries with French West Africa.

Mining, agriculture and infrastructure developed with British rule, notably under the governorship of Frederick Guggisberg (1919–27). In the 1930s an educated middle class pushed for inclusion in the colony's administration. While the United Gold Coast Convention sought a gradual shift away from colonial rule after the Second World War, others demanded more rapid change. The Convention People's Party (CPP), formed in 1949 and led by Dr Kwame Nkrumah, campaigned for 'positive action', including strikes, boycotts and civil disobedience.

A new constitution, enacted in 1951, paved the way for legislative elections in which Nkrumah won a seat while serving a three-year jail sentence. Once released, he was a key figure in the parliamentary struggle that led to independence. On 6 March 1957 Ghana became the first independent African nation south of the Sahara, joining the Commonwealth on 1 July 1960, with Nkrumah as president.

In 1966 Nkrumah's regime was overthrown by the military who ruled until 1969 until handing over to a civilian regime under a new constitution. The armed forces seized power again in 1972. In 1979 the Supreme Military Council was toppled in a coup led by Flight-Lieut. J. J. Rawlings. The new government permitted scheduled elections that resulted in victory for Dr Hilla Limann and the People's National Party. However, in Dec. 1981 Rawlings led another coup and established the Provisional National Defence Council to rule.

A pluralist democratic constitution was approved by referendum in April 1992. Rawlings was elected president later that year as a member of the centre-left National Democratic Congress (NDC). He was re-elected in 1996. John Kufuor, of the centre-right New Patriotic Party, became president in Dec. 2000, defeating John Atta Mills of the NDC. During his second term, Kufuor announced the discovery of substantial offshore oil reserves. He was succeeded in Jan. 2009 by John Atta Mills.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Ghana is bounded west by Côte d'Ivoire, north by Burkina Faso, east by Togo and south by the Gulf of Guinea. The area is 238,533 sq. km; the 2010 provisional census population was 24,223,431, giving a density of 101.5 persons per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 27.32m.

In 2005, 52.2% of the population was rural. 1m. Ghanaians lived abroad in 1995.

Ghana is divided into ten regions:

Regions	Area (sq. km)	Population, census 2010 (provisional)	Capital
Ashanti	24,389	4,725,046	Kumasi
Brong-Ahafo	39,557	2,282,128	Sunyani
Central	9,826	2,107,209	Cape Coast
Eastern	19,323	2,596,013	Koforidua
Greater Accra	3,245	3,909,764	Accra
Northern	70,384	2,468,557	Tamale
Upper East	8,842	1,031,478	Bolgatanga
Upper West	18,476	677,763	Wa
Volta	20,570	2,099,876	Ho
Western	23,921	2,325,597	Sekondi-Takoradi

In 2000 the capital, Accra, had a population of 1,658,937. Other major cities are Kumasi, Tamale, Sekondi-Takoradi and Ashiaman.

About 42% of the population are Akan. Other tribal groups include Moshi (23%), Ewe (10%) and Ga-Adangme (7%). About 75 languages are spoken; the official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 756,000; deaths, 259,000. Rates, 2008 estimates (per 1,000 population): births, 32.4; deaths, 11.1. 2007 life expectancy, 55.6 years for men and 57.4 for women. Infant mortality, 68 per 1,000 live births (2005). Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.2%; fertility rate, 2008, 4.0 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate ranges from the equatorial type on the coast to savannah in the north and is typified by the existence of well-marked dry and wet seasons. Temperatures are relatively high throughout the year. The amount, duration and seasonal distribution of rain is very marked, from the south, with over 80" (2,000 mm), to the north, with under 50" (1,250 mm). In the extreme north, the wet season is from March to Aug., but further south it lasts until Oct. Near Kumasi, two wet seasons occur, in May and June and again in Oct., and this is repeated, with greater amounts, along the coast of Ghana. Accra, Jan. 80°F (26.7°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 29" (724 mm). Kumasi, Jan. 77°F (25°C), July 76°F (24.4°C). Annual rainfall 58" (1,402 mm). Sekondi-Takoradi, Jan. 77°F (25°C), July 76°F (24.4°C). Annual rainfall 47" (1,181 mm). Tamale, Jan. 82°F (27.8°C), July 78°F (25.6°C). Annual rainfall 41" (1,026 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

After the coup of 31 Dec. 1981, supreme power was vested in the Provisional National Defence Council (PNDC), chaired by Flight-Lieut. Jerry John Rawlings.

A new constitution was approved by 92.6% of votes cast at a referendum on 28 April 1992. The electorate was 8,255,690; turnout was 43.8%. The constitution sets up a presidential system on the US model, with a multi-party parliament and an independent judiciary. The President is elected by universal suffrage for a four-year term renewable once.

The unicameral Parliament has 230 members, elected for a four-year term in single-seat constituencies.

National Anthem

'God bless our Homeland, Ghana'; words by the government, tune by P. Gbeho.

CURRENT LEADERS

John Atta Mills

Position

President

Introduction

John Atta Mills of the National Democratic Congress (NDC) became president after winning a tight run-off in Dec. 2008.

The peaceful transfer of power was considered a triumph for Ghana's relatively stable democracy. Atta Mills had previously served as deputy to President Jerry Rawlings from 1997–2001.

Early Life

John Evans Atta Mills was born on 21 July 1944 in Tarkwa in the country's Western Region. In 1967 he graduated in Law from the University of Ghana, Legon, before continuing his studies at London's School of Oriental and African Studies and as a Fulbright scholar at the Stanford Law School in the USA. Having gained his PhD in 1971, he returned to Ghana to teach at the Law faculty of his alma mater. He continued to work in academia, publishing twelve scholarly titles.

In 1988 President Rawlings, leader of the NDC, appointed Atta Mills as commissioner of the internal revenue service. Nine years later Rawlings invited him to be his vice-president. In 2000 Rawlings, who had served the maximum two terms of office, nominated Atta Mills as the NDC candidate in the election of that year. Atta Mills lost the presidential race, and again in 2004, to John Kufuor of the New Patriotic Party (NPP).

Nonetheless, his party re-selected him, ahead of three rivals, to fight a third election in Dec. 2008. With Kufuor constitutionally banned from seeking another term, the NPP's Nana Akufo-Addo emerged from the first round of elections in the lead, though just short of the overall majority required to claim victory. The second round was dogged by claims of electoral malpractice on both sides but, after a re-run of voting in one rural constituency, Atta Mills received 50.2% of the vote, beating his opponent by less than 0.5%.

Career in Office

Atta Mills presented himself as a social democrat and vowed to work towards national unity. He attempted to distance himself from earlier pronouncements that as president he would consult with Rawlings, a highly divisive figure in Ghanaian politics. In July 2009 Ghana secured a US$600m. three-year loan from the International Monetary Fund, and a further economic boost was anticipated from offshore oil production which began in Dec. 2010. In July 2011 Atta Mills was again selected as the NDC candidate for presidential elections scheduled to take place in late 2012.

DEFENCE

Defence expenditure totalled US$105m. in 2008 (US$4 per capita), representing 0.7% of GDP.

Army

Total strength (2007), 10,000.

Navy

The Navy, based at Sekondi and Tema, numbered 2,000 in 2007.

Air Force

The main air base is at Accra. Personnel strength (2007), 1,500. There were nine combat capable aircraft although their serviceability was in doubt.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 38.0% of GDP in 2006, industry 25.8% and services 36.3%.

Overview

One of Africa's biggest borrowers, Ghana is committed to the reform programmes of the IMF and World Bank. Its completion of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries (HIPC) scheme in 2004 paved the way for debt cancellation by major bilateral donors. Nonetheless, the infrastructure (particularly power, water and roads) is in urgent need of improvement and stands as an obstacle to economic growth and a disincentive to foreign investment.

Steady growth averaging 3–6% since the mid-1980s has resulted from careful macroeconomic management and an increase in exports. More recently growth has been driven by increases in both private and public investment in road-building and agricultural upgrading. A privatization programme was mounted in 1988, with 132 state-owned enterprises sold off to become 232 privately-owned companies by April 2000. Privatization deals raised over US$800m. between 1990 and 1996, including the Ashanti Goldfields sell-off worth more than US$400m. Only South Africa among sub-Saharan African nations has raised more from privatization.

Ghana's main exports are gold, cocoa and timber, while tourism is increasingly important. Stabilization measures initiated by the new government, as well as continued strong cocoa and gold exports, helped Ghana weather the global economic downturn in 2009. The stabilization plan aims to reduce further the debt-to-(non-oil)-GDP ratio. Ghana hopes to earn US$400m. in the first year of oil production, which started in Dec. 2010.

Currency

The monetary unit is the cedi (GHS) of 100 pesewas. It was introduced in July 2007 and is equal to 10,000 old cedi (GHC). Inflation was 16.5% in 2008 and 19.3% in 2009. Foreign exchange reserves were US$1,343m. in June 2005 and gold reserves 281,000 troy oz in July 2005. Total money supply in April 2005 was €13,257.7bn.

Budget

In 2006 revenues totalled €31,918bn. and expenditures €38,735bn. Tax revenue accounted for 77.2% of revenues in 2006; current expenditure accounted for 63.9% of expenditures.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 4.0% in 2009 and 7.7% in 2010. Total GDP was US$31.3bn. in 2010.

Banking and Finance

The Bank of Ghana (Governor, Kwesi Bekoe Amissah-Arthur) was established in 1957 as the central bank and bank of issue. At Dec. 1995 its total assets were €3,272,946.6m. There were in 1998 nine commercial banks, four merchant banks and 130 rural banks. There are two discount houses. Banks are required to have a capital base of at least 6% of net assets. At Dec. 1995 assets of commercial banks totalled €1,900,327.1m.

Foreign investment is actively encouraged with the Ghana Free Zone Scheme offering particular incentives such as full exemption of duties and levies on all imports for production and exports from the zones, full exemption on tax on profits for ten years, and no more than 8% after ten years. It is a condition of the scheme that at least 70% of goods made within the zones must be exported. Within 18 months of the scheme being set up in 1995, 50 projects had been registered.

There is a stock exchange in Accra.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Ghana is facing an energy crisis, with power cuts of up to 12 hours a day because drought has caused the level of Lake Volta to drop to below the danger level.

Environment

Ghana's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 0.3 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 2.1m. kW in 2007. Production (2007) 7.0bn. kWh, approximately 53% from two hydro-electric stations operated by the Volta River Authority, Akosombo (six units) and Kpong (four units). Consumption per capita was 313 kWh in 2007. Since 1998 droughts have caused power cuts owing to the reliance on hydro-electricity. However, production is becoming more dependent on gas—the 678-km West Africa Gas Pipeline bringing gas flows from Nigeria resumed operations in March 2010 following a year-long suspension.

Oil and Gas

Ghana is pursuing the development of its own gas fields and plans to harness gas at the North and South Tano fields located off the western coast. Natural gas reserves, 2005, totalled 24bn. cu. metres. Oil reserves in 2005 were 17m. bbls, although the discovery of an offshore field containing in excess of 300m. bbls of oil was announced in June 2007. Two months later a second offshore field was discovered, potentially with even larger oil resources. Ghana became the world's newest oil producer in Dec. 2010.

Minerals

Gold is one of the mainstays of the economy; Ghana ranks second only to South Africa among African gold producers. Production in 2005 was 63,100 kg. There are also large reserves of bauxite, diamonds and manganese. In 2005 estimated diamond production was 1.0m. carats; manganese (2006), 1.66m. tonnes; bauxite (2006), 886,000 tonnes.

Agriculture

The rural poor earn little and many small farmers have reverted to subsistence farming. The agricultural population in 2002 was 12.97m., of whom 5.74m. were economically active. There were 7.15m. ha. of land under cultivation in 2007 and 11,000 ha. were irrigated. There were 154 registered combine harvesters in 2007. In southern and central Ghana the main food crops are maize, rice, cassava, plantains, groundnuts, yam and taro; and in northern Ghana groundnuts, rice, maize, sorghum, millet and yams. Agriculture presently operates at only 20% of its potential and is an area that is to be a major focus of investment.

Production of main food crops (2007 unless otherwise indicated, in 1,000 tonnes): cassava, 10,218; yams, 4,376; plantains, 3,234; cocoyams, 1,690; maize 1,220; cocoa beans (2006-07), 615; coconuts (2002), 315; oranges (2002), 300; chillies and green peppers (2002), 270; rice (milled), 185; sorghum, 155; millet, 133. Cocoa is the main cash crop. The government estimates that more than 40% of the population relies either directly or indirectly on cocoa as a source of income. It contributes approximately 13% of GDP. Ghana is the second largest cocoa bean producer in the world after Côte d'Ivoire, and the second largest producer of both yams and cocoyams, after Nigeria.

Livestock, 2002: goats, 3.23m.; sheep, 2.92m.; cattle, 1.33m.; pigs, 310,000; chickens, 24m.

Forestry

There were 5.52m. ha. of forest in 2005, or 24.2% of the total land area. Reserves account for some 30% of the total forest lands. Timber production in 2007 was 35.49m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

In 2005 total catch was 392,274 tonnes, of which 317,274 tonnes came from sea fishing. Imports of fishery commodities were valued at US$129m. in 2008.

INDUSTRY

Ghana's industries include mining, lumbering, light manufacturing and food processing.

Labour

In 2000 the number of economically active persons totalled 8,292,100. Females constituted 50% of the workforce in 2000. Ghana has among the highest proportions of women in the workforce in the world.

The unemployment rate was 8.2% in 2000.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$6,739m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

In 2007 imports (c.i.f.) were valued at US$7,206.7m.; exports (f.o.b.) totalled US$4,186.7m. Principal imported commodities, 2007: machinery and transport equipment, 46.4%; manufactured goods, 17.9%; food and live animals, 12.9%; chemicals and related products, 12.4%. Principal exports, 2007: gold, 34.8%; cocoa, 25.1%; fruit and vegetables, 7.9%; animal and vegetable oils and fats, 7.0%. Main import suppliers in 2007: Germany, 14.6%; China, 11.2%; USA, 7.7%. ### COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2005 there were 57,614 km of roads, including 11,177 km of highways, main and national roads. About 14.9% of all roads are paved. A Road Sector Strategy and Programme to develop the road network ran from 1995 to 2000. There were 493,800 passenger cars in use in 2007, 158,400 lorries and vans, and 121,100 buses and coaches. Motorcycles and mopeds numbered 149,100.

Rail

Total length of railways in 2005 was 953 km of 1,067 mm gauge. In 2005 railways carried 1.8m. tonnes of freight and 2.3m. passengers.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Accra (Kotoka). In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Ghana-based carriers flew 12m. km, carrying 241,000 passengers (all on international flights). Accra handled 623,000 passengers (all on international flights) in 2001.

Shipping

The chief ports are Tema and Takoradi. In 2008, 8.7m. tonnes of cargo were handled at Tema and 4.0m. tonnes at Takoradi. There is inland water transport on Lake Volta. In Jan. 2009 there were 14 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 15,000 GT. The Volta, Ankobra and Tano rivers provide 168 km of navigable waterways for launches and lighters.

Telecommunications

Ghana Telecom was privatized in 1996. There were 277,900 fixed telephone lines in 2010 (11.4 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 17.44m. in 2010. There were 85.5 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 92,700 in 2009 (3.9 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Courts are constituted as follows:

Supreme Court. The Supreme Court consists of the Chief Justice who is also the President, and not less than four other Justices of the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court is the final court of appeal in Ghana. The final interpretation of the constitution is entrusted to the Supreme Court.

Court of Appeal. The Court of Appeal consists of the Chief Justice with not less than five other Justices of the Appeal court and such other Justices of Superior Courts as the Chief Justice may nominate. The Court of Appeal is duly constituted by three Justices. The Court of Appeal is bound by its own previous decisions and all courts inferior to the Court of Appeal are bound to follow the decisions of the Court of Appeal on questions of law. Divisions of the appeal court may be created, subject to the discretion of the Chief Justice.

High Court of Justice. The Court has jurisdiction in civil and criminal matters as well as those relating to industrial and labour disputes including administrative complaints. The High Court of Justice has supervisory jurisdiction over all inferior Courts and any adjudicating authority and in exercise of its supervisory jurisdiction has power to issue such directions, orders or writs including writs or orders in the nature of habeas corpus, certiorari, mandamus, prohibition and quo warranto. The High Court of Justice has no jurisdiction in cases of treason. The High Court consists of the Chief Justice and not less than 12 other judges and such other Justices of the Superior Court as the Chief Justice may appoint.

Under the Provisional National Defence Council which ruled from 1981 to 2001 public tribunals were established in addition to the traditional courts of justice.

The population in penal institutions in Sept. 2006 was 12,736 (55 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Schooling is free and compulsory, and consists of six years of primary, three years of junior secondary and three years of senior secondary education. In 2006–07 there were 3.37m. pupils in primary schools with 105,257 teachers; and 1.13m. pupils with 67,005 teachers in junior secondary schools. University education is free. In 2007 there were 140,017 students in tertiary education and 4,011 academic staff. Adult literacy in 2008 was 66%. In 1970 adult literacy was just 31%.

In 2005 public expenditure on education came to 5.5% of GNI.

Health

In 2002 there were 1,842 physicians, 13,102 nurses, 4,094 midwives and 1,433 pharmacists. In 2003 there were an estimated 350,000 people living with HIV, mainly women.

Ghana has been one of the most successful countries in reducing undernourishment in the past 20 years. Between 1990–92 and 2001–03 the proportion of undernourished people declined from 37% of the population to just 12%.

RELIGION

An estimated 30% of the population are Muslim and 24% Christian, with 38% adherents to indigenous beliefs and 8% other religions. In Feb. 2012 the Roman Catholic church had one cardinal.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Ghana has two sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Forts and Castles, Volta, Greater Accra, Central and Western Regions (inscribed on the list in 1979), Portuguese trading posts built between 1482 and 1786 along the coast; Asante Traditional Buildings (1980), the remains of the Asante civilization that peaked in the 18th century.

Press

There were 11 daily newspapers in 2006 with a combined circulation of 215,000.

Tourism

There were 587,000 foreign tourists in 2007, spending US$1,172m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The land that is now Greece was first inhabited between 2000–1700 BC by tribes from the North. This period was followed by the Mycenaean Civilization which was overthrown by the Dorians at the end of the 12th century BC. Its dominant citadels were at Tiryns and Mycenae. What little is known about this period is from stories such as those by Homer written in the 9th or 8th century BC.

The following period, known as the Greek Dark Ages, ended by the 6th century BC when the polis, or city state, was formed. Built mainly on coastal plains, the two principal cities were Sparta and Athens. With government based on consensus of a ruling class, and rich in theatre, art and philosophy, the polis was the pinnacle of the Greek Classical Age. It was the era of Euripides, Theusidades and Socrates. With strong trade links, Greece also had territories in Southern Italy, Sicily, Southern France and Asia Minor.

Two Persian invasions in the 5th century were checked at Marathon (490 BC) and Thermopylae (480 BC) where Spartans held off a great force of Persian soldiers. In 431 BC rivalry between the dominant city states erupted into the Peloponnesian War. In 404 BC Sparta defeated Athens, but in the next century Sparta itself fell to Thebes (371 BC).

Led by Philip II of Macedon, the Macedonians defeated the city states in 338 BC. The poleis were forced to unify under his rule. With Plato and Aristotle active at this time, the latter serving as a tutor to Philip's son Alexander, this was a period of cultural enrichment. When Philip was assassinated in 336 BC, Alexander, then aged of 20, succeeded him. He spent the next 13 years on a relentless campaign to expand the Macedonian territories. The Greek Empire stretched to the edge of India and encompassed most of the known civilized world.

Following Alexander's death in 323 BC, the empire gradually disintegrated. By the end of the 2nd century AD, the Romans had defeated the Macedonians and Greece was incorporated into the Roman Empire. It remained in Roman hands until it became part of the Byzantine Empire in the 4th century AD. A population of Greek-speaking Christians had its power base in Constantinople.

Over the next six centuries Greece was invaded by Franks, Normans and Arabs but remained part of the Byzantine Empire. Following the Empire's decline in the 11th century, Greece was incorporated into the Ottoman Empire in 1460. Apart from a period under Venetian control between 1686–1715, Greece was part of Turkey until the Greek War of Independence.

Greece broke away from the Ottoman Empire in the 1820s and was declared a kingdom under the protection of Great Britain, France and Russia. Many Greeks were left outside the new state but Greece's area increased by 70%, the population growing from 2.8m. to 4.8m., after the Treaty of Bucharest (1913) recognized Greek sovereignty over Crete.

King Constantine opted for neutrality in the First World War, while Prime Minister Venezelos favoured the Entente powers. This National Schism led to British and French intervention which deposed Constantine on 11 June 1917. When his son Alexander died on 25 Oct. 1920, he returned and reigned until 1922. He was forced to abdicate by a coup after defeat by Turkey and the loss of Smyrna. The Treaty of Lausanne (1923) recognized Smyrna as Turkish with Eastern Thrace and the islands of Imvros and Tenedos, all of which had been ceded to Greece by the 1920 Treaty of Sevres. An exchange of Christian and Muslim populations followed. Resistance to Italian demands brought Greece into the Second World War when Germany had to come to the aid of the hard-pressed Italians. Athens was occupied on 27 April 1941. The occupation lasted until 15 Oct. 1944.

Shortly before the German withdrawal the leading communist resistance movement established a provisional government to supplant the monarchy and the existing government-in-exile. British attempts to oversee a coalition government between the communists and royalist groups collapsed in Dec. 1944. Two months of fierce fighting saw the communists claim most of the country bar Athens and Salonika, before the uprising was suppressed by the British. The communists boycotted the general election of March 1946, which returned a royalist government. When the king was restored to the throne in Sept. 1946 the communists responded with a guerrilla war. The Greek army, heavily backed by the USA, defeated the insurgents and the civil war came to an end in Oct. 1949, with 50,000 dead and around half a million people displaced.

The late 1950s saw the emergence of the Left, capitalizing on the movement for union with Cyprus and unease over NATO membership (1952). A military coup in 1967 led to the authoritarian rule of the 'Colonels' headed by George Papadopoulos. A republic was declared on 29 July 1973.

Papadopoulos was ousted by Brigadier-General Demetrios Ioannidis, head of the military police, who returned some civil powers but kept much power for himself. In 1974 an Athens-supported coup attempt against Cyprus's President Makarios led to a Turkish invasion of the island and the establishment of the 'Turkish Republic of Northern Cyprus'. Ioannidis' government fell and Konstantinos Karamanlis returned from 13 years in exile to head a civilian government of national unity. The monarchy was abolished by a referendum on 8 Dec. 1974 and a new constitution the following year established a parliamentary republic with an executive president. The 1981 election brought Andreas Papandreou to power at the head of a socialist government. Earlier that year Greece had become the tenth member of the EU. Re-elected in 1985, Papandreou imposed economic austerity to combat inflation and soaring budgets but industrial unrest and evidence of widespread corruption led to his fall and a succession of weak governments. Papandreou returned to power in Oct. 1993 but ill-health forced his resignation two years later. His successor Constantinos Simitis took a more pro-European stance, instituting economic reforms to prepare the way for entry into European Monetary Union (EMU).

Kostas Karamanlis led the Conservative New Democracy party to power in 2004, ending over a decade of rule by Pasok. In the same year Athens hosted the Olympic Games. Karamanlis won a second term in Sept. 2007. In March 2008 his government blocked Macedonia's accession to NATO because of a long-running dispute about Macedonia's name. Greece already had a constituent province called Macedonia.

Crippled by the global financial crisis of 2008–09, Greece threatened to default on its public debt. EU partners agreed to guarantee a potential €110bn. bail-out in return for a swathe of austerity measures that prompted a series of general strikes in 2010 and 2011. By late 2011 the crisis had deepened amid fears that the entire eurozone could be destabilized. In Oct. 2011 eurozone leaders agreed to a 50% write-off of Greek debt in return for additional austerity measures. The Greek prime minister, George Papandreou, resigned after widespread criticism of his plan to put the rescue package to a referendum. A national unity government under Lucas Papademos was established ahead of elections scheduled for May 2012. In Feb. 2012 the economy received a further US$130bn. bail-out from the EU and IMF.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Greece is bounded in the north by Albania, the Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia (FYROM) and Bulgaria, east by Turkey and the Aegean Sea, south by the Mediterranean and west by the Ionian Sea. The total area is 131,957 sq. km (50,949 sq. miles), of which the islands account for 25,026 sq. km (9,663 sq. miles).

The population was 10,787,690 (provisional) according to the census of March 2011, giving a density of 81.8 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 11.49m.

In 2005, 59.0% of the population lived in urban areas. There were 761,813 resident foreign nationals in 2001. A further 5m. Greeks are estimated to live abroad.

The largest cities (2001 census populations) are Athens (the capital), 745,514; Thessaloniki, 363,987; Piraeus, 175,697; Patras, 160,400; Peristerion, 137,918; Heraklion, 130,914; Larissa, 124,394; Kallithea, 109,609; Volos, 82,439. The department of Attica, composed of Athens, the port of Piraeus and a number of suburbs, contains about one third of the Greek population. It also contains about 50% of the country's industry and is the principal commercial, financial and diplomatic centre. Efforts have, however, been made to decentralize the economy. The second city, Thessaloniki, with its major port, has grown rapidly in population and industrial development.

The Monastic Republic of Mount Athos (or Agion Oros, i.e. 'Holy Mountain'), the easternmost of the three prongs of the peninsula of Chalcidice, is a self-governing community composed of 20 monasteries. The peninsula is administered by a Council of four members and an Assembly of 20 members, one deputy from each monastery. The constitution of 1927 gives legal sanction to the Charter of Mount Athos, drawn up by representatives of the 20 monasteries on 20 May 1924, and its status is confirmed by the 1952 and 1975 constitutions. Women are not permitted to enter. Population, 2001, 2,262.

The modern Greek language had two contesting literary standard forms, the archaizing Katharevousa ('purist'), and a version based on the spoken vernacular, 'Demotic'. In 1976 Standard Modern Greek was adopted as the official language, with Demotic as its core.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009: 117,933 live births; 108,316 deaths; 59,212 marriages; 13,163 divorces (2008); 505 still births; 7,749 births to unmarried mothers. 2009 rates: birth (per 1,000 population), 10.5; death, 9.6; marriage, 5.3; divorce, 1.2 (2008). Population growth rate, 2005, 0.4%. In 2006 the suicide rate per 100,000 population was 3.5 (men, 5.9; women, 1.2). Expectation of life at birth, 2007, 76.9 years for males and 81.3 years for females. In 2005 the most popular age range for marrying was 25–29 for females and 30–34 for males. Infant mortality, 2009, 3.2 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2005, 1.2 births per woman (one of the lowest rates in the world). In 2007 Greece received 25,113 asylum applications (up from 4,469 in 2004), equivalent to 2.2 per 1,000 inhabitants. In 2010, 90% of all illegal immigrants into the European Union entered through Greece.

CLIMATE

Coastal regions and the islands have typical Mediterranean conditions, with mild, rainy winters and hot, dry, sunny summers. Rainfall comes almost entirely in the winter months, though amounts vary widely according to position and relief. Continental conditions affect the northern mountainous areas, with severe winters, deep snow cover and heavy precipitation, but summers are hot. Athens, Jan. 48°F (8.6°C), July 82.5°F (28.2°C). Annual rainfall 16.6" (414.3 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Greece is a presidential parliamentary democracy. A new constitution was introduced in June 1975 and was amended in March 1986, April 2001 and May 2008. The 300-member Chamber of Deputies is elected for four-year terms by proportional representation. There is a 3% threshold. Extra seats are awarded to the party which leads in an election. The Chamber of Deputies elects the head of state, the President, for a five-year term.

National Anthem

'Imnos eis tin Eleftherian' ('Hymn to Freedom'); words by Dionysios Solomos, tune by N. Mantzaros.
(Same as Cyprus.)

Karolos Papoulias was re-elected president by the 300-member parliament on 3 Feb. 2010, receiving 266 votes. No other candidates stood.

Parliamentary elections were held on 6 May 2012. Turnout was 65.1%. Seats gained (and % of vote): New Democracy, 108 (18.9%); Coalition of the Radical Left, 52 (16.8); Pasok (Panhellenic Socialist Movement), 41 (13.2%); Independent Greeks, 33 (10.6%); Communist Party, 26 (8.5%); Golden Dawn, 21 (7.0%); Democratic Left 19 (6.1%).

European Parliament

Greece has 22 (24 in 2004) representatives. At the June 2009 elections turnout was 52.6% (63.2% in 2004). Pasok won 8 seats with 36.7% of votes cast (political affiliation in European Parliament: Progressive Alliance of Socialists and Democrats); ND, 8 with 32.3% (European People's Party); the Communist Party, 2 with 8.4% (European United Left/Nordic Green Left); the LAOS, 2 with 7.2% (Europe of Freedom and Democracy); the SIN, 1 with 4.7% (European United Left/Nordic Green Left); the Ecologist Greens, 1 with 3.5% (Greens/European Free Alliance).

CURRENT LEADERS

Karolos Papoulias

Position

President

Introduction

Karolos Papoulias was sworn in as president of Greece on 12 March 2005, having been elected by an unprecedented parliamentary majority of 279 out of the 300 available votes. A founding member of the Panhellenic Socialist Movement (Pasok) and foreign minister throughout the 1980s and 1990s, Papoulias succeeded Kostas Stephanopoulos in this largely ceremonial role.

Early Life

Papoulias was born on 4 June 1929 in the northwestern city of Ioannina and went on to study law at the University of Athens and at the University of Milan in Italy, followed by a doctorate in private international law at the University of Cologne in Germany.

In 1967, following a coup that saw the right-wing Greek government replaced by a military dictatorship under Georgios Papadopoulos, Papoulias left Greece for Cologne. There he founded the resistance organization, the Overseas Socialist Democratic Union, which mobilized exiled Greeks against the military regime. From 1967–74 Papoulias broadcast regularly on Deutsche Welle Radio's Greek programme, denouncing the military government. With the fall of the Papadopoulos dictatorship and the establishment of the democratic Third Hellenic Republic in 1974, Papoulias returned to Greece, where, with fellow returned exile Andreas Papandreou, he helped to found Pasok. With its principles of 'National Independence, Popular Sovereignty, Social Emancipation and Democratic Process', Pasok was to dominate Greek political life throughout the 1980s and 1990s.

At the Nov. 1974 elections Pasok won 13.5% of the vote, coming third in the electoral battle behind the Liberal Party and the conservative New Democracy Party. By Nov. 1977, however, Pasok had doubled its percentage of the votes and become the official opposition. In the elections of Oct. 1981 Pasok won a resounding 48% of the vote and, with Papoulias' long-time associate Andreas Papandreou as prime minister, formed the first socialist government in the history of Greece. Papoulias served as secretary of Pasok's International Relations Committee from 1975–85, and from 1976–80 he was also a member of the party's Co-ordinating Council. In 1977 Papoulias entered parliament for the first time, representing Ioannina as a Pasok member. He was to be re-elected eight times, serving a total of 27 years continuously until 2004. In Oct. 1981 Papoulias gave up his law practice to take up a full-time post as deputy foreign minister in the Pasok government. He held his post until 1984, becoming foreign minister from 1985–90, and again from 1993–96.

Under the leadership of Papoulias, Pasok foreign policy in the Balkan states contributed significantly to the stability of at least some parts of this historically volatile area. In 1976 the Greek government initiated an inter-Balkan conference on economic and technical co-operation, attended by representatives of Yugoslavia, Romania, Bulgaria and Turkey. Similar conferences followed in 1979 and 1982, leading in 1984 to talks on the denuclearization of the Balkan region. Despite the two countries having been officially at war since 1940, Greco-Albanian relations improved dramatically during the mid-1980s and, in 1985, the Greco-Albanian border was reopened for the first time in 45 years, with full normalization of relations in 1987.

Following the death of Andreas Papandreou in June 1996, and the general election of Sept. of that year, Papoulias left the cabinet to become the Greek representative at the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE).

On 12 Dec. 2004 Prime Minister Karamanlis (New Democracy) and leader of the opposition George Papandreou (Pasok) named Papoulias as the only presidential candidate in the Feb. 2005 election. Gaining 279 out of 300 votes Papoulias was elected by a huge majority of MPs representing all the parliamentary parties.

Career in Office

The appointment of Papoulias to the role of president of the Third Hellenic Republic ended months of speculation that Pasok MPs might withhold the votes required for the endorsement of a new president, forcing early elections just one year after the centre-right New Democracy Party came to power. Papoulias, who enjoyed popularity across the political spectrum, spoke of his desire to see a united Cyprus and expressed hope that Turkey's EU membership talks would be a trigger for progress on the issue.

Following defeat in a snap general election in Oct. 2009, Prime Minister Karamanlis resigned and Papoulias asked Georgios Papandreou, the leader of Pasok, to form a new government. Papoulias was subsequently re-elected for a second presidential term unopposed in Feb. 2010. The Pasok government struggled to address Greece's deteriorating economy and burgeoning sovereign debt crisis, and in Nov. 2011 Papandreou submitted his resignation to Papoulias who subsequently swore in Lucas Papademos, a respected economist and banker, as interim prime minister of a national unity administration. Elections in May 2012 failed to produce a working government.

Lucas Papademos

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Lucas Papademos became prime minister in Nov. 2011 following the resignation of George Papandreou over his handling of the EU bailout. A career economist, Papademos took office at the head of an interim coalition committed to implementing austerity measures. He was expected to head an interim administration until elections in May 2012.

Early Life

Born on 11 Oct. 1947 in Athens, Lucas Papademos was educated at Athens College before obtaining a degree in physics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1970. He went on to earn a masters degree in electrical engineering in 1972 and a PhD in economics in 1978. He taught economics at Columbia University from 1975–84 and served as a senior economist at the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston in 1980.

Having returned to Greece, he served as chief economist at the Bank of Greece from 1985–93, also teaching economics at the University of Athens from 1988–93. In 1993 he was appointed deputy governor of the Bank of Greece, taking over as governor the following year. During his tenure, which lasted until 2002, he strongly advocated Greece's adoption of the single European currency and used a mix of monetary policies, (including devaluation of the drachma and the maintenance of high interest rates) to facilitate Greece's entry into the eurozone in 2001. From 2002–10 Papademos was vice-president of the European Central Bank, a post he left to become adviser to Prime Minister Papandreou.

Having taken office during Greece's worsening sovereign debt crisis, in April 2011 Papandreou entered negotiations with the 'troika' of the EU, IMF and ECB to activate the EU support mechanism for the Greek economy. Amid widespread popular protests at spending cuts, a financial bailout was agreed in Oct. 2011, conditional on further austerity measures. In Nov. 2011 Papandreou proposed to put the plan to a public vote, prompting anger among Greece's EU partners. After intensive negotiations, Papandreou agreed to resign and an interim coalition government under Papademos was formed, incorporating Papandreou's Panhellenic Socialist Movement (Pasok), the conservative New Democracy and the far-right Popular Orthodox Rally (LAOS).

Career in Office

Papademos was sworn in on 11 Nov. 2011, pledging to implement the spending cuts and structural reforms laid out in the terms of the bailout. In early 2012 he oversaw an agreement with Greece's private creditors to write down Greek debt. In Feb. 2012 his government survived the defection of LAOS, which refused to back his austerity measures.

At the 6 May 2012 general election Antonis Samaras' New Democracy emerged as the largest party in parliament with 108 of 300 seats but Samaras was unable to establish a workable coalition. Alexis Tsipras of the far-left Syriza group, which came second at the polls, was then given an opportunity to form a government, but his coalition talks also failed. Papademos was expected to remain in office in the absence of a new government with a popular mandate, while international markets responded nervously and Greece's already perilous economic situation worsened. New elections were expected in June 2012.

DEFENCE

Prior to 2001 conscription was generally: (Army) 18 months, (Navy) 21 months, (Air Force) 20 months. However, following a gradual shortening of military service, in 2011 conscription was nine months for all three branches of the armed forces. Greece is the only country in the EU that still has a system of compulsory military service.

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$10,141m. (US$946 per capita), representing 2.9% of GDP (the highest percentage in the EU).

Army

The Field Army is currently being reorganized. There are three military regions, with one Army, five corps and five divisional headquarters. Total Army strength (2007) 93,500 (around 38% conscripts). There is also a National Guard of 34,500 whose role is internal security.

Navy

The current strength of the Hellenic Navy includes eight diesel submarines, 14 frigates and three corvettes. Main bases are at Salamis, Patras and Soudha Bay (Crete). Personnel in 2007 totalled 20,000 (including 4,000 conscripts).

Air Force

The Hellenic Air Force (HAF) had a strength (2007) of 31,500 (including 11,000 conscripts). There were 357 combat capable aircraft including A-7s, F-4s, F-16s and Mirage 2000s. The HAF is organized into Tactical, Air Defence, Air Support and Air Training Commands.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 4% of GDP in 2007, industry 23% and services 73%.

Greece's 'shadow' (black market) economy is estimated to constitute approximately 27% of the country's official GDP.

In 2009 Greece gave US$607m. in international aid. In terms of a percentage of GNI, however, Greece was one of the least generous major industrialized countries, giving just 0.19%.

Overview

Greece's economy is the smallest of the original EU-15 and its income per capita is the lowest in the group. The industrial base is small compared to other developed countries. Until the early 1990s the state held up to 70% of all industrial assets but in 1998 the government began a programme of privatization to meet EU membership criteria. Financial aid from the EU brought improvements in road, rail, harbour and airport links.

Greece ranks among the top tourism destinations in the world and in 2007 attracted over 17m. foreign tourists. The economy grew strongly in the 2000s, outstripping both EU and OECD average growth rates. Real GDP grew by nearly 4% per year on average in the period 1995–2007. It benefited substantially from EU aid, equal to 3.3% of annual GDP, and growth was boosted by spending on the 2004 Olympic Games. Private consumption also grew with the rapid development in private sector credit. The combination of low interest rates inherited when joining the euro and financial market reform helped boost investment spending.

However, much of this development was reversed with the global financial crisis that began in 2007. Real GDP contracted by 3% in 2009 and the country fell into a prolonged recession. The government deficit was 15.8% of GDP in 2009 while public debt was 129.3%, the highest in the eurozone. In addition, interest on loans increased following the downgrading of its credit rating in Dec. 2009. In early 2009 the government announced a public sector wage freeze and a surcharge on higher income earners. In Dec. 2009 the incumbent prime minister, Georgios Papandreou, outlined proposals to further reduce public spending and to counter rampant tax evasion.

In early 2010 the government pledged to reduce the budget deficit to 8.7% by the end of the year and to below 3.0% by 2012. A US$11.2bn. austerity plan was passed in March 2010, including US$6.5bn. in savings through rises in sales tax, lower holiday bonuses to civil servants and a pension freeze. Public anger over the measures resulted in a succession of general strikes while concerns over Greek finances contributed to a plunge in the value of the euro in early 2010.

Also in March 2010, the 16 eurozone members reached an agreement in conjunction with the IMF to provide loans worth up to €22bn. in the event that Greece was unable to secure market loans. In April 2010 the Athens government requested a bail-out, arguing that high interest rates for Greece prohibited further market borrowing. On 2 May 2010 the EU and the IMF agreed to provide up to €110bn. over three years (€80bn. from the EU and €30bn. from the IMF). In return, Greece agreed to yet deeper spending cuts and to improve revenue raising, prompting more protests. Nonetheless, Greece was unable to meet its pledged targets in 2010, recording a budget deficit of 10.6% and with debt standing at 144.9% of GDP.

Following renewed fears that the government was set to default, eurozone leaders together with the IMF and private lenders agreed to lend a further €109bn. in July 2011. As a result, credit rating agency Standard & Poor's downgraded Greece's credit rating from CCC to CC, citing plans to restructure the economy's debt as effectively a 'selective default'. In Nov. 2011 an emergency coalition government led by Lucas Papademos was formed with a mandate to complete bail-out and debt-cutting talks and then hold elections as soon as possible (scheduled for May 2012). GDP contracted by 7.5% year on year in the fourth quarter of 2011, while unemployment reached 21%.

In Feb. 2012 a €130bn. rescue package was agreed with the EU and the IMF to support Greece's economic restructuring over four years. Following a successful bond swap deal in early March 2012 when private creditors agreed to a sharp devaluing of their holdings, Athens averted the immediate threat of an uncontrolled default. A report on debt sustainability, prepared for eurozone finance ministers in Feb. 2012, suggested that Greece will fail to meet its debt targets and may need another bail-out once the current rescue plan runs out.

Currency

In June 2000 EU leaders approved a recommendation for Greece to join the European single currency, the euro, and on 1 Jan. 2001 the euro (EUR) became the legal currency at the irrevocable conversion rate of 340-750 drachmas to 1 euro. The euro, which consists of 100 cents, has been in circulation since 1 Jan. 2002. On the introduction of the euro there was a 'dual circulation' period before the drachma ceased to be legal tender on 28 Feb. 2002. Euro banknotes in circulation on 1 Jan. 2002 had a total value of €13-4bn.

Inflation rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
3-4%	3-6%	3-5%	2-9%	3-5%	3-2%	2-9%	4-2%	1-2%	4-7%

Foreign exchange reserves were US$116m. in Sept. 2009 (US$17,726m. in 1999) and gold reserves 3-61m. troy oz. Total money supply in Aug. 2009 was €97,507m.

Budget

Central government revenue in 2009 totalled €86,663m. (€91,587m. in 2008) and expenditure €120,414m. (€111,627m. in 2008). Of the revenue in 2009, €45,429m. came from taxes. Of the expenditure in 2009, €49,002m. went on social benefits.

Greece's budget deficit in 2010 was 10-6% of GDP (2009, 15-8%; 2008, 9-8%). The required target set by the EU is a budget deficit of no more than 3%.

VAT was raised from 21% to 23% on 1 July 2010. There are reduced rates of 13% and 6-5%.

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
4-2%	3-4%	5-9%	4-4%	2-3%	5-5%	3-0%	-0-2%	-3-2%	-3-5%

Up until 2008 Greece had recorded economic growth above the EU average every year since 1996. Total GDP in 2010 was US$304-9bn.

Banking and Finance

The central bank and bank of issue is the Bank of Greece. Its Governor is George Provopoulos. There were 39 commercial banks in 2002 (17 Greek and 22 foreign). Total assets of all banks were 41,819bn. drachmas (€127,295m.) in 1999. The six leading banks in 2000 accounted for nearly 80% of assets of all Greek banks. Ranked by size of assets the largest banks were National Bank of Greece, Alpha Bank, Agricultural Bank, Emporiki Bank, EFG Eurobank and Piraeus Bank. Foreign direct investment was US$2,188m. in 2010.

There is a stock exchange in Athens.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

In 2008, 8-0% of energy consumption came from renewables (wind power, solar power, hydro-electric power, tidal power, geothermal energy and biomass), compared to the European Union average of 10-3%. A target of 18% has been set by the EU for 2020.

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in Greece were the equivalent of 10-0 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007 was 13-7m. kW. A national grid supplies the mainland, and islands near its coast. Power is produced in remoter islands by local generators. Total production in 2007 was 63-5bn. kWh; consumption per capita in 2007 was 6,062 kWh. 92% of electricity was produced in 2007 by thermal power stations (mainly using lignite) and the rest was from hydro-electric and geothermal generation.

Oil and Gas

Output of crude petroleum, 2007, 74,000 tonnes; proven reserves, 2007, 5m. bbls. The oil sector plays a critical role in the Greek economy, accounting for more than 70% of total energy demand. Supply is mostly imported but oil prospecting is intensifying. Natural gas was introduced in Greece in 1997 through a pipeline from Russia, and an additional source of supply is liquefied natural gas from Algeria. In 2007 natural gas production ran to 27m. cu. metres.

Minerals

Greece produces a variety of ores and minerals, including in 2006 (with production, in tonnes): bauxite (2,162,900); gypsum and anhydrite (865,216 in 2005); pumice (850,000); magnesite (crude) (463,277); aluminium (164,800); caustic magnesia (68,065 in 2005); nickel ore (21,670); zinc (16,414); silver (25,900 kg); marble (250,000 cu. metres). There is little coal, and the lignite is of indifferent quality (66-31m. tonnes in 2007). Salt production (2005), 198,024 tonnes.

Agriculture

In 2002 there were 2-72m. ha. of arable land and 1-13m. ha. of permanent crops.

The Greek economy was traditionally based on agriculture, with small-scale farming predominating, except in a few areas in the north. There were 824,000 farms in 2003. However, there has been a steady shift towards industry and although agriculture still employs nearly 17% of the population, it accounted for only 7% of GDP in 2002. Nevertheless, prior to the accession of the ten new member countries in May 2004 Greece had a higher percentage of its population working in agriculture than any other European Union member country. Agriculture accounts for 33-1% of exports and 17-9% of imports.

Production (2002, in 1,000 tonnes):

Olives	2,863	Oranges	1,193
Sugar beets	2,834	Potatoes	901
Maize	2,219	Grapes	747
Wheat	2,038	Watermelons	696
Tomatoes	1,753	Peaches	687
Cotton	1,306	Olive oil	382
Alfalfa	1,230	Must	368

Livestock (2003, in 1,000): 9,426 sheep, 5,287 goats, 1,082 pigs, 733 cattle, 56 asses, 28 horses, 28 mules, 38,500 poultry. Livestock products, 2002 (in 1,000 tonnes): milk, 2,069; meat, 472; cheese, 170.

Forestry

Area covered by forests in 2005 was 3-75m. ha., or 29-1% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 was 1-74m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

Total catch in 2005 was 90,445 tonnes, mainly from sea fishing. In 2005, 13,926 fishermen were active. 3,000 kg of sponges were produced in 2005.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Greece in March 2011 were: Coca-Cola Hellenic Bottling Company (US$9-8bn.); the National Bank of Greece (NBG), US$8-5bn.; and OPAP (Greek Organization of Football Prognostics), a betting company (US$6-8bn.).

The main products are canned vegetables and fruit, fruit juice, beer, wine, other alcoholic beverages, cigarettes, textiles, yarn, leather, shoes, synthetic timber, paper, plastics, rubber products, chemical acids, pigments, pharmaceutical products, cosmetics, soap, disinfectants, fertilizers, glassware, porcelain sanitary items, wire and power coils and household instruments.

Production in 1,000 tonnes (2002 unless otherwise indicated): cement (2005), 15,166; residual fuel oil (2007), 7,116; distillate fuel oil (2007), 6,562; petrol (2007), 4,318; crude steel (2006), 2,416; jet fuel (2007), 1,719; iron (concrete-reinforcing bars), 1,454; fertilizers, 1,374; alumina, 750; sulphuric acid, 468; packing materials, 318; soap, washing powder and detergents, 239; textile yarns, 130; soft drinks, 573.6m. litres; beer, 465.1m. litres; wine, 167.2m. litres; cigarettes, 30.5bn. units; glass (2001), 382,343 sq. metres.

Although manufacturing accounts for more than 21% of GDP, Greece's performance is hampered by the proliferation of small, traditional, low-tech firms, often run as family businesses. Food, drink and tobacco processing are the most important sectors, but there are also some steel mills and several shipyards. Shipping is of prime importance to the economy. In addition, there are major programmes under way in the fields of power, irrigation and land reclamation.

Labour

Of the total workforce of 4,822,800 in the period April–June 2004, 4,329,700 persons were employed. 748,200 were engaged in wholesale and retail trade; 569,700 in manufacturing; 533,100 in agriculture, animal breeding, hunting and forestry; and 350,000 in construction. Workers in Greece put in among the longest hours of any country in the world. In 2005 the average worker put in 2,053 hours. Retirement age is 65 years for men and 60 for women, although many men retire before the age of 60. Unemployment was 19.2% in Oct. 2011 (up from 12.6% in 2010 as a whole); unemployment among under 25s stood at 46.6% in Nov. 2011.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Following the normalization of their relations, Greece lifted its trade embargo (imposed in Feb. 1994) on Macedonia on 13 Oct. 1995. There are quarrels with Turkey over Cyprus, oil rights under the Aegean and ownership of uninhabited islands close to the Turkish coast.

Imports and Exports

In 2010 imports (c.i.f.) were valued at US$63,321m. and exports (f.o.b.) at US$21,560m. In 2007 principal imports were: machinery and transport equipment, 29.7%; mineral fuels, lubricants and related materials (including petroleum and petroleum products), 15.1%; manufactured goods, 14.5%; chemicals and related products, 13.9%; miscellaneous manufactured articles, 12.4%. Principal exports in 2007 were: manufactured goods, 21.8%; food and live animals, 14.7%; chemicals and related products, 13.8%; machinery and transport equipment, 13.6%; mineral fuels, lubricants and related materials (including petroleum and petroleum products), 12.2%.

In 2007 Germany was the principal supplier of imports (12.8% of the total), ahead of Italy (11.7%), Russia (5.6%), France (5.5%) and China (5.0%). Germany was the leading export market (11.5% of the total), followed by Italy (10.7%), Cyprus (6.5%), Bulgaria (6.5%) and the UK (5.4%). Fellow EU member countries accounted for 57.7% of imports in 2007 and 63.8% of exports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were 116,631 km of roads in 2005, including 868 km of motorway, 9,299 km of national roads and 30,864 km of secondary roads. Number of motor vehicles in 2005: 4,303,129 passenger cars (388 per 1,000 inhabitants), 1,186,483 trucks and vans, 1,124,172 motorcycles and 26,829 buses. There were 1,612 road deaths in 2007. With 14.4 deaths per 100,000 population in 2007, Greece has among the highest death rates in road accidents of any industrialized country. Road projects include improved links to Turkey and Bulgaria.

Rail

In 2005 the state network, Hellenic Railways (OSE), totalled 2,576 km, of which 1,743 km were of standard 1,435 mm gauge and 833 km were of narrow gauge (1,000 mm, 750 mm and 600 mm). Railways carried 3.0m. tonnes of freight and 10.0m. passengers in 2005. A 52-km long metro opened in Athens in 2000.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Athens (Spata 'Eleftherios Venizelos') and Thessaloniki-Makedonia. The airport at Spata opened in 2001. The national carrier, Olympic Airlines, ceased operations in Sept. 2009 and Olympic Air, the new airline formed from its privatization, commenced flights that month. Apart from the international airports there are a further 25 provincial airports. 5.70m. passengers were carried in 2005, of whom 2.90m. were on domestic and 2.80m. on international flights. Olympic Airlines operates routes from Athens to all important cities of the country, Europe, the Middle East and USA. In 2006 Athens airport (Spata) handled 15,079,708 passengers (9,611,095 on international flights).

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 1,127 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 37.14m. GT. Of the 1,127 vessels registered, 412 were oil tankers, 260 bulk carriers, 252 passenger ships, 120 general cargo ships, 45 container ships, 26 chemical tankers and 12 liquid gas tankers. The Greek-controlled fleet comprised 3,094 vessels of 1,000 GT or over in Jan. 2009, of which 2,361 were under foreign flags and only 737 under the Greek flag.

There is a canal (opened 9 Nov. 1893) across the Isthmus of Corinth (about 7 km). The principal port is Piraeus, which handled 10,477,000 tonnes of cargo in 2008 (4,463,000 tonnes loaded and 6,014,000 tonnes discharged). Other seaports are Thessaloniki, Patras, Volos, Igoumenitsa and Heraklion. Greece has 123 seaports with cargo and passenger handling facilities.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 5,975,000 main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year active mobile phone subscribers numbered 13,799,000 (1,239.0 per 1,000 persons). There were 4,845,000 internet users in 2008 and 1,045,000 PCs in use in 2006. There were 19.9 fixed broadband subscribers per 100 inhabitants in Dec. 2010.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Judges are appointed for life by the President after consultation with the judicial council. Judges enjoy personal and functional independence. There are three divisions of the courts—administrative, civil and criminal—and they must not give decisions which are contrary to the Constitution. Final jurisdiction lies with a Special Supreme Tribunal.

The Office of Ombudsman (Synigoros) was instituted in 1998. The acting Ombudsman is Kalliopi Spanou.

The population in penal institutions in Nov. 2008 was 12,300 (109 per 100,000 of national population). The death penalty was abolished for all crimes in 2004.

Education

Public education is provided in nursery, primary and secondary schools, starting at 5½–6½ years of age and free at all levels. Estimated adult literacy rate, 2009, 97.2% (male 98.3%; female 96.1%).

In 2005–06 there were 5,715 nursery schools with 11,461 teachers and 143,401 pupils; 5,753 primary schools with 58,376 teachers and 639,685 pupils; 3,308 high schools (lycea) with 62,149 teachers and 569,887 pupils; 660 secondary technical, vocational and ecclesiastic schools with 16,066 teachers and 123,436 students. In 2002–03 there were 68 technical, vocational and ecclesiastic schools in third level education with 11,357 teachers and 146,270 students; and 19 universities with 11,079 academic staff and 175,597 students.

In 2005 public expenditure on education came to 3.5% of GNI and 9.2% of total government spending.

Health

Doctor and hospital treatment within the Greek national health system is free, but patients have to pay 25% of prescription charges. Those living in remote areas can reclaim a proportion of private medical expenses. In 2002 there were 326 hospitals with a total of 51,781 beds, plus 188 health centres. In 2005 there were 55,556 doctors and 13,438 dentists. In 2007 Greece spent 9.6% of its GDP on health. In 2008, 46.3% of Greek adult males and 33.5% of females smoked on a daily basis. Greece has among the highest smoking rates of any country.

Welfare

The majority of employees are covered by the Social Insurance Institute, financed by employer and employee contributions. Benefits include pensions, medical expenses and long-term disability payments. Social insurance expenditure in 2004 totalled €36,038bn.

The basic pension is available to men (aged 65) and women (aged 60), who have at least 4,500 days of contributions. Men aged 62 and women aged 57 qualify if they have 10,000 days of contributions, and men and women aged 58 can claim if they have 10,500 days. The basic pension is calculated on the length of the insurance period and on pensionable earnings in the last five years. A reduced early pension is available to men aged 60 and women aged 55 with 4,500 days of contributions. The minimum pension for a single person is €487 per month and the maximum is €3,548.

RELIGION

The Christian Eastern (Greek) Orthodox Church is the established religion to which 91% of the population belong. It is under an archbishop and 67 metropolitans, one archbishop and seven metropolitans in Crete, and four metropolitans in the Dodecanese. The head of the Greek Orthodox Church is Archbishop Hieronymos II of Athens and All Greece (b. 1938). Roman Catholics have three archbishops (in Naxos and Corfu and, not recognized by the State, in Athens) and one bishop (for Syra and Santorin). The Exarchs of the Greek Catholics and the Armenians are not recognized by the State. There are 360,000 Muslims.

Complete religious freedom is recognized by the constitution of 1974, but proselytizing from, and interference with, the Greek Orthodox Church is forbidden.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Greece has 17 sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the Temple of Apollo Epicurius at Bassae (1986); the archaeological site of Delphi (1987); The Acropolis, Athens (1987); Mount Athos (1988); Meteora (1988); the Paleochristian and Byzantine monuments of Thessaloniki (1988); the Archaeological Site of Epidauros (1988); the Medieval City of Rhodes (1988); the archaeological site of Olympia (1989); Mystras (1989); Delos (1990); the monasteries of Daphni, Hossios Luckas and Nea Moni of Chios (1990); the Pythagoreion and Heraion of Samos (1992); the archaeological site of Vergina (1996); the archaeological sites of Mycenae and Tiryns (1999); the historical sites on the Island of Patmos (1999); and the old town of Corfu (2007).

Press

There were 45 daily newspapers published in 2008 (41 paid-for and four free) with a combined daily circulation of 1,447,000. The papers with the highest circulation are the free City Press and Metro.

Tourism

Tourism is Greece's biggest industry with tourist spending amounting to US$13.70bn. in 2005; in 2004 tourism contributed approximately 14% of GDP. Tourists in 2008 numbered 18.8m. There were 700,933 hotel beds in 2007 (285,956 in 1981). A total of 56,385,986 nights were spent in hotels in 2007, 41,002,800 by foreigners and 15,383,186 by nationals.

Festivals

Independence Day is celebrated on 25 March. The Athens and Epidauros Festival is the leading arts festival and takes place from May to Oct. Thessaloniki International Film Festival occurs in Nov./Dec. Rockwave Festival, held in Athens in June–July, is one of the biggest music festivals.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Carib Indians inhabited Grenada when it was sighted by Christopher Columbus in 1498. The Caribs prevented European settlement until French forces landed in 1654. The British took control of Grenada in 1783 and established sugar plantations using African slave labour. Eric Gairy led a violent uprising of impoverished plantation workers in 1951 and became the island's dominant political figure in the lead-up to independence on 7 Feb. 1974. He was ousted by a leftist coup on 13 March 1979. The army took control on 19 Oct. 1983 after a power struggle led to the killing of the prime minister, Maurice Bishop. At the request of a group of Caribbean countries, Grenada was invaded by US-led forces on 25–28 Oct. On 1 Nov. a state of emergency was imposed which ended later in the year with the restoration of the 1973 constitution.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Grenada is the most southerly island of the Windward Islands with an area of 344 sq. km (133 sq. miles); the state also includes the Southern Grenadine Islands to the north, chiefly Carriacou (58.3 sq. km) and Petit Martinique. The total population at the 2001 census was 102,632; density, 298 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 107,000.

In 2005, 69.4% of the population were rural. The Borough of St George's, the capital, had 35,559 inhabitants in 2001. 52% of the population is Black, 40% of mixed origins, 4% Indian and 1% White.

The official language is English. A French-African patois is also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008 estimates, 2,000; deaths, 600. Rates per 1,000 population, 2008 estimates: birth, 19.4; death, 6.1. Life expectancy, 2007: 73.7 years for males, 76.7 years for females. Infant mortality, 2005, 17 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 0.3%; fertility rate, 2008, 2.3 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The tropical climate is very agreeable in the dry season, from Jan. to May, when days are warm and nights quite cool, but in the wet season there is very little difference between day and night temperatures. On the coast, annual rainfall is about 60" (1,500 mm) but it is as high as 150–200" (3,750–5,000 mm) in the mountains. Average temperature, 27°C.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The head of state is the British sovereign, represented by an appointed Governor-General. There is a bicameral legislature, consisting of a 13-member Senate, appointed by the Governor-General, and a 15-member House of Representatives, elected by universal suffrage.

National Anthem

'Hail Grenada, land of ours'; words by I. M. Baptiste, tune by L. A. Masanto.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 8 July 2008 for the House of Representatives the opposition National Democratic Congress won 11 seats, with 51.0% of the votes cast, against 4 and 47.8% for the New National Party. Turnout was 80.3%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor-General: Sir Carlyle Glean.

In March 2012 the government comprised:

Prime Minister, Minister of Culture, Information, Information Technology, Legal Affairs, National Security and Public Administration: Tillman Thomas; b. 1945 (NDC; in office since 9 July 2008).

Minister of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries: Michael Lett. Carriacou and Petite Martinique Affairs: George Prime. Education and Human Resources: Franca Bernadine. Finance, Planning, Economy, Energy and Co-operatives: Nazim Burke. Foreign Affairs, Environment and Foreign Trade: Karl Hood. Health: Anne Peters. Housing, Lands and Community Development: Alleyne Walker. Labour, Social Security and Ecclesiastical Affairs: Glynis Roberts. Legal Affairs and Attorney General: Rohan Phillip. Social Development: Sylvester Quarless. Tourism and Civil Aviation: Peter David. Works, Physical Development and Public Utilities: Joseph Gilbert. Youth Empowerment and Sports: Patrick Simmons.

CURRENT LEADERS

Tillman Thomas

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Tillman Thomas was appointed prime minister on 9 July 2008, ending 13 years of rule by Keith Mitchell and his New National Party. As leader of the National Democratic Congress (NDC), Thomas gained advantage from the reaction against Mitchell's increasingly autocratic rule. A veteran legislator and one-time political prisoner, Thomas promised to fashion a more open and inclusive government.

Early Life

Thomas was born in 1945 in Hermitage in St Patrick, Grenada's northernmost parish. A graduate of the University of West Indies and Trinidad's Hugh Wooding Law School, he began his career as an attorney. He was imprisoned on political grounds in 1981 during the Marxist and Cuba-aligned regime of Maurice Bishop, who had come to power following a coup. Thomas was released in 1983 following a military invasion by US and Caribbean troops.

In 1984 Thomas was elected to the House of Representatives as the New National Party member for St Patrick East. In 1987 he was one of the founding members of the NDC, serving for six years as its assistant general secretary. Despite losing his seat at the 1990 general election, Thomas was appointed minister of works, communications and public utilities in 1991. He subsequently served as minister of finance and as minister of tourism, culture, civil aviation and sports.

Following the NDC's failure to gain a single seat in the 1999 general election, Thomas was appointed party leader. The NDC came close to gaining power in 2003, winning seven of the 15 available seats, with Thomas reclaiming St Patrick East. As leader of the opposition, he accused Mitchell of mismanagement and played upon voter frustration with rising prices and a tourist-based economy struggling to recover from the devastation wreaked by Hurricane Ivan in 2004.

Career in Office

The NDC won a resounding victory at the 2008 general election, taking 11 of the 15 seats. One of Thomas' first actions was to repeal the national reconstruction levy, a tax of 3% on income over EC$1,000 per month imposed in the aftermath of Hurricane Ivan. Thomas has also promised free school books for all primary and secondary schools. He vowed to create a more participatory government focusing on improving the economy and lowering the cost of living for Grenada's poorest families.

DEFENCE

Royal Grenada Police Force

Modelled on the British system, the 730-strong police force includes an 80-member paramilitary unit and a 30-member coastguard.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 6.7% of GDP in 2006, industry 29.0% and services 64.3%.

Overview

Massive damage caused by hurricanes in 2004 and 2005 led the government to launch a medium-term economic reform package to tackle the large public debt, ensure sustainable growth and alleviate poverty. This was supported by the IMF's Poverty Reduction and Growth Facility arrangement, with the first review completed in 2008.

Following near-zero levels in 2006, growth rebounded to over 4% in 2007 owing to strong tourism, the Cricket World Cup and the expansion of an offshore university. Strong growth helped reduce the GDP-to-debt ratio from 117% at the end of 2006 to 112% a year later. However, while the outlook is positive, challenges remain. Annual inflation rose sharply in 2008 as a result of increasing world food and fuel prices and the depreciating US dollar, while fiscal performance deteriorated further in 2007, reflecting high capital expenditure and shortfalls in grants (from, among others, the EU). Economic growth is expected to slow down in the short term as a result of the global downturn.

Currency

The unit of currency is the East Caribbean dollar (XCD). Foreign exchange reserves were US$100m. in July 2005 and total money supply was EC$380m. Following inflation of 8.0% in 2008, there was deflation of 0.3% in 2009.

Budget

In 2006 revenue was EC$490.8m. and expenditure EC$588.8m. Income tax has been abolished. VAT of 15% (reduced rate, 10%) was introduced on 1 Feb. 2010.

Performance

Real GDP contracted by 7.6% in 2009 and 1.4% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$0.6bn.

Banking and Finance

Grenada is a member of the Eastern Caribbean Central Bank. The Governor is Sir Dwight Venner. In 2002 there were three commercial banks and four foreign banks. The Grenada Agricultural Bank was established in 1965 to encourage agricultural development; in 1975 it became the Grenada Agricultural and Industrial Development Corporation. In 1995 bank deposits were EC$666.8m. (US$249.7m.). Total foreign currency deposits in 1995 amounted to US$11.8m.

Grenada is affiliated to the Eastern Caribbean Securities Exchange in Basseterre, St Kitts and Nevis.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Grenada's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 3.7 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007 was an estimated 32,000 kW. Production in 2007 was 171m. kWh, with consumption per capita 1,596 kWh.

Agriculture

There were about 2,000 ha. of arable land in 2007 and 10,000 ha. of permanent crops. Principal crop production (2003, in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 7; coconuts, 6; bananas, 4; avocados, 2; grapefruit and pomelos, 2; mangoes, 2. Nutmeg, corn, pigeon peas, citrus, root-crops and vegetables are also grown, in addition to small scattered cultivations of cotton, cloves, cinnamon, pimento, coffee and fruit trees. Grenada is the second largest producer of nutmeg in the world, after Indonesia.

Livestock (2003): sheep, 13,000; goats, 7,000; pigs, 5,000; cattle, 4,000.

Forestry

In 2005 the area under forests was 4,000 ha., or 12.2% of the total land area.

Fisheries

The catch in 2008 was 2,384 tonnes, entirely from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Main products are wheat flour, soft drinks, beer, animal feed, rum and cigarettes.

Labour

In 1993 the labour force was estimated at 27,820. Unemployment was 11% in Dec. 2000.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Total external debt amounted to US$525m. in 2007.

Imports and Exports

In 2005 imports totalled US$287.7m. and exports US$32.8m. Major import commodities in 2005 were: machinery and transport equipment, 23.4%; food and live animals, 14.2%; manufactures of metals, 6.9%. The principal exports were: nutmeg, mace and cardamom, 29.7%; machinery and transport equipment, 15.2%; fish and shellfish, 12.7%.

In 2005 the main import suppliers were the USA (37.5%), Trinidad and Tobago (21.0%), UK (5.8%), Japan (4.0%) and China (3.2%). Main export destinations were the USA (21.4%), Netherlands (14.1%), Trinidad and Tobago (10.1%), St Lucia (9.4%) and Barbados (6.2%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2000 there were 1,127 km of roads, of which 61.0% were hard-surfaced.

Civil Aviation

The main airport is Point Salines International. Union Island and Carriacou have smaller airports. There were direct flights from Point Salines in 2003 to Anguilla, Antigua, Barbados, the British Virgin Islands, Dominica, Frankfurt, London, Montego Bay, New York, Philadelphia, Puerto Rico, St Kitts, St Lucia, St Maarten, St Vincent, Tobago and Trinidad. In 2001 Point Salines handled 344,064 passengers (342,124 on international flights) and 2,747 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

The main port is at St George's; there are eight minor ports. In Jan. 2009 there were four ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 2,000 GT.

Telecommunications

There were 28,400 fixed telephone lines in 2010 (271.5 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 121,900 in 2010. There were 334.6 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 10,900 in 2009 (104.8 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Grenada Supreme Court, situated in St George's, comprises a High Court of Justice, a Court of Magisterial Appeal (which hears appeals from the lower Magistrates' Courts exercising summary jurisdiction) and an Itinerant Court of Appeal (to hear appeals from the High Court). Grenada was one of ten countries to sign an agreement in Feb. 2001 establishing a Caribbean Court of Justice (CCJ) to replace the British Privy Council as the highest civil and criminal court. In the meantime the number of signatories has risen to twelve. The court was inaugurated at Port-of-Spain, Trinidad on 16 April 2005. However, Grenada has not yet accepted the CCJ as its final court of appeal. For police see DEFENCE, above.

The population in penal institutions in 2007 was 367 (equivalent to 408 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Adult literacy was 96.0% in 2004. In 2007 there were 13,733 pupils in primary schools (871 teaching staff) and 13,060 pupils (886 teaching staff in 2005) in secondary schools. The Grenada National College was established in 1988. There is also a branch of the University of the West Indies. In 2003 public expenditure on education amounted to 5.9% of GNI and 12.9% of total government spending.

Health

In 2005 there were 41 hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants. There were 127 physicians in 2003. In 1998 there were 20 dentistry personnel and 326 nursing and midwifery personnel. In 2005 expenditure on health was 9.6% of total government spending.

RELIGION

At the 2001 census 53% of the population were Roman Catholic, 14% Anglican and the remainder other religions.

CULTURE

Press

In 2006 there were five weekly newspapers and several others that were published irregularly.

Tourism

In 2005 there were 98,548 non-resident tourists and 275,080 cruise passenger arrivals. Tourism receipts (excluding passenger transport) totalled US$71m. in 2005.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

From 1524 Guatemala was part of a Spanish captaincy-general, comprising the whole of Central America. It became independent in 1821 and formed part of the Confederation of Central America from 1823 to 1839. The overthrow of the right-wing dictator Jorge Ubico in 1944 opened a decade of left-wing activity which alarmed the USA. In 1954 the leftist regime of Jacobo Arbenz Guzmán was overthrown by a CIA-supported coup. A series of right-wing governments failed to produce stability while the toll on human life and the violation of human rights was such as to cause thousands of refugees to flee to Mexico. Elections to a National Constituent Assembly were held on 1 July 1984, and a new constitution was promulgated in May 1985. Amidst violence and assassinations, the presidential election was won by Marco Vinicio Cerezo Arévalo. On 14 Jan. 1986 Cerezo's civilian government was installed—the first for 16 years and only the second since 1954. Violence continued, however, and there were frequent reports of torture and killings by right-wing 'death squads'. The presidential and legislative elections of Nov. 1995 saw the return of open politics for the first time in over 40 years. Meanwhile the Guatemalan Revolutionary Unit (URNG) declared a ceasefire. On 6 May and 19 Sept. 1996 the government agreed reforms to military, internal security, judicial and agrarian institutions. A ceasefire was concluded in Oslo on 4 Dec. 1996 and a final peace treaty was signed on 29 Dec. 1996. In Nov. 1999 the country's first presidential elections took place since the end of the 36-year-long civil war, which had claimed over 200,000 lives.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guatemala is bounded on the north and west by Mexico, south by the Pacific ocean and east by El Salvador, Honduras and Belize, and the area is 108,889 sq. km (42,042 sq. miles). In March 1936

Guatemala, El Salvador and Honduras agreed to accept the peak of Mount Montecristo as the common boundary point.

The population was 11,237,196 at the census of Nov. 2002; density, 103 per sq. km. The estimated population in 2006 was 12,988,000.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 16.33m.

In 2005, 52.8% of the population were rural. In 2000, 33% were Amerindian, of 21 different groups descended from the Maya; 64% Mestizo (mixed Amerindian and Spanish). 51% speak Spanish, the official language of Guatemala, with the remainder speaking one or a combination of the 23 Indian dialects.

Guatemala is administratively divided into 22 departments, each with a governor appointed by the president. Area and population, 2002:

Departments	Area (sq. km)	Population	Departments	Area (sq. km)	Population

CURRENT LEADERS

Otto Pérez Molina

Position

President

Introduction

Otto Pérez Molina became president in Jan. 2011. A former director of military intelligence, he has adopted an 'iron fist' policy to tackle crime.

Early Life

Born in Guatemala City on 1 Dec. 1950, Otto Pérez Molina graduated from the country's military academy in 1973. He rose through the army ranks, serving in counterinsurgency campaigns during the 1980s, particularly in the Quiché region. Allegations of atrocities committed under his command have persisted but have never been proven.

In 1983 he backed the coup that removed President Ríos Montt. In the late 1980s he studied at the United States Army School of the Americas and the Inter-American Defense College, both in the USA, after which he worked in military intelligence, serving as director of military intelligence from 1992–93. After helping to force the resignation of President Serrano in 1993, he served from 1993–95 as chief of staff to President de León Carpio.

Appointed inspector general of the army in 1996, he represented the military in negotiations with guerrilla forces that resulted in a peace treaty ending 36 years of civil war. He was also Guatemala's delegate on the Inter-American Defense Board from 1998–2000. In Feb. 2001 Pérez Molina founded the conservative Patriotic Party (PP), guiding it into the Grand National Alliance (GANA) two years later.

Elected to parliament in Nov. 2003, he subsequently withdrew the PP from GANA while serving as commissioner for defence and security. In 2007 he unsuccessfully contested the presidential election as the PP candidate, advocating a hardline security policy to tackle violent crime. In 2011 he stood again, promising 'iron fist' policing and increased social spending. He won in the second round of balloting with 54% of the vote.

Career in Office

Pérez Molina took office on 14 Jan. 2012. He has asked for international help in combating the drugs trade and has introduced a system of checkpoints aimed at curtailing violent crime. His other challenges include reducing poverty and unemployment, as well as managing the conflict between the mining industry and indigenous groups defending their land rights. His opponents continue to question his conduct while in the military.

DEFENCE

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$180m. (US$14 per capita), representing 0.4% of GDP.

Army

The Army numbered (2007) 13,400 and is organized in 15 military zones. It includes a special forces unit. There is a paramilitary national police of 19,000 including 2,500 treasury police.

Navy

The Navy was (2007) 990-strong of whom 650 were marines. Main bases are Santo Tomás de Castilla (on the Atlantic Coast) and Puerto Quetzal (Pacific).

Air Force

There is an Air Force with ten combat capable aircraft (PC-7s and A-37s). Strength was (2007) 1,070.

ECONOMY

In 2007 agriculture accounted for 11% of GDP, industry 28% and services 62%.

Overview

Guatemala's income per capita is high relative to other Central American countries. However, income inequality is also high and around half the population lives in poverty. Social indicators fall below the average of low-income countries and in 2008 President Colom launched a series of programmes to support the poorest families. The agricultural sector accounts for almost half of all employment and a large part of exports. Remittances are the primary source of foreign income. Since the end of the civil war in 1996 the economy has drawn more foreign capital investment (boosted in 2006 by the implementation of the Central America Free Trade Agreement), contributing to the growth of imports.

Annual growth averaged 4.2% between 2004–07 but fell to 3.3% in 2008. Guatemala only narrowly avoided a recession in 2009 amid the global financial crisis, as remittances and investment declined. Natural disasters in 2010 caused damage equalling 2.4% of GDP. Nonetheless, the economy showed signs of bouncing back in late 2010.

Currency

The unit of currency is the quetzal (GTQ) of 100 centavos, established on 7 May 1925. In July 2005 foreign exchange reserves were US$3,685m., total money supply was Q.30,083m. and gold reserves were 221,000 troy oz. Inflation was 11.4% in 2008, falling to 1.9% in 2009.

Budget

Budgetary central government revenue in 2006 totalled Q.29,102.4m. (Q.24,764.6m. in 2005) and expenditure was Q.31,073.7m. (Q.26,660.7m. in 2005).

VAT is 12%.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 0.5% in 2009 and 2.8% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$41.2bn.

Banking and Finance

The Banco de Guatemala is the central bank and bank of issue (President, Edgar Baltazar Barquín Durán). In 2002 there were 27 national banks (four state-owned and 23 private). The international banks and the foreign banks are authorized to operate as commercial banks.

There are two stock exchanges.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 0.9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007 was 2.2m. kW. Production, 2007, 8.75bn. kWh. Consumption per capita in 2007 was 647 kWh.

Oil and Gas

There were proven natural gas reserves in 2007 of 3.1bn. cu. metres. In 2007 crude petroleum reserves were 83m. bbls; output in 2007 was 833,000 tonnes.

Minerals

There are deposits of gold, silver and nickel.

Agriculture

There were 1.36m. ha. of arable land in 2001 and 0.55m. ha. of permanent crops. 130,000 ha. were irrigated in 2001. Output, 2003 estimates (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 17,500; maize, 1,054; bananas, 1,000; melons and watermelons, 314; plantains, 268; potatoes, 248; coffee, 210. Guatemala is one of the largest producers of essential oils (citronella and lemongrass). Livestock (2003 estimates): cattle, 2.54m.; pigs, 780,000; sheep, 260,000; horses, 124,000; goats, 112,000; chickens, 27m.

Forestry

In 2005 the area under forests was 3.94m. ha., or 36.3% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 was 17.41m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

In 2005 the total catch was 12,248 tonnes, of which freshwater fish 60% and marine fish 40%.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing contributed 20% of GDP in 2007. The principal industries are food and beverages, tobacco, chemicals, hides and skins, textiles, garments and non-metallic minerals. Cement production in 2007 was an estimated 2,500,000 tonnes; raw sugar production was 2,015,000 tonnes in 2005.

Labour

In 2002 there were 3,463,000 employed persons. The main areas of activity were: agriculture, hunting, forestry and fishing, 1,457,000; wholesale and retail trade and restaurants and hotels, 571,700; manufacturing, 466,000; services, 266,000; construction, 207,900. There is a working week of a maximum of 44 hours.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 2004 Guatemala signed the Central America-Dominican Republic-United States Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA-DR), along with Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and the USA. The agreement entered into force for Guatemala on 1 July 2006. External debt was US$5,349m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Values in US$1m. were:

	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007
Imports c.i.f.	6,718.7	7,812.1	10,499.5	9,539.7	12,731.4
Exports f.o.b.	2,634.7	2,931.8	5,380.8	3,198.1	6,900.4

In 2007 the main imports were: machinery and transport equipment, 25.1%; petroleum and petroleum products, 16.1%; chemicals and related products, 14.8%; food and live animals, 9.8%. Principal exports in 2007 were: apparel and clothing accessories, 20.1%; chemicals and related products, 10.8%; coffee and coffee substitutes, 8.5%; cane sugar, 5.2%; bananas, 4.7%. Main import suppliers, 2007: USA, 34.1%; Mexico, 8.8%; China, 5.7%; El Salvador, 4.8%; South Korea, 3.4%. Main export markets, 2007: USA, 42.6%; El Salvador, 12.2%; Honduras, 8.6%; Mexico, 6.7%; Nicaragua, 3.9%.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

In 2002 there were 14,891 km of roads, of which 74 km were motorways. 37.6% of all roads were paved in 2002. There is a highway from coast to coast via Guatemala City. There are two highways from the Mexican to the Salvadorean frontier: the Pacific Highway serving the fertile coastal plain and the Pan-American Highway running through the highlands and Guatemala City. Vehicles in use in 2007 numbered 1,558,100.

Rail

Ferrovías Guatemala (a subsidiary of Railroad Development Corporation, which secured a 50-year concession to upgrade Guatemala's decrepit rail network in 1997) operated 322 km of railway in 2006, with 11 locomotives carrying 93,000 tonnes of freight. However, after a contractual dispute with the government, the company suspended its operations in Sept. 2007 pending the conclusion of legal action. There have been no passenger services since the late 1990s.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Guatemala City (La Aurora) and Flores. In 2000 La Aurora handled 1,258,919 passengers and 58,118 tonnes of freight. In 1999 scheduled airline traffic of Guatemalan-based carriers flew 5.3m. km, carrying 506,000 passengers (472,000 on international flights).

Shipping

The chief ports on the Atlantic coast are Puerto Barrios and Santo Tomás de Castilla: on the Pacific coast, Puerto Quetzal and Champerico. Santo Tomás de Castilla, Guatemala's busiest port, handled 4.7m. tonnes of cargo in 2008.

Telecommunications

The government own and operate the telecommunications services. There were 1.50m. fixed telephone lines in 2010 (104.1 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 18.07m. in 2010. There were 105.0 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Justice is administered in a Constitution Court, a Supreme Court, six appeal courts and 28 courts of first instance. Supreme Court and appeal court judges are elected by Congress. Judges of first instance are appointed by the Supreme Court.

The death penalty is authorized for murder and kidnapping. There were 6,451 homicides in 2009. At 52 per 100,000 persons in 2009, Guatemala has among the highest murder rates in the world—the rate is even higher than during the 36-year-long civil war. There were two executions in 2000, but none since.

A new National Civil Police force under the authority of the Minister of the Interior was created in 1996. It was 19,000-strong in 2007.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2006 was 7,477 (57 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

In 2007 there were 2,448,976 pupils at primary schools and 864,154 pupils at secondary level. The adult literacy rate in 2008 was 74%. There is one state university—the University of San Carlos of Guatemala (Universidad de San Carlos de Guatemala), founded in 1676—as well as several private universities. In 2006 there were 112,215 students and 3,843 academic staff in tertiary education.

In 2007 public expenditure on education came to 3.1% of GNI.

Health

Guatemala had 4,969 public sector doctors and 12,514 nursing staff in 2005. There were 66 hospitals with 8,270 beds (6.4 per 10,000 inhabitants) in 2006.

Welfare

A comprehensive system of social security was outlined in a law of 30 Oct. 1946.

RELIGION

Roman Catholicism is the prevailing faith (8.9m. adherents in 2001) and there is a Roman Catholic archbishopric. In Feb. 2012 there was one cardinal. The remainder of the population are followers of other religions (mainly Evangelical Protestantism).

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

There are three UNESCO sites in Guatemala: Tikal National Park (inscribed on the list in 1979); Antigua Guatemala (1979); and the Archaeological Park and Ruins of Quiriguá (1981).

Press

In 2006 there were ten daily newspapers, the main ones being Nuestro Diario and Prensa Libre.

Tourism

Tourism is an important source of foreign exchange (receipts totalled US$883m. in 2005). There were 1,715,000 non-resident tourists in 2008.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1888 Guinea became a French protectorate, in 1893 a colony, and in 1904 a constituent territory of French West Africa. Forced labour and other colonial depredations ensued, although a form of representation was introduced in 1946. The independent Republic of Guinea was proclaimed on 2 Oct. 1958, after the territory of French Guinea had decided to leave the French community. Guinea became a single-party state. In 1980 the armed forces staged a coup and dissolved the National Assembly. Following popular disturbances a multi-party system was introduced in April 1992.

In 2000 fierce fighting broke out between Guinean government troops and rebels, believed to be a mix of Guinean dissidents and mercenaries from Liberia and Sierra Leone. More than 250,000 refugees were caught up in what the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees described as the world's worst refugee crisis. In 2003 the governments of Guinea, Liberia and Sierra Leone reached a deal on measures to secure mutual borders and to fight insurgency.

In 2008 President Lansana Conté died after 24 years of authoritarian rule. Power fell to the military, who appointed Capt. Moussa Dadis Camara as president. Camara promised presidential elections in Jan. 2010 and parliamentary elections in March 2010. In Sept. 2009 the army opened fire on an opposition rally, killing at least 150 people. The European Union, African Union and USA imposed sanctions the following month, the UN set up an enquiry into the incident and in Feb. 2010 the International Criminal Court condemned the massacre as a crime against humanity. After surviving an attempted assassination in Dec. 2009, Camara agreed to recuperate abroad while rule fell to his deputy, Gen. Sekouba Konaté. Konaté appointed Jean-Marie Doré as interim prime minister to oversee a return to civilian rule.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guinea is bounded in the northwest by Guinea-Bissau and Senegal, northeast by Mali, southeast by Côte d'Ivoire, south by Liberia and Sierra Leone, and west by the Atlantic Ocean.

The area is 245,860 sq. km (94,930 sq. miles), including 140 sq. km (50 sq. miles) of inland water. In 1996 the census population was 7,156,406 (density 29.1 per sq. km). Estimate, 2010, 9.98m.; density, 41 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 11.32m.

The capital is Conakry. In 2005, 67.0% of the population were rural.

Guinea is divided into seven provinces and a special zone (national capital). These are in turn divided into 34 administrative regions. The major divisions (with their areas in sq. km) are: Boké, 34,231; Conakry (special zone—national capital), 308; Faranah, 38,272; Kankan, 71,085; Kindia, 26,749; Labé, 21,150; Mamou, 13,560; Nzérékoré, 40,502.

The main towns are Conakry (population estimate, 2003, 1,366,000), Kindia, Nzérékoré, Kankan, Guéckédougou and Kissidougou.

The ethnic composition is Fulani (38.6%, predominant in Moyenne-Guinée), Malinké (or Mandingo, 23.2%, prominent in Haute-Guinée), Susu (11.0%, prominent in Guinée-Maritime), Kissi (6.0%) and Kpelle (4.6%) in Guinée-Forestière, and Dialonka, Loma and others (16.6%).

The official language is French.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 390,000; deaths, 108,000. Rates, 2008 estimates (per 1,000 population): births, 39.6; deaths, 11.0. infant mortality, 2005, 98 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy, 2007, 55.3 years for males and 59.3 for females. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.0%; fertility rate, 2008, 5.4 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, with high rainfall near the coast and constant heat, but conditions are a little cooler on the plateau. The wet season on the coast lasts from May to Nov., but only to Oct. inland. Conakry, Jan. 80°F (26.7°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 172" (4,293 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

There is a 114-member National Assembly (currently suspended), 38 of whose members are elected on a first-past-the-post system, and the remainder from national lists by proportional representation. It was dissolved following the military coup of Dec. 2008.

On 11 Nov. 2001 a referendum was held in which 98.4% of votes cast were in favour of President Conté remaining in office for a third term, requiring an amendment to the constitution (previously allowing a maximum two presidential terms). The referendum, which also increased the presidential mandate from five to seven years, was boycotted by opposition parties.

National Anthem

'Peuple d'Afrique, le passé historique' ('People of Africa, the historic past'); words anonymous, tune by Fodeba Keita.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The first democratic presidential elections since independence in 1958 were held on 27 June 2010. Former prime minister Cellou Dalein Diallo of the Union of Democratic Forces of Guinea (UFDG) won 39.7% of the vote against 20.7% for Alpha Condé of the Rally of the Guinean People (RPG) and 15.6% for another former prime minister, Sidya Touré of the Union of Republican Forces (URF). There were 21 further candidates in the first round. Turnout was 51.6%. A second round between the two leading candidates was initially scheduled for 18 July but was postponed until 7 Nov. Condé took 52.5% of the vote against 47.5% for Diallo. Turnout was 67.9%. A state of emergency was declared owing to outbreaks of violence following the announcement of the result but was lifted just over three weeks later.

Parliamentary elections took place on 30 June 2002. The PUP gained 85 out of 114 seats with 61.6% of votes cast, Union for Progress and Renewal (UPR) 20 seats with 26.6%, Union for the Progress of Guinea (UPG) 3 with 4.1%, Democratic Party of Guinea (PDG) 3 with 3.4%, National Alliance for Progress (ANP) 2 with 2.0% and Party of the Union for Development (PUD) 1 with 0.7%. Turnout was 71.6%. The Rally of the Guinean People, the main opposition party, boycotted the election.

Parliamentary elections were scheduled to take place on 8 July 2012.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

President and Minister of National Defence: Alpha Condé; b. 1938 (Rally of the Guinean People/RPG; sworn in 21 Dec. 2010).

In March 2012 the cabinet comprised:

CURRENT LEADERS

Alpha Condé

Position
President

Introduction

Alpha Condé was sworn in as Guinea's first democratically elected president on 21 Dec. 2010. Though his election was marred by violence and allegations of fraud it marked a break with half a century of authoritarian rule.

Early Life

Born in Boke, French Guinea on 4 March 1938, Alpha Condé was educated in Paris at the Institut d'Études Politiques de Paris and the Sorbonne. He earned a PhD in public law before teaching at the Université Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne and the School of Post, Telephone and Telecommunications (PTT).

In the 1950s Condé was heavily involved with the Fédération des Étudiants d'Afrique Noire en France (FEANF), campaigning for Guinea's independence from France. After independence in 1958, Condé remained in France and became a vocal opponent of President Ahmed Sékou Touré and the one party system. Touré had Condé sentenced to death in absentia in 1970 for his opposition. In 1977 Condé co-founded the National Democratic Movement (NDM), a party that evolved into the Rally of the Guinean People (RPG) that Condé currently heads.

Condé returned to Guinea in 1991 and ran for the presidency in 1993 in the nation's first multiparty elections, losing to Conté. In 1998 he again lost out to Conté, who gained 51.7% of the vote. On 16 Dec. 1998, two days after the poll, Condé was arrested along with other opposition leaders, accused of attempting to destabilize the government. Despite international pressure, Condé was imprisoned without trial for 20 months. In Sept. 2000 he was sentenced to five years in prison but was pardoned by Conté in May 2001 on condition that he withdraw from politics. Condé left for France soon after but returned to Guinea in July 2005.

He initially supported the National Council for Democracy and Development (CNDD) and Capt. Moussa Dadis Camara, who seized power in a military coup in Dec. 2008. However, he soon called for a return to civilian rule and free elections. In Feb. 2010 he announced his candidature for the June 2010 presidential elections. Condé was placed second with 20.7% of the vote in the first round but won the delayed run-off with 52.5% of the vote. His victory was confirmed on 3 Dec. 2010 by the Supreme Court, two weeks after the provisional results were challenged by his opponent, Cellou Dalein Diallo.

Career in Office

Nine days after being sworn into office, Condé announced that in an attempt to break the links with the previous regimes and to address the high unemployment rate among young graduates, all civil servants in the offices of the president and prime minister would be replaced. Condé was expected to review the country's mining contracts, reform the military, increase public access to basic amenities and form a Truth, Justice and Reconciliation Commission to investigate human-rights abuses and reconcile ethnic divisions.

DEFENCE

There is selective conscription for two years. Defence expenditure totalled US$51m. in 2008 (US$5 per capita), representing 1.0% of GDP.

Army

The Army strength (2007) was 8,500. There are also three paramilitary forces: People's Militia (7,000), Gendarmerie (1,000) and Republican Guard (1,600) although only 2,600 are active.

Navy

A small force of around 400 (2007) operates from bases at Conakry and Kakanda.

Air Force

Personnel (2007) 800. There were seven combat capable aircraft including MiG-17s and MiG-21s, although their serviceability was in doubt.

ECONOMY

Agriculture produced 13.4% of GDP in 2006, industry 38.9% and services 47.7%.

Overview

Guinea is rich in natural resources, with around a third of the world's bauxite reserves as well as large gold and diamond deposits along with potential for hydroelectric power. Having achieved relatively strong growth in the 1990s, economic performance deteriorated from 2000, with slowing GDP growth and rising inflation. Aside from the mining sector, the economy is dominated by the processing of agricultural products.

Guinea achieved its 1990s growth on the back of tight financial policies and favourable commodity prices. Inflation was also kept low. Subsequent poor performance stems from a weak policy framework, a fall in commodity export prices (including bauxite, which accounts for 50% of exports) and the knock-on effect of conflicts in neighbouring countries. In the 1990s nearly half a million refugees arrived from surrounding states suffering from civil conflict, notably Liberia and Sierra Leone. Guinea itself experienced a coup in Dec. 2008 following the death of President Lansana Conté, resulting in the suspension of the constitution and the dissolution of parliament. Domestic political instability is a major impediment to growth.

Donor assistance has been focused on improving the economic infrastructure, particularly in rural areas. The IMF approved a three-year Poverty Reduction and Growth Facility arrangement for Guinea in 2007 but review of it could not be completed because of the 2008 coup, which also delayed the completion of the Heavily Indebted Poor Countries initiative.

Weaknesses in governance, particularly corruption, continue to represent a challenge to development. An estimated 47% of the population was living under the poverty line in 2006.

Currency

The monetary unit is the Guinean franc (GNF). Inflation was 18.4% in 2008, falling to 4.7% in 2009. Foreign exchange reserves were US$95m. in Dec. 2005 and total money supply was 1,394.2bn. Guinean francs.

Budget

Revenue for 2006 was 2,397,800m. Guinean francs and expenditure 2,871,400m. Guinean francs.

Of total government revenue in 2006, mining sector revenue accounted for 28.2%, taxes on domestic production and trade 25.9% and taxes on international trade 18.2%. Current expenditure accounted for 76.2% of total expenditure and capital expenditure 23.4%.

VAT is 18%.

Performance

The economy contracted by 0.3% in 2009 but there was growth of 1.9% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$4.5bn.

Banking and Finance

In 1986 the Central Bank (Governor, Louncey Nabe) and commercial banking were restructured, and commercial banks returned to the private sector. There were seven commercial banks in 2002. There is an Islamic bank.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Guinea's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 0.1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

In 2007 installed capacity was 361,000 kW. Production was 973m. kWh in 2007; consumption per capita was 104 kWh.

Minerals

Mining accounted for 23% of state revenue in 2007. Guinea has the world's largest bauxite reserves, possessing nearly a third of the global total, and is the fifth largest producer. Output: bauxite (2008), 17,682,300 tonnes; alumina (2008), 593,900 tonnes; gold (2006), 16,922 kg. Diamond production in 2008, 445,400 carats. There are also deposits of granite, iron ore, chrome, copper, lead, manganese, molybdenum, nickel, platinum, uranium and zinc.

Agriculture

Subsistence agriculture supports about 70% of the population. There were around 2.2m. ha. of arable land in 2007 and 670,000 ha. of permanent crops. The chief crops (production, 2008, in 1,000 tonnes) are: rice, 1,534; cassava, 1,122; maize, 952; plantains (2007 estimate), 436; millet (2007 estimate), 323; groundnuts, 316; sugarcane (2007 estimate), 283; sweet potatoes (2007), 200; mangoes and guavas (2007 estimate), 165; bananas (2007 estimate), 160; cocoyams and taro, 105; pineapples, 102.

Livestock (2008): cattle, 4.15m.; goats, 1.53m.; sheep, 1.28m.; pigs, 82,000; chickens (2007 estimate), 18m.

Forestry

The area under forests in 2005 was 6.72m. ha., or 27.4% of the total land area. In 2007, 12.44m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries

In 2007 the total catch was 74,823 tonnes, almost entirely from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing accounted for 3.8% of GDP in 2006. Cement, corrugated and sheet iron, beer, soft drinks and cigarettes are produced.

Labour

In 1996 the labour force was 3,565,000 (53% males). The agricultural sector employs 80% of the workforce.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$3,247m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008
Imports c.i.f.	955.0	1,647.8	1,063.9	1,281.5	1,835.5
Exports f.o.b.	628.7	795.7	770.5	1,059.0	1,430.5

Main imports by value, 2004: machinery and apparatus, 28.0%; food, 20.6%; refined petroleum, 18.9%. Principal import suppliers, 2004: France, 14.6%; China, 9.6%; Netherlands, 6.8%; Belgium, 6.0%; USA, 5.9%. Main exports by value, 2004: bauxite, 39.0%; alumina, 20.3%; gold, 18.9%. Principal export markets, 2004: South Korea, 15.6%; Russia, 13.1%; Spain, 12.3%; Ireland, 9.1%; USA, 7.5%. Guinea is the world's largest exporter of bauxite.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2008 there were 6,758 km of roads, 35.4% of which were asphalted. In 2003 there were an estimated 47,500 passenger cars, 11,500 trucks and vans and 20,900 buses.

Rail

A railway connects Conakry with Kankan (662 km). A line 134 km long linking bauxite deposits at Sangaredi with Port Kamsar was opened in 1973 (carried 24m. tonnes in 2007) and a third line links Conakry and Fria (144 km; carried 1.2m. tonnes in 2004). The Kindia Bauxite Railway (102 km), linking Dédéle with Conakry, carried 2.3m. tonnes in 2007. A further railway used by the bauxite industry runs from Tougué to Dabola (130 km).

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Conakry (Gbessia). In 2003 there were scheduled flights to Abidjan, Accra, Bamako, Banjul, Bissau, Brussels, Casablanca, Dakar, Freetown, Lagos and Paris. In 2006 there were 103,200 air arrivals and 153,800 departures plus 9,600 passengers in transit. A total of 8.53m. tonnes of air freight were handled in 2006.

Shipping

There are ports at Conakry and for bauxite exports at Kamsar (opened 1973). Merchant shipping totalled 1,000 GT in 2008.

Telecommunications

The Société des Télécommunications de Guinée, which was privatized in 1995, became 100% state-owned again in 2008 after Telekom Malaysia sold its 60% stake in the company. There were 18,000 fixed telephone lines in 2010 (1.8 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 3.49m. in 2009. There were 9.6 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

There are tribunaux du premier degré at Conakry and Kankan, and a juge de paix at Nzérékoré. The High Court, Court of Appeal and Superior Tribunal of Cassation are at Conakry. The death penalty is in force, and was used in 2001 for the first time in 17 years.

The population in penal institutions in 2008 was 2,780 (28 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

In 2009 adult literacy was estimated at 39.5%. In 2007 there were 1,317,791 pupils with 29,049 teaching staff in primary schools; and 530,590 pupils with 13,907 teaching staff in secondary schools. In 2006 there were 42,711 students and 1,439 academic staff in tertiary education.

Besides French, there are eight official languages taught in schools: Fulani, Malinké, Susu, Kissi, Kpelle, Loma, Basari and Koniagi.

In 2005 public expenditure on education came to 1.7% of GNI.

Health

In 2006 there were 35 hospitals. There were (2006) 689 doctors, 109 pharmacists, 279 midwives and (2004) 4,061 nursing personnel.

RELIGION

79% of the population are Muslim, 9% Christian. Traditional animist beliefs are still found. In Feb. 2012 there was one cardinal in the Roman Catholic church.

CULTURE*World Heritage Sites

Guinea shares one site with Côte d'Ivoire on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Mount Nimba Strict Nature Reserve (inscribed on the list in 1981 and 1982). The dense forested slopes are home to viviparous toads and chimpanzees among other fauna.

Press

In 2006 there were two daily newspapers (circulation 25,000).

Tourism

In 2006, 46,000 non-resident tourists arrived at Conakry airport. Receipts (excluding passenger transport) came to US$30m. in 2004.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Portugal was the major power in the area throughout the colonial period. In 1974, after the Portuguese revolution, Portugal abandoned the struggle to keep Guinea-Bissau and independence was formally recognized on 10 Sept. 1974. In 1975 Cape Verde also became independent but the two countries remained separate sovereign states. On 14 Nov. 1980 a coup d'état was in part inspired by resentment in Guinea-Bissau over the privileges enjoyed by Cape Verdians. Guineans obtained a more prominent role under the new government. On 16 May 1984 a new constitution was approved based on Marxist principles but after 1986 there was a return to private enterprise in an attempt to solve critical economic problems and to lift the country out of poverty. A year-long civil war broke out in 1998 between army rebels and the country's long-time ruler. Neighbouring Senegal and Guinea sent troops in to aid the government. On 7 May 1999 President João Bernardo Vieira was ousted in a military coup led by former chief of staff Gen. Ansumane Mané, whom the president had dismissed in 1998. Following the coup Mané briefly headed a military junta before National Assembly speaker Malam Bacáí Sanhá took power as acting president. After presidential elections in Nov. 1999 and Jan. 2000 Kumba Ialá gained the presidency in a landslide victory. Marking a change towards a democratic future in Guinea-Bissau's politics, Ialá rejected a demand made by the outgoing junta for special consultative status following the elections. Kumba Ialá was overthrown in a coup in Sept. 2003 led by army chief of staff Gen. Veríssimo Correia Seabra. Vieira returned from exile to win the 2005 presidential election but was murdered in March 2009 by a group of soldiers following the assassination of his rival Batista Tagme Na Waie, the Army Chief of Staff. Malam Bacáí Sanhá became president in July 2009. In July and Aug. 2011 Prime Minister Carlos Gomes Júnior survived popular calls for his resignation amid spiralling food prices. In Jan. 2012 Sanhá died after a long illness. After the first round of polls two months later to find a successor, the military staged a coup, deposing the interim president.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guinea-Bissau is bounded by Senegal in the north, the Atlantic Ocean in the west and by Guinea in the east and south. It includes the adjacent archipelago of Bijagós. Area, 36,125 sq. km (13,948 sq. miles). 2009 census population, 1,520,830 (783,196 females); density, 42.1 per sq. km. In 2005, 70.4% of the population were rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 1.68m.

The area, population, and chief town of the capital and the eight regions:

Region	Area in sq. km	Population (2009 census)	Chief town
Bissau City	78	387,909	—
Bafatá	5,981	210,007	Bafatá
Biombo	840	97,120	Quinhámel
Bolama	2,624	34,563	Bolama
Cacheu	5,175	192,508	Cacheu
Gabú	9,150	215,530	Gabú
Oio	5,403	224,644	Farim
Quinara	3,138	63,610	Fulacunda
Tombali	3,736	94,939	Catió

The main ethnic groups were (1998) the Balante (30%), Fulani (20%), Manjaco (14%), Mandingo (13%) and Papeis (7%). Portuguese remains the official language, but Crioulo is spoken throughout the country.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 births (estimates), 65,000; deaths, 27,000. Estimated rates per 1,000 population, 2008: births, 41.2; deaths, 17.2. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.4%. Life expectancy, 2007: male, 46.0 years; female, 49.1. Infant mortality, 2005, 124 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 5.7 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The tropical climate has a wet season from June to Nov., when rains are abundant, but the hot, dry Harmattan wind blows from Dec. to May. Bissau, Jan. 76°F (24.4°C), July 80°F (26.7°C). Annual rainfall 78" (1,950 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was promulgated on 16 May 1984 and has been amended five times since, most recently in 1996. The Revolutionary Council, established following the 1980 coup, was replaced by a 15-member Council of State, while in April 1984 a new National People's Assembly was elected comprising 150 representatives elected by and from the directly-elected regional councils for five-year terms. The sole political movement was the Partido Africano da Independência da Guiné e Cabo Verde (PAIGC), but in Dec. 1990 a policy of 'integral multi-partyism' was announced, and in May 1991 the National Assembly voted unanimously to abolish the law making the PAIGC the sole party. The President is Head of State and Government and is elected for a five-year term. The National Assembly now has a maximum of 102 members (and currently 100).

In the wake of the coup of April 2012, the military junta suspended the constitution and dissolved parliament, and defied international demands for the constitution's restoration.

National Anthem

'Sol, suor, o verde e mar' ('Sun, sweat, the green and the sea'); words and tune by A. Lopes Cabral.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the first round of presidential elections held on 18 March 2012 former prime minister Carlos Gomes Júnior (African Party for the Independence of Guinea and Cape Verde/PAIGC) took 49.0% of votes cast, ahead of former president Mohamed Ialá Embaló (formerly known as Kumba Ialá) (Party for Social Renewal/PRS) with 23.4%, Manuel Serifo Nhamadjo (ind.) with 15.7% and former interim president Henrique Roas (ind.) with 5.4%. Five other candidates all received less than 4% of the votes cast. Turnout was 55%. A run-off between Carlos Gomes Júnior and Mohamed Ialá Embaló was scheduled for 29 April 2012 but following a coup on 12 April both candidates were arrested by the Military Command. The Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS) declared that presidential elections must be held within 12 months.

At the parliamentary elections on 16 Nov. 2008 turnout was 82%. The PAIGC won 49.8% of the vote (67 of 100 seats), the PRS 25.3% (28 seats) and the Republican Party for Independence and Development (PRID) 7.5% (3 seats). Two parties took one seat each.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Chairman of the Military Command: Gen. Mamadu Ture Kuruma (since 12 April 2012).

Head of National Transitional Council: Braima Sori Djalo (since 19 April 2012).

CURRENT LEADERS

Gen. Mamadu Ture Kuruma

Position

Leader of Military Junta

Introduction

Gen. Mamadu Ture Kuruma is the leader of the military junta that assumed power following a coup on 12 April 2012.

Early Life

Mamadu Ture Kuruma was deputy chief-of-staff in Guinea-Bissau's military at the time of the coup. In an emergency presidential election on 18 March 2012 following the death of Malam Bacai Sanhá, former prime minister Carlos Gomes Júnior won 49% of the vote, short of the absolute majority required to win outright. However, on 12 April the military, led by Kuruma, entered the capital, Bissau, and arrested Gomes and the interim president, Raimundo Pereira, before a run-off could be held.

Career in Office

Kuruma emerged as chairman of the self-styled military command and oversaw a deal with opposition parties to form a transitional government in which the junta retained control of the defence and interior portfolios. The coup was widely condemned by the international community.

Braima Sori Djalo

Position

Head of National Transitional Council

Introduction

Braima Sori Djalo was appointed head of the National Transitional Council in the wake of a military coup that deposed the interim president, Raimundo Pereira, on 12 April 2012. The council is charged with running the nation for up to two years, at the end of which elections for a new president and parliament are scheduled to be held.

Early Life

Prior to the coup, Braima Sori Djalo was a senior official in the country's leading opposition group, the Party for Social Renewal. In the wake of the military takeover, opposition parties made a deal with the junta to establish a transitional administration, with Sori Djalo the consensus choice for its leader. However, Manuel Serifo Nhamadjo, who was at the same time named as interim president but declined the position, complained that neither he nor Sori Djalo had been consulted in advance of their appointments.

Career in Office

ECOWAS, the West African regional organization, imposed sanctions on Guinea-Bissau on 1 May 2012 after talks to restore constitutional order failed. The African Union has also suspended the country.

DEFENCE

There is selective conscription. Defence expenditure totalled US$18m. in 2008 (US$12 per capita), representing 3.7% of GDP.

Army

Army personnel in 2007 numbered 6,800. There is a paramilitary Gendarmerie 2,000 strong.

Navy

The naval flotilla, based at Bissau, numbered an estimated 350 in 2007.

Air Force

Formation of a small Air Force began in 1978. Personnel (2007) 100 with three combat capable aircraft (MiG-17s).

ECONOMY

In 2006 agriculture accounted for 61.8% of GDP (the highest percentage of any country), industry 11.5% and services 26.8%.

Overview

Guinea-Bissau is one of the poorest economies in the world. Having gained independence from Portugal in 1974, its development has been hindered by political instability. Civil war from 1998–99 and a series of military coups culminating in the murder of President Vieira and the army chief of staff, Gen. Tagme Na Waie, in March 2009 have undermined the economic and social infrastructure.

90% of exports are from agriculture, in particular cashew nuts, the country's main export, leaving the economy susceptible to external shocks and adverse weather. Economic growth during the global downturn has been robust despite lower prices for cashews and falling remittances. However, the external debt-to-GDP ratio is high, at over 125%. The economy is reliant on donor support and is vulnerable to drug traffickers who use the country as a transshipment point for trade between Latin America and Europe.

Currency

On 2 May 1997 Guinea-Bissau joined the French Franc Zone, and the peso was replaced by the franc CFA at 65 pesos = one franc CFA. The franc CFA (XOF) has a parity rate of 655-957 francs CFA to one euro. Foreign exchange reserves were US$96m. in June 2005 and total money supply was 58,030m. francs CFA. Following inflation of 10.4% in 2008, there was deflation of 1.6% in 2009.

Budget

Revenue in 2009 was 95,900m. francs CFA; expenditure totalled 88,700m. francs CFA.

Performance

Real GDP growth in 2010 was 3.5% (3.0% in 2009). Total GDP in 2010 was US$0.9bn.

Banking and Finance

The bank of issue and the central bank is the regional Central Bank of West African States (BCEAO). The Governor is Tiémoko Meyliet Koné. There are four other banks (Banco da Africa Occidental; Banco Internacional de Guiné-Bissau; Caixa de Crédito de Guiné; Caixa Económica Postal).

The stock exchange of the Economic and Monetary Union of West Africa is in Abidjan.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 0.3 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked Guinea-Bissau 140th in the world out of 149 countries analysed, with 49.7%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007 was estimated at 21,000 kW. Production was about 70m. kWh in 2007; consumption per capita was an estimated 50 kWh.

Minerals

Mineral resources are not exploited. There are estimated to be 200m. tonnes of bauxite and 112m. tonnes of phosphate.

Agriculture

Agriculture employs 80% of the labour force. There were an estimated 300,000 ha. of arable land in 2007 and 250,000 ha. of permanent crops. Chief crops (production, 2003 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes) are: rice, 97; cashew nuts, 80; coconuts, 46; plantains, 38; cassava, 34; millet, 22; maize, 20. Livestock (2003 estimates): cattle, 520,000; pigs, 360,000; goats, 300,000; sheep, 290,000; chickens, 2m.

Forestry

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

First settled by the Dutch West Indian Company about 1620, the territory was captured by Britain to which it was ceded in 1814 and named British Guiana. African slaves were transported to Guyana in the 18th century to work the sugar plantations, with East Indian and Chinese indentured labourers following in the 19th century. From 1950 the anti-colonial struggle was spearheaded by the People's Progressive Party (PPP) led by Cheddi Jagan and Forbes Burnham. By the time internal autonomy was granted in 1961 Burnham had split with Jagan to form the more moderate People's National Congress (PNC). Guyana became an independent member of the Commonwealth in 1966 with Burnham as the first prime minister, later president. By the 1980s, desperate economic straits had forced Guyana to seek outside help which came on condition of restoring free elections. Dr Jagan returned to power in 1992. Following his death in March 1997 his wife, Janet Jagan, was sworn in as president.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guyana is situated on the northeast coast of Latin America on the Atlantic Ocean, with Suriname on the east, Venezuela on the west and Brazil on the south and west. Area, 214,999 sq. km (83,013 sq. miles). In 2002 the census population was 751,223; density 3.5 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 763,000.

Guyana has the highest proportion of rural population in South America, with only 28.2% living in urban areas in 2005. Ethnic groups by origin: 49% Indian, 36% African, 7% mixed race, 7% Amerindian and 1% others. The capital is Georgetown (2002 census population, 33,366; urban agglomeration, 134,497); other towns are Linden, New Amsterdam, Anna Regina and Corriverton.

Venezuela demanded the return of the Essequibo region in 1963 (nearly 75% of the area of Guyana). It was finally agreed in March 1983 that the UN Secretary-General should mediate, but the dispute is ongoing. There is also an ongoing unresolved claim by Suriname for the return of a triangle of uninhabited rainforest between the New River and the Courantyne River, near the Brazilian border. In Sept. 2007 the UN settled a long-standing maritime boundary dispute between Guyana and Suriname. The coastal area off both countries is believed to hold significant oil and gas deposits.

The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009 estimates: births, 14,000; deaths, 5,000. Rates, 2009 estimates (per 1,000 population): birth, 18; death, 6. Life expectancy at birth in 2007: male 63.7 years and female 69.6 years. Annual population growth rate, 2000–05, 0.4%. Infant mortality, 2005, 47 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 2.3 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, with rainy seasons from April to July and Nov. to Jan. Humidity is high all the year but temperatures are moderated by sea-breezes. Rainfall increases from 90" (2,280 mm) on the coast to 140" (3,560 mm) in the forest zone. Georgetown, Jan. 79°F (26.1°C), July 81°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 87" (2,175 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was promulgated in Oct. 1980. There is an Executive Presidency and a National Assembly. The president is elected by simple majority vote as the designated candidate of a party list in parliamentary elections; there are no term limits. The National Assembly has 65 elected members who serve five-year terms, plus not more than four non-voting members and two non-voting parliamentary secretaries appointed by the president. Of the 65 elected members, 25 are elected in multi-seat constituencies and 40 through a party-list proportional representation system.

National Anthem

'Dear land of Guyana'; words by A. L. Luker, tune by R. Potter.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Donald Ramotar and the People's Progressive Party/Civic (PPP/C) won the presidential and parliamentary elections of 28 Nov. 2011. In the presidential election Donald Ramotar received 166,340 votes (48.6% of the vote), with David A. Granger of A Partnership for National Unity receiving 139,678 (40.8%) and Khemraj Ramjattan of Alliance for Change 35,333 (10.3%). The PPP/C won 32 seats in the parliamentary election, followed by A Partnership for National Unity 26 and Alliance for Change 7. Turnout was 72.9%.

CURRENT LEADERS

Donald Ramotar

Position

President

Introduction

Donald Ramotar became president in Dec. 2011, succeeding Bharrat Jagdeo. An economist, Ramotar has spent most of his career working within the socialist People's Progressive Party/Civic (PPP/C), whose support base is the Indo-Guyanese community. The party has been in power since 1992 but lost its parliamentary majority for the first time at the Nov. 2011 elections.

Early Life

Donald Rabindranauth Ramotar was born on 22 Oct. 1950 in Guyana's Essequibo-West Demerara province. He was at school in Georgetown and graduated in economics from the University of Guyana before taking a masters degree at the Patrice Lumumba Peoples' Friendship University in Moscow.

Returning to Guyana, he worked in the timber industry and, from 1966, the Guyana Import-Export Company, a commercial venture under the opposition PPP/C. Between 1975 and 1983 Ramotar was the manager of Freedom House, the Georgetown headquarters of the PPP/C, before becoming the editor of a journal, Problems of Peace and Socialism.

He served as international secretary of the Guyana Agricultural Workers' Union (GAWU) between 1988 and 1993, when he assumed the role of PPP/C executive secretary. The party had been restored to power in Oct. 1992 under Cheddi Jagan. Following President Jagan's death in March 1997, Ramotar replaced him as party general secretary, a post he still holds. Janet Jagan led the PPP/C to victory in the Dec. 1997 elections although she was forced to retire through ill-health in 1999 and was succeeded by Bharrat Jagdeo.

Ramotar has served on the Africa Caribbean Pacific (ACP)-EU Joint Parliamentary Assembly and on several corporate boards. In April 2011 he was selected as the PPP/C's presidential candidate. Later that month he was appointed political adviser to President Jagdeo, a move criticized by the opposition Partnership for National Unity (APNU).

Ramotar emerged victorious in the election on 28 Nov. 2011 and his PPP/C took 32 seats in parliament (compared with 26 for APNU) to form a minority administration, the first since independence in 1966.

Career in Office

Ramotar was sworn in as president on 3 Dec. 2011. He pledged to build on the achievements of the previous administration, developing the country's infrastructure and raising competitiveness while reducing poverty within a programme agreed with international financial institutions. While Ramotar has called for unity, Guyana's politics remains divided on ethnic lines and relations between the two main parties are frequently hostile.

DEFENCE

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$67m. (US$89 per capita), representing 5.8% of GDP. The army, navy and air force are combined in a 1,100-strong Guyana Defence Force.

Army

The Guyana Army had (2007) a strength of 1,400 including 500 reserves. There is a paramilitary Guyana People's Militia approximately 1,500 strong.

Navy

The Coast Guard is an integral part of the Guyana Defence Force. In 2007 it had 100 personnel and five patrol and coastal combatants.

Air Force

The Air Command has no combat capable aircraft. It was equipped in 2007 with one light aircraft and two helicopters. Personnel (2007) 100.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 31% of GDP in 2005, industry 25% and services 44%.

Overview

Guyana has experienced good macroeconomic performance in recent years. Growth that is largely attributable to the mining and agricultural sectors has helped stabilize the exchange rate, kept inflation low and precipitated closer co-operation with international organizations. The Inter-American Development Bank cancelled about US$470m. of debt in 2007. This along with debt relief from other donors saw the debt-to-GDP ratio decline from 183% in 2006 to 120% in 2007.

Agriculture remains important although its contribution to GDP fell from 30.8% in 2002 to 24.3% in 2010. A shortage of skilled labour is a problem, along with a sub-standard infrastructure. Main exports include sugar, gold, bauxite, shrimp, timber and rice. Increasingly, the country benefits from high FDI inflows, especially in the mining sector. Guyana has been a member of CARICOM since 1973 and entered the Caricom Single Market and Economy in 2006.

Protecting the environment, managing sea level rise, improving governance and preventing crime are key for future growth. The country launched a Low Carbon Development Strategy in 2010, outlining approaches to promoting economic development while combating climate change.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Guyana dollar (GYD) of 100 cents. Inflation was 8.1% in 2008 and 3.0% in 2009. Foreign exchange reserves were US$223m. in July 2005 and total money supply was G$35.3bn.

Budget

Revenues in 2008 totalled G$99,513m. (current revenue, 82.9%) and expenditures G$105,838m. (current expenditure, 59.5%).

VAT of 16% was introduced in 2007.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 3.3% in 2009 and 4.4% in 2010. Total GDP was US$2.2bn. in 2010.

Banking and Finance

The bank of issue is the Bank of Guyana (Governor, Lawrence Williams), established 1965. There are five commercial banks and three foreign-owned. At Dec. 2009 the total assets of commercial banks were G$253,760m. Savings deposits were G$130,764m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Guyana's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 2.2 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

Capacity in 2007 was 0.3m. kW. In 2007 production was 867m. kWh and consumption per capita 1,154 kWh.

Minerals

Placer gold mining commenced in 1884, and was followed by diamond mining in 1887. In 2007 output of bauxite was 2,242,928 tonnes and of gold 7,412 kg. Other minerals include copper, tungsten, iron, nickel, quartz and molybdenum.

Agriculture

In 2007 Guyana had an estimated 420,000 ha. of arable land and 30,000 ha. of permanent crops. Agricultural production, 2007 unless otherwise indicated (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 3,099; rice (2009), 360; coconuts, 70; cassava, 20; maize (estimate), 8; pumpkins and squash (estimate), 7; oranges (estimate), 6; bananas, 6; green beans, 5; mangoes and guavas, 4.

Livestock (2008 estimate): sheep, 130,000; cattle, 110,000; goats, 79,000; pigs, 13,500; chickens, 20m. Livestock products, 2009: meat, 29,000 tonnes; milk, 33m. litres; eggs, 19m. units.

Forestry

In 2007 the area under forests totalled 16.38m. ha. (76.2% of the land area). Timber production in 2007 was 426,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries

Fish landings in 2005 came to 53,372 tonnes, of which 99% was from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

The main industries are agro-processing (particularly sugar and rice) and mining (notably gold and bauxite). Production: sugar (2009), 233,736 tonnes; flour (2008), 29,425 tonnes; rum (2008), 14.2m. litres; beer (2008), 8.2m. litres; soft drinks (2006), 4,050,000 cases; clothes (2008), 1,256,000 items; footwear (2008), 25,901 pairs; margarine (2008), 1,528,121 kg; edible oil (2005), 928,500 litres; paint (2008), 2,488,667 litres; sawnwood (2007), 74,000 cu. metres.

Labour

In 2010 the estimated economically active population was 342,000 (66% males).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Guyana's external debt in 2007 was US$734m.

Imports and Exports

In 2008 imports were valued at US$1,289m. and exports at US$782m. Main commodities imported, 2004: petroleum, petroleum products and related materials, 27.4%; machinery and transport equipment, 23.0%; manufactured goods, 16.3%; food and live animals, 10.9%. Principal commodities exported, 2004: sugar, 20.5%; gold, 18.4%; diamonds, 16.4%; fish, crustaceans and molluscs, 11.4%. Rice, timber and bauxite are also exported. Major import suppliers, 2004: USA, 30%; Trinidad and Tobago, 27%; Netherlands Antilles, 9%; Japan, 6%; UK, 5%. Main export markets in 2004: Canada, 19%; USA, 16%; Belgium, 14%; UK, 12%; Trinidad and Tobago, 7%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2002 there were an estimated 7,970 km of roads, of which 590 km were paved. In 2008 there were 44,700 passenger cars in use, plus 28,100 lorries and vans, and 37,100 motorcycles and mopeds.

Rail

There is a government-owned railway in the North West District, while the Guyana Mining Enterprise operates a standard gauge railway of 133 km from Linden on the Demerara River to Ituni and Coomacka.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Georgetown (Timehri), which handled 465,962 passengers in 2007. In 2003 there were direct flights to Anguilla, Antigua, Barbados, Dominica, Miami, New York, Paramaribo, Port of Spain, St Kitts and the British Virgin Islands.

Shipping

The major port is Georgetown; there are two other ports. In Jan. 2009 there were 28 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 25,000 GT. There are 217 nautical miles of river navigation. There are ferry services across the mouths of the Demerara, Berbice and Essequibo rivers.

Telecommunications

The inland public telegraph and radio communication services are operated by the Guyana Telephone and Telegraph Company Ltd. In 2005 there were 360,100 telephone subscribers, equivalent to 479.4 per 1,000 population, of which 281,400 were mobile phone subscribers. There were 29,000 PCs (or 38.6 for every 1,000 persons) in use in 2005 and 160,000 internet users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The law, both civil and criminal, is based on the common and statute law of England, save that the principles of the Roman-Dutch law have been retained for the registration, conveyance and mortgaging of land.

The Supreme Court of Judicature consists of a Court of Appeal, a High Court and a number of courts of summary jurisdiction. Guyana was one of ten countries to sign an agreement in Feb. 2001 establishing a Caribbean Court of Justice to replace the British Privy Council as the highest civil and criminal court having ended appeals to the Privy Council when it gained independence in 1970. In the meantime the number of signatories has risen to twelve. The court was inaugurated at Port-of-Spain, Trinidad on 16 April 2005 at which point it replaced the Guyana Court of Appeal as the country's final court of appeal.

In 2006 there were 2,756 reported serious crimes, including 173 homicides. The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2006 was 1,955 (260 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

In 2004-05 there were 428 pre-primary schools with 1,958 teachers for 31,730 pupils; 440 primary schools with 4,013 teachers for 113,971 pupils; and 349 secondary schools with 3,392 teachers for 65,638 pupils. In 2004-05 there were 7,689 students at university level.

Adult literacy in 2001 was 98.6% (male, 99.0%; female, 98.2%). The literacy rates are the highest in South America. An OECD report published in 2005 showed that Guyana loses a greater proportion of its graduates (83%) to OECD member countries than any other non-OECD member.

In 2004–05 total expenditure on education came to 7.4% of GNP and 12.4% of total government spending.

Health

In 2006–07 there were 35 hospitals (seven private), 135 health centres and 207 health posts. There were 1,836 hospital beds in 2006–07. There were 5.1 physicians per 10,000 inhabitants in 2007 and 9.9 nurses per 10,000 inhabitants.

RELIGION

In 2002, 28.8% of the population were Hindus, 17.0% Pentecostals, 8.1% Roman Catholics, 7.3% Muslims and 7.0% Anglicans. There were also significant numbers of other Christians.

CULTURE

Press

In 2008 there were three daily newspapers (the state-owned Guyana Chronicle and the privately-owned Kaieteur News and Stabroek News) with a combined average daily circulation of 32,000.

Tourism

117,000 non-resident tourists arrived at Timehri airport in 2005; receipts totalled US$37m.

Festivals

There are a number of Christian, Hindu and Muslim festivals throughout the year.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In the 16th century, Spain imported large numbers of African slaves whose descendants now populate the country. The colony subsequently fell under French rule. In 1791 a slave uprising led to the 13-year-long Haitian Revolution. In 1801 Toussaint Louverture, one of the leaders of the revolution, succeeded in eradicating slavery. He proclaimed himself governor-general for life over the whole island. He was captured and sent to France, but Jean-Jacques Dessalines, one of his generals, led the final battle that defeated Napoleon's forces. The newly-named Haiti declared its independence on 1 Jan. 1804, becoming the first independent black republic in the world. Ruled by a succession of self-appointed monarchs, Haiti became a republic in the mid-19th century. From 1915 to 1934 Haiti was under United States occupation.

A corrupt regime was dominated by François Duvalier from 1957 to 1964 when he was succeeded by his son, Jean-Claude Duvalier. He fled the country on 7 Feb. 1986. After a period of military rule, Father Jean-Bertrand Aristide was elected president in Dec. 1990.

On 30 Sept. 1991 President Aristide was deposed by a military junta and went into exile. Under international pressure, parliament again recognized Aristide as president in June 1993. However, despite a UN led naval blockade, the junta showed no sign of stepping down. 20,000 US troops moved into Haiti on 19 Sept. in an uncontested occupation. President Aristide returned to office on 15 Oct. 1994 and on 1 April 1995 a UN peacekeeping force (MANUH) took over from the US military mission. Aristide was succeeded by René Préval who was generally assumed to be a stand-in for his predecessor. Jean-Bertrand Aristide subsequently won the presidential elections held in Nov. 2000. In Dec. 2001 there was an unsuccessful coup led by former police and army officers. After armed rebels took control of the north of the country President Aristide stood down in Feb. 2004 and fled into exile.

After a period of interim government, René Préval was elected president for a second time in 2006. In July 2009 the World Bank and IMF cancelled US$1.2bn. (80%) of the national debt. In Jan. 2010 an earthquake of magnitude 7.0 hit the capital, Port-au-Prince, and its surrounding region, killing at least 217,000 people, displacing over 1m. and seriously undermining Haiti's economic prospects.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Haiti is bounded in the east by the Dominican Republic, to the north by the Atlantic and elsewhere by the Caribbean Sea. The area is 27,065 sq. km (10,450 sq. miles). The Île de la Gonâve, some 40 miles long, lies in the gulf of the same name. Among other islands is La Tortue, off the north peninsula. Census population, 2003, 8,373,750; density, 309 per sq. km. The United Nations population estimate for 2003 was 9,075,000. On 1 July 2009 the official population estimate was 9,923,243. In 2005, 61.2% of the population were rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 10.65m.

Areas, populations and chief towns of the ten departments:

Department	Area (in sq. km)	2009 estimated population	Chief town
Artibonite	4,887	1,571,020	Gonaïves

The capital is Port-au-Prince (2009 estimated population, 875,978; urban agglomeration, 2,296,386); the other main cities are Gonaïves (228,725 in 2009) and Cap Haïtien (155,505). Most of the population is of African or mixed origin.

The official languages are French and Créole. Créole is spoken by all Haitians; French by only a small minority.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009 estimates: births, 266,000; deaths, 89,000. Rates, 2009 estimates (per 1,000 population): birth, 27; death, 9. Annual population growth rate, 1998–2008, 1.7%. Expectation of life at birth, 2007, 59.1 years for males and 62.9 years for females. Infant mortality, 2005, 83 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 3.5 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate, but the central mountains can cause semi-arid conditions in their lee. There are rainy seasons from April to June and Aug. to Nov. Hurricanes and severe thunderstorms can occur. The annual temperature range is small. Port-au-Prince, Jan. 77°F (25°C), July 84°F (28.9°C). Annual rainfall 53" (1,321 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1987 constitution, ratified by a referendum, provides for a bicameral legislature (a 99-member Chamber of Deputies and a 30-member Senate), and an executive President, directly elected for a five-year term. The President can stand for a second term but only after a five-year interval. The constitution was suspended in 1988 but the country returned to constitutional rule in Oct. 1994.

National Anthem

'La Dessalinienne' ('The Dessalines Song'); words by J. Lhérisson, tune by N. Geffrard.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 28 Nov. 2010. Mirlande Manigat won 31.4% of the vote, Jude Célestin (President Préval's chosen successor) 22.5% and Michel Martelly 21.8%. There were 16 other candidates. There were widespread claims of voting irregularities. In the second round, held on 20 March 2011, Michel Martelly won with 67.6% of the vote against 31.7% for Mirlande Manigat.

Parliamentary elections were also held on 28 Nov. 2010 and 20 March 2011. In the vote for the Chamber of Deputies, Unity won 33 seats, Alternative for Progress and Democracy 14, Ansanm Nou Fò 9, Haiti in Action 8, Lavni Organisation 7 and Rally 4. Independents won 2 seats. The remaining seats went to ten smaller parties. Elections for 11 seats in the Senate were held on the same days. Alternative for Progress and Democracy took 5 seats, Unity 5 and Lavni Organisation 1.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

President: Michel Martelly; b. 1961 (Farmers' Response Party; sworn in 14 May 2011).

Prime Minister: Laurent Lamothe; b. 1972 (since May 2012).

As we go to press, a new government has yet to be formed. For details see www.statesmansyearbook.com.

CURRENT LEADERS

Michel Martelly

Position

President

Introduction

Michel Martelly was elected president of Haiti in March 2011. One of Haiti's most popular performers of Haitian dance music, he has strong support among younger voters.

Early Life

Born on 12 Feb. 1961 in Port-au-Prince, Martelly is the son of an oil company executive. Educated at a Roman Catholic school in Port-au-Prince, he attended junior colleges in the USA but never graduated. After briefly working for an American construction company, Martelly enlisted at the Haitian Military Academy. In 1986 he embarked upon a musical career as a keyboardist and singer, playing Haitian compas dance music in Port-au-Prince. He was known by the stage name 'Sweet Micky'.

Haiti's election of Nov. 2010 was its first since the devastating Jan. 2010 earthquake and was characterized by disorganization, voter intimidation and fraud according to foreign observers. Initially, Martelly was not included in the run-off poll but took his place when Jude Célestin, the candidate for the ruling Unity party, withdrew.

Despite his lack of a political background, voters brought into Martelly's vision of change for a country ravaged by poverty and political instability. He won 68% of the vote in the March run-off and was sworn into office on 14 May 2011.

Career in Office

Despite voter turnout of only 25%, his defeated opponent, the conservative former first lady Mirlande Manigat, did not challenge the result. The incumbent prime minister, Jean-Max Bellerive, resigned on 15 May 2011 to allow Martelly to choose his own premier. However, Martelly's first two nominations for premier, the entrepreneur Daniel Rouzier and the former justice minister Bernard Gousse, were rejected by parliament in June and Aug. 2011 respectively. Bellerive remained in a caretaker capacity until the appointment of Garry Conille as prime minister in Oct. 2011.

Martelly pledged to improve the faltering post-earthquake reconstruction programme. In Aug. 2011 he announced plans to reinstate the military, which had been disbanded by former president Jean-Bertrand Aristide. In Sept. 2011 he created an advisory board aimed at improving the economy and in Dec. 2011 he announced voting reforms.

Martelly has been criticized for his handling of the UN peacekeeping mission in Haiti. From Sept. 2010 there were popular anti-UN protests in the capital after an outbreak of cholera was blamed on UN staff. The Senate in response passed a resolution for UN withdrawal, although the mission remains in operation.

Martelly's tenure hit further problems when Conille resigned on 24 Feb. 2012 after challenging Martelly's refusal to co-operate with an investigation into whether some government officials held dual nationality in contravention of the constitution. Martelly's nomination as Conille's successor was the foreign minister, Laurent Lamothe, who was confirmed in the post on 4 May 2012.

DEFENCE

After the restoration of civilian rule in 1994 the armed forces and police were disbanded and an Interim Public Security Force formed, although this was later also dissolved. In 1995 a new police force—Police Nationale d'Haiti (PNH)—was recruited from former military personnel and others not implicated in human rights violations. The PNH currently has about 2,000 members.

A UN peacekeeping force, MINUSTAH, has been in Haiti since 2004. Following the earthquake of Jan. 2010 the UN Security Council passed a resolution recommending an increase in overall force levels to support the immediate recovery, reconstruction and stability efforts in the country. As of Jan. 2012 MINUSTAH consisted of 11,241 uniformed personnel.

In 2003 defence expenditure totalled US$22m. (US$3 per capita), representing 0.8% of GDP.

Army

The Army was disbanded in 1995 but there are now plans to revive it.

Navy

There is a small Coast Guard, which was created in 1996 and is a specialized unit of the PNH.

Air Force

The Air Force was disbanded in 1995.

ECONOMY

Trade and restaurants accounted for 26.8% of GDP in 2006–07, agriculture and forestry 25.3%, and finance and real estate 12.1%.

Haiti featured among the ten most corrupt countries in the world in a 2011 survey of 183 countries carried out by the anti-corruption organization Transparency International.

Overview

Haiti is the poorest economy in the western hemisphere following decades of economic decline and instability. Real per capita GDP has declined on average by 0.7% per year over the past 40 years. The economy has been characterized by macroeconomic instability, rampant inflation and susceptibility to external shocks. Social and environmental indicators are both poor.

Nonetheless, performance in recent years suggested some progress was being made, with inflation falling and GDP recording some modest growth. However, on 12 Jan. 2010 an earthquake hit Haiti, killing around 217 000, as well as destroying several government ministries and 25,000 commercial buildings. Over US$2bn. of relief funding was pledged within two weeks of the disaster but officials estimated that recovery will likely take a decade and cost, according to the Inter-American Development Bank, between US$8–14bn.

Currency

The unit of currency is the gourde (HTG) of 100 centimes. Inflation was 14.4% in 2008, falling to 3.4% in 2009. In July 2005 foreign exchange reserves were US$74m. and total money supply was 19,263m. gourdes.

Budget

The fiscal year begins on 1 Oct. In 2008–09 revenues were US$1,206m. and expenditures US$1,536m.

Performance

The economy grew by 0.8% in 2008 and 2.9% in 2009. However, the earthquake of Jan. 2010 and the fragile global economic situation led to the economy contracting by 5.4% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$6.7bn.

Banking and Finance

The Banque Nationale de la République d'Haïti is the central bank and bank of issue (Governor, Charles Castel). In 1999 there were 12 commercial banks (three foreign-owned) and a development bank.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 0.2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Power cuts are common. Installed capacity was 0.2m. kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was 469m. kWh, with consumption per capita 54 kWh.

Minerals

Until the supply was exhausted in the 1970s, a small quantity of bauxite was mined.

Agriculture

There were 780,000 ha. of arable land in 2001 and 320,000 ha. of permanent crops. 65% of the workforce, mainly smallholders, make a living by agriculture carried on in seven large plains, from 0.2m. to 25,000 acres, and in 15 smaller plains down to 2,000 acres. Irrigation is used in some areas and in 2001 covered 75,000 ha. The main crops are (2003 production estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 1,050; cassava, 340; bananas, 300; plantains, 283; mangoes, 261; yams, 199; maize, 198; sweet potatoes, 175; rice, 105; sorghum, 95. Livestock (2003 estimates): goats, 1.9m.; cattle, 1.5m.; pigs, 1.0m.; horses, 500,000; chickens, 6m.

Forestry

The area under forests in 2005 was 105,000 ha., or 3.8% of the total land area. In 2007, 2.26m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries

The estimated total catch in 2008 was 10,000 tonnes, of which 97% was from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing is largely based on the assembly of imported components: toys, sports equipment, clothing, electronic and electrical equipment. Textiles, steel, soap, chemicals, paint and shoes are also produced. Many jobs were lost to other Central American and Caribbean countries during the 1991–94 trade embargo, after President Aristide was deposed.

Labour

In 1996 the labour force was 3,209,000 (57% males). The unemployment rate in 2009 was around 70%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$1,323m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

In 2006 imports totalled US$1,548.2m. and exports US$494.4m. The leading imports are petroleum products, foodstuffs, textiles, machinery, animal and vegetable oils, chemicals, pharmaceuticals, raw materials for transformation industries and vehicles. The USA is by far the leading trading partner. Main import suppliers in 1999 were the USA, 60%; Dominican Republic, 4%; France, 3%; Japan, 3%. The USA accounted for 90% of exports in 1999.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Total length of roads was estimated at 4,160 km in 2002, of which 1,010 km were surfaced. There were 58,100 passenger cars in 2002 (7.1 per 1,000 inhabitants), plus 39,100 trucks and vans.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Port-au-Prince. Cap Haïtien also has scheduled flights to the Turks and Caicos Islands. In 2003 there were international flights to Aruba, Boston, Cayenne, Curaçao, Fort de France, Kingston, Miami, Montego Bay, Montreal, New York, Panama City, Paramaribo, Pointe-à-Pitre, Raleigh/Durham, Sint Maarten, Santiago (Cuba), Santiago (Dominican Republic), Santo Domingo and Washington, D.C. In 2001 Port-au-Prince handled 913,022 passengers (771,656 on international flights) and 13,455 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

Port-au-Prince and Cap Haïtien are the principal ports, and there are 12 minor ports. In Jan. 2009 there were three ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 2,000 GT.

Telecommunications

The state telecommunications agency is Teleco. There were 108,300 fixed telephone lines in 2009 (11 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 3.65m. in 2009. There were 83.7 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 100,000 in 2007 (ten per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Court of Cassation is the highest court in the judicial system. There are four Courts of Appeal and four Civil Courts. Judges are appointed by the President. The legal system is basically French.

The population in penal institutions in Oct. 2007 was 6,370 (71 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

The adult literacy rate in 2006 was an estimated 48.7% (53.4% among males and 44.6% among females). Education is divided into nine years 'education fondamentale', followed by four years to 'Baccalaureate' and university/higher education. The school system is based on the French system and instruction is in French and Créole. About 20% of education is provided by state schools; the remaining 80% by private schools, including Church and Mission schools.

In 1994–95 there were 360 primary schools (221 state, 139 religious), 21 public lycées, 123 private secondary schools, 18 vocational training centres and 42 domestic science centres.

There is a state university, several private universities and an Institute of Administration and Management.

In 2000–01 total expenditure on education came to 1.1% of GNP and 10.9% of total government spending.

Health

In 1998 there were 1,949 physicians and 834 nursing and midwifery personnel. There were eight beds per 10,000 population in 2000. Much of the health care infrastructure was destroyed in the earthquake of Jan. 2010. There were 44 health institutions (government and mixed) operating in May 2010.

RELIGION

Since the Concordat of 1860 Roman Catholicism has been given special recognition, under an archbishop with nine bishops. The Episcopal Church has one bishop. 60% of the population are nominally Roman Catholic, while other Christian churches number perhaps 20%. Probably two-thirds of the population to some extent adhere to Voodoo, recognized as an official religion in 2003.

CULTURE*World Heritage Sites

Haiti has one site on the UNESCO World Heritage List: National History Park—Citadel, Sans-Souci, Ramiers (inscribed on the list in 1982), 19th century monuments to independence.

Press

There were two daily newspapers in 2006 with a combined circulation of 8,000.

Tourism

In 2005 there were 112,267 tourists, spending US$110m. (excluding passenger transport). Cruise passenger arrivals in 2005 numbered 368,021. There are only about 1,000 hotel rooms in the whole country.

DIPLOMATIC REPRESENTATIVES

The Haitian Embassy in London closed on 30 March 1987.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Discovered by Columbus in 1502, Honduras was ruled by Spain until independence in 1821. Political instability was endemic throughout the 19th and most of the 20th century. The end of military rule seemed to come in 1981 when a general election gave victory to the more liberal and non-military party, PLH (Partido Liberal de Honduras). However, power remained with the armed forces. Internal unrest continued into the 1990s with politicians and military leaders at loggerheads, particularly over attempts to investigate violations of human rights. In Oct. 1998 Honduras was devastated by Hurricane Mitch, the worst natural disaster to hit the area in modern times. In June 2009 President Manuel Zelaya was deposed in a military coup, leading to international condemnation and the suspension of aid. A presidential poll was held in Nov. 2009, with Porfirio Lobo Sosa of the National Party emerging victorious after Zelaya's refusal to recognize the election. The following month Congress rejected proposals to return Zelaya to power and in Jan. 2010 Porfirio Lobo was sworn in as Zelaya went into exile.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Honduras is bounded in the north by the Caribbean, east and southeast by Nicaragua, west by Guatemala, southwest by El Salvador and south by the Pacific Ocean. The area is 112,492 sq. km (43,433 sq. miles). In 2001 the census population was 6,535,344 (3,304,386 females), giving a density of 58.1 per sq. km. Estimate, 2010, 7-60m. In 2005, 53.5% of the population lived in rural areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 8-39m.

The chief cities and towns are (2001 census populations): Tegucigalpa, the capital (819,867), San Pedro Sula (483,384), La Ceiba (126,721), Choloma (126,042), El Progreso (94,797), Choluteca (76,135), Comayagua (60,078), Danlí (47,310), Catacamas (35,995), Juticalpa (33,698).

Areas and 2001 populations of the 18 departments:

Department	Area (in sq. km)	Population
Atlántida	4,372	344,099
Choluteca	3,923	390,085
Colón	4,360	246,708
Comayagua	8,249	352,881

Yoro	7,781	465,414

The official language is Spanish. The Spanish-speaking population is of mixed Spanish and Amerindian descent (87%), with 6% Amerindians.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009 estimates: births, 201,000; deaths, 37,000. Rates, 2009 estimates (per 1,000 population): birth, 27; death, 5. 2007 life expectancy, 69.6 years for men and 74.4 for women. Annual population growth rate, 1998–2008, 2.0%. Infant mortality, 2005, 31 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 3.3 births per woman. Abortion is illegal.

CLIMATE

The climate is tropical, with a small annual range of temperature but with high rainfall. Upland areas have two wet seasons, from May to July and in Sept. and Oct. The Caribbean Coast has most rain in Dec. and Jan. and temperatures are generally higher than inland. Tegucigalpa, Jan. 66°F (19°C), July 74°F (23.3°C). Annual rainfall 64" (1,621 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present Constitution came into force in 1982 and was amended in 1995. The President is elected for a single four-year term. Members of the National Congress (total 128 seats) and municipal mayors are elected simultaneously on a proportional basis, according to combined votes cast for the Presidential candidate of their party.

In March 2009 the incumbent president, Manuel Zelaya, proposed a referendum to approve an assembly to revise the constitution. His opponents feared that he was seeking revisions to allow him to stand for re-election. A constitutional crisis culminated in a military coup and Zelaya's exile to Costa Rica.

National Anthem

'Tu bandera' ('Thy Banner'); words by A. C. Coello, tune by C. Hartling.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential and parliamentary elections took place on 29 Nov. 2009. In the presidential elections Porfirio Lobo Sosa (National Party, PNH) won 56.5% of votes cast against 38.1% for his chief rival, Elvin Santos (Liberal Party, PLH). There were three other candidates. Turnout was 50.0%. In the elections to the National Congress held on the same day the National Party won 71 of 128 seats, the Liberal Party 45, the Christian Democratic Party 5, Democratic Unification Party 4 and the Innovation and Unity Party 3.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

In March 2012 the government consisted of:

President: Porfirio Lobo Sosa; b. 1947 (PNH; sworn in 27 Jan. 2010).

Vice-Presidents: María Antonieta de Bográn (also Minister of the Presidency); Marlón Tábora.

CURRENT LEADERS

Porfirio Lobo Sosa

Position

President

Introduction

Porfirio Lobo Sosa was elected president on 29 Nov. 2009, ending months of political turmoil that followed the ousting of President Zelaya in a coup. The right-wing former agronomist has faced the challenge of uniting the country and re-establishing regional alliances.

Early Life

Porfirio Lobo Sosa was born on 22 Dec. 1947 in Trujillo, Colón district, the son of a wealthy politician who served in Honduras' National Congress in the 1950s. Lobo grew up near Juticalpa, Olancho, attending a local Catholic school and then the San Francisco Institute of Tegucigalpa from 1961–65. He went to the University of Miami in 1966 to study business administration before returning to Honduras in 1970 to work in his family's agricultural business and to teach politics and economics at a college in Juticalpa. In the 1970s Lobo travelled to the Soviet Union and enrolled at Patrice Lumumba University in Moscow. He is reputed to have joined the Communist Party of Honduras on his return before making a political about-turn to join the right-wing National Party (PNH), becoming president of the party's Olancho branch in 1986.

In the general election of Nov. 1989 Lobo secured a seat in the National Congress for the PNH. He worked in the department for agriculture and economics under the new president, Rafael Leonardo Callejas, and headed the corporation for forestry development until 1994. Lobo was elected president of the PNH's central committee in June 1999 and served as president of congress from 2002–06. Selected as the PNH candidate to contest the presidential election of 27 Nov. 2005, he took a hard line on crime, promising the death penalty for convicted gang members. This contrasted with the approach of his rival, José Manuel Zelaya, of the centre-right Liberal Party (PLH) who pledged to introduce re-education programmes for criminals. Lobo was defeated with 46% of the vote to Zelaya's 50%.

Lobo took over as leader of the opposition PNH in Jan. 2006. He criticized Zelaya's lurch to the political left in 2007 and the president's alliance with the Venezuelan leader, Hugo Chávez, who persuaded Honduras to join regional leftist alliances. Zelaya's popularity was dented by his attempts in 2008 to hold a referendum to change the constitution that barred him from standing for re-election—a path taken by Chávez in Venezuela and President Morales in Bolivia. Zelaya pushed ahead with the referendum, despite opposition from the PNH, national legal bodies and much of the military.

On 28 June 2009, after the Supreme Court had ruled that the bid to change the constitution was illegal, the army launched a coup and forced Zelaya into exile in Costa Rica. A wave of international criticism (and suspension from the Organization of American States—OAS) ushered in five months of sometimes violent turmoil between Zelaya's supporters and backers of the interim president, Roberto Micheletti. In the presidential election of 29 Nov. 2009 (scheduled prior to the coup), Lobo secured 56% of the vote and was sworn in on 27 Jan. 2010.

Career in Office

Lobo promptly granted amnesty to those involved in the political crisis and paved the way for Zelaya to leave for exile in the Dominican Republic. The move was one of the conditions of an accord signed in Oct. 2009 after efforts by the OAS to broker a political settlement. Lobo promised to 're-establish channels of friendship with all nations' and to seek foreign investment to revive the economy. In 2010 Honduras was readmitted to the Central American Integration System and in May 2011 an internationally-brokered agreement to allow Zelaya to return to the country prompted Honduras' resumption of participation in OAS proceedings in June. In Sept. 2011 Lobo replaced some members of his cabinet, including foreign minister Mario Canahuati and interior minister Óscar Álvarez, reportedly over political differences.

DEFENCE

Conscription was abolished in 1995. In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$96m. (US$12 per capita), representing 0.7% of GDP.

Army

The Army numbered (2007) 8,300. There is also a paramilitary Public Security Force of 8,000.

Navy

Personnel (2007), 1,400 including 830 marines. Bases are at Puerto Cortés, Puerto Castilla and Amapala.

Air Force

There were 16 combat capable aircraft in 2007 (A-37B Dragonfly and F-5E/F Tiger II fighters). Total strength was (2007) 2,300 personnel.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 13.5% of GDP in 2006, industry 28.3% and services 58.2%.

Overview

Honduras is a lower middle income country with a diversified economy based on international trading of manufactures and agricultural commodities. One of the poorest countries in Latin America with social indicators among the weakest in the region, the economy is highly susceptible to external shocks and natural disasters.

GDP fell by 0.5% a year for three years after Hurricane Mitch (1998) ruined many small-scale farmers with knock-on damage to banking. Debt relief from the Enhanced Heavily Indebted Poor Countries Initiative, Paris Club creditors, Multilateral Debt Relief Initiative and Inter-American Development Bank helped reduce external debt from 78% of GDP in 1999 to 16% in 2007. In the five years to 2008 growth had been above the Latin American average although living standards for the majority barely improved.

Growth is largely attributed to increased remittances and strong export performance, particularly by the maquila sector (re-export business), and private investment arising from the Central American Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA). The US recession has resulted in a decline in remittances, FDI and exports from maquilas, and GDP growth fell by 2.1% in 2009 according to the International Monetary Fund.

In Jan. 2010 Porfirio Lobo Sosa became president following a military-backed coup against President Zelaya in June 2009. Political uncertainty is likely to hinder sustained economic progress.

Currency

The unit of currency is the lempira (HNL) of 100 centavos. In July 2005 foreign exchange reserves were US$2,164m., total money supply was 19,865m. lempiras and gold reserves were 21,000 troy oz. Inflation was 11.5% in 2008 and 8.7% in 2009.

Budget

In 2008 revenues were 52,343m. lempiras and expenditures 58,650m. lempiras. Tax revenue accounted for 80.5% of revenues in 2008; current expenditure accounted for 78.7% of expenditures. There is a sales tax of 12%.

Performance

The economy contracted by 2.1% in 2009 but grew by 2.8% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$15.4bn.

Banking and Finance

The central bank of issue is the Banco Central de Honduras (President, María Elena Mondragón). It had total reserves at Dec. 2002 of US$1,531m. There is an agricultural development bank, Banadesa, for small grain producers, a state land bank and a network of rural credit agencies managed by peasant organizations. The Central American Bank for Economic Integration (CABEI) has its head office in Tegucigalpa. In 1999 there were 40 private banks, including four foreign.

There are stock exchanges in Tegucigalpa and San Pedro Sula.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 1.1 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 1.6m. kW in 2007 (0.5m. kW hydro-electric). Production in 2007 was 6.32m. kWh (35% hydro-electric); consumption per capita (2007) was 840 kWh.

Minerals

Output in 2006: zinc, 37,646 tonnes; lead, 11,775 tonnes; silver, 55,036 kg. Small quantities of gold are mined, and there are also deposits of tin, iron, copper, coal, antimony and pitchblende.

Agriculture

There were around 1.07m. ha. of arable land in 2007 and 0.36m. ha. of permanent crops. Legislation of 1975 provided for the compulsory redistribution of land, but in 1992 the grounds for this were much reduced, and a 5-ha. minimum area for land titles was abolished. Members of the 2,800 co-operatives set up in 1975 received individual shareholdings which can be broken up into personal units. Since 1992 women may have tenure in their own right. The state monopoly of the foreign grain trade was abolished in 1992. In 1996 the Agricultural Incentive Program was created (Ley de Incentivo Agrícola, LIA) which involves the redistribution of land for agricultural development.

Estimated crop production in 2003 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 4,200; bananas, 965; maize, 502; plantains, 260; oranges, 167; coffee, 150; melons and watermelons, 145; palm oil, 112; dry beans, 69; pineapples, 62; sorghum, 52.

Livestock (2003 estimates): cattle, 2.40m.; pigs, 478,000; horses, 181,000; mules, 70,000; chickens, 19m.

Forestry

In 2005 forests covered 4.65m. ha., or 41.5% of the total land area. In 2007, 9.46m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries

Shrimp and lobster are important catches. The total catch in 2005 was approximately 19,200 tonnes, almost entirely from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Industry is small-scale and local. Output (in 1,000 tonnes): cement (2008), 1,784; raw sugar (2001), 316; wheat flour (2001), 113; fabrics (1995), 11,641 metres; beer (2003), 96.1m. litres; rum (1995), 2.37m. litres.

Labour

The workforce was 2,438,000 in Sept. 2001. Of 2,334,600 persons in employment in Sept. 2001, 766,800 were in agriculture, hunting, forestry and fishing, 559,200 in wholesale and retail trade and restaurants and hotels, 380,300 in community, social and personal services and 356,000 in manufacturing. Unemployment rate, Sept. 2001: 4.2%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 2004 Honduras signed the Central America-Dominican Republic-United States Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA-DR), along with Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Nicaragua and the USA. The agreement entered into force for Honduras on 1 April 2006. Foreign debt was US$5,242m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Imports in 2008 were valued at US$8,807m. and exports at US$2,558m.

Main imports are machinery and electrical equipment, industrial chemicals, and mineral products and lubricants. Main exports are coffee, bananas, shrimp and lobster, gold, lead and zinc, timber and refrigerated meats. Principal import suppliers, 2004: USA, 34.6%; Guatemala, 7.7%; El Salvador, 5.0%; Costa Rica, 4.9%. Principal export markets, 2004: USA, 41.5%; El Salvador, 10.9%; Guatemala, 7.3%; Germany, 5.9%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Honduras is connected with Guatemala, El Salvador and Nicaragua by the Pan-American Highway. Out of a total of 13,603 km of roads in 2002, 20.4% were paved. In 2007 there were 487,700 passenger cars in use, 31,500 buses and coaches, 165,200 lorries and vans, and 94,400 motorcycles and mopeds.

Rail

The small government-run railway was built to serve the banana industry and is confined to the northern coastal region and does not reach Tegucigalpa. In 2005 there were 595 km of track in three gauges, which in 1994 carried 1m. passengers and 1.2m. tonnes of freight.

Civil Aviation

There are four international airports: San Pedro Sula (Ramon Villeda) and Tegucigalpa (Toncontín) are the main ones, plus Roatún and La Ceiba, with over 80 smaller airstrips in various parts of the country. In addition to domestic flights and services to other parts of central America and the Caribbean, there were flights in 2003 to Barcelona, Dallas/Fort Worth, Houston, Las Vegas, Los Angeles, Madrid, Miami, New Orleans, New York, Oklahoma City, Orange County, Phoenix and San Jose. In 2001 San Pedro Sula handled 496,000 passengers (386,000 on international flights) and 7,500 tonnes of freight, and Tegucigalpa handled 451,000 passengers (327,000 on international flights) and 3,800 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

The largest port is Puerto Cortés on the Atlantic coast. There are also ports at Henecán (on the Pacific) and Puerto Castilla and Tela (northern coast). In Jan. 2009 there were 359 ships of 300

GT or over registered, totalling 489,000 GT. Honduras is a flag of convenience registry.

Telecommunications

In 2005 there were 1,775,800 telephone subscribers, or 246.5 for every 1,000 persons, with 1,281,500 mobile phone subscribers. There were 110.9 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2010. Fixed internet subscriptions totalled 72,400 in 2009 (9.7 per 1,000 inhabitants).

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Judicial power is vested in the Supreme Court, with nine judges elected by the National Congress for four years; it appoints the judges of the courts of appeal, and justices of the peace.

There were 6,236 homicides in 2010, up from just 2,155 in 2004 and 5,265 in 2009. At 77 per 100,000 persons, Honduras had the highest murder rate of any country in 2010.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2005 was 11,589 (161 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Adult literacy in 2007 was 83.6% (male, 83.7%; female, 83.5%). Education is free, compulsory (from 6 to 15 years) and secular. There is a high drop-out rate after the first years in primary education. In 2007 there were 214,051 children in pre-primary schools (8,178 teaching staff in 2006); 1,308,119 children in primary schools (46,308 teaching staff in 2006); 554,297 pupils in secondary schools (16,667 teaching staff in 2004). There were an estimated 148,000 students in tertiary education in 2007–08 and 5,000 academic staff. The leading institution of higher learning is the National Autonomous University of Honduras (Universidad Nacional Autónoma de Honduras), founded in 1847, in Tegucigalpa.

In 1998–99 expenditure on education came to 4.2% of GNP.

Health

In 2000 there were 3,676 physicians, 1,371 dentistry personnel and 8,528 nursing and midwifery personnel. In 2010 there were 28 public hospitals. There were ten hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants in 2002.

RELIGION

Roman Catholicism is the prevailing religion (5,740,000 followers in 2001), but the constitution guarantees freedom to all creeds, and the State does not contribute to the support of any. In 2001 there were 690,000 Evangelical Protestants with the remainder of the population followers of other faiths. In Feb. 2012 there was one cardinal.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Honduras has two sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Maya Site of Copán (inscribed on the list in 1980), a centre of the Mayan civilization abandoned in the early 10th century; and Río Plátano Biosphere Reserve (1982), one of the few remains of the Central American rain forest.

Press

Honduras had five national daily papers in 2006, with a combined circulation of 160,000.

Tourism

In 2005 there were 673,000 non-resident tourists, spending US$476m.

Festivals

There are a number of festivals and religious celebrations held throughout the year in Honduras. The Fiesta de San Isidro is a week-long carnival held in May every year to honour the city's patron saint.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Records date back to 9 BC, when the Romans subdued the Celts to establish Pannonia. From the 5th century both Romans and Celts retreated before attacks from the Huns who were followed by the Avars in the 7th century and the Magyars in the 9th. It was then that the name On ogur ('ten arrows') was adopted for the country that was to become Hungary. The founding date of Hungary is put at 896 after which Árpád, leader of one of the Magyar tribes, forged a dynasty which ruled Hungary until 1301. Forays into Italy, Germany, the Balkans and Spain ended after the Magyars were defeated by Holy Roman Emperor Otto I at the battle of Lechfeld in 955, and the Ostmark (Austria) was returned to Germanic control.

In seeking a truce with Otto I, the Árpád leader Géza invited him to send Catholic missionaries into Hungary. He had his son István (Stephen) crowned as King of Hungary and replaced the tribal structure with a system of counties (megye), administered by royal officials. A disputed succession led to intervention by the Holy Roman Emperor who established temporary suzerainty over Hungary. By the end of the 11th century, Slovakia, Carpathian Ruthenia and Transylvania were all under the crown of St Stephen. In a struggle for control of the ports on the Adriatic, Venice and Hungary went to war on 21 occasions between 1115–1420.

Andrew III, the last Árpád monarch, could do little to hold the country together against the opposition of feuding nobles. His death in 1301 led to a seven-year interregnum, after which, with two exceptions, Hungary was ruled by foreign kings. Linked to the Árpáds through marriage, Charles Robert of Anjou was elected to the throne. His primary task was to restore royal authority over the nobles. An economic boom coincided with Hungary becoming the leading gold producer in Europe and trade links with European neighbours were fostered.

Ottoman Threat

His successors had to contend with the growing power of the Ottoman Empire. Assaults on Hungary increased after the fall of Constantinople in 1453, but in 1456 János Hunyadi, acting as military regent, broke the siege of Belgrade to keep the Turks at bay for another 70 years.

Rival magnates reacted to Hunyadi's death from the plague in 1456 by trying to wipe out the omnipotent Hunyadi clan, but in 1457 the Diet appointed his 15-year-old son Matthias Corvinus as king. Matthias was an enlightened despot. He built up one of Europe's finest libraries—destroyed a century later by the Ottomans—and encouraged writers and artists, many of whom were Italian, to come and work in Hungary. The heirless Matthias was succeeded in 1490 by Bohemia's ruler Vladislav, or King Ulászló II (1490–1516), known as 'Rex Bene', because 'dobré', or 'good' was his reply to almost everything. He managed to repel a Habsburg invasion of Hungary but indulged the nobles with disproportionate powers and relied heavily on foreign financing. Vladislav II was succeeded in 1516 by his son Louis II, who held both the Hungarian and Bohemian thrones. A ten-year-old, he could do little to discourage the onslaught of the Turks, to whom Belgrade was lost in 1521. The Hungarians were defeated by the Turks under Suleiman II at the battle of Mohács on 29 Aug. 1526. Louis was killed in battle and Hungary lost its independence, not to be regained until 1918.

Hungary was partitioned, the largest section going to the Turks, royal Hungary to the Habsburgs and Transylvania, though theoretically autonomous, becoming a vassal state of the Ottomans. The Transylvanians were at constant war with the Habsburgs, who in turn fought the Ottomans. The economy along with the Magyar language declined and much agricultural land, mainly the Hungarian Plain, went to waste.

The Treaty of Vienna of 1606 was meant to set peaceful boundaries, but was soon violated. A series of costly territorial struggles culminated in the Ottoman siege of Vienna in 1683. Repelled by the Habsburgs, it marked a turning point for the Turks who, by 1699, had ceded most of their Hungarian territory. The Habsburgs became hereditary rulers pursuing a policy of divide and rule which led to anti-Habsburg risings. The second, under Ferenc Rákóczi, the last independent prince of Transylvania, united both nobles and peasants, and lasted from 1703–11. It was concluded by the signing of the Peace of Szatmár, in which the Habsburgs guaranteed political freedom for the three 'nations'—the ethnic Magyar, Saxon and Székelys groups. State education, introduced by Maria Theresa and Joseph II, led to greater Germanization.

Challenge to Habsburg Rule

Power was concentrated on the Magyar nobility, descendants of the Árpád royal line, who owned vast estates and were exempt from land tax. In March 1848 the Hungarian Diet renounced Viennese rule and legislated for a sovereign Magyar state, which was approved by Emperor Ferdinand. However, what began peacefully soon deteriorated as national minorities such as the Croats, the Romanians, Serbs and Slovaks demanded the same rights. In the War of Independence, heavy fighting broke out between the Hungarians and the Austrians, the Hungarians being led by Lajos Kossuth (1802–94).

When Emperor Franz Joseph I took the throne in 1848, the Hungarians refused to recognize him. This provoked an Austrian invasion, which was repelled, and in Feb. 1849 the diet in Debrecen declared Hungary an independent republic under Kossuth's leadership. Franz Joseph reacted by accepting the assistance of Tsar Nicholas I of Russia in suppressing the revolution. The Magyars chose to surrender to the Russians rather than the Austrians but the aftermath of the war witnessed mass executions and imprisonment of rebel factions. Kossuth escaped into exile. Direct rule was imposed from Vienna.

Dual Monarchy

Having lost territory to Sardinia in 1859 and to Prussia in 1866, Austria recognized the need for a compromise with Hungary. What became known as the 'Ausgleich' created a dual monarchy to preside over the Austro-Hungarian Empire. Hungary gained internal autonomy but while the Ausgleich profited Magyars and Austro-Germans it did little to benefit national minorities.

Bosnia and Herzegovina were annexed in 1908, which outraged Serbia, but Austria tried a number of tricks to prevent retaliation including the Zagreb Treason Trial of 1909, when evidence was produced of a Serb-Croat conspiracy to bring down the Habsburgs. It was the Czech professor and future president Tomáš Masaryk who proved the evidence to be fake.

On 28 June 1914 the heir to the Habsburg throne, Archduke Franz Ferdinand, and his wife were shot in Sarajevo by a Bosnian Serb. Austria-Hungary declared war on Serbia a month later, precipitating the First World War. The Entente of France, Britain and Russia united against the Central Powers of Germany and Austria-Hungary, with other nations soon joining in one or other alliance. By the Treaty of Versailles, the territories of Hungary and Austria were reduced drastically. Hungary became a republic in Nov. 1918, with Mihály Károlyi as president. Transylvania was handed over to Romania. New countries including Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia were created, all of which gained former Hungarian territory.

On 21 March 1919, Károlyi was replaced by the Bolshevik leader, Béla Kun, who was in power for 133 days. His downfall was brought about by a non-communist revolutionary movement fighting to regain Slovakia and Romania. The Allies persuaded Romania to retreat, and Hungary's borders were finalized by the Treaty of Trianon on 4 June 1920. Two-thirds of Hungary's territory and over half of the population were assigned to neighbouring countries.

In 1919 the Hungarian Kingdom was restored under Count Miklós Horthy, who ruled as regent and appointed a chiefly aristocratic government. Despite Horthy's efforts to amend the Trianon treaty, Hungary's boundaries remained unchanged until the Second World War. Germany and Italy backed the 'Vienna awards' of Nov. 1938 which restored to Hungary southern Slovakia and southern Subcarpathian Ruth, and in Aug. 1940, Transylvanian and Romanian territory. Hitler's support, including favourable trading terms, drew Hungary into fighting with Germany against the Soviet army in 1941, a tactical error which led to enormous losses.

In March 1944 the Germans occupied Hungary. Horthy was forced to abdicate and Hitler appointed a government of Ferenc Szálasi and his fascist Arrow Cross movement. Large-scale deportation of Jews and political dissidents began. Around 400,000 Jews are estimated to have been murdered. With civilian and military losses, almost a million Hungarians died in the war.

Soviet Rule

With the Soviets as the occupying power, post-war Communist rule was established in 1948–49 after a three-year multi-party democracy which the Communists conspired to undermine. Mátyás Rákosi and his Hungarian Workers' Party headed a dictatorship which went unchallenged until 1953, the year of Stalin's death. In July of that year Rákosi was ousted by reformers led by Imre Nagy. Appointed prime minister, Nagy began what he called 'the new stage in building socialism', which entailed industrial and economic reforms and the restoration of human rights. But disagreements within the Soviet leadership gave an advantage to Rákosi who was still general secretary of the Workers' Party. Nagy was forced out of office in April 1955.

On 23 Oct. 1956 a student-led demonstration demanded democratic reforms and Nagy's reinstatement as prime minister. Soviet troops fired into crowds trying to occupy the radio station. The next day Imre Nagy was reappointed prime minister but was unable to quell the riots. Revolutionary committees were set up and there was a general strike to promote the three aims of the revolution: national independence, a democratic political structure and the protection of social benefits. All of this, along with armed rebels in the capital, put pressure on the hardliners in the party to accept reform.

A ceasefire, called by Nagy on 28 Oct., was honoured and Soviet troops retreated from Budapest. A multi-party democracy was announced, and the State Security Authority abolished. Even so, there were continuing demands for a clean sweep of all Stalinist-Rákosist ministers and total Soviet withdrawal. Nagy believed that such a transition should occur gradually and peacefully, but when he voiced the nation's support for neutrality and a withdrawal from the Warsaw pact, it was a step too far for Moscow. János Kádár was encouraged to form a counter-government with Soviet military backing. The Soviet Army marched into Budapest on 4 Nov., crushing all resistance.

Soviet hopes that Nagy would resign after this resounding defeat and support Kádár were disappointed. Kádár returned from Moscow on 7 Nov. after the heaviest fighting was over, to be confronted by a less than compromising nation. The renamed Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party declared all Oct. events as a counter-revolution, and began a series of revenge attacks. Nagy was hanged on 16 June 1958 along with several of his reformist associates. Many opponents of the regime were deported to labour camps in the Soviet Union and over 200,000 people fled the country.

Gradual Reform

János Kádár was party leader from 1956–89, and prime minister in the years 1956–58 and 1961–65. In the early '60s Kádár made a gradual shift towards liberalization. After the wave of executions, a distinction was made between political crime and mere error, and people were no longer required to be active in the party in order to succeed professionally. Trade unions were allowed to play a more active role, as was the press, so long as the government was not openly criticized.

The now-recognized need to loosen state control of the economy gave rise to the New Economic Mechanism (NEM) in 1968, which relaxed price controls, acknowledged the profit motive, improved manufacturing quality and shifted the emphasis from heavy to light industry. Subsidies were reduced and enterprise encouraged. Growing demands for a more open market economy coincided with the first signs of a weakening of the Soviet system. A group of Hungarian dissidents were sufficiently encouraged by the liberal trend in Moscow to form the Hungarian Democratic Forum. Led by their secretary general, Imre Pozsgay, they produced a manifesto 'Turn and Reform' which argued for a total overhaul of the economy.

The subsequent debate reopened divisions between hardliners and reformists, and throughout the country there were demonstrations and strikes. The conservative old school of the Hungarian Socialist Workers' Party was gradually phased out by the reformists. A committee was set up to investigate the events of 1956, which concluded that it had been a popular uprising and not a counter-revolution. This called for the ceremonial reburial of Imre Nagy's remains on 16 June 1989, an event attended by a quarter of a million people who gathered in Heroes' Square, Budapest.

Post Communism

When prime minister Miklós Németh opened the borders with Austria, the flood of refugees from East Germany precipitated the fall of the Berlin wall. Multi-party democracy was enshrined in law in Sept. 1989 and Hungary ceased to be a People's Republic on 23 Oct. A unicameral National Assembly was formed and the first free elections took place on 25 March 1990. Of the 386 members elected to the National Assembly, only 21 had ever served in parliament before, and of the six successful parties, three were entirely new. The Hungarian Democratic Forum (MDF) and Alliance of Free Democrats advocated democracy, political pluralism, a market economy and a 'return' to Europe. The MDF came out ahead but having failed to secure a majority, formed a coalition with the Independent Smallholders' Party and the Christian Democratic People's Party.

A largely inexperienced government set about economic reform while trying to contain trade and budget deficits and high inflation. Social unrest prompted the government to slow down its privatization programme which proved popular with the electorate until they realized that the economy was stalling. In 1993 Iván Szabó became finance minister and adopted much stricter policies, cutting social budgets and devaluing the forint. This again led to domestic hardship. Unemployment, a hitherto unknown phenomenon, grew to over 12%. A nostalgia for a Communist past where jobs, housing and benefits were secure was perceptible in voting patterns at the 1994 elections.

Although the MDF's 'shock tactic' policies were praised by the West, and attracted foreign investment, the electorate opted for an updated version of the Hungarian Socialist Party (MSzP). Former Communist and leader Gyula Horn touted the party as one free of ideological limitations, playing down the traditional left and promising a higher standard of living along with continued economic reform under the guidance of László Bekesy, finance minister of the former Communist government. Horn became prime minister of a coalition led by the Alliance of Free Democrats (SzDSz) and the MSzP. Economic reforms were put back on the agenda but the government moved cautiously in an effort to carry public opinion.

The 1998 elections produced another coalition led by Viktor Orbán of the Federation of Young Democrats (later called Fidesz). He was succeeded in May 2002 by Péter Medgyessy, the Socialists' candidate, who formed a coalition with the SzDSz. In June 2002 revelations that Medgyessy had worked as a counter-intelligence agent for the communist regime highlighted the transitional problems for former Eastern Bloc nations. Hungary became a member of NATO in 1999 and of the EU on 1 May 2004.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Hungary is bounded in the north by Slovakia, northeast by Ukraine, east by Romania, south by Croatia and Serbia, southwest by Slovenia and west by Austria. The peace treaty of 10 Feb. 1947 restored the frontiers as of 1 Jan. 1938. The area of Hungary is 93,030 sq. km (35,919 sq. miles).

At the census of 1 Feb. 2001 the population was 10,198,315 (5,347,665 females); Jan. 2010 estimate, 10,014,324.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 9.90m.

67.7% of the population was urban in Jan. 2008; population density, Jan. 2009, 107.8 per sq. km. Hungary's population has been falling at such a steady rate since 1980 that its 2009 population was the same as that in the early 1960s.

Ethnic minorities, 2001: Roma (Gypsies), 5.3%; Ruthenians, 2.9%; Germans, 2.4%; Romanians, 1.0%; Slovaks, 0.9%. A law of 1993 permits ethnic minorities to set up self-governing councils. There is a worldwide Hungarian diaspora of about 4.7m. (including 1.5m. in the USA and Canada; 1.4m. in Romania; 0.5m. in Slovakia; 0.3m. in Serbia, mainly in Vojvodina; 0.2m. in Israel; 0.2m. in Ukraine; 0.1m. in Brazil; 0.1m. in Germany). In total, 2.5m. Hungarians live in neighbouring countries.

Hungary is divided into 19 counties (megyék) and the capital, Budapest, which has county status.

Area (in sq. km) and population (in 1,000) of counties and chief towns:

Counties	Area	2009		Chief town	2009 population

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2007: births, 97,613; deaths, 132,938; marriages, 40,842; divorces, 25,160. In 2000 the number of births rose for the first time in a decade. There were 2,450 suicides in 2007. Rates (per 1,000 population), 2007: birth, 9.7; death, 13.2; marriage, 4.1; divorce, 2.5. Population growth rate, 2005, -0.2%. The suicide rate, at 26.0 per 100,000 population in 2005, is one of the highest in the world. Among males it was nearly four times as high as among females. Expectation of life at birth, 2007, 69.2 years for males and 77.3 years for females. Infant mortality, 2007, 5.9 per 1,000 live births. Fertility rate, 2007, 1.3 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A humid continental climate, with warm summers and cold winters. Precipitation is generally greater in summer, with thunderstorms. Dry, clear weather is likely in autumn, but spring is damp and both seasons are of short duration. Budapest, Jan. 32°F (0°C), July 71°F (21.5°C). Annual rainfall 25" (625 mm). Pécs, Jan. 30°F (-0.7°C), July 71°F (21.5°C). Annual rainfall 26.4" (661 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

On 18 Oct. 1989 the National Assembly approved by an 88% majority a constitution which abolished the People's Republic, and established Hungary as an independent, democratic, law-based state.

In April 2011 parliament passed proposals for a new constitution, known as the 'Easter constitution', by a vote of 263 to 44 (with one abstention). It came into force on 1 Jan. 2012. Two of the three main opposition parties refused to vote in protest at what critics claimed were attacks by the ruling Fidesz party on the rights of various minority groups, including those with mental illness, the gay and lesbian community, and pro-abortion bodies. The constitution's preamble emphasizes Hungary's Christian heritage while other clauses restrict the voting rights of those with 'limited mental ability'. It defines marriage as a union of a man and a woman, and stipulates that the life of a foetus should be protected from conception. The German government subsequently warned that such clauses strained compatibility with EU law. The constitution also states Hungary's 'responsibility for the destiny of Hungarians living outside her borders', limits the jurisdiction of the constitutional court, reduces the number of parliamentary ombudsmen and determines that the national debt should be no more than 50% of the previous year's GDP except in exceptional circumstances. In Jan. 2012 the EU Commission requested clarification from Hungary on several aspects of the constitution, including curbs on the independence of the central bank that could violate EU law.

The head of state is the President, who is elected for five-year terms by the National Assembly.

The single-chamber National Assembly currently has 386 members, made up of 176 individual constituency winners, 152 allotted by proportional representation from county party lists and 58 from a national list, but in May 2010 the Constitution was amended and the number of members for the next election reduced to 200 (although an additional 13 MPs may be elected for the representation of national and ethnic minorities). It is elected for four-year terms. A Constitutional Court was established in Jan. 1990 to review laws under consideration.

National Anthem

'Isten áldd meg a magyart' ('God bless the Hungarians'); words by Ferenc Kölcsey, tune by Ferenc Erkel.

RECENT ELECTIONS

János Áder was elected president by the National Assembly on 2 May 2012 by 262 votes to 40, with two abstentions. Áder was the only candidate.

In the Hungarian parliamentary elections on 11 and 25 April 2010 the alliance of Fidesz-Hungarian Civic Alliance and the Christian Democratic People's Party (Fidesz-MPSz and KDNP) won 263 seats in the 386-seat National Assembly (164 in 2006); the Hungarian Socialist Party (MSzP) 59 (186 in 2006); Movement for a Better Hungary (Jobbik) 47 (none in 2006); Politics Can Be Different (LMP) 16 (none in 2006). One seat went to an independent candidate. Turnout in the first round was 64.4% and in the second round 44.2%.

European Parliament

Hungary has 22 (24 in 2004) representatives. At the June 2009 elections turnout was 36.3% (38.5% in 2004). The alliance of Fidesz-Hungarian Civic Alliance and the Christian Democratic People's Party (Fidesz-MPSz and KDNP) won 14 seats with 56.4% of votes cast (political affiliation in European Parliament: European People's Party); the MSzP, 4 with 17.4% (Progressive Alliance of Socialists and Democrats); Jobbik, 3 with 14.8% (non-attached); the Hungarian Democratic Forum (MDF), 1 with 5.3% (European Conservatives and Reformists).

CURRENT LEADERS

János Áder

Position

President

Introduction

János Áder was elected president by parliament on 2 May 2012. He took over from László Kövér, who had held the post in a caretaker capacity after Pál Schmitt resigned on 2 April 2012. Áder was scheduled to serve a five-year term in the largely ceremonial role.

Early Life

János Áder was born on 9 May 1959 in Csorna. He graduated in law from Eötvös Loránd University (ELTE) in Budapest in 1983. From 1986–90 he was a researcher at the Sociological Research Institute of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences. He joined Fidesz (Federation of Young Democrats) at the party's inception in 1988 and took part in the 'round table' talks in 1989 that led to the end of the communists' single-party rule. Áder managed Fidesz's 1990 election campaign and was himself elected a member of parliament, retaining his seat until 2009.

From 1990–92 he served as deputy leader of the party's parliamentary group before being appointed chair of the national steering committee of Fidesz. In 1994 he led the party's election campaign, a role he repeated in 1998. He served as Fidesz's vice president from 1995–97 until his appointment as deputy parliamentary speaker.

From June 1998 until May 2002 Áder was parliamentary speaker and also held his party's vice presidency from 1999–2000. From 2002–06 he led Fidesz's parliamentary group while it was in opposition. In 2006 he returned as the deputy speaker of parliament, holding the post until 2009, when he became a member of the European Parliament. As an MEP, Áder demonstrated himself a Fidesz-Hungarian Civic Alliance (as it was by now called) party loyalist by voting along party lines on 98% of issues. In 2011 a number of domestic laws that Áder helped draft were ratified, including controversial reforms of the electoral system and the judiciary that critics argued infringed judicial independence.

On 16 April 2012 Áder was nominated by Prime Minister Orbán for the national presidency following Pál Schmitt's resignation over allegations of plagiarism in regard to his doctoral thesis. Áder resigned as an MEP and gave up his Fidesz-Hungarian Civic Alliance party membership in preparation for taking on the post. His election to office on 2 May 2012 was assured by Fidesz-Hungarian Civic Alliance's two-thirds majority in parliament. He formally assumed the presidency on 10 May.

Career in Office

As a strong Orbán ally and a former member of Fidesz-Hungarian Civic Alliance, Áder's appointment was strongly attacked by those who expect him to follow his predecessor in toeing the Fidesz-Hungarian Civic Alliance line despite the constitutional impartiality of the presidential office.

Viktor OrbánPosition*

Prime Minister

Introduction

Viktor Orbán previously served as Hungary's prime minister from 1998 until 2002. A lawyer, in 1988 he co-founded the Federation of Young Democrats–Fidesz. A prominent pro-democracy campaigner during the communist era, as president of Fidesz he led the party to victory at the 1998 general election. He became head of a coalition government and, as prime minister, campaigned for Hungary to join the European Union (EU). He became prime minister for a second time in May 2010 following the landslide victory of Fidesz-Hungarian Civic Alliance in the April general election.

Early Life

Orbán was born on 31 May 1963 in Székesfehérvár. After his schooling he did military service from 1981–82. In 1987 he graduated in law from Hungary's ELTE University and worked for two years as a sociological researcher.

In March 1988 he helped set up Fidesz, serving as its chief spokesman until Oct. 1989. During this period he attended Imre Nagy's reburial in Budapest and made a widely publicized speech calling for free elections and the removal of Soviet troops from Hungarian soil. During the summer of 1989 he was involved with the Opposition Roundtable negotiations that sought to resolve key issues on Hungary's future. Later in the year he took up a political philosophy research scholarship at Oxford University's Pembroke College.

Having won a parliamentary seat at Hungary's first post-communist free elections in early 1990, Orbán led the Fidesz parliamentary group. In May 1993 he became party president and from 1994–98 was the leader of various government committees preparing for European integration. An advocate of close ties with the USA, in 1996 he helped found the Committee for Political Co-operation of the New Atlantic Initiative. In addition in the 1990s he held several prominent posts in the Liberal International.

At the elections of 1998 Fidesz won 28% of the vote, and 14 more seats than the Socialists who gained 32%. Orbán was able to form a coalition in alliance with the Independent Party of Smallholders and the Hungarian Democratic Forum. He was sworn in as prime minister on 6 July 1998.

Gaining entry into the EU dominated Orbán's tenure. Hungary, Poland and the Czech Republic were considered the frontline nations likely to secure earliest entry, but plans for integration in 2003 faltered as the individual nations struggled to satisfy EU criteria. Orbán campaigned vigorously to ensure entry for Hungary was not delayed, arguing the irrelevancy of the state of other East European economies.

Orbán stood down as party president in Jan. 2000 in order to concentrate on the premiership. Later in the year he visited Romania for the first time after an industrial accident in which Romanian waste devastated several Hungarian rivers strained relations between the two countries.

Relations with other East European nations came under scrutiny in 2001 when Orbán commented that the Hungarian economy would require an influx of several million workers. He suggested ethnic Hungarians returning from abroad would be targeted to boost employment, as laid out in the draft Status Law. This was regarded by some observers as an attempt to assure West European nations that there would not be a worker deluge from the East.

Orbán lost the premiership in April 2002 after a narrow defeat at the general elections. Unable to secure a majority, the new government was formed by a Socialist-Alliance of Free Democrats coalition, led by Péter Medgyessy.

Career in Office

Following a comprehensive win for Fidesz-Hungarian Civic Alliance (as Fidesz is now known) in the general election of April 2010 in which they claimed a two-thirds majority, Orbán took office as prime minister on 29 May. Having campaigned on a platform of tax cuts and job creation, he faced major challenges to meet his targets in light of the country's weak financial position. He immediately introduced money-saving measures, reducing the cabinet from 15 members to nine.

In Oct. 2010 Orbán's government declared a state of emergency after a torrent of toxic chemical sludge spilled through a reservoir wall at an aluminium plant at Ajka in the west of the country. Nine people were killed in the industrial accident, which also caused widespread environmental and property damage.

In April 2011 the Fidesz-controlled parliament passed a revised and controversial new constitution, the legitimacy and democratic basis of which were questioned by the main opposition parties who boycotted the vote.

Having previously decried the financial rescue package negotiated by the preceding government with the International Monetary Fund in 2008, Orbán announced in Nov. 2011 that he would reopen talks with the Fund for a precautionary credit line in the light of Hungary's continuing financial and economic woes.

DEFENCE

The President of the Republic is C.-in-C. of the armed forces.

Conscription was abolished in 2004.

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$1,869m. (US$188 per capita), representing 1.2% of GDP. In 1985 defence expenditure had represented 6.8% of GDP.

Army

The strength of the Army was (2005) 15,814. There is an additional force of 12,000 border guards.

Air Force

The Air Force had a strength (2005) of 6,545. There were 77 combat aircraft in 2005, including MiG-21s, MiG-23s, MiG-29s and Su-22s, plus 55 in store, and 45 attack helicopters.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Hungary held a referendum on EU membership on 12 April 2003, in which 83.8% of votes cast were in favour of accession, with 16.2% against, although turnout was only 45.6%. It became a member of the EU on 1 May 2004. In 2000 Hungary introduced a visa requirement for Russians entering the country as one of the conditions for EU membership.

Hungary has had a long-standing dispute with Slovakia over the Gabčíkovo-Nagymaros Project, involving the building of dam structures in both countries for the production of electric power, flood control and improvement of navigation on the Danube as agreed in a treaty signed in 1977 between Hungary and Czechoslovakia. In late 1998 Slovakia and Hungary signed a protocol easing tensions between the two nations and settling differences over the dam.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 4% of GDP in 2008, industry 29% and services 66%.

Overview

Aided by market-oriented policies in the last two decades of communist rule and structural and stabilization measures implemented in the 1990s, Hungary's transition from communism was among the smoothest of the former Eastern Bloc nations. Since the collapse of communism, services have accounted for an increasing share of GDP. However, manufacturing, concentrated in low-cost industrial assembly and processing, has been the main engine of growth.

Hungary has attracted the highest level of foreign direct investment in the region after the Czech Republic. This has helped to modernize production and to redirect trade from east to west. Since the mid-1990s the majority of state assets have been privatized and the private sector now accounts for over 80% of GDP. However, growth has slowed since 2005 and was further weakened by a fiscal consolidation package in mid-2006. Unemployment levels are high and rising, reaching 10.1% in 2009 (compared to 7.8% in 2008). The labour force participation rate (the proportion of economically active working-age persons in an economy) is among the lowest in the OECD.

In the second half of 2008 the Hungarian forint lost nearly 20% of its value against the euro and the dollar. High levels of foreign debt increased strain. In Oct. 2008 a US$25bn. rescue package was agreed jointly with the IMF, EU and the World Bank to alleviate the effects of the global financial crisis. A series of measures were implemented to restore economic health, with investor trust increasing during 2009. The government raised a further €1bn. in July 2009 by selling bonds on international capital markets.

Currency

A decree of 26 July 1946 instituted a new monetary unit, the forint (HUF) of 100 fillér. The forint was made fully convertible in Jan. 1991 and moves in a 15% band against the euro either side of a central rate of €1=282.4 forints. Inflation rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
9.1%	5.3%	4.7%	6.7%	3.6%	3.9%	8.0%	6.0%	4.2%	4.9%

The inflation rate of 3.6% in 2005 was the lowest in more than 25 years. Foreign exchange reserves were US$42,988m. in Sept. 2009 and gold reserves 99,000 troy oz. Total money supply in Aug. 2009 was 5,930.4bn. forints.

Budget

Budgetary central government revenue and expenditure (in 1bn. forints):

	2007	2008	2009
Revenue	6,847.2	7,754.7	7,771.9
Expenditure	8,111.8	8,700.0	8,706.0

Principal sources of revenue in 2009: taxes on goods and services, 3,463.1bn. forints; taxes on income, profits and capital gains, 2,476.3bn. forints; grants, 390.2bn. forints. Main items of expenditure by economic type in 2009: grants, 2,617.6bn. forints; compensation of employees, 1,450.5bn. forints; social benefits, 1,165.6bn. forints.

Hungary's budget deficit in 2010 was 4.2% of GDP (2009, 4.6%; 2008, 3.7%). The required target set by the EU is a budget deficit of no more than 3%.

VAT is 27% (reduced rates, 18% and 5%). Hungary has the highest rate of VAT in the EU.

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
3.7%	4.5%	3.9%	4.8%	4.0%	3.9%	0.1%	0.9%	-6.8%	1.3%

Total GDP was US$130.4bn. in 2010.

Banking and Finance

In 1987 a two-tier system was established. The National Bank (Governor, András Simor) remained the central state financial institution. It is responsible for the operation of monetary policy and the foreign exchange system. In Dec. 2009 the Hungarian financial system comprised 40 credit institutions, 140 co-operatives, 266 financial enterprises, 25 investment enterprises, 36 investment funds, 37 insurance companies, 20 pension funds and 37 health-related funds. They are all supervised by the Hungarian Financial Supervisory Authority (HFSA).

The largest bank is OTP Bank Rt. (the National Savings Bank plc), with assets in 2009 of 6,566bn. forints. Other leading banks are K+H (Hungarian Commercial and Credit Bank) and MKB (Hungarian Foreign Trade Bank). A law of June 1991 sets capital and reserve requirements, and provides for foreign investment in Hungarian banks. Permission is needed for investments of more than 10%.

Foreign direct investment was US$2,377m. in 2010. At the end of 2010 foreign direct investment stocks totalled US$91.9bn.

The Hungarian International Trade Bank opened in London in 1973. In 1980 the Central European International Bank was set up in Budapest with seven western banks holding 66% of the shares.

A stock exchange was opened in Budapest in June 1990.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

In 2008, 6.6% of energy consumption came from renewables (wind power, solar power, hydro-electric power, tidal power, geothermal energy and biomass), compared to the European Union average of 10.3%. A target of 13% has been set by the EU for 2020.

Environment

Hungary's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 5.7 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007 was 8.5m. kW, about a fifth of which is nuclear. There is a 2,000 MW nuclear power station at Paks with four reactors. In 2007 Hungary produced 40.0bn. kWh of electricity and 14.7bn. kWh were imported. Hungary is a net importer of electricity. Total consumption in 2007 was 43.9bn. kWh. Consumption per capita in 2007 was 4,370 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Oil and natural gas are found in the Szeged basin and Zala county. Oil production in 2007 was 849,000 tonnes. Natural gas production in 2007 was 2.7bn. cu. metres, with proven reserves of 8bn. cu. metres in the same year. However, Hungary relies on Russia for almost all of its oil and much of its gas.

Minerals

Production in 1,000 tonnes: lignite (2007), 9,818; bauxite (2009), 317.

Agriculture

Agricultural land was collectivized in 1950. It was announced in 1990 that land would be restored to its pre-collectivization owners if they wished to cultivate it. A law of April 1994 restricts the area of land that may be bought by individuals to 300 ha., and prohibits the sale of arable land and land in conservation zones to companies and foreign nationals. Today, although 90% of all cultivated land is in private hands, most farms are little more than smallholdings. In 2003 the agricultural area was 5.87m. ha. (equivalent to 63% of the total land area); arable land constituted 4.52m. ha.

Agricultural production dropped drastically from 1989 to 2003, but made a recovery in 2004. Production figures (2004, in 1,000 tonnes): maize, 8,317 (6,747 in 1989); wheat, 6,020 (6,509 in 1989); sugar beets, 3,130 (5,277 in 1989); barley, 1,423; sunflower seeds, 1,198; grapes, 772; potatoes, 767; apples, 666.

Livestock has also drastically decreased since 1989 from 7.7m. pigs to 4.1m. by 2004, from 1.6m. cattle to 723,000, and from 2.1m. sheep to 1.4m. Thus the pig stock, cattle stock and sheep stock have all declined to levels not seen in fifty years.

The north shore of Lake Balaton, Villány and the Tokaj area are important wine-producing districts. Wine production in 2007 was 322m. litres.

Forestry

The forest area in 2010 was 2.03m. ha., or 23% of the land area. Timber production in 2007 was 5.64m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

There are fisheries in the rivers Danube and Tisza and Lake Balaton. In 2005 total catch was 7,609 tonnes, exclusively from inland fishing.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in Hungary in March 2011 were MOL Magyar Olaj-és Gázipari Rt (Hungarian Oil and Gas Plc), US$13.4bn.; and OTP Bank Rt., US$8.3bn.

Manufacturing output grew by an average of 7.7% annually between 1992 and 2000 although it slowed between 2001 and 2007, with annual average growth of 5.2%, and contracted by 1.0% in 2008.

Production, 2009 unless otherwise indicated, in 1,000 tonnes: rolled steel products (2007), 103,347; cement (2007), 3,552; distillate fuel oil, 3,428; crude steel (2007), 2,232; plastics, 1,325; petrol (2007), 1,322; fertilizers, 825; alumina (2006), 270; residual fuel oil (2007), 200; refrigerators and freezers, 2,430,092 units; radio sets, 2,341,000 units; beer, 651.2m. litres.

Labour

In 2009 out of an economically active population of 4,202,600 there were 3,781,900 employed persons, of which 3,309,900 were employees. Among the employed persons in 2009, 64.2% worked in services, 31.2% in industry and construction, and 4.6% in agriculture. Average gross monthly wages of full-time employees in 2009: 199,837 forints. Minimum monthly wage, 2009, 71,500 forints (more than twice the 2000 level). There were a total of 6,474 working days lost to strike action in 2009, down from 25,004 in 2008. The unemployment rate was 10.9% in Dec. 2011. Long-term unemployment is particularly high, with 50.6% of the labour force in 2010 having been out of work for more than a year.

The normal retirement age is 62 but it is set to be increased gradually to 65 for both men and women by 2017.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$66,119m. in 2005. An import surcharge imposed in March 1995 was abolished in July 1997.

Imports and Exports

Imports and exports for calendar years in US$1m.:

	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007
Imports c.i.f.	47,674.6	60,248.7	65,919.6	76,978.6	94,659.7
Exports f.o.b.	43,003.7	55,468.3	62,271.9	74,055.5	94,590.9

Hungary's foreign trade was expanding at a very fast rate until the global economic downturn of 2008–09, with the value of both its imports and its exports increasing fourfold between 1997 and 2007.

Machinery and transport equipment accounted for 52.5% of imports and 62.4% of exports in 2007, and manufactured goods 32.1% of imports and 26.5% of exports.

79.1% of exports in 2007 went to European Union member countries, the highest share of any of the central and eastern European countries that joined the EU in May 2004. In 2007, 26.8% of imports came from Germany and 28.4% of exports went to Germany. Russia was the second biggest supplier of imports in 2007 (6.9% of the total) and Italy the second biggest market for exports (5.6%). In 2007, 3.1% of exports went to Russia, down from 13.1% in 1992.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 195,719 km of roads, including 1,157 km of motorways, 6,745 km of main roads and 23,280 km of secondary roads; 37.7% of roads were paved. Passenger cars numbered 3,012,200 in 2007; lorries and vans, 829,800; motorcycles and mopeds, 135,900; and buses and coaches, 17,900. In 2007 there were 20,635 road accidents with 1,232 fatalities.

Rail

In 2008 the rail network was 7,608 km in length; 42.1m. tonnes of freight and 111.7m. passengers were carried. There is a metro in Budapest (30.1 km), and tram/light rail networks in Budapest (332.0 km), Debrecen, Miskolc and Szeged.

Civil Aviation

Budapest airport (Ferihegy) handled 8,095,367 passengers in 2009 (all on international flights) and 54,355 tonnes of freight. Malév, the former national carrier, ceased operations in Feb. 2012. The largest Hungarian airline is now Wizz Air, which started flying in 2004 and is Central and Eastern Europe's largest low-cost carrier.

Shipping

In 2008 there were 1,440 km of navigable waterways. In 2009 the Hungarian river fleet comprised 318 pushed or towed barges, 83 self-propelled barges and 80 other pushed or towed vessels. In 2009, 7.75m. tonnes of cargo and 859,000 passengers were carried.

The Hungarian Shipping Company (MAHART) has agencies at Amsterdam, Alexandria, Algiers, Beirut, Rijeka and Trieste. It has 23 ships and runs scheduled services between Budapest and Esztergom.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 3,094,000 main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year mobile phone subscribers numbered 12,224,000 (1,220.9 per 1,000 persons). Matav, the privatized former national telephone company, still has more than 80% of the fixed line market. There were 3,201,000 PCs in use in 2006 and internet users numbered 5,873,000 in 2008. There were 19.6 fixed broadband subscribers per 100 inhabitants in Dec. 2010.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The administration of justice is the responsibility of the Procurator-General, elected by Parliament for six years. There are 111 local courts, 20 labour law courts, 20 county courts, six district courts and a Supreme Court. Criminal proceedings are dealt with by the regional courts through three-member councils and by the county courts and the Supreme Court in five-member councils. A new Civil Code was adopted in 1978 and a new Criminal Code in 1979.

Regional courts act as courts of first instance; county courts as either courts of first instance or of appeal. The Supreme Court acts normally as an appeal court, but may act as a court of first instance in cases submitted to it by the Public Prosecutor. All courts, when acting as courts of first instance, consist of one professional judge and two lay assessors, and, as courts of appeal, of three professional judges. Local government Executive Committees may try petty offences.

Regional and county judges and assessors are elected by the appropriate local councils; members of the Supreme Court by Parliament.

The Office of Ombudsman was instituted in 1993. He or she is elected by parliament for a six-year term, renewable once.

There are also military courts of the first instance. Military cases of the second instance go before the Supreme Court.

The death penalty was abolished in Oct. 1990.

The population in penal institutions in Sept. 2008 was 14,911 (149 per 100,000 of national population). There were 80,618 convictions of adults and 6,283 of juvenile offenders in 2009. Of 394,034 crimes registered in 2009, 23,914 were against the person (including 138 homicides).

Education

Adult literacy rate in 2008 was 99%. Education is free and compulsory from five to 16. Primary schooling ends at 14; thereafter education is continued at secondary, secondary technical or secondary vocational schools, which offer diplomas entitling students to apply for higher education, or at vocational training schools which offer tradesmen's diplomas. Students at the latter may also take the secondary school diploma examinations after two years of evening or correspondence study. Optional religious education was introduced in schools in 1990.

In 2010–11 there were: 4,358 kindergartens with 30,359 teachers and 338,162 children; 3,306 primary schools with 73,565 teachers and 758,566 pupils; and 2,617 secondary schools (including vocational schools) with 48,953 teachers and 662,808 pupils (of which 578,301 were full-time). 361,347 students were enrolled in tertiary education at 69 institutions in 2010–11 (240,727 full-time).

In 2007–08 total expenditure on education came to 5.2% of GNI and 14.4% of total government spending.

Health

In 2009 there were 30,276 doctors, 4,920 dentists, 54,352 nurses and midwives and (2006) 5,364 pharmacists. While there is an excess supply of doctors, there are too few nurses and wages for both groups are exceptionally low. In 2009 there were 175 hospitals with 71,489 beds. Spending on health accounted for 7.3% of GDP in 2009.

Welfare

In 1998 the Hungarian parliament decided to place the financial funds of health and pension insurance under government supervision. The self-governing bodies which had previously been responsible for this were dissolved. Medical treatment is free. Patients bear 15% of the cost of medicines. Sickness benefit is 75% of wages, old age pensions 60–70%. In 2010, 1.9trn. forints was spent on pensions and pension-like benefits for 2.94m. recipients. Family benefits totalled 2.2% of GDP in 2009. On a monthly basis in 2010, 1.2m. families were receiving family allowance and child care allowance was being paid for 178,532 children.

RELIGION

Church-state affairs are regulated by a law of Feb. 1990 which guarantees freedom of conscience and religion and separates church and state by prohibiting state interference in church affairs. Religious matters are the concern of the Department for Church Relations, under the auspices of the Prime Minister's Office.

According to the 2001 census, 51.9% of the population was Roman Catholic (5.3m. people), 15.9% Calvinist (1.6m.), 3.0% Lutheran (0.3m.) and 2.6% Greek Catholic (0.27m.). Adherents to smaller Christian faiths, including Baptists, other Protestant groups, Adventists and a range of Orthodox denominations, numbered around 98,000. About 0.1% of the population was Jewish in 2001.

The Primate of Hungary is Péter Erdő, Archbishop of Esztergom-Budapest, installed in Jan. 2003. There are 11 dioceses, all with bishops or archbishops. There is one Uniate bishopric. In Feb. 2012 the Roman Catholic church had two cardinals.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Sites under Hungarian jurisdiction which appear on UNESCO's World Heritage List are (with year entered on list): Budapest, and specifically the Banks of the Danube and the Buda Castle Quarter (1987 and 2002); Hollókő (1987), a preserved settlement developed during the 17th and 18th centuries; Millenary Benedictine Monastery of Pannonhalma and its Natural Environment (1996), first settled by Benedictine monks in 996; Hortobágy National Park (1999), a large area of plains and wetlands in eastern Hungary; Pécs (Sopiana) Early Christian Cemetery (2000), a series of decorated tombs dating from the 4th century; Tokaj Wine Region Historic Cultural Landscape (2002), a thousand-year-old wine-producing area.

Hungary also shares two UNESCO sites: the Caves of Aggtelek and Slovak Karst (1995, 2000 and 2008), a complex of 712 temperate-zone karstic caves, is shared with Slovakia; the Cultural Landscape of Fertő/Neusiedlersee (2001), an area that has acted as a meeting place for different cultures for 8,000 years, is shared with Austria.

Press

In 2006 there were 31 daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 1,775,000, at a rate of 176 per 1,000 inhabitants. The most widely read newspapers are the free tabloid Metropol and the broadsheets Blikk and Észak-Keleti Napló. A total of 13,239 book titles were published in 2007 in 42.63m. copies. In the 2010 World Press Freedom Index, compiled by Reporters Without Borders, Hungary was ranked 23rd equal out of 178 countries.

Tourism

In 2005 there were 38.56m. foreign tourists. 18.62m. Hungarians travelled abroad in 2005. Tourist receipts in 2005 amounted to US$4.58bn. 5% of GDP is produced by tourism.

Festivals

The Budapest Spring Festival, comprising music, theatre, dance etc., takes place in March. The Balaton Festival is in May, Miskolc Opera Festival in June, the Szeged Open-Air Theatre Festival in July–Aug, and the Sziget music festival in Budapest in mid-Aug. The flower carnival in Debrecen, a five-day celebration of flowers, music and dance, culminates on 20 Aug. (St Stephen's Day).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Scandinavia's North Atlantic outpost was first settled in 874. According to the Landnámabók or 'book of settlements', the first to land was Ingólfr Arnarson, who came from Norway to live on the site of present-day Reykjavík. He was followed by some 400 migrants, mainly from Norway but also from other Nordic countries and from Norse settlements in the British Isles.

A ruling class was soon formed by chieftains, known as the godar. In 930 they established the first ever democratic national assembly, the Alþingi (Althing). Primarily an adjudicating body, it also served as a legislature and as a fair, a marriage mart and as a national celebration in which a large proportion of the Icelandic population participated for two weeks each June. The first notable event in its history occurred in 1000 when, by majority decision, Christianity was adopted as Iceland's official religion. Despite the change, the godar remained politically important and some of them were ordained. Bishoprics were established at Skálholt in 1056 and at Hólar in 1106. It was not until the 1800s, after the bishoprics were united, that Reykjavík became the new episcopal see, making it the leading community.

Trade flourished with homespun woollen cloth as the chief export, although certain materials such as grain and timber had to be imported. Iceland's only indigenous wood, birchwood, which grew in abundance yet proved unsuitable for building, later became valuable in making charcoal.

In the mid-13th century there were power struggles between the godar. With the 'Old Treaty' of 1262, the godar were persuaded to swear allegiance to the king of Norway, bringing Iceland under Norwegian rule but leaving it with internal autonomy. When Norway was joined with Denmark in 1380, Iceland still retained the Althing as well as its own code of law.

In the 14th century, the expansion of fishing to satisfy European demand stimulated agriculture and other basic industries. Iceland's newfound prosperity encouraged trade between the Icelandic fisherman and traders in Bergen, Norway. English traders in Bergen were keen to bypass Norwegian importers and instead began trading directly with Iceland. The Danish were largely unsuccessful in preventing this and it was not until the 16th century, when the English turned to the North American fishing grounds, that hostilities ceased.

Iceland's economic progress was checked when birchwood became depleted. Coupled with over-grazing, this led to soil erosion and put an end to crop growth. Further troubles came in the 15th century when Iceland fell victim to the Black Death, on two occasions losing around half of the population.

With the advent of Lutheranism in the first half of the 16th century, Iceland resisted Denmark's efforts to impose the Reformation on their North Atlantic possession. The bishoprics of Skálholt and Hólar were eventually overcome in 1550, marking the consolidation of Danish power over Iceland. In 1602 a royal decree gave all foreign trading rights in Iceland exclusively to Danish merchants. This restriction, which lasted until 1787, virtually ended Iceland's contacts with England and Germany, their one-time trading partners. Absolutism in Denmark and Norway under King Frederick III was recognized by Iceland in 1662, further strengthening external rule, and after economic hardship in the 18th century (in the 1780s famine killed one-fifth of the population) Iceland's reduced status was confirmed. When Norway split from Denmark in 1814 there were no similar calls for secession from Iceland.

Home Rule

In the 1830s a Danish consultative assembly was formed in which Iceland was given two seats. Denmark's transition to a system of representative democratic government after Frederick VII relinquished absolute power in 1848 did not extend to Iceland. After failures to reach agreement over the country's status, the Althing decided that 1874, the year that marked a thousand years of settlement, should be chosen as the year when it gained a new constitution. This was to provide the Althing with legislative if not executive control. During this period Iceland's economy continued to fare badly. With soil erosion still a problem, the strains of population growth forced mass emigration to North America. Around 15,000 emigrants left Iceland between 1870 and 1914. In 1904, after several decades of pressure for autonomy and, from 1901 onwards, support from the governing Danish Liberal party, Iceland finally achieved home rule.

Economic progress was led by modernization of the fishing industry and an expanded labour force. In 1916 a national trade unions organization was established and a process of urbanization began as the population moved towards the coastal fishing villages. Educational reform brought the introduction of compulsory education and in 1911, the establishment of the University of Iceland at Reykjavík.

In 1918 Iceland became a separate state under the Danish crown, with only foreign affairs remaining under Danish jurisdiction. The following decades were overshadowed by the influence of the 1930s' depression and the Spanish Civil War in 1936, the latter bringing an end to the lucrative fish trade with Spain.

In 1944 Iceland declared independence since Denmark was then occupied by Nazi Germany. The termination of the union was little more than a formality, the German invasion of Denmark in 1940 having effectively ended that country's responsibility for Iceland's foreign relations.

Iceland was occupied peacefully by Britain in 1940 but US troops took over a year later. They improved roads and docks, built an airport and paid high wages. An American request for a long-term lease on three military bases was reviewed sympathetically. But the continuing presence of American forces somehow gave the lie to the independence so recently celebrated.

The answer was for Iceland to join NATO. Objections to the American-run Keflavik airbase were gradually withdrawn and in 1951 a defence agreement with the United States allowed for an increase in the number of troops brought in 'to defend Iceland and ... to ensure the security of the seas around the country'. Greater integration with Europe came with joining the European Free Trade Association in 1970.

Fish remained central to the economy, accounting for 90% of the export trade. But there were worries about over-dependence on a single product and concern that other nations were taking too large a share of the Icelandic catch. In 1948 the demarcation of new fishing zones was made subject to Icelandic jurisdiction. Two years later one mile was added to the three-mile offshore zone which Iceland had administered since 1901. This was just acceptable to other fishing nations but when, in 1958, the limit was extended to 12 miles, Britain sent naval vessels to protect trawlers from harassment and arrest. This was the first Cod War, a cat-and-mouse game between the British navy and coastguard patrols which continued to 1961. At that point Britain and West Germany, the other fishing nation involved in the dispute, accepted the 12-mile zone on condition that if Iceland intended to widen her jurisdiction still further she had to give six months' notice of her intention and, if challenged, refer her claims to the International Court of Justice at The Hague.

In 1971, however, the government fulfilled its promise to do something about over-fishing by unilaterally extending the offshore zone to 50 miles. Despite a clear contravention of treaty commitment, Iceland gained sympathy as the tiny nation fighting the giants. Also in Iceland's favour was the move by Britain and members of the European Community to extend their jurisdiction over the continental shelf. A law officially expanding the Icelandic fishery limits to 50 miles came into force on 1 Sept. 1972. However, a second Cod War began shortly after as British and German trawlers continued to fish within the new zone. Hostility intensified, with the Icelandic Coast Guard deploying net cutters to prevent the ships securing their catch. An agreement was signed on 8 Nov. 1973 confining British trawlers to specific areas within the 50 mile catch zone, and limiting their annual catch to 130,000 tonnes.

This agreement expired in Nov. 1975, after which Iceland declared the ocean up to 200 miles from its coast to be under Icelandic authority, and a third Cod War began. When the talks reached stalemate in Dec. 1976, British vessels were nevertheless banned from Icelandic waters. In 2006 the country undertook its first commercial whale hunt after a 21-year moratorium. The government took control of the country's three leading banks in late 2008 and requested help from the IMF in a bid to stabilize the near-bankrupt economy amid the global economic crisis. In April 2010 a volcanic explosion produced an ash cloud that paralysed the European air industry for several weeks.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Iceland is an island in the North Atlantic, close to the Arctic Circle. Area, 102,819 sq. km (39,698 sq. miles).

There are eight regions:

Region	Inhabited land (sq. km)	Mountain pasture (sq. km)	Waste-land (sq. km)	Total area (sq. km)	Popula-tion (1 Jan. 2010)
Capital area					200,907
Southern Peninsula	1,266	716	—	1,982	21,359
West	5,011	3,415	275	8,701	15,370
Western Fjords	4,130	3,698	1,652	9,470	7,362
Northland
West	4,867	5,278	2,948	13,093	7,394
Northland East	9,890	6,727	5,751	22,368	28,900
East					12,459
South	16,921	17,929	12,555	25,214	23,879
Iceland	42,085	37,553	23,181	102,819	317,630

Of the population of 317,630 in 2010, 20,428 were domiciled in rural districts and 297,202 (93.6%) in towns and villages (of over 200 inhabitants). Population density (2010), 3.1 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 339,000.

The population is predominantly Icelandic. On 1 Jan. 2010 foreigners numbered 21,701 (9,583 Polish, 1,536 Lithuanian, 1,033 German, 884 Danish, 624 Latvian, 619 Portuguese, 603 Filipinos, 534 UK, 520 Thai, 499 US).

The capital, Reykjavik, had on 1 Jan. 2010 a population of 117,505; other towns were: Akranes, 6,549; Akureyri, 17,295; Bolungarvik, 970; Dalvik, 1,435; Eskifjörður, 1,062; Garðabær, 10,643; Grindavik, 2,837; Hafnarfjörður, 25,913; Húsavik, 2,229; Ísafjörður, 2,677; Kópavogur, 30,357; Neskaupstaður, 1,451; Ólafsfjörður, 852; Reykjanesbær, 14,091; Sauðárkrúkur, 2,640; Selfoss, 6,493; Seltjarnarnes, 4,395; Seyðisfjörður, 706; Siglufjörður, 1,214; Vestmannaeyjar, 4,135.

The official language is Icelandic.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics for calendar years:

	Live births	Still born	Marriages	Divorces	Deaths	Infant deaths	Net immigration
2006	4,415	13	1,752	516	1,903	6	5,255
2007	4,560	7	1,797	526	1,943	9	5,132
2008	4,835	11	1,704	560	1,987	12	1,144
2009	5,027	12	1,480	550	2,002	12	-4,835

2009 rates per 1,000 population: births, 15.8; deaths, 6.3. 64.4% of births are to unmarried mothers, the highest percentage in Europe. Population growth rate, 2009, -0.5%. In 2009 the most popular age range for marrying was 30-34 for males and 25-29 for females. Life expectancy, 2009: males, 79.7 years; females, 83.3. Infant mortality, 2009, 2.4 per 1,000 live births (one of the lowest rates in the world); fertility rate, 2009, 2.2 births per woman. Iceland legalized same-sex marriage in July 2010.

CLIMATE

The climate is cool temperate oceanic and rather changeable, but mild for its latitude because of the Gulf Stream and prevailing S.W. winds. Precipitation is high in upland areas, mainly in the form of snow. Reykjavik, Jan. 31.1°F (-0.5°C), July 51.1°F (10.6°C). Annual rainfall, 2009: 28.1" (713 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution came into force on 17 June 1944 and has been amended four times since, most recently on 24 June 1999. The President is elected by direct, popular vote for a period of four years (no term limits).

The Alþingi (parliament) is elected in accordance with the electoral law of 1999, which provides for an Alþingi of 63 members. The country is divided into a minimum of six and a maximum of seven constituencies. There are currently six constituencies: Northwest (10 seats); Northeast (10 seats); South (10); Southwest (11); Reykjavik north (11); and Reykjavik south (11).

RECENT ELECTIONS

President Ólafur Ragnar Grímsson was reappointed for a second term on 1 Aug. 2000, no opposing candidates having come forward. On 26 June 2004 he stood for popular election and gained 85.6% of the vote. Baldur Ágústsson won 12.5% and Ástþór Magnússon won 1.9%. Turnout was 63.0%. He was reappointed for a fourth term on 1 Aug. 2008, again no opposing candidates having come forward.

In the parliamentary election held on 25 April 2009, the Social Democratic Alliance (SF)—consisting of the People's Alliance, the People's Party and the Alliance of the Women's List—won 20 of the 63 seats with 29.8% of the votes cast, the conservative Independence Party (SSF) 16 with 23.7%, the Left-Green Movement (VG) 14 with 21.7%, the Progressive Party (FSF) 9 with 14.8% and the Citizens' Movement 4 with 7.2%. Turnout was 85.1%. Following the election the Social Democratic Alliance continued its coalition with the Left-Green Movement.

Presidential elections were scheduled to take place on 30 June 2012.

CURRENT LEADERS

Ólafur Ragnar Grímsson

Position
President

Introduction

Ólafur Ragnar Grímsson was leader of the People's Alliance until becoming president in 1996. Observers feared his background would politicize the presidency, which is traditionally a non-partisan, ceremonial post, but he has enjoyed broad popular support and retained the office in 2000, 2004 and 2008.

Early Life

Grímsson was born on 14 May 1943 in Ísafjörður. He studied economics and political science at Manchester University in the UK, graduating with a doctorate in 1970. He took up a lecturing post at the University of Iceland and was appointed professor in 1973. From 1966 until 1973 he was on the board of the youth wing of the Progressive Party and between 1971 and 1973 he sat on the party's executive board.

He moved to the People's Alliance and was elected to the Alþingi (Parliament) in 1978 as a member for Reykjavík. From 1980 until 1983, when he failed to win re-election to parliament, Grímsson led the People's Alliance in the Alþingi. During 1987–96 he was party chairman and between 1988–91 served as the minister of finance. Between 1984–90 he held senior posts with Parliamentarians for Global Action, an international organization with a membership of 1,800 throughout the world. Grímsson also held positions in the Council of Europe during the 1980s and 1990s.

In 1995 he led the People's Alliance to a poor showing at the polls, in which they secured less than 15% of the vote. Shortly afterwards Grímsson announced his candidacy for the presidency at the following year's elections. In June 1996 he was elected with 41% of the vote, defeating three other candidates.

Career in Office

The presidency is a largely ceremonial office and Grímsson's election prompted some observers to fear he would politicize the position. His relationship with the then prime minister, Davíð Oddsson, had been poor ever since the two had clashed as leaders of rival parties. Nevertheless, Grímsson was reappointed as president for a second term (without an election as there were no opposing candidates) and then re-elected by popular vote on 26 June 2004 with nearly 86% of the poll. During his presidency Grímsson has used his international profile to vigorously promote Iceland and its industrial potential, particularly in emerging sectors such as information technology. His reappointment in Aug. 2008 was unopposed.

In Dec. 2009 the Alþingi narrowly passed legislation to reimburse the UK and the Netherlands governments for bailing out British and Dutch depositors in Icesave, an Internet operation owned by the failed Icelandic bank Landsbanki. Grímsson, however, refused to sign the law—to popular acclaim—and it was put to a national referendum in March 2010. A large majority rejected the measure and negotiations on a settlement continued. In Dec. 2010 new reimbursement legislation was proposed, including more favourable repayment terms for Iceland, and was passed by the Alþingi in Feb. 2011. However, Grímsson again refused to sign the measure, leading to a further referendum and another voter rejection in April.

Jóhanna Sigurðardóttir

Position
Prime Minister

Introduction

Jóhanna Sigurðardóttir became prime minister in Jan. 2009 following economic crisis and the collapse of Geir Haarde's administration. Heading a coalition including her centre-left Social Democratic Alliance (SF) along with the Left-Green Movement (VG), she is the country's first female leader.

Early Life

Sigurðardóttir was born on 4 Oct. 1942 in Reykjavík. After studying business at Iceland's Commercial College, she undertook a varied career that included flight attendant, trade union organizer and office administrator. In 1978 she entered Alþingi (Parliament) as the Social Democratic Party representative for the Reykjavik constituency. Subsequent boundary changes saw her become the MP for Reykjavik South and then for the North. In 1979 and from 1983–84 she was the speaker of the Alþingi and from 1987–94 she was minister of social affairs but resigned and made an unsuccessful run for her party's leadership.

She subsequently left the Social Democrats to form a new party, the National Movement, which won four seats at the 1995 general election. It merged five years later with her old party and two others to form the SF in a bid to end the dominance of the Independence Party (SSF). In 2007 the Alliance joined the Independence Party in a coalition headed by Haarde. Sigurðardóttir was reappointed to the social affairs portfolio. Working on behalf of the elderly, disabled and disadvantaged, she retained high personal approval ratings even in the depths of the national financial crisis in 2008.

When the country's independent banking system collapsed in late 2008, Haarde and his cabinet came under pressure to resign. On 23 Jan. 2009 Haarde called elections for early May but within three days the coalition had fallen apart. Talks between the SF and the SSF to form a new coalition failed and Alliance turned instead to the Left-Green Movement. With SF leader Ingibjorg Gísladóttir suffering ill health, Sigurðardóttir was proposed for prime minister. By the end of the month VG had agreed to form a coalition ahead of a general election scheduled for 25 April.

Career in Office

Sigurðardóttir's appointment received international media coverage as she became not only the first woman premier of Iceland but also the world's first openly gay head of government. She led her party to victory at the April 2009 general election, receiving 29.8% of the vote.

Her major challenge has been to restore economic stability. In Feb. 2009 she engineered the removal of the head of the central bank, former prime minister Davíð Oddsson, who was widely blamed for the banking collapse, and in July her government formally applied for membership of the European Union after the Alþingi had voted in favour of accession. Accession negotiations began in July 2010, despite the government having failed to resolve a dispute with the UK and the Netherlands over compensation relating to Iceland's banking collapse. A new proposal to solve the issue received parliamentary backing in Feb. 2011 but was again rejected by voters in a referendum in April. The defeat prompted the opposition Independence Party to table a no-confidence motion against Sigurðardóttir and her government, which she narrowly survived. The dispute was subsequently referred to the European Free Trade Association Surveillance Authority.

Meanwhile, ash clouds from an active volcanic in Iceland in April and May 2010 led to unprecedented bans on commercial flights and airport closures across much of Europe, causing disruption for stranded passengers and heavy financial losses for airlines.

DEFENCE

Iceland possesses no armed forces. Under the North Atlantic Treaty, US forces were stationed for many years in Iceland as the Iceland Defence Force. In Sept. 2006 an agreement was signed between USA and Iceland, withdrawing all US forces from the island.

Navy

There is a paramilitary coastguard of 120.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

Iceland applied to join the European Union in July 2009 and was accepted as an official candidate country in June 2010. It hopes to become a member in 2013.

ECONOMY

Agriculture, hunting, forestry and fishing contributed 6.4% of GDP in 2008, industry 27.3% and services 66.3%.

According to the anti-corruption organization Transparency International, Iceland 13th in a 2011 survey of countries with the least corruption in business and government. It received 8.3 out of 10 in the annual index.

Overview

The economy experienced strong growth in the mid-1990s as a result of privatization and deregulation, per capita income doubling in the two decades to 2007. The strong housing market, in combination with a tight job market, fuelled domestic demand. Favourable household spending conditions further contributed to the growth of GDP, which expanded by more than 20% between 2003–08.

However, this rapid expansion left the economy with large macroeconomic imbalances and high dependency on foreign financing. Financial sector assets amounted to over 1,000% of GDP and gross external indebtedness roughly 550% of GDP by the end of 2007. The global credit squeeze had a significant impact on domestic financial markets. In Oct. 2008 all three of the country's major banks were nationalized in order to stabilize the financial system. The IMF approved a US$2.1bn. loan in Nov. 2008, supplemented by US$3bn. in loans from Iceland's neighbours, to support the króna. The key interest rate reached a record high of 18% and in Jan. 2009 the government collapsed following political turmoil prompted by the crisis.

A new government was elected in April 2009 and has worked in consultation with the IMF on measures to rebuild the economy. Among the most divisive questions has been how to repay the Dutch and British governments for bailing out their depositors in Icesave, owned by the failed Icelandic bank Landsbanki. A law outlining a repayment programme was narrowly passed by parliament in Dec. 2009 but a presidential refusal to ratify the draft law led to a referendum on 6 March 2010 in which 93.2% of voters rejected the legislation. Ahead of the result the government had entered into negotiations on a new deal with the Dutch and British.

Unemployment exceeded 7% in 2009, up from 1% in 2007, but an IMF mission in late 2009 pronounced the recession to be less severe than predicted.

Currency

The unit of currency is the króna (ISK) of 100 aurar (singular: eyrir). Foreign exchange markets were deregulated on 1 Jan. 1992. The króna was devalued 7.5% in June 1993. Inflation rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
6.4%	5.2%	2.1%	3.2%	4.0%	6.7%	5.1%	12.7%	12.0%	5.4%

Foreign exchange reserves were US$3,263m. and gold reserves 64,000 troy oz in Sept. 2009. Total money supply in April 2008 was 420,423m. kr. Note and coin circulation in 2009 was 28,958m. kr.

Budget

Total central government revenue and expenditure for calendar years (in 1m. kr.):

	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009
Revenue	306,851	363,568	412,839	454,588	476,903	447,448
Expenditure	297,591	317,985	350,866	403,199	668,588	571,089

Central government debt was 1,176,436m. kr. on 31 Dec. 2009. Foreign debt amounted to 75,314m. kr. VAT is 25.5% (reduced rate, 7%). Iceland has the highest standard VAT rate of any country.

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
3.9%	0.1%	2.4%	7.8%	7.2%	4.7%	6.0%	1.3%	-6.7%	-4.0%

GDP in 2010 totalled US$12.6bn. In 2009 GDP per capita was US$38,035.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank of Iceland (founded 1961; Governor, Már Guðmundsson) is responsible for note issue and carries out the central banking functions. There were five commercial banks and 12 savings banks operating in 2010. On 31 Dec. 2009 the accounts of the Central Bank balanced at 1,178,082m. kr.

There is a stock exchange in Reykjavík.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Iceland is aiming to become the world's first 'hydrogen economy'; its buses started to convert to fuel cell-powered vehicles in late 2003. Ultimately it aims to run all its transport and even its fishing fleet on hydrogen produced in Iceland.

Environment

Iceland's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 11.1 tonnes per capita. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked Iceland 11th in the world, with 87.6%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources.

Electricity

The installed capacity of public electrical power plants at the end of 2009 totalled 2,579,300 kWh; installed capacity of hydro-electric plants was 1,882,800 kWh. Electricity production in public-owned plants totalled 16,835m. kWh in 2009. Virtually all of Iceland's electricity is produced from hydro power and geothermal energy. Consumption per capita was estimated in 2009 to be 52,858 kWh (the highest in the world).

Agriculture

Of the total area, about six-sevenths is unproductive, but only about 1.3% is under cultivation, which is largely confined to hay and potatoes. Arable land totalled 15,500 ha. in 2007. In 2009 the total hay crop was 2,105,238 cu. metres; the crop of potatoes, 9,500 tonnes; of tomatoes, 1,481 tonnes; and of cucumbers, 1,452 tonnes. Livestock (2009): sheep, 469,429; horses, 77,158; cattle, 73,498 (milk cows, 26,489); pigs, 3,818; poultry, 61,095. Livestock products (2009): lamb and mutton, 8,841 tonnes; poultry, 7,146 tonnes; pork, 6,375 tonnes; beef, 3,761 tonnes. Consumption of dairy products (2007): milk, 124,817 tonnes; cheese, 4,903 tonnes; butter and dairy margarines, 1,753 tonnes.

Forestry

In 2005 forests covered 46,000 ha., or approximately 0.5% of the total land area.

Fisheries

Fishing is of vital importance to the economy. Fishing vessels in 2009 numbered 1,582 with a gross tonnage of 158,253. Total catch in 2006: 1,322,914; 2007: 1,395,716, 2008: 1,283,078; 2009: 1,129,621. Virtually all the fish caught is from marine waters. Iceland has received international praise for its management system, which aims to avoid the over-fishing that has decimated stocks in other parts of the world. Commercial whaling was prohibited in 1989, but recommenced in 2006. In 2009 fisheries accounted for 6.3% of GDP, down from 16.8% in 1996. The per capita consumption of fish and fishery products is the second highest in the world, after that of the Maldives.

INDUSTRY

Production, 2009, in 1,000 tonnes: aluminium, 813.9; ferro-silicon, 135.8. 132,438 tonnes of cement were sold in 2007.

Labour

In 2009 the economically active population was 180,900. The standardized unemployment rate in 2009 was 7.2% (up from 3.0% in 2008). In the period 1996–2005 Iceland averaged 401 working days lost to strikes per 1,000 employees—the highest number in any western European country. In 2009 agriculture and fishing employed 5.2% of the economically active population, industry 19.8% and services 75.0% (including: health services and social work, 16.0%; wholesale, retail trade and repairs, 12.6%).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The economy is heavily trade-dependent.

Imports and Exports

Total value of imports (c.i.f.) and exports (f.o.b.) in 1m. kr.:

	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009
Imports	313,855	432,106	429,469	514,739	446,128

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

On 1 Jan. 2009 the length of the public roads (including roads in towns) was 12,888 km. Of these 7,829 km were main and secondary roads and 5,059 km were provincial roads. Total length of surfaced roads was 4,566 km. A ring road of 1,400 km runs just inland from much of the coast; about 80% of it is smooth-surfaced. Motor vehicles registered at the end of 2009 numbered 238,149, of which 207,226 were passenger cars (643 per 1,000 inhabitants) and 30,923 lorries and vans; there were also 9,420 motorcycles. There were 15 fatal road accidents in 2009 with 17 persons killed.

Civil Aviation

Icelandair is the national carrier. In 2007 it served 18 destinations in western Europe and six in north America. In 2004 it carried 1.3m. passengers. The main international airport is at Keflavik (Leifstöd), with Reykjavik for flights to the Faroe Islands, Greenland and domestic services. Keflavik handled 1,658,409 passengers in 2009 (of which 237,700 transit passengers) and 36,880 tonnes of freight.

Shipping

On 1 Jan. 2008 the merchant fleet consisted of 52 vessels totalling 8,515 GT, including 49 passenger ships and ferries of 7,669 GT.

Telecommunications

The number of telephone main lines was 184,851 in 2009; mobile phone subscribers, 329,932 (more than the population of Iceland and equivalent to 1,039 subscriptions per 1,000 population). In 2008, 90.6% of the population (the highest percentage in the world) were internet users. The fixed broadband penetration rate in Dec. 2010 was 33.7 subscribers per 100 inhabitants.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

In 1992 jurisdiction in civil and criminal cases was transferred from the provincial magistrates to eight new district courts, separating the judiciary from the prosecution. From the district courts there is an appeal to the Supreme Court in Reykjavik, which has eight judges. The population in penal institutions in Sept. 2008 was 140 (44 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Primary education is compulsory and free from 6–16 years of age. Optional secondary education from 16 to 19 is also free. In 2009 there were 42,929 pupils in primary schools, 26,364 in secondary schools (22,262 on day courses) and 17,738 tertiary-level students (13,888 on day courses). Some 10.6% of tertiary-level students study abroad.

There are seven universities and five specialized colleges at tertiary level in Iceland. A total of 17,449 students were enrolled in universities in 2007. Universities (with total students, 2007): University of Iceland (founded 1911), Reykjavik, 9,586; Reykjavik University, 2,907; Iceland University of Education, 2,241; University of Akureyri, 1,305; Bifröst University, 744; Iceland Academy of Arts, 380; Agricultural University of Iceland, 286.

In 2009 public sector spending on education was 7.8% of GDP.

The adult literacy rate is at least 99%.

Health

In 2002 there were 23 hospitals with 2,228 beds, equivalent to 78 per 10,000 population. In 2009 there were 1,190 doctors and surgeons, 2,686 nurses, 334 pharmacists and 294 dentists. There were 3.7 doctors per 1,000 inhabitants in 2007. Iceland has one of the lowest alcohol consumption rates in Europe, at 7.53 litres of alcohol per adult per year (2007). Iceland spent 9.3% of its GDP on health in 2007.

Welfare

The main body of social welfare legislation is consolidated in six acts:

(i) The social security legislation (a) health insurance, including sickness benefits; (b) social security pensions, mainly consisting of old age pension, disablement pension and widows' pension, and also children's pension; (c) employment injuries insurance.

(ii) The unemployment insurance legislation, where daily allowances are paid to those who have met certain conditions.

(iii) The subsistence legislation. This is controlled by municipal government.

(iv) The tax legislation. Prior to 1988 children's support was included in the tax legislation. Since 1988 family allowances are paid directly to all children age 0–15 years. The amount is increased with the second child in the family, and children under the age of seven get additional benefits. Single parents receive additional allowances.

(v) The rehabilitation legislation

(vi) Child and juvenile guidance

Health insurance covers the entire population. Citizenship is not demanded and there is a six-month waiting period. Most hospitals are both municipally and state run, a few solely state run and all offer free medical help. Medical treatment out of hospitals is partly paid by the patient; the same applies to medicines, except medicines of lifelong necessary use, which are paid in full by the health insurance. Dental care is partly paid by the state for children under 17 years old and also for old age and disabled pensioners. Sickness benefits are paid to those who lose income because of periodical illness.

The pension system is composed of the public social security system and some 90 private pension funds. The social security system pays basic old age and disablement pensions of a fixed amount regardless of past or present income, as well as supplementary pensions to individuals with low present income. The pensions are index-linked, i.e. are changed in line with changes in wage and salary rates in the labour market. In the public social security system, entitlement to old age and disablement pensions at the full rates is subject to the condition that the beneficiary has been resident in Iceland for 40 years at the age period of 16–67. For shorter periods of residence, the benefits are reduced proportionally. Entitled to old age pension are all those who are 67 years old, and have been residents in Iceland for three years of the age period of 16–67. Old age and disablement pension are of equally high amount; in the year 2009 the total sum was 351,528 kr. for an individual. Married pensioners receive double the basic pension. Pensioners with little or no other income are entitled to an income supplement; in 2009 the maximum annual income supplement was 1,155,513 kr.

The employment injuries insurance covers medical care, daily allowances, disablement pension and survivors' pension and is applicable to practically all employees.

RELIGION

The national church, the Evangelical Lutheran, is endowed by the state. There is complete religious liberty. The affairs of the national church are under the superintendence of a bishop. In 2010, 251,487 persons (79.2% of the population) were members of it (93.2% in 1980). 16,497 persons (5.2%) belonged to Lutheran free churches. 39,310 persons (12.4%) belonged to other religious organizations and 10,336 persons (3.3%) did not belong to any religious community.

CULTURE*World Heritage Sites

There are two UNESCO sites in Iceland: Þingvellir National Park (2004), located on an active volcanic site; and Surtsey (2008), an island formed by volcanic eruptions in 1963–67.

Press

In 2008 there were four daily newspapers (two paid-for and two free) and 20 non-daily newspapers. Combined circulation was 336,459 (of which dailies accounted for 278,154 and non-dailies 58,305). Iceland has the highest circulation rates of daily newspapers in the world, at 817 per 1,000 adult inhabitants in 2008.

Iceland publishes more books per person than any other country in the world. In 2008, 1,637 volumes of books and booklets were published.

Tourism

There were 459,252 visitors in 2010; revenue totalled 152,941m. kr. Overnight stays in hotels and guest houses in 2009 numbered 1,939,667 (of which foreign travellers, 1,553,927; Icelanders, 385,740). Tourism accounts for 19.4% of foreign currency earnings.

Festivals

Iceland's national day is celebrated on 17 June. The Reykjavík Arts Festival, an annual programme of international artists and performers, is held every May–June. Iceland Airwaves, an annual music festival in Reykjavík, takes place in Oct. There is also a folk festival in March, a blues festival at Easter and a jazz festival in Aug.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The valley of the Indus and its tributaries is divided today between India and Pakistan. Some 7,000 years ago the valley was one of the cradles of civilization. From the Indus Valley, Dravidian peoples spread agriculture and fixed settlements across India, arriving in the far south by about 4,000 years ago. The Indus Valley Harappan civilization, a Bronze Age culture, flourished from around 2300 to 1500 BC and had links with western Asian civilizations in Iran. The two great cities of the Harappan civilization—Mohenjo-Daro and Harappa—were in what is now Pakistan, but Harappan culture also thrived in northwestern India. Writing, fine jewellery and textile production, town planning, metalworking and pottery were the hallmarks of an advanced urban society, which collapsed for reasons unknown.

Another Bronze Age civilization existed in the Ganges Valley. With links to southeastern Asia, a rice-growing rural economy supported a number of city-states. Around 1500 BC a pastoral people, the Aryans, invaded the Indus Valley from Iran and Central Asia. Their arrival completed the destruction of the Harappan civilization and shifted the balance of power in the subcontinent to the Ganges Valley.

The Aryans took over northern and central India, merging their culture with that of the Dravidians. The caste system, still a feature of Indian society, dates back to the Dravidians, but the languages of northern and central India, and the polytheistic religion that is now followed by the majority of the inhabitants of the subcontinent, are both Aryan in origin. From these two cultures, a Hindu civilization emerged.

By 800 BC a series of Hindu kingdoms had developed in the Ganges Valley. This region gave birth to one of the world's great religions: Buddhism. Prince Gautama, the Buddha (c. 563–483 BC), renounced a life of wealth to seek enlightenment. His creed of non-violence was spread throughout India and, later, southeastern Asia. However, Buddhism was partly instrumental in destroying Magdaha, the most powerful of ancient states of the Ganges Valley.

Magdaha was ruled by the Nanda dynasty in the 4th century BC. In 321 BC the Nandas were replaced by the Mauryans under Chandragupta Maurya (reigned 321–297 BC). Chandragupta conquered most of northern India before his ascetic death from self-imposed starvation. His grandson, Ashoka, ruled an empire that stretched from the Deccan to Afghanistan from c. 272–c. 231, but he is mainly remembered for his enthusiasm for Buddhist pacifism. Attacked by enemies who did not share this creed, the Mauryan empire collapsed soon after Ashoka's death.

To the west, the Indus Valley had passed to the Persian Empire by the 5th century BC and then fell to Alexander the Great. After Alexander's death in 323 BC, Greek influences continued to be felt in the northwest of the subcontinent where an Indo-Greek civilization flourished for at least 200 years. This was brought to an end by nomadic invasions from Central Asia between the 1st and 5th centuries AD. By then, India had been divided into many small warring states, most of them short-lived.

Empire Building

However, two strong states emerged briefly to reunite much of India: the Gupta empire and the Harsa empire. The Gupta empire was founded in the Ganges Valley by Chandragupta I (reigned c. 320–30). His warrior son, Samudragupta (reigned c. 330–80), won most of north India, but the empire was destroyed by succession disputes and a Hun invasion in the middle of the 5th century. The Harsa empire was the personal creation of a Buddhist convert, Harsa (reigned 606–47), who briefly ruled most of the north of the subcontinent. With his death, his empire fell apart and India was once more divided into many rival kingdoms.

Although no Hindu state managed to unite India, the Hindu religion and culture proved powerful influences throughout the region. The agents of Hinduism were not kings or soldiers but merchants. By about 500 BC Sri Lanka was within the Hindu sphere of influence. Over the next 800 years Hindu kingdoms were established in Burma, Cambodia, Sumatra, Thailand and Java. From the 4th century BC, Indian merchants also spread Buddhism through southeastern Asia. The great Hindu kingdoms flourished far beyond the subcontinent. The most splendid were the Khmer kingdom based on Angkor Wat in Cambodia and the maritime kingdom of Sriwijaya, based in Sumatra.

While Indian religion and culture spread south and east, an invasion from the west threatened to change the subcontinent. In 713 a Muslim army conquered Sind. For the next 300 years, Islamic rulers were largely confined to what is now Pakistan, but in 1000 a raid by the ruler of Ghazni (now in Afghanistan) overran the Punjab. During the 11th and 12th centuries the Hindu states of the Ganges Valley were toppled by Muslim invaders.

The principal Islamic state of India, following the Muslim conquest of northern India, was the sultanate of Delhi. This powerful state was founded by Qutb-ud-Din Aybak (reigned c. 1208–10), a former slave, who united the Indus and Ganges valleys and founded the Mu'izzi dynasty. Under the short-lived Khaljis dynasty, the sultanate became the leading power in India, largely owing to the military prowess of Sultan 'Ala-ud-Din Khalji (reigned 1296–1316). But by 1388, following the inept rule of the three sultans of the Tughluq dynasty, the sultanate had ceased to be important.

The Delhi sultanate was eventually replaced in the north by the Mughal Empire, which was founded by Babur (reigned 1526–30), a descendant of Timur and Genghis Khan. Akbar the Great (reigned 1556–1605) extended the Mughal Empire, conquering Baluchistan, Gujarat, Bengal, Orissa, Rajasthan, Afghanistan and Bihar. In his campaign against Gujarat, Akbar marched his army 800 km (500 miles) in only 11 days. His grandson, Shah Jahan (reigned 1628–58), a pleasure-seeking ruler, is remembered for constructing the Taj Mahal as a memorial to his favourite wife.

The decline of the Mughal Empire began under Shah Jahan's son, Aurangzeb I (reigned 1658–1707). Aurangzeb persecuted Hindus with a vengeance. Inter-community violence and wars against Hindu states weakened the empire. Throughout the 18th century, disputed successions and fears of assassination diverted the Mughal emperors. By the close of the 18th century the last emperor was nominal ruler of the environs of Delhi.

The main Hindu state of the subcontinent from the 14th century to the 17th century was the kingdom of Vijayanagar, which occupied most of southern India. Harihara I (reigned 1336–54), who had been governor of part of central India for the Mughal emperor, rebelled and established his own kingdom. Under Devaraya II (reigned 1425–47), Vijayanagar included virtually all of southern India and much of Sri Lanka. This kingdom reached its zenith under Krsnadevaraya (reigned 1509–29). He encouraged good relations with the Portuguese who had founded trading posts on his shores. Vijayanagar collapsed in civil wars (1614–46).

The Bahmani sultanate of the Deccan was an Islamic state, which dominated central India from the mid-14th century until the 16th century. This state was founded by 'Ala-ud-Din Hasan Bahmani Shah (reigned 1347–58), the local governor for the sultan of Delhi who rebelled against Delhi and established his own dynasty. For a time the Bahmani sultanate was the most powerful state in central India, but defeats at the hands of the kingdom of Vijayanagar in the 15th century weakened the Bahmani sultans. On the death of the last Bahmani sultan in 1518 the kingdom was divided by the provincial governors into small states.

European Influence

By the 16th century European traders were established along India's coasts. The first to arrive were the Portuguese in 1498. In 1510 the Portuguese took Goa, which was to remain the centre of the fragmented possessions of Portuguese India until 1962. The creation of the (English) East India Company in 1600 heralded the beginning of what was to become the British Indian Empire. Forts were established on the coast in 1619 and in 1661 England took possession of Bombay.

Initially, the Europeans were only interested in trade but they soon became involved in local politics, in particular, the disputed successions that bedevilled Indian states. Portugal and England were not alone in attempting to establish outposts in India. The Dutch were active in the 17th century but were effectively eliminated from the competition before 1759, when Britain took Chinsura, the headquarters of Dutch administration in India. Two small Danish colonies lasted from 1618 until 1858. However, the main threat to British rule in India was France. Although the East India Company controlled parts of Bengal and the Ganges Valley, France was supreme in the Deccan where French forces, and Indian rulers allied to France, held sway over an area twice the size of France itself.

In the 1750s Britain and France fought out their European wars overseas. The defeat of French forces, and France's Indian allies, at the battle of Plassey (1757), by British forces led by Robert Clive (1725–74), confirmed British rule in Bengal and Bihar and ejected France from the Deccan. Henceforth, France was restricted to five small coastal possessions.

The Maratha state was the major power in central and southern India in the 17th and 18th centuries. This empire was founded by Sivaji (1627–80), who built the state between 1653 and 1660. The Hindu Sivaji came into conflict with the fanatical Muslim Mughal emperor Aurangzeb, who imprisoned Sivaji. After his famous escape from captivity, concealed in a fruit basket, Sivaji made himself emperor of his Maratha state in 1674. This pious monarch ruled competently, establishing an efficient administration, but by the time of his grandson, Shahu (reigned 1707–27), the power of the Maratha emperors had been eclipsed by that of their hereditary chief minister, the Peshwa. In 1727 the Peshwa Baji Rao I (reigned 1720–40) effectively replaced the emperor and established his own dynasty. Baji Rao made the Maratha state the strongest in India. His descendant, Baji Rao II (reigned 1795–1817), raised a weakened state against the British and was crushed. He was the last important Indian monarch outside British influence.

East India Company

In the first half of the 19th century, wars against Sind (1843) and the Sikhs in Punjab (1849) extended the borders of British India. By the middle of the 19th century about 60% of the subcontinent was controlled by the East India Company. The remaining 40% was divided between about 620 Indian states, which were, in theory, still sovereign and ruled by their own maharajas, sultans, nawabs and other monarchs, each advised by a British resident. The Indian states ranged from large entities the size of European countries (such as Hyderabad, Baroda, Mysore and Indore) to tiny states no bigger than an English parish.

British rule brought land reform in the areas controlled by the East India Company. The traditional patterns of land holdings was broken up and private land ownership was introduced. This had the unintended result of concentrating ownership in the hands of a small number of powerful landlords. As a result, landless peasants and dispossessed princes united in their opposition to British rule. In 1857 a mutiny by soldiers of the East India Company quickly spread into full-scale rebellion. Throughout India those who resented the speed and nature of the changes brought about by British rule made one final attempt to eject the occupiers. The Indian Mutiny took 14 months to put down.

After the Mutiny the British government replaced the East India Company as the ruler of an Indian colonial empire (1858), and the modernization of India began apace. Emphasis was placed on building up an Indian infrastructure, particularly roads and railways. The participation of Indians within the civil administration, the construction of a vast national railway system and the imposition of the English language did much to forge a national identity overriding the divisions of local state and caste. But in deference to British manufacturers industry in India remained backward. In 1877 the Indian Empire was proclaimed and Queen Victoria became Empress of India (Kaiser-i-Hind).

Growing Nationalism

The (Hindu-dominated) Indian National Congress, the forerunner of the Congress Party, first met in 1885, and in 1906 the rival Muslim League was founded. Demands for Home Rule grew in the early years of the 20th century, and nationalist feeling was fuelled when British troops fired on a nationalist protest meeting—the Amritsar Massacre (1919).

Realizing that change was inevitable, the British government reformed the administration in 1919 and 1935. The creation of an Indian federation removed many of the differences between the Crown territories and the Indian states and granted an Indian government limited autonomy. The pace of reform was, however, too slow for popular opinion.

In 1920 the Congress party began a campaign of non-violence and non-cooperation with the British colonial authorities. Congress was led in its struggle by the charismatic figure of Mahatma Gandhi (1869–1948). The British authorities were forced to concede Gandhi's moral influence but he himself was opposed by the traditional rulers of the Indian states, whose own positions were at risk.

By the start of the Second World War (1939–45), relations between the Hindu and Muslim communities in India had broken down, with the Muslims demanding a separate independent Islamic state, later, Pakistan. During the war, Assam and other northeastern areas were faced with the threat of a Japanese invasion. Although many Indians served in the Allied forces during the war, a minority supported Japan as a possible liberator.

In 1945 Britain had neither the will nor the resources to maintain the Indian Empire. But while Britain accepted independence, religious tension made partition inevitable. In 1947 the sub-continent was divided between India, a predominantly Hindu state led by Jawaharlal (Pandit) Nehru (1889–1964) of the Congress Party, and Pakistan, a Muslim state led by Mohammad Ali Jinnah (1876–1948) of the Muslim League. The rulers of the Indian states were entitled to choose their allegiance while British Crown territories were assigned to either India or Pakistan.

Partitions

Partition brought enormous upheaval. More than 70m. Hindus and Muslims became refugees as they trekked across the new boundaries. Many thousands were killed in intercommunal violence. The Muslim ruler of the large, mainly Hindu, southern Indian state of Hyderabad, declared independence and the adherence of his state to India was only achieved through Indian military intervention. The Hindu ruler of mainly Muslim Kashmir opted to join India, against the wishes of his people. Elsewhere the border remained disputed in many places. Tension increased when Gandhi was assassinated by a Hindu fundamentalist (1948). In 1950 India became a republic.

Tension between India and Pakistan erupted into war in 1947–49 when the two countries fought over Kashmir. The region was divided along a ceasefire line, although neither side recognized this as an international border. India and Pakistan went to war again over Kashmir in 1965 and again in 1971 when Bangladesh (formerly East Pakistan) gained its independence as a result of Indian military intervention. Indian forces saw action in 1961 when Indian troops invaded and annexed Portuguese India and in 1962 in a border war with China. France had already ceded its small enclaves to India in 1950 and 1955. In 1975 India annexed the small Himalayan kingdom of Sikkim.

Despite its involvement in several wars, India assumed joint leadership of the non-aligned world. Pandit Nehru, premier from 1947 to 1964, was briefly succeeded by Lal Bahadur Shastri. In 1966 Nehru's daughter Indira Gandhi (1917–84) became premier. Under Mrs Gandhi, India continued to assert itself as a regional power and the rival of Pakistan. Although non-aligned, India developed close relations with the Soviet Union.

In 1971 Mrs Gandhi's government abolished the titles, pensions and privileges guaranteed to the Indian princes at independence as compensation for merging their states into India. India was wracked by local separatism and communal unrest. From 1975 to 1977 Mrs Gandhi imposed a state of emergency. Her actions split the Congress Party, allowing Morarji Desai (1896–1995) of the Janata Party to form India's first non-Congress administration. However, his coalition soon shattered and a wing of Congress, led by Mrs Gandhi, was returned to power in 1980.

Violence in Sikh areas, fanned by demands by militant Sikhs for an independent homeland (called Khalistan) increased tensions. In 1984 Mrs Gandhi ordered that the Golden Temple in Amritsar be stormed after it had been turned into a storehouse for weapons by Sikh extremists. Soon afterwards, Mrs Gandhi was assassinated by her Sikh bodyguards.

Mrs Gandhi was succeeded as premier by her son, Rajiv (1944–91), during whose period of office India became involved in Sri Lanka, supporting the central government against the separatist Tamil Tigers movement. Rajiv Gandhi was assassinated by a Tamil Tiger suicide bomber during the 1991 election campaign.

Recent Politics

By 1989 personality clashes and separatists tendencies had shattered the unity of the once all-powerful Congress Party. Regional parties and Hindu nationalist parties came to the fore and, since 1989, when Rajiv Gandhi left office, coalitions have held office. Seven prime ministers have led India since 1989: the longest periods in office were enjoyed by P. V. Narasimha Rao (born 1921), who led a coalition from 1991 to 1996, and Atal Bihari Vajpayee (born 1924), who was premier in 1996 and held office again from 1998–2004. The right-wing Hindu nationalist Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) has joined most of these coalitions. Support for the BJP increased following violence between Hindus and Muslims over a campaign, begun in 1990, to build a Hindu temple on the site of a mosque in the holy city of Ayodhya.

Since the fall of the Soviet Union (1991), India has retreated from state ownership and protectionism. Privatization has been accompanied by an economic revolution that has seen the development of high tech industries. At the same time, India has become a nuclear power. Although India exploded its first nuclear device in 1974, tests in 1998 confirmed the nation's capability to deliver these weapons.

There have been 35,000 deaths since the outbreak of the Kashmir insurgency in 1988. Negotiations with Pakistan over the future of the disputed territory began in July 1999. Hopes of avoiding further violence were set back in Dec. 2001, in an attack on the Indian parliament by suicide bombers. 13 people died. Although no group claimed responsibility, Kashmiri separatists were blamed. However, Pakistani President Pervez Musharraf's subsequent crackdown on militants helped to bring the two countries back from the brink of war. Tension between India and Pakistan increased following an attack on an Indian army base in Indian-occupied Kashmir on 14 May 2002. The attack, which killed 31 people, was linked to Islamic terrorists infiltrating the Kashmir valley from Pakistan. It drew widespread criticism of President Musharraf for failing to combat terrorism in the disputed region. In Feb. 2002, 58 Hindu pilgrims returning from Ayodhya were killed when their train was set on fire following a confrontation with a Muslim crowd at Godhra in Gujarat. The incident led to three months of intermittent communal rioting, during which at least 800 Muslims died in attacks by Hindus. Relations between India and Pakistan cooled again in Aug. 2003 when 50 people were killed by terrorist bombings in Mumbai (Bombay). The two countries then embarked on a new phase of peace negotiations. In May 2004 India elected Manmohan Singh as its first Sikh prime minister. The peace process was set back when unidentified terrorists killed over 200 people and injured 700 more in a series of co-ordinated train bombings in Mumbai on 11 July 2006. In Dec. 2008 talks were temporarily suspended, a month after nearly 200 people died when gunmen launched a series of attacks on buildings in Mumbai's tourism and financial district. India claimed that Pakistani-based militants were responsible.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

India is bounded in the northwest by Pakistan, north by China (Tibet), Nepal and Bhutan, east by Myanmar, and southeast, south and southwest by the Indian Ocean. The far eastern states and territories are almost separated from the rest by Bangladesh. The area is 3,287,263 sq. km. A Sino-Indian agreement of 7 Sept. 1993 settled frontier disputes dating from the war of 1962. Population, 2011 census (provisional): 1,210,193,422 (51.5% male and 48.5% female), giving a density of 382 persons per sq. km. There are also 20m. Indians and ethnic Indians living abroad, notably in Malaysia, the USA, Saudi Arabia, the UK and South Africa. 68.8% of the population was rural in 2011. Goa is the most urban state, at 62.2% in 2011; and Himachal Pradesh the most rural, at 90.0% in 2011. More than 40% of Indians are under 20.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 1,308.22m.

By 2050 India is expected to have a population of 1.66bn. It is projected to overtake China as the world's most populous country around 2026.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Many births and deaths go unregistered. The Registrar General's data suggests a birth rate for 2009 of 22.5 per 1,000 population and a death rate of 7.3, which would indicate in a year approximately 27.2m. births and 8.8m. deaths. The growth rate is, however, slowing, and by 2010 had dropped to 1.4%, having been over 2% in 1991. Expectation of life at birth, 2007, 62.0 years for males and 64.9 years for females. In 2005, 52% of the population was aged under 25.

Many marriages and divorces go unregistered. A marriage can be registered under either of the two Marriage Acts: the Hindu Marriage Act, 1955; or the Special Marriage Act, 1954. To be eligible for marriage the minimum age limit is 21 for males and 18 for females. However, a survey carried out in 2005–06 found that 44.5% of women aged 20–24 had been married before the legal age of 18 (which has applied since 1978). Population growth rate, 2001–11, 17.64% (the lowest since 1941–51). Infant mortality, 2009, 50 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 2.7 births per woman. Child deaths (under the age of five) fell from 123 per 1,000 in 1990 to 64 per 1,000 in 2009.

CLIMATE

India has a variety of climatic sub-divisions. In general, there are four seasons. The cool one lasts from Dec. to March, the hot season is in April and May, the rainy season is June to Sept., followed by a further dry season until Nov. Rainfall, however, varies considerably, from 4" (100 mm) in the N.W. desert to over 400" (10,000 mm) in parts of Assam.

Range of temperature and rainfall: New Delhi, Jan. 57°F (13.9°C), July 88°F (31.1°C). Annual rainfall 26" (640 mm). Chennai, Jan. 76°F (24.4°C), July 87°F (30.6°C). Annual rainfall 51" (1,270 mm). Cherrapunji, Jan. 53°F (11.7°C), July 68°F (20°C). Annual rainfall 432" (10,798 mm). Darjeeling, Jan. 41°F (5°C), July 62°F (16.7°C). Annual rainfall 121" (3,035 mm). Hyderabad, Jan. 72°F (22.2°C), July 80°F (26.7°C). Annual rainfall 30" (752 mm). Kochi, Jan. 80°F (26.7°C), July 79°F (26.1°C). Annual rainfall 117" (2,929 mm). Kolkata, Jan. 67°F (19.4°C), July 84°F (28.9°C). Annual rainfall 64" (1,600 mm). Mumbai, Jan. 75°F (23.9°C), July 81°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 72" (1,809 mm). Patna, Jan. 63°F (17.2°C), July 90°F (32.2°C). Annual rainfall 46" (1,150 mm).

On 26 Dec. 2004 an undersea earthquake centred off the Indonesian island of Sumatra caused a huge tsunami that flooded coastal areas in southern India resulting in 16,000 deaths. In total there were more than 225,000 deaths in 14 countries.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was passed by the Constituent Assembly on 26 Nov. 1949 and came into force on 26 Jan. 1950. It has since been amended 96 times.

India is a republic and comprises a Union of 28 States and seven Union Territories. Each State is administered by a Governor appointed by the President for a term of five years while each Union Territory is administered by the President through a Lieut.-Governor or an administrator appointed by him. The head of the Union (head of state) is the President in whom all executive power is vested, to be exercised on the advice of ministers responsible to Parliament. The President, who must be an Indian citizen at least 35 years old and eligible for election to the House of the People, is elected by an electoral college of all the elected members of Parliament and of the state legislative assemblies, holds office for five years and is eligible for re-election. There is also a Vice-President who is ex officio chairman of the Council of States.

There is a Council of Ministers to aid and advise the President; this comprises Ministers who are members of the Cabinet and Ministers of State and deputy ministers who are not. A Minister who for any period of six consecutive months is not a member of either House of Parliament ceases to be a Minister at the expiration of that period. The Prime Minister is appointed by the President; other Ministers are appointed by the President on the Prime Minister's advice. The salary of each Minister is ₹50,000 per month.

Parliament consists of the President, the Council of States (Rajya Sabha) and the House of the People (Lok Sabha). The Council of States, or the Upper House, normally consists of 245 members; in Nov. 2011 there were 232 elected members, ten members nominated by the President and three vacancies. The election to this house is indirect; the representatives of each State are elected by the elected members of the Legislative Assembly of that State. The Council of States is a permanent body not liable to dissolution, but one-third of the members retire every second year. The House of the People, or the Lower House, normally consists of 545 members—543 directly elected on the basis of adult suffrage from territorial constituencies in the States and the Union territories, and two nominated members of the Anglo-Indian Community. In March 2010 the Council of States approved a bill that would reserve a third of seats in the House of the People (and in each state legislature) for women. The bill is yet to go before the lower house, where it requires two-thirds support to become law. In Nov. 2011 in the House of the People there were 542 elected members, two nominated members and one vacancy. Unless sooner dissolved it continues for a period of five years from the date appointed for its first meeting; in emergency, Parliament can extend the term by one year.

State Legislatures

For every State there is a legislature which consists of the Governor, and (a) two Houses, a Legislative Assembly and a Legislative Council, in the States of Bihar, Jammu and Kashmir, Karnataka, Madhya Pradesh (where it is provided for but not in operation), Maharashtra and Uttar Pradesh, and (b) one House, a Legislative Assembly, in the other States. Every Legislative Assembly, unless sooner dissolved, continues for five years from the date appointed for its first meeting. In emergency the term can be extended by one year. Every State Legislative Council is a permanent body and is not subject to dissolution, but one-third of the members retire every second year. Parliament can, however, abolish an existing Legislative Council or create a new one, if the proposal is supported by a resolution of the Legislative Assembly concerned.

Legislation

The various subjects of legislation are enumerated in three lists in the seventh schedule to the constitution. List I, the Union List, consists of 97 subjects (including defence, foreign affairs, communications, currency and coinage, banking and customs) with respect to which the Union Parliament has exclusive power to make laws. The State legislature has exclusive power to make laws with respect to the 66 subjects in list II, the State List; these include police and public order, agriculture and irrigation, education, public health and local government. The powers to make laws with respect to the 47 subjects (including economic and social planning, legal questions and labour and price control) in list III, the Concurrent List, are held by both Union and State governments, though the former prevails. But Parliament may legislate with respect to any subject in the State List in circumstances when the subject assumes national importance or during emergencies.

Fundamental Rights

Two chapters of the constitution deal with fundamental rights and 'Directive Principles of State Policy'. 'Untouchability' is abolished, and its practice in any form is punishable. The fundamental rights can be enforced through the ordinary courts of law and through the Supreme Court of the Union. The directive principles cannot be enforced through the courts of law; they are nevertheless fundamental in the governance of the country.

Citizenship

Under the Constitution, every person who was on the 26 Jan. 1950 domiciled in India and (a) was born in India or (b) either of whose parents was born in India or (c) who has been ordinarily resident in the territory of India for not less than five years immediately preceding that date became a citizen of India. Special provision is made for migrants from Pakistan and for Indians resident abroad. The right to vote is granted to every person who is a citizen of India and who is not less than 18 years of age on a fixed date and is not otherwise disqualified.

Parliament

Parliament and the state legislatures are organized according to the following schedule (figures show distribution of seats in Oct. 2011 for the Lok Sabha, the Rajya Sabha and the State Legislatures):

Language

The Constitution provides that the official language of the Union shall be Hindi in the Devanagari script. Hindi is spoken by over 30% of the population. It was originally provided that English should continue to be used for all official purposes until 1965. But the Official Languages Act 1963 provides that, after the expiry of this period of 15 years from the coming into force of the Constitution, English might continue to be used, in addition to Hindi, for all official purposes of the Union for which it was being used immediately before that day, and for the transaction of business in Parliament. According to the Official Languages (Use for official purposes of the Union) Rules 1976, an employee may record in Hindi or in English without being required to furnish a translation thereof in the other language and no employee possessing a working knowledge of Hindi may ask for an English translation of any document in Hindi except in the case of legal or technical documents.

The 58th amendment to the Constitution (26 Nov. 1987) authorized the preparation of a constitution text in Hindi.

The following 22 languages are included in the Eighth Schedule to the Constitution (with 2003 estimate of speakers): Assamese (16.5m.), Bengali (87.6m.), Bodo (1.5m.), Dogri (2.7m.), Gujarati (51.2m.), Hindi (424.7m.), Kannada (41.2m.), Kashmiri (5.0m.), Konkani (2.2m.), Maithili (9.8m.), Malayalam (38.3m.), Manipuri (1.6m.), Marathi (78.7m.), Nepali (2.6m.), Odia (35.3m.), Punjabi (29.4m.), Sanskrit (fewer than 1m.), Santhali (6.6m.), Sindhi (2.7m.), Tamil (66.7m.), Telugu (83.1m.), Urdu (54.7m.). It is estimated that over 850 different languages are spoken throughout the country.

CURRENT LEADERS

Pratibha Patil

Position
President

Introduction

Pratibha Patil was sworn in as India's first female president in July 2007. Backed by the ruling United Progressive Alliance (UPA) and the Left Front, she won nearly two-thirds of the votes cast in state assemblies and in India's parliament.

Early Life

Pratibha Patil was born on 19 Dec. 1934 in Nadgaon, Maharashtra. She graduated with a masters degree in political science and economics from Mooljee Jaitha College, Jalgaon and then studied at the Government Law College in Mumbai. She worked at the Jalgaon District Court before entering politics in 1962 when she successfully contested a seat in the Maharashtra State Assembly, representing the Indian National Congress (INC) party. Following re-election in 1967 she was appointed deputy minister working in the offices of public health, prohibition, tourism, housing and parliamentary affairs. From 1972–77 she held several cabinet portfolios including social welfare, public health and prohibition, rehabilitation and cultural affairs.

When the INC split in 1977 after Indira Gandhi's electoral defeat in the wake of the Indian Emergency, Patil remained loyal to Gandhi. She protested the arrest of Gandhi in Dec. 1977 and was herself arrested and imprisoned for ten days. Patil was appointed minister for education in 1978 and became leader of the opposition in the state assembly in July 1979 when Congress (Urs), a breakaway faction of the INC, came to power. The INC returned to power in 1980 and Patil was a frontrunner for the post of chief minister of Maharashtra but ultimately lost out to A. R. Antulay. She returned to the Maharashtra state assembly where she was minister for urban development and housing from 1982–83, then minister for civil supplies and social welfare from 1983–85.

In 1985 Patil was elected as an INC representative to the Rajya Sabha, parliament's upper house. Between 1986–88 she was variously deputy chairperson of the house, a member of the business advisory committee and chairman of the committee of privileges. Following a rift with Prabha Rau, president of the Maharashtra Pradesh Congress Committee (MPCC), Patil was chosen by Rajiv Gandhi as Rau's replacement in 1988, holding the post until 1990. In the elections of 1991 Patil was elected to the 10th Lok Sabha, the lower house of parliament, where she was chairperson of the House Committee. Having completed her term in April 1996 she did not stand for re-election.

In Nov. 2004 Patil became the first female governor of Rajasthan. In this capacity she refused to sign the contentious Rajasthan Freedom of Religion Bill in 2006, which had been introduced by the Bharatiya Janata Party-led state government and sought to ban forced religious conversion. Patil held that clauses in the bill infringed fundamental rights, including freedom of speech and freedom to practise and propagate religion.

Patil was announced as the United Progressive Alliance (UPA)–Left Front presidential candidate on 14 June 2007, the result of a last-minute compromise between the UPA and Left Front. Her campaign was marred by a series of allegations against her, including claims of a murder cover-up and financial irregularities. However, the allegations were not substantiated and she became president on 21 July 2007.

Career in Office

Though chiefly a ceremonial role, as president Patil has to navigate and reconcile the frequently bitter divides of party politics. A keen supporter of rights for women and the poor, she has championed the spread of education to all Indian children—in April 2010 legislation guaranteeing free schooling for children aged 6–14 came into effect—and has pledged to tackle abuses such as female infanticide.

Manmohan Singh

Position
Prime Minister

Introduction

After three decades as a civil servant, the quietly-spoken former academic and economist was sworn in as India's first Sikh prime minister on 22 May 2004. His appointment followed the general election victory of the Indian National Congress over the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP; Indian People's Party) and Sonia Gandhi's unexpected rejection of the top job. A low-profile technocrat and adviser throughout the 1970s and 1980s, Singh came to the fore in 1991 when he was appointed finance minister in the cabinet of P. V. Narasimha Rao. India was in severe financial crisis and Manmohan Singh is credited with bringing about a fundamental change of direction, becoming known as the 'architect of India's economic reform'. His coalition won an emphatic victory at the 2009 elections, coming close to winning an absolute majority in parliament.

Early Life

Manmohan Singh was born in Gah, West Punjab (now in Pakistan), on 26 Sept. 1932, the son of a shopkeeper. He was educated at Punjab University in the newly-established city of Chandigarh (built to replace Lahore as the capital of the Indian state of Punjab following the formation of Pakistan in 1947).

He also attended the universities of Cambridge and Oxford in England on scholarships and won Cambridge's prestigious Adam Smith Prize in 1956. Returning to India as an economics lecturer, he remained at Punjab University before being made professor in 1963. Three years later he joined UNCTAD (the UN Conference on Trade and Development) at the United Nations Secretariat in New York, as economic affairs officer. In 1969 Singh returned to India and joined the School of Economics at the University of Delhi as professor of international trade.

Cutting short his academic career in 1971, Singh joined Indira Gandhi's New Congress Party-led government to serve as an economic adviser to the ministry of foreign trade and, from 1972–76, as chief economic adviser in the finance ministry. Stronger ties with the USSR, which influenced Indian economic policy and brought in new aid agreements, marked this period. In 1976 Singh became director of the Reserve Bank of India, a post he held for four years. From 1982–85 he was governor of the Reserve Bank of India and then deputy chairman of the Planning Commission from 1985–87, undertaking various assignments at the International Monetary Fund and the Asian Development Bank. He was first selected for the Rajya Sabha (the upper house of parliament) in 1991, representing the Congress.

In 1991, with India in financial crisis, Singh was appointed finance minister in P. V. Narasimha Rao's cabinet. Foreign exchange reserves were nearly exhausted and the country was close to defaulting on its international debt. In his maiden speech as finance minister, Singh quoted Victor Hugo—'No power on earth can stop an idea whose time has come'—and brought in an ambitious and unprecedented economic reform programme. He slashed red tape, simplified the tax system and ended the 'license Raj' regulations that forced businesses to get government approval for most decisions. He also devalued the rupee, cut subsidies for domestically produced goods, and privatized some state-run companies. Singh spoke of wanting to 'release the innovative, entrepreneurial spirit which was always there in India in such a manner that our economy would grow at a much faster pace, sooner than most people believed.' The recipe worked; industry picked up, inflation was checked, and growth rates remained consistently high through the 1990s (his policies were broadly continued by the BJP-led coalition after they were elected in 1996).

Career in Office

When Singh was sworn in as prime minister on 22 May 2004, he took on a healthy economy. GDP growth was at 7%, foreign exchange reserves were comfortable at US$118bn. and inflation stood at just 4%. However, hundreds of millions of Indians were still living in poverty and Singh faced a tough task in bringing about improvements in living standards, while balancing the demands of leftist and communist parties in the coalition. His first address as prime minister called for 'economic reforms with a human face' stressing the need to achieve friendly relations with neighbouring countries, especially Pakistan. Although Singh has a reputation for honesty and even-handedness, there were some questions about his lack of election-winning political experience—he failed to win a seat in the Lok Sabha (Lower House) elections for South Delhi in 1999.

While India's economy continued to perform strongly, Singh's early premiership had to contend with the devastating effects of a number of severe natural disasters, including the tsunami across the Indian Ocean in Dec. 2004 which hit coastal communities in the south of the country and the Andaman and Nicobar Islands, floods and landslides in Maharashtra in July 2005 and an earthquake in Kashmir in Oct. 2005.

Terrorism has remained a serious problem for the government. Bomb attacks on commuter trains and railway stations in Mumbai in July 2006 killed about 200 people. This atrocity, blamed by India on Pakistan's intelligence services, threatened to undermine previous improvements in the volatile relations between the two nuclear-armed neighbours. A further terrorist bomb attack in Feb. 2007 on a train travelling from New Delhi to Lahore in Pakistan killed about 70 people. Terrorist incidents continued in 2008, particularly in Nov. when suspected Islamic extremists launched a co-ordinated series of attacks on prominent landmarks in India's commercial capital, Mumbai, killing civilians with grenades and machine guns and taking foreign hostages before being overcome by the security forces. The slaughter, in which some 190 people died, led to the resignation of the home affairs minister. India blamed militants from Pakistan for the atrocity, leading Singh's government to lodge a formal protest. Bilateral talks between the two countries resumed following Singh's positive meeting with his Pakistani counterpart in April 2010 at a summit meeting of the South Asian Association for Regional Co-operation in Bhutan and, despite further terrorist attacks in Mumbai and Delhi in July and Sept. 2011, the two leaders met again in Nov. pledging to open a fresh chapter in bilateral relations. Singh has nevertheless continued to insist that Pakistan do more to dismantle terror organizations operating from its territory.

Although India is not party to the Nuclear Non-Proliferation Treaty, Singh and the then US president, George W. Bush, signed a controversial agreement in March 2006 giving India access to US civilian nuclear energy technology in return for having its nuclear sites inspected. The deal was approved by the US Congress in Dec. 2006, but was then stalled by political opposition within the Indian parliament. In July 2008 left-wing parties withdrew their parliamentary support for Singh's government, but it survived a no-confidence vote that cleared the way for it to try and finalize the agreement. In the USA the deal was signed into law by President Bush in Oct. Also in Oct. 2008, Singh signed a security co-operation agreement with Japan during a visit to Tokyo.

Following the victory at the general election in April and May 2009 of the United Progressive Alliance (of which the Indian National Congress won nearly 80% of the vote), Singh became only the second Indian prime minister after Indira Gandhi to hold office for two consecutive terms. Since then, although the economy has continued to prosper, Singh has faced considerable domestic criticism for his handling of a series of high-profile corruption scandals (in relation to which Anna Hazare, a prominent social activist, staged a hunger strike in Aug. 2011 in protest at the weak government legislative response to state graft), for the poor organization that plagued the preparations for the Commonwealth Games staged in New Delhi in Oct. 2010 and for controversial retail sector reform plans. There have also been protests in Andhra Pradesh both for and against the government's proposal to create a separate state called Telangana, as well as disquiet over a high court ruling that one of the most bitterly contested religious sites in India at Ayodhya should be divided between both Muslims and Hindus.

DEFENCE

The Supreme Command of the Armed Forces is vested in the president. As well as armed forces of 1,325,000 personnel in 2006, there are 1,721,000 active paramilitary forces including 208,000 members of the Border Security Force based mainly in the troubled Jammu and Kashmir region. Military service is voluntary but, under the amended constitution, it is regarded as a fundamental duty of every citizen to perform National Service when called upon. Defence expenditure in 2008 was US$30,030m. (US$25 per capita and 2.5% of GDP), a real-term increase of 5% on the previous year. In 2007 defence spending represented 2.5% of GDP. In the period 2006–10 India's spending on major conventional weapons was the highest of any country, at US$11.1bn. In Sept. 2003 India announced that it would be buying 66 Hawk trainer fighter jets; 24 were received directly from BAE Systems, with the last arriving in Nov. 2009, and 42 are being manufactured in India. A further agreement was signed in July 2010 ensuring India would receive an additional 57 aircraft. In Oct. 2003 agreement was reached for India to purchase Israel's sophisticated US$1bn. Phalcon early-warning radar system.

Nuclear Weapons

India's first nuclear test was in 1974. Its most recent tests were a series of five carried out in May 1998. According to the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, India's nuclear arsenal was estimated to consist of 80–100 nuclear warheads in Jan. 2011. India, known to have a nuclear weapons programme, has not signed the Comprehensive Nuclear-Test-Ban-Treaty, which is intended to bring about a ban on any nuclear explosions. According to Deadly Arsenals, published by the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, India has chemical weapons and has a biological weapons research programme. In 2006 the USA and India announced a civil nuclear co-operation initiative. Under the terms of the deal, India was exempted from a ban on nuclear energy sales that had previously covered non-signatories of the international non-proliferation treaty, of which India is one. In return India agreed to open up 14 of its 22 nuclear installations to international inspections. The agreement was signed in Oct. 2008.

Army

The Army is organized into six commands covering different areas, which in turn are subdivided into sub-areas, plus a training command.

The strength of the Army in 2006 was 1.1m. There are four 'RAPID' divisions, 18 infantry divisions, ten mountain divisions, three armoured divisions and two artillery divisions. Each division consists of several brigades. Officers are trained at the Indian Military Academy, Dehra Dun (Uttarakhand). Army reserves number 300,000 with a further 500,000 personnel available as a second-line reserve force. There is a volunteer Territorial Army of 40,000. There are numerous paramilitary groups including the Ministry of Defence Rashtriya Rifles (numbering 57,000), the Indo-Tibetan Border Police (36,300), the State Armed Police (450,000), the Civil Defence (500,000), the Central Industrial Security Force (94,000) and the Ministry of Home Affairs Assam Rifles (63,900). An Army Aviation Corps was established in 1986.

Navy

The Navy has three commands; Eastern (at Visakhapatnam), Western (at Mumbai) and Southern (at Kochi), the latter a training and support command. The fleet is divided into two elements, Eastern and Western; and well-trained, all-volunteer personnel operate a mix of Soviet and western vessels. In May 2003 India held joint naval exercises with Russia in the Arabian Sea for the first time since the collapse of the Soviet Union.

The principal ship is the light aircraft carrier, Viraat, formerly HMS Hermes, of 29,000 tonnes, completed in 1959 and transferred to the Indian Navy in 1987 after seeing service in the Falklands War. In 2003 India began construction of another aircraft carrier and began negotiations to purchase a third from the Russian navy. The fleet includes 12 Soviet-built diesel submarines and four new German-designed submarines. There are also 25 destroyers and frigates. The Naval Air force was 7,000-strong in 2006; equipment includes 34 combat aircraft. Main bases are at Mumbai (main dockyard), Goa, Visakhapatnam and Kolkata on the sub-continent and Port Blair in the Andaman Islands.

Naval personnel in 2006 numbered 55,000 including 5,000 Naval Air Arm and 1,200 marines.

Air Force

Units of the IAF are organized into five operational commands—Central at Allahabad, Eastern at Shillong, Southern at Thiruvananthapuram, South-Western at Gandhinagar and Western at Delhi. There is also a training command and a maintenance command. The air force has 170,000 personnel.

Equipment includes more than 850 combat aircraft. Major combat types include Su-30s, MiG-21s, MiG-23s, MiG-27s, MiG-29s, Jaguars and Mirage 2000s. Air Force reserves numbered 140,000 in 2006.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 17.6% of GDP in 2008 (down from 55% in 1950), industry 28.2% (up from 15% in 1950) and services 54.2% (up from 30% in 1950).

Since the late 1990s a divide has become increasingly pronounced between the south and west, where a modern economy is booming in cities such as Bangalore, Hyderabad and Chennai, and the poorer and politically volatile areas in the north and east.

Overview

After independence India adopted a policy of import substituting industrialization (ISI). Protected by tariffs, a broad industrial base was built that initially generated strong growth. In 1991 a balance of payments and foreign currency reserve crisis prompted market reforms that have helped India to become one of the world's fastest-growing economies. A 2007 report by Goldman Sachs suggested that if current growth patterns continued, India could be the world's second largest economy by 2050, behind China and ahead of the USA.

Industrial licensing (determining how much entrepreneurs could manufacture) was abolished and trade barriers lowered after India joined the World Trade Organization in 1995. Foreign direct investment rose from almost nothing to US$8bn. in 2005 and over US$40bn. in 2008. With its economy continuing to expand in the face of the global financial crisis, India remains an attractive destination for capital inflows.

India achieved annual growth of over 8% on average between 2004 and 2008, while at the same time reducing poverty. In 2008 and 2009 the economy experienced a decline from previous high rates as a result of global economic cooling. At the request of the government, the World Bank approved four loans worth US$4.3bn. in Sept. 2009. The economy began to recover in mid-2009, led by domestic demand and, in particular, investment in infrastructure. Inflation rose to 11% in the first half of 2010 and, although it has since fallen back to single digits, remains a concern.

Liberalization has contributed to increased foreign participation and growth in durable consumer goods, including cars, scooters, electronics, computer systems and white goods. The service sector has become the economy's most dynamic, with India a world leader in telecommunications, IT and pharmaceuticals. It is also an international centre for outsourcing services, particularly for the USA.

Half of the nation's workforce is employed in agriculture, which accounts for 16% of total output. The high numbers employed in unproductive agriculture significantly limits the potential for non-agricultural demand and the development of other sectors. Sustained poverty reduction will be difficult until agricultural productivity is raised and the rural infrastructure developed.

Human development indicators are among the lowest in the world, especially in rural areas. 37.2% of the population, about 410m. people, live below the poverty line. This accounts for one third of the world's poor. Ambitious programmes to improve living conditions for the poor are under way, using resources generated from recent growth. A demographic bulge of people reaching the working age has led to a rise in the savings rate, with the IMF anticipating that gross savings will reach 41.7% of GDP by 2015.

The government's fiscal deficit accounted for 9.2% of GDP in 2010, while public debt stands at around 55%. A dip in growth in the final quarter of 2011 to just below 7% led to concerns over India's ability to sustain its rapid growth in the long term. The cooling partly reflects a global economic slowdown but also years of government failure to enact major structural reforms, leading to a loss in investor confidence. Tackling bottlenecks in the power industry and improving the quality of transport, health and education services are crucial to long-term growth.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Indian rupee (INR) of 100 paise. Since July 2010 the Indian rupee has been represented by the symbol ₹. Foreign exchange reserves were US$261,247m. in Aug. 2009 and gold reserves 11.50m. troy oz. Inflation rates (based on IMF statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
3.7%	4.5%	3.7%	3.9%	4.0%	6.3%	6.4%	8.3%	10.9%	12.0%

India's 2010 inflation rate was the highest since 1998. The official exchange rate was abolished on 1 March 1993; the rupee now has a single market exchange rate and is convertible. The pound sterling is the currency of intervention. Total money supply in July 2009 was ₹12,133.0bn.

Budget

Central government revenues in 2007–08 (fiscal year beginning 1 April 2007) totalled ₹7,101,000m.; expenditures totalled ₹7,474,300m. in 2007–08.

Principal sources of revenue in 2007–08 were: taxes on income, profits and capital gains, ₹3,118,700m.; taxes on goods and services, ₹1,767,500m.; taxes on international trade and transactions, ₹1,041,200m. Main items of expenditure by economic type in 2007–08 were: grants, ₹2,160,300m.; subsidies, ₹1,705,200m.; interest, ₹1,659,500m.

VAT was introduced on 1 April 2005, at 12.5% (reduced rates, 4% and 1%).

Performance

India has one of the fastest-growing economies in Asia. Real GDP growth rates (based on IMF statistics):

2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
4.6%	6.9%	7.6%	9.0%	9.5%	10.0%	6.2%	6.8%	10.1%

Recent years have seen a growing disparity between the performance of India's richest states, mainly in the south and the west, and the poorest states, generally in the east and the north.

Total GDP in 2010 was US$1,729.0bn.

Banking and Finance

The Reserve Bank, the central bank for India, was established in 1934 and started functioning on 1 April 1935 as a shareholder's bank; it became a nationalized institution on 1 Jan. 1949. It has the sole right of issuing currency notes. The Governor is Duvvuri Subbarao. The Bank acts as adviser to the government on financial problems and is the banker for central and state governments, commercial banks and some other financial institutions. It manages the rupee public debt of central and state governments and is the custodian of the country's exchange reserve. The Bank has extensive powers of regulation of the banking system, directly under the Banking Regulation Act, 1949, and indirectly by the use of variations in Bank rate, variation in reserve ratios, selective credit controls and open market operations.

Scheduled commercial banks are categorized in five different groups according to their ownership and/or nature of operation: the State Bank of India and its six associates; 19 nationalized banks; regional rural banks; foreign banks; and other scheduled commercial banks (in the private sector). Total deposits in commercial banks, March 2007, stood at ₹26,970,000m. The State Bank of India acts as the agent of the Reserve Bank for transacting government business as well as undertaking commercial functions. In 2010 India received US$24.6bn. worth of foreign direct investment. FDI inflows in 2009 were more than 15 times the level of 1999.

There are stock exchanges in Ahmedabad, Chennai, Delhi, Kolkata, Mumbai and 18 other centres.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

India's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 accounted for 4.9% of the world total (the fourth highest after China, the USA and Russia). However, this was equivalent to just 1.3 tonnes per capita, well below the global average and the lowest figure for any major industrial country. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked India 120th in the world out of 149 countries analysed, with 60.3%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007–08 was 168m. kW. In 2002 nearly 520,000 villages out of 600,000 had electricity. Production of electricity in 2005–06 was 623.8bn. kWh, of which 81.1% came from thermal stations, 16.3% from hydro-electric stations and 2.8% from nuclear stations. In 2010 there were 19 nuclear reactors in use. An additional four reactors were under construction. Electricity consumption per capita in 2009–10 was 779 kWh. Electricity demand exceeds supply, making power surges and cuts frequent. According to the 2011 census 67% of households had electricity, up from 56% in 2001; 93% of urban households had electricity in 2011 compared to 55% of rural households.

Oil and Gas

Oil and Natural Gas Corporation Ltd and Oil India Ltd are the only producers of crude oil. Production 2008, 36.1m. tonnes. The main fields are in Assam and Gujarat and offshore in the Gulf of Cambay (the Mumbai High field). India imports 70% of its annual oil requirement. There were proven reserves of 5.8bn. bbls in 2008. Oil refinery capacity, 2008, was 3.0m. bbls daily. Natural gas production in 2008 was 30.6bn. cu. metres with 1,090bn. cu. metres of proven reserves.

Wind

India is one of the world's largest wind-power producers, with an installed capacity of 13,065 MW in 2010 (the fifth highest after China, the USA, Germany and Spain).

Water

By 2005–06, 82.62m. ha. of irrigation potential had been created of which 60.19m. ha. was utilized. Irrigation projects have formed an important part of all the Five-Year Plans. The possibilities of diverting rivers into canals being nearly exhausted, the emphasis is now on damming the monsoon surplus flow and diverting that. Ultimate potential of irrigation is assessed at 110m. ha. by 2025, total cultivated land being 185m. ha.

A Ganges water-sharing accord was signed with Bangladesh in 1997, ending a 25-year dispute which had hindered and dominated relations between the two countries.

Minerals

The coal industry was nationalized in 1973. Production, 2007–08, 457m. tonnes; recoverable reserves were estimated at 56bn. tonnes (2005). Production of other minerals (in 1,000 tonnes): iron ore (2005), 140,000; lignite (2007–08), 33,980; salt (2008), 16,000; bauxite (2005), 11,957; chromite (2008), 3,900; manganese ore (2008), 2,400; aluminium (2005), 898; silver (2005), 31,900 kg; gold (2005), 3,200 kg. Other important minerals are lead, zinc, limestone, apatite and phosphorite, dolomite, magnesite and uranium. Value of mineral production, 2002–03, ₹635,403.5m.; mineral fuels produced ₹513,172.4m., metallic minerals ₹45,405.8m. and non-metallic ₹22,081.0m.

Agriculture

About 60% of the people are dependent on the land for their living. The farming year runs from July to June through three crop seasons: kharif (monsoon), rabi (winter) and summer. In 2002 there were 161,715,000 ha. of arable land and 8,400,000 ha. of permanent cropland. 57,198,000 ha. were irrigated in 2002. There were 1,525,000 tractors and 4,200 harvester-threshers in 2002. The average size of holdings for the whole of India is estimated at 1.4 ha.

Agricultural production, 2003 (in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 289,630; rice, 132,013; wheat, 65,129; potatoes, 23,161; bananas, 16,450; maize, 14,800; millet, 10,700; mangoes, 10,500; coconuts, 9,500; aubergines, 8,200; sorghum, 8,000; groundnuts, 7,500; tomatoes, 7,420; cassava, 7,100; soybeans, 6,800; seed cotton, 6,300; cabbage, 6,100; onions, 5,000; cauliflowers, 4,800; cottonseed, 4,199; chick-peas, 4,130; rapeseed, 3,842. Jute is grown in West Bengal (70% of total yield), Bihar and Assam: total yield, 1,976,000 tonnes. The coffee industry is growing: the main cash varieties are Arabica and Robusta (main growing areas Karnataka, Kerala and Tamil Nadu). India is the world's leading producer of a number of agricultural crops, including mangoes, millet, bananas and chick-peas.

The tea industry is important, with production concentrated in Assam, West Bengal, Tamil Nadu and Kerala. India is the world's largest tea producer. The 2003 crop was 885,000 tonnes; exports in 2001-02, 180,100 tonnes, valued at US$360m.

Livestock (2003): cattle, 185.2m.; goats, 124.4m.; buffaloes, 97.9m.; sheep, 61.5m.; pigs, 13.5m.; horses and ponies, 751,000; donkeys, 650,000; camels, 632,000; poultry, 489m. There are more cattle and buffaloes in India than in any other country.

Fertilizer use in 2004-05 was 18.4m. tonnes.

Opium

By international agreement the poppy is cultivated under licence, and all raw opium is sold to the central government. Opium, other than for wholly medical use, is available only to registered addicts.

Forestry

The lands under the control of the state forest departments are classified as 'reserved forests' (forests intended to be permanently maintained for the supply of timber, etc., or for the protection of water supply, etc.), 'protected forests' and 'unclassed' forest land. In 2005 the total forest area was 67.70m. ha. (22.8% of the land area). Main types are teak and sal. About 16% of the area is inaccessible, of which about 45% is potentially productive. In 2007, 330.21m. cu. metres of roundwood were produced, making India the second largest producer after the USA (9.2% of the world total in 2007). Most states have encouraged planting small areas around villages.

Fisheries

Total catch in 2008-09 was 7.62m. tonnes (2.98m. tonnes marine, 4.64m. tonnes inland). Fishing provides a livelihood for over 14m. people, contributing about 1% of total GDP and 5.3% of the GDP from the agriculture sector. Some 190 traditional fish landing centres, 60 minor fishing harbours and six major harbours serve 280,000 fishing craft, comprising 181,000 traditional craft, 45,000 motorized traditional craft and 54,000 mechanized boats. 551,000 tonnes of fish were exported in 2005-06.

INDUSTRY

The leading companies by market capitalization in India in March 2011 were: Reliance Industries, a chemical production company (US$76.9bn.); Oil and Natural Gas Corporation Ltd (ONGC), US$55.7bn.; and Tata Consultancy Services, a software and computer services company (US$51.9bn.).

The information technology industry has become increasingly important; its contribution to GDP rose from 1.2% in 1998-99 to 5.2% by 2007-08. The National Association of Software and Services Companies (NASSCOM) estimated that in 2007-08 the

IT industry registered a growth rate of 28% and revenues of US$52bn. (up from US$40bn. in 2006-07).

There is expansion in petrochemicals, based on the oil and associated gas of the Mumbai High field, and gas reserves offshore in the Krishna Godavari basin and the Bassein field, and onshore in Andhra Pradesh, Assam and Gujarat.

In 2006-07 there were an estimated 12.8m. micro and small enterprises, accounting for about 39% of the gross value of output in the manufacturing sector.

Industrial production (2006-07, in 1,000 tonnes): cement, 154,746; distillate fuel oil (2007-08), 59,032; finished steel, 50,196; sugar, 24,187; nitrogenous and phosphate fertilizers, 16,153; residual fuel oil (2007-08), 15,804; petrol (2005-06), 10,502; jet fuel (2007-08), 9,107; kerosene (2005-06), 9,078; sulphuric acid, 7,156; paper and paperboard, 6,129; pig iron, 4,550; caustic soda, 1,929; jute goods (2003-04), 1,424. Other products (2006-07): 8,436,186 motorcycles, mopeds and scooters; 3,171,000 diesel engines; 1,238,737 cars; 520,000 commercial vehicles; 85.8bn. cigarettes.

Labour

In 2007 the workforce numbered 516.4m. (compared to 402.5m. at the 2001 census) and the unemployment rate was estimated at 7.2%. Workdays lost by industrial disputes through strikes and lockouts, 2005, 23.27m.

Companies

The total number of companies limited by shares at work as on 31 March 2002 was 589,246; estimated paid-up capital was ₹3,870,239m. Of these, 76,279 were public limited companies with an estimated paid-up capital of ₹2,587,149m., and 512,967 private limited companies (₹1,283,090m.).

During 2001-02 there were 21,059 new limited companies registered in the Indian Union under the Companies Act 1956 with a total authorized capital of ₹53,156m.; 14 were government companies (₹5,781m.). There were 479 companies with unlimited liability and 3,007 companies with liability limited by guarantee and association not for profit also registered in 2001-02. During 2001-02, 760 non-government companies with an aggregate paid-up capital of ₹144.7m. went into liquidation or were struck off the register.

On 31 March 2002 there were 1,261 government companies at work with a total paid-up capital of ₹1,099,155m.; 658 were public limited companies and 603 were private limited companies. There were 587,985 non-government companies at work on 31 March 2002. Of these 75,621 were public limited companies and 512,364 were private limited companies.

On 31 March 2002, 1,285 companies incorporated elsewhere were reported to have a place of business in India; 241 were of UK and 286 of US origin.

Co-operative Movement

In 2001-02 there were 390,080 co-operative societies (146,206 credit, 243,874 non-credit) with a total membership of 209.3m. These included Primary Co-operative Marketing Societies, State Co-operative Marketing Federations and the National Agricultural Co-operative Marketing Federation of India. There were also State Co-operative Commodity Marketing Federations and Special Commodities Marketing Federations.

There were, in 2001-02, 368 Central Co-operative Banks, 94,825 Primary Agricultural Credit Societies, 770 Primary Land Development Banks and 1,047 banks and societies which provide long-term credits. There are 31 State Co-operative Banks.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign investment is encouraged by a tax holiday on income up to 6% of capital employed for five years. There are special depreciation allowances, and customs and excise concessions, for export industries. Proposals for investment ventures involving up to 51% foreign equity require only the Reserve Bank's approval under new liberalized policy. In Feb. 1991 India resumed trans-frontier trade with China, which had ceased in 1962.

Foreign debt was US$123,123m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

The external trade of India (excluding land-borne trade with Tibet and Bhutan) was as follows (in ₹100,000):

	Imports	Exports and Re-exports
2003-04	35,910,766	29,336,675
2004-05	50,106,454	37,533,953
2005-06	66,040,890	45,641,786
2006-07	84,050,631	57,177,929

The main trading partners were as follows in the year ended 31 March 2007 (in ₹100,000):

Countries	Value of Imports
Australia	3,171,090
China	7,900,861
France	1,905,933

Technology industries have become increasingly important in recent years; the software and services exports sector grew by 29% in 2007-08 to register revenues of US$40.4bn. (up from US$31.4bn. in 2006-07).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2006 there were 3.32m. km of roads, including 200 km of motorway. Roads are divided into six main administrative classes, namely: national highways, state highways, other public works department (PWD) roads, Panchayati Raj roads, urban roads and project roads. The national highways (198,489 km in 2006) connect capitals of states, major ports and foreign highways. The national highway system is linked with the UN Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific international highway system. The state highways are the main trunk roads of the states, while the other PWD roads and Panchayati Raj roads connect subsidiary areas of production and markets with distribution centres, and form the main link between headquarters and neighbouring districts. A ten-year highway plan, the National Highways Development Project, is currently under way; it aims to link India's main cities, ports and regions through the construction of new highways and the widening of existing ones by 2015.

In 2006 there were 11,526,000 passenger cars, 64,743,000 motorcycles and scooters, 992,000 buses and coaches, and 4,436,000 lorries and vans. In 2007 there were 476,219 road accidents resulting in 114,444 deaths.

Rail

The Indian railway system is government-owned (under the control of the Railway Board). Following reconstruction there are 16 zones, seven of which were created in 2002:

Zone	Headquarters	Year of Creation
Central	Mumbai	1951
Southern	Chennai	1951
Western	Mumbai	1951
Eastern	Kolkata	1952
Northern	Delhi	1952
North Eastern	Gorakhpur	1952
South Eastern	Kolkata	1955
North East Frontier	Guwahati	1958
South Central	Secunderabad	1966
East Central	Hajipur	2002
East Coast	Bhubaneswar	2002
North Central	Allahabad	2002
North Western	Jaipur	2002
South East Central	Bilaspur	2002
South Western	Hubli	2002
West Central	Jabalpur	2002

The total length of the Indian railway network is 63,000 km (14,600 electrified), with the Northern zone having the longest network, at 11,040 km.

The Konkan Railway (760 km of 1,676 mm gauge) linking Roha and Mangalore opened in 1996. It is operated as a separate entity.

Principal gauges are 1,676 mm (40,620 km) and 1 metre (18,501 km), with networks also of 762 mm and 610 mm gauge (3,794 km).

Passenger-km travelled in 2002–03 came to 515.0bn. and freight tonne-km to 353.2bn. Revenue (2002–03) from passengers, ₹125,754m. (including the Kolkata Metro, which is part of Indian Railways); from goods, ₹262,315m.

There are metros in Bangalore (6.7 km), Chennai (19.7 km), Delhi (189.6 km) and Kolkata (25.5 km).

Civil Aviation

The main international airports are at Chennai, Delhi (Indira Gandhi), Kolkata, Mumbai and Thiruvananthapuram, with some international flights from Ahmedabad, Amritsar, Bangalore, Calicut, Goa and Hyderabad. Air transport was nationalized in 1953 with the formation of two Air Corporations: Air India for long-distance international air services, and Indian Airlines for air services within India and to adjacent countries. Domestic air transport has been opened to private companies, the largest of which is Jet Airways. All operational airports handled a total of 116.9m. passengers (87.1m. domestic and 29.8m. international) in the year to 31 March 2008. Total aircraft movements reached 1.31m. and freight volumes increased to over 1.7m. tonnes.

In 2003 Air India operated routes to Africa (Dar es Salaam and Nairobi); to Mauritius; to Europe (Frankfurt, London, Moscow, Paris, Vienna and Zürich); to western Asia (Abu Dhabi, Al Ain, Bahrain, Dammam, Doha, Dubai, Jeddah, Kuwait, Muscat and Riyadh); to east Asia (Bangkok, Hong Kong, Jakarta, Kuala Lumpur, Osaka, Seoul, Singapore and Tokyo); and to North America (Chicago and New York). Indian Airlines (subsequently renamed Indian) operated international flights in 2003 to Almaty, Bahrain, Bangkok, Bishkek, Colombo, Dhaka, Doha, Dubai, Fujairah, Kathmandu, Kuala Lumpur, Kuwait, Malé, Muscat, Rangoon (Yangon), Ras-al-Khaimah, Sharjah and Singapore. Flights from Delhi to Lahore were restored in Jan. 2004. Air India and Indian merged in Aug. 2007, with the new airline keeping the name Air India.

In 2007 Mumbai was the busiest airport, handling 25.2m. passengers, followed by Delhi, with 23.3m. passengers. They were ranked the world's 55th and 61st busiest airports respectively for the year 2006. Both airports were privatized in 2006, with extensive modernization.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 625 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 8.57m. GT. Of the 625 vessels registered, 301 were general cargo ships, 117 oil tankers, 108 bulk carriers, 51 passenger ships, 22 liquid gas tankers, 16 container ships and ten chemical tankers. The Indian-controlled fleet comprised 403 vessels of 1,000 GT or over in Jan. 2009, of which 347 were under the Indian flag and 56 under foreign flags.

Cargo traffic of major ports for fiscal years, in 1,000 tonnes:

Port	2005–06	2006–07	2007–08
Chennai	47,248	53,414	57,154
Cochin	13,887	15,257	15,810
Ennore	9,168	10,714	11,563
Jawaharlal Nehru	37,836	44,815	55,756
Kandla	45,907	52,982	64,893
Kolkata and Haldia	53,143	55,050	57,282
Mormugao	31,688	34,241	35,128
Mumbai	44,190	52,364	57,039
New Mangalore	34,451	32,042	36,019
Paradip	33,109	38,517	42,438
Tuticorin	17,139	18,001	21,480
Visakhapatnam	55,801	56,385	64,597

The busiest container port is Jawaharlal Nehru, which handled 3.9m. 20-ft equivalent units (TEUs) in 2008.

There are about 3,700 km of major rivers navigable by motorized craft, of which 2,000 km are used. Canals, 4,300 km, of which 900 km are navigable by motorized craft.

Telecommunications

The telephone system is in the hands of the Telecommunications Department, except in Delhi and Mumbai, which are served by a public corporation. In 2008 there were 37.9m. main (fixed) telephone lines. In the same year mobile phone subscribers numbered 346.9m. (293.6 per 1,000 persons). The number of mobile phone subscribers more than doubled between 2006 and 2008, while the number of fixed line subscribers has been gradually falling since 2003. India's largest mobile phone operator is Bharti Airtel, with a 23% market share in Dec. 2009, ahead of Reliance Communications and Tata Teleservices. There were 30.9m. PCs in use in 2006 and an estimated 51.8m. internet users in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

All courts form a single hierarchy, with the Supreme Court at the head, which constitutes the highest court of appeal. Immediately below it are the High Courts and subordinate courts in each state. Every court in this chain administers the whole law of the country, whether made by Parliament or by the state legislatures.

The states of Andhra Pradesh, Assam (in common with Nagaland, Meghalaya, Manipur, Mizoram, Tripura and Arunachal Pradesh), Bihar, Gujarat, Himachal Pradesh, Jammu and Kashmir, Karnataka, Kerala, Madhya Pradesh, Maharashtra (in common with Goa and the Union Territories of Daman and Diu, and Dadra and Nagar Haveli), Odisha, Punjab (in common with the state of Haryana and the Union Territory of Chandigarh), Rajasthan, Tamil Nadu (in common with the Union Territory of Puducherry), Uttar Pradesh, West Bengal and Sikkim each have a High Court. There is a separate High Court for Delhi. For the Andaman and Nicobar Islands the Calcutta High Court, for Puducherry the High Court of Madras and for Lakshadweep the High Court of Kerala are the highest judicial authorities. The Allahabad High Court has a Bench at Lucknow, the Bombay High Court has Benches at Nagpur, Aurangabad and Panaji, the Gauhati High Court has Benches at Kohima, Aizwal, Imphal and Agartala, the Madhya Pradesh High Court has Benches at Gwalior and Indore, the Patna High Court has a Bench at Ranchi and the Rajasthan High Court has a Bench at Jaipur. Judges and Division Courts of the Guwahati High Court also sit in Meghalaya. Similarly, judges and Division Courts of the Calcutta High Court also sit in the Andaman and Nicobar Islands. High Courts have also been established in the new states of Chhattisgarh, Jharkhand and Uttarakhand. Below the High Court each state is divided into a number of districts under the jurisdiction of district judges who preside over civil courts and courts of sessions. There are a number of judicial authorities subordinate to the district civil courts. On the criminal side magistrates of various classes act under the overall supervision of the High Court.

In Oct. 1991 the Supreme Court upheld capital punishment by hanging. In 2004 there were two executions, the first ones since 1995 (although there have been none since).

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2006 was 373,271 (33 per 100,000 of national population).

Police

The states control their own police forces. The Home Affairs Minister of the central government co-ordinates the work of the states. The Indian Police Service provides senior officers for the state police forces. The Central Bureau of Investigation functions under the control of the Cabinet Secretariat.

The cities of Ahmedabad, Bangalore, Chennai, Delhi, Hyderabad, Kolkata, Mumbai, Nagpur and Pune have separate police commissionerates.

Education

Adult literacy was 62.8% in 2006 (75.2% among males and 50.8% among females). Of the states and territories, Kerala and Mizoram have the highest rates.

Educational Organization. Education is the concurrent responsibility of state and Union governments. In the Union Territories it is the responsibility of the central government. The Union government is also directly responsible for the central universities and all institutions declared by parliament to be of national importance; the promotion of Hindi as the federal language and co-ordinating and maintaining standards in higher education, research, science and technology. Professional education rests with the Ministry or Department concerned. There is a Central Advisory Board of Education to advise the Union and the State governments on any educational question which may be referred to it.

School Education. The school system has four stages: primary, middle, secondary and senior secondary.

Primary education is imparted either at independent primary (or junior basic) schools or primary classes attached to middle or secondary schools. The period of instruction varies from four to five years and the medium of instruction is in most cases the mother tongue of the child or the regional language. Free primary education is available for all children. Legislation for compulsory education has been passed by some state governments and Union Territories but it is not practicable to enforce compulsion when the reasons for non-attendance are socio-economic. There are residential schools for country children. The period for the middle stage varies from two to three years. In 2005, 47.2% of children who enrolled in the first grade went on to finish the eighth grade. In the same year it was estimated that 42m. children aged 6–14 were not attending school. In Aug. 2009 legislation was passed making education free and compulsory for all children between the ages of six and 14.

School statistics for 2004–05:

Type of recognized institution	No. of institutions	No. of students on rolls	No. of teachers <sup>1</sup>
Primary/junior basic schools	767,520	130,800,000	2,161,000
Middle/senior basic schools	274,731	51,200,000	1,589,000
High/higher secondary schools	152,049	37,100,000	2,083,000

Higher Education. Higher education is given in arts, science or professional colleges, universities and all-India educational or research institutions. The majority of universities act as affiliating bodies for colleges; they are responsible for course content, examinations and awarding degrees although the teaching is conducted at the college. In 2005–06 there were 19,753 higher education institutions, comprising: 350 universities, institutions deemed to be universities and institutions of national importance; 12,751 general education colleges; 5,179 professional education colleges; and 1,473 other institutions. Total enrolment at universities, 2004–05, 10,481,000, of which 4,234,000 were women.

Adult Education. The Directorate of Adult Education, established in 1971, is the national resource centre.

There is also a National Literacy Mission.

Expenditure. Total budgeted central expenditure on revenue account of education and other departments for 2004–05 was estimated at ₹96,694m. Total public expenditure on education during the Tenth (2002–07) Plan, ₹438,250m. (₹138,250m. on secondary and higher education, ₹300,000m. on elementary education and literacy). In 2004–05 total expenditure on education came to 3.4% of GDP and 12.1% of total government spending.

Health

Medical services are primarily the responsibility of the states. The Union government has sponsored major schemes for disease prevention and control which are implemented nationally.

Total public expenditure on health and family welfare during the Tenth (2002–07) Plan, ₹373,530m. In 2002 there were 15,741 hospitals and 607,100 doctors. In 2002 there were 15 beds per 10,000 inhabitants.

In the period 2001–03, 20% of the population were undernourished. In 1979, 38% of the population had been undernourished. In 2004–05, 27.5% of the population lived below the poverty line, compared to 38.9% in 1987–88.

Approximately 2.5m. Indians are HIV-infected, a number only exceeded in South Africa and Nigeria.

RELIGION

India is a secular state; any worship is permitted, but the state itself has no religion. The principal religions in 2001 were: Hindus, 828m. (80% of the population); Muslims, 138m. (13%); Christians, 24m.; Sikhs, 19m.; Buddhists, 8m.; Jains, 4m. In addition to having the largest Hindu population of any country, India has the third highest number of Muslims, after Indonesia and Pakistan. In Feb. 2012 the Roman Catholic church had six cardinals.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

There are 28 sites under Indian jurisdiction that appear on the UNESCO World Heritage List. They are (with year entered on list): Ajanta Caves (1983), Ellora Caves (1983), Agra Fort (1983), Taj Mahal (1983), Sun Temple, Konârak (1984), Monuments at Mahabalipuram (1984), Kaziranga National Park (1985), Manas Wildlife Sanctuary (1985), Keoladeo National Park (1985), Churches and Convents of Goa (1986), Monuments at Khajuraho (1986), Monuments at Hampi (1986), Fatehpur Sikri (1986), Monuments at Pattadakal (1987), Elephanta Caves (1987), Great Living Chola Temples (1987 and 2004), Sundarbans National Park (1987), Nanda Devi National Park (1988 and 2005), Buddhist Monuments at Sanchi (1989), Humayan's Tomb, Delhi (1993), Qutb Minar and its Monuments, Delhi (1993), Mountain Railways of India (1999, 2005 and 2008), Mahabodhi Temple Complex at Bodh Gaya (2002), the Rock Shelters of Bhimbetka (2003), Champaner-Pavagadh Archaeological Park (2004), the Chhatrapati Shivaji Terminus—formerly Victoria Terminus—in Mumbai (2004), the Red Fort Complex, Delhi (2007) and Jantar Mantar, Jaipur (2010).

Press

There were 64,998 registered newspapers in March 2007 (up from 60,413 in March 2005 and 62,483 in March 2006), with a total circulation of 192.1m. In 2007 there were 2,337 dailies with a total circulation of 98.84m. (up from 73.54m. in 2004). India's circulation of paid-for dailies is reported to have overtaken that of China to become the highest of any country in 2008. Hindi papers have the highest number and circulation, followed by Marathi, English and Malayalam. The newspaper with the highest circulation is the Times of India (daily average of 3.4m. copies in 2008). The Hindi-language paper with the highest circulation is Dainik Jagran, with a daily average of 2.4m. copies in 2008 (although its readership is much larger than that of the Times of India).

Tourism

In 2007 there were 5,082,000 non-resident overnight tourists (up from 2,726,000 in 2003). Of these, 1,900,000 were from Europe, 1,050,000 from the Americas and 982,000 from elsewhere in Southern Asia. Tourist receipts amounted to US$10.7bn. in 2007 (excluding passenger transport).

Calendar

The Indian National Calendar, adopted in 1957, is dated from the Saka era (Indian dynasty beginning AD 78). It uses the same year-length as the Gregorian calendar (also used for administrative and informal purposes) but begins on 22 March. Local and religious variations are also used.

Festivals

Independence Day is celebrated on 15 Aug. The Hindu festival of Diwali or Deepavali ('festival of lights') is held over five days between mid-Oct. and mid-Nov. Clay lamps are lit to symbolize the triumph of good over evil and firework displays take place. The biggest rock festival is the Independence Rock Festival (Oct.) in Mumbai. The International Film Festival of India takes place in Nov.–Dec. in Goa.

Assam

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Assam first became a British Protectorate at the close of the first Burmese War in 1826. In 1832 Cachar was annexed; in 1835 the Jaintia Hills were included in the East India Company's dominions, and in 1839 Assam was annexed to Bengal. In 1874 Assam was detached from Bengal and made a separate chief commissionership. On the partition of Bengal in 1905, it was united to the Eastern Districts of Bengal under a Lieut.-Governor. From 1912 the chief commissionership of Assam was revived, and in 1921 a governorship was created. On the partition of India almost the whole of the predominantly Muslim district of Sylhet was merged with East Bengal (Pakistan). Dewangiri in North Kamrup was ceded to Bhutan in 1951. The Naga Hill district, administered by the Union government since 1957, became part of Nagaland in 1962. The autonomous state of Meghalaya within Assam, comprising the districts of Garo Hills and Khasi and Jaintia Hills, came into existence on 2 April 1970, and achieved full independent statehood in Jan. 1972, when it was also decided to form a Union Territory, Mizoram (now a state), from the Mizo Hills district.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Assam is in northeast India, almost separated from central India by Bangladesh. It is bounded in the west by West Bengal, north by Bhutan and Arunachal Pradesh, east by Nagaland, Manipur and Myanmar, south by Meghalaya, Bangladesh, Mizoram and Tripura. The area of the state is now 78,438 sq. km. Population (2011 census, provisional) 31,169,272; density, 397 per sq. km. Cities with over 250,000 population, see INDIA: Territory and Population. ## Chhattisgarh

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Created from 16 mainly tribal districts of Madhya Pradesh, the state became the twenty-sixth state of India on 1 Nov. 2000. Originally known as South Kosala, archaeological excavations made in recent times indicate that the region was a hive of artistic and cultural experimentation in ancient times. During the Sarabhapuriyas, Nalas, Pandavamsis and Kalchuris dynasties between the 6th and 8th centuries many brick temples were built in the area. The British took control from the Mahrattas in the early 19th century. Despite possessing its own cultural identity Chhattisgarh was constantly swallowed up by other regions and in 1956, as a direct result of the Indian Union of 1949, it was made part of the new region of Madhya Pradesh. Protestors maintained that the revenue generated by their region, from rice and minerals, was insufficiently reinvested in the area. In 2000 the National Democratic Alliance negotiated the passage of a bill through both houses of the Indian parliament which carved out three new Indian states, Chhattisgarh among them.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Chhattisgarh is in central eastern India and is bounded by Jharkhand to the east, Odisha to the southeast, Andhra Pradesh to the south and Maharashtra and Madhya Pradesh to the west. Chhattisgarh has an area of 135,191 sq. km. Population (2011 census, provisional) 25,540,196; density, 189 per sq. km. The principal language is Hindi.

Cities with over 250,000 population, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other large cities (2001): Rajnandgaon, 143,770; Raigarh, 115,908; Jagdalpur, 103,123.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 22.59%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Chhattisgarh is the twenty-sixth state of India. In creating Chhattisgarh it was decided that the 90 members of the Madhya Pradesh Legislative Assembly from Chhattisgarhi districts would become the members of the new state's Legislative Assembly. For administrative purposes the region is divided into 16 districts. The council of ministers consists of 15 cabinet ministers and eight ministers of state.

The capital and seat of government is at Raipur.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At elections in Nov. 2008 the Bharatiya Janata Party won 50 seats and the Congress (I) Party took 38. Other parties won two seats.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Sekhar Dutt; b. 1945 (took office 23 Jan. 2010).

Chief Minister: Dr Raman Singh; b. 1952 (took office 7 Dec. 2003).

ECONOMY

Budget

Water

1.21m. ha. of land is under irrigation. 44,750 residential areas have sufficient drinking water supplies while 7,315 residential areas only have partial supplies and 2,751 areas have insufficient supplies. In total there were 102,063 hand pumps in the state and 701 water fulfilment plans in place in 1999.

Minerals

The state has extensive mineral resources including (1999 estimates): over 27,000m. tonnes of tin ore, 2,000m. tonnes of iron ore, 525m. tonnes of dolomite (accounting for 24% of India's entire share) and 73m. tonnes of bauxite. There are also significant deposits of limestone, copper ore, rock phosphate, corundum, tin, coal and manganese ore. Deobogh in the Raipur district contains deposits of diamonds.

Agriculture

Agriculture is the occupation for 1.7m. of the population (around 80%). 5.8m. ha. of land is agricultural and the area provides food grain for over 600 rice mills. The great plains of Chhattisgarh produce 10,000 varieties of rice. Other crops include maize, millet, groundnuts, soybeans and sunflower. More than 25% of the land in Chhattisgarh is double cropped.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Total length of roads (1999) was 33,182 km. State highways connect Raipur to neighbouring states and to Jagdalpur and Kondagaon in the south of Chhattisgarh and Durg and Rajnandgaon in the west.

Gujarat

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Gujarati-speaking areas of India were part of the Moghul empire, coming under Mahratta domination in the late 18th century. In 1818 areas of present Gujarat around the Gulf of Cambay were annexed by the British East India Company. The remainder consisted of a group of small principalities, notably Baroda, Rajkot, Bhavnagar and Nawanganar. British areas became part of the Bombay Presidency.

At independence the area now forming Gujarat became part of Bombay State except for Rajkot and Bhavnagar which formed the state of Saurashtra until incorporated into Bombay in 1956. In 1960 Bombay State was divided and the Gujarati-speaking areas became Gujarat.

In early 2002 at least 800 people, mostly Muslims, were killed in Gujarat in ethnic violence.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Himachal Pradesh

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Thirty small hill states were merged to form the Territory of Himachal Pradesh in 1948; the state of Bilaspur was added in 1954 and parts of the Punjab in 1966. The whole territory, a Himalayan region of hill-tribes, rivers and forests, became a state in Jan. 1971. Its main areas are Chamba, a former principality, dominated in turn by Moghuls and Sikhs before coming under British influence in 1848; Bilaspur, an independent Punjab state until it was invaded by Gurkhas in 1814 (the British East India Company forces drove out the Gurkhas in 1815); Simla district around the town built by the Company near Bilaspur on land reclaimed from Gurkha troops (the summer capital of India from 1865 until 1948); Mandi, a principality until 1948 and Kangra and Kullu districts, originally Rajput areas which had become part of the British-ruled Punjab. These were all incorporated into Himachal Pradesh in 1966 when the Punjab was reorganized.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Himachal Pradesh is in north India and is bounded north by Kashmir, east by Tibet, southeast by Uttarakhand, south by Haryana, southwest and west by Punjab. The area of the state is 55,673 sq. km and the population (2011 census, provisional) 6,856,509; density, 123 per sq. km. Principal languages are Hindi and Pahari. The capital is Shimla, population (2001 census) of the urban agglomeration, 144,975.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 12.81%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Full statehood was attained, as the 18th State of the Union, on 25 Jan. 1971. On 1 Sept. 1972 districts were reorganized and three new districts created, Solan, Hamirpur and Una, making a total of 12.

There is a unicameral Legislative Assembly with 68 members.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 14 Nov. and 19 Dec. 2007. The opposition Bharatiya Janata Party won 41 seats; the Indian National Congress, 23; the Bahujan Samaj Party, 1; ind., 3.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Urmila Singh; b. 1946 (took office on 25 Jan. 2010).

Chief Minister: Prem Kumar Dhumal; b. 1944 (took office for a second time on 30 Dec. 2007).

ECONOMY

Budget

2008–09 revenue receipts, ₹93,079.9m.; expenditure, ₹94,381.3m. Budget estimates for 2009–10: revenue receipts, ₹104,783.3m.; expenditure, ₹102,217.6m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In March 2011, 17,209 out of 17,495 inhabited villages had electricity. The state has huge hydropower potential—there is an estimated potential of 23,000 MW. Out of this hydropower potential only 29% has been harnessed. In Oct. 2008 there was an installed capacity of 1,896 MW. The Nathpa Jhakri project is India's largest hydroelectric power plant. The plant, which incorporates a 28 km power tunnel, came online in Oct. 2003. Electricity consumption per capita (2009–10), 1,380 kWh.

Water

An artificial confluence of the Sutlej and Beas rivers has been made, directing their united flow into Govind Sagar Lake.

Minerals

The state has rock salt, slate, gypsum, limestone, barytes, dolomite, pyrites, copper, gold and sulphur. However, Himachal Pradesh supplies only 0.2% of the national mineral output.

Agriculture

Agriculture employed 69% of the workforce in 2001. Irrigated area is 19% of the area sown. Main crops are seed potatoes, off season vegetables, wheat, maize, rice, hops and flowers, and fruits such as apples, peaches, apricots, kiwi fruit and strawberries; 1,027,820 tonnes of fruits were produced in 2010–11.

Production (2009–10): foodgrains 1,017,200 tonnes (of which maize 543,190 tonnes, wheat 327,140 tonnes and rice 105,900 tonnes), plus vegetables 1,390,671 tonnes and dry ginger 3,120 tonnes.

Livestock (2007 census): cattle, 2,279,000; goats, 1,241,000; sheep, 901,000; buffaloes, 762,000.

Forestry

Himachal Pradesh forests covered 14,668 sq. km in 2007 (26.4% of the state's area). The forests also ensure the safety of the catchment areas of the Yamuna, Sutlej, Beas, Ravi and Chenab rivers. Commercial felling of green trees has been totally halted and forest working nationalized.

INDUSTRY

The main sources of employment are the forests and their related industries; there are factories making turpentine and rosin. The state also makes fertilizers, cement, electronic items, TV sets, watches, computer parts and electronic toys. Sericulture is a major industry. There is a foundry and a brewery. Other industries include salt production and handicrafts, including weaving. The state has 173 large and medium units, 27,000 small scale units (providing employment for 140,000 people), seven industrial estates and 21 industrial areas. 300 mineral based industries have also been established.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

The national highway from Chandigarh runs through Shimla; other main highways from Shimla serve Kullu, Manali, Kangra, Chamba and Pathankot. The rest are minor roads. Pathankot is also on national highways from Punjab to Kashmir. Length of roads (2005–06), 29,011 km; number of vehicles (2003–04), 288,042.

Rail

There is a line from Chandigarh to Shimla, and the Jammu-Delhi line runs through Pathankot. A Nangal-Talwara rail link has been approved by the central government. There are two narrow gauge lines, from Shimla to Kalka (96 km) and Jogindernagar to Pathankot (103 km), and a broad gauge line from Una to Nangal (16 km). Route-km in 2003, 256 km.

Civil Aviation

The state has airports at Bhuntar near Kullu, at Jubbarhatti near Shimla and at Gaggal in Kangra district. There are also 12 state-run helipads across the state.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

The state has its own High Court at Shimla with eight judges.

Education

In 2011, 83.8% of the population were literate (90.8% of men and 76.6% of women). There were (2010–11) 10,767 primary schools with 422,700 students, 2,303 middle schools with 311,700 students, 2,094 high and senior secondary schools with 400,400 students, and 65 government-run colleges with 86,900 students. The Central University of Himachal Pradesh was established in 2009. There are also three state universities (Himachal Pradesh University, Shimla (1970); Chaudhary Sarwan Kumar Himachal Pradesh Krishi Vishwavidyalaya, Palampur (1978); Dr Y. S. Parmar University of Horticulture and Forestry, Solan (1985)) and 11 private universities. In 2010–11 there were three medical colleges, 109 general education colleges, 72 B.Ed (Bachelor of Education) colleges (typically for teaching at secondary level), 29 polytechnic institutions, 27 junior basic training colleges (typically for teaching at primary level), 23 Sanskrit institutions and four dental colleges in the state.

Jammu and Kashmir

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state of Jammu and Kashmir was brought into being in 1846 at the close of the First Sikh War. By the Treaty of Amritsar, Gulab Singh, de facto ruler of Jammu and Ladakh, added Kashmir to his existing territories, in return for paying the indemnity imposed by the British on the defeated Sikh empire. Of the state's three parts, Ladakh and Kashmir were ancient polities, Ladakh having been an independent kingdom since the 10th century AD until its conquest by Gulab Singh's armies in 1834–42. Kashmir lost its independence to the Mughal empire in 1586, and was conquered in turn by the Afghans (1756) and the Sikhs (1819). Jammu was a collection of small principalities until consolidated by Gulab Singh and his brothers in the early nineteenth century.

British supremacy was recognized until the Indian Independence Act, 1947, when all states decided on accession to India or Pakistan. Kashmir asked for standstill agreements with both. Pakistan agreed, but India wanted further discussion with the government of Jammu and Kashmir State. Meantime the state was subject to armed attack from Pakistan. The Maharajah acceded to India on 26 Oct. 1947. India approached the UN in Jan. 1948, and the conflict ended by ceasefire in Jan. 1949. The major part of the state remained with India after territory in the north and west went to Pakistan. Hostilities between the two countries broke out in 1965 and again in 1971, but notwithstanding bilateral agreements—the Tashkent Declaration (Jan. 1966) and the Simla Agreement (July 1972)—the issue remains unresolved. With Muslims in the majority, both India and Pakistan regard the state as a touchstone of their divergent political raison d'être—Pakistan as a Muslim nation, and India a secular one—and hence their position as non-negotiable. Intermittent violence between nationalistic factions has led to further negotiations between India and Pakistan with both sides pledging a peaceful solution. In Dec. 2002 the new provincial government promised to open talks with separatist groups.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The state is in the extreme north and is bounded north by China, east by Tibet, south by Himachal Pradesh and Punjab and west by Pakistan. The area is 222,236 sq. km and the population (2011 census, provisional) 12,548,926; density, 56 per sq. km. Srinagar (population, 2001, 988,210) is the summer and Jammu (612,163) the winter capital. The official language is Urdu; other commonly spoken languages are Kashmiri, Hindi, Dogri, Gujri, Pahari, Ladakhi and Punjabi.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 23.71%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Maharajah's son, Yuvraj Karan Singh, took over as Regent in 1950 and, on the ending of hereditary rule (17 Oct. 1952), was sworn in as Sadar-i-Riyasat. On his father's death (26 April 1961) Yuvraj Karan Singh was recognized as Maharajah by the Indian government. The permanent Constitution of the state came into force in part on 17 Nov. 1956 and fully on 26 Jan. 1957. There is a bicameral legislature; the Legislative Council has 36 members and the Legislative Assembly has 89 (two of which are nominated). Since the 1967 elections the six representatives of Jammu and Kashmir in the central House of the People are directly elected; there are four representatives in the Council of States. There was a period of President's rule in 1977, and since then President's rule has been imposed on four further occasions—in 1986, from 1990–96, in 2002 and in 2008–09.

The state has 14 districts.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the State Assembly were held in between 17 Nov. and 24 Dec. 2008. The ruling pro-India Jammu and Kashmir National Conference won 28 of the 87 seats (28 in 2002); the People's Democratic Party won 21 (16 in 2002); the Indian National Congress, 17 (20 in 2002); the Bharatiya Janata Party, 11 (1 in 2002); and the Jammu and Kashmir National Panthers Party, 3 (0 in 2002). Despite ongoing violence and calls from Kashmiri separatist groups to boycott the elections, turnout was 61%. Following the elections, a coalition government was formed by the National Conference and the Indian National Congress.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Narinder Nath Vohra; b. 1936 (since 25 June 2008).

Chief Minister: Omar Abdullah; b. 1970 (took office on 5 Jan. 2009).

Irrigated area, 1993–94, 442,000 ha.

Livestock (2003): cattle, 3.08m.; buffaloes, 1.04m.; goats, 2.06m.; sheep, 3.41m.; poultry, 5.57m.

Forestry

Forests cover 22,686 sq. km (2007), forming an important source of revenue, besides providing employment to a large section of the population.

INDUSTRY

There are two central public sector industries and 30 medium-scale. There are 672 factories (2007–08) employing 52,700 people. There are industries based on horticulture; traditional handicrafts are silk spinning, wood-carving, papier mâché and carpet-weaving. 750 tonnes of silk cocoons were produced in 1994–95.

The handicraft sector employed 0.26m. persons and had a production turnover of ₹2,500m. in 1995–96.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Kashmir is linked with the rest of India by the motorable Jammu–Pathankot road. The Jawahar Tunnel, through the Banihal mountain, connects Srinagar and Jammu, and maintains road communication with the Kashmir Valley during the winter months. In 2000 there were 13,093 km of roads.

There were 195,125 motor vehicles in 1995–96.

Rail

Kashmir is linked with the Indian railway system by the line between Jammu and Pathankot; route-km of railways in the state, 2002, 77 km.

Civil Aviation

Major airports are at Srinagar and Jammu. There is a third airport at Leh. There are services connecting Jammu with Amritsar, Chandigarh, Delhi and Srinagar; and services connecting Srinagar with Ahmedabad, Amritsar, Chandigarh, Delhi, Jammu, Leh and Mumbai.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The High Court, at Srinagar and Jammu, has a Chief Justice and four puisne judges.

Jharkhand

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state was carved from Bihar to become the twenty-eighth state of India on 15 Nov. 2000. Located in the plateau regions of eastern India, Jharkhand (literally land of forests) is mentioned in ancient Indian texts as an area inaccessible to the rest of India owing to its unforgiving terrain and the warring forest tribes. The Mughals attacked the region in 1385 and again in 1616, imprisoning the King of Jharkhand while they collected money from local chieftains. In the 17th century Jharkhand was a part of the Mughal empire and spread over areas of present-day Madhya Pradesh and Bihar. The East India Company was granted revenue-collecting power in 1765 and the permanent settlement of 1796 increased the company's grip on the area. In 1858 sovereignty was transferred to the English crown. From 1793 until 1915 there were periodic tribal rebellions throughout Jharkhand. In 1912 Jharkhand was constituted as part of the province of Bihar and present-day Odisha after the former was separated from West Bengal. In 1995 the Jharkhand Party submitted a request to the State Reorganisation Committee for Jharkhand to become a separate state. In 2000 Jharkhand came into being after legislation initiated by the National Democratic Alliance.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Jharkhand is in central eastern India and is bounded by Bihar to the north, West Bengal to the east, Odisha to the south and Chhattisgarh to the west. Jharkhand has an area of 79,714 sq. km. Population (2011 census, provisional) 32,966,238; density: 414 per sq. km. Cities with over 250,000 population, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other large cities (2001): Phusro (174,402), Hazaribag (135,473), Deogar (112,525), Ramgarh (110,496), Chirkunda (106,227), Giridih (105,634). The principal language is Hindi.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 22.34%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Jharkhand is the twenty-eighth state of India. After the region was carved from Bihar it was decided that the 81 Members of the Legislative Assembly (MLAs) from Jharkhandi districts would become the members of the new state's legislative assembly. For administrative purposes the region is divided into 24 districts.

The capital and seat of government is at Ranchi.

Presidential rule was imposed on 19 Jan. 2009 following the resignation of Chief Minister Shibu Soren but was lifted on 30 Dec. 2009. It was imposed again on 1 June 2010, once more following the resignation of Chief Minister Shibu Soren, and was lifted on 9 Sept. 2010.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections held on 27 Nov., and 2, 8, 12 and 18 Dec. 2009 the Bharatiya Janata Party won 18 of 81 seats; Jharkhand Mukti Morcha, 18; the Indian National Congress, 14; Jharkhand Vikas Morcha (Prajanatrik), 11; Rashtriya Janata Dal, 5; Janata Dal (United), 2; ind. and other parties, 13.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In Oct. 2008 the state's installed capacity was 9,116.7 MW. Electricity generated, 2008–09, 41,799m. kWh. In Sept. 2008, 27,126 out of 27,481 inhabited villages had electricity.

Minerals

Karnataka is an important source of gold and silver. The state produces 84% of India's gold. The estimated reserves of high grade iron ore are 8,798m. tonnes. These reserves are found mainly in the Chitradurga belt. The National Mineral Development Corporation of India has indicated total reserves of nearly 332m. tonnes of magnesite and iron ore (with an iron content ranging from 25 to 40) which have been found in Kudremukh Ganga-Mula region in Chikmagalur District. Value of production (2002–03) ₹10,580m. The estimated reserves of manganese are over 320m. tonnes.

Limestone is found in many regions; production (2002–03) was about 12.2m. tonnes.

Karnataka is the largest producer of chromite. It is one of only two states in India producing magnesite. The other minerals of industrial importance are corundum and garnet. Karnataka produces 63% of India's moulding sand annually and 57% of the country's quartzite, and is the only producer of felsite.

Agriculture

Agriculture forms the main occupation of more than three-quarters of the population. Physically, Karnataka divides into four regions—the coastal region, the southern and northern plains, comprising roughly the districts of Bangalore, Tumkur, Chitradurga, Kolar, Bellary, Mandya and Mysore, and the hill country, comprising the districts of Chikmagalur, Hassan and Shimoga. Rainfall is heavy in the hill country, and there is dense forest. The greater part of the plains are cultivated. Coorg district is essentially agricultural.

The main food crops are rice paddy and jowar, and ragi which is also about 30% of the national crop. Total foodgrains production (2007–08), 11.42m. tonnes (including rice, 3.18m. tonnes); pulses 1.23m. tonnes. Sugar, groundnut, castor-seed, safflower, mulberry silk and cotton are important cash crops. The state grows about 70% of the national coffee crop.

Production, 2008–09: sugarcane, 23.33m. tonnes; cotton, 775,000 bales of 170 kg.

Livestock (2003): cattle, 9.54m.; sheep, 7.26m.; goats, 4.48m.; buffaloes, 3.99m. Livestock products (2008–09): meat, 114,520 tonnes; milk, 4.5m. tonnes; 2.4bn. eggs.

Forestry

Total forest in the state (2007) is 30,720 sq. km, producing sandalwood, bamboo and other timbers.

Fisheries

The catch in 2008–09 totalled 361,854 tonnes. In 2005, 83,400 people were working in fishing and related activities.

INDUSTRY

There were 11,983 factories, 159 industrial estates and 5,787 industrial sheds employing 1,079,700 in March 2009. In 2008–09, 377,725 small industries employed 2,173,100 persons. The Vishveshwaraiah Iron and Steel Works is situated at Bhadravati, while at Bangalore are national undertakings for the manufacture of aircraft, machine tools, telephones, light engineering and electronics goods. The Kudremukh iron ore project is of national importance. An oil refinery is in operation at Mangalore. Other industries include textiles, vehicle manufacture, cement, chemicals, sugar, paper, porcelain and soap. In addition, much of the world's sandalwood is processed, the oil being one of the most valuable products of the state. Sericulture is a more important cottage industry giving employment, directly or indirectly, to about 2.7m. persons; production of silk, 2006–07, 8,205 tonnes or 46% of national output.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2009 the state had 228,810 km of roads, including 4,491 km of national highway and 20,905 km of state highway. There were (31 March 2009) 8,294,200 motor vehicles.

Rail

In 2005 there were 3,172 km of railway (including 411 km of narrow gauge) in the state.

Civil Aviation

There are airports at Bangalore, Hubli, Mysore, Mangalore, Bellary and Belgaum, with regular scheduled services to Chennai, Delhi, Kolkata and Mumbai. Bangalore is being upgraded to an international airport—the present airport already receives international flights from a number of destinations. A new Bangalore international airport has been constructed at Devanahalli, 34 km from the city, and opened in May 2008.

Shipping

Mangalore is a deep-water port for the export of mineral ores. Karwar is being developed as an intermediate port.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

The seat of the High Court is at Bangalore. It has a Chief Justice and 42 puisne judges.

Education

In 2001, 66.6% of the population were literate (76.1% of men and 56.9% of women). In 2009 the state had 57,520 primary schools with 7,570,000 students, 11,753 secondary schools with 2,522,000 students, 3,530 pre-university colleges, 284 polytechnic colleges, 161 engineering colleges, 110 medical colleges, 40 dentistry colleges and 16 universities including the National Law School of India. Education is free up to pre-university level.

Universities: Mysore (1916); Karnataka (1949) at Dharwad; University of Agricultural Sciences (1964) at Hebbal, Bangalore; Bangalore; Gulbarga; Kannada; Mangalore; University of Agricultural Sciences, Dharwad; Kuvempu University, Shimoga; Karnataka State Open University, Mysore; Rajiv Gandhi University of Health Sciences, Bangalore; and Visveswaraiiah Technological University, Nehrunagar. The Indian Institute of Science, in Bangalore, the Manipal Academy of Higher Education and the National Institute of Mental Health and Neuro Sciences, also in Bangalore, all have university status.

Health

There were in 2008–09, 172 hospitals including 103 Ayurvedic hospitals, 324 community health centres and dispensaries, 2,193 primary health centres and 8,143 health subcentres. Total number of beds in 2008–09, 51,800.

RELIGION

At the 2001 census Hindus numbered 44,321,279; Muslims, 6,463,127; Christians, 1,009,164; Buddhists, 393,300.

Kerala

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state of Kerala was created in 1956, bringing together the Malayalam-speaking areas. It includes most of the former state of Travancore-Cochin and small areas from the state of Madras. Cochin, a safe harbour, was an early site of European trading in India. In 1795 the British took it from the Dutch and British influence remained dominant. Travancore was a Hindu state which became a British protectorate in 1795, having been an ally of the British East India Company for some years. Cochin and Travancore were combined as one state in 1947, and reorganized and renamed Kerala in 1956.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Kerala is in south India and is bounded north by Karnataka, east and southeast by Tamil Nadu, southwest and west by the Indian ocean. The state has an area of 38,863 sq. km. The 2011 census showed a population (provisional) of 33,387,677; density, 859 per sq. km. Chief cities, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other principal towns (2001): Palakkad (197,369), Kottayam (172,878), Malappuram (170,409), Cherthala (141,558), Guruvayur (138,681), Kanhangad (129,367), Vadakara (124,083).

Languages spoken in the state are Malayalam, Tamil and Kannada.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 4.86%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The state has a unicameral legislature of 141 members (one of which is nominated) including the Speaker.

The state has 14 districts. The capital is Thiruvananthapuram.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 13 April 2011 the United Democratic Front (UDF), led by the Indian National Congress, won 72 out of 140 seats with the remaining 68 seats going to the Left Democratic Front (LDF), led by the Communist Party of India (Marxist).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor (acting): Hans Raj Bhardwaj; b. 1937 (since 16 Jan. 2012).

Chief Minister: Oommen Chandy; b. 1943 (since 18 May 2011).

ECONOMY*Budget

2008–09 revenue receipts, ₹245,121.7m.; expenditure, ₹282,238.8m. Budget estimates for 2009–10: revenue receipts, ₹281,538.9m.; expenditure, ₹311,618.4m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Electricity

Installed capacity (Oct. 2008), 3,514 MW. Much of the state's electricity is produced by the Idukki hydro-electric plant and the Sabarigiri scheme. The state had a power deficit until the inauguration of the Kayamkulam thermal power plant in 1999. In Sept. 2008 all 1,364 inhabited villages had electricity.

Minerals

The beach sands of Kerala contain monazite, ilmenite, rutile, zircon, sillimanite, etc. There are extensive white clay deposits; other minerals of commercial importance include titanium, copper, magnesite, china clay, limestone, quartz sand and lignite. Iron ore has been found at Kozhikode (Calicut).

Agriculture

Area under irrigation in 2000–01 was 458,000 ha. The chief agricultural products are rice, tapioca, coconut, arecanut, cashew nuts, oilseeds, pepper, sugarcane, rubber, tea, coffee and cardamom. About 98% of Indian black pepper and about 95% of Indian rubber is produced in Kerala. Production of principal crops, 2002–03: total rice, 688,859 tonnes (from 310,521 ha.); tapioca, 2,413,217 tonnes; rubber, 594,917 tonnes; pepper, 67,358 tonnes; cashew nuts, 66,087 tonnes; coffee, 63,322 tonnes; tea, 53,480 tonnes; ginger, 32,412 tonnes; sugarcane, 31,283 tonnes; coconuts, 5,709m. nuts.

Livestock (2003): cattle, 2.12m.; goats, 1.21m.; poultry, 12.22m. In 2001–02 milk production was 2.73m. tonnes; egg production, 2,055m. units.

Forestry

Forest occupied 17,324 sq. km in 2007 (44.6% of the state's total area), including teak, sandalwood, ebony and blackwood and varieties of softwood.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2008–09 was 866,000 tonnes. In 2005 there were 211,300 people working in fishing and allied activities.

INDUSTRY

There are numerous cashew and coir factories. Important industries include rubber, tea, coffee, tiles, automotive tyres, watches, electronics, oil, textiles, ceramics, fertilizers and chemicals, pharmaceuticals, zinc-smelting, sugar, cement, rayon, glass, matches, pencils, monazite, ilmenite, titanium oxide, rare earths, aluminium, electrical goods, paper and shark-liver oil. The state has a refinery and a shipyard at Kochi (Cochin).

There are 5,584 factories (2007–08) employing 356,000 people.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

In 2000 there were 21,730 km of roads in the state (national and state highways, 4,113 km; district roads, 4,992 km). There were 1.91m. motor vehicles in 2000.

Rail

There is a coastal line from Mangalore in Karnataka which connects with Tamil Nadu. In 1995–96 there were 1,053 route-km of track.

Civil Aviation

There are airports at Kozhikode, Kochi and Thiruvananthapuram with regular scheduled internal services to Chennai, Delhi and Mumbai. In addition Kochi has international flights to a number of destinations in the Gulf states plus Colombo and Singapore, and Kozhikode and Thiruvananthapuram also have flights to the Gulf.

Shipping

Port Kochi, administered by the central government, is one of India's major ports; in 1983 it became the out-port for the Inland Container Depot at Coimbatore in Tamil Nadu. There are 12 other ports and harbours.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

The High Court at Ernakulam has a Chief Justice and 29 puisne judges.

Education

Kerala is the most literate Indian state, with 25.49m. literate people at the 2001 census (90.9%; 94.2% of men and 87.7% of women). Education is free up to the age of 14.

In 2000 there were 6,726 primary schools with 2.79m. students, 2,968 upper primary schools with 1.84m. students and 3,511 high and higher secondary schools with 1.07m. students. There were 169 junior colleges in 1996–97 with 210,074 pupils.

Madhya Pradesh

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state was formed in 1956 to bring together the Hindi-speaking districts including the 17 Hindi districts of the old Madhya Pradesh, most of the former state of Madhya Bharat, the former states of Bhopal and Vindhya Pradesh and a former Rajput enclave, Sironj. This was an area which the Mahrattas took from the Moghuls between 1712 and 1760. The British overcame the Mahrattas in 1818 and established their own Central Provinces. Nagpur became the Province's capital and was also the capital of Madhya Pradesh until, in 1956, boundary changes transferred it to Maharashtra. The present capital, Bhopal, was the centre of a Muslim princely state from 1723. Bhopal, an ally of the British against the Mahrattas, with neighbouring small states, became a British-protected agency in 1818. After independence Bhopal acceded to the Indian Union in 1949. In 1956 the states of Madhya Bharat and Vindhya Pradesh were combined with Bhopal and Sironj and renamed Madhya Pradesh. In 2000, 16 mainly tribal districts were carved from Madhya Pradesh to form Chhattisgarh.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The state is in central India and is bounded north by Uttar Pradesh, east by Chhattisgarh, south by Maharashtra, and west by Gujarat and Rajasthan. Since the creation of Chhattisgarh in 2000, Madhya Pradesh is no longer the largest Indian state in size. Its revised area is 308,245 sq. km (previously 443,446 sq. km), making it the second largest state in the country (after Rajasthan). Population (2011 census, provisional), 72,597,565; density, 236 per sq. km.

Cities with over 250,000 population, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other large cities (2001): Ratlam, 234,419; Dewas, 231,672; Satna, 229,307; Burhanpur, 193,725; Murwara, 187,029; Singrauli, 185,190; Rewa, 183,274; Khandwa, 172,242; Bhind, 153,752; Chhindwara, 153,552; Morena, 150,959; Shivpuri, 146,892; Guna, 137,175; Damoh, 127,967; Vidisha, 125,453; Mandasaur, 117,555; Nimach, 112,852; Chhatarpur, 109,078; Itarsi, 107,831; Kargone, 103,448.

Hindi, Marathi, Urdu and Gujarati are spoken. In April 1990 Hindi, which predominates in the state, became the sole official language.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 20.30%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Madhya Pradesh is one of the nine states for which the Constitution provides a bicameral legislature, but the Vidhan

Parishad or Upper House (to consist of 90 members) has yet to be formed. The Vidhan Sabha or Lower House has 231 members (one of which is nominated).

For administrative purposes the state has been split into nine revenue divisions with a Commissioner at the head of each; the headquarters of these are located at Bhopal, Gwalior, Hoshangabad, Indore, Jabalpur, Morena, Rewa, Sagar and Ujjain. There are 22,029 gram (village) panchayats, 313 janpad (intermediate) panchayats and 45 zila (district) panchayats. There are 50 districts in the state grouped into ten divisions.

The seat of government is at Bhopal.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the election in Nov. 2008 the Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) held power with 142 seats (173 in 2003). The Indian National Congress (INC) won 72 seats (38 in 2004). Other parties won 16 seats.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Ram Naresh Yadav; b. 1928 (took office on 8 Sept 2011).

Chief Minister: Shivraj Singh Chauhan; b. 1959 (took office on 29 Nov. 2005).

ECONOMY

Budget

2008–09 revenue receipts, ₹335,772.0m.; expenditure, ₹295,138.8m. Budget estimates for 2009–10: revenue receipts, ₹399,610.3m.; expenditure, ₹382,621.1m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

Madhya Pradesh is rich in low-grade coal suitable for power generation, and also has immense potential for hydro-electric energy. Total installed capacity, 2008–09, 3,051 MW. Power generated, 16,315m. kWh in 2007–08. There are eight hydro-electric power stations of 747.5 MW installed capacity. In Sept. 2008, 50,218 out of 52,117 inhabited villages had electricity.

Water

Major irrigation projects include the Chambal Valley scheme, the Tawa project in Hoshangabad district, the Barna and Hasdeo schemes, the Mahanadi canal system and schemes in the Narmada valley at Bargi and Narmadasagar. Area under irrigation, 2007–08, 5.87m. ha.

Minerals

Much of the state's extensive mineral deposits were in the area that became Chhattisgarh in 2000. In 2004–05 the output of diamonds was 78,315 carats; Madhya Pradesh is India's only diamond producer. Production of other minerals included: 52.68m. tonnes of coal, 24.94m. tonnes of limestone, 2.05m. tonnes of copper ore (making Madhya Pradesh India's largest copper ore producer), 447,000 tonnes of manganese ore, 201,000 tonnes of iron ore and 186,000 tonnes of bauxite. In 2004–05 value of production was ₹36,996m.

Agriculture

The creation in 2000 of Chhattisgarh, previously known as the 'rice bowl' of Madhya Pradesh, had serious implications for the state. Agriculture is the mainstay of the state's economy and 76.8% of the people are rural. 43.7% of the land area is cultivable, of which 30.5% is irrigated. Production of principal crops, 2004–05 (in tonnes): foodgrains, 7.83m.; pulses, 3.35m.; cotton, 0.32m. bales of 170 kg.

Livestock (2003): cattle, 18.91m.; buffaloes, 7.58m.; goats, 8.14m.; sheep, 546,000.

Forestry

The forested area totalled 77,700 sq. km in 2007, or 25.2% of the state. The forests are chiefly of sal, saja and teak species. They are the chief source in India of best-quality teak; they also provide firewood for about 60% of domestic fuel needs, and form valuable watershed protection.

INDUSTRY

The major industries are steel, aluminium, paper, cement, motor vehicles, ordnance, textiles and heavy electrical equipment. Other industries include electronics, telecommunications, sugar, fertilizers, straw board, vegetable oil, refractories, potteries, textile machinery, steel casting and rerolling, industrial gases, synthetic fibres, drugs, biscuit manufacturing, engineering, optical fibres, plastics, tools, rayon and art silk. There are 3,165 factories (2007–08) employing 255,000 people.

There are 23 'growth centres' in operation, and five under development. The Government of India has set up a Special Economic Zone at Indore.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Total length of roads is 68,100 km. The length of national highways is 4,720 km and state highway 6,500 km. In March 2002 there were 3,173,000 motor vehicles.

Rail

The main rail route linking northern and southern India passes through Madhya Pradesh. Bhopal, Bina, Gwalior, Indore, Itarsi, Jabalpur, Katni, Khandwa, Ratlam and Ujjain are important junctions for the central, south, eastern and western networks. Route length (1998–99), 5,764.8 km.

Civil Aviation

There are domestic airports at Bhopal, Gwalior, Indore and Khajuraho with regular scheduled services to Agra, Delhi, Mumbai, Raipur and Varanasi.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The High Court of Judicature at Jabalpur has a Chief Justice and 29 puisne judges. Its benches are located at Gwalior and Indore. A National Institute of Law and a National Judicial Academy have been set up at Bhopal.

Education

In 2001, 63.7% of the population were literate (76.1% of men and 50.3% of women). Education is free for children aged up to 14.

In 2001 there were 97,273 government schools (63,712 pre-primary and primary schools, 25,090 middle schools, 8,471 high and higher secondary schools) and 22,620 private schools (10,473 pre-primary and primary schools, 7,474 middle schools, 4,673 high and higher secondary schools). Total enrolment in 2001: pre-primary and primary schools, 8.44m.; middle schools, 2.69m.; high and higher secondary schools, 1.52m.

Madhya Pradesh has ten universities (with towns): Barkatullah University (Bhopal) has 56 government colleges; Dr Harisingh Gour University (Sagar), 47 government colleges; Jiwaji University (Gwalior), 46 government colleges; Devi Ahilya University (Indore), 42 government colleges; Awadhesh Pratap Singh University (Rewa), 41 government colleges; Rani Durgavati University (Jabalpur), 40 government colleges; Vikram University (Ujjain), 40 government colleges; Mahatma Gandhi Gramodaya Vishwavidyalaya University (Chitrakoot); National Law Institute University (Bhopal); M. P. Bhoj Open University (Bhopal). There are a total of 312 colleges affiliated to the state's universities: 228 undergraduate and 84 postgraduate. Students studying in Madhya Pradesh totalled 272,296 in 2005–06 (of which arts students, 128,442; commerce, 73,211; science, 57,128).

Health

In 2001–02 there were 45 district hospitals, 57 urban civil hospitals, 1,194 primary health centres, 8,835 sub-health centres, 229 community health centres, seven TB hospitals and two TB sanatoriums.

RELIGION

At the 2001 census Hindus numbered 55,004,675; Muslims, 3,841,449; Jains, 545,446; Buddhists, 209,322; Christians, 170,381; Sikhs, 150,772.

Maharashtra

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Bombay Presidency region grew in the early 17th century from a collection of British East India Company trading posts. The island of Bombay was a Portuguese possession until it came under the control of Charles II of England on his marriage to Catherine of Braganza in 1661. It was then leased to the British East India Company in 1668 for £10 per annum. The Presidency expanded, overcoming the surrounding Mahratta chiefs until Mahratta power was finally conquered in 1818. After independence Bombay State succeeded to the Presidency; its area was altered in 1956 by adding Kutch and Saurashtra and the Marathi-speaking areas of Hyderabad and Madhya Pradesh, while taking away Kannada-speaking areas (which were added to Mysore). In 1960 the Bombay Reorganization Act divided Bombay State between Gujarati and Marathi areas, the latter becoming Maharashtra.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Maharashtra is in central India and is bounded north by Madhya Pradesh, east by Chhattisgarh, south by Andhra Pradesh, Karnataka and Goa, west by the Indian ocean and northwest by Daman and Gujarat. The state has an area of 307,713 sq. km. The population in 2011 (census, provisional) was 112,372,972; density, 365 per sq. km. In 2001 the area of Greater Mumbai was 603 sq. km and its population 16.4m. For other principal cities, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other large towns (2001): Jalna (235,795), Bhusawal (187,564), Nalasopara (184,538), Vasai (174,396), Yavatmal (139,835), Bid (138,196), Kamthi (136,491), Gondia (120,902), Virar (118,928), Wardha (111,118), Satara (108,048), Achalpur (107,316), Barsi (104,785), Panvel (104,058). The official language is Marathi.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 15.99%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Maharashtra has a bicameral legislature. The Legislative Council has 78 members. The Legislative Assembly has 288 elected members and one member nominated by the Governor to represent the Anglo-Indian community.

The Council of Ministers consists of the Chief Minister, 16 other Ministers and 19 Ministers of State.

The capital is Mumbai (Bombay). The state has 35 districts, which are grouped into six administrative divisions.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections held on 13 Oct. 2009 the Indian National Congress won 82 of the 288 seats, the Nationalist Congress Party 62, the Bharatiya Janata Party 46, Shiv Sena 44, the Maharashtra Navnirman Sena 13, Republican Left Democratic Front 9, other parties 7 and ind. 25. Turnout was approximately 60%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Kateekal Sankaranarayanan; b. 1932 (took office on 22 Jan. 2010).

Chief Minister: Prithviraj Chavan; b. 1946 (took office on 11 Nov. 2010).

ECONOMY

Budget

2008–09 revenue receipts, ₹812,706.8m.; expenditure, ₹756,939.1m. Budget estimates for 2009–10: revenue receipts, ₹890,606.5m.; expenditure, ₹961,840.2m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

Installed capacity, Oct. 2008, 20,036 MW. In Sept. 2008, 36,296 out of 41,095 inhabited villages had electricity; consumption per capita in 2009–10 was 1,028 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Mumbai High (offshore) produced 12.11m. tonnes of crude oil in 2007–08 and 16.7bn. cu. metres of natural gas in 2008–09. Oil production has declined by one-third since the early 1990s. A recovery plan for the ageing field began in 2000. Phase one of this plan was completed in 2006; by 2030 it is expected to yield an additional 23.25m. tonnes of crude oil and 6.10bn. cu. metres of natural gas. Phase two was announced in 2009 and will focus on drilling 73 new wells. The project is scheduled for completion in Sept. 2012.

Minerals

The state has coal, silica sand, dolomite, kyanite, chromite, limestone, iron ore, manganese and bauxite. Value of mineral production, 2001, ₹21,340m. of which 94% is contributed by coal. Coal production in 2000–01 was 28.8m. tonnes. Manganese is the second most valuable mineral.

Agriculture

3.3m. ha. of the cropped area of 21.4m. ha. are irrigated. In normal seasons the main food crops are rice, wheat, jowar, bajra and pulses. Main cash crops: cotton, sugarcane, groundnuts. Production, 2000–01 (in tonnes): sugarcane, 36.5m.; foodgrains, 11.9m. (rice, 2.4m.; wheat, 1.11m.); pulses, 1.7m.; groundnuts, 0.6m.; cotton, 476,000.

Manipur

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Formerly a state under the political control of the government of India, Manipur entered into interim arrangements with the Indian Union on 15 Aug. 1947 and the political agency was abolished. Under a merger agreement, the administration was taken over by the government of India on 15 Oct. 1949 to be centrally administered by the government of India through a Chief Commissioner. In 1950-51 an Advisory government was introduced. In 1957 this was replaced by a Territorial Council of 30 elected and two nominated members. Later, in 1963, a Legislative Assembly of 30 elected and three nominated members was established under the government of Union Territories Act 1963. Because of the unstable party position in the Assembly, it had to be dissolved on 16 Oct. 1969 and president's rule introduced. The status of the administrator was raised from Chief Commissioner to Lieut.-Governor from 19 Dec. 1969. On 21 Jan. 1972 Manipur became a state and the status of the administrator was changed from Lieut.-Governor to Governor. In June 2001 Manipur was placed under central rule, but returned to self government after the 2002 elections.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The state is in northeast India and is bounded north by Nagaland, east by Myanmar, south by Myanmar and Mizoram, and west by Assam. Manipur has an area of 22,327 sq. km and a population (2011 census, provisional) of 2,721,756; density, 122 per sq. km. The valley, which is about 1,813 sq. km, is 800 metres above sea-level. The largest city is Imphal with a population of 250,234 (2001 census). The hills rise in places to 3,000 metres, but are mostly about 1,500-1,800 metres. The average annual rainfall is 165 cm. The hill areas are inhabited by various hill tribes who constitute about one-third of the total population of the state. There are about 30 tribes and sub-tribes falling into two main groups of Nagas and Kukis. Manipuri and English are the official languages. A large number of dialects are spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001-11, 18.65%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Manipur has a Legislative Assembly of 60 members, of which 19 are from reserved tribal constituencies. There are nine districts. The capital is Imphal.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections were held on 28 Jan. 2012. The Indian National Congress party won 42 seats; the All India Trinamool Congress, 7; Manipur State Congress Party, 5; Naga People's Front, 4; Nationalist Congress Party, 1; Lok Janshakti Party, 1.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Gurbachan Jagat; b. 1942 (took office on 23 July 2008).

Chief Minister: Okram Ibobi Singh; b. 1948 (took office on 7 March 2002).

ECONOMY*Budget

2008–09 revenue receipts, ₹38,726.1m.; expenditure, ₹26,222.7m. Budget estimates for 2009–10: revenue receipts, ₹40,046.0m.; expenditure, ₹30,559.1m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Electricity

Installed capacity (Oct. 2008) was 158 MW. In Sept. 2008, 1,979 out of 2,315 inhabited villages had electricity.

Water

The main power, irrigation and flood-control schemes are the Loktak Lift Irrigation scheme (irrigation potential, 40,000 ha.); the Singda scheme (potential 4,000 ha., and improved water supply for Imphal); the Thoubal scheme (potential 34,000 ha.); and four other large projects. By 1994–95, 59,100 ha. had been irrigated.

Minerals

Chromite is the only significant mineral resource—it is extracted from a single mine.

Agriculture

Rice is the principal crop; with wheat, maize and pulses. Total foodgrains, 1998, 365,000 tonnes (rice, 352,000 tonnes).

Agricultural workforce, 453,040. Only 0.21m. ha. are cultivable, of which 158,000 ha. are under paddy. Fruit and vegetables are important in the valley, including pineapples, oranges, bananas, mangoes, pears, peaches and plums. Soil erosion, produced by shifting cultivation, is being halted by terracing. Fruit production in 1993–94, 0.11m. tonnes.

Forestry

Forests occupied 17,280 sq. km in 2007. The main products are teak, jurjan and pine; there are also large areas of bamboo and cane, especially in the Jiri and Barak river drainage areas, yielding about 0.3m. tonnes annually.

INDUSTRY

Handloom weaving is a cottage industry. Manipur is one of the least industrialized states of India. Location, limited infrastructure and insufficient power hold back industrial development. Larger-scale industries include the manufacture of bicycles and TV sets, sugar, cement, starch, vegetable oil and glucose. Sericulture produces about 45 tonnes of raw silk annually. Estimated non-agricultural workforce, 229,000.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

Length of road (1995), 7,003 km; number of vehicles (1996–97) 65,223. A national highway from Kaziranga (Assam) runs through Imphal to the border with Myanmar. The total length of national highway in 2000 was 954 km.

Rail

A railway link was opened in 1990, linking Karong with the Assamese railway system.

Civil Aviation

There is an airport at Imphal with regular scheduled services to Delhi and Kolkata.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Education

In 2001, 70.5% of the population were literate (80.3% of men and 60.5% of women). In 1996–97 there were 2,548 primary schools with 230,230 students, 555 middle schools with 106,200 students, 553 high and higher secondary schools with 66,160 students, 50 colleges, one medical college, two teacher training colleges, three polytechnics, Manipur University with 62 colleges and 52,352 students (1997–98) and an agricultural university (Central Agricultural University, Imphal).

Health

In 2001 there were 85 hospitals and public health centres, 28 dispensaries, 16 community health centres, 420 sub-centres and 26 other facilities.

RELIGION

At the 2001 census Hindus numbered 46% of the population; Christians, 34%; Muslims, 9%.

Meghalaya

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state was created under the Assam Reorganization (Meghalaya) Act 1969 and inaugurated on 2 April 1970. Its status was that of a state within the State of Assam until 21 Jan. 1972 when it became a fully-fledged state of the Union. It consists of the former Garo Hills district and United Khasi and Jaintia Hills district of Assam.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Meghalaya is bounded in the north and east by Assam, south and west by Bangladesh. The area is 22,429 sq. km and the population (2011 census, provisional) 2,964,007; density, 132 per sq. km. The people are mainly of the Khasi, Jaintia and Garo tribes. The main languages of the state are Khasi, Garo and English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 27.82%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Meghalaya has a unicameral legislature. The Legislative Assembly has 60 seats.

There are seven districts. The capital is Shillong (population, 2001 census, 267,662 in the urban agglomeration).

Presidential rule was imposed on 18 March 2009 despite the state government winning a tightly contested confidence vote a day earlier. It was lifted on 8 May after the Indian National Congress managed to form an alliance with the United Democratic Party.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections held on 7 March 2008 the Indian National Congress won 25 seats; Nationalist Congress Party, 14; United Democratic Party, 11; Hill State People's Democratic Party, 2; Bharatiya Janata Party, 1; Khun Hynnietrip National Awakening Movement, 1; ind., 5.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Ranjit Shekhar Mooshahary (took office on 1 July 2008).

Chief Minister: Mukul Sangma (took office on 20 April 2010).

ECONOMY*Budget

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Electricity

Total installed capacity (Oct. 2008) was 288 MW. In Sept. 2008, 3,428 out of 5,782 inhabited villages had electricity.

Minerals

The Khasi Hills, Jaintia Hills and Garo Hills districts produce coal, sillimanite (95% of India's total output), limestone, fire clay, dolomite, feldspar, quartz and glass sand. The state also has deposits of coal (estimated reserves 600m. tonnes), limestone (3,000m.), fire clay (6m.) and sandstone which are so far virtually untapped. Coal production in 2000–01 was 5,149,000 tonnes; limestone production in 2000–01 was 585,000 tonnes.

Agriculture

About 71% of the people depend on agriculture. Principal crops are rice, maize, potatoes, cotton, oranges, ginger, tezpata, areca nuts, jute, mesta, bananas and pineapples. Production 2000–01 (in tonnes) of principal crops: rice, 179,000; potatoes, 144,000; ginger, 45,000; jute, 36,000; citrus fruits, 32,000; maize, 24,000; cotton, 8,000; rape and mustard, 5,000. Poultry and cattle are the principal livestock.

Forestry

Forests covered 17,321 sq. km in 2007. Forest products are one of the state's chief resources.

INDUSTRY

Apart from agriculture the main source of employment is the extraction and processing of minerals; there are also important timber processing mills and cement factories. Other industries include electronics, tantalum capacitors, beverages and watches. The state has five industrial estates, two industrial areas and one growth centre. In 2007–08 there were 90 registered factories employing 5,587 people. In 2000, 17,800 workers were involved in manufacturing and processing. There were also, in 2001–02, 1,812 sericultural villages, six sericultural farms, eight silk units and nine weaving centres. In 2000 there were more than 5,400 khadi and village industrial units.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Three national highways run through the state for a distance of 520 km. In 2000–01 there were 7,598 km of surfaced and unsurfaced roads, of which 3,523 km were surfaced. Total number of motor vehicles in 2000–01 was 67,076, including 13,464 trucks, 12,853 private cars and 2,463 buses.

Rail

The state has only 1 km of railways, but this does not connect the state with the national network. The nearest station is 103 km outside the state. There is a plan to extend the national network to Byrnihat, 20 km inside Meghalaya.

Civil Aviation

Umroi airport (35 km from Shillong) connects the state with main air services. There are regular flights to Kolkata. Umroi is to be upgraded to receive larger aircraft. However, the main airport serving the state is Borjhar, at Guwahati, 21 km across the state border but only 124 km from Shillong. Guwahati has air links with several major north Indian cities.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Guwahati High Court is common to Assam, Meghalaya, Nagaland, Manipur, Mizoram, Tripura and Arunachal Pradesh—there are 19 judges. There is a bench of the Guwahati High Court at Shillong.

Education

In 2001, 62.6% of the population were literate (65.4% of men and 59.6% of women). In 2000–01 the state had 4,685 primary and middle schools with 445,443 students, and 1,613 senior middle, secondary and higher secondary schools with 181,068 students. There were 35 colleges and other institutions of higher education including ten teacher training schools, one college and one polytechnic, with a total enrolment of 31,975 students. The North Eastern Hill University started functioning at Shillong in 1973; in 1993–94 it had 41 colleges and 54,803 students.

Health

In 2000–01 there were ten government hospitals, 88 primary health centres and 12 additional health centres, 38 government dispensaries and 413 sub-centres. Total beds (hospitals and health centres), 2,377. There were 389 doctors, 384 staff nurses and 915 paramedics.

Nagaland

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state was created in 1961, effective 1963. It consisted of the Naga Hills district of Assam and the Tuensang Frontier Agency. The agency was a British-supervised tribal area on the borders of Myanmar. Its supervision passed to the government of India at independence, and in 1957 Tuensang and the Naga Hills became a Centrally Administered Area, governed by the central government through the Governor of Assam.

A number of Naga leaders fought for independence until a settlement was reached with the Indian government at the Shillong Peace Agreement of 1975. However, calls for a greater Naga state, potentially incorporating parts of neighbouring Manipur, Arunachal Pradesh and Assam, continued to be voiced, notably through the National Socialist Council of Nagaland (NSCN), which had been active since 1954. The national government and NSCN met in Delhi in early Jan. 2003 to hold their first joint talks in 37 years, after which the NSCN declared 'the war is over'.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The state is in the northeast of India and is bounded in the north by Arunachal Pradesh, west by Assam, east by Myanmar and south by Manipur. Nagaland has an area of 16,579 sq. km and a population (2011 census, provisional) of 1,980,602; density, 119 per sq. km. The major towns are the capital, Kohima (2001 population, 77,030) and Dimapur (98,096). Other towns include Wokha, Mon, Zunheboto, Mokokchung and Tuensang. The chief tribes in numerical order are: Angami, Ao, Sumi, Konyak, Chakhesang, Lotha, Phom, Khiamngan, Chang, Yimchunger, Zeliang-Kuki, Rengma, Sangtam and Pochury. The official language of the state is English; Nagamese, a variant language form of Assamese and Hindi, is the most widely spoken language.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

An Interim Body (Legislative Assembly) of 42 members elected by the Naga people and an Executive Council (Council of Ministers) of five members were formed in 1961, and continued until the State Assembly was elected in Jan. 1964. The Assembly has 60 members. The Governor has extraordinary powers, which include special responsibility for law and order. Presidential rule was imposed in Jan. 2008 after the dismissal of the government but revoked in March 2008.

The state has 11 districts (Dimapur, Kiphire, Kohima, Longleng, Mokokchung, Mon, Peren, Phek, Tuensang, Wokha and Zunheboto). The capital is Kohima.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections to the State Assembly on 8 March 2008 the Nagaland People's Front won 26 seats (19 in 2003); Indian National Congress party won 24 seats (20 in 2003); BJP, 2; Nationalist Congress Party, 2; ind., 6.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Nikhil Kumar; b. 1941 (took office on 15 Oct. 2009).

Chief Minister: Neiphiu Rio; b. 1950 (since 12 March 2008, having previously been in office March 2003–Jan. 2008).

ECONOMY*Budget

2008–09 revenue receipts, ₹34,008.9m.; expenditure, ₹28,895.3m. Budget estimates for 2009–10: revenue receipts, ₹39,098.9m.; expenditure, ₹31,700.7m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Electricity

Installed capacity (Oct. 2008) 103 MW. In Sept. 2008, 823 out of 1,278 inhabited villages had electricity.

Oil and Gas

Oil has been located in three districts. Reserves are estimated at 600m. tonnes.

Minerals

In addition to oil, other minerals include: coal, limestone, marble, chromite, magnesite, nickel, cobalt, chromium, iron ore, copper ore, clay, glass sand and slate.

Agriculture

90% of the people derive their livelihood from agriculture. The Angamis, in Kohima district, practise a fixed agriculture in the shape of terraced slopes, and wet paddy cultivation in the lowlands. In the other two districts a traditional form of shifting cultivation (jhumming) still predominates, but some farmers have begun tea and coffee plantations and horticulture. About 61,000 ha. were under terrace cultivation and 74,040 ha. under jhumming in 1994–95. Production of rice (1999) was 187,000 tonnes, total foodgrains 227,300 tonnes and pulses 13,000 tonnes.

Forestry

Forests, including open forests, covered 13,464 sq. km in 2007, of which forest area excluding open forest was 6,171 sq. km.

INDUSTRY

There is a forest products factory at Tijit; a paper-mill (100 tonnes daily capacity) at Tuli, a distillery unit and a sugar-mill (1,000 tonnes daily capacity) at Dimapur, and a cement factory (50 tonnes daily capacity) at Wazeho. Bricks and TV sets are also made, and there are 1,850 small units. There is a ceramics plant and sericulture is also important.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There is a national highway from Kaziranga (Assam) to Kohima and on to Manipur. There are state highways connecting Kohima with the district headquarters. Total length of roads in 1999, over 15,500 km, of which 365 km are national highway and 1,094 km state highway. There were 95,020 motor vehicles registered in 1994–95.

Rail

Dimapur has a rail-head. Railway route-km in 2000, 60 km.

Civil Aviation

There are scheduled services from Dimapur to Guwahati, Imphal and Kolkata.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Punjab (India)

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Punjab was constituted an autonomous province of India in 1937. In 1947 it was partitioned between India and Pakistan as East and West Punjab. The name of East Punjab was changed to Punjab. On 1 Nov. 1956 Punjab and Patiala and East Punjab States Union (PEPSU) were integrated to form the state of Punjab. On 1 Nov. 1966, under the Punjab Reorganization Act, 1966, the state was reconstituted as a Punjabi-speaking state comprising the districts of Gurdaspur (excluding Dalhousie), Amritsar, Kapurthala, Jullundur, Ferozepur, Bhatinda, Patiala and Ludhiana; parts of Sangrur, Hoshiarpur and Ambala districts; and part of Kharar tehsil. The remaining area comprising 47,000 sq. km and an estimated (1967) population of 8.5m. was shared between the new state of Haryana and the Union Territory of Himachal Pradesh. The existing capital of Chandigarh was made joint capital of Punjab and Haryana; its transfer to Punjab alone (originally scheduled for 1986) has been delayed while the two states seek agreement as to which Hindi-speaking districts shall be transferred to Haryana.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Punjab is in north India and is bounded at its northernmost point by Jammu and Kashmir, northeast by Himachal Pradesh, southeast by Haryana, south by Rajasthan, west and northwest by Pakistan. The area of the state is 50,362 sq. km, with a population (2011 census, provisional) of 27,704,236; density, 550 per sq. km. For chief cities, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other principal towns (2001): Bathinda (217,256); Pathankot (168,485); Hoshiarpur (149,668); Batala (147,872); Moga (135,279); Abohar (124,339); S.A.S. Nagar (123,484); Maler Kotla (107,009); Khanna (103,099); Phagwara (102,253). The official language is Punjabi.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 13.73%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Punjab (India) has a unicameral legislature, the Legislative Assembly, of 117 members. Presidential rule was imposed in May 1987 after outbreaks of communal violence. In March 1988 the Assembly was officially dissolved. Presidential rule was lifted in Feb. 1992.

There are 17 districts. The capital is Chandigarh.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Rajasthan

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state is in the largely desert area formerly known as Rajputana. The Rajput princes were tributary to the Moghul emperors when they were conquered by the Mahrattas' leader, Mahadaji Sindhia, in the 1780s. In 1818 Rajputana became a British protectorate and was recognized during British rule as a group of princely states including Jaipur, Jodhpur and Udaipur. After independence the Rajput princes surrendered their powers and in 1950 were replaced by a single state government. In 1956 the state boundaries were altered; small areas of the former Bombay and Madhya Bharat states were added, together with the neighbouring state of Ajmer. Ajmer had been a Moghul power base; it was taken by the Mahrattas in 1770 and annexed by the British in 1818. In 1878 it became Ajmer-Merwara, a British province, and survived as a separate state until 1956.

Sikkim

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A small Himalayan kingdom between Nepal and Bhutan, Sikkim was independent in the 1830s although in continual conflict with larger neighbours. In 1839 the British took the Darjeeling district. British political influence increased in the 19th century, when Sikkim was a buffer between India and Tibet. However, Sikkim remained an independent kingdom ruled by the 14th-century Namgyal dynasty. In 1950 a treaty was signed with the government of India, declaring Sikkim an Indian Protectorate. Indian influence increased from then on. Political unrest coming to a head in 1973 led to the granting of constitutional reforms in 1974. Agitation continued until Sikkim became a 'state associated with the Indian Union' later that year. In 1975 the king was deposed and Sikkim became an Indian state, a change approved by referendum.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Sikkim is in the Eastern Himalayas and is bounded north by Tibet, east by Tibet and Bhutan, south by West Bengal and west by Nepal. Area, 7,096 sq. km. It is inhabited chiefly by the Lepchas, a tribe indigenous to Sikkim, the Bhutias, who originally came from Tibet, and the Nepalis, who entered from Nepal in large numbers in the late 19th and early 20th century. Population (2011 census, provisional), 607,688; density, 86 per sq km. The capital is Gangtok (population of 29,354 at the 2001 census).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 12.36%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Assembly has 32 members.

English is the principal language and the official language of the government. Lepcha, Bhutia, Nepali and Limboo have also been declared official languages.

Sikkim is divided into four districts for administration purposes, Gangtok, Mangan, Namchi and Gyalshing being the headquarters for the Eastern, Northern, Southern and Western districts respectively.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first trading establishment made by the British in the Madras State was at Peddapali (now Nizampatnam) in 1611 and then at Masulipatnam. In 1639 the British were permitted to create a settlement at the place which is now Chennai, and Fort St George was founded. By 1801 the whole of the country from the Northern Circars to Cape Comorin (with the exception of certain French and Danish settlements) had been brought under British rule.

Under the provisions of the States Reorganization Act, 1956, the Malabar district (excluding the islands of Laccadive and Minicoy) and the Kasaragod district taluk of South Kanara were transferred to the new state of Kerala; the South Kanara district (excluding Kasaragod taluk and the Amindivi Islands) and the Kollegal taluk of the Coimbatore district were transferred to the new state of Mysore. The Laccadive, Amindivi and Minicoy Islands were constituted a separate Territory. Four taluks of the Trivandrum district and the Shencottah taluk of Quilon district were transferred from Travancore-Cochin to the new Madras State. On 1 April 1960, 1,049 sq. km from the Chittoor district of Andhra Pradesh were transferred to Madras in exchange for 844 sq. km from the Chingleput and Salem districts. In Aug. 1968 the state was renamed Tamil Nadu.

Uttarakhand

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The state was carved from Uttar Pradesh and became the twenty-seventh state of India on 9 Nov. 2000. It is located in the hilly and mountainous region of the northern border of the Indian subcontinent. The regions of Kumaon and Garhwal contained in the new state were referred to as Uttarakhand in ancient Hindu scriptures. The Chinese suppression of revolt in Tibet in 1959 saw a rapid influx of Tibetan exiles to the region. The Indo-Chinese conflict of 1962 initiated a modernization programme throughout the Indian Himalayas with the development of roads and communication networks in the previously backward region. From the 1970s the hill people agitated for separation from Uttar Pradesh, established in 1950. On 1 Aug. 2000 the Uttar Pradesh Reorganisation Bill was passed, allowing for a separate state, called Uttaranchal (officially renamed Uttarakhand on 1 Jan. 2007), to incorporate 12 hill districts and, controversially, the lowland area of Udham Singh Nagar.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Uttarakhand is located in northern India and is bounded in the northeast by China and in the east by Nepal. The state of Uttar Pradesh is to the southwest, Haryana to the west and Himachal Pradesh to the northwest. Uttarakhand has an area of 53,483 sq. km. Population (2011 census, provisional), 10,116,752; density, 189 per sq. km. The principal languages are the Hindi dialects of Garhwali and Kumaoni. #### Electricity

In Oct. 2008 the state had an installed capacity of 2,383 MW. In Sept. 2008, 15,213 out of 15,761 inhabited villages had electricity.

Water

Uttarakhand suffers from an acute shortage of water for drinking and irrigation. Only 10% of the water potential is currently utilized.

Minerals

There are deposits of limestone, gypsum, iron ore, graphite and copper.

Agriculture

Agriculture is the occupation for approximately 50% of the population. Subsistence farming is the norm, as only 9% of the land in the state is cultivable.

Forestry

In 2007, 24,495 sq. km were covered by forest (45.8% of the state's area).

INDUSTRY

Tourism is by far the most important industry. The state can offer ski resorts, adventure tourism, mountaineering, hiking and several areas of religious interest. Other industries include: horticulture, floriculture, fruit-processing and medicine production. In the Terai region there are around 350 industrial units and 130 in the Doon Valley.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There are 23 km of roads for every 100 sq. km of land in the state. State highways link Uttarakhand to the neighbouring states of Himachal Pradesh, Haryana and Uttar Pradesh. The state remains inaccessible in parts.

Rail

Four main railway lines in the south of the state link several districts to Uttar Pradesh and Himachal Pradesh. Railways along the foothills connect Dehra Dun, Haridwar, Rishikesh, Roorkee, Kotdwara, Ram Nagar, Kathgodam and Tanakpur. The rest of the state is not connected to the rail network.

Civil Aviation

There are airports at Dehra Dun and Udham Singh Nagar.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education

In 2001, 71.6% of the population were literate (83.3% of men and 59.6% of women).

RELIGION

At the 2001 census Hindus numbered 7,212,260, Muslims 1,012,141 and Sikhs 212,025.

West Bengal

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bengal was under the overlordship of the Moghul emperor and ruled by a Moghul governor (nawab) who declared himself independent in 1740. The British East India Company based at Calcutta was in conflict with the nawab from 1756 until 1757 when British forces defeated him at Plassey and installed their own nawab in 1760. The French were also in Bengal; the British captured their trading settlement at Chandernagore in 1757 and in 1794, restoring it to France in 1815.

The area of British Bengal included modern Odisha and Bihar, Bangladesh and (until 1833) Uttar Pradesh. Calcutta was the capital of British India from 1772 until 1912.

The first division into East and West took place in 1905–11 and was not popular. However, at Partition in 1947 the East (Muslim) chose to join what was then East Pakistan (now Bangladesh), leaving West Bengal as an Indian frontier state and promoting a steady flow of non-Muslim Bengali immigrants from the East. In 1950 West Bengal incorporated the former princely state of Cooch Behar and, in 1954, Chandernagore. Small areas were transferred from Bihar in 1956.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

West Bengal is in northeast India and is bounded north by Sikkim and Bhutan, east by Assam and Bangladesh, south by the Bay of Bengal, southwest by Odisha, west by Jharkhand and Bihar and northwest by Nepal. The total area of West Bengal is 88,752 sq. km. Population (2011 census, provisional), 91,347,736; density, 1,029 per sq. km. The capital is Kolkata (Calcutta). Population of chief cities, see INDIA: Territory and Population. Other major towns (2001): Habra, 239,209; Ingraj Bazar (English Bazar), 224,415; Raiganj, 175,047; Haldia, 170,673; Baharampur, 170,322; Medinipur, 149,769; Krishnanagar, 148,194; Ranaghat, 145,285; Balurghat, 143,321; Santipur, 138,235; Bankura, 128,781; Navadvip, 125,341; Birnagar, 115,127; Alipur Duar, 114,035; Puruliya, 113,806; Basirhat, 113,159; Darjiling (Darjeeling), 108,830; Cooch Behar, 103,008; Bangaon, 102,163; Chakdaha, 101,320; Jalpaiguri, 100,348.

The principal language is Bengali.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 13.93%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The state of West Bengal came into existence as a result of the Indian Independence Act, 1947. The territory of Cooch-Bihar State was merged with West Bengal on 1 Jan. 1950, and the former French possession of Chandernagore became part of the state on 2 Oct. 1954. Under the States Reorganization Act, 1956, certain portions of Bihar State (an area of 3,157 sq. miles with a population of 1,446,385) were transferred to West Bengal.

The Legislative Assembly has 295 seats (294 elected and one nominated).

For administrative purposes there are three divisions (Jalpaiguri, Burdwan and Presidency), under which there are 19 districts, including Kolkata. The Kolkata Metropolitan Development Authority has been set up to co-ordinate development in the metropolitan area (1,350 sq. km). For the purposes of local self-government there are 18 zilla parishads (district boards) plus Shiliguri mahakuma parishad (which straddles Darjeeling district and Jalpaiguri district), 341 panchayat samities (regional boards) and 3,354 gram (village) panchayats. There are 118 municipalities, six Corporations and three Notified Areas. The Kolkata Municipal Corporation is headed by a mayor in council.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections held on 18, 23 and 27 April and 3, 7 and 10 May 2011 the All India Trinamool Congress won 184 of 294 seats, the Indian National Congress 42, the Communist Party of India (Marxist) 40, the All India Forward Bloc 11, the Revolutionary Socialist Party 7 and others 10. After 34 years, the victory for the All India Trinamool Congress signalled the end of the world's longest-running democratically-elected Communist government.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Mayankote Kelath Narayanan; b. 1934 (since 24 Jan. 2010).

Chief Minister: Mamata Banerjee; b. 1955 (since 20 May 2011).

Daman and Diu

GENERAL DETAILS

Daman (Damão) on the Gujarat coast, 100 miles (160 km) north of Mumbai, was seized by the Portuguese in 1531 and ceded to them (1539) by the Shar of Gujarat. The island of Diu, captured in 1534, lies off the southeast coast of Kathiawar (Gujarat); there is a small coastal area. Former Portuguese forts on either side of the entrance to the Gulf of Cambay, in Dec. 1961 the territories were occupied by India and incorporated into the Indian Union; they were administered as one unit together with Goa, to which they were attached until 30 May 1987, when Goa was separated from them and became a state.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory has an area of 112 sq. km and a population of 242,911 at the 2011 census. Density, 2,169 sq. km. Daman has an area of 72 sq. km, population (2001) 113,989; Diu, 40 sq. km, population 44,215. Daman is the capital of the territory. The main language spoken is Gujarati.

The chief towns are (with 2001 populations) Daman (35,770) and Diu (21,578).

Daman and Diu have been governed as parts of a Union Territory since Dec. 1961, becoming the whole of that Territory on 30 May 1987. There are two districts.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 53.54%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Administrator: Narendra Kumar.

ECONOMY

The main activities are tourism, fishing and tapping the toddy palm (preparing palm tree sap for consumption). In Daman there is rice-growing, some wheat and dairying. Diu has fine tourist beaches, grows coconuts and pearl millet, and processes salt.

Budget

Budget figures for 2009–10 showed receipts of ₹3,912.5m. and expenditure of ₹2,777.6m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Electricity

In Sept. 2008 all 23 inhabited villages had electricity. There was an installed capacity of 69 MW in Oct. 2008. Electricity consumption per capita in 2009–10 was 7,118 kWh

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Education

In 2001, 78.2% of the population were literate (86.8% of men and 65.6% of women). In 1996–97 there were 53 primary schools with 14,531 students, 20 middle schools with 6,834 students, 20 high schools with 3,220 students and 3 higher secondary schools with 1,202 students. There is a degree college and a polytechnic.

RELIGION

Numbers of religious followers (2001 census): Hindus, 141,901 (90% of the population), with some Muslims and Christians.

Delhi

GENERAL DETAILS

Delhi became a Union Territory on 1 Nov. 1956 and was designated the National Capital Territory in 1995.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory forms an enclave near the eastern frontier of Haryana and the western frontier of Uttar Pradesh in north India. Delhi has an area of 1,483 sq. km. Its population (2011 census) is 16,753,235 (density per sq. km, 11,297). Growth rate 2001–11, 20.96%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Lieut.-Governor is the Administrator. Under the New Delhi Municipal Act 1994 New Delhi Municipal Council is nominated by central government and replaces the former New Delhi Municipal Committee. There are nine districts.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections for the 70-member Legislative Assembly were held on 29 Nov. 2008. The Indian National Congress won 42 seats (47 in 2003); Bharatiya Janata Party, 23 (20 in 2003); Bahujan Samaj Party, 2 (none in 2003); others, 2 (three in 2003). The INC won a by-election held on 13 Dec. 2008, bringing their total to 43 seats.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Lieut.-Governor: Tejendra Khanna (took office on 9 April 2007).

Chief Minister: Sheila Dikshit (took office on 3 Dec. 1998).

ECONOMY*Budget

2008–09 revenue receipts, ₹163,522.1m.; expenditure, ₹117,625.5m. Budget estimates for 2009–10: revenue receipts, ₹190,993.0m.; expenditure, ₹137,033.1m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In Sept. 2008 all 158 inhabited villages had electricity. The installed capacity was 3,677 MW in Oct. 2008.

Minerals

The Union Territory has deposits of kaolin (china clay), quartzite and fire clay.

Agriculture

The contribution to the economy is not significant. In 2003–04 about 41,500 ha. were cropped (of which 22,700 ha. were irrigated). Animal husbandry is increasing and mixed farms are common. Chief crops are wheat, bajra, paddy, sugarcane, gram, jowar and vegetables. Buffaloes are kept as a source of milk; pigs and goats are kept for meat.

INDUSTRY

The modern city is the largest commercial centre in northern India and an important industrial centre. Since 1947 a large number of industrial units have been established; these include factories for the manufacture of razor blades, sports goods, electronic goods, bicycles and parts, plastic and PVC goods including footwear, textiles, chemicals, fertilizers, medicines, hosiery, leather goods, soft drinks and hand tools. The largest single industry is the manufacture of garments. There are also metal forging, casting, galvanizing, electro-plating and printing enterprises. The number of industrial units functioning was about 126,000 in 1996–97; average number of workers employed was 1.14m. Production was worth ₹63,100m. and investment was about ₹25,240m. in 1996–97.

Some traditional handicrafts, for which Delhi was formerly famous, still flourish; among them are ivory carving, miniature painting, gold and silver jewellery and papier mâché work. The handwoven textiles of Delhi are particularly fine; this craft is being successfully revived.

Delhi is a major market for manufactures, imports and agricultural goods; there are specialist fruit and vegetable, food grain, fodder, cloth, bicycle, hosiery, dry fruit and general markets.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

Five national highways pass through the city. There were (2000–01) 3,456,579 registered motor vehicles. There were 41,483 buses in 2000–01.

Rail

Delhi is an important rail junction with three main stations: New Delhi, Delhi Junction and Hazrat Nizamuddin. There is an electric ring railway for commuters (route-km in 1995–96, 214). The first of three lines of the Delhi metro system opened in 2002: when complete it will consist of 34.5 km subway, 35.5 km elevated and 111 km surface running.

Civil Aviation

Indira Gandhi International Airport operates international flights; Palam airport operates internal flights.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education

The proportion of literate people to the total population was 81.7% at the 2001 census (87.3% of males and 74.7% of females). In 2003–04 there were 2,126 primary schools with 924,493 students and 22,930 teachers, 681 middle schools with 230,362 students and 9,192 teachers, 1,678 high schools and higher secondary schools with 1,747,884 students and 59,064 teachers. In 1996–97 there were nine engineering and technology colleges, nine medical colleges and 25 polytechnics.

The University of Delhi was founded in 1922; it had 78 affiliated colleges in 2002–03 and 189,332 students in 1994–95.

There are also Jawaharlal Nehru University, Indira Gandhi National Open University, the Jamia Millia Islamia University, the Guru Gobind Singh Indraprastha University, Jamia Hamdard University and Shri Lal Bahadur Shastri Rashtriya Sanskrit Vidyapeeth University; the Indian Institute of Technology at Hauz Khas; the Indian Agricultural Research Institute at Pusa; the All India Institute of Medical Science at Ansari Nagar and the Indian Institute of Public Administration are the other important institutions.

Health

In 2001 there were 11 government hospitals plus 71 private hospitals, 167 government dispensaries plus 489 other dispensaries, 73 mobile health clinics and 64 school health clinics.

RELIGION

At the 2001 census Hindus numbered 11,358,049; Muslims, 1,623,520; Sikhs, 555,602; Jains, 155,122; Christians, 130,319.

Lakshadweep

The territory consists of an archipelago of 36 islands (ten inhabited), about 300 km off the west coast of Kerala. It was constituted a Union Territory in 1956 as the Laccadive, Minicoy and Amindivi Islands, and renamed in Nov. 1973. The total area of the islands is 32 sq. km. The northern portion is called the Amindivis. The remaining islands are called the Laccadives (except Minicoy Island). The inhabited islands are: Androth (the largest), Amini, Agatti, Bitra, Chetlat, Kadmat, Kalpeni, Kavaratti, Kiltan and Minicoy. Androth is 4.8 sq. km, and is nearest to Kerala. An Advisory Committee associated with the Union Home Minister and an Advisory Council to the Administrator assist in the administration of the islands; these are constituted annually. Population (2011 census), 64,429, nearly all Muslims. Density, 2,013 per sq. km; growth rate 2001–11, 6.23%. The language is Malayalam, but the language in Minicoy is Mahl. Budget figures for 2009–10 showed receipts of ₹542.2m. and expenditure of ₹6,791.5m. Installed electric capacity (1998) 8,120 kW. In Sept. 2008 all eight inhabited villages had electricity. A number of solar photovoltaic power plants have been constructed in the islands. Guaranteeing supplies of potable water is problematic in most of the islands. Rain water harvesting schemes have been introduced as well as desalination plants. There are several small factories processing fibre from coconut husks: in 2002 these employed 316 workers. There are two handicraft training centres. The major industry is fishing—in 1999 there were 375 registered fishing boats. The principal catches are tuna and shark. Tuna is canned at a factory at Minicoy. There is an experimental pearl culture scheme at the uninhabited island of Bangarem. In 2001, 86.7% of the population were literate (92.5% of men and 80.5% of women). There were, in 1996–97, nine high schools (2,043 students) and nine nursery schools (1,197 students), 19 junior basic schools (9,015 students), four senior basic schools (4,797 students) and two junior colleges. There are two hospitals and four primary health centres plus 14 health sub-centres. At the 2001 census Muslims numbered 57,903 (95% of the population). The staple products are copra and fish; coconut is the only major crop. Headquarters of administration, Kavaratti, population 10,113 (2001 census), on Kavaratti Island. An airport, with Vayudoot services, opened on Agatti Island in April 1988. The islands are also served by ship from the mainland and have helicopter inter-island services. There are two catamaran-type high-speed inter-island ferries and four barges. The islands have 253 km of roads, of which 124 km have paved surfaces. The islands have great tourist potential.

Administrator: Amar Nath (took office on 11 July 2011).

Puducherry

GENERAL DETAILS

Formerly the chief French settlement in India, Puducherry (known as Pondicherry until 2006) was founded by the French in 1673, taken by the Dutch in 1693 and restored to the French in 1699. The English took it in 1761, restored it in 1765, retook it in 1778, restored it a second time in 1785, retook it a third time in 1793 and finally restored it to the French in 1816. Administration was transferred to India on 1 Nov. 1954. A Treaty of Cession (together with Karaikal, Mahé and Yanam) was signed on 28 May 1956; instruments of ratification were signed on 16 Aug. 1962 from which date (by the 14th amendment to the Indian Constitution) Pondicherry, comprising the four territories, became a Union Territory.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory is composed of enclaves on the Coromandel Coast of Tamil Nadu and Andhra Pradesh, with Mahé forming two enclaves on the coast of Kerala. The total area of Puducherry is 479 sq. km, divided into 11 enclaves that are grouped into four Districts. On Tamil Nadu coast: Puducherry (290 sq. km; population, 2001 census, 735,332), Karaikal (161; 170,791). On Kerala coast: Mahé (9; 36,828). On Andhra Pradesh coast (although the enclave lies back from the shore but at no point does its territory touch the coast): Yanam (20; 31,394). Total population (2011 census), 1,244,464; density, 2,598 per sq. km. Puducherry Municipality had (2001) 220,865 inhabitants and the urban agglomeration had 505,959 inhabitants. The principal languages spoken are Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam, French and English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Growth rate 2001–11, 27.72%.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

By the government of Union Territories Act 1963 Puducherry is governed by a Lieut.-Governor, appointed by the President, and a Council of Ministers responsible to a Legislative Assembly.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Indonesian archipelago was populated from the north from around 3000 BC. Indian scholars described the Dvipantera civilization of Java and Sumatra as early as 200 BC and Indian-influenced Hindu kingdoms began to appear in the west of the archipelago from the 1st century AD. Small maritime trading settlements evolved into Srivijaya, a Buddhist Malay kingdom centred on southeast Sumatra. The Srivijaya empire controlled trade between India and China through the Melaka strait and by the late 7th century it had expanded to encompass much of Sumatra, the Malay peninsula and western Java. Other Indianized kingdoms developed in central Java, including Mataram (8th–10th centuries) and Mahayana (9th century).

Power shifted to east Java, culminating in the Majapahit empire (founded by Wijaya in 1293 and developed by Gaja Mada), which controlled much of present-day Indonesia. Islam was brought to northern Sumatra by Arab merchants from the 7th century but spread only gradually until the rise of the sultanate of Melaka from the early 15th century. The north Javanese coastal kingdoms that converted to Islam competed with the Majapahit empire, contributing to its decline by the early 16th century.

Portuguese forces, led by Afonso de Albuquerque, having conquered the sultanate of Melaka in 1511 attempted to control the spice trade, although local powers including Aceh (north Sumatra) and Makassar (Sulawesi) competed by opening new routes. Dutch mariners arrived in west Java in 1596 and Jan Pietersoon Coen established a base on Java (Batavia, which became Jakarta) in 1619. The capture of Melaka in 1641 heralded 150 years of Dutch control of the spice trade through its United East India Company (VOC).

Following the VOC's collapse at the end of the 18th century and after a short period of British rule under Thomas Stamford Raffles, the Dutch state took control of the archipelago. The Anglo-Dutch Treaty of 1824 delineated the border between British Malaya and the Dutch East Indies. Between 1825–50 the Dutch suppressed a rebellion on Java, initially led by Prince Diponegoro, and partly fuelled by opposition to the 'Cultivation System' whereby locals had to devote a percentage of their land to cultivating government-approved export crops. The Sarekat Islam (Islamic Union), founded in 1912, was the country's first major nationalist movement. In March 1942 Japanese forces invaded and began to dismantle the Dutch power base. The Indonesian nationalist leaders Sukarno and Mohammad Hatta worked with the Japanese occupiers whilst pushing for independence. On 17 Aug. 1945, two days after Japan's surrender, Sukarno and Hatta proclaimed an independent republic with Sukarno as its president, although the Netherlands did not concede unconditional sovereignty until 27 Dec. 1949.

In 1960 President Sukarno dismissed parliament after a dispute over the government's budget and dissolved political parties. In their place he set up the National Front and the Provisional People's Consultative Assembly. On 11–12 March 1966 the military commanders under the leadership of Lieut.-Gen. Suharto seized executive power, leaving President Sukarno as head of state. The Communist party, which had twice attempted to overthrow the government, was outlawed. On 22 Feb. 1967 Sukarno handed over all his powers to Gen. Suharto. Re-elected president at five-year intervals, on the final occasion on 10 March 1998, Suharto presided over a booming economy but one that was characterized by corruption and cronyism.
