Bermuda

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The islands were discovered by Juan Bermúdez, probably in 1503, but were uninhabited until British colonists were wrecked there in 1609. A plantation company was formed; in 1684 the Crown took over the government. A referendum in Aug. 1995 rejected independence from the UK.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Bermuda consists of a group of 138 islands and islets (about 20 inhabited), situated in the western Atlantic (32° 18' N. lat., 64° 46' W. long.); the nearest point of the mainland, 940 km distant, is Cape Hatteras (North Carolina). The area is 53.3 sq. km (20.6 sq. miles). In June 1995 the USA surrendered its lease on land used since 1941 for naval and air force bases. The 2010 census population was 64,237; density, 1,205 per sq. km. Capital, Hamilton; population (2010), 1,010. Population of St George's (2010), 1,743.

Ethnic composition, 2000: Black, 54.8%; White, 34.0%.

The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

In 2006 there were 798 live births, 876 marriages and 461 deaths. Average annual growth rate, 2000–05, 0.2%. Life expectancy at birth, 2009: 79.4 years.

CLIMATE

A pleasantly warm and humid climate, with up to 60" (1,500 mm) of rain spread evenly throughout the year. Hamilton, Jan. 63°F (17.2°C), July 79°F (26.1°C). Annual rainfall 58" (1,463 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the 1968 constitution the Governor, appointed by the Crown, is normally bound to accept the advice of the Cabinet in matters other than external affairs, defence, internal security and the police, for which he retains special responsibility. The legislature consists of a Senate of 11 members, five appointed by the Governor on the recommendation of the Premier, three by the Governor on the recommendation of the Opposition Leader and three by the Governor in his own discretion. The members of the House of Assembly are elected, one from each of 36 constituencies (as of 2003) by universal suffrage.

At a referendum on 17 Aug. 1995, 16,369 votes were cast against the option of independence, and 5,714 were in favour. The electorate was 38,000; turnout was 58%.

RECENT ELECTIONS

A general election was held on 18 Dec. 2007. Turnout was 75.6%. The ruling Progressive Labour Party (PLP) won 22 of the 36 seats in parliament, with 52.5% of votes cast. The United Bermuda Party (UBP) won 14 seats, with 47.3%. The PLP is largely representative of the black population, while the UBP membership is mostly white.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Sir Richard Gozney; b. 1951 (took office on 12 Dec. 2007).

Premier: Paula Cox; b. 1964 (took office on 29 Oct. 2010).

Government Website: <http://www.gov.bm>

DEFENCE

The Bermuda Regiment numbers 600 personnel, mostly part-time. There are 29 professional staff. Bermuda, unlike the rest of the UK, retains conscription.

ECONOMY

Bermuda is the world's third largest insurance market after London and New York. Reserves of insurance companies total BD$39bn. Bermuda has one of the highest per capita incomes of any country thanks to the ever-increasing role of the offshore banking sector.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Bermuda dollar (BMD) of 100 cents at parity with the US dollar. Inflation was 3.1% in both 2005 and 2006.

Budget

The fiscal year ends on 31 March. Total revenue in 2007–08 was BD$1,008.9m. and total expenditure BD$1,064.6m. Chief sources of revenue (in BD$1m.) in 2007–08: payroll tax, 341.3; customs duty, 230.1; international company tax, 72.8. Chief items of expenditure (in BD$1m.) in 2007–08: salaries and wages, 442.4; other goods and services, 251.2; grants and contributions, 215.2.

Performance

Total GDP was US$5.7bn. in 2009. Real GDP growth was 5.4% in 2006.

Banking and Finance

Bermuda is an offshore financial centre with tax exemption facilities. In 2008 there were 15,631 international companies registered in Bermuda. There are four commercial banks, with total assets of BD$24,277m. in 2008. HSBC bought the Bank of Bermuda in 2003 for US$1.3bn. The Bermuda Monetary Authority (Chairman, Alan Cossar) acts as a central bank. There is a stock exchange, the BSX.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Bermuda's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 10.2 tonnes per capita

Electricity

Installed capacity was 0.2m. kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was 643m. kWh, with consumption per capita 9,892 kWh in 2007.

Minerals

Bermuda is rich in limestone.

Agriculture

The chief products are fresh vegetables, bananas and citrus fruit. In 2005 there were an estimated 800 acres of land being used for arable purposes. ## British Antarctic Territory

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The British Antarctic Territory was established on 3 March 1962, as a consequence of the entry into force of the Antarctic Treaty, to separate those areas of the then Falkland Islands Dependencies which lay within the Treaty area from those which did not (i.e. South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands).

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The territory encompasses the lands and islands within the area south of 60°S latitude lying between 20°W and 80°W longitude (approximately due south of the Falkland Islands and the Dependencies). It covers an area of some 1,700,000 sq. km, and its principal components are the South Orkney and South Shetland Islands, the Antarctic Peninsula (Palmer Land and Graham Land), the Filchner and Ronne Ice Shelves and Coats Land.

There is no indigenous or permanently resident population. There is, however, an itinerant population of scientists and logistics staff of about 300, manning a number of research stations.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Commissioner: Colin Roberts (non-resident).

Administrator: Henry Burgess.

British Indian Ocean Territory

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

This territory was established to meet UK and US defence requirements by an Order in Council on 8 Nov. 1965, consisting then of the Chagos Archipelago (formerly administered from Mauritius) and the islands of Aldabra, Desroches and Farquhar (all formerly administered from Seychelles). The latter islands became part of Seychelles when that country achieved independence on 29 June 1976. In Nov. 2000 the High Court ruled that the 2,000 Ilois people (native to the archipelago) deported between 1967 and 1973 to accommodate a US military base on Diego Garcia had been removed unlawfully. Chagos islanders subsequently lost a UK High Court case for compensation and the right to return in 2003. However, further High Court rulings in 2006 and 2007 went against the UK government. Nonetheless, return by the Ilois to the archipelago (excepting Diego Garcia) is unlikely until all appeal processes have been exhausted.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The group, with a total land area of 60 sq. km (23 sq. miles), comprises five coral atolls (Diego Garcia, Peros Banhos, Salomon, Eagle and Egmont), of which the largest and southernmost, Diego Garcia, covers 44 sq. km (17 sq. miles) and lies 725 km (450 miles) south of the Maldives. A US Navy support facility has been established on Diego Garcia. There is no permanent population.

British Virgin Islands

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Discovered by Columbus on his second voyage in 1493, British Virgin Islands were first settled by the Dutch in 1648 and taken over in 1666 by a group of English planters. The islands were annexed to the British Crown in 1672. Constitutional government was granted in 1773, but was later surrendered in 1867. A Legislative Council formed in that year was abolished in 1902. In 1950 a partly nominated and partly elected Legislative Council was restored. A ministerial system of government was introduced in 1967.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Islands form the eastern extremity of the Greater Antilles and number 60, of which 16 are inhabited. The largest, with census populations (2001), are Tortola, 19,282; Virgin Gorda, 3,203; Anegada, 250; and Jost Van Dyke, 244. Other islands had a total population (2001 census) of 182 (including marine population). Total area 151 sq. km (58 sq. miles); total population (2001 census), 23,161. In 2000, 61.1% of the population were urban. The capital, Road Town, on the southeast of Tortola, is a port of entry; population (estimate 2000), 7,974.

The official language is English. Spanish and Creole are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Birth rate, 2001, was 15.4 per 1,000 population; death rate, 4.9 per 1,000. Life expectancy in 2001 was an estimated 75.5 years. Annual growth rate, 1.96% in 2000.

CLIMATE

A pleasant healthy sub-tropical climate with summer temperatures lowered by sea breezes and cool nights. Road Town (1999), Jan. 21°C, July 27°C; rainfall (1998), 1,471 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution became effective on 15 June 2007. It granted the British Virgin Islands greater autonomy and self-determination. There is a Premier (formerly Chief Minister) and a House of Assembly (formerly Legislative Council). The Premier is appointed by the Governor. The House of Assembly consists of 13 members elected for a four-year term (five directly elected members from constituencies and four members from 'at large' seats covering the territory as a whole), a Speaker and the Attorney General ex officio. The Cabinet consists of the Premier, four other Ministers and the Attorney General ex officio.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In parliamentary elections on 7 Nov. 2011 the National Democratic Party (NDP) won nine of the 13 available seats, ahead of the Virgin Islands Party (VIP) with four. The remaining two seats are held by a Speaker and the Attorney General. Turnout was 68.8%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Falkland Islands

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

France established a settlement in 1764 and Britain a second settlement in 1765. In 1770 Spain bought out the French and drove off the British. This action on the part of Spain brought that country and Britain to the verge of war. The Spanish restored the settlement to the British in 1771, but the settlement was withdrawn in 1774. In 1806 Spanish rule was overthrown in Argentina, and the Argentine claimed to succeed Spain in the French and British settlements in 1820. The British objected and reclaimed their settlement in 1832 as a Crown Colony.

On 2 April 1982 Argentine forces occupied the Falkland Islands. On 3 April the UN Security Council called, by 10 votes to one, for Argentina's withdrawal. After a military campaign, but without a formal declaration of war, the UK regained possession on 14–15 June when Argentina surrendered. In April 1990 Argentina's Congress declared the Falkland and other British-held South Atlantic islands part of the new Argentine province of Tierra del Fuego though the threat of hostilities has been lifted.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Territory comprises numerous islands situated in the South Atlantic Ocean about 480 miles northeast of Cape Horn covering 12,200 sq. km. The main East Falkland Island, 6,760 sq. km; the West Falkland, 5,410 sq. km, including the adjacent small islands. The population at the census of 2001 was 2,379. The only town is Stanley, in East Falkland, with a 2001 population of 1,989. The population is nearly all of British descent, with 1,326 born in the Islands (2001 census figures) and 925 in the UK. In 2000, 78.8% lived in urban areas. There is a British garrison of about 500 servicemen, stationed in East Falkland.

The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

In 2008 there were 29 births and 22 deaths on the islands.

CLIMATE

A cool temperate climate, much affected by strong winds, particularly in spring. Stanley, Jan. 49°F (9.4°C), July 35°F (1.7°C). Annual rainfall 24" (625 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution came into force in Jan. 2009, updating the previous constitution of 1985 and the 1997 amendments. Provisions on the right of self-determination contained in international covenants were affirmed in the main body of the constitution. It also provided for a Public Accounts Committee and a Complaints Commissioner to allow for greater transparency in financial matters. The human rights chapter was updated to bring it in line with international agreements.

Domestic policy is the responsibility of the Executive Council although the Governor has the right to override the council and decide policy 'in the interests of good governance' or in matters relating to external affairs, defence, internal security (including police), the administration of justice, audit and public service management.

There is a Legislative Council consisting of eight members (five from Stanley and three from Camp, elected every four years) and two ex officio members, the Chief Executive and Financial Secretary. Only elected members have a vote.

British citizenship was withdrawn by the British Nationality Act 1981, but restored after the Argentine invasion of 1982.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Elections to the Legislative Assembly were held on 5 Nov. 2009. Only non-partisans were elected.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Nigel Haywood, CVO.

Acting Chief Executive: Keith Padgett.

Government Website: <http://www.falklands.gov.fk>

DEFENCE

Since 1982 the Islands have been defended by a 2,000-strong garrison of British servicemen. In addition there is a local volunteer defence force.

ECONOMY

The economy of the Islands grew considerably in the second half of the 1980s as a result of the expansion of the fishing industry. In 2007 the GDP was estimated at £104m., up from £5m. in 1980.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Falkland Islands pound (FKP) of 100 pence, at parity with £1 sterling.

Budget

Revenue and expenditure (in £ sterling) for fiscal year ending 30 June 2000 was: revenue, 52.3m.; expenditure, 40.4m.

Banking and Finance

The only bank is Standard Chartered Bank, which had assets of £31m. in 1997.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

Electricity production in 2007 totalled about 17m. kWh. Installed capacity in 2007 was estimated at 9,000 kW.

Oil and Gas

In 1996 the Falkland Islands government awarded production licences to Shell, Amerada Hess, Desire Petroleum and International Petroleum Corporation (Sodra), allowing them to begin oil exploration. The licensed areas are situated 150 km north of the Islands over the North Falkland Basin. Six exploration wells were drilled in 1998 and analysis of the findings suggested that in excess of 60bn. bbls of oil have been generated in the basin.

In Feb. 2010 a British-contracted rig began a new round of oil exploration in waters north of the islands. With the potential for significant oil riches, Argentina appealed to the UN to bring the UK into renewed talks over the sovereignty of the territory. In May it was announced that significant supplies of oil had been discovered.

Agriculture

The economy was formerly based solely on agriculture, principally sheep farming. Following a programme of sub-division, much of the land is divided into family-size units. There were 85 farms in 2009–10, averaging 13,053 ha. and 5,630 sheep. Wool is the principal product; 1,587 tonnes were produced in 2009–10.

Livestock: in May 2010 there were 478,525 sheep, 4,738 cattle and 519 horses.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2005 was 84,546 tonnes, up from 27,190 tonnes in 1995.

INDUSTRY

Labour

In 2001 there were 2,025 people employed full-time, including 358 in construction and 326 in agriculture, hunting and fishing. The growth of the fishing industry has ensured practically zero unemployment.

EXTERNAL ECONOMIC RELATIONS

Around 85% of trade is with the UK, the rest with Latin America, mainly Chile. In 2007 imports totalled £35m.; exports (mainly fish), £134m.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There are over 50 km of surfaced roads and another 400 km of unsurfaced road. This includes the 80 km between Stanley and Mount Pleasant Airport. Other settlements outside Stanley are linked by tracks. There were about 1,100 private cars in 1996.

Civil Aviation

Air communication is currently via Ascension Island. An airport, completed in 1986, is sited at Mount Pleasant on East Falkland. RAF Tristar aircraft operate a twice-weekly service between the Falklands and the UK. A Chilean airline, LAN Airlines, runs a weekly service to Puerto Montt, Punta Arenas, Rio Gallegos and Santiago.

Shipping

A charter vessel calls four or five times a year to and from the UK. Vessels of the Royal Fleet Auxiliary run regularly to South Georgia. Sea links with Chile and Uruguay began in 1989.

Telecommunications

Number of telephone main lines in 2008 was 2,000. International direct dialling is available, as are international fax links. In 2008 there were 2,800 internet users.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

There is a Supreme Court, and a Court of Appeal sits in the UK; appeals may go from that court to the judicial committee of the Privy Council. The senior resident judicial officer is the Senior Magistrate. There is an Attorney General and a Senior Crown Counsel.

Education

Education is compulsory between the ages of five and 16 years. In Stanley in 2002 there were 30 pre-school pupils, 190 primary pupils (18 teachers) and 160 pupils in the 11–16 age range (18 teachers). In rural areas students attend small settlement schools or are visited by one of seven travelling teachers. Lessons may also be carried out over the radio or telephone.

Health

The Government Medical Department is responsible for all medical services to civilians. Primary and secondary health care facilities are based at the King Edward VII Memorial Hospital, the only hospital on the islands. It has 28 beds. It is staffed by five doctors, six sisters (including four midwives), eight staff nurses, a health visitor, counsellor, physiotherapist, social worker and an auxiliary nursing staff. The Royal Army Medical Corps staff the surgical facilities. There are two dentists on the island.

Welfare

In 1998 total amount spent on old age pension payments was £504,075. Total amount spent on family allowance payments was £336,365.

CULTURE

Press

In 2006 there was one weekly newspaper, the Penguin News.

Tourism

In the 2008–09 season there were a record 62,488 cruise ship visitors. There are a variety of lodges around the Islands. Stanley has one major hotel and some guest houses.

Gibraltar

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Rock of Gibraltar was settled by Moors in 711. In 1462 it was taken by the Spaniards, from Granada. It was captured by Admiral Sir George Rooke on 24 July 1704, and ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Utrecht, 1713. The cession was confirmed by the treaties of Paris (1763) and Versailles (1783). In 1830 Gibraltar became a British crown colony.

On 10 Sept. 1967 a UN resolution on the decolonization of Gibraltar led to a referendum to ascertain whether the people of Gibraltar wished to retain their link with the UK. Out of an electorate of 12,762, an overwhelming majority voted to retain the British connection.

The border was closed by Spain in 1969, opened to pedestrians in 1982 and fully opened in 1985. In 1973 Gibraltar joined the European Community as a dependent territory of the United Kingdom. In 2001 talks were held between Britain and Spain over the colony's sovereignty. In a joint statement, the British and Spanish foreign ministers said they would work towards a comprehensive agreement by the summer of 2002. Gibraltar's government held an unofficial referendum on sharing sovereignty with Spain on 7 Nov. 2002 in which 98.97% of votes cast were against joint sovereignty. While Britain sees the principle of shared sovereignty as the definitive solution, Spain maintains its historic claim to outright control. An agreement reached in Sept. 2006 eased border controls and opened up Gibraltar to flights from Spain and other European countries.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Gibraltar is situated in latitude 36°07' N and longitude 05°21' W. Area, 6.5 sq. km (2½ sq. miles) including port and harbour. Total population (2009), 29,431 (of whom 23,907 were British Gibraltar, 3,129 Other British and 2,395 Non-British); density, 4,528 per sq. km. The population is mostly of Genoese, Portuguese, Maltese and Spanish descent.

The official language is English; Spanish is also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Statistics (2009): births, 417; deaths, 234; marriages, 966. Rates per 1,000 population, 2006: birth, 12.6; death, 8.0.

CLIMATE

The climate is warm temperate, with westerly winds in winter bringing rain. Summers are pleasantly warm and rainfall is low. Mean maximum temperatures: Jan. 16°C, July 28°C. Annual rainfall 722 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was approved in a referendum on 30 Nov. 2006 and came into effect on 2 Jan. 2007, giving Gibraltar full internal self-government. The Gibraltar House of Assembly (itself an amalgamation of the former Legislative and City Councils) was renamed the Gibraltar Parliament. The legislature of Gibraltar consists of the Queen as head of state and the Gibraltar Parliament. The Governor remains Commander-in-Chief but only retains direct constitutional responsibility for matters relating to defence, external affairs and some aspects of internal security. There is a Council of Ministers presided over by the Chief Minister who is appointed by the Governor. The constitution also abolished the former Gibraltar Council.

The Gibraltar Parliament consists of a Speaker appointed by the parliament and at least 17 elected members. A Mayor of Gibraltar is elected by the members of parliament (excluding the Speaker).

Gibraltarians have full UK citizenship.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 8 Dec. 2011 turnout was 81.4%. The opposition alliance of the Gibraltar Socialist Labour Party and the Liberal Party won 48.9% of the vote, gaining seven and three seats respectively. The Gibraltar Social Democratic Party took 46.8% of the vote with seven seats and the Progressive Democratic Party received 4.4% but did not win any seats.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor and C.-in-C.: Vice Adm. Sir Adrian Johns, KCB, CBE, ADC (sworn in 26 Oct. 2009).

Chief Minister: Fabian Picardo; b. 1972 (Gibraltar Socialist Labour Party; elected in Dec. 2011).

Deputy Chief Minister: Joseph Garcia. Minister for Education, Financial Services, Gaming, Telecommunications and Justice: Gilbert Licudi. Enterprise, Training and Employment: Joe Bossano. Equality and Social Services: Samantha Sacramento. Health and Environment: John Cortes. Housing and the Elderly: Charles Bruzon. Sports, Culture, Heritage and Youth: Steven Linares.

Tourism, Public Transport and the Port: Neil Costa. Traffic, Health and Safety, and Technical Services: Paul Balban.

The Speaker is Haresh Budhrani, QC.

Government Website: <http://www.gibraltar.gov.gi>

DEFENCE

The Ministry of Defence presence consists of a tri-service garrison numbering approximately 900 uniformed personnel. Supporting the garrison are approximately 1,100 locally-employed civilian personnel. The garrison supports a NATO Headquarters.

ECONOMY

Overview

The economy is primarily dependent on service industries and port facilities, with income derived from tourism, transshipment and, perhaps most importantly in terms of growth, the provision of financial services.

Currency

The legal tender currency is UK sterling. Also legal tender are Government of Gibraltar Currency notes and coins. The Gibraltar pound (GIP) of 100 pence is at parity with the UK £1 sterling. The total of Government of Gibraltar notes in circulation at 31 March 2009 was £23.4m. The annual rate of inflation was 3.4% in Jan. 2010.

Budget

Departmental revenue credited to the consolidated fund for the year ending 31 March 2009 totalled £244m. whilst expenditure amounted to £201m. The main sources of consolidated fund revenues were income tax (£109m.), import duties (£47m.), company taxes (£26m.) and general rates and salt water charges (£14m.). Main items of consolidation fund expenditure: health (£24m.), education (£24m.), social affairs (£22m.) and utilities (£14m.).

Performance

In 2006–07 Gibraltar's GDP was £660m., equivalent to £22,900 per head.

Banking and Finance

At June 2010 there were 19 authorized credit institutions. The majority of these are either subsidiaries or branches of major UK or other European Economic Area (EEA) credit institutions. 12 of these credit institutions are incorporated in Gibraltar and are licensed by the Financial Services Commission, one of which is only authorized as an e-money institution. There are five branches of EEA-authorized credit institutions operating in Gibraltar and two non-EEA branches, one from the Channel Islands and one from Switzerland. The banking sector provides services to both local and non-resident customers. Some of these banks specialize in providing private banking to high net worth individuals who are not resident in Gibraltar and who are resident in many different jurisdictions.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Gibraltar's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 161.6 tonnes per capita, the highest in the world.

Electricity

Production in 2009 amounted to 174.01m. kWh.

Oil and Gas

Gibraltar is dependent on imported petroleum for its energy supplies.

Agriculture

Gibraltar lacks agricultural land and natural resources; the territory is dependent on imports of foodstuffs and fuels.

INDUSTRY

The industrial sector (including manufacturing, construction and power) employed around 16% of the working population in 2009.

Labour

The total number of employee jobs at Oct. 2009 was 20,450. Principal areas of employment (Oct. 2009): community, social and personal services, 4,496; trade, restaurants and hotels, 4,076; construction, 2,557; manufacturing, 473; electricity and water, 299; other, 8,848. (Figures cover only non-agricultural activities, excluding mining and quarrying). Under 5% of the labour force was unemployed in 2009.

EXTERNAL ECONOMIC RELATIONS

Gibraltar has a special status within the EU which exempts it from the latter's fiscal policy.

Imports and Exports

Imports in 2009 totalled £479.3m. and exports £169.5m. (excluding petroleum products).

Britain provided 25% of imports in 2009 and is the largest source. Other major trade partners include Spain, the Netherlands and Germany. Foodstuffs accounted for 5% of total imports in 2009 (excluding petroleum products). Mineral fuels comprised about 71% of the value of total imports in 2008. Exports are mainly re-exports of petroleum and petroleum products supplied to shipping, and include manufactured goods, wines, spirits, malt and tobacco. Gibraltar depends largely on tourism, offshore banking and other financial sector activity, online gaming, the entrepôt trade and the provision of supplies to visiting ships. Exports of domestic produce are negligible. In 2009 Gibraltar recorded a visible trade deficit of £350.5m.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There are 56 km of roads including 6.8 km of pedestrian way. In 2006 there were 14,637 private vehicles, 7,024 motorcycles, 1,391 goods vehicles, 112 taxis and 99 buses.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport, Gibraltar North Front. Scheduled flights were operated in 2009 by easyJet to London (Gatwick), by British Airways to London (Gatwick and Heathrow), by Monarch Airlines to London (Luton) and Manchester and by Andalus Airlines to Madrid and Barcelona. In 2009, 183,703 passengers arrived by air and 186,049 departed; 10.7 tonnes of freight were loaded and 134 tonnes were unloaded (figures exclude military freight).

Shipping

The Strait of Gibraltar is a principal ocean route between the Mediterranean and Black Sea areas and the rest of the world. Approximately 110,000 vessels pass through the Straits per year. Tax concessions are available to ship-owners who register their ships at Gibraltar. A total of 10,042 merchant ships of 253.1m. GRT entered port during 2009, including 7,818 deep-sea ships of 208.4m. GRT. In 2009, 349 calls were made by yachts of 372,925 GRT. 238 cruise liners called during 2009 involving 348,508 passengers.

Telecommunications

Gibtelecom, jointly owned by Telekom Slovenije and the Government of Gibraltar, is the main provider of fixed, wireless and internet services to residential and business customers.

As at 1 Jan. 2010 the Group's fixed exchange lines stood at 23,293. At the end of 2006 there were 8,000 internet accounts in Gibraltar.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The judicial system is based on the English system. There is a Court of Appeal, a Supreme Court, presided over by the Chief Justice, a Court of First Instance and a Magistrates' Court.

The population in penal institutions in Sept. 2008 was 43 (equivalent to 154 per 100,000 population).

Education

Free compulsory education is provided between the ages of four and 15 years. The medium of instruction is English. The comprehensive system was introduced in Sept. 1972 and all schools currently follow a locally adapted version of the National Curriculum for England and Wales. In the 2009–10 academic year there were 11 primary and two secondary schools. Primary schools are divided into first schools for children aged 4–8 years and middle schools for children aged 8–12 years. All primary schools are mixed though secondary schools are single-sex.

Vocational education and training is available at the Gibraltar College (a post-15 institution), the Construction Training Centre and the Gibdock Training Centre; the former two are managed by the Gibraltar government and the latter by Cammell Laird, a shipbuilding company (and part-funded by the Government). In Sept. 2009 there were 2,926 pupils at government primary schools, 326 at private primary schools and 156 at the Services school. 1,140 pupils were enrolled at the boys' comprehensive school and 1,040 at the girls' comprehensive. There were 338 students in the Gibraltar College. Government expenditure on education in the year ended 31 March 2010 was £25.2m.

Health

The Gibraltar Health Authority is the organization responsible for providing health care in Gibraltar. The Authority operates a Group Practice Medical Scheme, which is a contributory scheme and enables registered persons to access free medical treatment. The St Bernard's Hospital, opened in 2005, has a total of 201 beds. A military hospital, the Princess Royal Medical Centre, opened in 2009, and replaced the old Royal Naval Hospital. Total expenditure on medical and health services for the financial year 2009–10 was £74.1m.

Welfare

The social security system consists of: the Social Security (Employment Injuries Insurance) Scheme which only applies to employed persons; the Social Security (Short-Term Benefits) Scheme which provides for payments of maternity grants, maternity allowance, death grants and unemployment benefit; and the Social Security (Open Long-Term Benefits) Scheme which provides for pensions and widows' allowances.

RELIGION

According to the 2001 census 78.1% of the population were Roman Catholic, 7.0% Church of England, 4.0% Muslim, 2.1% Jewish and 1.8% Hindu. In 2004 there were seven Roman Catholic and three Anglican churches (including one Catholic and one Anglican cathedral), one Presbyterian and one Methodist church, four synagogues and two mosques.

CULTURE

Press

In 2009 there were two daily and two weekly newspapers.

Tourism

In 2009 just over 10.3m. tourists visited Gibraltar (including day-visitors) bringing in revenue of £257.6m. There are approximately 900 hotel beds in Gibraltar.

Montserrat

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Montserrat was discovered by Columbus in 1493 and colonized by Britain in 1632, who brought Irish settlers to the island. Montserrat formed part of the federal colony of the Leeward Islands from 1871 until 1958, when it became a separate colony following the dissolution of the Federation.

On 18 July 1995 the Soufriere Hills volcano erupted for the first time in recorded history, which led to over half the inhabitants being evacuated to the north of the island, and the relocation of the chief town, Plymouth. Another major eruption on 25 June 1997 caused a number of deaths and led to further evacuation.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Montserrat is situated in the Caribbean Sea, 43 km southwest of Antigua. The area is 102.3 sq. km (39.5 sq. miles). Census population, 2001, 4,482. Estimate, July 2007: 4,800. What was previously the capital, Plymouth, is now deserted as a result of the continuing activity of the Soufriere Hills volcano. The safe area is in the north of the island.

The official language is English.

CLIMATE

A tropical climate with an average annual rainfall of 60" (1,500 mm) the wettest months being Sept.–Dec., with a hurricane season June–Nov. Plymouth, Jan. 76°F (24.4°C), July 81°F (27.2°C).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Montserrat is a British Overseas Territory. A new constitution was promulgated in 2011, replacing one enacted in 1989. The head of state is Queen Elizabeth II, represented by a Governor. The 2011 constitution provides for greater control of international relations by the government of Montserrat, the strengthening of fundamental rights and freedoms, and the establishment of a national advisory council along with commissions to deal with complaints, integrity, elections and clemency. The Legislative Assembly consists of nine elected members and two ex officio members (namely the Attorney-General and the Financial Secretary); it sits for five year terms. The cabinet includes a minimum of the Premier (formerly the Chief Minister), three other ministers and two ex officio members (the Attorney-General and the Financial Secretary).

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections to the Legislative Council on 8 Sept. 2009 the Movement for Change and Prosperity won six of nine seats with ind. winning the other three.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Adrian Davis (since 8 April 2011).

Premier: Reuben Meade (since 27 Sept. 2011, having been Chief Minister from 10 Sept. 2009–26 Sept. 2011).

ECONOMY

Currency

Montserrat's currency is the East Caribbean dollar (see ANTIGUA AND BARBUDA: Currency).

Budget

In 2008 the estimated current revenue was EC$40.2m. and estimated current expenditure EC$99.2m.

Performance

In 2006 the economy shrank by 3.8% but there was a slight recovery in 2007 with growth of 2.8%.

Banking and Finance

The East Caribbean Central Bank based in St Kitts and Nevis functions as a central bank. The Governor is Sir Dwight Venner. In 2010 there were two commercial banks and 11 offshore banks. Responsibility for overseeing offshore banking rests with the Governor.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 18.2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Production (2007 estimate) 23m. kWh. Installed capacity (2007 estimate): 10,000 kW.

Agriculture

The volcanic eruptions in 1997 dramatically reduced the area of land under cultivation. Agriculture, now concentrated in the north, is showing signs of recovering. In 2002 there were 2,000 ha. of arable and permanent crop land. The main products have traditionally been potatoes, tomatoes, onions, mangoes and limes. Meat production began in 1994 and the island soon became self-sufficient in chicken, mutton and beef.

Livestock (2002); cattle, 10,000; pigs, 1,000; sheep, 5,000; goats, 7,000.

Forestry

The area under forests in 2005 was 4,000 ha., or 35.0% of the total land area.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2005 was estimated at 50 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing has in recent years contributed about 6% to GDP and accounted for 10% of employment, but has been responsible for about 80% of exports. It has been limited to rice milling and the production of light consumer goods such as electronic components, light fittings, plastic bags and leather goods. The volcanic activity has put a halt to the milling of rice in the exclusion zone and curtailed the production of light consumer goods.

EXTERNAL ECONOMIC RELATIONS*Imports and Exports

Imports in 2005 totalled US$26.2m.; exports, US$1.8m. The USA is the main trading partner.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

In 1995 there were 205 km of paved roads, 25 km of unsurfaced roads and 50 km of tracks. In 1995 there were 2,700 cars and 400 commercial vehicles registered. These figures changed as a result of the volcanic eruptions of 1995 and 1997 but since then the government, through the Ministry of Communications and Works, has been focusing its road developments in the north of the island, and a number of road work projects are under way.

Civil Aviation

At the W. H. Bramble airport LIAT used to provide services to Antigua with onward connections to the rest of the eastern Caribbean, but it was closed in June 1997 as volcanic activity increased. A new airport opened in Feb. 2005.

Shipping

Plymouth is the port of entry, but alternative anchorage was provided at Old Bay Road during the volcanic crisis.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 2,800 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscribers numbered 3,000 in 2008 (50.8 per 100 persons). There were 1,200 internet users in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

Law is based on UK common law as exercised by the Eastern Caribbean Supreme Court. Final appeal lies to the UK Privy Council. Law is administered by the West Indies Associated States Court, a Court of Summary Jurisdiction and Magistrate's Courts.

Education

In 1996–97 there were 11 primary schools (only four open), a comprehensive secondary school with three campuses, and a technical college. Schools are run by the government, the churches and the private sector. There is a medical school, the American University of the Caribbean.

In 2000–01 total expenditure on education came to 7.9% of total government spending.

Health

In 1996 there were four medical officers, one surgeon, one dentist and one hospital with 69 beds.

RELIGION

In 1997, 25% of the population were Anglican, 20% Methodist, 15% Pentecostal, 10% Adventist and 10% Roman Catholic.

CULTURE*Press

In 2006 there were two weekly newspapers.

Tourism

Tourism at one time contributed about 30% of GDP. There were 36,077 visitors including 11,636 cruise ship arrivals in 1994. However, after the volcanic eruptions the tourist industry declined dramatically; over half the island is closed. There were 7,991 visitors in 2006.

Pitcairn Island

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Pitcairn was discovered by Carteret in 1767, but remained uninhabited until 1790, when it was occupied by nine mutineers of HMS Bounty, with 12 women and six men from Tahiti. Nothing was known of their existence until the island was visited in 1808.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Pitcairn Island (4.6 sq. km; 1.75 sq. miles) is situated in the Pacific Ocean, nearly equidistant from New Zealand and Panama (25° 04' S. lat., 130° 06' W. long.). Adamstown is the only settlement. The population in 2008 was 66. The uninhabited islands of Henderson (31 sq. km), Ducie (3.9 sq. km) and Oeno (5.2 sq. km) were annexed in 1902. English is the official language but Pitkern is also spoken.

CLIMATE

An equable climate, with average annual rainfall of 80" (2,000 mm) spread evenly throughout the year. Mean monthly temperatures range from 75°F (24°C) in Jan. to 66°F (19°C) in July.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Local Government Ordinance of 1964 constitutes a Council of ten members; four councillors and the chairman of the internal committee are elected annually, one is nominated by the Council and two—including the island secretary—are appointed by the Governor. It is presided over by the island mayor. There is also a commissioner liaising between the governor and the council. No political parties exist. The Island Magistrate, who is elected triennially, presides over the Council; other members hold office for only one year. Liaison between Governor and Council is through a Commissioner in the Auckland, New Zealand, office of the British Consulate-General.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Vicki Treadell.

Mayor: Mike Warren.

Government Website: <http://www.government.pn>

ECONOMY*Currency

New Zealand currency is used.

Budget

For the year to 31 March 1997 revenue was NZ$604,234 and expenditure NZ$601,665.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Fisheries

The catch in 2005 was approximately three tonnes.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

There were (1997) 6 km of roads. In 1997 there were 29 motorcycles.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

The Island Court consists of the Island Magistrate and two assessors.

Education

In 2004 there was one teacher and nine pupils.

St Helena, Ascension and Tristan da Cunha

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The island of St Helena was uninhabited when discovered by the Portuguese in 1502. It was administered by the East India Company from 1659 and became a British colony in 1834. Napoleon died there in exile in 1821. In 2009 a new constitution saw the territory renamed from St Helena and Dependencies to St Helena, Ascension and Tristan da Cunha.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

St Helena, of volcanic origin, is 3,100 km from the west coast of Africa. Area, 122 sq. km (47 sq. miles), with a cultivable area of 243 ha. The population of St Helena at the 2008 census was 3,981 (excluding the then dependencies of Ascension and Tristan da Cunha) of which St Helena itself had a population of 3,867 with 114 on board the RMS St Helena and on yachts in the harbour. In 2003, 64.5% of the population were rural. The capital and port is Jamestown, population (2008) 640.

The official language is English.

Ascension is a small island of volcanic origin, of 88 sq. km (34 sq. miles), 700 miles northwest of St Helena. There are 120 ha. providing fresh meat, vegetables and fruit. The population in 2008 was 1,122.

The island is the resort of sea turtles, rabbits, the sooty tern or 'wideawake', and feral donkeys.

A cable station connects the island with St Helena, Sierra Leone, St Vincent, Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires. There is an airstrip (Miracle Mile) near the settlement of Georgetown; the Royal Air Force maintains an air link with the Falkland Islands.

Tristan da Cunha is the largest of a small group of islands in the South Atlantic, lying 2,124 km (1,320 miles) southwest of St Helena, of which they became dependencies on 12 Jan. 1938. Tristan da Cunha has an area of 98 sq. km and a population (2008) of 284, all living in the settlement of Edinburgh. Inaccessible Island (10 sq. km) lies 20 miles west, and the three Nightingale Islands (2 sq. km) lie 20 miles south of Tristan da Cunha; they are uninhabited. Gough Island (90 sq. km) is 220 miles south of Tristan and has a meteorological station.

Tristan consists of a volcano rising to a height of 2,060 metres, with a circumference at its base of 34 km. The volcano, believed to be extinct, erupted unexpectedly early in Oct. 1961. The whole population was evacuated without loss and settled temporarily in the UK; in 1963 they returned to Tristan. Potatoes remain the chief crop. Cattle, sheep and pigs are now reared, and fish are plentiful.

The original inhabitants were shipwrecked sailors and soldiers who remained behind when the garrison from St Helena was withdrawn in 1817.

At the end of April 1942 Tristan da Cunha was commissioned as HMS Atlantic Isle, and became an important meteorological and radio station. In Jan. 1949 a South African company commenced crawfishing operations. An Administrator was appointed at the end of 1948 and a body of basic law brought into operation. The Island Council, which was set up in 1932, consists of a Chief Islander, three nominated and eight elected members (including one woman), under the chairmanship of the Administrator.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2001 figures for St Helena: births, 36; deaths, 41; marriages, 20; divorces (2000), 9. Annual growth rate, 1990–95, 0.6%.

CLIMATE

A mild climate, with little variation. Temperatures range from 75–85°F (24–29°C) in summer to 65–75°F (18–24°C) in winter. Rainfall varies between 13" (325 mm) and 37" (925 mm) according to altitude and situation.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution came into force on 1 Sept. 2009, replacing its 20-year old predecessor. Under the terms of the new constitution, the territory changed its official name from St Helena and Dependencies to St Helena, Ascension and Tristan da Cunha. It included a bill of rights, allowing citizens to appeal to local courts on human rights issues rather than address the European Court of Human Rights in Strasbourg as they had done previously. Constraints were placed on the powers of the Governor (who no longer holds the title of 'Commander-in-Chief') and the independence of the judiciary and public service were constitutionally enshrined.

The territory's Legislative Council consists of twelve elected members, three non-voting ex officio members (the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and the Attorney General) and the Speaker and Deputy Speaker. The Governor is advised by an Executive Council comprising three non-voting ex officio members (the Chief Secretary, the Financial Secretary and the Attorney General) and five elected members from the Legislative Council. The Governor must, except in certain prescribed circumstances, act in accordance with the advice of the Executive Council.

RECENT ELECTIONS

The last Legislative Council elections were on 4 Nov. 2009. Only non-partisans were elected.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Mark Capes.

Administrator of Ascension: Colin Wells.

Administrator of Tristan da Cunha: Sean Burns.

Government Website: <http://www.sainthelena.gov.sh>

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 1.9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Production in 2007 totalled 8m. kWh. Installed capacity in 2007 was 4,000 kW.

Agriculture

In 2007 there were about 4,000 ha. of arable land.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2005 was 1,130 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Labour

In 2000 there were 270 registered unemployed persons.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were (2003) 94 km of all-weather motor roads. There were 1,931 vehicles in 2002.

Shipping

There is a service from Portland (UK) twice a year, and links with South Africa and neighbouring islands.

Telecommunications

In 2006 there were 2,200 main telephone lines in operation. There were 800 internet users in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

Police force, 32; cases are dealt with by a police magistrate.

Education

In 2002–03 there were eight schools with, in 1999–2000, 87 teachers and 860 pupils. The Prince Andrew School (opened in 1989) offers vocational courses leading to British qualifications.

Health

There were four doctors, one dentist and one hospital in 2001.

RELIGION

There are ten Anglican churches, four Baptist chapels, three Salvation Army halls, one Seventh Day Adventist church and one Roman Catholic church.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

St Helena, Ascension and Tristan da Cunha has one site on UNESCO's World Heritage List: Gough and Inaccessible Islands (inscribed on the list in 1995 and 2004), two of the least disturbed islands and marine eco-systems in the South Atlantic.

South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first landing and exploration was undertaken by Capt. James Cook, who formally took possession in the name of George III on 17 Jan. 1775. British sealers arrived in 1788 and American sealers in 1791. Sealing reached its peak in 1800. A German team was the first to carry out scientific studies there in 1882–83. Whaling began in 1904 and ceased in 1966, and the civil administration was withdrawn. Argentine forces invaded South Georgia on 3 April 1982. A British naval task force recovered the Island on 25 April 1982.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

South Georgia lies 1,300 km southeast of the Falkland Islands and has an area of 3,760 sq. km. The South Sandwich Islands are 760 km southeast of South Georgia and have an area of 340 sq. km. In 1993 crown sovereignty and jurisdiction were extended from 19 km (12 miles) to 322 km (200 miles) around the islands. There is no permanent population. The British Antarctic Survey operate a fisheries science facility at King Edward Point and a biological station on Bird Island. The South Sandwich Islands are uninhabited.

CLIMATE

The climate is wet and cold, with strong winds and little seasonal variation. 15°C is occasionally reached on a windless day. Temperatures below –15°C at sea level are unusual.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Under the new constitution which came into force on 3 Oct. 1985 the Territories ceased to be dependencies of the Falkland Islands. The Government of South Georgia and the South Sandwich Islands (GSGSSI) administers the islands. The local administration is the responsibility of the Government Officer based at King Edward Point. Executive power is vested in a Commissioner, who is also the Governor of the Falkland Islands. On matters relating to defence, the Commissioner consults the officer commanding Her Majesty's British Forces in the South Atlantic. The Commissioner, whenever practicable, consults the Executive Council of the Falkland Islands on the exercise of functions that in his opinion might affect the Falkland Islands. There is no Legislative Council. Laws are made by the Commissioner (Nigel Haywood, CVO, resident in the Falkland Islands).

Budget

The total projected revenue of the Territories (2006) was £4,037,700, of which 85% from fishing licenses, 8% landing fees, 3% philatelic sales and 2% harbour dues. Expenditure (projected), £4,265,900, includes 50% fisheries research and protection, 12%

King Edward Point running costs, 11% observer fees and 6% Grytviken remediation and maintenance projects.

COMMUNICATIONS

The bases at King Edward Point and Bird Island have modern satellite communication systems. King Edward Point is regularly visited by the GSGSSI Fishery Patrol Vessel. Other visiting vessels include cruise ships, BAS research ships, warships and auxiliaries, fishing vessels and yachts.

Justice

There is a Supreme Court for the Territories and a Court of Appeal in the United Kingdom. Appeals may go from that court to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council. The British Antarctic Survey base commander at King Edward Point is usually appointed a magistrate.

CULTURE

Tourism

In the region of 4,000 tourists visit the island annually.

Sovereign Base Areas of Akrotiri and Dhekelia in Cyprus

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Sovereign Base Areas (SBAs) are those parts of the island of Cyprus that stayed under British jurisdiction and remained British sovereign territory when the 1960 Treaty of Establishment created the independent Republic of Cyprus. The Akrotiri facility formed a strategic part of the West's nuclear capacity during the Cold War. The SBAs were used for the deployment of troops in the Gulf War in 1991. Military intelligence is now the key role of the SBAs. The construction of massive antennae at the RAF communications base at Akrotiri sparked violent riots in 2001 and 2002, led by a Greek Cypriot MP. In Feb. 2003 the British Government offered to surrender approximately half the area of the SBAs as an incentive for a settlement between the Greek and Turkish administrations in Cyprus.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Sovereign Base Areas (SBAs), with a total land area of 254 sq. km (98 sq. miles), comprise the Western SBA (123 sq. km), including Episkopi Garrison and RAF Akrotiri (opened 1956), and the Eastern SBA (131 sq. km), including Dhekelia Garrison. The SBAs cover 3% of the land area of the island of Cyprus. There are approximately 3,000 military personnel and approximately 5,000 civilians. The British Government has declared that it will not develop the SBAs other than for military purposes. Citizens and residents of the Republic of Cyprus are guaranteed freedom of access and communications to and through the SBAs.

The SBAs are administered as military bases reporting to the Ministry of Defence in London. The Administrator is the Commander, British Forces Cyprus. The joint force headquarters are at Episkopi. Greek and English are spoken.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Commander British Forces Cyprus: Air Vice Marshal Graham Stacey (since 4 Nov. 2010).

The Turks and Caicos Islands

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

After a long period of rival French and Spanish claims the islands were secured to the British Crown in 1766, and became a separate colony in 1973 after association with the colonies of the Bahamas and Jamaica. In 2009 the British government imposed direct rule after allegations of widespread corruption among the islands' ruling class.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Islands are situated between 21° and 22°N. lat. and 71° and 72°W. long., about 80 km east of the Bahamas, of which they are geographically an extension. There are over 40 islands, covering an estimated area of 500 sq. km (193 sq. miles). Only seven are inhabited: Grand Caicos, the largest, is 48 km long by 3 to 5 km broad; Grand Turk, the capital and main political and administrative centre, is 11 km long by 2 km broad. Population, 2001 census, 19,886; Grand Turk, 3,976; Middle Caicos, 301; North Caicos, 1,347; Parrot Cay, 58; Providenciales, 13,021; Salt Cay, 120; South Caicos, 1,063. The estimated population for 2006 was 33,202. 54.8% of the population were rural in 2000.

The official language is English

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2004: births, 300; deaths, 218. Population growth rate, 2004, 9.4%.

CLIMATE

An equable and healthy climate as a result of regular trade winds, though hurricanes are sometimes experienced. Grand Turk, Jan. 76°F (24.4°C), July 83°F (28.3°C). Annual rainfall 21".

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution entered force on 9 Aug. 2006. It granted the Turks and Caicos Islands further self-government, while at the same time incorporating provisions enabling the Government to fulfil their responsibilities for the territory. It made provision for the establishment of an Advisory National Security Council, and changed the title of Chief Minister and Deputy Chief Minister to Premier and Deputy Premier. Following the resignation of premier Michael Misick in March 2009 on corruption charges, the UK government dissolved the cabinet and the House of Assembly in Aug. 2009 and placed the island under direct rule. The Cabinet (formerly Executive Council) comprised the Governor, the Premier, six other Ministers and the Attorney General. Previously the House of Assembly (formerly Legislative Council) consisted of a Speaker, one official member (the Attorney General), 15 elected members and four appointed members.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At general elections held on 9 Feb. 2007 for the 15 elective seats in the House of Assembly, the Progressive National Party won 13 seats with 59.7% of the vote and the People's Democratic Movement two with 40.3%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Damian Roderic Todd; b. 1959 (since 12 Sept. 2011).

The UK suspended self-government on 14 Aug. 2009, with then Governor Gordon Wetherell put in direct control of the islands.

Government Website: <http://www.tcgov.tc>

ECONOMY

Overview

The economy is based on free-market private sector-led development. The focus is on the service sector, with tourism and finance still the dominant industries.

Currency

The US dollar is the official currency. Inflation was 2.9% in 2007 (3.7% in 2006).

Budget

In 2004–05 current revenues were US$118m. and current expenditures US$122m.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 12.7% in 2005 (11.6% in 2004).

Banking and Finance

There were six commercial banks in 2004. Offshore finance is a major industry.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 0.7 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Electrical services are provided to all of the inhabited islands. Total electricity production for 2007 was 182m. kWh. Installed capacity in 2007 was an estimated 50,000 kW. Consumption per capita in 2007 was 5,221m. kWh.

Agriculture

Farming is done on a small scale mainly for subsistence.

Fisheries

In 2005 the total catch was 5,491 tonnes.

INDUSTRY*Labour

In 2001, out of a total population of 13,436 aged 15 or over, 10,181 were working, 1,094 unemployed and 2,161 economically inactive.

EXTERNAL ECONOMIC RELATIONS*Imports and Exports

Imports (c.i.f.) in 2009 totalled US$375.4m.; exports (f.o.b.) in 2009 were US$20.8m. The USA accounted for over 99% of foreign trade in 2009. The main export are seafood products, and machinery and transport equipment. Major imports are food and beverages, manufactured goods, and machinery and transport equipment.

COMMUNICATIONS*Civil Aviation

The international airports are on Grand Turk and Providenciales. International services are provided by Air Canada, Air Jamaica, American Airlines, Bahamasair, British Airways, Delta Airlines, TCI Skyking, Tropical Airways d'Haiti and US Airways. An internal air service provides regular daily flights between the inhabited islands.

Shipping

The main ports are at Grand Turk, Cockburn Harbour and Providenciales. There is a service to Miami.

Telecommunications

There are internal and international cable, telephone, telegraph and fax services.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

Laws are a mixture of Statute and Common Law. There is a Magistrates Court and a Supreme Court. Appeals lie from the Supreme Court to the Court of Appeal which sits in Nassau, Bahamas. There is a further appeal in certain cases to the Privy Council in London.

Education

The adult literacy rate is 98%. Education is free between the ages of five and 14 in the ten government primary schools; there are also four private primary schools. Total school enrolment in 2004–05 was 1,931 in government primary schools and 1,282 in government secondary schools. There were 1,670 pupils enrolled in the private schools.

In 2005 public expenditure on education came to 11.8% of total government spending.

Health

In 2004 there were 17 doctors, two dentists and 43 hospital beds.

RELIGION

There are Anglican, Catholic, Methodist, Baptist and Evangelist groups.

CULTURE*Press

In 2006 there were two weekly newspapers.

Tourism

There were 248,300 non-resident tourists in 2006 (of which 221,400 were from elsewhere in the Americas), up from 176,100 in 2005.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The earliest inhabitants of the north American continent can be traced back to Palaeolithic times. The Pueblo culture in modern-day Colorado and New Mexico flourished from the 11th to the 14th century AD. In the 12th century permanent settlements appeared in the east where cultivation and fishing supported major fortified towns. The first Europeans to make their presence felt were the Spanish, who based themselves in Florida before venturing north and west. Santa Fe in New Mexico was founded in 1610. But by the mid-17th century there was competition centred on Quebec from the French who colonized the banks of the St Lawrence River.

Elizabethan adventurers were eager to exploit the New World but it was not until 1607 that an English colony was established.

This was at Jamestown in what is now southern Virginia. After a perilous start when disease and malnutrition carried off most of the settlers, Virginia's population grew rapidly to meet the European demand for tobacco. Maryland, originally a refuge for persecuted Catholics, also thrived on the tobacco trade. To make up for the shortage of labour, slaves were imported from Africa.

In 1620 a hundred pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock to found a Puritan enclave, which became the colony of Massachusetts. Other settlements soon followed, accommodating a broad range of Christian radicals fleeing persecution. Not all were tolerant of beliefs that differed from their own. Pennsylvania, the colony named after the Quaker William Penn, was exceptional in offering freedom of worship to 'all persons who confess and acknowledge the one almighty and eternal God'. In 1664 the British took control of neighbouring Dutch colonies. New Amsterdam became New York. Almost all of the eastern seaboard was now claimed by British settlers who were also venturing inland.

Their main European rivals were the French who claimed a vast area around and to the southwest of the Great Lakes. With American Indian tribes allied to both sides, there was heavy fighting in 1744 and 1748. But within a decade British forces had captured most of the French strongholds. After the Treaty of Paris in 1763, Britain commanded the whole of North America east of the Mississippi while Spain, having surrendered Florida, gained Louisiana from France. For a brief period colonization was restricted to the area east of the Appalachians, the rest of the territory being reserved for Indian tribes. This soon became a point of issue between the settlers who were intent on expansion and the government in London, which wanted a settled, self-supporting community benefiting British trade. Having disposed of the French threat, the colonists felt confident enough to defy orders that ignored their interests. In particular, they objected to the Navigation Acts which required goods to be carried in British vessels and to various taxes imposed without consultation. 'No taxation without representation' became a rallying cry for disaffected colonists. The centre of opposition was Boston, scene of the infamous 'tea party' when, in 1773, militants destroyed a cargo of East India tea. In 1775 the arrest of rebel ringleaders served only to provoke the 13 colonies to co-operate in further acts of rebellion, including the setting up of a de facto government which appointed George Washington commander of American forces.

Independence

The War of Independence was by no means a clear-cut affair. British forces, never more than 50,000 strong, were supported by a powerful body of colonists who remained loyal to the Crown. The war lasted for seven years from 1776 with both sides often getting close to a conclusive victory. The decisive moment came at last with the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne and his 8,000 troops in upper New York state in Oct. 1777, a defeat that persuaded a cautious France to enter the war. Under the peace terms secured in 1783 Britain kept Canada leaving the new United States with territory stretching from the Atlantic to the Mississippi. A constitution based on democratic principles buttressed by inalienable rights including the ownership of property came into force in 1789. It allowed for a federal government headed by a president and executive, a legislature with a House of Representatives and a Senate, and a judiciary with ultimate authority on constitutional matters exercised by a Supreme Court. The first president was George Washington, who was elected in 1789. In 1800 Washington, D.C. was declared the national capital.

Hostilities with Britain resumed in 1812 amidst accusations that Britain was using the excuse of the Napoleonic wars to harass American shipping and to encourage Indian resistance to expansion into the Midwest. Most of the fighting took place on the Canadian border where an attempted invasion was decisively repulsed. But Louisiana, having reverted to French rule and subsequently sold to the USA, was secured for the Union. With the exception of Louisiana, other American territories that had once been part of the Spanish empire fell to Mexico. But not for long. In 1836 Texas broke away from Mexico, surviving as an independent republic until 1845 when it was annexed by the USA. This provoked war with Mexico which ended in 1848 with the USA taking over what are now the states of California, Arizona, Colorado, Utah, Nevada and New Mexico. Any temptation there might have been for European involvement in the struggle was removed by the Monroe Doctrine, a declaration by President Monroe that interference from the Old World in matters concerning the western hemisphere would not be tolerated. It was a measure of the growing military and economic self confidence of the USA that such a warning, delivered in 1823, was taken seriously.

The westward expansion began soon after independence but accelerated with the destruction of Indian power and the removal of the native population to designated reservations. In 1846 a long-running dispute with Britain confirming US title to Oregon acted as a spur to migration as did the Californian gold rush of 1848. By the 1850s the railway network was bringing people and economic prosperity to the mid-west. Population quadrupled between 1815 to 1860, from 8m. to almost 31m. In 1862 the Homestead Act allocated 160 acres to anyone who was ready to farm it. By 1890 the west was won.

Civil War

The transition from a rural society to an industrial power of world importance created tensions, not least between the slave-owning southern states and the rest of the Union which favoured the abolition of slavery. Economic as well as humanitarian factors were in play since the North resented the advantage cheap labour gave to the South. The opposing view held that the South, by now the world's largest cotton producer, depended on slavery for its commercial survival. Mutual antagonism came to a head with the secession of the southern states from the Union in 1860–61 and their formation as a Confederacy. Despite sporadic outbreaks of violence, civil war was not in prospect until Confederate troops fired on the US flag at Fort Sumter. President Abraham Lincoln ordered a blockade of the South. The recruitment of rival armies followed within weeks. The war turned out to be much bloodier than anyone had expected. More American lives were lost in the Civil War than in the two world wars combined. The military balance was maintained until 1863 when the North secured a crushing victory at the Battle of Gettysburg. However, the war continued until April 1865 when Robert E. Lee surrendered to Ulysses S. Grant at Appomattox Courthouse in Virginia. A few days later Lincoln was assassinated, a loss that the southern states had subsequent cause to regret. Contrary to Lincoln's hopes, a generous settlement was now out of the question. Instead of a gradual transition to a new society, the South was rushed into a social revolution. This in turn led to terrorist violence and acts of vengeance against freed slaves. From this carnage emerged the notorious Ku Klux Klan as the standard bearer of lynch law. While the 13th amendment prohibited slavery, political freedom was denied to the black community by state-imposed literacy tests and discriminatory property taxes.

That America had interests beyond its own borders was made evident by the Spanish war of 1898 which resulted in the USA becoming the dominant power in the Caribbean though the effort to take over in the Philippines came up against Filipino resistance and led to a heavy death toll.

By 1900 the USA rivalled Britain and Germany as the world's dominant power. With vast natural resources and a manufacturing capacity that secured 11% of world trade, it was clear that Europe was soon to lose its grip on world affairs. Ironically, though, it was Europe as the chief supplier of labour that gave the USA the impetus it needed to fulfil its promise. Between 1881 and 1920, 23m. immigrants entered the USA, the largest population movement ever recorded.

Given the heterogeneous background of the American population in the early 20th century it is scarcely surprising that popular opinion was against involvement in the First World War. But events, including German U-boat harassment of American shipping, soon proved that isolationism was not an option. It was not until 1917 that America joined the hostilities but the resurgence of energy created by the arrival of the American Expeditionary Force was critical to the Allied breakthrough.

Post-war America, relatively unscathed by the European conflict, was unquestionably the most powerful nation and as such was able to dictate terms at the Versailles peace conference. But President Wilson's 'fourteen points' which set out a plan for collective security policed by a League of Nations failed to win support in the one country that was critical to its success. The Treaty was rejected by the Senate in 1920 and America retreated once again into isolationism.

A resumption of economic growth was accompanied by a struggle to impose a common set of values, chiefly white and Protestant, on a diverse population. To outsiders the most extraordinary experiment in social engineering was Prohibition, a federal imposed attempt to outlaw all alcoholic drinks. Whatever gain there was to the health of the nation, the chief beneficiaries were the bosses of organized crime.

New Deal

Dreams of everlasting prosperity were shattered by the 1929 Stock Market Crash. A succession of bank failures was followed by widespread bankruptcies and mass unemployment which sent the economy into a further downward spin. The beginning of the end to the agony came with the election to the presidency of Franklin D. Roosevelt, who pushed through Congress a series of radical measures known collectively as the New Deal, aimed at revitalizing the nation. With the abandonment of the gold standard, cheap loans to restart factories and farms and huge investment in public works proved to be the key to recovery though unemployment remained high until production was boosted by the demands of another world war. In 1935 Roosevelt's social security act provided the bare bones of an American welfare state.

Roosevelt was well aware of the dangers to the USA if the fascist dictators were allowed to triumph, but as in 1914, there was formidable opposition to direct involvement. Roosevelt compromised by supplying Britain with much needed armaments on favourable terms. But it was events in Asia rather than in Europe that eventually persuaded America of the need for direct action. Opposition to Japanese expansion into China and southeast Asia, including an oil embargo and a freezing of Japanese assets in the USA, brought a savage retaliation at Pearl Harbor, when much of the US fleet was destroyed. America declared war on Japan while Germany declared war on America. The US military effort focused initially on the Pacific but after 1942 American forces were also committed to the campaign in north Africa and Europe. With the D-Day landings in June 1944, US troops led the attack on Germany and in May 1945, within a month of Roosevelt's death, Germany surrendered. By then Vice President Harry Truman had been confirmed as Roosevelt's successor and forced a Japanese surrender by sacrificing Hiroshima and Nagasaki to the atomic bomb.

This time, in the aftermath of war, the USA needed no encouragement to assume the leadership of the free world. The threat of a Soviet takeover in Europe was countered by the formation of NATO in 1949 and the provision of dollar aid under the 1947 Marshall Plan to kick-start European economic recovery. In addition, the Truman doctrine provided a $400m. aid package for the Turkish and Greek governments. The risk of a return to isolationism receded still further when China fell to communism. In 1950 American troops went to the aid of South Korea when it was invaded by the communist North. Though technically under the aegis of the UN, the campaign was an almost entirely American affair led by General Douglas MacArthur. When Chinese forces became involved, MacArthur spoke openly of extending the war to the Chinese mainland, a threat countered strongly by President Truman who forced MacArthur's resignation to establish undisputed political control over the military.

A ceasefire was negotiated after Dwight Eisenhower was elected president in 1953. The USA took the lead in setting up the South East Asia Treaty Organization on the same lines as NATO. Eisenhower had a decisive influence on the Suez crisis in 1956 when he refused to support the invasion of Egypt by British, French and Israeli forces. Domestically he made little headway against a powerful Democratic opposition in both Houses of Congress. His attempts to thaw the Cold War also met with frustration. He handed over the Republican presidential candidacy to his vice-president Richard Nixon, who lost the 1960 election by a slim margin to John F. Kennedy.

Civil Rights

In the early 1960s civil rights were high on the political agenda. The thuggish tactics of Senator Joe McCarthy and the House Committee on Un-American Activities during the previous decade brought into focus basic democratic freedoms guaranteed by the Constitution while growing protests against racial discrimination led to legislation to enforce equality of opportunity in education and employment. The civil rights movement peaked in the early 1960s when the imposition of federal law in the South led to acts of violence against liberal protesters. Foremost among the campaigners for racial equality was Martin Luther King, Jr. who was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in 1964 and who was assassinated four years later.

Social tensions were exacerbated by the Cold War confrontation. In his first year of office Kennedy was embarrassed by the failed Bay of Pigs invasion when anti-Castro Cubans, trained and supported by the CIA, attempted to overthrow the country's communist regime. The building of the Berlin Wall in Aug. 1961 symbolized a hardening of the Cold War. In 1962 Kennedy had to confront the prospect of the Soviets placing missiles in Cuba. The prospect of world war was only too real until an agreement between the two nations allowed for a withdrawal of the missiles on the condition of a US promise not to invade Cuba. The incident prompted a thawing in East-West relations and in 1963 the USA, UK and USSR signed the Limited Test Ban Treaty which, for the first time, put a brake on the spread of nuclear weapons. Less hopeful was the acceleration of the conflict in Vietnam. Kennedy increased the American military presence in South Vietnam from 700 at the beginning of his term in office to 15,000 to counter the threat of communist domination by the North. Domestically, Kennedy's government pledged $1.2bn. for social and housing programmes.

Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas in Nov. 1963 and his vice president, Lyndon Johnson, was inaugurated as his successor. Johnson oversaw the implementation of civil rights legislation initiated by the Kennedy administration, epitomized by the Voting Rights Act, and also introduced Medicare (health insurance for the elderly). By 1966 over 350,000 American troops were in Vietnam and by the following year almost 80,000 Americans had been killed or wounded. The public turned against involvement in southeast Asia, not least because increased military expenditure led to a delay in domestic reforms.

Watergate

Johnson decided not to contest the 1968 presidential election. His likely successor for the Democrat nomination was John Kennedy's brother, Bobby, but he was assassinated in June of that year. The Republican nominee, Richard Nixon, won the presidency. With falling support for US involvement in Vietnam, he reduced the number of troops stationed there from 550,000 in 1969 to 30,000 three years later but authorized military operations in North Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia in the hope of forcing North Vietnam to the negotiating table. Elsewhere, he signed the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT) with Moscow in 1972 and relaxed trade restrictions against China.

Nixon was re-elected as president in 1973 and shortly afterwards agreed a ceasefire with North Vietnam. However, his second term of office was cut short by the Watergate scandal. The charges against him centred on White House-released taped transcripts of discussions in which Nixon authorized a cover-up of a break-in at the Democratic party headquarters in the Watergate complex, Washington, D.C. in 1972. Threatened with Congressional impeachment, Nixon announced his resignation in Aug. 1974.

Gerald Ford, who replaced Nixon, granted his predecessor a controversial 'full, free and absolute pardon'. Ford lost the 1976 presidential election to Democrat Jimmy Carter. Perceived as a Washington outsider, Carter's often strained relations with Congress and the Senate obstructed his domestic agenda. The economy suffered and by 1980 inflation and unemployment were both running high. Internationally, he secured the neutrality of the Panama Canal and brokered the influential Camp David talks between Egypt and Israel. He also re-established diplomatic ties with China. Henry Kissinger, who was secretary of state for part of Nixon's and all of Carter's years in office, oversaw America's withdrawal from southeast Asia, winning the Nobel Peace Prize jointly with his North Vietnamese counterpart Le Duc Tho in 1974. Attempts at further improving US-Soviet relations were scuppered when the signing of the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty (SALT II) was postponed because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1979. The incursion also led to a US boycott of the 1980 Moscow Olympics. Radical Iranian students stormed the US embassy in Tehran in late 1979 and seized over 50 US hostages. After a year of negotiations, a secret US military rescue mission failed and contributed to Republican Ronald Reagan's landslide victory at the 1980 presidential polls.

Reagan's economic policies, known as 'Reaganomics', redefined American society in the 1980s. In his first year of office he introduced a 25% tax cut for individuals and corporations. He slashed welfare but increased military expenditure. In terms of governmental structure, he was intent on delegating many federal programmes to state and local levels. A recession in 1982 prompted tax increases and set the pattern of boom and bust that characterized his tenure. In 1986 he reduced the number of tax rates, abolishing tax altogether for many low-income earners. In Oct. 1987 the stock market collapsed, losing a third of its value over two months, and by the end of his presidency, Reagan had seen the national debt more than triple to $2.5trn.

End to the Cold War

Relations between the USA and USSR deteriorated in the early 1980s. The shooting down of a South Korean airliner carrying American citizens in 1983 led to a further deployment of US missiles in Western Europe while US proposals for the Strategic Defense Initiative (known as 'Star Wars') added to tensions. In 1983 the USA invaded Grenada, scene of a coup, in a bid to curb Soviet-Cuban influence in the Caribbean. However, relations between the two superpowers improved in the mid-eighties after successful negotiations on nuclear arms limitations. Reagan met Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev in 1985 and in 1987 the two leaders signed a treaty in Washington, D.C. agreeing to destroy a range of intermediate-range nuclear weapons.

Reagan's foreign policy elsewhere was unstinting in its protection of US interests. In 1986 he bombed Tripoli after Libya was accused of involvement in the bombing of a nightclub in West Berlin which killed two American servicemen. The following year he became embroiled in the Iran-Contra affair. The CIA was found to have sold arms to Iran to fund anti-communist guerrillas in Nicaragua. Reagan and his deputy, George Bush, were cleared of direct involvement but Reagan was censured for allowing the affair to develop.

Bush took over the presidency in 1989 and continued an active foreign policy. At the end of 1989 he authorized the invasion of Panama to remove Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega from power. The collapse of the Soviet empire in 1990 extended US economic aid to Eastern Europe and Bush signed a non-aggression pact with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev which effectively ended the Cold War. In 1990-91 Bush led a coalition of European and Arab states to counter the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. Around 500,000 US troops were stationed in the Persian Gulf and when trade embargoes and diplomacy failed to persuade Iraq to withdraw, Bush authorized a military offensive in Jan. 1991. By the end of Feb. Kuwaiti independence had been restored. Domestically, Bush was badly damaged when he was forced to raise taxes despite his election promise of 'no new taxes'.

The Democrats regained control of the White House with the election of Bill Clinton in 1992. Clinton combined economic recovery at home with an active foreign policy which underlined America's role as the only superpower. He secured the passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement, which created a free-trade zone between the United States, Canada and Mexico, cut the United States budget deficit by 50% in his first term and in his second term authorized America's first tax cut since 1981. Unemployment reached its lowest levels since the late-1960s and in 1998 there was a federal budget surplus for the first time in almost 30 years. His social legislation included anti-crime provisions, the Family and Medical Leave Act, a welfare reform bill and an increase in the minimum wage. He also appointed Madeleine Albright as the first-ever female secretary of state.

On the international scene Clinton brokered talks between the Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat and Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin which resulted in limited Palestinian self-rule. He sent peacekeeping troops both to Bosnia and Herzegovina and to Haiti. In 1995 he was instrumental in securing the Dayton accords that offered peace between Yugoslavia, Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina. Relations with Vietnam were normalized and diplomatic and trade links with China much improved. He was also an important figure in the formulation of the 1998 Good Friday agreement which sought to reach a peace settlement in Northern Ireland.

Clinton retained a hard-line stance against Iraq, sending forces against Saddam Hussein in 1994, 1996 and 1998. Sudan and Afghanistan were attacked in 1998 having been linked with the al-Qaeda terrorist network held responsible for the bombing of US embassies in Tanzania and Kenya. In 1999 there was a Clinton-led NATO campaign of air strikes against Yugoslavia when the country's leaders refused to end a campaign of violence against ethnic Albanians in Kosovo. Yugoslav president Slobodan Milošević was forced to withdraw his troops and allow an international peacekeeping force in Kosovo.

However, Clinton's second term of office was dominated by scandal. He reached an out-of-court agreement with Paula Jones, a state government employee who had accused him of sexual harassment. Clinton and his wife, Hillary, were also accused of criminal wrongdoing over a land deal in Arkansas, known as Whitewater, though they were both eventually cleared of the charges. Most damagingly, Clinton had an affair with Monica Lewinsky, a White House intern. Having denied the sexual nature of the affair under oath, Clinton was impeached for perjury and obstruction of justice although the senate trial ended when neither motion gained a simple majority.

In 2000 Clinton's vice president, Al Gore, lost the presidential election to George W. Bush, son of the earlier President George Bush. Gore was defeated despite winning the popular vote. In 2001 Bush's first budget included a $1.25trn. tax cut. He attracted international criticism in his early months in office for refusing to ratify the Kyoto Agreement on global warming and climate change and for his bid to replace the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty with a new accord allowing for a missile defence system in the United States. Following talks with Russian President Vladimir Putin in June 2001 the two leaders signed an anti-nuclear deal to reduce their respective strategic nuclear warheads by two-thirds over the next ten years.

War on Terrorism

On 11 Sept. 2001 the heart of New York City was devastated after hijackers flew two jet airliners into the World Trade Center. A plane also crashed into the Pentagon, in Washington, D.C., and a fourth hijacked plane crashed near the town of Shanksville, Pennsylvania. The death toll, initially put at 6,700, was eventually lowered to 2,753, with 67 countries reporting dead or missing citizens. Osama bin Laden, the Saudi dissident leader of the al-Qaeda terrorist network and believed to be living in Afghanistan at the invitation of the ruling Taliban, immediately became the chief suspect and military action against Afghanistan followed, with air strikes beginning on 7 Oct. 2001. Despite the UN establishing a fragile multi-party government in Afghanistan, the USA continues to carry out special missions against Taliban and al-Qaeda targets.

In early 2002 Bush declared North Korea, Iran and Iraq ‘an axis of evil’ and by Sept. 2002 was pressing the UN to act against Iraq. Bush’s foreign policy was played out against a background of domestic recession. On 20 March 2003 US forces, supported by the UK, launched attacks on Iraq, and initiated a war aimed at ‘liberating Iraq’. On 9 April 2003 American forces took control of central Baghdad, effectively bringing an end to Saddam Hussein’s rule. In Nov. 2004 Bush won a second term as president, which was dominated by continuing military engagement in Iraq and Afghanistan and by the collapse in 2007 of the US sub-prime mortgage sector. He was succeeded by the Democrat Barack Obama, who won the presidential election of 2008. Obama took office with the global financial system in turmoil.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The United States is bounded in the north by Canada, east by the North Atlantic, south by the Gulf of Mexico and Mexico, and west by the North Pacific Ocean. The area of the USA is 3,796,742 sq. miles (9,833,517 sq. km), of which 3,531,905 sq. miles (9,147,593 sq. km) are land and 264,837 sq. miles (685,924 sq. km) are water (comprising Great Lakes, inland and coastal water).

Population at each census from 1790 to 2010 (including Alaska and Hawaii from 1960). Figures do not include Puerto Rico, Guam, American Samoa or other Pacific islands, or the US population abroad. Residents of Indian reservations not included before 1890.

<sup>1</sup>‘White’ refers to the White-alone population, ‘Black’ to the Black-alone population and ‘Other races’ to the population in all the remaining race groups, including those reporting two or more races.

The 2010 census population of 308,745,538 represented an increase of 9.7% since 2000 (the smallest percentage increase between ten-yearly US censuses since the Second World War). Minorities accounted for 92% of the growth. There were 156,964,212 females at the 2010 census, or 50.8% of the total population.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 323.89m.

2010 density, 33.8 per sq. km (87.4 per sq. mile). Urban population (persons living in places with at least 2,500 inhabitants) at the 2000 census was 222,360,539 (79.0%); rural, 59,061,367. In 1990 it was 75.2%; in 1980, 73.7%; in 1970, 73.6%.

Sex distribution by race of the population at the 2000 census:

	Males	Females
White	103,773,194	107,687,432
Black or African American	16,465,185	18,193,005
American Indian and Alaska Native	1,233,982	1,241,974

	Males	Females
Asian	4,948,741	5,294,257
Native Hawaiian and Other Pacific Islander	202,629	196,206
Other Race	8,009,214	7,349,859
Two or More Races	3,420,618	3,405,610
Total	138,053,563	143,368,343

Alongside these racial groups, and applicable to all of them, a category of ‘Hispanic origin’ comprised 50,477,594 persons in 2010 (including 31,798,258 of Mexican ancestry), up 15,171,776 from 35,305,818 in 2000. Hispanics are now the largest ethnic minority in the USA.

Among ten-year age groups the 45–54 age group contained most people according to the 2010 census, with a total of 45,006,716 (14.6% of the population). At the 2000 census the 35–44 age group had most people.

At the 2010 census there were 116,716,292 households, up from 105,480,101 in 2000.

At the 2000 census there were 50,454 people aged 100 or over, compared to 37,306 in 1990. Of the 50,454 centenarians in 2000, 40,397 were female, and of the 37,306 in 1990, 29,405 were female.

There is no official language, though English has been provided with official status in 30 states. The 2000 census showed that 47.0m. persons five years and over spoke a language other than English in the home, including Spanish or Spanish Creole by 28.1m.; French or French Creole by 2.1m.; Chinese by 2.0m.; German by 1.4m.; Tagalog by 1.2m.; Italian by 1.0m.; Vietnamese by 1.0m.

The following table includes population statistics, the year in which each of the original 13 states (Connecticut, Delaware, Georgia, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Virginia) ratified the constitution, and the year when each of the other states was admitted into the Union. Traditional abbreviations for the names of the states are shown in brackets with postal codes for use in addresses.

The USA is divided into four geographic regions comprised of nine divisions. These are, with their 2010 census populations: Northeast (comprised of the New England and Middle Atlantic divisions), 53,317,240; Midwest (East North Central, West North Central), 66,927,001; South (South Atlantic, East South Central, West South Central), 114,555,744; West (Mountain, Pacific), 71,945,553.

Immigration and naturalization. The Immigration and Nationality Act, as amended, provides for the numerical limitation of most immigration. The Immigration Act of 1990 established major revisions in the numerical limits and preference system regulating legal immigration. The numerical limits are imposed on visas issued and not admissions. The maximum number of visas allowed to be issued under the preference categories in fiscal year 2008 was 388,704: 226,000 for family-sponsored immigrants and 162,704 for employment-based immigrants. Within the overall limitations the per-country limit for independent countries is set to 7% of the total family and employment limits, while dependent areas are limited to 2% of the total. Immigrants not subject to any numerical limitation are spouses, children, and parents of US citizens who are 21 years of age or older; certain former US citizens; ministers of religion; certain long-term US government employees; refugees and asylum-seekers adjusting to immigrant status; and certain other groups of immigrants.

Immigrant aliens admitted to the USA for permanent residence, by country or region of birth, for fiscal years:

The total number of immigrants admitted from 1820 to 2008 was 74,225,904; this included 7,476,092 from Mexico, 7,275,320 from Germany and 5,455,888 from Italy.

The number of immigrants admitted for legal permanent residence in the United States in fiscal year 2009 was 1,130,818. Included in this total were 463,042 aliens previously living abroad who obtained immigrant visas through the US Department of State and became legal permanent residents upon entry into the United States. The remaining 667,776 legal immigrants, including former undocumented immigrants, refugees and asylees, had adjusted status through the Citizenship and Immigration Services (USCIS). The USA has by far the largest annual net gain in migrants of any country. It also receives the most asylum seekers on an annual basis.

A total of 743,715 persons were naturalized in fiscal year 2009 (including 111,630 persons born in Mexico).

The refugee admissions ceiling for fiscal year 2010 was fixed at 80,000.

Although divorce figures are not available since 1997 as not all states maintain complete statistics, it is estimated that the rate fell from 4.3 per 1,000 population in 1997 to 3.4 per 1,000 in 2009. Rate of natural increase per 1,000 population: 6.1 in 2006; 6.3 in 2007. Population growth rate, 2009, 0.9%.

Even though the marriage rate shows a gradual decline, it remains much higher than in most other industrial countries. The most popular age range for marrying is 25–29 for males and 20–24 for females. In 2008, 14% of black men married a white woman (up from 5% in 1980) and 6% of black women married a white man (up from 1% in 1980). The number of births to unmarried women in 2009 was 1,693,658 (41% of all births), compared to 666,000 in 1980 and 1,726,566 in 2008. The rate of births to teenagers was 39.1 per 1,000 women in 2009. Between 1970 and 2008 the annual number of births rose by 13.8%. The number of births within marriage declined by 19.8% between 1970 and 2005 whereas the number outside of marriage rose by 283.0%. Whereas in 1970 as many as 83.4% of children lived with both biological parents, by 2004 only 59.9% were living with married biological parents and 2.5% with unmarried biological parents. In 2009, 27.3% of children lived in one-parent households—the highest proportion in the industrialized world.

Infant mortality rates, per 1,000 live births: 29.2 in 1950; 12.9 in 1980; 6.4 in 2009. Fertility rate, 2009, 2.0 births per woman (3.6 in 1960).

There were a reported 1,212,400 abortions in 2008, down from a peak in 1990 of 1,608,600.

Expectation of life, 1970: males, 67.1 years; females, 74.7 years. 2009: males, 76.0 years; females, 80.9 years.

Numbers of deaths by principal causes, 2009 (and as a percentage of all deaths): heart disease, 599,413 (24.6%); cancer, 567,628 (23.3%); chronic lower respiratory disease, 137,353 (5.6%); stroke, 128,842 (5.3%); accidents, 118,021 (4.8%); Alzheimer's disease, 79,003 (3.2%); diabetes, 68,705 (2.8%); pneumonia and influenza, 53,692 (2.2%); kidney diseases, 48,935 (2.0%); suicide, 36,909 (1.5%).

The number of Americans living in poverty in 2009 was 43.6m. or 14.3% of the total population, down from 15.1% in 1993 but up 1.1% on 2008.

A UNICEF report published in 2005 showed that 21.9% of children in the USA live in poverty (in households with income below 50% of the national median), compared to just 2.4% in Denmark.

CLIMATE

For temperature and rainfall figures, see entries on individual states as indicated by regions, below, of mainland USA.

Pacific Coast. The climate varies with latitude, distance from the sea and the effect of relief, ranging from polar conditions in North Alaska through cool to warm temperate climates further south. The extreme south is temperate desert. Rainfall everywhere is moderate. See Alaska, California, Oregon, Washington.

Mountain States. Very varied, with relief exerting the main control; very cold in the north in winter, with considerable snowfall. In the south, much higher temperatures and aridity produce desert conditions. Rainfall everywhere is very variable as a result of rain-shadow influences. See Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah, Wyoming.

High Plains. A continental climate with a large annual range of temperature and moderate rainfall, mainly in summer, although unreliable. Dust storms are common in summer and blizzards in winter. See Nebraska, North Dakota, South Dakota.

Central Plains. A temperate continental climate, with hot summers and cold winters, except in the extreme south. Rainfall is plentiful and comes at all seasons, but there is a summer maximum in western parts. See Mississippi, Missouri, Oklahoma, Texas.

Mid-West. Continental, with hot summers and cold winters. Rainfall is moderate, with a summer maximum in most parts. See Indiana, Iowa, Kansas.

Great Lakes. Continental, resembling that of the Central Plains, with hot summers but very cold winters because of the freezing of the lakes. Rainfall is moderate with a slight summer maximum. See Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Wisconsin.

Appalachian Mountains. The north is cool temperate with cold winters, the south warm temperate with milder winters. Precipitation is heavy, increasing to the south but evenly distributed over the year. See Kentucky, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, West Virginia.

Gulf Coast. Conditions vary from warm temperate to subtropical, with plentiful rainfall, decreasing towards the west but evenly distributed over the year. See Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana.

Atlantic Coast. Temperate maritime climate but with great differences in temperature according to latitude. Rainfall is ample at all seasons; snowfall in the north can be heavy. See Delaware, District of Columbia, Georgia, Maryland, New Jersey, New York State, North Carolina, South Carolina, Virginia.

New England. Cool temperate, with severe winters and warm summers. Precipitation is well distributed with a slight winter maximum. Snowfall is heavy in winter. See Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Vermont. See also Hawaii and Outlying Territories.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The form of government of the USA is based on the constitution adopted on 17 Sept. 1787 and effective from 4 March 1789.

By the constitution the government of the nation is composed of three co-ordinate branches, the executive, the legislative and the judicial.

The Federal government has authority in matters of general taxation, treaties and other dealings with foreign countries, foreign and inter-state commerce, bankruptcy, postal service, coinage, weights and measures, patents and copyright, the armed forces (including, to a certain extent, the militia), and crimes against the USA; it has sole legislative authority over the District of Columbia and the possessions of the USA.

The 5th article of the constitution provides that Congress may, on a two-thirds vote of both houses, propose amendments to the constitution, or, on the application of the legislatures of two-thirds of all the states, call a convention for proposing amendments, which in either case shall be valid as part of the constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several states, or by conventions in three-fourths thereof, whichever mode of ratification may be proposed by Congress. Ten amendments (called collectively 'the Bill of Rights') to the constitution were added 15 Dec. 1791; two in 1795 and 1804; a 13th amendment, 6 Dec. 1865, abolishing slavery; a 14th in 1868, including the important 'due process' clause; a 15th, 3 Feb. 1870, establishing equal voting rights for white and black; a 16th, 3 Feb. 1913, authorizing the income tax; a 17th, 8 April 1913, providing for popular election of Senators; an 18th, 16 Jan. 1919, prohibiting alcoholic liquors; a 19th, 18 Aug. 1920, establishing woman suffrage; a 20th, 23 Jan. 1933, advancing the date of the President's and Vice-President's inauguration and abolishing the 'lameduck' sessions of Congress; a 21st, 5 Dec. 1933, repealing the 18th amendment; a 22nd, 27 Feb. 1951, limiting a President's tenure of office to two terms, or two full terms in the case of a Vice-President who has succeeded to the office of President and has served two years or less of another President's term, or one full term in the case of a Vice-President who has succeeded to the office of President and has served more than two years of another President's term; a 23rd, 30 March 1961, granting citizens of the District of Columbia the right to vote in national elections; a 24th, 4 Feb. 1964, banning the use of the poll-tax in federal elections; a 25th, 10 Feb. 1967, dealing with Presidential disability and succession; a 26th, 22 June 1970, establishing the right of citizens who are 18 years of age and older to vote; a 27th, 7 May 1992, providing that no law varying the compensation of Senators or Representatives shall take effect until an election has taken place.

National motto. 'In God we trust'; formally adopted by Congress 30 July 1956.

Presidency

The executive power is vested in a president, who holds office for four years, and is elected, together with a vice-president chosen for the same term, by electors from each state, equal to the whole number of Senators and Representatives to which the state may be entitled in the Congress. The President must be a natural-born citizen, resident in the country for 14 years, and at least 35 years old.

The presidential election is held every fourth (leap) year on the Tuesday after the first Monday in Nov. Technically, this is an election of presidential electors, not of a president directly; the electors thus chosen meet and give their votes (for the candidate to whom they are pledged, in some states by law, but in most states by custom and prudent politics) at their respective state capitals on the first Monday after the second Wednesday in Dec. next following their election; and the votes of the electors of all the states are opened and counted in the presence of both Houses of Congress on the sixth day of Jan. The total electorate vote is one for each Senator and Representative. Electors may not be a member of Congress or hold federal office. If no candidate secures the minimum 270 college votes needed for outright victory, the 12th Amendment to the Constitution applies, and the House of Representatives chooses a president from among the first three finishers in the electoral college. (This last happened in 1824).

If the successful candidate for President dies before taking office the Vice-President-elect becomes President; if no candidate has a majority or if the successful candidate fails to qualify, then, by the 20th amendment, the Vice-President acts as President until a president qualifies. The duties of the Presidency, in absence of the President and Vice-President by reason of death, resignation, removal, inability or failure to qualify, devolve upon the Speaker of the House under legislation enacted on 18 July 1947. In case of absence of a Speaker for like reason, the presidential duties devolve upon the President pro tem. of the Senate and successively upon those members of the cabinet in order of precedence, who have the constitutional qualifications for President.

The presidential term, by the 20th amendment to the constitution, begins at noon on 20 Jan. of the inaugural year. This amendment also installs the newly elected Congress in office on 3 Jan. instead of—as formerly—in the following Dec. The President's salary is $400,000 per year (taxable), with an additional $50,000 to assist in defraying expenses resulting from official duties. Also he may spend up to $100,000 non-taxable for travel and $19,000 for official entertainment. In 1999 the presidential salary was increased for the president taking office in Jan. 2001, having remained at $200,000 a year since 1969. The office of Vice-President carries a salary of $230,700 and $20,000 allowance for expenses, all taxable. The Vice-President is ex officio President of the Senate, and in the case of 'the removal of the President, or of his death, resignation, or inability to discharge the powers and duties of his office', he becomes the President for the remainder of the term.

Cabinet. The administrative business of the nation has been traditionally vested in several executive departments, the heads of which, unofficially and ex officio, formed the President's cabinet. Beginning with the Interstate Commerce Commission in 1887, however, an increasing amount of executive business has been entrusted to some 60 so-called independent agencies, such as the Housing and Home Finance Agency, Tariff Commission, etc.

All heads of departments and of the 60 or more administrative agencies are appointed by the President, but must be confirmed by the Senate.

Congress. The legislative power is vested by the Constitution in a Congress, consisting of a Senate and House of Representatives.

Electorate. By amendments of the constitution, disqualification of voters on the ground of race, colour or sex is forbidden. The electorate consists of all citizens over 18 years of age. Literacy tests have been banned since 1970. In 1972 durational residency requirements were held to violate the constitution. In 1973 US citizens abroad were enfranchised.

With limitations imposed by the constitution, it is the states which determine voter eligibility. In general states exclude from voting: persons who have not established residency in the jurisdiction in which they wish to vote; persons who have been convicted of felonies whose civil rights have not been restored; persons declared mentally incompetent by a court.

Illiterate voters are entitled to receive assistance in marking their ballots. Minority-language voters in jurisdictions with statutorily prescribed minority concentrations are entitled to have elections conducted in the minority language as well as English.

Disabled voters are entitled to accessible polling places. Voters absent on election days or unable to go to the polls are generally entitled under state law to vote by absentee ballot.

The Constitution guarantees citizens that their votes will be of equal value under the 'one person, one vote' rule.

Senate. The Senate consists of two members from each state (but not from the District of Columbia), chosen by popular vote for six years, approximately one-third retiring or seeking re-election every two years. Senators must be no less than 30 years of age; must have been citizens of the USA for nine years, and be residents in the states for which they are chosen. The Senate has complete freedom to initiate legislation, except revenue bills (which must originate in the House of Representatives); it may, however, amend or reject any legislation originating in the lower house. The Senate is also entrusted with the power of giving or withholding its 'advice and consent' to the ratification of all treaties initiated by the President with foreign powers, a two-thirds majority of Senators present being required for approval. (However, it has no control over 'international executive agreements' made by the President with foreign governments; such 'agreements' cover a wide range and are more numerous than formal treaties.)

The Senate has 21 Standing Committees to which all bills are referred for study, revision or rejection. The House of Representatives has 20 such committees. In both Houses each Standing Committee has a chairman and a majority representing the majority party of the whole House; each has numerous sub-committees. The jurisdictions of these Committees correspond largely to those of the appropriate executive departments and agencies. Both Houses also have a few select or special Committees with limited duration.

House of Representatives. The House of Representatives consists of 435 members elected every second year. The number of each state's Representatives is determined by the decennial census, in the absence of specific Congressional legislation affecting the basis. The number of Representatives for each state in the 113th congress, which is scheduled to begin in Jan. 2013 (based on the 2010 census), is given below:

Alabama	7	Louisiana	6	Ohio	16
Alaska	1	Maine	2	Oklahoma	5
Arizona	9	Maryland	8	Oregon	5
Arkansas	4	Massachusetts	9	Pennsylvania	18
California	53	Michigan	14	Rhode Island	2
Colorado	7	Minnesota	8	South Carolina	7
Connecticut	5	Mississippi	4	South Dakota	1
Delaware	1	Missouri	8	Tennessee	9
Florida	27	Montana	1	Texas	36
Georgia	14	Nebraska	3	Utah	4
Hawaii	2	Nevada	4	Vermont	1
Idaho	2	New Hampshire	2	Virginia	11
Illinois	18	New Jersey	12	Washington	10
Indiana	9	New Mexico	3	West Virginia	3
Iowa	4	New York	27	Wisconsin	8
Kansas	4	North Carolina	13	Wyoming	1
Kentucky	6	North Dakota	1

The constitution requires congressional districts within each state to be substantially equal in population. Final decisions on congressional district boundaries are taken by the state legislatures and governors. By custom the Representative lives in the district from which he is elected. Representatives must be not less than 25 years of age, citizens of the USA for seven years and residents in the state from which they are chosen.

In addition, five delegates (one each from the District of Columbia, American Samoa, Guam, the US Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico) are also members of Congress. They have a voice but no vote, except in committees. The delegate from Puerto Rico is the resident commissioner. Puerto Ricans vote at primaries, but not at national elections. Each of the two Houses of Congress is sole ‘judge of the elections, returns and qualifications of its own members’; and each of the Houses may, with the concurrence of two-thirds, expel a member. The period usually termed ‘a Congress’ in legislative language continues for two years, terminating at noon on 3 Jan.

The salary of a Senator is $174,000 per annum, with tax-free expense allowance and allowances for travelling expenses and for clerical hire. The salary of the Speaker of the House of Representatives is $223,500 per annum, with a taxable allowance. The salary of a Member of the House is $174,000 ($193,400 for the Majority Leader and Minority Leader).

No Senator or Representative can, during the time for which he is elected, be appointed to any civil office under authority of the USA which shall have been created or the emoluments of which shall have been increased during such time; and no person holding any office under the USA can be a member of either House during his continuance in office. No religious test may be required as a qualification to any office or public trust under the USA or in any state.

American Indians. By an Act passed on 2 June 1924 full citizenship was granted to all American Indians born in the USA, though those remaining in tribal units were still under special federal jurisdiction. The Indian Reorganization Act of 1934 gave the tribal Indians, at their own option, substantial opportunities of self-government and the establishment of self-controlled corporate enterprises empowered to borrow money and buy land, machinery and equipment; these corporations are controlled by democratically elected tribal councils. Recently a trend towards releasing American Indians from federal supervision has resulted in legislation terminating supervision over specific tribes. In 1988 the federal government recognized that it had a special relationship with, and a trust responsibility for, federally recognized American Indian entities in continental USA and tribal entities in Alaska. In 2010 the Bureau of Indian Affairs listed 564 ‘Indian Entities Recognized and Eligible to Receive Services’. American Indian lands covered 112,637 sq. miles in 2000. Indian lands are held free of taxes. Total American Indian and Alaska Native population at the 2010 census was 2,932,248, of which California (362,801), Oklahoma (321,687), Arizona (296,529) and New Mexico (193,222) accounted for more than 40%.

The District of Columbia, ceded by the State of Maryland for the purposes of government in 1791, is the seat of the US government. It includes the city of Washington, and embraces a land area of 61 sq. miles. The Reorganization Plan No. 3 of 1967 instituted a Mayor Council form of government with appointed officers. In 1973 an elected Mayor and elected councillors were introduced; in 1974 they received power to legislate in local matters. Congress retains power to enact legislation and to veto or supersede the Council’s acts. Since 1961 citizens have had the right to vote in national elections. On 23 Aug. 1978 the Senate approved a constitutional amendment giving the District full voting representation in Congress. This has still to be ratified.

The Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Commonwealth of the Puerto Rico, American Samoa, Guam and the Virgin Islands each have a local legislature, whose acts may be modified or annulled by Congress, though in practice this has seldom been done. Puerto Rico, since its attainment of commonwealth status on 25 July 1952, enjoys practically complete self-government, including the election of its governor and other officials. The conduct of foreign relations, however, is still a federal function and federal bureaux and agencies still operate in the island.

General supervision of territorial administration is exercised by the Office of Territories in the Department of Interior.

Local Government

The Union comprises 13 original states, seven states which were admitted without having been previously organized as territories, and 30 states which had been territories—50 states in all. Each state has its own constitution (which the USA guarantees shall be republican in form), deriving its authority, not from Congress, but from the people of the state. Admission of states into the Union has been granted by special Acts of Congress, either (1) in the form of ‘enabling Acts’ providing for the drafting and ratification of a state constitution by the people, in which case the territory becomes a state as soon as the conditions are fulfilled, or (2) accepting a constitution already framed, and at once granting admission.

Each state is provided with a legislature of two Houses (except Nebraska, which since 1937 has had a single-chamber legislature), a governor and other executive officials, and a judicial system. Both Houses of the legislature are elective, but the senators (having larger electoral districts usually covering two or three counties compared with the single county or, in some states, the town, which sends one representative to the Lower House) are less numerous than the representatives, while in 38 states their terms are four years; in 12 states the term is two years. Of the four-year senates, Illinois, Montana and New Jersey provide for two four-year terms and one two-year term in each decade. Terms of the lower houses are usually shorter; in 45 states, two years. The trend is towards annual sessions of state legislatures; most meet annually now whereas in 1939 only four did.

The Governor is elected by direct vote of the people over the whole state for a term of office ranging in the various states from two to four years, and with a salary ranging from $70,000 (Maine) to $212,000 (California). His duty is to see to the faithful administration of the law, and he has command of the military forces of the state. He may recommend measures but does not present bills to the legislature. In some states he presents estimates. In all but one of the states (North Carolina) the Governor has a veto upon legislation, which may, however, be overridden by the two Houses, in some states by a simple majority, in others by a three-fifths or two-thirds majority. In some states the Governor, on his death or resignation, is succeeded by a Lieut.-Governor who was elected at the same time and has been presiding over the state Senate. In several states the Speaker of the Lower House succeeds the Governor.

National Anthem

The Star-spangled Banner, ‘Oh say, can you see by the dawn’s early light’; words by F. S. Key, 1814, tune by J. S. Smith; formally adopted by Congress 3 March 1931.

CURRENT LEADERS

Barack Obama

Position

President

Introduction

Barack Obama became the 44th president of the USA in Jan. 2009 and the first African American to hold the office. Having secured the Democratic candidacy with a hard-fought victory over Hillary Clinton, Obama contested the presidential election in Nov. 2008 against a background of deepening economic crisis. Viewed as on the centre-liberal wing of his party, Obama's principal electoral pledges included the introduction of a national health insurance plan and a scaling-down of the US troop presence in Iraq. In response to the economic turmoil, he had supported President Bush's $700bn. emergency rescue package. His rapid recognition of the scale of economic problems contrasted with the more cautious response of his Republican opponent, John McCain, and found favour with the public. Since taking office, Obama has countered the economic crisis with stimulus measures, while his Republican opponents have advocated a curb on spending. On foreign policy, Obama has maintained the US military commitment to Afghanistan as a central plank in the campaign against terrorism, while seeking to promote compliance with international law and the adoption of democratic values across the world political stage.

Early Life

Barack Hussein Obama was born on 4 Aug. 1961 in Honolulu, Hawaii, to a Kenyan father and white American mother. His parents divorced and, following his mother's remarriage in 1967, the family moved to Indonesia, where Obama was educated until the age of ten. He attended Punahou School in Honolulu and Occidental College, Los Angeles, before graduating from Columbia University, New York, in 1983 with a BA in political science. From 1983–85 he worked at Business International Corporation and at the New York Public Interest Research Group, then moved to Chicago to become director of the church-based Developing Communities Project (DCP). From 1985–88 he led the DCP, expanding its staff and budget and establishing new projects. He attended Harvard Law School from 1988–91 and was elected president of the Harvard Law Review in 1990.

Following his graduation Obama took up a fellowship with the University of Chicago Law School, where he taught constitutional law from 1992–2004. In 1992 he directed ‘Illinois Project Vote!’, a campaign to register African Americans to vote, and from 1992–2002 he served on the boards of various community organizations and foundations, including the Joyce Foundation and Public Allies. In 1993 he joined law firm Davis, Miner, Barnhill & Galland, practising first as an associate then as a counsel. In 1995 he published a memoir, Dreams from My Father: A Story of Race and Inheritance.

In 1996 Obama was elected senator for the 13th District of Illinois, subsequently winning re-election in 1998 and 2002. As senator he supported health care and welfare reforms, sponsored a law to increase tax credits for low paid workers and promoted tighter regulation of the mortgage industry. In 2003, in co-operation with Republican senators, he led legislation to monitor police procedures in the state of Illinois, requiring police to profile the ethnicity of motorists they stopped and making it compulsory to videotape interrogations of homicide suspects.

After an unsuccessful run for the House of Representatives in 2000, Obama mounted a campaign for the 2004 US Senate elections. He attracted national attention at that year’s National Democratic Convention when he gave a keynote speech, ‘The Audacity of Hope’, in which he spoke of the shared aspirations and efforts of American citizens and set out government’s obligations towards them. In Nov. 2004 Obama was elected to the US Senate with 70% of the vote, the largest winning margin in Illinois state history. In office he supported legislation to reduce carbon emissions, voted for robust border controls and immigration reform, and campaigned for controls on political financing, in particular gifts and funding provided by lobbyists.

Having opposed military action against Iraq in 2003, he continued to criticize the conduct of the war. As a member of the Senate’s foreign relations committee, he explored ways of reducing the threat from conventional weapons and, with Republican Senator Richard G. Lugar, co-authored a law extending US co-operation in identifying and disposing of stockpiled weapons. He supported successive bills calling for international intervention in Sudan and in 2006 voted for a no-fly zone over Darfur. Obama also served on the health, education, labour and pensions committees, the committee on veterans’ affairs and the committee on homeland security and governmental affairs. In these areas he supported moves to expand early years schooling, to increase financial help for low-income high school and college students and to provide funding for veterans to attend college.

In Feb. 2007 Obama announced his candidacy for the Democratic presidential nomination. Campaigning on the themes of change and unity, he promised to address the key issues of Iraq, health care and the USA’s dependence on oil. Obama fought a vigorous contest with main rival Hillary Clinton throughout 2007 and early 2008, gaining praise for his oratory while defending himself against charges of inexperience. In May 2007 he pledged a national health insurance plan open to all. Criticized by environmentalists for supporting liquefied coal, he subsequently modified his position. On the Iraq War, he argued for the phased redeployment of US forces and the withdrawal of combat troops, as proposed in his Iraq War De-Escalation Act of 2007.

By June 2008 Obama had secured the support of a majority of Democratic Party delegates and was confirmed at the Democratic National Convention of Aug. 2008. He selected Joe Biden, the long-serving senator of Delaware, as his running mate.

Some commentators claimed that during the campaign Obama softened his line on troop withdrawal from Iraq and on gun control. His decision to use private donations for his presidential campaign reversed an earlier pledge to work within federal public funding limits. He accused his opponents of ‘gaming this broken system’ when turning his back on $84m. that would have been available to him and, in doing so, becoming the first presidential candidate in over three decades to bypass the federal system in favour of raising unlimited private finance. During the early weeks of campaigning, polls showed a close contest between Obama and Republican candidate John McCain, with Obama being seen as inexperienced in foreign affairs. However, the failure of key US financial institutions in late 2008 focused attention on the economy, prompting a spike in Obama’s support. He called for regulatory reforms and a bipartisan approach to tackling the crisis and voted in favour of President Bush’s $700bn. package to buy up mortgage-related securities. Obama won the election on 4 Nov. 2008 with 53% of the vote to McCain’s 46% and by 365 electoral college votes to 173.

In the transition between his election and inauguration, Obama appointed Rahm Emanuel as chief of staff and former election rival, Hillary Clinton, as secretary of state. Both appointments were seen as an indication that he would tap the experience of long-serving politicians and officials and retain much of the previous administration’s foreign policy. He also gathered an economic team and began preparing a stimulus plan to aid economic recovery through investment.

Career in Office

Obama was inaugurated on 20 Jan. 2009. Because of a minor misreading of the oath of office on the part of Chief Justice John Roberts, which caused Obama to make a similar error, he took the oath for a second time on 21 Jan. 2009. Among his first presidential aims was the fulfilment of an election pledge that the administration would run down and eventually close the detention facility for terrorist suspects at the US naval base in Guantanamo Bay. However, this aspiration proved elusive throughout his term of office. Other early measures included tightening restrictions on lobbyists joining the administration, introducing stricter curbs on fuel emissions, enacting equal pay legislation and expanding children’s health care.

Obama sought bipartisan support for a $825bn. stimulus package, which aimed to boost economic recovery through sustained investment programmes. However, most Republicans opposed the package, arguing for less direct government spending and tax reductions. After Republicans forced substantial amendments, the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act was passed on 13 Feb. 2009, relying almost exclusively on Democrat support. Worth a slightly reduced $787bn., it detailed plans for unprecedented levels of investment in education, health care, infrastructure, the environment, employment and tax reduction. In addition, Obama developed plans for a $3-6trn. budget, though it faced opposition from critics who predicted that it would create an unmanageable national debt. Obama also faced public anger about the use of taxpayers’ money to provide bonuses for executives at American International Group and other loss-making financial institutions.

On foreign policy, Obama’s early months saw a move away from the hawkish tone of the previous administration. In Feb. 2009 he announced that most US troops would be withdrawn from Iraq by 31 Aug. 2010, with residual troops leaving by the end of 2011. He also signalled a change of approach on Afghanistan, indicating that though troop numbers would initially be increased, in an echo of the ‘surge’ tactics employed in Iraq, he was reviewing strategy and did not believe the region could be stabilized by military means alone. Obama also changed the tone of the USA’s dealings with the Middle East, sending envoys to Syria in March 2009 and expressing a willingness to talk to Iran’s leaders, subject to their compliance with UN directives on nuclear development. In the meantime, policy was to remain unchanged and in March 2009 he renewed US sanctions against Iran.

He was similarly cautious on the Israeli–Palestinian conflict, reaffirming the USA’s commitment to pursuing a two-state solution while maintaining the previous administration’s stance of refusing to talk to the militant Hamas leadership of Gaza. Obama gave moderate encouragement to the idea of closer dialogue between the USA and China and opened up the possibility of negotiations between the USA and Russia on cutting nuclear stockpiles and on curbing the development of new weapons.

One year on from his inauguration Obama had yet to secure any major policy objectives and his personal approval rating among voters had slipped markedly according to opinion polls. Despite the significant injections of borrowed money to stimulate demand and boost the economy, job creation proved slow and unemployment rose to 10% in 2009, although official figures indicated a return to growth in the third quarter of the year. Economic weakness in turn further undermined the country’s fiscal position, heralding a projected increase in the already large budget deficit in 2010. In Feb. 2010 Obama proposed a $3.8trn. budget plan for the fiscal year starting in Oct., including a new tax on banks, more spending on jobs and the cancellation of manned space missions to the Moon.

Obama’s radical health care reform plan to extend insurance cover to all Americans proved particularly contentious and remained the subject of fierce public and congressional division. The House of Representatives and the Senate each passed their own bills on health care reform in late 2009. In Jan. 2010 the loss of the Democrats’ critical 60–40 majority in the Senate upset plans to reconcile the two bills. Nonetheless, the health care reform was passed in March 2010, by 56–43 votes in the Senate and by 220–207 in the House of Representatives. It was hoped that under its terms coverage would extend to a further 32m. Americans.

Obama’s early pressure on the new Israeli government to stop settlement building on Palestinian land in the Middle East was largely resisted by Prime Minister Netanyahu. Relations between the two countries were further strained throughout 2010 as Israeli plans to build new homes in East Jerusalem brought criticism from Washington and ended hopes of indirect, US-brokered talks between the Israeli and Palestinian authorities. US moves to curb the nuclear ambitions of Iran also stalled. In Jan. 2012 Washington imposed new sanctions as Tehran began uranium enrichment at its Fordo nuclear facility. However, attempts to limit North Korea’s nuclear ambitions led to Pyongyang agreeing to halt its enrichment programme in Feb. 2012 in return for US aid. After some progress in improving relations with Syria, with a US ambassador appointed in Feb. 2010 after a five-year gap, President Assad’s violent reaction to domestic dissent starting in 2011 strained US–Syrian ties. Meanwhile, Obama intensified the war in Afghanistan, announcing in Dec. 2009 the deployment of a further 30,000 troops over six months to fight the Taliban insurgency.

In Sept. 2009 Obama eased friction with Russia as he announced the abandonment of a missile defence deployment in the Czech Republic and Poland. In March 2010 the two countries agreed a treaty to replace the START Treaty on nuclear arms reduction. Obama was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in Oct. 2009 for his efforts to create ‘a new international atmosphere’. Relations with China, however, worsened over trade and currency policy, US weapons sales to Taiwan and, in Feb. 2010, the president’s meeting with the Dalai Lama of Tibet.

In April 2010 an explosion in the Gulf of Mexico led to the biggest oil spill in US history, causing huge damage to local communities and the economy. The political fallout, together with the rise in support for the conservative libertarian Tea Party movement, hit Obama’s ratings. In mid-term congressional elections in Nov., the Republicans made sweeping gains to regain control of the House of Representatives, heralding a legislative gridlock with the Democratic majority in the Senate.

In Jan. 2011 in Tucson, Arizona, a lone gunman shot a Democratic congresswoman, prompting a well-received call by Obama for greater civility in US politics and discourse.

In March Obama committed the USA to join the NATO military intervention in Libya to protect civilians against the Gaddafi regime, stating that Americans could not brush aside ‘responsibilities to our fellow human beings’.

In April he called for a $4trn. reduction over 12 years in the federal budget deficit through spending cuts and increased taxes on higher earners. In May the government reached its federal debt ceiling (by law) of $14.3trn., heralding several months of political wrangling before a last-minute cross-party debt-reduction agreement was reached in Aug. to raise the ceiling and stave off the risk of a default. Nevertheless, concerns over US public finances in the long term prompted the Standard & Poor’s rating agency to downgrade the USA’s triple-A rating for the first time. Obama dismissed the downgrade, claiming: ‘We’ve always been and always will be a triple-A country.’ However, public approval ratings for his handling of the struggling US economy and weak jobs market continued to slide.

In May 2011 US special forces killed Osama bin Laden, having traced him to a compound in Abbottabad in northwestern Pakistan. Bin Laden, the leader of the al-Qaeda movement responsible for the 11 Sept. attacks on New York and Washington, D.C. in 2001, had been in hiding for almost ten years. Obama commented that ‘his demise should be welcomed by all who believe in peace and human dignity’. The operation strained already uneasy relations between the USA and Pakistan.

Entering an election year in 2012, Obama announced new defence plans in Jan. aimed at reconciling budget savings with more focused strategic priorities (including a reduced troop presence in Europe) while maintaining US military superiority. In his annual State of the Union address to Congress he warned against continuing wealth inequality and reiterated the need for a fairer tax system.

DEFENCE

The President is C.-in-C. of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

The National Security Act of 1947 provides for the unification of the Army, Navy and Air Forces under a single Secretary of Defense with cabinet rank. The President is also advised by a National Security Council and the Office of Civil and Defense Mobilization.

Defence expenditure in 2010 totalled $698,281m. ($2,156 per capita). Defence spending in 2009 represented 4.7% of GDP (down from 37.8% in 1944, 14.2% in 1953, 9.4% in 1968 and 6.2% of GDP in 1986 although up from the post-war low of 3.0% in 1999). The USA spent more on defence in 2008 than the next 15 biggest spenders combined. US expenditure was 41.5% of the world total, although its population is less than 5% of the world total. In 1997 the Quadrennial Defense Review (QDR) was implemented—a plan to transform US defence strategy and military forces.

Conscription was first introduced during the American Civil War in 1862 and operated during all subsequent major periods of conflict including World Wars I and II, the Korean War and the Vietnam War. A limited draft was also employed in peacetime in the Cold War and early 1960s. The final draft ended in 1973 when the USA converted to an all-volunteer military. Although conscription is not currently in force the Military Selective Service Act requires all males between the ages of 18 and 26 to register for compulsory military service should the need arise.

Total active strength in Nov. 2007 numbered 1,498,200, plus 10,100 civilians and 1,082,700 reserve personnel. Women account for 14% of active personnel (14% in the Army, 20% in the Air Force, 15% in the Navy and 6% in the Marine Corps). In Dec. 2010 US armed forces abroad numbered 291,700, including 103,700 in and around Afghanistan and 85,600 in and around Iraq. In Dec. 2011 the last US troops left Iraq although 4,000 remained in neighbouring Kuwait. Active duty military deaths in the US armed forces totalled 1,483 in 2010, down from 1,515 in 2009. In June 2011 President Obama announced that 10,000 troops would be withdrawn from Afghanistan by the end of 2011 and a further 23,000 by the end of Sept. 2012. US troop deaths in Iraq between 2003 and April 2012 totalled 4,486; deaths in Afghanistan between 2001 and April 2012 totalled 1,932.

The USA is the world's largest exporter of arms, with sales in 2008 worth $12.2bn., or 38.4% of the world total. In 2009 Lockheed Martin and Boeing were the two largest arms producing companies in the USA, accounting for $33.4bn. and $32.3bn. worth of sales respectively.

The USA's last nuclear test was in 1993. In accordance with START I—the treaty signed by the US and USSR in 1991 to reduce strategic offensive nuclear capability—the number of strategic nuclear warheads (intercontinental ballistic missiles, submarine-launched ballistic missiles and bombers) in Jan. 2011 was approximately 1,950. There were also 200 non-strategic warheads in Jan. 2011, making a total of around 2,150 deployed warheads. There are a further 2,850 warheads held in reserve and another 3,500 scheduled to be dismantled. In May 2010 the Obama administration announced that the USA had a total of 5,113 active nuclear warheads, down from a peak of 31,225 in 1967. Strategic nuclear delivery vehicles were made up as follows:

Intercontinental ballistic missiles: 450 Minuteman III.

Submarine-launched ballistic missiles: 288 Trident II.

Bombers: 93 B-52H; 20 B-2.

START I expired in Dec. 2009. In July 2007 the Bush administration decided not to extend the treaty beyond the original expiry date. In May 2001 President Bush called for the development of an anti-missile shield to move beyond the constraints of the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. In Dec. 2001 he announced that the USA was unilaterally abandoning the Treaty. On 24 May 2002 the USA and Russia signed an arms control treaty (the Strategic Offensive Reductions Treaty or Moscow Treaty) to reduce the number of US and Russian warheads, from between 6,000 and 7,000 each to between 1,700 and 2,200 each. The treaty was in force from June 2003 until Feb. 2011. It was then superseded by the Measures to Further Reduction and Limitation of Strategic Offensive Arms (New START), signed by the US and Russian presidents in April 2010 and ratified by the US Senate in Dec. 2010 and the Russian Federal Assembly in Jan. 2011. It laid out terms for the number of warheads on each side to be limited to 1,550 by 2017, a 30% drop on previous levels.

Estimates of the number of small arms in the country are around 270m., equivalent to 90 firearms for every 100 people, making the USA the world's most heavily armed country.

Army

Secretary of the Army: John McHugh.

The Secretary of the Army is the head of the Department of the Army. Subject to the authority of the President as C.-in-C. and of the Secretary of Defense, he is responsible for all affairs of the Department.

The Army consists of the Active Army, the Army National Guard of the US, the Army Reserve and civilian workforce; and all persons appointed to or enlisted into the Army without component; and all persons serving under call or conscription, including members of the National Guard of the States, etc., when in the service of the US. The strength of the Active Army was (2006) 489,000 (plus 107,000 reservists).

The Army budget for fiscal years 2010–12 was as follows: 2010, $243,365m.; 2011, $238,887m.; 2012, $202,942m.

The US Army Forces Command (FORSCOM), with headquarters at Fort Bragg, North Carolina, is the largest United States Army Command and consists of more than 750,000 Active Army, US

Army Reserve and Army National Guard soldiers. The other Army Commands are US Army Training and Doctrine Command (TRADOC) and US Army Materiel Command (AMC). The Army is presently undergoing a period of transformation, which is scheduled to be completed in 2013. The Army Service Component Commands are: United States Army Central (USARCENT)/Third Army; United States Army Europe (USAREUR)/Seventh Army; United States Army North (USARNORTH)/Fifth Army; United States Army South (USARSO)/Sixth Army; United States Army Pacific (USARPAC); United States Army Africa (USARAF); United States Army Special Operations Command (USASOC); Military Surface Deployment and Distribution Command (SDDC). The US Army Space and Missile Defense Command (SMDC), created in 1997 and with its headquarters at Redstone Arsenal, Alabama, is a specialized major command within the United States Army.

The First United States Army now serves as a mobilization, readiness and training command; the Second United States Army, which was reactivated in 2010, supports US Cyber Command.

Approximately 32% of the Active Army is deployed outside the continental USA. Several divisions, which are located in the USA, keep equipment in Germany and can be flown there in 48–72 hours. Headquarters of US Seventh and Eighth Armies are in Europe and Korea respectively.

Combat vehicles of the US Army are the tank, armoured personnel carrier, infantry fighting vehicle, and the armoured command vehicle. The Army's main battle tank is the M1A2 Abrams; its standard infantry fighting vehicle is the M2A3 Bradley.

The Army has nearly 4,900 aircraft, all but about 300 of them helicopters, including AH-1 Cobra and AH-64 Apache attack helicopters.

Over 95% of recruits enlisting in the Army have a high-school education and over 50% of the Army is married. Women serve in both combat support and combat service support units.

The National Guard is a reserve military component with both a state and a federal role. Enlistment is voluntary. The members are recruited by each state, but are equipped and paid by the federal government (except when performing state missions). As the organized militia of the several states, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the Territories of the Virgin Islands and Guam, the Guard may be called into service for local emergencies by the chief executives in those jurisdictions; and may be called into federal service by the President to thwart invasion or rebellion or to enforce federal law. In its role as a reserve component of the Army, the Guard is subject to the order of the President in the event of national emergency. In 2006 it numbered 458,030 (Army, 351,350; Air Force, 106,680).

The Army Reserve is designed to supply qualified and experienced units and individuals in an emergency. Members of units are assigned to the Ready Reserve, which is subject to call by the President in case of national emergency without declaration of war by Congress. The Standby Reserve and the Retired Reserve may be called only after declaration of war or national emergency by Congress. In 2006 the Army Reserve numbered 324,100.

Navy

Secretary of the Navy: Ray Mabus.

The Navy's Operating Forces include the Atlantic Fleet, divided between the 2nd fleet (home waters) and 6th fleet (Mediterranean) and the Pacific Fleet, similarly divided between the 3rd fleet (home waters), the 7th fleet (West Pacific) and the 5th fleet (Indian Ocean), which was formally activated in 1995 and maintained by units from both Pacific and Atlantic.

The authorized budget for the Department of the Navy (which includes funding both for the Navy and Marine Corps) for fiscal years 2010–12 was as follows: 2010, $177,126m.; 2011, $176,814m.; 2012, $173,014m.

Personnel and fleet strength declined during the mid-1990s but are now stabilizing. The Navy personnel total in 2006 was 376,750.

The operational strength of the Navy in the year indicated:

Category	1992	1997	2005	2006
Strategic Submarines	23	18	16	14
Nuclear Attack Submarines	87	67	56	58
Aircraft Carriers	12	11 <sup>1</sup>	12 <sup>1</sup>	12 <sup>1</sup>
Amphibious Carriers	13	11	11	11
Cruisers	46	30	27	25
Destroyers	51	56	49	47
Frigates	90	31	30	30

Ships in the inactive reserve are not included in the table, but those serving as Naval Reserve Force training ships are.

Submarine Forces. A principal part of the US naval task is to deploy the seaborne strategic deterrent from nuclear-powered ballistic missile-carrying submarines (SSBN), of which there were 14 in 2006, all of the Ohio class. The listed total of 58 nuclear-powered attack submarines comprises 50 of the Los Angeles class, four converted submarines of the Ohio class, three of the Seawolf class and one of the new Virginia class.

Surface Combatant Forces. The surface combatant forces are comprised of modern cruisers, destroyers and frigates. These ships provide multi-mission capabilities to achieve maritime dominance in the crowded and complex littoral warfare environment.

The cruiser force consists of 25 Ticonderoga class ships. There are 47 guided-missile Arleigh Burke Aegis class destroyers and 30 (22 active and eight in the reserve force) Oliver Hazard Perry class guided missile frigates.

Aircraft carriers. There are ten nuclear-powered Nimitz class carriers, the first of which, USS Nimitz, was commissioned on 3 May 1975 and the tenth and last of which, USS George H. W. Bush, was commissioned on 10 Jan. 2009. USS Enterprise, completed in 1961, was the prototype nuclear-powered carrier. USS Kitty Hawk, the only ship of the Kitty Hawk class and the last oil-fired carrier, was decommissioned on 12 May 2009. All carriers deploy an air group which comprises on average two squadrons each of F-14 Tomcat fighters and three squadrons each of F/A-18 Hornet fighter/ground attack aircraft.

Naval Aviation. The principal function of the naval aviation organization (strength in 2006 of 98,588) is to train and provide combat ready aviation forces. The main carrier-borne combat aircraft in the current inventory are 587 F/A-18 Hornet dual-purpose fighter/attack aircraft out of a total of 982 combat aircraft.

The Marine Corps

While administratively part of the Department of the Navy, the Corps ranks as a separate armed service, with the Commandant serving in his own right as a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and responsible directly to the Secretary of the Navy. Its strength had stabilized at 175,350 by 2006.

The role of the Marine Corps is to provide specially trained and equipped amphibious expeditionary forces. The Corps includes an autonomous aviation element numbering 34,700 in 2006.

The US Coast Guard

The Coast Guard operates under the Department of Homeland Security in time of peace and as part of the Navy in time of war or when directed by the President. The act of establishment stated the Coast Guard 'shall be a military service and branch of the armed forces of the United States at all times'.

The Coast Guard is the country's oldest continuous sea-going service and its missions include maintenance of aids to navigation, icebreaking, environmental response (oil spills), maritime law enforcement, marine licensing, port security, search and rescue and waterways management.

The workforce in 2008 was made up of approximately 41,948 military personnel augmented by 7,654 civilians. On an average

Coast Guard day, the service saves 14 lives, boards 193 ships and boats, seizes $12.9m. worth of illegal drugs, conducts 74 search and rescue cases, processes 375 seaman's documents, investigates 24 marine casualty accidents, inspects 18 commercial fishing vessels, assists 98 people in distress, services 135 aids to navigation and interdicts 17 illegal immigrants.

Air Force

Secretary of the Air Force: Michael B. Donley.

The Department of the Air Force was activated within the Department of Defense on 18 Sept. 1947, under the terms of the National Security Act of 1947.

The USAF has the mission to defend the USA through control and exploitation of air, space and cyberspace. For operational purposes the service is divided into nine major commands, 35 field operating agencies and four direct-reporting units. In addition there are two reserve components: the Air Force Reserve and the Air National Guard.

Major commands accomplish designated phases of USAF worldwide activities. They also organize, administer, equip and train their subordinate elements. In descending order, elements of major commands include numbered air forces, wings, groups, squadrons and flights. The basic unit for generating and employing combat capability is the wing, considered to be the Air Force's prime war-fighting instrument. The bulk of the combat forces are grouped under the Air Combat Command, which controls strategic bombing, tactical strike, air defence and reconnaissance assets in the USA.

Air Force bombers include the B-1B Lancer, the B-2A Spirit and the B-52H Stratofortress, which has been the primary manned strategic bomber for 50 years. In the fighter category are the F-22A Raptor, F-15 Eagle and Strike Eagle and the F-16 Fighting Falcon.

The Air Force budget for fiscal years 2010–12 was as follows: 2010, $165,894m.; 2011, $167,293m.; 2012, $162,520m.

In 2006 the Air Force had approximately 347,400 military personnel. Since 1991 women have been authorized to fly combat aircraft, but not until 1993 were they allowed to fly fighters.

ECONOMY

Services accounted for 77% of GDP in 2007, industry 22% and agriculture 1%.

Per capita personal income in 2010 was $39,945, up from $19,477 in 1990 although down from $40,947 in 2008.

In 2009 the USA gave $28.8bn. in international aid, the highest figure of any country. In terms of a percentage of GNI, however, the USA was one of the least generous major industrialized countries, giving just 0.21% (compared to more than 0.6% in the early 1960s).

Overview

The USA is the world's leading national economy. Its volume of trade is the largest in the world, although the value of the external sector as a percentage of GDP is relatively low. However, in 2007 the EU replaced the USA as the world's largest economy in terms of total GDP. The USA is self-sufficient in most raw materials, with the notable exception of oil. Core industries include motor vehicles, steel, aerospace, chemicals, telecommunications, electronics and computers. Since 1992 the economy has grown at higher average rates than the OECD and G7 in most years and per capita GDP is higher than in other G7 countries.

In 1995 labour productivity in advanced European countries had reached US levels but since then US labour and total factor productivity growth has outpaced that of Europe and Japan. The principal sectors in which the USA outperforms its rivals are retail, wholesale and finance. It has also been able to extract greater efficiency gains from IT-related investments. US firms enjoy greater flexibility than their counterparts in Western Europe and Japan in laying off workers and in introducing labour-saving equipment. However, income inequality is higher than in other advanced economies and the gap between skilled and unskilled labour incomes has been growing over the last three decades. Most income gains have accrued to the richest 20% of Americans.

The attacks of 11 Sept. 2001 posed serious challenges to the dollar payment system and the stock market. Business fixed investment relative to GDP plummeted in 2001–02 after reaching record highs in 2000–01. Confidence in the corporate market declined after the collapse of energy giant Enron in Dec. 2002 was followed by other accounting scandals. With investor confidence low, the dollar fell to near parity with the euro for the first time since the introduction of the euro in Jan. 2002. In the third quarter of 2003 the economy recorded an annualized growth rate of 6.9%, fuelled by tax cuts, low interest rates and increased consumer and business spending. Interest rates began rising from historic lows in 2003 with the federal funds rate reaching 5.25% by the end of 2006. Growth remained strong through 2006 despite the impact of Hurricane Katrina and high oil prices. The domestic economy was buoyed by strong consumer demand, which in turn increased personal debt.

The sub-prime mortgage crisis of 2007 damaged the wider economy. A sharp rise in defaults and foreclosures as a result of the rapid decline in house market prices began in 2006, spreading panic through the banking sector. A stimulus package enacted in early 2008 (consisting of targeted tax rebates and investment incentives) together with interest rate cuts amounting to 3.75% by Oct. 2008 were aimed at raising confidence in the financial markets. However, nervousness increased with tougher lending criteria and declining asset prices. In Sept. 2008 Lehman Brothers became the first major bank to collapse since the start of the credit crisis. The US government announced rescue packages for mortgage giants Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac—between them responsible for half of the outstanding mortgages in the economy—along with AIG, the country's biggest insurance company.

In Oct. 2008 the House of Representatives passed a $700bn. government plan aimed at purchasing bad debts of failing institutions. However, continued market turmoil resulted in a further $250bn. investment plan that gave the government stakes in a range of banks. Interest rates reached their lowest recorded level at between 0–0.25% in Dec. 2008. In Feb. 2009 Congress approved President Obama's $787bn. economic stimulus package, comprising tax breaks and money for social programmes, a move that substantially increased the fiscal deficit.

The government reported growth of 1.7% in the third quarter of 2009, the first quarterly increase since the second quarter of 2008, indicating that the recession had ended. Recovery was underpinned by strong government stimulus, a rebound in world trade (with increasing demand from large emerging-market economies) and housing market stabilization. The economy contracted by 3.5% in 2009 while real GDP growth in the 2000s, at an annual average of 1.7%, was the lowest in a full decade since the 1930s. Subsequent recovery has been slow by historical standards owing to a combination of external events, such as rising oil prices and Europe's debt crisis, and domestic drivers such as stuttering consumer spending and a sluggish housing market. Nonetheless, GDP grew by 3% in 2010 and positive unemployment and retail sales figures in early 2012 saw the stock market jump to its highest level since May 2008.

Further fiscal pressures have emerged with the retirement of the baby-boom generation and the rise in life expectancy, increasing the strain on entitlement programmes. In March 2010 President Obama signed into law a health care reform bill that was expected to extend health insurance to an additional 32m. Americans, impose new taxes on the wealthy and outlaw restrictive insurance practices. According to the Congressional Budget Office, the health care bill was expected to cut the federal deficit by $138bn. over ten years.

Federal fiscal deficits have increased as a result of the growth slowdown and stimulus packages. In Feb. 2011 President Obama unveiled his 2012 Budget, which aimed to cut $1.1trn. from the US deficit over the next decade. However, political wrangling over raising the debt ceiling caused disruption on the financial markets as fears mounted that the economy would default. In Aug. 2011 Congress approved a bipartisan compromise deal that raised the debt ceiling by $2.4trn. from $14.3trn and made savings of at least $2.1trn. over the preceding ten years. The credit-rating agency Standard & Poor's downgraded the USA's AAA credit-rating to AA+ days after the deal had been reached, causing further volatility in the markets.

Currency

The unit of currency is the dollar (USD) of 100 cents. Notes are issued by the 12 Federal Reserve Banks, which are denoted by a branch letter (A = Boston, MA; B = New York, NY; C = Philadelphia, PA; D = Cleveland, OH; E = Richmond, VA; F = Atlanta, GA; G = Chicago, IL; H = St Louis, MO; I = Minneapolis, MN; J = Kansas City, MO; K = Dallas, TX; L = San Francisco, CA).

Inflation rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
2.8%	1.6%	2.3%	2.7%	3.4%	3.2%	2.9%	3.8%	-0.4%	1.6%

The inflation rate in 2011 according to the OECD was 3.2%. Foreign exchange reserves in Sept. 2009 were $51,840m. and gold reserves were 261.50m. troy oz. The USA has the most gold reserves of any country, and more than the combined reserves of the next two (Germany and Italy). Total money supply in June 2009 was $1,497.4bn.

Budget

The budget covers virtually all the programmes of federal government, including those financed through trust funds, such as for social security, Medicare and highway construction. Receipts of the government include all income from its sovereign or compulsory powers; income from business-type or market-orientated activities of the government is offset against outlays. The fiscal year ends on 30 Sept. (before 1977 on 30 June). Budget receipts and outlays, including off-budget receipts and outlays (in $1m.):

Fiscal year ending in	Receipts	Outlays	Surplus (+) or deficit (-)
1950	39,443	42,562	-3,119
1960	92,492	92,191	+301
1970	192,807	195,649	-2,842
1980	517,112	590,941	-73,830
1990	1,031,958	1,252,994	-221,036
2000	2,025,191	1,788,950	+236,241
2005	2,153,611	2,471,957	-318,346
2006	2,406,869	2,655,050	-248,181
2007	2,567,985	2,728,686	-160,701
2008	2,523,991	2,982,544	-458,553
2009	2,104,989	3,517,677	-1,412,688
2010	2,162,724	3,456,213	-1,293,489
2011	2,303,466	3,603,061	-1,299,595
2012 <sup>1</sup>	2,468,599	3,795,547	-1,326,948

President Barack Obama unveiled his fourth budget in Feb. 2012. It projected a deficit of $1.33trn. (approximately 8.5% of GDP) for fiscal year 2012, falling to $901bn. in 2013 and $575bn. in 2018. The budget laid plans to raise $1.5trn. over ten years through implementing the 'Buffett Rule', which calls for taxing households making more than $1m. a year at a minimum rate of 30%, and the repeal of the Bush-era tax cuts on those earning more than $250,000 annually. Among other measures of the $3.8trn. plan were $350bn. in short-term measures to encourage job growth, including $50bn. in immediate infrastructure investment and $30bn. to rebuild schools. A further $41bn. would be raised through cutting tax breaks for oil, gas and coal companies. In March 2012 the House of Representatives rejected the budget by 414 votes to nil.

National Income

The Bureau of Economic Analysis of the Department of Commerce prepares detailed estimates on the national income and product. In Dec. 2003 the Bureau revised these accounts back to 1929. The principal tables are published monthly in Survey of Current Business; the complete set of national income and product tables are published in the Survey normally each Aug., showing data for recent years.

Performance

Total GDP in 2010 was $14,582.4bn. (more than twice that of China, the second largest economy), representing 23% of the world's total GDP. Real GDP growth rates (based on OECD statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
1.1%	1.7%	2.5%	3.5%	3.1%	2.7%	1.9%	-0.3%	-3.5%	3.0%

The real GDP growth rate in 2011 according to the Bureau of Economic Analysis was 1.7%. The USA's economy shrank by 3.7% in the third quarter of 2008, by 8.9% in the fourth quarter (the steepest quarterly fall since 1958) and by 6.7% in the first quarter of 2009. There was also negative growth in the second quarter of 2009, of 0.7%. The recession ended with growth of 1.7% in the third quarter of 2009.

The USA was ranked fourth in the Global Competitiveness Index in the World Economic Forum's Global Competitiveness Report 2010–2011, down from second in the 2009–2010 report. In the 2010 World Competitiveness Yearbook, compiled by the International Institute for Management Development, the USA came third in the world ranking.

Banking and Finance

The Federal Reserve System, established under The Federal Reserve Act of 1913, comprises the Board of seven Governors, the 12 regional Federal Reserve Banks with their 25 branches, and the Federal Open Market Committee. The seven members of the Board of Governors are appointed by the President with the consent of the Senate. Each Governor is appointed to a full term of 14 years or an unexpired portion of a term, one term expiring every two years. The Board exercises broad supervisory authority over the operations of the 12 Federal Reserve Banks, including approval of their budgets and of the appointments of their presidents and first vice presidents; it designates three of the nine directors of each Reserve Bank including the Chairman and Deputy Chairman. The Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board is appointed by the President for four-year terms. The Chairman is Ben Bernanke. The Board has supervisory and regulatory responsibilities over banks that are members of the Federal Reserve System, bank holding companies, bank mergers, Edge Act and agreement corporations, foreign activities of member banks, international banking facilities in the USA, and activities of the US branches and agencies of foreign banks. Legislation of 1991 requires foreign banks to prove that they are subject to comprehensive consolidated supervision by a regulator at home, and have the Board's approval to establish branches, agencies and representative offices. The Board also assures the smooth functioning and continued development of the nation's vast payments system. Another area of the Board's responsibilities involves the implementation by regulation of major federal laws governing consumer credit.

From 1968 the Congress passed a number of consumer financial protection acts, the first of which was the Truth in Lending Act, for which it has directed the Board to write implementing regulations and assume partial enforcement responsibility. Others include the Equal Credit Opportunity Act, Home Mortgage Disclosure Act, Consumer Leasing Act, Fair Credit Billing Act, Truth in Savings Act and Electronic Fund Transfer Act. To manage these responsibilities the Board has established a Division of Consumer and Community Affairs. To assist it, the Board consults with a Consumer Advisory Council, established by the Congress in 1976.

Another statutory body, the Federal Advisory Council, consists of 12 members (one from each district); it meets in Washington four times a year to advise the Board of Governors on economic and banking developments. Following the passage of the Monetary Control Act of 1980, the Board of Governors established the Thrift Institutions Advisory Council to provide information and views on the special needs and problems of thrift institutions. The group is comprised of representatives of mutual savings banks, savings and loan associations, and credit unions.

All depository institutions (commercial and savings banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, US agencies and branches of foreign banks, and Edge Act and agreement corporations) must meet reserve requirements set by the Federal Reserve and hold the reserves in the form of vault cash or deposits at Federal Reserve Banks.

Banks which participate in the federal deposit insurance fund have their deposits insured against loss up to $100,000 for each account. The fund is administered by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation established in 1933; it obtains resources through annual assessments on participating banks. All members of the Federal Reserve System are required to insure their deposits through the Corporation, and non-member banks may apply and qualify for insurance.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1992 originated with bank reform initiatives. It imposed new capital rules on banks, new reporting requirements and a code of 'safety and soundness' standards. The main aim of the Act is to reduce risk through rigorous enforcement of capital requirements. Regulators are required to take action where banks fail to observe these standards.

In April 2012 the largest banks in the USA in terms of market value were: Wells Fargo ($177.7bn.); J. P. Morgan Chase ($166.5bn.); and Citigroup ($99.5bn.).

The key stock exchanges are the New York Stock Exchange (NYSE Euronext) and the Nasdaq Stock Exchange (NASDAQ). There are several other stock exchanges, in Philadelphia, Boston, San Francisco (Pacific Stock Exchange) and Chicago, although trading is very limited in them.

The USA received $228.25bn. worth of foreign direct investment in 2010, up from $152.89bn. in 2009 although down from $306.37bn. in 2008. By the end of 2010 the total stock of foreign direct investment was $3,451.4bn.

By Dec. 2005 approximately 21% of the population were using e-banking.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

In 2010 fossil fuels accounted for 78.0% of primary energy production, nuclear power 11.2% and renewables (including biomass, hydropower, wind, geothermal and solar) 10.8% (up from 8.6% in 2000). Provisional figures suggested that generation of renewables surpassed nuclear power in 2011.

Environment

The USA's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 accounted for 19.2% of the world total (the second highest after China) and were equivalent to 19.2 tonnes per capita (down from 20.4 tonnes per capita in 2004). The population of the USA is only 4.6% of the world total. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked the USA 39th in the world, with 81.0%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources.

In March 2001 then President Bush rejected the 1997 Kyoto Protocol, which aimed to combat the rise in the earth's temperature through the reduction of industrialized nations' carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels by an average 5.2% below 1990 levels by 2012. In Feb. 2002 he unveiled an alternative climate-change plan to the Kyoto Protocol, calling for voluntary measures to reduce the rate of increase of US carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels.

In 2009 President Obama endorsed an American Clean Energy and Security bill that laid out plans for an emissions trading scheme echoing the EU model. It was passed by the House of Representatives in 2009 but did not become law owing to inaction in the Senate. Obama had previously called for a reduction in US greenhouse gas emissions of 80% on 1990 levels by 2050.

The USA recycled 33.2% of its municipal solid waste in 2008.

Electricity

Net summer capacity in 2009 was 1,027.6m. kW. Fossil fuel accounts for approximately 69% of electricity generation. In 2009, 20% of electricity was produced by nuclear reactors. (The last one to begin commercial operation was in 1996.) The USA has more nuclear reactors in use than any other country in the world. In 2009 the USA had a nuclear generating capacity of 101,004 MW, with 104 nuclear reactors. There are plans to build two reactors in Georgia, which will be the first new ones constructed in the USA since the 1970s. Electricity production in 2009 was 3,953,111m. kWh, the lowest in the USA since 2003 but still the highest in the world. Consumption per capita in 2007 was 14,522 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Crude oil production (2008), 1,812m. bbls. Production has been gradually declining since the mid-1980s, when annual production was 3,274m. bbls. Only Russia and Saudi Arabia produce more crude oil. Proven reserves were 21.3bn. bbls in 2007, but they are expected to be exhausted by 2020. Output (2007) was valued at $122.96bn. Offshore oil accounts for about 33% of total production, but this is likely to increase in the future. Crude oil imports began to exceed production in 1993 and in 2008 totalled 3,581m. bbls, with Canada supplying nearly a fifth of US oil imports. In Oct. 2002 the USA took its first delivery of Russian oil for its Strategic Petroleum Reserve as a consequence of an energy dialogue declared by then Presidents George W. Bush and Vladimir Putin at their summit in May 2002. The USA is by far the largest single consumer of oil (888.5m. tonnes in 2008).

The USA is by some distance the greatest single consumer of natural gas, and the second largest producer after Russia. Natural gas production, 2010, was 22.57trn. cu. ft (the highest annual total since 1973). Shale gas production was 4.87trn. cu. ft in 2010 (22% of total US natural gas production), up from 0.4trn. cu. ft in 2000. Proven natural gas reserves in 2008 totalled 245trn. cu. ft.

Wind

The USA is the largest producer of wind power, with 70.8bn. kWh in 2009 (up from 55.4bn. kWh in 2008 and 14.1bn. kWh in 2004). In 2010 total installed capacity amounted to 40,180 MW, second only behind China.

Ethanol

The USA is the largest producer of ethanol (from maize). Production totalled 10,600m. gallons in 2009 (9,000m. gallons in 2008 and 6,500m. gallons in 2007).

Water

The total area covered by water is 256,645 sq. miles. Americans' average annual water usage is nearly 67,000 cu. ft per person—more than twice the average for an industrialized nation.

Non-Fuel Minerals

The USA is wholly dependent upon imports for columbium, bauxite, mica sheet, manganese, strontium and graphite, and imports over 80% of its requirements of industrial diamonds, fluorspar, platinum, tantalum, tungsten, chromium and tin.

Total value of non-fuel minerals produced in 2006 was $65,500m. ($33,445m. in 1990). Details of some of the main minerals produced are given in the following tables.

Production of metals:

	Unit	Quantity 2007
Copper	1,000 tonnes	1,170
Gold	tonnes	238
Iron ore	1m. tonnes	51
Lead	1,000 tonnes	434
Silver	tonnes	1,260
Zinc	1,000 tonnes	769

In 2008 the value of metal mine production was $27.4bn. Precious metals are mined mainly in California and Utah (gold); and Nevada, Arizona and Idaho (silver).

Production of non-metals:

	Unit	Quantity 2007
Barite	1,000 tonnes	455
Boron	1,000 tonnes	1,150 <sup>1</sup>
Bromine	1,000 tonnes	243 <sup>2</sup>
Cement	1m. short tons	94
Clays	1,000 tonnes	36,800
Diatomite	1,000 tonnes	687
Feldspar (including aplite)	1,000 tonnes	730
Garnet (industrial)	1,000 tonnes	61
Gypsum	1m. tonnes	18
Lime	1m. tonnes	20
Phosphate rock	1m. tonnes	30
Pumice	1,000 tonnes	1,270
Salt	1m. tonnes	45
Sand and gravel	1m. tonnes	1,260
Stone (crushed/broken)	1m. tonnes	1,600

In 2008 the value of non-metal mineral production was $43.9bn.

Aluminium production for 2007, 2.55m. tonnes; uranium production for 2009, 1,453 tonnes. The USA is the world's leading producer of salt.

Coal

Proven recoverable coal reserves were 237,295m. short tons in 2008, more than a quarter of the world total. Output in 2008 (in 1m. short tons): 1,171.8 including bituminous coal, 555.3; sub-bituminous coal, 539.1; lignite, 75.7; anthracite, 1.7. 2008 output from surface workings, 814.7m. short tons; underground mines, 357.1m. short tons. Value of total output, 2008, $38.18bn.

Agriculture

Agriculture in the USA is characterized by its ability to adapt to widely varying conditions, and still produce an abundance and variety of agricultural products. From colonial times to about 1920 the major increases in farm production were brought about by adding to the number of farms and the amount of land under cultivation. During this period nearly 320m. acres of virgin forest were converted to crop land or pasture, and extensive areas of grasslands were ploughed. Improvident use of soil and water resources was evident in many areas.

During the next 20 years the number of farms reached a plateau of about 6.5m., and the acreage planted to crops held relatively stable around 330m. acres. The major source of increase in farm output arose from the substitution of power-driven machines for horses and mules. Greater emphasis was placed on development and improvement of land, and the need for conservation of basic agricultural resources was recognized. A successful conservation programme, highly co-ordinated and on a national scale—to prevent further erosion, to restore the native fertility of damaged land and to adjust land uses to production capabilities and needs—has been in operation since early in the 1930s.

Since the Second World War the uptrend in farm output has been greatly accelerated by increased production per acre and per farm animal. These increases are associated with a higher degree of mechanization; greater use of lime and fertilizer; improved varieties, including hybrid maize and grain sorghums; more effective control of insects and disease; improved strains of livestock and poultry; and wider use of good husbandry practices, such as nutritionally balanced feeds, use of superior sites and better housing. During this period land included in farms decreased slowly, crop land harvested declined somewhat more rapidly, but the number of farms declined sharply.

All land in farms totalled less than 500m. acres in 1870, rose to a peak of over 1,200m. acres in the 1950s and declined to 920m. acres in 2008, even with the addition of the new States of Alaska and Hawaii in 1960. The number of farms declined from 6.35m. in 1940 to 2.20m. in 2008, as the average size of farms doubled. The average size of farms in 2008 was 418 acres, but ranged from a few acres to many thousand acres. In 2007 the total value of land and buildings was $1,744,295m. The average value of land and buildings per acre in 2007 was $1,892.

At the 2000 census 59,063,597 persons (21.0% of the population) were rural, of whom 2,987,531 (just over 1% of the total population) lived on farms. In 2007 there were 1,906,335 farms managed by families or individuals (86.5% of all farms); 1,522,033 farms (69.0% of all farms) were managed by full owners (farmers who own all the land they operate). Hired farmworkers numbered 2,636,509 in 2007. There were 4.4m. tractors in 2007 and an estimated 411,000 harvester-threshers. In 2007 there were an estimated 170.43m. ha. of arable land and 2.73m. ha. of permanent crops. 22.9m. ha. were irrigated in 2007.

Cash receipts from farm marketings and government payments (in $1bn.):

	Crops	Livestock and livestock products	Total
2007	149.9	138.6	288.5
2008	176.8	141.5	318.3
2009	163.7	119.8	283.4

Net farm income was $62.2bn. in 2009 ($86.6bn. in 2008).

The harvest area and production of the principal crops for 2007 and 2008 were:

	2007			2008
	Harvested 1m. acres	Pro- duction 1m. acre	Yield per acre	Harvested 1m. acres	Pro- duction 1m. acre	Yield per acre

The USA is the world's leading producer of maize, soybeans, sorghum and tree nuts and the second largest producer of tomatoes and apples.

Fruit. Utilized production, in 1,000 tons:

Apples	4,865	4,523	4,970
Grapefruit	1,232	1,627	1,569
Grapes	6,366	7,036	7,421
Oranges	9,021	7,625	10,167
Peaches	987	1,116	1,100
Strawberries	1,202	1,223	1,266

The farm value of the above crops in 2008 was: apples, $2,599m.; grapefruit, $265m.; grapes, $3,342m.; oranges, $2,135m.; peaches, $539m.; strawberries, $1,885m.

In 2008 there were 2,643,221 acres of organic crops. Certified organic producers numbered 12,941 in 2008. Organic food sales for the USA in 2005 totalled $13.8bn. (the highest in the world).

Dairy produce. In 2008 production of milk was 189,992m. lb; cheese, 9,935m. lb; butter, 1,644m. lb; ice cream, 943m. gallons; non-fat dry milk, 1,519m. lb; yoghurt, 3,599m. lb. The USA is the world's largest producer of both cheese and milk.

Livestock. In 2008 there were 9,009m. broilers and 273m. turkeys. Eggs produced, 2007, 90.2bn.

Value of production (in $1m.) was:

Cattle and calves	35,491	35,973	34,859
Hogs and pigs	12,714	13,468	14,435
Broilers	17,739	21,514	23,118
Turkeys	3,468	3,954	4,477
Eggs	4,460	6,719	8,225

Livestock numbered, in 2008 (1m.): cattle and calves (including milch cows), 96.0; hogs and pigs, 68.2; sheep and lambs, 6.0. Approximate value of livestock (in $1bn.), 2008: cattle, 95.1; hogs and pigs, 5.0; sheep and lambs (in $1m.), 823.

Forestry

Forests covered a total area of 751m. acres (303m. ha.) in 2007, or 33% of the land area. The national forests had an area of 147,181,000 acres in 2007. In 2007 there were 514m. acres of timberland (99m. acres national forest, 59m. acres state, county or municipality owned, 356m. acres private). Timber production was 15,680m. cu. ft in 2007. The USA is the world's largest producer of roundwood (12.4% of the world total in 2007). It is also the highest consumer of roundwood; timber consumption in 2007 totalled 15.41bn. cu. ft.

In 2008 there were 704 designated wilderness areas throughout the USA, covering a total of 107.4m. acres (43.5m. ha.). More than half of the areas are in Alaska (53.5%), followed by California (13.3%), Arizona, Washington and Idaho.

Fisheries

In 2007 the domestic catch was 9,231.8m. lb, valued at $4,089.0m. (including 1,021.1m. lb of shellfish valued at $2,013.0m.). Main species landed in terms of value ($1m.): crabs, 454.0; sea scallops, 385.0; salmon, 381.1; shrimp, 370.0; American lobster, 349.1.

Disposition of the domestic catch in 2007 (1m. lb): fresh or frozen, 7,387; tinned, 501; cured, 121; reduced to meal or oil, 1,223. The USA's imports of fishery commodities in 2005 ($11.98bn.) were exceeded only by those of Japan.

In the period 2005–07 the average American citizen consumed 53.4 lb (24.2 kg) of fish and fishery products a year, compared to an average 37.0 lb (16.8 kg) for the world as a whole.

Tennessee Valley Authority

Established by Act of Congress, 1933, the TVA is a multiple-purpose federal agency which carries out its duties in an area embracing some 41,000 sq. miles in the seven Tennessee River Valley states: Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Alabama, North Carolina, Georgia and Virginia. In addition, 76 counties outside the Valley are served by TVA power distributors. It is the largest public power company in the USA. Its three directors are appointed by the President, with the consent of the Senate; headquarters are in Knoxville (TN).

INDUSTRY

The largest companies in the USA by market capitalization in April 2012 were: Apple Inc ($590.0bn.), a computer company; the Exxon Mobil Corporation ($388.4bn.), the world's largest integrated oil company; and Microsoft Corporation ($254.7bn.), a computer company. Apple and Exxon Mobil were also the two largest companies by market value in the world in April 2012. According to a survey published by the New York-based Interbrand in Sept. 2011, Coca-Cola is the world's most valuable brand, worth $71.86bn.

The following table presents industry statistics of manufactures as reported at various censuses from 1909 to 1980 and from the Annual Survey of Manufactures for years in which no census was taken.

The Annual Surveys of Manufactures carry forward the key measures of manufacturing activity which are covered in detail by the Census of Manufactures. The large plants in the surveys account for approximately two-thirds of the total employment in operating manufacturing establishments in the USA.

	Production workers (average for year)	Production workers' wages total ($1,000)	Value added by manufacture ($1,000)
1909	3,261,736	3,205,213	8,160,075
1919	9,464,916	9,664,009	23,841,624
1929	8,369,705	10,884,919	30,591,435
1933	5,787,611	4,940,146	14,007,540
1939	7,808,205	8,997,515	24,487,304
1950	11,778,803	34,600,025	89,749,765
1960	12,209,514	55,555,452	163,998,531
1970	13,528,000	91,609,000	300,227,600
1980	13,900,100	198,164,000	773,831,300
1990	12,232,700	275,208,400	1,346,970,100
2000	11,943,646	363,380,819	1,973,622,421
2005	9,235,635	337,980,878	2,210,349,247
2006	9,175,328	344,192,729	2,285,928,967
2007	9,385,789	353,051,004	2,390,643,058
2008	8,872,902	343,373,530	2,274,366,727

The total number of employees in the manufacturing industry in 2009 was approximately 11,051,000; there were 331,355 manufacturing establishments in 2007. Manufacturing employment has declined every year since 1998. Much of the decline reflects the recession that began in 2001 and the relatively weak recovery in demand that followed. In 2008 manufacturing contributed 11.5% of GDP, down from 14.5% of GDP in 2000. The leading industries in 2006 in terms of value added by manufacture (in $1m.) were: chemicals, 340,038; transportation equipment, 260,883; food, 233,407; computer and electronic products, 230,762; fabricated metal products, 169,322. In 2008 a total of 8,673,000 motor vehicles were made in the USA, the lowest annual total since the 1980s.

In 2008 principal commodities produced (by value of shipments, in $1m.) were: chemicals, 689,000; petroleum and coal products, 674,000; transportation equipment, 619,000; food, 611,000; computer and electronic products, 380,000.

Net profits (2008) for manufacturing corporations were $418bn. before tax ($294bn. after tax). Hourly earnings of production workers in Dec. 2008 were $18.06 in manufacturing and $22.52 in construction.

The USA is the second largest beer producer after China, with 6,151m. gallons in 2007; and second after China for cigarette production, with 484bn. units in 2006.

Iron and Steel. Output of the iron and steel industries (in 1m. net tons of 2,000 lb) in recent years was:

	Pig iron	Raw steel	Steel by method of production<sup>1</sup>
			Electric	Basic oxygen
2005	37.2	94.9	52.2	42.7
2006	37.9	98.2	42.1	56.1
2007	36.3	98.1	41.0	57.1
2008	33.7	91.9	52.8	39.1
2009	19.0	59.4	36.7	22.7

In 2008 iron and steel mills and ferroalloy manufacturing employed 109,308 persons (an average 87,400 production workers). The total payroll in 2008 amounted to $7,668.0m.

Labour

The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimated that in 2009 the civilian labour force was 154,142,000 (65.4% of those 16 years and over), of whom 139,877,000 were employed and 14,265,000 (9.3%) were unemployed. The unemployment rate was 8.3% in Feb. 2012, down from 9.0% in Feb. 2011 and 9.8% in Feb. 2010. Payroll employment fell by 820,000 in Jan. 2009, the largest monthly fall since 1945. In 2009 as a whole 4.8m. jobs were lost—the highest number since records began in 1939. Long-term unemployment rose from 10.0% of the labour force between 16 and 64 having been out of work for more than a year in 2007 to 29.0% in 2010. In Jan. 2010 for the first time there were more women (64.2m.) than men (63.4m.) on US payrolls. Employment by industry in 2009:

Industry Group	Male	Female	Total	Percentage distribution

A total of 15 strikes and lockouts of 1,000 workers or more occurred in 2008, involving 72,000 workers and 1,954,000 idle days.

On 24 July 2007 the federal hourly minimum wage was raised from $5.15 to $5.85 an hour. It had been $5.15 for nearly ten years, having previously been increased from $4.75 an hour on 1 Sept. 1997. It was raised again on 24 July 2008, to $6.55 an hour, and on 24 July 2009, to $7.25. Americans worked an average 1,703 hours per person in 2008. Median weekly earnings were $739 in 2009 ($819 among men and $657 among women).

Labour relations are legally regulated by the National Labor Relations Act, amended by the Labor-Management Relations (Taft-Hartley) Act, 1947 as amended by the Labor-Management Reporting and Disclosure Act, 1959, again amended in 1974, and the Railway Labor Act of 1926, as amended in 1934 and 1936.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

The North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) between the USA, Canada and Mexico was signed on 7 Oct. 1992 and came into effect on 1 Jan. 1994. The Central America-Dominican Republic-United States Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA-DR) between the USA, Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras and Nicaragua entered into force for the USA on 1 March 2006. The UK has had 'most-favoured-nation' status since 1815.

Imports and Exports

Total value of imports and exports of goods (in $1bn.):

	Imports	Exports	Trade balance
2006	1,853.9	1,026.0	-828.0
2007	1,957.0	1,148.2	-808.8
2008	2,103.6	1,287.4	-816.2
2009	1,559.6	1,056.0	-503.6
2010	1,913.2	1,278.3	-634.9
2011	2,207.4	1,480.6	-726.7

In 2009 the USA's merchandise trade deficit fell to its lowest level since 2002. Its deficit with China went up from $83.1bn. in 2001 to $295.5bn. in 2011. Its largest surplus is with the Netherlands ($19.4bn. in 2011). The USA last recorded a trade surplus in goods in 1975. The USA is both the world's leading importer and the leading trading nation, although only the third largest exporter of goods after China and Germany (but it is the largest exporter of goods and services combined). In 2009 its trade in goods accounted for 12.7% of the world's imports and 8.5% of exports.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

On 31 Dec. 2007 the total public road mileage was 4,032,126 miles (urban, 1,044,368; rural, 2,987,758). Of the urban roads, 14% were state controlled and 86% under local control. 21% of rural roads were controlled by the states, 75% of rural roads were under local control and the remainder were federal park and forest roads. State highway funds were $130,306m. in 2007.

Motor vehicles registered in 2007: 247,265,000, of which 135,933,000 automobiles, 110,497,000 trucks and 834,000 buses. There were 205,742,000 licensed drivers in 2007 and 7,093,000 motorcycle registrations. The average distance travelled by a passenger car in the year 2007 was 12,300 miles. There were 33,883 fatalities in road accidents in 2009 and 32,885 in 2010 (the lowest total since 1949).

Rail

Freight service is provided by nine major independent railroad companies and several hundred smaller operators. The largest companies are the Union Pacific Railroad and the BNSF Railway (formerly the Burlington Northern and Santa Fe Railway). Long-distance passenger trains are run by the National Railroad Passenger Corporation (Amtrak), which is federally assisted. Amtrak was set up in 1971 to maintain a basic network of long-distance passenger trains, and is responsible for almost all non-commuter services. In 2009 the operational Amtrak rail system measured 21,178 miles. Outside the major conurbations, there are almost no regular passenger services other than those of Amtrak, which carried 27.2m. passengers in fiscal year 2009. Passenger revenue for Amtrak in fiscal year 2009 was $1,814m.; revenue passenger miles (fiscal year 2008), 6,160m.

Civil Aviation

The busiest airport in 2008 was Atlanta (Hartsfield International), which handled 90,039,280 passengers. The second busiest was Chicago (O'Hare) with 69,353,876 passengers, followed by Los Angeles International, with 59,497,539 passenger enplanements. As well as being the three busiest airports in the USA for passenger traffic in 2008, they are also three of the six busiest in the world. The six busiest in the world in 2008 were Atlanta, Chicago O'Hare, London Heathrow, Tokyo Haneda, Paris Charles de Gaulle and Los Angeles. New York (John F. Kennedy) was the busiest airport in the USA for international passengers in 2008, with 22,029,000, ahead of Los Angeles International with 16,164,000.

There were 24 airports with more than 10m. enplanements in 2007. These were, in descending order: Atlanta (Hartsfield); Chicago (O'Hare); Dallas/Fort Worth; Los Angeles; Denver; Las Vegas (McCarran); Phoenix; Houston (George Bush Intercontinental); Detroit (Metropolitan-Wayne County); Minneapolis/St Paul; New York (John F. Kennedy); Newark International; Orlando International; Charlotte; Philadelphia; Seattle; San Francisco; Miami; Boston; New York (LaGuardia); Salt Lake City; Fort Lauderdale-Hollywood International; Washington, D.C.; Baltimore.

The leading airports in 2006 on the basis of aircraft departures completed were Atlanta, Hartsfield International (467,101); Chicago, O'Hare (441,231); Dallas/Fort Worth (334,254).

In 2008 the low-cost carrier Southwest Airlines carried the most scheduled passengers of any airline in the world with 101,921,000 (all on domestic flights), ahead of American Airlines, with 92,772,000 (around 77% on domestic flights), and Delta Air Lines, with 71,843,000 (around 83% on domestic flights). American Airlines carried the most international passengers of any US carrier, with 21,154,000 in 2008 (ranking it eighth in the world for international passengers carried). Delta Air Lines filed for bankruptcy in Sept. 2005, but emerged from bankruptcy protection in April 2007. AMR, the parent company for American Airlines, filed for bankruptcy in Nov. 2011. Delta Air Lines bought Northwest Airlines in Oct. 2008, in the process creating the world's largest airline. However, this was superseded following the merger of Continental Airlines and United Airlines in Oct. 2010. The two airlines are continuing to operate separately under the name United Continental Holdings, Inc.

In 2008 US flag carriers in scheduled service enplaned 741.4m. revenue passengers.

Shipping

At the end of 2007 the cargo-carrying US-owned fleet comprised 40,250 vessels, of which 39,695 were US-flag vessels. There were 38,936 US-flag tugs and barges for domestic coastwise, Great Lakes and inland waterway trade, 523 US-flag offshore supply vessels (which service offshore oil exploration and production) and 236 US-flag ocean and Great Lakes self-propelled vessels (10,000 DWT or greater) for US coastwise and international trade (of which 55 tankers, 76 containerships, 37 roll-on/roll-off carriers, 61 dry bulk carriers and seven general cargo carriers). Of the ocean-going fleet, 146 have coastwise trading privileges (Jones Act), which means that they were built or reconstructed in the USA or foreign-built but seized for violation of US law and registered under the US flag.

The busiest port is South Louisiana, which handled 212,581,000 tons of cargo in 2009. Other major ports are Houston (211,341,000 tons in 2009), New York-New Jersey (144,690,000 tons in 2009), Long Beach, Corpus Christi, New Orleans and Beaumont. South Louisiana handles the most domestic cargo but Houston the most foreign trade cargo.

Telecommunications

Regional private companies formed from the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. after its dissolution in 1995 ('Baby Bells') operate the telephone and electronic transmission services system at the national and local levels. Telegram services are still available through iTelegram and Globegram. In 2009 there were 141.0m. main telephone lines in operation (448.1 per 1,000 inhabitants), down from 182.93m. in 2003. There were 285.6m. cellphone subscribers in 2009 (907.8 per 1,000 persons), up from 160.6m. in 2003. In addition the proportion of households that only have cellphones has rapidly increased, to such an extent that by Dec. 2008 the number of cellphone-only households had surpassed landline-only households, with 20% of households being cellphone-only. The leading cellphone operators are Verizon Wireless (with more than 102m. subscribers), AT&T Mobility, Sprint Nextel and T-Mobile. In 2006 there were 240.5m. PCs (805.4 for every 1,000 persons). Internet users numbered 245.4m. in 2009, or 78.0% of the population. Internet commerce, or e-commerce, amounted to $3,333bn. in 2007, the highest in the world. In Dec. 2010 there were 53.5 wireless broadband subscribers per 100 inhabitants and only 27.7 fixed broadband subscribers per 100.

Justice

Legal controversies may be decided in two systems of courts: the federal courts, with jurisdiction confined to certain matters enumerated in Article III of the Constitution, and the state courts, with jurisdiction in all other proceedings. The federal courts have jurisdiction exclusive of the state courts in criminal prosecutions for the violation of federal statutes, in civil cases involving the government, in bankruptcy cases and in admiralty proceedings, and have jurisdiction concurrent with the state courts over suits between parties from different states, and certain suits involving questions of federal law.

The highest court is the Supreme Court of the US, which reviews cases from the lower federal courts and certain cases originating in state courts involving questions of federal law. It is the final arbiter of all questions involving federal statutes and the Constitution; and it has the power to invalidate any federal or state law or executive action which it finds repugnant to the Constitution. This court, consisting of nine justices appointed by the President who receive salaries of $213,900 a year (the Chief Justice, $223,500), meets from Oct. until June every year. For the term beginning Oct. 2006 it disposed of 8,923 cases, deciding 78 on their merits. In the remainder of cases it either summarily affirms lower court decisions or declines to review. A few suits, usually brought by state governments, originate in the Supreme Court, but issues of fact are mostly referred to a master.

The US courts of appeals number 13 (in 11 circuits composed of three or more states and one circuit for the District of Columbia and one Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit); the 179 circuit judges receive salaries of $184,500 a year. Any party to a suit in a lower federal court usually has a right of appeal to one of these courts. In addition, there are direct appeals to these courts from many federal administrative agencies. In the year ending 30 Sept. 2007, 58,410 appeals were filed in the courts of appeals, in addition to 1,406 in the US Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit.

The trial courts in the federal system are the US district courts, of which there are 94 in the 50 states, one in the District of Columbia and one each in the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the Territories of the Virgin Islands, Guam and the Northern Marianas. Each state has at least one US district court, and three states have four apiece. Each district court has from one to 28 judgeships. There are 674 US district judges ($174,000 a year), who received 257,507 civil cases in 2006–07.

In addition to these courts of general jurisdiction, there are special federal courts of limited jurisdiction. The US Court of Federal Claims (16 judges at $174,000 a year) decides claims for money damages against the federal government in a wide variety of matters; the Court of International Trade (13 judges at $174,000) determines controversies concerning the classification and valuation of imported merchandise.

The judges of all these courts are appointed by the President with the approval of the Senate; to assure their independence, they hold office during good behaviour and cannot have their salaries reduced. This does not apply to judges in the Territories, who hold their offices for a term of ten years or to judges of the US Court of Federal Claims. The judges may retire with full pay at the age of 70 years if they have served a period of ten years, or at 65 if they have 15 years of service, but they are subject to call for such judicial duties as they are willing to undertake.

In 2006–07, of the 257,507 civil cases filed in the district courts, 159,916 arose under various federal statutes (such as labour, social security, tax, patent, securities, antitrust and civil rights laws); 61,359 involved personal injury or property damage claims; 33,939 dealt with contracts; and 5,180 were actions concerning real property. In the year ending Sept. 2009, 1,402,816 cases were filed in the US Bankruptcy Courts (up 34.5% from 1,042,993 in fiscal year 2008 and the highest since fiscal year 2005), 1,344,095 of which involved individuals or non-businesses.

In 2000 the number of lawyers in the USA passed the 1m. mark, the equivalent to 363 per 100,000 people, reaching 1.2m. by 2008.

There were 68,413 criminal cases filed for the year ending Sept. 2007 of which 17,046 involved drugs. Among the 78,042 offenders convicted in 2005 in the district courts, 25,576 persons were charged with alleged infractions of drug laws, 16,872 with immigration offences, 11,259 with property offences, 8,834 with weapon offences, 5,823 with public order offences and 2,500 with violent offences. All other people convicted were charged with miscellaneous general offences.

Persons convicted of federal crimes may be fined, released on probation under the supervision of the probation officers of the federal courts, confined in prison, or confined in prison with a period of supervised release to follow, also under the supervision of probation officers of the federal courts. Federal prisoners are confined in 87 institutions incorporating various security levels that are operated by the Bureau of Prisons. On 30 June 2008 the total number of prisoners under the jurisdiction of Federal or State adult correctional authorities was 1,525,428. A record

2,310,984 inmates were held in Federal or State prisons or local jails in June 2008, giving a rate of 762 per 100,000 population (the highest of any country). Although the USA has less than 5% of the world's population it has around 24% of the world's prisoners.

The state courts have jurisdiction over all civil and criminal cases arising under state laws, but decisions of the state courts of last resort as to the validity of treaties or of laws of the USA, or on other questions arising under the Constitution, are subject to review by the Supreme Court of the US. The state court systems are generally similar to the federal system, to the extent that they generally have a number of trial courts and intermediate appellate courts, and a single court of last resort. The highest court in each state is usually called the Supreme Court or Court of Appeals with a Chief Justice and Associate Justices, usually elected but sometimes appointed by the Governor with the advice and consent of the State Senate or other advisory body; they usually hold office for a term of years, but in some instances for life or during good behaviour. The lowest tribunals are usually those of Justices of the Peace; many towns and cities have municipal and police courts, with power to commit for trial in criminal matters and to determine misdemeanours for violation of the municipal ordinances.

There were no executions from 1968 to 1976. The US Supreme Court had held the death penalty, as applied in general criminal statutes, to contravene the eighth and fourteenth amendments of the US constitution, as a cruel and unusual punishment when used so irregularly and rarely as to destroy its deterrent value. The death penalty was reinstated by the Supreme Court in 1976, but has not been authorized in Alaska, the District of Columbia, Hawaii, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, New Jersey, New York, North Dakota, Rhode Island, Vermont, West Virginia and Wisconsin. At 1 April 2011 there were 3,222 (including 61 women) prisoners under sentence of death. 104 people were sentenced to death in 2010. In 2011 there were 43 executions (a fall from a peak of 98 in 1999, though there were only 11 in 1988). From 1977–2011 there were 1,277 executions of which 477 were in Texas and 109 in Virginia. The death penalty for offenders under the age of 18 was abolished in March 2005. For the first time since 1963, there were two executions under federal jurisdiction in 2001. In Sept. 2003 the federal Court of Appeals in San Francisco overturned over 100 death sentences in Arizona, Idaho and Montana on the grounds that judges, not juries, had passed sentence, contravening a Supreme Court ruling of 2002.

There were 15,241 murders in 2009, the lowest total since 1969. The murder rate in 2009 was 5.0 per 100,000 persons, the lowest since 1964 (4.9 per 100,000) and down from 10.2 per 100,000 in 1980. 67% of all murders in 2009 were carried out with firearms.

Education

The adult literacy rate is at least 99%.

Elementary and secondary education is mainly a state responsibility. Each state and the District of Columbia has a system of free public schools, established by law, with courses covering 12 years plus kindergarten. There are three structural patterns in common use; the K8-4 plan, meaning kindergarten plus eight elementary grades followed by four high school grades; the K6-3-3 plan, or kindergarten plus six elementary grades followed by a three-year junior high school and a three-year senior high school; and the K5-3-4 plan, kindergarten plus five elementary grades followed by a three-year middle school and a four-year high school. All plans lead to high-school graduation, usually at age 17 or 18. Vocational education is an integral part of secondary education. Most states also have two-year colleges in which education is provided at a nominal cost. Each state has delegated a large degree of control of the educational programme to local school districts (numbering 13,809 in school year 2008–09), each with a board of education (usually three to nine members) selected locally and serving mostly without pay. The school policies of the local school districts must be in accord with the laws and the regulations of their state Departments of Education. While regulations differ from one jurisdiction to another, in general it may be said that school attendance is compulsory from age seven to 16.

'Charter schools' are legal entities outside the school boards administration. They retain the basics of public school education, but may offer unconventional curricula and hours of attendance. Founders may be parents, teachers, public bodies or commercial firms. Organization and conditions depend upon individual states' legislation. The first charter schools were set up in Minnesota in 1991. By 2008, 4,694 charter schools were operating in 40 states and Washington, D.C.

Since 1940 data have been tabulated using a definition of 'functionally illiterate', comprising those who had completed fewer than five years of elementary schooling; for persons 25 years of age or over this percentage was 1.4 in March 2009 (for the Black population as a whole it was 1.1%); it was 0.1% for Whites, 0.3% for Blacks and 2.6% for Hispanics in the age group 25 to 29. It was reported in March 2010 that 87.1% of all persons 25 years old and over had completed four years of high school or more, and that 29.5% had completed a bachelor's degree or more. In the age group 25 to 29, 88.8% had completed four years of high school or more, and 31.7% had completed a bachelor's degree or more. However, according to a study conducted in 2009 about a third of American fourth graders (aged 9–10) are unable to read at a basic level.

In the fall of 2009, 20.4m. students (12.7m. full-time and 11.7m. women) were enrolled in 4,495 colleges and universities; 3.2m. were first-time students. It is projected that in 2019 the student population will number 23.4m.

In 2007–08 expenditure for public elementary and secondary education totalled $596.6bn., comprising $506.8bn. for current operating expenses, $65.8bn. for capital outlay, $15.7bn. for interest on school debt and $8.3bn. for other expenses. The current expenditure per pupil in fall 2007 enrolment was $10,297.

In 2009–10 total expenditure on education came to 7.9% of GDP, of which 3.3% (about two-thirds private funding and a third public) was on tertiary education. Spending as a proportion of GDP on tertiary education (3.1% in 2007) is the highest in the world, although spending on non-tertiary education is only around the average for an industrialized country.

Estimated total expenditures for private elementary and secondary schools in 2009–10 were about $48bn. In 2009–10 college and university spending totalled about $461bn., of which about $289bn. was spent by institutions under public control. In 2009–10 the federal government contributed about 12% of total revenue for public institutions; state governments, 42%; student tuition and fees, 16%; and local sources, 30%. Federal support for vocational education in fiscal year 2010 amounted to about $1.9bn.

Summary of statistics of regular schools (public and private), teachers and pupils for 2008–09 (compiled by the US National Center for Education Statistics):

Schools by level	Number of schools	Teachers (in 1,000)	Enrolment (in 1,000)
Elementary and secondary schools:
Public	98,706	3,222	49,266
Private	33,740 <sup>1</sup>	455	5,969
Higher education:

Private	2,733	505	5,131

In the fall of 2008 there were 15.3 pupils per teacher in public schools in the USA and 13.1 pupils per teacher in private schools.

Most of the private elementary and secondary schools are affiliated with religious denominations. In 2007–08 there were 7,510 Catholic schools with 2,308,000 pupils and 147,000 teachers, and 15,400 schools of other religious affiliations with 2,283,000 pupils and 183,000 teachers.

During the school year 2007–08 high-school graduates numbered 3,314,000 (of whom 3m. were from public schools). Institutions of higher education conferred 1,601,000 bachelor's degrees during the year 2008–09; 787,000 associate's degrees; 657,000 master's degrees; 68,000 doctorates; and 92,000 first professional degrees. In the fiscal year 2010 the US Department of Education provided $32bn. in grants, loans, work-study programmes and other financial assistance to post-secondary students. An additional $109bn. was provided to students through private lending institutions supported by federal programmes.

During the academic year 2008–09, 671,616 foreign students were enrolled in American colleges and universities. The countries with the largest numbers of students in American colleges were: India, 103,260; China, 98,235; South Korea, 75,065; Canada, 29,697; Japan, 29,264; Taiwan, 28,065.

In 2008, 52,328 US students were enrolled in degree programmes in colleges and universities outside of the USA. The country attracting the most students from the USA was the United Kingdom, with 13,895. In addition to these students, well over 250,000 US college students attend short programmes in other countries every year.

School enrolment, Oct. 2009, embraced 94.1% of the children who were 5 and 6 years old; 98.2% of the children aged 7–13 years; 96.3% of those aged 14–17; 68.9% of those aged 18–19; and 38.7% of those aged 20–24.

The US National Center for Education Statistics estimates the total enrolment in the fall of 2010 at all of the country's elementary, secondary and higher educational institutions (public and private) at 75.9m. (68.7m. in the fall of 2000).

The number of teachers in public and private elementary and secondary schools in 2010 increased slightly to about 3,633,000. The estimated average annual salary of public school teachers was $55,350 in 2009–10.

Health

Admission to the practice of medicine (for both doctors of medicine and doctors of osteopathic medicine) is controlled in each state by examining boards directly representing the profession and acting with authority conferred by state law. Although there are a number of variations, the usual time now required to complete training is eight years beyond the secondary school with up to three or more years of additional graduate training. Certification as a specialist may require between three and five more years of graduate training plus experience in practice. In Dec. 2007 the estimated number of physicians (MD and DO—in all forms of practice) in the USA, Puerto Rico and outlying US areas was 941,300 (615,400 in 1990 and 467,700 in 1980).

Dental employment in 2008 numbered around 141,900.

Number of hospitals listed by the American Hospital Association in 2007 was 5,708, with 945,000 beds (equivalent to 3.1 beds per 1,000 population). Of the total, 213 hospitals with 46,000 beds were operated by the federal government; 1,111 with 131,000 beds by state and local government; 2,913 with 554,000 beds by non-profit organizations (including church groups); 873 with 116,000 beds were investor-owned. The categories of non-federal hospitals were (2007): 4,897 short-term general and special hospitals with 801,000 beds; 135 non-federal long-term general and special hospitals with 17,000 beds; 444 psychiatric hospitals with 79,000 beds; one tuberculosis hospital with fewer than 500 beds.

Patient admissions to community hospitals (2007) was 35,346,000; average daily census was 533,300. There were 603.3m. outpatient visits.

Personal health care costs in 2007 totalled $1,878,275m., distributed as follows: hospital care, $696,539m.; physicians and clinical services, $478,768m.; prescription drugs, $227,453m.; nursing-home care, $131,338m.; dental services, $95,171m.; home health care, $59,031m.; medical durables, $24,450m.; other personal health care, $165,525m. Total national health expenditure in 2007 amounted to $2,241.2bn. In 2008 the USA spent 16.0% of its GDP on health—nearly 5% more than any other leading industrialized nation. Public spending on health amounted to 46.5% of total health spending in 2008 (the lowest percentage of any major industrialized nation). In March 2010 President Obama secured the passage of a health care reform package that was expected to increase insurance coverage to a further 32m. citizens. The US Census Bureau had estimated in 2008 that 46.3m. people in America were uninsured.

In 2007, 19.8% of Americans (21.3% of males and 18.4% of females) were smokers, down from a peak of over 40% in 1964. In 2005–06, 34.3% of the adult population were considered obese (having a body mass index over 30), compared to 14.6% in the early 1970s.

Welfare

Social welfare legislation was chiefly the province of the various states until the adoption of the Social Security Act of 14 Aug. 1935. This as amended provides for a federal system of old-age, survivors and disability insurance; health insurance for the aged and disabled; supplemental security income for the aged, blind and disabled; federal state unemployment insurance; and federal grants to states for public assistance (medical assistance for the aged and aid to families with dependent children generally and for maternal and child health and child welfare services).

Legislation of Aug. 1996 began the transfer of aid administration back to the states, restricted the provision of aid to a maximum period of five years, and abolished benefits to immigrants (both legal and illegal) for the first five years of their residence in the USA. The Social Security Administration (formerly part of the Department of Health and Human Services but an independent agency since March 1995) has responsibility for a number of programmes covering retirement, disability, Medicare, Supplemental Security Income and survivors. The Administration for Children and Families (ACF), an agency of the Department of Health and Human Services, is responsible for federal programmes which promote the economic and social wellbeing of families, children, individuals and communities. ACF has federal responsibility for the following programmes: Temporary Assistance for Needy Families; low income energy assistance; Head Start; child care; child protective services; and a community services block grant. The ACF also has federal responsibility for social service programmes for children, youth, native Americans and persons with developmental disabilities.

The Administration on Aging (AoA), an agency in the US Department of Health and Human Services, is one of the nation's largest providers of home- and community-based care for older persons and their caregivers. Created in 1965 with the passage of the Older Americans Act (OAA), AoA is part of a federal, state, tribal and local partnership called the National Network on Aging. It serves about 9m. older persons and their caregivers, and consists of 56 State Units on Aging, 655 Area Agencies on Aging, 236 Tribal and Native organizations, two organizations that serve Native Hawaiians, 29,000 service providers and thousands of volunteers. These organizations provide assistance and services to older individuals and their families in urban, suburban, and rural areas throughout the USA.

The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (formerly the Health Care Financing Administration), an agency of the Health and Human Services Department, has federal responsibility for health insurance for the aged and disabled. Unemployment insurance is the responsibility of the Department of Labor.

In 2007 an average of 1,673,000 families (3,896,000 recipients) were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families. Total payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families were $26,922m. in 2007. The role of Child Support Enforcement is to ensure that children are supported by their parents. Money collected is for children who live with only one parent because of divorce, separation or birth outside marriage. In 2007, $24,855m. was collected on behalf of these children.

The Social Security Act provides for protection against the cost of medical care through Medicare, a two-part programme of health insurance for people age 65 and over, people of any age with permanent kidney failure, and for certain disabled people under age 65 who receive Social Security disability benefits. In 2008 payments totalling $230,240m. were made under the hospital portion of Medicare. During the same period, $224,835m. was paid under the voluntary medical insurance portion of Medicare. Medicare enrolment in July 2008 totalled 45.2m.

In 2009 about 52m. beneficiaries were on the rolls. Full retirement benefits are now payable at age 66, with reduced benefits available as early as age 62. Pensions may also be deferred up to age 70. The age for full retirement benefits is gradually increasing until it reaches 67 in 2027. Claimants must have at least 40 credits of insurance coverage. This equates to ten years of work. In 2008 the average actual retirement age for both males and females was 63.6 years. The maximum monthly payment for claimants retiring at the full retirement age in 2009 was $2,323. The minimum social security benefit was eliminated in Jan. 1982 for all workers becoming eligible for retirement or disability insurance benefits after Dec. 1981. A means-tested supplemental income benefit is available to over-65s and disabled and blind individuals with limited income and limited resources.

Medicaid is a jointly-funded, Federal-State health insurance programme for certain low-income and vulnerable people. It covered 57.8m. individuals in 2006 including children, the aged, blind, and/or disabled, and people who are eligible to receive federally-assisted income maintenance payments.

In Dec. 2007, 7.36m. persons were receiving Supplementary Security Income payments. 1,205,000 old-age persons received $5,301m. in benefits; 72,000 blind people received $419m.; and 6,083,000 disabled people received $35,485m. Payments, including supplemental amounts from various states, totalled $41,205m. in 2007.

In 2008 the food stamp programme helped 28,408,000 persons at a cost of $34,611m.; and 31.0m. persons received help from the national school lunch programme at a cost of $8,258m.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

There are 21 sites under American jurisdiction that appear on the UNESCO World Heritage List. They are (with year entered on list): Mesa Verde National Park, Colorado (1978); Yellowstone National Park, Wyoming/Idaho/Montana (1978); Everglades National Park, Florida (1979); Grand Canyon National Park, Arizona (1979); Independence Hall, Pennsylvania (1979); Redwood National and State Parks, California (1980); Mammoth Cave National Park, Kentucky (1981); Olympic National Park, Washington State (1981); Cahokia Mounds State Historic Site, Illinois (1982); Great Smoky Mountains National Park, North Carolina/Tennessee (1983); San Juan National Historic Site and La Fortaleza, Puerto Rico (1983); the Statue of Liberty, New York (1984); Yosemite National Park, California (1984); Monticello and the University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Virginia (1987); Chaco Culture National Historic Park, New Mexico (1987); Hawaii Volcanoes National Park, including Mauna Loa, Hawaii (1987); Pueblo de Taos, New Mexico (1992); Carlsbad Caverns National Park, New Mexico (1995); Papahānaumokuākea, Hawaii (2010).

Two UNESCO World Heritage sites fall under joint US and Canadian jurisdiction: Kluane/Wrangell-St Elias/Glacier Bay/

Tatshenshini-Alsek (1979, 1992 and 1994), parks in Alaska, the Yukon Territory and British Columbia; Waterton Glacier International Peace Park (1995), in Montana and Alberta.

Press

In 2008 there were 1,408 daily newspapers with a combined daily circulation of 48.6m., the fourth highest in the world behind India, China and Japan. There were 872 morning papers and 546 evening papers, plus 902 Sunday papers (circulation, 49.1m.). Unlike China and India, where circulation is rising, in the USA it has fallen since 1985, when daily circulation was 62.8m. The most widely read newspapers are USA Today (average daily circulation in the period April–Sept. 2008 of 2.3m.), followed by the Wall Street Journal (2.0m.) and the New York Times (1.0m.). According to research carried out by the Pew Research Centre, in 2008 for the first time more Americans obtained national and international news from the internet than from newspapers.

Total book sales in 2008 reached a record high of 561,580 (up from 266,322 in 2003), largely as a result of print on demand sales and reprints that totalled 271,851 (up from 21,936 in 2006). Of the record 289,729 traditional print books published in 2008, 53,058 were fiction, 29,825 children's books, 24,737 sociology and economics and 18,296 religion. US publishers' net sales revenue rose from $26.5bn. in 2008 to $27.1bn. in 2009 and $27.9bn. in 2010.

Tourism

In 2008 the USA received 57,949,000 foreign visitors (55,979,000 in 2007), of whom 18,922,000 were from Canada and 13,686,000 from Mexico. 22% of all tourists were from Europe. Only France received more tourists than the USA in 2008.

In 2007 visitors to the USA spent approximately $97.05bn. In 2007 the USA had the highest annual revenue from tourists of any country (Spain, which received the second most, had $58bn.). Expenditure by US travellers in foreign countries for 2007 was an estimated $76,354m.

Festivals

Independence Day is celebrated on 4 July and Thanksgiving on the fourth Thursday of Nov. There are major opera festivals at Cooperstown (Glimmerglass), New York State (July–Aug.); Santa Fe, New Mexico (June–Aug.); and Seattle, Washington State (Aug.). Among the many famous film festivals are the Sundance Film Festival in Jan. and the New York Film Festival in late Sept./early Oct. Leading rock and pop festivals include SXSW in Austin, Texas (March), Coachella in Palm Springs, California (April), Bonnaroo in Manchester, Tennessee (June), Summerfest in Milwaukee, Wisconsin (June–July) and Lollapalooza in Chicago, Illinois (Aug.).

Alabama

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The early European explorers were Spanish, but the first permanent European settlement was French, as part of French Louisiana after 1699. During the 17th and 18th centuries the British, Spanish and French all fought for control of the territory; it passed to Britain in 1763 and thence to the USA in 1783, except for a Spanish enclave on Mobile Bay, which lasted until 1813. Alabama was organized as a Territory in 1817 and was admitted to the Union as a state on 14 Dec. 1819.

The economy was then based on cotton, grown in white-owned plantations by black slave labour imported since 1719. Alabama seceded from the Union at the beginning of the Civil War (1861) and joined the Confederate States of America; its capital Montgomery became the Confederate capital. After the defeat of the Confederacy the state was readmitted to the Union in 1878. Attempts made during the reconstruction period to find a role for the newly freed black slaves—who made up about 50% of the population—largely failed, and when whites regained political control in the 1870s a strict policy of segregation came into force. At the same time Birmingham began to develop as an important centre of iron- and steel-making. Most of the state was still rural. In 1915 a boll-weevil epidemic attacked the cotton and forced diversification into other farm produce. More industries developed from the power schemes of the Tennessee Valley Authority in the 1930s. The black population remained mainly rural, poor and without political power, until the 1960s when confrontations on the issue of civil rights produced reforms.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Alabama is bounded in the north by Tennessee, east by Georgia, south by Florida and the Gulf of Mexico and west by Mississippi. Land area, 50,645 sq. miles (131,171 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 4,779,736, an increase of 7.5% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1930	1,700,844	944,834	465	105	2,646,248	51.3
			All others
1980	2,872,621	996,335	24,932		3,893,888	74.9
1990	2,975,797	1,020,705	44,085		4,040,587	79.6
2000	3,162,808	1,155,930	128,362		4,447,100	87.6
2010	3,275,394	1,251,311	253,031		4,779,736	94.4

Of the total population in 2010, 2,459,548 were female and 3,647,277 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 185,602, up from 75,830 in 2000 (an increase of 144.8%).

The large cities (2000 census) were: Birmingham, 242,820 (metropolitan area, 921,106); Montgomery (the capital), 201,568 (333,055); Mobile, 198,905 (540,258); Huntsville, 158,216 (342,376); Tuscaloosa, 77,906 (164,875).

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 64,546 (13.8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 47,712 (10.2). Infant deaths, 2006, 9.0 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 39,600 (8.6 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 22,100 (4.8).

CLIMATE

Birmingham, Jan. 46°F (7.8°C), July 80°F (26.7°C). Annual rainfall 54" (1,372 mm). Mobile, Jan. 52°F (11.1°C), July 82°F (27.8°C). Annual rainfall 62" (1,575 mm). Montgomery, Jan. 49°F (9.4°C), July 81°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 52" (1,321 mm). The growing season ranges from 190 days (north) to 270 days (south). Alabama belongs to the Gulf Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The current constitution dates from 1901; it has had 835 amendments (as at June 2010). The legislature consists of a Senate of 35 members and a House of Representatives of 105 members, all elected for four years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Alabama sends seven members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Richard Shelby (D. 1987–94; R. 1994–2017) and Jeff Sessions (R. 1997–2015).

Applicants for registration must take an oath of allegiance to the United States and fill out an application showing evidence that they meet State voter registration requirements.

Montgomery is the capital.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Alabama with 60.3% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Robert Bentley (R.), 2011–15 (salary: $120,935-80, but opted not to receive a salary).

Lieut.-Governor: Kay Ivey (R.), 2011–15 (varies considerably depending on expenses and whether or not the Legislature is in session).

Secretary of State: Beth Chapman (R.), 2011–15 ($85,247-76).

Government Website: <http://www.alabama.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2010) was $33,516.

Budget

In 2009 total state revenue was $21,400m. Total expenditure was $26,422m. (education, $10,562m.; public welfare, $5,452m.; hospitals, $1,782m.; highways, $1,630m.; health, $587m.) Outstanding debt in 2009, $8,156m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state was $154,124m. in 2010 (provisional), ranking Alabama 26th in the United States. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 2.0% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In 2009 production was 143.3bn. kWh, of which 55.6bn. kWh was from coal.

Oil and Gas

In 2008 Alabama produced 7.5m. bbls of crude petroleum; marketed production of natural gas totalled 258bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 1,675 sq. miles.

Minerals

Principal minerals, 2005–06 (in net 1,000 tons): limestone, 51,127; coal, 19,270; sand and gravel, 12,925. Value of non-fuel mineral production in 2006 was $1,360m.

Agriculture

The number of farms in 2009 was 48,500, covering 9.0m. acres; the average farm had 186 acres and was valued at $2,100 per acre (Jan. 2010).

Cash receipts from farm marketings, 2009: crops, $883m.; livestock and poultry products, $3,335m.; total, $4,218m. The net farm income in 2009 was $1,019m. Principal sources: broilers, cattle and calves, eggs, hogs, dairy products, greenhouse and nursery products, peanuts, soybeans, cotton and vegetables. In 2009 broilers accounted for the largest percentage of cash receipts from farm marketings; cattle and calves were second; and eggs third.

Forestry

Alabama had 22.69m. acres of forested land in 2007 of which 746,000 acres were national forest. Harvest volumes in 2004, 334.15m. cu. ft pine saw timber, 86.81m. cu. ft hardwood saw timber, 839.11m. cu. ft pulp wood and 8.83m. cu. ft poles. Total harvest, 2004, was 1,268.90m. cu. ft. Georgia is the only state with a larger annual harvest. The estimated delivered timber value of forest products in 2004 was $1.6bn.

Fisheries

Alabama had aquaculture sales worth $102.8m. in 2005, ranking it third behind Mississippi and Arkansas.

INDUSTRY

In 2006 the state's 4,901 manufacturing establishments had 291,000 employees, earning $11,028m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2006 was $40,334m. Alabama is both an industrial and service-oriented state. The chief industries are lumber and wood products, food and kindred products, textiles and apparel, non-electrical machinery, transportation equipment and primary metals.

Labour

In 2007, 2,006,000 were employed in non-agricultural sectors, of whom 396,000 were in trade, transportation and utilities; 376,000 in government; 297,000 in manufacturing; 221,000 in professional and business services; 209,000 in education and health services. In Dec. 2010 the unemployment rate was 9.1%.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

Total road length in 2007 was 97,323 miles, comprising 75,299 miles of rural road and 22,024 miles of urban road. Registered motor vehicles numbered 4,677,771.

Rail

In 2009 there were 3,271 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). There were 24 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Alabama in 2009 totalled 30.0m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 45.3m. tons.

Civil Aviation

In 2005 there were 97 public-use airports. There were 2,795,014 passenger enplanements in 2007.

Shipping

There are 1,600 miles of navigable inland water and 50 miles of Gulf Coast. The only deep-water port is Mobile, with a large ocean-going trade; total tonnage (2009), 52.2m. tons. The Alabama State Docks also operates a system of ten inland docks; there are several privately run inland docks.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

In Dec. 2008 the prison population totalled 30,508. Following the reinstatement of the death penalty by the US Supreme Court in 1976 death sentences have been awarded since 1983. There were six executions in 2011 (five in 2010).

In 41 counties the sale of alcoholic beverages is permitted, and in 26 counties it is prohibited; but it is permitted in eight cities within those 26 counties. Draught beverages are permitted in 22 counties.

Education

In 2007–08 there were 1,605 public elementary and secondary schools with 50,420 teachers and 744,865 students enrolled in grades K–12. Average public school teacher salary in 2008–09 was $48,906. Spending per student in fiscal year 2008 was $9,197.

As of fall 2005 there were 66 degree-granting institutions (39 public and 27 private) with 256,389 enrolled students. Enrolment for four-year courses at Auburn University totalled 23,333, the University of Alabama at Tuscaloosa 21,793, University of Alabama at Birmingham 16,572 and Troy University 14,957.

Health

In 2007 there were 109 community hospitals with 15,700 beds. A total of 696,000 patients were admitted during the year.

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2006 totalled 765,618. In fiscal year 2006 a total of 844,988 people in Alabama received Medicaid. In

Dec. 2008 there were 952,511 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 43,347 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2008.

RELIGION

Membership in selected religious bodies (in 2000): Southern Baptist Convention (1,380,121), United Methodist Church (327,734), Roman Catholic (150,647), Churches of Christ (119,049), Church of God (68,766), Assemblies of God (59,970). There are also large numbers of Black Baptists and members of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church.

CULTURE*Tourism

In 2004, 61,000 overseas visitors (excluding those from Mexico and Canada) visited Alabama.

Alaska

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Discovered in 1741 by Vitus Bering, Alaska's first settlement, on Kodiak Island, was in 1784. The area known as Russian America with its capital (1806) at Sitka was ruled by a Russo-American fur company and vaguely claimed as a Russian colony. Alaska was purchased by the United States from Russia under the treaty of 30 March 1867 for $7.2m. Settlement was boosted by gold workers in the 1880s. In 1884 Alaska became a 'district' governed by the code of the state of Oregon. By Act of Congress approved 24 Aug. 1912 Alaska became an incorporated Territory; its first legislature in 1913 granted votes to women, seven years in advance of the Constitutional Amendment.

During the Second World War the Federal government acquired large areas for defence purposes and for the construction of the strategic Alaska Highway. In the 1950s oil was found. Alaska became the 49th state of the Union on 3 Jan. 1959. In the 1970s new oilfields were discovered and the Trans-Alaska pipeline was opened in 1977. The state obtained most of its income from petroleum by 1985.

Questions of land-use predominate; there are large areas with valuable mineral resources, other large areas held for the native peoples and some still held by the Federal government. The population increased by over 400% between 1940 and 1980.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Alaska is bounded north by the Beaufort Sea, west and south by the Pacific and east by Canada. The total area is 665,384 sq. miles (1,723,337 sq. km), making it the largest state of the USA; 570,641 sq. miles (1,477,953 sq. km) are land and 94,743 sq. miles (245,383 sq. km) are water. It is also the least densely populated state. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 710,231, an increase of 13.3% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	All others	Total	Per sq. mile
1950	92,808	—	35,835	128,643	0.23
1980	309,728	13,643	78,480	401,851	1.00
1990	415,492	22,451	112,100	550,043	1.00
2000	434,534	21,787	170,611	626,932	1.10
2010	473,576	23,263	213,392	710,231	1.24

Of the total population in 2010, 369,628 were male and 522,853 were 18 years old or older. Alaska's Hispanic population was 39,249 in 2010, up from 25,852 in 2000. As of 2010, 14.8% of Alaska's population was identified as Alaska Native or American Indian.

The largest county equivalent and city is in the borough of Anchorage, which had a 2000 census population of 260,283. Census populations of the other 14 county equivalents, 2000: Fairbanks North Star, 82,840; Matanuska-Susitna, 59,322; Kenai Peninsula, 49,691; Juneau (the capital), 30,711; Bethel, 16,006; Ketchikan Gateway, 14,070; Kodiak Island, 13,913; Valdez-Cordova, 10,195; Nome, 9,196; Sitka, 8,835; North Slope, 7,385; Northwest Arctic, 7,208; Wade Hampton, 7,028; Wrangell-Petersburg, 6,684. Largest incorporated places in 2000 were: Anchorage, 260,683; Juneau, 30,711; Fairbanks, 30,224; Sitka, 8,335; Ketchikan, 7,922; Kenai, 6,942; Kodiak, 6,334; Bethel, 5,471; Wasilla, 5,469; Barrow, 4,581.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 11,442 (16.7 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 3,483 (5.1—the lowest rate in any US state). Infant mortality, 2006, 6.9 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 5,300 (7.8 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 3,000 (4.4).

CLIMATE

Anchorage, Jan. 12°F (−11.1°C), July 57°F (13.9°C). Annual rainfall 15" (371 mm). Fairbanks, Jan. −11°F (−23.9°C), July 60°F (15.6°C). Annual rainfall 12" (300 mm). Sitka, Jan. 33°F (0.6°C), July 55°F (12.8°C). Annual rainfall 87" (2,175 mm). Alaska belongs to the Pacific Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The state has the right to select 103.55m. acres of vacant and unappropriated public lands in order to establish 'a tax basis'; it can open these lands to prospectors for minerals, and the state is to derive the principal advantage in all gains resulting from the discovery of minerals. In addition, certain federally administered lands reserved for conservation of fisheries and wild life have been transferred to the state. Special provision is made for federal control of land for defence in areas of high strategic importance.

The constitution of Alaska was adopted by public vote, 24 April 1956. The state legislature consists of a Senate of 20 members (elected for four years) and a House of Representatives of 40 members (elected for two years).

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Alaska sends one member to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Lisa Murkowski (R. 2002–17) and Mark Begich (D. 2009–15). The franchise may be exercised by all citizens over 18.

The capital is Juneau.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Alaska with 59.4% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Sean R. Parnell (R.), Dec. 2010–Dec. 2014 (salary: $145,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Mead Treadwell (R.), Dec. 2010–Dec. 2014 ($115,000).

Government Website: <http://www.alaska.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2010) was $44,205.

Budget

In 2009 total state revenue was $8,868m. Total expenditure was $11,338m. (education, $2,200m.; public welfare, $1,583m.; highways, $1,339m.; government administration, $591m.; health, $322m.) Outstanding debt in 2009, $6,590m.

Performance

2010 Gross Domestic Product by state was $45,046m. (provisional), ranking Alaska 44th in the United States. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 1.9% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Oil and Gas

Alaska ranks second behind Texas among the leading oil producers in the USA, with 14% of the national total. Commercial production of crude petroleum began in 1959 and by 1961 had become the most important mineral by value. Production in 2008 totalled 250m. bbls (value in 2007, $16,788m.). Proven reserves in 2006 were 3,879m. bbls. Oil comes mainly from Prudhoe Bay, the Kuparuk River field and several Cook Inlet fields. Oil from the Prudhoe Bay Arctic field is now carried by the Trans-Alaska pipeline to Prince William Sound on the south coast, where there is a tanker terminal at Valdez.

Natural gas marketed production, 2008, 398bn. cu. ft, with (2006) reserves of 10,245bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 91,316 sq. miles.

Minerals

Estimated value of production, 2003, in $1,000: zinc, 486,916; gold, 191,986; industrial minerals (including sand, gravel and building stone), 100,000; silver, 90,773; lead, 70,094; coal, 37,975; peat, 175. Total 2003 value, $980.3m. Value of non-fuel mineral production in 2006 was $3,010m.

Agriculture

In some parts of the state the climate during the brief spring and summer (about 100 days in major areas and 152 days in the southeastern coastal area) is suitable for agricultural operations, thanks to the long hours of sunlight, but Alaska is a food-importing area. In 2007 there were 686 farms covering a total of 882,000 acres. The average farm had 1,285 acres in 2007 and was valued at $391 per acre.

Farm income, 2006: crops, $25m.; livestock and products, $39m. The net farm income in 2006 was $20m. Principal sources: greenhouse products, hay, dairy products and potatoes.

In 2007 there were 14,823 cattle and calves, 522 sheep and lambs, 757 hogs and pigs, and 3,600 laying hens.

Forestry

Of the 126.87m. forested acres of Alaska (the highest acreage of any state), 10.46m. acres are national forest land. The interior forest covers 115m. acres; more than 13m. acres are considered commercial forest, of which 3.4m. acres are in designated parks or wilderness and unavailable for harvest. The coastal rain forests provide the bulk of commercial timber volume; of their 13.6m. acres, 7.6m. acres support commercial stands, of which 1.9m. acres are in parks or wilderness and unavailable for harvest. In 2006 timber removals were 66m. cu. ft (59m. cu. ft softwoods and 7m. cu. ft hardwoods).

In 2008 there were 704 designated wilderness areas throughout the USA, covering a total of 107.4m. acres (43.5m. ha.). More than 53% of the system is in Alaska (57.4m. acres or 23.2m. ha.).

Fisheries

In 2009 commercial fishing landed 4,064m. lb of fish and shellfish at a value of $1.3bn. Alaska is by the far the most important state for fishery landings, accounting for 50.6% of the total by weight in 2009. The most important species are salmon, crab, herring, halibut and pollock.

INDUSTRY

In 2006 the state's 515 manufacturing establishments had 10,000 employees, earning $423m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2006 was $1,659m. The largest manufacturing sectors are wood processing, seafood products and printing and publishing.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2007: 318,000. Employees by branch, 2007: government, 82,000; trade, transportation and utilities, 64,000; education and health services, 37,000; leisure and hospitality, 32,000; professional and business services, 25,000. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 7.9%.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

Alaska's highway and road system, 2007, totalled 14,438 miles comprising 2,357 miles of urban road and 12,081 miles of rural road. Registered motor vehicles numbered 680,141.

The Alaska Highway extends 1,523 miles from Dawson Creek, British Columbia, to Fairbanks, Alaska. It was built by the US Army in 1942, at a cost of $138m. The greater portion of it, because it lies in Canada, is maintained by Canada.

Rail

There is a railroad from Skagway to the town of Whitehorse, the White Pass and Yukon route, in the Canadian Yukon region (this service operates seasonally, although only the section between Skagway and Carcross is in service). The government-owned Alaska Railroad runs from Seward to Fairbanks. This is a freight service with only occasional passenger use. In 2009 there were 506 miles of freight railroad.

Civil Aviation

Alaska's largest international airports are Anchorage and Fairbanks. In 2008 Alaska Airlines carried 16.8m. passengers and flew to 59 destinations. There were 4,560,483 passenger enplanements statewide in 2007. General aviation aircraft in the state per 1,000 population is about ten times the US average.

Shipping

Regular shipping services to and from the USA are furnished by two steamship and several barge lines operating out of Seattle and other Pacific coast ports. A Canadian company also furnishes a regular service from Vancouver, BC. Anchorage is the main port.

A 1,435 nautical-mile ferry system for motor cars and passengers (the 'Alaska Marine Highway') operates from Bellingham, Washington and Prince Rupert (British Columbia) to Juneau, Haines (for access to the Alaska Highway) and Skagway. A second system extends throughout the south-central region of Alaska linking the Cook Inlet area with Kodiak Island and Prince William Sound.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

The death penalty was abolished in Alaska in 1957. In Dec. 2008 the jail and prison population totalled 5,014.

Education

In 2007–08 there were 501 elementary and secondary schools with 131,029 pupils and 7,613 teachers; total expenditure on public elementary and secondary education in 2006–07 was $1,940m. Average teacher salary in 2008–09 was $58,916.

There are seven degree-granting institutions (five public and two private). The University of Alaska (founded in 1922) had 16,412 students at fall 2005 and comprised eight teaching units at the main campus in Anchorage.

Health

In 2007 there were 22 community hospitals with 1,600 beds. A total of 57,000 patients were admitted during the year.

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2006 totalled 53,897. In fiscal year 2006 a total of 120,508 people in Alaska received Medicaid. In Dec. 2008 there were 71,145 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 7,546 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2008.

RELIGION

Many religions are represented, including Roman Catholic, Southern Baptist, Mormon, Lutheran and other denominations.

CULTURE*Tourism

About 2.7m. people visited the state in 2003–04.

Arizona*KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Spaniards looking for sources of gold or silver entered Arizona in the 16th century finding there American natives, including Tohono O'odham, Navajo, Hopi and Apache. The first Spanish Catholic mission was founded in the early 1690s by Father Eusebio Kino. Settlements were made in 1752 and a Spanish army headquarters was set up at Tucson in 1776. The area was governed by Mexico after the collapse of Spanish colonial power. Mexico ceded it to the USA in the Treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo after the Mexican-American war (1848). Arizona was then part of New Mexico; the Gadsden Purchase (of land south of the Gila River) was added to it in 1853. The whole was organized as the Arizona Territory on 24 Feb. 1863.

Miners and ranchers began settling in the 1850s. Conflicts between Indian and immigrant populations intensified when troops were withdrawn to serve in the Civil War. The Navajo surrendered in 1865, but the Apache continued to fight, under Geronimo and other leaders, until 1886. Arizona was admitted to the Union as the 48th state in 1912.

Large areas of the state have been retained as Indian reservations and as parks to protect the exceptional desert and mountain landscape. In recent years this landscape and the Indian traditions have been used to attract tourists.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Arizona is bounded north by Utah, east by New Mexico, south by Mexico, west by California and Nevada. Land area, 113,594 sq. miles (294,207 sq. km). Of the total area in 2009, 28% was Indian Reservation, 18% was in individual or corporate ownership, 17% was held by the US Bureau of Land Management, 15% by the US Forest Service, 13% by the State and 10% by others. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 6,392,017, an increase of 24.6% since 2000. The rate of Arizona's population increase during the 2000s was the second fastest in the USA (behind Nevada), at 24.6%. Population in five census years:

	American Indian/Alaska					Total	Per sq. mile
	White	Black	Native	Chinese	Japanese
1910	171,468	2,009	29,201	1,305	371	204,354	1.8

1980	2,260,288	74,159	162,854	383,768		2,718,215	23.9
1990	2,963,186	110,524	203,527	387,991		3,665,228	32.3
2000	3,873,611	158,873	255,879	842,269		5,130,632	45.2
2010	4,667,121	259,008	296,529	1,169,359		6,392,017	56.3

Of the total population in 2010, 3,216,194 were female and 4,763,003 were 18 years old or older. Arizona's Hispanic population was 1,895,149 in 2010 (29.6%) up from 1,295,617 in 2000 (an increase of 46.3%).

In 2008 (unless otherwise indicated) the estimated population of Phoenix (the capital; 2009) was 1,593,660; Tucson (2009), 543,907; Mesa, 487,194; Chandler, 239,019; Glendale, 238,251; Scottsdale, 222,086; Gilbert, 179,857; Peoria, 168,341; Tempe, 165,593; Yuma, 106,822. The Phoenix–Mesa metropolitan area had a 2000 census population of 3,251,876.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 99,442 (15.3 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 45,610 (7.0). Infant mortality, 2006, 6.4 per 1,000 live births. 2006 marriages, 39,000 (6.3); divorces and annulments, 24,300 (3.9).

CLIMATE

Phoenix, Jan. 53.6°F (12°C), July 93.5°F (34°C). Annual rainfall 7.66" (194 mm). Yuma, Jan. 56.5°F (13.6°C), July 93.7°F (34.3°C). Annual rainfall 3.17" (80 mm). Flagstaff, Jan. 28.7°F (−1.8°C), July 66.3°F (19.1°C). Annual rainfall 22.8" (579 mm). Arizona belongs to the Mountain States climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The state constitution (1911, with 146 amendments) placed the government under direct control of the people through the initiative, referendum and the recall provisions. The state Senate consists of 30 members, and the House of Representatives consists of 60, all elected for two years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Arizona sends eight members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by John McCain (R. 1987–2017) and Jon Kyl (R. 1995–2013).

The state capital is Phoenix. The state is divided into 15 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Arizona with 53.6% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Janice K. Brewer (R.), 2011–15 (salary: $95,000).

Secretary of State: Ken Bennett (R.), 2011–15 ($70,000).

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2010) was $34,553.

Budget

In 2009 total state revenue was $23,962m. Total expenditure was $31,517m. (education, $8,859m.; public welfare, $8,770m.; highways, $2,309m.; health, $1,728m.; correction, $1,135m.) Outstanding debt in 2009, $12,325m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state was $228,486m. in 2010 (provisional), ranking Arizona 20th in the United States. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 0.7% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Primary energy sources are coal (35.2%), nuclear (24.5%), gas (19.5%) and hydroelectric (18.9%).

Electricity

In 2009 production was 112.0bn. kWh, of which 39.7bn. kWh was from coal.

Oil and Gas

In 2008 oil production totalled 52,000 bbls; marketed production of natural gas totalled 523m. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 364 sq. miles.

Minerals

The mining industry historically has been and continues to be a significant part of the economy. By value the most important mineral produced is copper. Production in 2007 was 731,000 tonnes. Most of the state's silver and gold are recovered from copper ore. Other minerals include sand and gravel, molybdenum, coal and gemstones. Value of non-fuel mineral production in 2007 was $7,260m.

Agriculture

Arizona, despite its dry climate, is well suited for agriculture along the water-courses and where irrigation is practised on a large scale from great reservoirs constructed by the USA as well as by the state government and private interests. Irrigated area in 2007 was 876,158 acres. The wide pasture lands are favourable for the rearing of cattle and sheep, but numbers are either stationary or declining compared with 1920.

In 2007 Arizona contained 15,637 farms and ranches and the total farm and pastoral area was 26.1m. acres; in 2007 there were 1,205,425 acres of crop land. In 2007 the average farm was 1,670 acres (the fifth largest average size in the USA) and was valued at $748 per acre. Farming is highly commercialized and mechanized and concentrated largely on cotton picked by machines.

Area under cotton in 2009: upland cotton, 145,000 acres (440,000 bales harvested); American Pima cotton, 1,700 acres (4,000 bales harvested).

In 2009 the cash receipts from crops were $1,766m., and from livestock and products $1,178m. The net farm income in 2009 was $203m. Most important cereals are wheat, corn and barley; most important crops include lettuce, cotton, citrus fruit, broccoli, spinach, cauliflower, melons, onions, potatoes and carrots. In Dec. 2009 there were 930,000 cattle, 167,000 hogs, 160,000 sheep and 43,000 goats.

Forestry

The state had a forested area of 18,671,000 acres in 2007, of which 7,663,000 acres were national forest.

INDUSTRY

In 2006 the state's 4,971 manufacturing establishments had 179,000 employees, earning $8,512m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2006 was $27,172m.

Labour

In 2007 total non-agricultural employment was 2,666,000. Employees by branch, 2007 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 525; government, 423; professional and business services, 402; education and health services, 304; leisure and hospitality, 273. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 9.6%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 60,593 miles of roads comprising 22,918 miles of urban road and 37,675 miles of rural road. There were 4,372,035 registered vehicles.

Rail

In 2009 there were 1,679 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). Rail traffic originating in Arizona in 2009 totalled 2.8m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 24.7m. tons.

Civil Aviation

In 2005 there were 6,487 registered aircraft and 323 landing facilities of which 217 were airports (including 81 for public use) and 106 were heliports. There were 23,330,939 passenger enplanements statewide in 2007.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

A 'right-to-work' amendment to the constitution, adopted 5 Nov. 1946, makes illegal any concessions to trade-union demands for a 'closed shop'.

In Dec. 2008 the prison population totalled 39,589. Chain gangs were reintroduced into prisons in 1995. The death penalty is authorized. There were four executions in 2011 (one in 2010).

Education

School attendance is compulsory between the ages of six and 16. There were 2,135 public elementary and secondary schools in 2007–08 of which 457 were charter schools. Public school teachers numbered 54,032 in fall 2007; K-12 enrolment totalled 1,087,447 students. There were 64,910 students enrolled at 360 private schools with 4,220 teachers in fall 2007. In 2006–07 the total expenditure on public elementary and secondary education was $9,539m. The state maintains three universities: the University of Arizona (Tucson) with 36,337 students in 2006–07; Northern Arizona University (Flagstaff) with 20,562 in 2006–07; Arizona State University (four campuses) with 63,278 in 2005–06.

Health

In 2007 the state had 66 community hospitals with 12,200 beds. A total of 675,000 patients were admitted during the year. In 2005 there were more than 17,000 licensed physicians, 4,005 dentists and 46,681 registered nurses.

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2006 totalled 805,398. In fiscal year 2006 a total of 1,018,666 people in Arizona received Medicaid. Old-age assistance (maximum depending on the programme) is given to needy citizens 65 years of age or older through the federal supplemental security income (SSI) programme. In Dec. 2008 SSI payments went to 13,807 aged, and 89,436 disabled and blind (average of $487.57 each). In Dec. 2008 there were 986,539 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 82,639 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2008.

RELIGION

The leading religious bodies are Roman Catholics and Latter-day Saints (Mormons); others include United Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists, Lutherans, Episcopalians, Eastern Orthodox, Jews and Muslims.

CULTURE

Tourism

In 2004 Arizona had 28.4m. visitors (27.8m. domestic visitors and 0.6m. overseas visitors) and 434,635 tourism-related jobs. In 2004 domestic visitors spent $13.07bn.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In the 16th and 17th centuries French and Spanish explorers encountered tribes of Chaddo, Osage and Quapaw. The first European settlement was French, at Arkansas Post in 1686, and the area became part of French Louisiana. The USA bought Arkansas from France as part of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803; it was organized as a Territory in 1819 and entered the Union on 15 June 1836 as the 25th state.

The eastern plains by the Mississippi were settled by white plantation-owners who grew cotton with black slave labour. The rest of the state attracted a scattered population of small farmers. The plantations were the centre of political power. Arkansas seceded from the Union in 1861 and joined the Confederate States of America. At that time the slave population was about 25% of the total.

In 1868 the state was readmitted to the Union. Attempts to integrate the black population into state life achieved little, and a policy of segregation was rigidly adhered to until the 1950s. In 1957 federal authorities ordered that high school segregation must end. The state governor called on the state militia to prevent desegregation; there was rioting, and federal troops entered Little Rock, the capital, to restore order. It was another ten years before school segregation finally ended.

The main industrial development followed the discovery of large reserves of bauxite.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Arkansas is bounded north by Missouri, east by Tennessee and Mississippi, south by Louisiana, southwest by Texas and west by Oklahoma. Land area, 52,035 sq. miles (134,771 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,915,918, an increase of 9.1% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,131,026	442,891	460	472	1,574,449	30.0

2000	2,138,598	418,950		115,852	2,673,400	51.3
2010	2,245,229	449,895		220,794	2,915,918	56.0

Of the total population in 2010, 1,484,281 were female and 2,204,443 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population of Arkansas was 186,050, up from 86,866 in 2000, an increase of 114.2%.

Little Rock (capital) had a population of 183,183 in 2000; Fort Smith, 80,268; North Little Rock, 60,433; Fayetteville, 58,047; Jonesboro, 55,515; Pine Bluff, 55,085; Springdale, 45,798; Conway, 43,167. The population of the largest metropolitan statistical areas in 2000 was: Little Rock–North Little Rock, 583,845; Fayetteville–Springdale–Rogers, 311,121; Fort Smith, 207,290; Texarkana, 129,749; Pine Bluff, 84,278.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, were 40,669 (14.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 29,310 (10.3). Infant mortality, 2006, 8.5 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 34,300 (12.2 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 16,200 (5.7).

CLIMATE

Little Rock, Jan. 39-9°F, July 84°F. Annual rainfall 52.4". Arkansas belongs to the Gulf Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 35 members elected for four years, partially renewed every two years, and a House of Representatives of 100 members elected for two years. The sessions are biennial and usually limited to 60 days. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Arkansas sends four members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Mark Pryor (D. 2003–15) and John Boozman (R. 2011–17).

The state is divided into 75 counties; the capital is Little Rock.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Arkansas with 58.7% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Mike Beebe (D.), 2011–15 (salary: $86,890).

California

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

There were many small Indian tribes, but no central power, when the area was discovered in 1542 by the Spanish navigator Juan Cabrillo. The Spaniards did not begin to establish missions until the 18th century, when the Franciscan friar Junipero Serra settled at San Diego in 1769. The missions became farming and ranching villages with large Indian populations. When the Spanish empire collapsed in 1821, the area was governed from newly independent Mexico.

The first wagon-train of American settlers arrived from Missouri in 1841. In 1846, during the war between Mexico and the USA, Americans in California proclaimed it to be part of the USA. The territory was ceded by Mexico on 2 Feb. 1848 and became the 31st state of the Union on 9 Sept. 1850.

Gold was discovered in 1848–49 and there was an immediate influx of population. The state remained isolated, however, until the development of railways in the 1860s. From then on the population doubled on average every 20 years. The sunny climate attracted fruit-growers, market-gardeners and wine producers. In the early 20th century the bright lights and cheap labour attracted film-makers to Hollywood, Los Angeles.

Southern California remained mainly agricultural with an Indian or Spanish-speaking labour force until after the Second World War. Now more than 90% of the population is urban, with the manufacturing emphasis on hi-technology equipment, much of it for the aerospace, computer and office equipment industries.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Land area, 155,779 sq. miles (403,466 sq. km). California is the third largest US state behind Alaska and Texas. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 37,253,956, an increase of 10.0% since 2000. The growth rate reflects continued high though somewhat reduced natural increase (excess of births over deaths) as well as substantial net immigration. California's population is 12.1% of the total US population.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	Japanese	Chinese	Total (incl. all others)	Per sq. mile
1910	2,259,672	21,645	41,356	36,248	2,377,549	15.2
1960	14,455,230	883,861	157,317	95,600	15,717,204	100.8
	White	Black	Asian/other	Hispanic	Total	Per sq. mile
1990	20,524,327	2,208,801	7,026,893	7,687,938	29,760,021	190.8
2000	20,170,059	2,263,882	11,437,707	10,966,556	33,871,648	217.2
2010	21,453,934	2,299,072	13,500,950	14,013,719	37,253,956	239.1

Of the total population in 2010, 18,736,126 were female and 27,958,916 were 18 years old or older.

In addition to having the highest population of any state in the USA, California has the largest Hispanic population of any state in terms of numbers and the third largest in terms of percentage of population. In 2010 there were 14,013,719 Hispanics living in California (37.6% of the overall population), up from 10,966,556 in 2000, the largest numeric rise of any state over the same period. By 2020 Hispanics are projected to form a majority.

The 50 largest cities with 2010 population estimates are:

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2009, 526,774 (13.7 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008, 234,072 (6.1). Marriages, 2009, 213,920. Infant deaths, 2008, 5.1 per 1,000 live births. California was the second state after Massachusetts to allow same-sex marriage when it became legal in June 2008, but the ruling was nullified when 52.5% of votes cast in a referendum held on 4 Nov. 2008 were in favour of a ban.

CLIMATE

Los Angeles, Jan. 58°F (14.4°C), July 74°F (23.3°C). Annual rainfall 15" (381 mm). Sacramento, Jan. 45°F (7.2°C), July 76°F (24.4°C). Annual rainfall 18" (457 mm). San Diego, Jan. 57°F (13.9°C), July 71°F (21.7°C). Annual rainfall 10" (259 mm). San Francisco, Jan. 51°F (10.6°C), July 59°F (15°C). Annual rainfall 20" (508 mm). Death Valley, Jan. 52°F (11°C), July 100°F (38°C). Annual rainfall 1.6" (40 mm). California belongs to the Pacific Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution became effective from 4 July 1879; it has had numerous amendments since 1962. The Senate is composed of 40 members elected for four years—half being elected every two years—and the Assembly, of 80 members, elected for two years. Two-year regular sessions convene in Dec. of each even numbered year. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, California sends 53 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Dianne Feinstein (D. 1993–2013) and Barbara Boxer (D. 1993–2017).

The capital is Sacramento. The state is divided into 58 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won California with 61.0% of the vote (John Kerry won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Jerry Brown (D.), 2011–15 (salary: $212,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Gavin Newsom (D.), 2011–15 ($136,000).

Secretary of State: Debra Bowen (D.), 2011–15 ($159,132).

Attorney General: Kamala D. Harris (D.), 2011–15 ($184,301).

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2010) was $42,578.

Budget

For the year ending 30 June 2010, total state revenues were $110.0bn. Total expenditures were $117.0bn. (education, $48.6bn.; health and human services, $31.6bn.; corrections and rehabilitation, $8.1bn.) Debt outstanding (2010) $79.8bn.

Performance

California's economy, the largest among the 50 states and one of the largest in the world, has major components in high technology, trade, entertainment, agriculture, manufacturing, tourism, construction and services. California is home to leading innovators and entrepreneurs and to firms like Apple, Cisco and Intel in technology; eBay, Facebook, Google and Yahoo in pioneering the use of the Internet; Amgen and Genentech in biotech; and DreamWorks and Pixar in combining technology and entertainment. California experienced a severe economic recession that began at the end of 2007, from which the state is still slowly recovering. The principal cause of the recession was a financial crisis instigated by risky financial activity that led to the bursting of the housing bubble.

If California were a country in its own right it would be the world's ninth largest economy, after the USA, China, Japan, Germany, France, the United Kingdom, Brazil and Italy. 2010 Gross Domestic Product by state was $1,731,848m., the highest in the United States and representing more than 13% of the USA's total GDP. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 1.8% (provisional). Taxable sales in 2009 totalled $454,721m.

Banking and Finance

In 2007 there were 10,461 establishments of depository institutions including 7,386 commercial banks, 1,580 credit unions and 1,486 savings institutions.

In 2007 savings and loan associations had deposits of $46,507m. Total mortgage loans in 2007 were $54,118m. On 31 Dec. 2007 all insured commercial banks had demand deposits of $23,030m. and time and savings deposits of $221,565m. Total loans reached $270,619m., of which real-estate loans were $190,656m. Credit unions had assets totalling $120,607m. and total loans outstanding were $86,562m.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In 2009 production was 204,776m. kWh of which 113,463m. kWh was from natural gas, 31,764m. kWh from nuclear energy and 27,888m. kWh from conventional hydro-electric energy. Consumption is growing at a rate of 2% annually.

Oil and Gas

California is the nation's fourth largest oil producing state. Total onshore and offshore production fell to an average of 651,900 bbls per day in 2008, a level not seen since 1942. California ranks tenth out of US states for the production of natural gas. Net natural gas production in 2009 was 259bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 7,736 sq. miles. Water quality is judged to be good along 83% of the 960 miles of assessed coastal shoreline.

Minerals

Gold output was 19,400 troy oz in 2007. Clays, crushed stone, dimension stone, feldspar, fuller's earth, gemstones, gypsum, iron ore (used in cement manufacture), kaolin clay, lime, magnesium compounds, perlite, pumice, pumicite, salt, soda ash and zeolites are also produced.

In 2008 California ranked fifth among the states in non-fuel mineral production, accounting for approximately 5.6% of the US total. California was the leading state in the production of sand and gravel, diatomite and natural sodium sulphate, and was the only producer of boron and rare earth minerals. The market value of non-fuel minerals produced was $4.0bn.; the mining industry employed around 24,100 persons in 2009 (compared to 48,000 in the early 1980s).

Agriculture

California is the most diversified agricultural economy in the world, producing more than 400 agricultural commodities. It is by far the largest agricultural producer and exporter in the United States. The state grows nearly half of the nation's total of fruits, nuts and vegetables. Many of these commodities are specialty crops and almost solely produced in California. There were, in 2008, 81,500 farms and ranches. The average California farm operation produced $413,000 in commodity sales in 2006. The net farm income in 2007 was $12,665m. (the largest of any state). In 2008 income from marketings reached $36.2bn. (11.2% of the US total). Fruit and nut cash receipts, at $10.54bn. in 2007, were 3% above the previous year and comprised 29% of the total. In 2007 vegetable receipts were up 8% from the previous year at $7.97bn., comprising 22% of total sales. Livestock and poultry receipts rose 42% from 2006 at $10.73bn. and comprised 29% of total sales. California's leading commodity in cash receipts is milk and cream with $6.92bn. in 2008.

Production of cotton lint in 2007 was 346,300 short tons; other field and seed crops included (in 1m. short tons): hay and alfalfa, 9; rice, 2; sugar beets, 1; wheat, 1. Principal fruit, nut and vegetable crops in 2007 (in 1,000 short tons): tomatoes, 12,697; grapes, 6,211; lettuce, 4,524; oranges, 1,725; onions, 1,510; carrots, 1,128; strawberries, 1,077; celery, 967; peaches, 949; broccoli, 945; lemons, 703; almonds, 695.

In 2007 there were 1.8m. milch cows; 5.5m. all cattle and calves; 610,000 sheep and lambs; and 155,000 hogs and pigs.

Forestry

In 2010 California had 32.82m. acres of forested land, of which 14,906,000 acres were national forest. There are about 16.6m. acres of productive forest land, from which about 2,900m. bd ft are harvested annually. Total value of timber harvest, 2009, $99m. Lumber production, 2009, 805m. bd ft.

Fisheries

The catch in 2009 was 373m. lb; leading species in landings were sardine, squid, anchovy, mackerel, crab, urchin, sole, whiting, sablefish and tuna.

INDUSTRY

California's economy is highly diversified. In terms of jobs, the largest sectors in California are trade, transportation and utilities, government, and professional and business services. In terms of output the largest sector is finance, followed by trade, transportation and utilities. Construction was the fastest-growing sector in California until 2007 when the housing downturn and financial crisis worsened.

Farm production in California has risen despite declines in acreage. Farm-related sales have more than quadrupled over the past three decades. Largest production categories are fruits and nuts, livestock and poultry, vegetables and melons.

Labour

In 2009 the civilian labour force was 18.3m., of whom 16.2m. were employed. A total of 902,000 jobs were lost during 2009, with most jobs going in trade, transportation and utilities, professional and business services, construction and manufacturing. The unemployment rate was 12.5% in Dec. 2010.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Estimated foreign trade through Californian ports totalled $414bn. in 2009. Exports of made-in-California goods totalled $120.1bn., a decrease of 17.1% from 2008. Of the total $35.2bn. was computers and electronics, $12.8bn. transportation equipment, $10.7bn. non-electrical machinery and $10.2bn. chemicals.

Total agricultural exports for 2008 were a record $12.9bn. California's top markets are the European Union, Canada, Japan, China, Hong Kong, Mexico, South Korea, Taiwan, India, Australia and the United Arab Emirates.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2009 California had 171,874 miles of public roads (including 15,192 of state highways) and 21.9m. registered automobiles. In 2007 there were a total of 33,935,386 registered motor vehicles. Motor vehicle collision fatalities in 2008 were 3,113.

Rail

In addition to Amtrak's long-distance trains, local and medium-distance passenger trains run in the San Francisco Bay area sponsored by the California Department of Transportation, and a network of commuter trains around Los Angeles opened in 1992. There are metro and light rail systems in San Francisco and Los Angeles, and light rail lines in Sacramento, San Diego and San Jose.

Civil Aviation

In 2010 there were a total of 968 public and private airports, heliports, stolports and seaplane bases.

A total of 56,520,843 passengers (15,100,930 international; 41,419,913 domestic) embarked/disembarked at Los Angeles airport in 2009. It handled approximately 1,663,855 tonnes of freight (915,960 international; 747,895 domestic). At San Francisco airport, in 2009, 37,453,634 passengers (10,200,479 international; 27,253,155 domestic) embarked/disembarked, and 408,102 tonnes of freight (242,248 tonnes international; 165,855 tonnes domestic) were handled. There were a total of 46,899,482 passenger enplanements at Los Angeles and San Francisco in 2009.

Shipping

The chief ports are Long Beach and Los Angeles. In 2009 Long Beach was the fourth busiest port in the USA, handling 72.5m. tons of cargo, and Los Angeles the ninth busiest, with 58.4m. tons.

Justice

A 'three strikes law', making 25-years-to-life sentences mandatory for third felony offences, was adopted in 1994 after an initiative (i.e. referendum) was 72% in favour. However, the state's Supreme Court ruled in June 1996 that judges may disregard previous convictions in awarding sentences. In Jan. 2009 there were 33 adult prisons. In Aug. 2009 the prison population totalled 166,569 (173,479 in Oct. 2006) and the parole population totalled 111,308. On 30 Dec. 2008 there were 1,734 juveniles in custody. As of Dec. 2008 there were 8,409 adults serving 'three strikes' sentences. The death penalty has been authorized following its reinstatement by the US Supreme Court in 1976. Death sentences have been passed since 1980. The first execution since 2002 was carried out in Jan. 2005. There was one execution in total in 2006. A moratorium on death sentences was ordered in Dec. 2006. The California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation has not indicated when it expects to successfully overcome legal challenges related to executions although a new execution chamber has been completed at San Quentin State Prison.

Education

Full-time attendance at school is compulsory for children from six to 18 years of age for a minimum of 175 days per annum. In fall 2009 there were 6.7m. pupils enrolled in both public and private elementary and secondary schools. Total state expenditure on public education, 2009–10, was $48.6bn. Average teacher salary in 2008–09 was $66,986 (the highest in the USA).

Community colleges had 1,727,799 students in fall 2008.

California has two publicly-supported higher education systems: the University of California (1868) and the California State University and Colleges. In fall 2008 the University of California, with campuses for resident instruction and research at Berkeley, Los Angeles (UCLA), San Francisco and seven other centres, had 226,040 students. California State University and Colleges with campuses at Sacramento, Long Beach, Los Angeles, San Francisco and 18 other cities had 437,008 students. In addition to the 32 publicly-supported institutions for higher education there are 117 private colleges and universities which had a total estimated enrolment of 433,832 in the fall of 2008.

Health

In 2008 there were 6,906 state licensed facilities; capacity, 260,036 beds. On 30 June 2008 state hospitals for the mentally disabled had 6,080 patients.

Welfare

Medicare beneficiaries in 2010 totalled 4,684,845. In fiscal year 2007 a total of 10,386,032 people in California received Medicaid.

On 1 Jan. 1974 the federal government (Social Security Administration) assumed responsibility for the Supplemental Security Income/State Supplemental Program which replaced the State Old-Age Security. The SSI/SSP provides financial assistance for needy aged (65 years or older), blind or disabled persons. An individual recipient may own assets up to $2,000; a couple up to $3,000, subject to specific exclusions. In 2008 there were 1.27m. SSI recipients. In 2007–08 fiscal year an average of 99,996 cases per month were receiving an average of $223 in assistance in the general relief programme. On average 465,959 families and 917,126 children were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in 2007–08.

RELIGION

There is a strong Roman Catholic presence. There were an estimated 994,000 Jews and 529,575 Latter-day Saints (Mormons) in 2000.

CULTURE

Tourism

The travel and tourism industry provides 2.5% of the state's $1.9trn. economy. Visitors in 2009 spent $87.7bn. generating $5.3bn. in state and local tax revenues. Tourist spending has increased at an average annual rate of 2.9% since 2003. California was the state most visited by overseas travellers in 2009, when international tourists spent $15.6bn. (more than 18% of all tourist spending).

Colorado

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Spanish explorers claimed the area for Spain in 1706; it was then the territory of the Arapaho, Cheyenne, Ute and other Plains and Great Basin Indians. Eastern Colorado, the hot, dry plains, passed to France in 1802 and then to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803. The rest remained Spanish, becoming Mexican when Spanish power in the Americas ended. In 1848, after war between Mexico and the USA, Mexican Colorado was ceded to the USA. A gold rush in 1859 brought a great influx of population, and in 1861 Colorado was organized as a Territory. The Territory officially supported the Union in the Civil War of 1861–65, but its settlers were divided and served on both sides.

Colorado became a state in 1876. Mining and ranching were the mainstays of the economy. In the 1920s the first large projects were undertaken to exploit the Colorado River. The Colorado River Compact was agreed in 1922, and the Boulder Dam (now Hoover Dam) was authorized in 1928. Since then irrigated agriculture has overtaken mining as an industry and is as important as ranching. In 1945 the Colorado-Big Thompson project diverted water by tunnel beneath the Rocky Mountains to irrigate 700,000 acres (284,000 ha.) of northern Colorado. Now more than 80% of the population is urban, with the majority engaged in telecommunications, aerospace and computer technology.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Colorado is bounded north by Wyoming, northeast by Nebraska, east by Kansas, southeast by Oklahoma, south by New Mexico and west by Utah. Land area, 103,642 sq. miles (268,431 sq. km).

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 5,029,196, an increase of 16.9% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	783,415	11,453	1,482	2,674	799,024	7.7
			All others
1980	2,571,498	101,703	216,763		2,889,964	27.9
1990	2,905,474	133,146	255,774		3,294,394	31.8
2000	3,560,005	165,063	576,193		4,301,261	41.5
2010	4,089,202	201,737	738,257		5,029,196	48.5

Of the total population in 2010, 2,520,662 were male and 3,803,587 were 18 years old or older. The Hispanic population in 2010 was 1,038,687, up from 735,601 in 2000 (an increase of 41.2%). Large cities, with 2008 populations: Denver City (the capital), 566,974; Colorado Springs, 372,437; Aurora, 305,582; Lakewood, 140,024; Fort Collins, 129,467; Westminster, 105,753; Arvada, 104,830; Pueblo, 103,730.

Main metropolitan areas (2008): Denver–Aurora, 2,506,626; Colorado Springs, 617,714; Boulder, 293,161; Fort Collins–Loveland, 292,825; Greeley, 249,715; Pueblo, 156,737; Grand Junction, 143,171.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, were 70,031 (14.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 31,256 (6.3). Infant mortality, 2006, 5.7 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 36,100 (7.6 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 21,100 (4.4).

CLIMATE

Denver, Jan. 31°F (–0.6°C), July 73°F (22.8°C). Annual rainfall 14" (358 mm). Pueblo, Jan. 30°F (–1.1°C), July 83°F (28.3°C). Annual rainfall 12" (312 mm). Colorado belongs to the Mountain States climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution adopted in 1876 is still in effect with (2006) 153 amendments. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 35 members elected for four years, one-half retiring every two years, and of a House of Representatives of 65 members elected for two years. Sessions are annual, beginning 1951. Qualified as electors are all citizens, male and female (except convicted, incarcerated criminals), 18 years of age, who have resided in the state and the precinct for 32 days immediately preceding the election. There is a seven-member State Supreme Court.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Colorado sends seven members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Michael Bennet (D. 2009–17) and Mark Udall (D. 2009–15).

The capital is Denver. There are 64 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won Colorado with 53.7% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: John Hickenlooper (D.), 2011–15 (salary: $90,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Joe Garcia (D.), 2011–15 ($68,500).

Secretary of State: Scott Gessler (R.), 2011–15 ($68,500).

Government Website: <http://www.colorado.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2010) was $42,226.

Budget

In 2009 total revenue was $10,337m. and total expenditure $24,886m. Major areas of expenditure were: education, $8,634m.; public welfare, $4,778m.; highways, $1,225m.; correction, $1,084m.; health, $1,063m. Debt outstanding, in 2009, was $17,202m.

Performance

2010 Gross Domestic Product by state was $235,152m. (provisional), ranking Colorado 18th in the United States. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 1.4% (provisional).

Banking and Finance

There are 180 commercial banks insured with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, with $47,631m. in total assets.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Oil and Gas

In 2008 Colorado produced 1,436bn. cu. ft of natural gas and 24m. bbls of crude oil. It ranked fifth in the USA for daily gas production, and eleventh in crude oil production. Total production value of all hydrocarbons was $9.8bn.

Water

The Rocky Mountains of Colorado form the headwaters for four major American rivers: the Colorado, Rio Grande, Arkansas and Platte. The total area covered by water is approximately 376 sq. miles.

Minerals

Coal (2009): 28.3m. short tons were produced. In 2008 there were 29,900 people employed in mining, including 7,882 in extracting oil and natural gas. Value of domestic non-fuel mineral production in 2008 was $1,746m.

Agriculture

In 2009 farms and ranches numbered 36,200, with a total of 31.3m. acres of agricultural land. 5,781,000 acres were harvested crop land; average farm, 865 acres. Average value of farmland and buildings per acre in Jan. 2010 was $1,080. Cash receipts from farm marketings, 2009: from crops, $2,230m.; from livestock and products, $3,323m. The net farm income in 2009 was $745m.

Production of principal crops in 2009: corn for grain, 151.5m. bu.; wheat, 100.6m. bu.; barley, 10.4m. bu.; sorghum for grain, 6.8m. bu.; millet, 5.3m. bu.; hay, 4,778,000 tons; corn for silage, 1,998,000 tons; sugar beets, 945,000 tons; potatoes, 23.6m. cwt.

In Dec. 2009 the number of farm animals was: 2,600,000 cattle and calves, 710,000 swine and 375,000 sheep. Wool production in 2007 totalled 2,916,000 lb.

Forestry

The state had a forested area of 22,612,000 acres in 2007, of which 11,259,000 acres were national forest.

Connecticut

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Formerly territory of Algonquian-speaking Indians, Connecticut was first colonized by Europeans during the 1630s, when English Puritans moved there from Massachusetts Bay. Settlements were founded in the Connecticut River Valley at Hartford, Saybrook, Wethersfield and Windsor in 1635. They formed an organized commonwealth in 1637. A further settlement was made at New Haven in 1638 and was united to the commonwealth under a royal charter in 1662. The charter confirmed the commonwealth constitution, drawn up by mutual agreement in 1639 and called the Fundamental Orders of Connecticut.

The area was agricultural and its population of largely English descent until the early 19th century. After the War of Independence, Connecticut was one of the original 13 states of the Union. Its state constitution came into force in 1818 and lasted with amendments until 1965 when a new one was adopted.

In the early 1800s a textile industry thrived on water power. By 1850 the state had more employment in industry than in agriculture, and immigration from Europe (and especially from southern and eastern Europe) grew rapidly throughout the 19th century. Some immigrants worked in whaling and iron-mining, but most sought industrial employment. Settlement was spread over a large number of small towns, with no single dominant culture.

Yale University was founded at New Haven in 1701. The US Coastguard Academy was founded in 1876 at New London, a former whaling port.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Connecticut is bounded in the north by Massachusetts, east by Rhode Island, south by the Atlantic and west by New York. Land area, 4,842 sq. miles (12,542 sq. km).

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 3,574,097, an increase of 4.9% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asian	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,098,897	15,174	152	533	1,114,756	231.3
1980	2,799,420	217,433	4,533	18,970	3,107,576	634.3

	White	Black	American Indian/Alaska Native	Asian	Others	Total	Per sq. mile
1990	2,859,353	274,269	6,654	50,078	96,762	3,287,116	678.6
2000	2,780,355	309,843	9,639	82,313	148,567	3,405,565	702.9
2010	2,772,410	362,296	11,256	135,565	292,570	3,574,097	738.1

Of the total population in 2010, there were 479,087 persons of Hispanic origin, up from 320,323 in 2000 (an increase of 49.6%). Of the total population in 2010, 1,834,483 were female and 2,757,082 were 18 years old or older. There were 183 residents in five American Indian Reservations in 2000.

The chief cities and towns are (2000 census populations):

Bridgeport	139,529	Danbury	74,848
New Haven	123,626	New Britain	71,538
Hartford (capital)	121,578	West Hartford	63,589

Delaware

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Delaware was the territory of Algonquian-speaking Indians who were displaced by European settlement in the 17th century. The first settlers were Swedes who came in 1638 to build Fort Christina (now Wilmington), and colonize what they called New Sweden. In 1655 their colony was taken by the Dutch, who were based in New Amsterdam. In 1664 the British took the whole New Amsterdam colony, including Delaware, and called it New York.

In 1682 Delaware was granted to William Penn, who wanted access to the coast for his Pennsylvania colony. Union of the two colonies was unpopular, and Delaware gained its own government in 1704, although it continued to share a royal governor with Pennsylvania until the War of Independence. Delaware then became one of the 13 original states of the Union and the first to ratify the federal constitution (on 7 Dec. 1787).

The population was of Swedish, Finnish, British and Irish extraction. The land was low-lying and fertile, and the use of slave labour was legal. There was a significant number of black slaves, but Delaware was a border state during the Civil War (1861–65) and did not leave the Union.

19th-century immigrants were mostly European Jews, Poles, Germans and Italians. The north became industrial and densely populated, more so after the Second World War with the rise of the petrochemical industry. Industry in general profited from the opening of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal in 1829; it was converted to a toll-free deep channel for ocean-going ships in 1919.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Delaware is bounded in the north by Pennsylvania, northeast by New Jersey, east by Delaware Bay, south and west by Maryland. Land area 1,949 sq. miles (5,047 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 897,934, an increase of 14.6% since 2000. Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	171,102	31,181	5	34	202,322	103.0
			All others
1980	488,002	96,157	10,179		594,338	290.8
1990	535,094	112,460	18,614		666,168	325.9
2000	584,773	150,666	48,161		783,600	401.0
2010	618,617	191,814	87,503		897,934	460.8

Of the total population in 2010, 462,995 were female and 692,169 were 18 years old or older. The Hispanic population in 2010 was 73,221, up from 37,277 in 2000 (an increase of 96.4%).

The 2000 census figures show Wilmington with a population of 72,664; Dover (the capital), 32,135; Newark, 28,547; Milford City, 6,732; Seaford City, 6,699; Middletown, 6,161.

District of Columbia

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The District of Columbia, organized in 1790, is the seat of the government of the USA, for which the land was ceded by the states of Maryland and Virginia to the USA as a site for the national capital. It was established under Acts of Congress in 1790 and 1791. Congress first met in it in 1800 and federal authority over it became vested in 1801. In 1846 the land ceded by Virginia (about 33 sq. miles) was given back.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The District forms an enclave on the Potomac River, where the river forms the southwest boundary of Maryland. The land area of the District of Columbia is 61 sq. miles (158 sq. km).

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 601,723, an increase of 5.2% since 2000. The population was 100% urban in 2010. Metropolitan area of Washington, D.C.–Baltimore (2000), 7,608,070. The Hispanic population in 2010 was 54,749, up from 44,953 in 2000 (an increase of 21.8%). Of the total population in 2010, 317,501 were female and 500,908 were 18 years old or older.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Chinese and Japanese	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	236,128	94,446	68	427	331,069	5,517.8
			All others

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 9,130 (15.4 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 5,139 (8.7). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 11.3 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 2,300 (3.9 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 1,300 (2.1). Same-sex marriage became legal in March 2010.

CLIMATE

Washington, Jan. 34°F (1.1°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 43" (1,064 mm). The District of Columbia belongs to the Atlantic Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Local government, from 1 July 1878 until Aug. 1967, was that of a municipal corporation administered by a board of three commissioners, of whom two were appointed from civil life by the President, and confirmed by the Senate, for a term of three years each. The other commissioner was detailed by the President from the Engineer Corps of the Army. The Commission form of government was abolished in 1967 and a new Mayor Council instituted with officers appointed by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate. On 24 Dec. 1973 the appointed officers were replaced by an elected Mayor and councillors, with full legislative powers in local matters as from 1974. Congress retains the right to legislate, to veto or supersede the Council's acts. The 23rd amendment to the federal constitution (1961) conferred the right to vote in national elections. The District has one delegate and one shadow delegate to the House of Representatives and two shadow senators. The Congressman may participate but not vote on the House floor.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won the District of Columbia with 92.5% of the vote (John Kerry won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Mayor: Vincent Gray (D.), 2011–15 (salary: $200,000).

Secretary of the District: Cynthia Brock-Smith (D.), appointed Dec. 2010 ($140,000).

Government Website: <http://www.dc.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2010) was $70,044, the highest in the country.

Budget

The District's revenues are derived from a tax on real and personal property, sales taxes, taxes on corporations and companies, licences for conducting various businesses and from federal payments. The District of Columbia has no bonded debt not covered by its accumulated sinking fund.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2010 was $90,716m. (provisional). In 2010 state real GDP growth was 3.5% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 7 sq. miles.

INDUSTRY

In 2006 there were 130 manufacturing establishments with 2,000 employees, earning $77m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2006 was $172m. The main industries are communications, finance, government service, insurance, real estate, services, transport, utilities, and wholesale and retail trade.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2007, 695,000. Employees by branch, 2007 (in 1,000): government, 232; professional and business services, 154; education and health services, 98; leisure and hospitality, 55; financial activities, 29. In Dec. 2010 the unemployment rate was 9.6%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 1,505 miles of roads. There were 217,521 registered vehicles in 2007.

Rail

There is a metro in Washington extending to 130 km, and two commuter rail networks.

Civil Aviation

The District is served by three general airports; across the Potomac River in Arlington, Va., is National Airport; in Chantilly, Va., is Dulles International Airport; and in Maryland is Baltimore–Washington International Airport.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The death penalty was declared unconstitutional in the District of Columbia on 14 Nov. 1973.

The District's Court system is the Judicial Branch of the District of Columbia. It is the only completely unified court system in the United States, possibly because of the District's unique city-state jurisdiction. Until the District of Columbia Court Reform and Criminal Procedure Act of 1970, the judicial system was almost entirely in the hands of Federal government. Since that time, the system has been similar in most respects to the autonomous systems of the states.

Education

In 2007–08 there were 78,422 pupils enrolled at 244 elementary and secondary public schools with 6,347 teachers. Expenditure per pupil in fiscal year 2008 was $16,353.

Higher education is given through the Consortium of Universities of the Metropolitan Washington Area, which consists of six universities and three colleges: Georgetown University, founded in 1795 by the Jesuit Order; George Washington University, non-sectarian founded in 1821; Howard University, founded in 1867; Catholic University of America, founded in 1887; American University (Methodist), founded in 1893; University of District of Columbia, founded 1976; Gallaudet College, founded 1864; Trinity College in Washington, D.C. (women's college), founded 1897. There were 16 degree-granting institutions altogether in 2008–09.

Health

In 2007 there were ten community hospitals with 3,400 beds. A total of 136,000 patients were admitted during the year.

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2006 totalled 73,322 (down 1.8% on the July 2001 total). In fiscal year 2006 a total of 159,335 people in the District of Columbia received Medicaid. In Dec. 2008 there were 71,468 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 12,510 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2008.

RELIGION

The largest churches are the Protestant and Roman Catholic Christian churches; there are also Jewish, Eastern Orthodox and Islamic congregations.

CULTURE

Tourism

About 20m. visitors stay in the District every year and spend about $1,000m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Of the French and Spanish settlements in Florida in the 16th century, the Spanish, at St Augustine from 1565, survived. Florida was claimed by Spain until 1763 when it passed to Britain. Although regained by Spain in 1783, the British used it as a base for attacks on American forces during the war of 1812. Gen. Andrew Jackson captured Pensacola for the USA in 1818. In 1819 a treaty was signed which ceded Florida to the USA with effect from 1821 and it became a Territory of the USA in 1822.

Florida had been the home of the Apalachee and Timucua Indians. After 1770 groups of Creek Indians began to arrive as refugees from the European-Indian wars. These 'Seminoles' or runaways attracted other refugees including slaves, the recapture of whom was the motive for the first Seminole War of 1817–18. A second war followed in 1835–42, when the Seminoles retreated to the Everglades swamps. After a third war in 1855–58 most Seminoles were forced or persuaded to move to reserves in Oklahoma.

Florida became a state in 1845. About half of the population were black slaves. At the outbreak of Civil War in 1861 the state seceded from the Union.

During the 20th century Florida continued to grow fruit and vegetables, but real-estate development (often for retirement) and the growth of tourism and the aerospace industry set it apart from other ex-plantation states.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Florida is a peninsula bounded in the west by the Gulf of Mexico, south by the Straits of Florida, east by the Atlantic, north by Georgia and northwest by Alabama. Land area, 53,625 sq. miles (138,887 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 18,801,310, an increase of 17.6% since 2000.

Population in five federal census years was:

	White	Black	All others	Total	Per sq. mile
1950	2,166,051	603,101	2,153	2,771,305	51.1
1980	8,319,448	1,342,478	84,398	9,746,324	180.1
1990	10,749,285	1,759,534	429,107	12,937,926	238.9
2000	12,465,029	2,335,505	1,181,844	15,982,378	296.4
2010	14,109,162	2,999,862	1,692,286	18,801,310	350.6

Of the total population in 2010, 9,611,955 were female and 14,799,219 were 18 years old or older. The Hispanic population in 2010 was 4,223,806, up from 2,682,715 in 2000 (a rise of 57.4% and the third largest numeric increase of any state in the USA).

Florida belongs to the Gulf Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1968 Legislature revised the constitution of 1885. The state legislature comprises the Senate and House of Representatives. The Senate has 40 members elected for four years. Half of the membership is elected every two years. The House has 120 members, all of whom are elected every two years during elections held in even-numbered years. Sessions of the legislature are held annually, and are limited to 60 days. Senate and House districts are based on population, with each senator and member representing approximately the same number of residents. The Senate and House are reapportioned every ten years when the federal census is released. In addition to the Governor and Lieut.-Governor (who are elected for four years), the constitution provides for a cabinet composed of an attorney general, a chief financial officer and a commissioner of agriculture.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Florida sends 25 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Bill Nelson (D. 2001–13) and Marco Rubio (R. 2011–17).

The state capital is Tallahassee. The state is divided into 67 counties.

Georgia

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of Creek and Cherokee tribes, Georgia was first settled by Europeans in the 18th century. James Oglethorpe founded Savannah in 1733, intending it as a colony offering a new start to debtors, convicts and the poor. Settlement was slow until 1783, when growth began in the cotton-growing areas west of Augusta. The Indian population was cleared off the rich cotton land and moved beyond the Mississippi. Georgia became one of the original 13 states of the Union.

A plantation economy developed rapidly, using slave labour. In 1861 Georgia seceded from the Union and became an important source of supplies for the Confederate cause, although some northern areas never accepted secession and continued in sympathy with the Union during the Civil War. At the beginning of the war 56% of the population were white, descendants of British, Austrian and New England immigrants; the remaining 44% were black slaves.

The city of Atlanta, which grew as a railway junction, was destroyed during the war but revived to become the centre of southern reconstruction in the post-war period. It was confirmed as the state capital in 1877. Successive movements for black freedom in social, economic and political life have developed in the city, notably the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, led by Martin Luther King, who was assassinated in 1968.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Georgia is bounded north by Tennessee and North Carolina, northeast by South Carolina, east by the Atlantic, south by Florida and west by Alabama. Land area, 57,513 sq. miles (148,959 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 9,687,653, an increase of 18.3% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,431,802	1,176,987	95	237	2,609,121	44.4
			All others
1980	3,948,007	1,465,457	50,801		5,464,265	92.7
1990	4,600,148	1,746,565	131,503		6,478,216	110.0
2000	5,327,281	2,349,542	509,630		8,186,453	141.4
2010	5,787,440	2,950,435	949,778		9,687,653	168.4

Of the total population in 2010, 4,958,482 were female and 7,196,101 were 18 years old or older. The estimated Hispanic population was 853,689 in 2010, up from 435,277 in 2000 (an increase of 96.1%).

Hawaii

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The islands of Hawaii were settled by Polynesian immigrants, probably from the Marquesas Islands, about AD 400. A second major immigration, from Tahiti, occurred around 800–900. In the late 18th century all the islands were united into one kingdom by Kamehameha I. Western exploration began in 1778, and Christian missions were established after 1820. Europeans called Hawaii the Sandwich Islands. The USA, Britain and France all claimed an interest. Kamehameha III placed Hawaii under US protection in 1851. US sugar-growing companies became dominant and in 1887 the USA obtained a naval base at Pearl Harbor. A struggle developed between forces for and against annexation by the USA. In 1893 the monarchy was overthrown. The republican government agreed to be annexed to the USA in 1898, and Hawaii became a US Territory in 1900.

The islands and the naval base were of great strategic importance during the Second World War, when the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor brought the USA into the war.

Hawaii became the 50th state of the Union in 1959. The 19th-century plantation economy encouraged the immigration of workers, especially from China and Japan. Hawaiian laws, religions and culture were gradually adapted to the needs of the immigrant community.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Hawaiian Islands lie in the North Pacific Ocean, between 18° 54' and 28° 15' N. lat. and 154° 40' and 178° 25' W. long., about 2,090 nautical miles southwest of San Francisco. There are 137 named islands and islets in the group, of which seven major and five minor islands are inhabited. Land area, 6,423 sq. miles (16,635 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,360,301, an increase of 12.3% since 2000. Of the total population in 2010, 681,243 were male and 1,056,483 were 18 years old or older.

The principal islands are Hawaii, 4,028 sq. miles, population 2000, 148,677; Maui, 727 sq. miles, population 117,644; Oahu, 600 sq. miles, population 876,151; Kauai, 552 sq. miles, population 58,303; Molokai, 260 sq. miles, population 7,404; Lanai, 141 sq. miles, population 3,193; Niihau, 70 sq. miles, population 160; Kahoolawe, 45 sq. miles (uninhabited). The capital Honolulu—on the island of Oahu—had a population in 2000 of 371,657, and Hilo—on the island of Hawaii—40,759.

Figures for main racial groups, 2010, were: 336,599 White; 197,497 Filipino; 185,502 Japanese; 80,337 Native Hawaiian; 54,955 Chinese; 24,203 Korean; 21,424 Black or African American; 18,287 Samoan; 9,779 Vietnamese.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 19,484 (15.1 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 9,475 (7.4). Infant deaths, 2006, were at a rate of 5.6 per 1,000 live births. Marriages, 2006, 28,700 (22.4 per 1,000 population). Inter-marriage between the races is common. In 2007, of the 9,401 resident couples married, 55.1% were interracial. 65.6% were non-resident marriages.

CLIMATE

All the islands have a tropical climate, with an abrupt change in conditions between windward and leeward sides, most marked in rainfall. Temperatures vary little. Average temperatures in Honolulu: Jan. 73.0°F, July 80.8°F. Average annual rainfall in Honolulu: 18.29".

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Hawaii was officially admitted into the United States on 21 Aug. 1959. However, the constitution of the State of Hawaii was created by the 1950 Constitutional Convention, ratified by the voters of the Territory on 7 Nov. 1950, and amended on 27 June 1959. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 25 members elected for four years and a House of Representatives of 51 members elected for two years. There have been two constitutional conventions since 1950, in 1968 and 1978. In addition to amendments proposed by these conventions the Legislature is able to propose amendments to voters during the general election. This has resulted in numerous amendments.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Hawaii sends two members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Daniel Inouye (D. 1963–2017) and Daniel Akaka (D. 1990–2013).

The state capital is Honolulu. There are five counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won Hawaii with 71.8% of the vote (John Kerry won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Idaho

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Kutenai, Kalispel, Nez Percé and other tribes lived on the Pacific watershed of the northern Rocky Mountains. European exploration began in 1805, and after 1809 there were trading posts and small settlements, with fur-trapping as the primary activity. The area was disputed between Britain and the USA until 1846 when British claims were dropped. In 1860 the discovery of gold and silver brought a rush of immigrant prospectors. An area including present-day Montana was created a Territory in March 1863. Montana was separated from it in 1864. Population growth was stimulated by refugees from the Confederate states after the Civil War and by settlements of Mormons from Utah.

Fur-trapping and mining gave way to arable farming. Idaho became a state in 1890, with its capital at Boise. The population of the Territory capital, Idaho City, a gold-mining boom town in the 1860s (about 40,000 at its height), was the largest in the Pacific Northwest. By 1869 the population was down to 1,000.

In the 20th century the Indian population shrank to 1%. The Mormon community has grown to include much of southeastern Idaho and more than half the church-going population of the state.

The Snake River of southern Idaho has supported hydro-electricity and irrigation. Food processing, minerals and timber are important. So too are the high technology companies in Idaho's metropolitan areas. Much of the state, however, remains sparsely populated and rural.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Idaho is within the Rocky Mountains and bounded north by Canada, east by Montana and Wyoming, south by Nevada and Utah, west by Oregon and Washington. Land area, 82,643 sq. miles (214,045 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,567,582, an increase of 21.1% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/Alaska Native	Asian	Total (including others)	Per sq. mile
1910	319,221	651	3,488	2,234	325,594	3.9
1980	901,641	2,716	10,521	5,948	943,935	11.3
1990	950,451	3,370	13,780	9,365	1,006,749	12.2
2000	1,177,304	5,456	17,645	13,197	1,293,953	15.6
2010	1,396,487	9,810	21,441	19,069	1,567,582	19.0

Of the total population in 2010, 785,324 were male and 1,138,510 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 Idaho's Hispanic population was 175,901, up from 101,690 in 2000 (an increase of 73.0%).

The largest cities are: Boise City (the capital), with a 2003 population of 190,117; Nampa, 64,269; Idaho Falls, 51,507; Pocatello, 51,009; Meridian, 41,127; Coeur d'Alene, 37,262; Twin Falls, 36,742; Caldwell, 31,041; Lewiston, 30,937.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 25,149 (16.5 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 10,942 (7.2). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 6.8 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 14,800 (10.1 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 7,500 (5.1).

CLIMATE

Boise City, Jan. 29°F (−1.7°C), July 74°F (23.3°C). Annual rainfall 12" (303 mm). Idaho belongs to the Mountain States climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution adopted in 1890 is still in force; it has had 135 amendments as of 2011. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 35 members and a House of Representatives of 70 members, all the legislators being elected for two years. It meets annually.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Idaho sends two members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Michael Crapo (R. 1999–2017) and James Risch (R. 2009–15).

The state is divided into 44 counties. The capital is Boise City.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Idaho with 61.5% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: C. L. 'Butch' Otter (R.), 2011–15 (salary: $115,349).

Lieut.-Governor: Brad Little (R.), 2011–15 ($30,400).

Secretary of State: Ben Ysursa (R.), 2011–15 ($93,756).

Government Website: <http://www.idaho.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2010) was $31,986.

Budget

In 2009 total state revenue was $5,537m. Total expenditure was $8,217m. (education, $2,864m.; public welfare, $1,760m.; highways, $730m.; government administration, $368m.; correction, $258m.) Outstanding debt in 2009, $3,509m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2010 was $50,702m. (provisional), ranking Idaho 42nd in the United States. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 2.0% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Electricity

In 2009 production was 13,100m. kWh, of which 10,434m. kWh was from conventional hydro-electric energy.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 823 sq. miles. Idaho is second only to California in the amount of water used for irrigating crops. Much of Idaho's surface water flows out of the high mountains and is generally of excellent quality. High quality groundwater is pumped for agricultural, industrial and residential use.

Minerals

Principal non-fuel minerals are processed phosphate rock, silver, gold, molybdenum and sand and gravel. Value of non-fuel mineral output for 2006 was $797m.

Agriculture

Agriculture is the second largest industry, despite a great part of the state being naturally arid. Extensive irrigation works have been carried out, bringing an estimated 3.5m. acres under irrigation, and there are over 50 soil conservation districts.

In 2009 there were 25,500 farms with a total area of 11.4m. acres; average value per acre (Jan. 2010), $2,100. In 2009 the average farm was 447 acres.

Value of crop production in 2009, $2,664m.; and livestock and products, $2,549m. The most important crops are potatoes and wheat. ## Illinois

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Home to Algonquian-speaking tribes, Illinois was explored first by the French in 1673. France claimed the area until 1763 when, after the French and Indian War, it was ceded to Britain along with all the French land east of the Mississippi. In 1783 Britain recognized US claims to Illinois, which became part of the North West Territory of the USA in 1787, and of Indiana Territory in 1800. Illinois became a Territory in its own right in 1809, and a state in 1818.

Immigration increased greatly with the opening in 1825 of the Erie Canal from New York, along which farmer settlers could move west and their produce back east for sale. Chicago was incorporated as a city in 1837 and quickly became the transport, trading and distribution centre of the mid west. Industrial growth brought a further wave of immigration in the 1840s, mainly of European refugees. This movement continued with varying force until the 1920s, when it was largely replaced by immigration of black work-seekers from the southern states.

In the 20th century the population was urbanized and heavy industry was established along a network of rail and waterway routes. Chicago recovered from a destructive fire in 1871 to become the hub of this network and at one time the second largest American city.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Illinois is bounded north by Wisconsin, northeast by Lake Michigan, east by Indiana, southeast by the Ohio River (forming the boundary with Kentucky), and west by the Mississippi River (forming the boundary with Missouri and Iowa). Land area: 55,519 sq. miles (143,793 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 12,830,632, an increase of 3.3% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	All others	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	5,526,962	109,049	188	2,392	5,638,591	100.6

Indiana

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was inhabited by Algonquian-speaking tribes when the first European explorers (French) laid claim to it in the 17th century. They established fortified trading posts but there was little settlement. In 1763 the area passed to Britain, with other French-claimed territory east of the Mississippi. In 1783 Indiana became part of the North West Territory of the USA; it became a separate territory in 1800 and a state in 1816. Until 1811 there was continuing conflict with the Indian inhabitants, who were then defeated at Tippecanoe.

Early farming settlement was by families of British and German descent, including Amish and Mennonite communities. Later industrial development offered an incentive for more immigration from Europe, and, subsequently, from the southern states. In 1906 the town of Gary was laid out by the United States Steel Corporation and named after its chairman, Elbert H. Gary. The industry benefited from navigable water to supplies of iron ore and of coal. Indiana Port on Lake Michigan was a thriving trade centre, especially after the opening of the St Lawrence Seaway in 1959. The Ohio River also carried freight.

Indianapolis was built after 1821 and became the state capital in 1825. Natural gas was discovered in the neighbourhood in the late 19th century. This stimulated the growth of a motor industry, celebrated by the Indianapolis 500 race, held annually since 1911.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Indiana is bounded west by Illinois, north by Michigan and Lake Michigan, east by Ohio and south by Kentucky across the Ohio River. Land area, 35,826 sq. miles (92,789 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 6,483,802, an increase of 6.6% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	American Indian/Alaska					Total	Per sq. mile
	White	Black	Native	Asian	Other
1930	3,125,778	111,982	285	458	—	3,238,503	89.4
1980	5,004,394	414,785	7,836	20,557	42,652	5,490,224	152.8
1990	5,020,700	432,092	12,720	37,617	41,030	5,544,159	154.6
2000	5,320,022	510,034	15,815	61,131	173,483	6,080,485	169.5
2010	5,467,906	591,397	18,462	102,474	303,563	6,483,802	181.0

Of the total population in 2010, 3,294,065 were female and 4,875,504 were 18 years old or older. Indiana's Hispanic population was 389,707 in 2010, an 81.7% increase on the 2000 total of 214,536.

The largest cities with census population, 2000, are: Indianapolis (capital), 761,296; Fort Wayne, 205,727; Evansville, 121,582; South Bend, 107,789; Gary, 102,746; Hammond, 83,048; Bloomington, 69,291; Muncie, 67,430; Anderson, 59,734; Terre Haute, 59,614.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 88,742 (13.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 56,743 (8.9). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 8.0 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 50,900 (8.1 per 1,000 population).

CLIMATE

Iowa

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of the Iowa Indians, the area was explored by the Frenchmen Marquette and Joliet in 1673. French trading posts were set up, but there were few other settlements. In 1803 the French sold their claim to Iowa to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase. The land was still occupied by Indians but, in the 1830s, the tribes sold their land to the US government and migrated to reservations. Iowa became a US Territory in 1838 and a state in 1846.

The state was settled by immigrants drawn mainly from neighbouring states to the east. Later there was more immigration from Protestant states of northern Europe. The land was extremely fertile and most immigrants came to farm. Not all the Indian population had accepted the cession and there were some violent confrontations, notably the murder of settlers at Spirit Lake in 1857. The capital, Des Moines, was founded in 1843 as a fort to protect Indian rights. It expanded rapidly along with coal mining after 1910.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Iowa is bounded east by the Mississippi River (forming the boundary with Wisconsin and Illinois), south by Missouri, west by the Missouri River (forming the boundary with Nebraska), northwest by the Big Sioux River (forming the boundary with South Dakota) and north by Minnesota. Land area, 55,857 sq. miles (144,669 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 3,046,355, an increase of 4.1% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1870	1,188,207	5,762	48	3	1,194,020	21.5
			All others
1980	2,839,225	41,700	32,882		2,913,808	51.7
1990	2,683,090	48,090	45,575		2,776,755	49.7
2000	2,748,640	61,853	115,831		2,926,324	52.4
2010	2,781,561	89,148	175,646		3,046,355	54.5

Of the total population in 2010, 1,538,036 were female and 2,318,362 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 151,544, up from 82,473 in 2000 (an increase of 83.7%).

The largest cities in the state, with their population in 2003, are: Des Moines (capital), 196,093; Cedar Rapids, 122,542; Davenport, 97,512; Sioux City, 83,876; Waterloo, 67,054; Iowa City, 63,807; Council Bluffs, 58,656; Dubuque, 57,204; Ames, 53,284; West Des Moines, 51,699; Cedar Falls, 36,429; Urbandale, 31,868; Bettendorf, 31,456; Ankeny, 31,144; Marion, 28,756.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 40,224 (13.4 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 28,533 (9.5). Infant mortality, 2006, 5.1 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 20,000 (6.7 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 8,000 (2.7). Same-sex marriage became legal in April 2009.

CLIMATE

Cedar Rapids, Jan. 17.6°F, July 74.2°F. Annual rainfall 34". Des Moines, Jan. 19.4°F, July 76.6°F. Annual rainfall 33". Iowa belongs to the Mid-West climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution of 1857 still exists; it has had 48 amendments as of Aug. 2011. The General Assembly comprises a Senate of 50 and a House of Representatives of 100 members, meeting annually for an unlimited session. Senators are elected for four years, half retiring every second year: Representatives for two years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Iowa sends five members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Chuck Grassley (R. 1981–2017) and Tom Harkin (D. 1985–2015).

Iowa is divided into 99 counties; the capital is Des Moines.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won Iowa with 53.7% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

Kansas

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was explored from Mexico in the 16th century, when Spanish travellers encountered Kansas, Wichita, Osage and Pawnee tribes. The French claimed Kansas in 1682, establishing a valuable fur trade with local tribes in the 18th century. In 1803 the area passed to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase and became a base for pioneering trails further west. After 1830 it was 'Indian Territory' and a number of tribes displaced from eastern states were settled there. In 1854 the Kansas Territory was created and opened for white settlement. The early settlers were farmers from Europe or New England, but the Territory's position also brought it into contact with southern culture. Slavery was prohibited by the Missouri Compromise of 1820 but the 1854 Kansas-Nebraska Act affirmed the principle of 'popular sovereignty' to settle the issue, which was then fought out by opposing factions throughout 'Bleeding Kansas'.

Kansas entered the Union (as a non-slave state) in 1861, minus the territory that is now in Colorado.

The economy was based on cattle-ranching and railways. Herds were driven to the railheads and shipped from vast stockyards, or slaughtered and processed in railhead meat-packing plants. Wheat and sorghum also became important once the plains could be ploughed on a large scale.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Kansas is bounded north by Nebraska, east by Missouri, with the Missouri River as boundary in the northeast, south by Oklahoma and west by Colorado. Land area, 81,759 sq. miles (211,754 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,853,118, an increase of 6.1% since 2000.

Population in five federal census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1870	346,377	17,108	914	—	364,399	4.5
			All others
1980	2,168,221	126,127	69,888	—	2,364,236	28.8
1990	2,231,986	143,076	102,512	—	2,477,574	30.3
2000	2,313,944	154,198	220,276	—	2,688,418	32.9
2010	2,391,044	167,864	294,210	—	2,853,118	34.9

Of the total population in 2010, 1,437,710 were female and 2,126,179 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 300,042, up from 188,252 in 2000 (an increase of 59.4%).

Cities, with 2000 census population: Wichita, 344,284; Overland Park, 149,080; Kansas City, 146,866; Topeka (capital), 122,377; Olathe, 92,962; Lawrence, 80,098.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 41,833 (14.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 24,969 (8.9). Infant mortality, 2006, 7.1 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 18,900 (6.8 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 9,200 (3.3 per 1,000 population).

Kansas belongs to the Mid-West climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The year 1861 saw the adoption of the present constitution; it has had 183 amendments. The Legislature includes a Senate of 40 members, elected for four years, and a House of Representatives of 125 members, elected for two years. Sessions are annual.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Kansas sends four members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Pat Roberts (R. 1997–2015) and Jerry Moran (R. 2011–17).

The capital is Topeka. The state is divided into 105 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Kansas with 56.6% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2010 was $114,021m. (provisional), ranking Kansas 31st in the United States. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 2.1% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Oil and Gas

In 2008 Kansas produced 39.6m. bbls of crude petroleum; marketed production of natural gas totalled 374bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 462 sq. miles.

Minerals

Important fuel minerals are coal, petroleum and natural gas. Non-fuel minerals, mainly cement, salt and crushed stone, were worth $973m. in 2006.

Agriculture

Kansas is pre-eminently agricultural, but sometimes suffers from lack of rainfall in the west. In 2007 there were 65,531 farms with a total acreage of 46.35m. Average number of acres per farm was 707. Average value of farmland and buildings per acre, in 2007, was $911. Farm income 2007: from crops, $4,518m.; and from livestock and products, $7,212m. Chief crops: wheat, corn and soybeans. The net farm income in 2007 was $2,156m. Wheat production was 283.8m. bu. in 2007. Kansas was the USA's second largest wheat producer in 2007, after North Dakota, although it had been the leading producer in 2006. There is an extensive livestock industry, including, in 2007, 6.67m. cattle (only Texas had more), 84,000 sheep, and 1.89m. hogs and pigs.

Forestry

The state had a forested area of 2.11m. acres in 2007.

INDUSTRY

In 2006 the state's 3,165 manufacturing establishments had 176,000 employees, earning $7,622m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2006 was $25,332m.

Labour

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Lying west of the Appalachians and south of the Ohio River, the area was the meeting place and battleground for the eastern Iroquois and the southern Cherokees. Northern Shawnees were also present. The first successful white settlement took place in 1769 when Daniel Boone reached the Bluegrass plains from the eastern, trans-Appalachian, colonies. After 1783 immigration from the east was rapid, settlers travelling by river or crossing the mountains by the Cumberland Gap. The area was originally attached to Virginia but became a separate state in 1792.

Large plantations dependent on slave labour were established, as were small farms worked by white owners. The state became divided on the issue of slavery, although plantation interests (mainly producing tobacco) dominated state government. In the event the state did not secede in 1861, and the majority of citizens supported the Union. Public opinion was more favourable to the south in the hard times of the reconstruction period.

The eastern mountains became an important coal-mining area, tobacco-growing continued and the Bluegrass plains produced livestock, including especially fine thoroughbred horses.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Kentucky is bounded in the north by the Ohio River (forming the boundary with Illinois, Indiana and Ohio), northeast by the Big Sandy River (forming the boundary with West Virginia), east by Virginia, south by Tennessee and west by the Mississippi River (forming the boundary with Missouri). Land area, 39,486 sq. miles (102,269 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 4,339,367, an increase of 7.4% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	All others	Total	Per sq. mile
1930	2,388,364	226,040	185	2,614,589	65.1
1980	3,379,006	259,477	22,294	3,660,777	92.3
1990	3,391,832	262,907	30,557	3,685,296	92.8
2000	3,640,889	295,994	104,886	4,041,769	101.7
2010	3,809,537	337,520	192,310	4,339,367	109.9

Of the total population in 2010, 2,204,415 were female and 3,315,996 were 18 years old or older. Kentucky's Hispanic population was 132,836, up 121.6% on the 2000 census figure of 59,939.

The principal cities with census population in 2000 are: Lexington-Fayette, 260,512; Louisville, 256,321; Owensboro, 54,067; Bowling Green, 49,296; Covington, 43,370; Hopkinsville, 30,089; Frankfort (capital), 27,741; Henderson, 27,373; Richmond, 27,152; Jeffersonton, 26,633.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 58,375 (13.7 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 41,280 (9.7). Infant mortality, 2006, 7.5 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 36,900 (8.8 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 21,500 (5.1).

CLIMATE

Kentucky is in the Appalachian Mountains climatic zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate). It has a temperate climate. Temperatures are moderate during both winter and summer, precipitation is ample without a pronounced dry season, and winter snowfall amounts are variable. Mean annual temperatures range from 52°F in the northeast to 58°F in the southwest. Annual rainfall averages at about 45". Snowfall ranges from 5 to 10" in the southwest of the state, to 25" in the northeast, and 40" at higher altitudes in the southeast.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution dates from 1891; there had been three preceding it. The 1891 constitution was promulgated by convention and provides that amendments be submitted to the electorate for ratification. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 38 members elected for four years, one half retiring every two years, and a House of Representatives of 100 members elected for two years. It has annual sessions. All citizens of 18 or over are qualified as electors.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Kentucky sends six members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Mitch McConnell (R. 1985–2015) and Rand Paul (R. 2011–17).

The capital is Frankfort. The state is divided into 120 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Kentucky with 57.4% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Steve Beshear (D.), Dec. 2011–Dec. 2015 (salary: $133,644.00).

Lieut.-Governor: Jerry Abramson (D.), Dec. 2011–Dec. 2015 ($133,615.80).

Secretary of State: Alison Lundergan Grimes (D.), since Jan. 2012 ($113,615.80).

Government Website: <http://kentucky.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2010) was $32,376.

Budget

In 2009 total state revenue was $19,008m. Total expenditure was $26,853m. (including: education, $8,866m.; public welfare, $6,842m.; highways, $1,906m.; hospitals, $1,262m.; government administration, $801m.) Debt outstanding in 2009, $13,364m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2010 was $144,612m. (provisional), ranking Kentucky 28th in the United States. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 3.2% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In 2009 production was 90,630m. kWh, of which 84,038m. kWh was from coal.

Oil and Gas

Production of crude oil in 2008 was 2.6m. bbls; natural gas, 114bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 681 sq. miles. Kentucky has 12 major river basins that contain nearly 90,000 miles of streams. Virtually all of these streams form part of the larger Ohio River basin. The state's surface water includes more than 2,700 natural and artificial impoundments, of which roughly one-third are larger than ten acres in size. Wetlands comprise approximately 300,000 acres in the state. Kentucky has two major ground water regions—the alluvial valley along the Ohio River and beach and gravel deposits located west of Kentucky Lake.

Minerals

The principal mineral is coal: 107.3m. short tons were mined in 2009, value $6.3bn. In 2008, 51.0m. tonnes of crushed stone were mined, value $411m.; 7.6m. tonnes of sand and gravel, value $41.6m.; 0.4m. tonnes of clay, value $8.2m. Other minerals include fluorspar, ball clay, gemstones, dolomite, cement and lime. Total value of non-fuel mineral production for 2006 was $806m.

Agriculture

In 2007, 85,260 farms covered an area of 13.99m. acres. The average farm was 164 acres. In 2007 the average value of farmland and buildings per acre was $2,682.

Farm income, 2006: from crops, $1,299m.; and from livestock, $2,708m. The net farm income in 2006 was $1,742m. The chief crop is tobacco: production, in 2007, 196.3m. lb. Kentucky is the USA's second largest tobacco producer, after North Carolina. Other principal crops include corn (172m. bu. in 2007), soybeans, hay and wheat.

Stock-raising is important in Kentucky, which has long been famous for its horses. There were 175,500 horses in the state in 2007, a number exceeded only in Texas. The livestock in 2007 included 2.40m. all cattle and calves, 90,000 milch cows, 37,000 sheep, 348,000 swine and 4.58m. laying hens.

Forestry

In 2007 Kentucky had 11.97m. acres forested land, of which 744,000 acres were national forest.

INDUSTRY

In 2006 Kentucky's 4,131 manufacturing establishments had 257,000 employees, earning $10,842m. The value added by manufacture in 2006 was $43,009m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2007, 1,869,000. Employees by branch, 2007 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 387; government 325; manufacturing, 256; education and health services, 241; professional and business services, 182. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 10.3%.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

In 2007 there were 78,587 miles of roads comprising 12,479 miles of urban road and 66,108 miles of rural road. There were 3,546,620 registered motor vehicles.

Rail

In 2009 there were 2,558 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). There were 13 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Kentucky in 2009 totalled 76.8m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 41.0m. tons.

Civil Aviation

There were (2005) 62 publicly used airports. Commercial airports providing scheduled airline services in Kentucky are located in Erlanger (Covington/Cincinnati area), Louisville, Lexington, Owensboro and Paducah. There were 10,184,752 passenger enplanements statewide in 2007.

Shipping

There is barge traffic on the 1,100 miles of navigable rivers. There are six public river ports, over 30 contract terminal facilities and 150 private terminal operations. Kentucky's waterways have access to the junction of the upper and lower Mississippi, Ohio and Tennessee-Tombigbee navigation corridors.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

There are 12 adult prisons within the Department of Corrections Adult Institutions and three privately run adult institutions. In Dec. 2008 there were 21,706 prison inmates. The death penalty is authorized for murder and kidnapping. As of Dec. 2011 there were 35 persons (including one female) under sentence of death. There was one execution in 2008 but none since.

Education

Attendance at school between the ages of six and 16 years (inclusive) is compulsory, the normal term being 175 days. In fall 2007 there were 666,225 pupils and 43,536 teachers in public elementary and secondary schools. Public school classroom teachers' salaries (2008–09) averaged $49,539. The average total expenditure per pupil in fiscal year 2008 was $8,740.

There were also 5,640 teachers working in 400 private elementary and secondary schools with 76,140 students in fall 2007.

In 2008–09 the state had 24 public, 27 not-for-profit independent and 22 for-profit independent degree-granting institutions. There were 211,234 students at public degree-granting institutions in fall 2007 and 46,979 students at private degree-granting institutions. In 2005–06 there were 23 community colleges with a total enrolment of 84,669 students. The largest of the institutions of higher learning are (fall 2009): University of Kentucky, with 26,295 students; University of Louisville, 21,016; Western Kentucky University, 20,712; Eastern Kentucky University, 16,268; Northern Kentucky University, 15,378; Murray State University, 10,071; Morehead State University, 8,822; Kentucky State University, 2,834. Five of the several privately-endowed colleges of standing are Berea College, Berea; Centre College, Danville; Transylvania University, Lexington; Georgetown College, Georgetown; and Bellarmine College, Louisville.

Health

In 2007 there were 104 community hospitals with 14,400 beds. A total of 612,000 patients were admitted during the year.

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2006 totalled 689,226. In fiscal year 2006 a total of 899,616 people in Kentucky received Medicaid. In Dec. 2008 there were 844,573 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 60,627 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2008.

RELIGION

The chief religious denominations in 2000 were: Southern Baptists, with 979,994 members, Roman Catholics (406,021), United Methodists (208,720), Christian Churches and Church of Christ (106,638) and Christian (Disciples of Christ) (67,611).

CULTURE

The Kentucky Center for the Arts hosts productions by the Kentucky Opera Association, the Louisville Ballet, the Louisville Orchestra and Broadway touring productions.

Tourism

In 2005 tourist expenditure was $9.4bn., producing over $952m. in tax revenues and supporting 176,200 jobs. The state had (2005) 52 state parks.

Louisiana

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of Choctaw and Caddo tribes, the area was claimed for France in 1682. In 1718 the French founded New Orleans which became the centre of a crown colony in 1731. France ceded the area west of the Mississippi (most of the present state) to Spain in 1762 and the eastern area, north of New Orleans, to Britain in 1763. The British section passed to the USA in 1783 but France bought back the rest from Spain in 1800, including New Orleans and the mouth of the Mississippi. The USA, fearing exclusion from a strategically important and commercially promising shipping area, persuaded France to sell Louisiana in 1803. The present states of Missouri, Arkansas, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska and Oklahoma were included in the purchase.

The area became the Territory of New Orleans in 1804 and was admitted to the Union as a state in 1812. The economy initially depended on cotton and sugarcane plantations. The population was of French, Spanish and black descent, with a growing number of American settlers. Plantation interests succeeded in achieving secession in 1861 but New Orleans was occupied by the Union in 1862. Planter influence was reasserted in the late 19th century, imposing rigid segregation and denying black rights.

The state has become mainly urban industrial, with the Mississippi ports growing rapidly. There is petroleum and natural gas, and a strong tourist industry based on the French culture and Caribbean atmosphere of New Orleans.

Louisiana, and New Orleans in particular, suffered widespread damage and loss of life after Hurricane Katrina struck the Gulf Coast on 31 Aug. 2005.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Louisiana is bounded north by Arkansas, east by Mississippi, south by the Gulf of Mexico and west by Texas. Land area, 43,204 sq. miles (111,898 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 4,533,372, an increase of 1.4% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1930	1,322,712	776,326	1,536	1,019	2,101,593	46.5
			All others
1980	2,911,243	1,237,263	55,466		4,205,900	93.5
1990	2,839,138	1,299,281	81,554		4,219,973	96.9
2000	2,856,161	1,451,944	160,871		4,468,976	102.6
2010	2,836,192	1,452,396	244,784		4,533,372	104.9

Of the total population in 2010, 2,314,080 were female and 3,415,357 were 18 years old or older. The Hispanic population was 192,560 in 2010, an increase of 78.7% on the 2000 census figure of 107,738.

The largest cities with their 2000 census population are: New Orleans, 484,674; Baton Rouge (the capital), 227,818; Shreveport, 200,145; Lafayette, 100,257; Lake Charles, 71,757; Kenner, 70,517; Bossier City, 56,461; Monroe, 53,107. In Jan. 2006 the population of New Orleans was estimated at 144,000 in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, making Baton Rouge temporarily the most populous city in Louisiana. By 1 Jan. 2007 population estimates for New Orleans had increased to 255,000.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 65,268 (14.8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 41,217 (9.3). Infant deaths, 2006, 9.9 per 1,000 live births. Marriages, 2005, 36,600 (8.1 per 1,000 population).

CLIMATE

New Orleans, Jan. 54°F (12.2°C), July 83°F (28.3°C). Annual rainfall 58" (1,458 mm). Louisiana belongs to the Gulf Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1974. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 39 members and a House of Representatives of 105 members, both chosen for four years. Sessions are annual; a fiscal session is held in even years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Louisiana sends seven members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Mary Landrieu (D. 1997–2015) and David Vitter (R. 2005–17).

Louisiana is divided into 64 parishes (corresponding to the counties of other states). The capital is Baton Rouge.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Louisiana with 58.6% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Bobby Jindal (R.), 2012–16 (salary: $130,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Jay Dardenne (R.), 2012–16 ($115,000).

Secretary of State: Tom Schedler (R.), 2012–16 ($115,000).

Government Website: <http://www.louisiana.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2010) was $37,021.

Budget

In 2009 total revenue was $22,913m. Total expenditure was $31,099m. (education, $9,239m.; public welfare, $4,867m.; highways, $2,667m.; hospitals, $1,050m.; government administration, $955m.) Debt outstanding, in 2009, $17,505m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2010 was $195,171m. (provisional), ranking Louisiana 24th in the United States. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 2.6% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Electricity

In 2009 production was 91.0bn. kWh, of which 44.0bn. kWh was from natural gas.

Oil and Gas

Louisiana ranks fourth among states of the USA for oil production and sixth for production of natural gas. Production in 2008 of crude oil was 73m. bbls; marketed production of natural gas totalled 1,377bn. cu. ft.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 8,278 sq. miles.

Minerals

Principal non-fuel minerals are salt, sand, gravel and lime. Total non-fuel mineral production in 2006 was $481m.

Agriculture

The state is divided into two parts, the uplands and the alluvial and swamp regions of the coast. A delta occupies about one-third of the total area. Manufacturing is the leading industry, but agriculture is important. The number of farms in 2007 was 30,106 covering 8-11m. acres; the average farm had 269 acres. Average value of farmland per acre, in 2007, was $2,058.

Farm income, 2006: from crops, $1,322m.; and from livestock, $864m. The net farm income in 2006 was $766m. Principal crops, 2007 production, were: soybeans, 24-72m. bu.; sugarcane, 14-09m. tons; rice, 23-12m. cwt; corn, 114-67m. bu.; cotton, 699,000 bales; sorghum, 22-40m. bu.

Forestry

In 2007 the state had 14-22m. acres forested land, of which 695,000 acres were national forest. Production 2003: sawtimber, 1,266-18m. bd ft; cordwood, 6-74m. standard cords. The economic impact of forestry and forest products industries in Louisiana was $3-7bn. in 2003.

Fisheries

In 2009 Louisiana's commercial fisheries catch for all species totalled 1,147-4m. lb, valued at $271-7m. Louisiana's commercial fishery landings in terms of weight are second only behind those of Alaska. In 2005 Louisiana had 873 fish farms, more than any other state.

INDUSTRY

Louisiana's leading manufacturing activity is the production of chemicals, followed, in order of importance, by the processing of petroleum and coal products, the production of transportation equipment and production of paper products. In 2006 the state's 3,323 manufacturing establishments had 141,000 employees, earning $7,085m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2006 was $77,850m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2007, 1,921,000. Employees by branch, 2007 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 383; government, 359; education and health services, 247; professional and business services, 201; leisure and hospitality, 194. The unemployment rate was 7-7% in Dec. 2010.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 61,008 miles of road (44,731 miles rural). Registered motor vehicles numbered 3,926,741.

Rail

In 2009 there were 2,830 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). There were 17 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Louisiana in 2009 totalled 25-2m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 30-0m. tons. There is a tramway in New Orleans.

Civil Aviation

In 2004 there were 71 public airports. There were 5,071,477 passenger enplanements statewide in 2007.

Shipping

The port of South Louisiana is the busiest in the country and the second busiest after Houston for foreign trade cargo. In 2009 South Louisiana handled 212-6m. tons of cargo (109-5m. tons of domestic cargo and 103-1m. tons of foreign trade cargo). Other major ports are New Orleans, Lake Charles, Baton Rouge and Plaquemines, which ranked as the USA's 6th, 12th, 14th and 15th busiest ports respectively in 2009. The Mississippi and other waterways provide 7,500 miles of navigable water.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

In Dec. 2008 there were 38,381 federal and state prisoners. There was one execution in 2010 but none in 2011.

Education

School attendance is compulsory between the ages of seven and 18. In 2007-08 there were 1,470 public schools with 681,038 pupils and 48,610 teachers. There were 390 private schools in fall 2007 with 137,460 pupils and 9,080 teachers. Teachers' average salary in 2008-09 was $49,284. In 2008-09 the state had 51 public and 34 non-public degree-granting institutions. There were 193,316 students at public degree-granting institutions in fall 2007 and 31,438 students at private degree-granting institutions.

Enrolment, 2003-04, in the University of Louisiana System was 83,303 (Lafayette, 16,208; Southeastern, 15,662; Louisiana Tech., 11,960; Northwestern, 10,505; Monroe, 8,592; McNeese, 8,447; Nicholls, 7,260; Grambling, 4,669); Louisiana State University, 62,841 (with campuses at Alexandria, Baton Rouge, Eunice, New Orleans and Shreveport); Southern University System, 15,044. Major private institutions: Tulane University, 9,920; Loyola University, 5,900; Xavier University, 3,994; Dillard University, 1,953.

Health

In 2007 there were 129 community hospitals with 15,500 beds. A total of 631,000 patients were admitted during the year.

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2006 totalled 615,631. In fiscal year 2006 a total of 1,148,972 people in Louisiana received Medicaid. In Dec. 2008 there were 748,171 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. In fiscal year 2003-04 Family Independence Temporary Assistance Program (FITAP) payments to 434,707 recipients totalled $40,056,233. In the fiscal year 2003-04 Food Stamp benefits totalling $735,959,328 were paid to 7,972,477 recipients.

RELIGION

The Roman Catholic Church is the largest denomination in Louisiana. The leading Protestant Churches are Southern Baptist and Methodist.

CULTURE

Tourism

Tourism is the second most important industry for state income. In 2003 there were over 25m. visitors to the state. Tourism was a $9-4bn. industry in 2003; it provided more than 119,900 jobs and generated in excess of $1-2bn. in tax revenue for federal, state and local governments.

Maine

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally occupied by Algonquian-speaking tribes, the Territory was disputed between groups of British settlers, and between the British and French, throughout the 17th and most of the 18th centuries. After 1652 Maine was governed as part of Massachusetts, and French claims finally failed in 1763. Most of the early settlers were English and Protestant Irish, with many Quebec French.

The Massachusetts settlers gained control when the first colonist, Sir Ferdinando Gorges, supported the losing royalist side in the English civil war. During the English-American war of 1812, Maine residents claimed that the Massachusetts government did not protect them against British raids. Maine was separated from Massachusetts and entered the Union as a state in 1820.

Maine is a mountainous state and even the coastline is rugged, but the coastal belt is where most settlement has developed. In the 19th century there were manufacturing towns making use of cheap water-power and the rocky shore supported a shell-fish industry. The latter still flourishes, together with intensive horticulture, producing potatoes and fruit. The other main economic activity is forestry for timber, pulp and paper.

The capital is Augusta, a river trading post which was fortified against Indian attacks in 1754, incorporated as a town in 1797 and chosen as capital in 1832.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Maine is bounded west, north and east by Canada, southeast by the Atlantic, south and southwest by New Hampshire. Land area, 30,843 sq. miles (79,883 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,328,361, an increase of 4.2% since 2000.

Population for five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile

Maryland

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first European visitors found Algonquian-speaking tribes, often under attack by Iroquois from further north. The first white settlement was made by the Calvert family, British Roman Catholics, in 1634. The settlers received some legislative rights in 1638. In 1649 their assembly passed the Act of Toleration, granting freedom of worship to all Christians. A peace treaty was signed with the Iroquois in 1652, after which it was possible for farming settlements to expand north and west. The capital (formerly at St Mary's City) was moved to Annapolis in 1694. Baltimore, which became the state's main city, was founded in 1729.

The first industry was tobacco-growing, which was based on slave-worked plantations. There were also many immigrant British small farmers, tradesmen and indentured servants.

At the close of the War of Independence, the treaty of Paris was ratified in Annapolis. Maryland became a state of the Union in 1788. In 1791 the state ceded land for the new federal capital, Washington, and its economy has depended on the capital's proximity ever since. Baltimore also grew as a port and industrial city, attracting European immigration in the 19th century. Although in sympathy with the south, Maryland remained in the Union in the Civil War albeit under the imposition of martial law.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Maryland is bounded north by Pennsylvania, east by Delaware and the Atlantic, south by Virginia and West Virginia, with the Potomac River forming most of the boundary, and west by West Virginia. Chesapeake Bay almost cuts off the eastern end of the state from the rest. Land area, 9,707 sq. miles (25,142 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 5,773,552, an increase of 9.0% since 2000.

Population for five federal censuses was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1920	1,204,737	244,479	32	400	1,449,661	145.8

Massachusetts

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first European settlement was at Plymouth, where the Mayflower landed its English religious separatists in 1620. In 1626–30 more colonists arrived, the main body being English Puritans who founded a Puritan commonwealth. This commonwealth, of about 1,000 colonists led by John Winthrop, became the Massachusetts Bay Colony and was founded under a company charter. Following disagreement between the English government and the colony, the charter was withdrawn in 1684, but in 1691 a new charter united a number of settlements under the name of Massachusetts Bay. The colony's government was rigidly theocratic.

Shipbuilding, iron-working and manufacturing were more important than farming, the land being poor. The colony was Protestant and of English descent until the War of Independence. The former colony adopted its present constitution in 1780. In the struggle which ended in the separation of the American colonies from the mother country, Massachusetts took the foremost part, and on 6 Feb. 1788 became the 6th state to ratify the US constitution. The state acquired its present boundaries (having previously included Maine) in 1820.

During the 19th century, industrialization and immigration from Europe increased while Catholic Irish and Italian immigrants began to change the population's character. The main inland industry was textile manufacture, the main coastal occupation, whaling; both have now gone. Boston has remained the most important city of New England, attracting a large black population since 1950.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Massachusetts is bounded north by Vermont and New Hampshire, east by the Atlantic, south by Connecticut and Rhode Island and west by New York. Land area, 7,800 sq. miles (20,202 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 6,547,629, an increase of 3.1% since 2000.

Population at five federal census years was:

	White	Black	Other	Total	Per sq. mile
1950	4,611,503	73,171	5,840	4,690,514	598.4
1980	5,362,836	221,279	152,922	5,737,037	732.0
1990	5,405,374	300,130	310,921	6,016,425	767.6
2000	5,367,286	343,454	638,357	6,349,097	809.8
2010	5,265,236	434,398	847,995	6,547,629	839.4

Of the total population in 2010, 3,381,001 were female and 5,128,706 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 627,654, up from 428,729 in 2000 (an increase of 46.4%).

Population of the largest cities at the 2000 census: Boston (the capital), 589,141; Worcester, 172,648; Springfield, 152,082; Lowell, 105,167; Cambridge, 101,355; Brockton, 94,304; New Bedford, 93,768; Fall River, 91,938; Lynn, 89,050; Quincy, 88,025; Newton, 83,829. The Boston–Worcester–Lawrence metropolitan area had a 2000 census population of 5,819,100.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The French were the first European settlers, establishing a fur trade with the local Algonquian Indians in the late 17th century. They founded Sault Ste Marie in 1668 and Detroit in 1701. In 1763 Michigan passed to Britain, along with other French territory east of the Mississippi, and from Britain it passed to the USA in 1783. Britain, however, kept a force at Detroit until 1796, and recaptured Detroit in 1812. Regular American settlement did not begin until later. The Territory of Michigan (1805) had its boundaries extended after 1818 and 1834. It was admitted to the Union as a state (with its present boundaries) in 1837.

During the 19th century there was rapid industrial growth, especially in mining and metalworking. The largest groups of immigrants were British, German, Irish and Dutch. Other groups came from Scandinavia, Poland and Italy. Many settled as miners, farmers and industrial workers. The motor industry became dominant, especially in Detroit. Lake Michigan ports shipped bulk cargo of iron ore and grain.

Detroit was the capital until 1847, when that function passed to Lansing. Detroit remained, however, an important centre of flour-milling and shipping and, after the First World War, of the motor industry.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Michigan is divided into two by Lake Michigan. The northern part is bounded south by the lake and by Wisconsin, west and north by Lake Superior, east by the North Channel of Lake Huron; between the two latter lakes the Canadian border runs through straits at Sault Ste Marie. The southern part is bounded in the west and north by Lake Michigan, east by Lake Huron, Ontario and Lake Erie, south by Ohio and Indiana. Total area is 96,714 sq. miles (250,487 sq. km) of which 56,539 sq. miles (146,435 sq. km) are land and 40,175 sq. miles (104,052 sq. km) water. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 9,883,640, a fall of 0.6% since 2000. Michigan was the only state whose population fell between 2000 and 2010.

Population of five federal census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	2,785,247	17,115	7,519	292	2,810,173	48.9
			All others
1980	7,872,241	1,199,023		190,814	9,262,078	162.6
1990	7,756,086	1,291,706		247,505	9,295,297	160.0
2000	7,966,053	1,412,742		559,649	9,938,444	175.0
2010	7,803,120	1,400,362		680,158	9,883,640	174.8

Of the total population in 2010, 5,035,526 were female and 7,539,572 were 18 years old or more. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 436,358, up from 323,877 in 2000 (an increase of 34.7%).

Populations of the chief cities in 2000 were: Detroit, 951,270; Grand Rapids, 197,800; Warren, 138,247; Flint, 124,943; Sterling Heights, 124,471; Lansing (the capital), 119,128; Ann Arbor, 114,024; Livonia, 100,545. The Detroit–Ann Arbor–Flint metropolitan area had a 2000 census population of 5,456,428.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 121,127 (12.1 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 88,418 (8.8). Infant mortality, 2006, 7.4 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 59,200 (5.9 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 35,600 (3.5).

CLIMATE

(22.0°C). Annual rainfall 34" (860 mm). Lansing, Jan. 22°F (−5.5°C), July 70.5°F (21.5°C). Annual rainfall 29" (740 mm). Michigan belongs to the Great Lakes climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution became effective on 1 Jan. 1964. The Senate consists of 38 members, elected for four years, and the House of Representatives of 110 members, elected for two years. Sessions are biennial.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Michigan sends 15 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Carl Levin (D. 1979–2015) and Debbie Stabenow (D. 2001–13).

The capital is Lansing. The state is organized in 83 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won Michigan with 57.4% of the vote (John Kerry won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Rick Snyder (R.), 2011–15 (salary: $159,300, but decided only to take $1).

Lieut.-Governor: Brian Calley (R.), 2011–15 ($111,510).

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state in 2010 was $344,871m. (provisional), ranking Michigan 12th in the United States. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 2.9% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In 2009 production was 101.2bn. kWh, of which 66.8bn. kWh was from coal.

Oil and Gas

Natural gas production in 2008 was 272bn. cu. ft; production of crude oil was 6.2m. bbls.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 39,912 sq. miles.

Minerals

Domestic non-fuel mineral output in 2006 was valued at $1,910m. according to the US Geological Survey. Output was mainly iron ore, cement, crushed stone, sand and gravel.

Agriculture

The state, formerly agricultural, is now chiefly industrial. It contained 55,000 farms in 2008 with a total area of 10.0m. acres; the average farm was 182 acres. The farm real estate average value per acre in 2009 was $3,750. Principal crops are corn, soybeans, wheat, sugar beets, dry beans, potatoes and hay. Principal fruit crops include apples, blueberries, cherries (tart and sweet), grapes, peaches and strawberries. In 2008 there were 353,000 milch cows, 92,000 beef cows and 1.02m. pigs. Output in 2008 included 110m. lb of blueberries, 22.2m. pots of geraniums and 1.7m. cwt of black beans. Farm income in 2008: total $6,607m.; crops, $4,078m.; livestock and products, $2,529m. The net farm income in 2008 was $2-03bn.

Forestry

Forests covered 19.3m. acres in 2009, with 2.6m. acres of national forest (2008). In 2009 about 18.7m. acres was timberland acreage. Three-quarters of the timber volume was hardwoods, principally hard and soft maples, aspen, oak and birch. Christmas trees are another important forest crop. Net annual growth of growing stock and saw timber was 697m. cu. ft and 2.8bn. bd ft respectively in 2008.

Fisheries

In 2009 recreational fishing licences were purchased by 1,023,433 residents and 285,416 non-residents. Recreational fishing revenue (2006) was approximately $1.67bn.

INDUSTRY

Manufacturing is important; among principal products are motor vehicles and trucks, machinery, fabricated metals, primary metals, cement, chemicals, furniture, paper, foodstuffs, rubber, plastics and pharmaceuticals. In 2006 Michigan's 13,740 manufacturing establishments had 615,000 employees, earning $30,905m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2006 was $89,022m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural labour force in 2007 was 4,262,000. Employees by branch, 2007 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 788; government, 657; manufacturing, 617; education and health services, 595; professional and business services, 573. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 11.1%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from Michigan totalled $44.8bn., up from $32.7bn. in 2009 although down from $45.1bn. in 2008.

Minnesota

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Minnesota remained an Indian territory until the middle of the 19th century, the main groups being Chippewa and Sioux. In the 17th century there had been some French exploration, but no permanent settlement. After passing under the nominal control of France, Britain and Spain, the area became part of the Louisiana Purchase and was sold to the USA in 1803.

Fort Snelling was founded in 1819. Early settlers came from other states, especially New England, to exploit the great forests. Lumbering gave way to homesteading, and the American settlers were joined by Germans, Scandinavians and Poles. Agriculture, mining and forest industries became the mainstays of the economy. Minneapolis, founded as a village in 1856, grew first as a lumber centre, processing the logs floated down the Minnesota River, and then as a centre of flour-milling and grain marketing. St Paul, its twin city across the river, became Territorial capital in 1849 and state capital in 1858. St Paul also stands at the head of navigation on the Mississippi which rises in Minnesota.

The Territory (1849) included parts of North and South Dakota, but at its admission to the Union in 1858, the state of Minnesota had its present boundaries.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Minnesota is bounded north by Canada, east by Lake Superior and Wisconsin, with the Mississippi River forming the boundary in the southeast, south by Iowa, west by South and North Dakota, with the Red River forming the boundary in the northwest. Land area, 79,627 sq. miles (206,232 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 5,303,925, an increase of 7.8% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	2,059,227	7,084	9,053	344	2,075,708	25.7
			All others
1980	3,935,770	53,344	86,856		4,075,970	51.4
1990	4,130,395	94,944	149,760		4,375,099	55.0
2000	4,400,282	171,731	347,466		4,919,479	61.8
2010	4,524,062	274,412	505,451		5,303,925	66.6

Of the total population in 2010, 2,671,793 were female and 4,019,862 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 250,258, up from 143,382 in 2000 (an increase of 74.5%).

The largest cities (with 2000 census population) are Minneapolis (362,618), St Paul (the capital; 287,151), Duluth (86,918), Rochester (85,806) and Bloomington (85,172). The Minneapolis–St Paul metropolitan area had a 2000 census population of 2,968,806.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 72,421 (13.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 38,487 (7.4). Infant mortality, 2006, 5.2 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 30,900 (6.0 per 1,000 population); divorces (2004), 14,200 (2.8).

CLIMATE

Duluth, Jan. 8°F (−13.3°C), July 63°F (17.2°C). Annual rainfall 29" (719 mm). Minneapolis–St. Paul, Jan. 12°F (−11.1°C), July 71°F (21.7°C). Annual rainfall 26" (656 mm). Minnesota belongs to the Great Lakes climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The original constitution dated from 1857; it was extensively amended and given a new structure in 1974. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 67 members, elected for four years, and a House of Representatives of 134 members, elected for two years. It meets for 120 days within each two years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Minnesota sends eight members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Amy Klobuchar (D. 2007–13) and Al Franken (D. 2009–15).

The capital is St Paul. There are 87 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won Minnesota with 54.1% of the vote (John Kerry won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Mark Dayton (Democratic-Farmer-Labor), 2011–15 (salary: $120,303).

Mississippi

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Mississippi was one of the territories claimed by France and ceded to Britain in 1763. The indigenous people were Choctaw and Natchez. French settlers at first traded amicably, but in the course of three wars (1716, 1723 and 1729) the French allied with the Choctaw to drive the Natchez out. The Natchez massacred the settlers of Fort Rosalie, which the French had founded in 1716 and which was later renamed Natchez.

In 1783 the area became part of the USA except for Natchez which was under Spanish control until 1798. The United States then made it the capital of the Territory of Mississippi. The boundaries of the Territory were extended in 1804 and again in 1812. In 1817 it was divided into two territories, with the western part becoming the state of Mississippi. (The eastern part became the state of Alabama in 1819.) The city of Jackson was laid out in 1822 as the new state capital.

A cotton plantation economy developed, based on black slave labour and by 1860 the majority of the population was black. Mississippi joined the Confederacy during the Civil War. After defeat and reconstruction there was a return to rigid segregation and denial of black rights. This situation lasted until the 1960s. There was a black majority until the Second World War, when out-migration began to change the pattern. By 1990 about 35% of the population was black, and manufacture (especially clothing and textiles) had become the largest single employer of labour.

Mississippi suffered widespread damage and loss of life after Hurricane Katrina struck the Gulf Coast on 31 Aug. 2005.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Mississippi is bounded in the north by Tennessee, east by Alabama, south by the Gulf of Mexico and Louisiana, and west by the Mississippi River forming the boundary with Louisiana and Arkansas. Land area, 46,923 sq. miles (121,531 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,967,297, an increase of 4.3% since 2000.

Population of five federal census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	786,111	1,009,487	1,253	263	1,797,114	38.8
			All others
1980	1,615,190	887,206	18,242		2,520,638	53.0
1990	1,633,461	915,057	24,698		2,573,216	54.8
2000	1,746,099	1,033,809	64,750		2,844,658	60.6
2010	1,754,684	1,098,385	114,228		2,967,297	63.2

Missouri

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Territory of several Indian groups, including the Missouri, the area was not settled by European immigrants until the 18th century. The French founded Ste Genevieve in 1735, partly as a lead-mining community. St Louis was founded as a fur-trading base in 1764. The area was nominally under Spanish rule from 1770 until 1800 when it passed back to France. In 1803 the USA bought it as part of the Louisiana Purchase.

St Louis was made the capital of the whole Louisiana Territory in 1805, and of a new Missouri Territory in 1812. In that year American immigration increased markedly. The Territory became a state in 1821. Bitter disputes between slave-owning and anti-slavery factions led to the former obtaining statehood without the prohibition of slavery required of all other new states north of latitude 36° 30'. This was achieved by the Missouri Compromise of 1820. The Compromise was repealed in 1854 and declared unconstitutional in 1857. During the Civil War the state held to the Union side, although St Louis was placed under martial law.

With the development of steamboat traffic on the Missouri and Mississippi rivers, and the expansion of railways, the state became the transport hub of all western movement. Lead and other mining remained important, as did livestock farming. European settlers came from Germany, Britain and Ireland.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Missouri is bounded north by Iowa, east by the Mississippi River forming the boundary with Illinois and Kentucky, south by Arkansas, southeast by Tennessee, southwest by Oklahoma, west by Kansas and Nebraska, with the Missouri River forming the boundary in the northwest. Montana*KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of many Indian hunters including the Sioux, Cheyenne and Chippewa, Montana was not settled by American colonists until the 19th century. The area passed to the USA with the Louisiana Purchase of 1803, but the area west of the Rockies was disputed with Britain until 1846. Trappers and fur-traders were the first immigrants, and the fortified trading post at Fort Benton (1846) became the first permanent settlement. Colonization increased when gold was found in 1862. Montana was created a separate Territory (out of Idaho and Dakota Territories) in 1864. In 1866 large-scale grazing of sheep and cattle provoked violent confrontation with the indigenous people whose hunting lands were invaded. Indian wars led to the defeat of federal forces at Little Bighorn in 1876 and at Big Hole Basin in 1877, but by 1880 the Indians had been moved to reservations. Montana became a state in 1889.

Helena, the capital, was founded as a mining town in the 1860s. In the early 20th century there were many European immigrants who settled as farmers or as copper-miners, especially at Butte.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Montana is bounded north by Canada, east by North and South Dakota, south by Wyoming and west by Idaho and the Bitterroot Range of the Rocky Mountains. Land area, 145,546 sq. miles (376,962 sq. km). In 2000 American Indian lands covered 13,358 sq. miles (13,094 sq. miles in reservations and 264 sq. miles in off-reservation trust land). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 989,415, an increase of 9.7% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/ Alaska Native	Asian	Others	Total (including others)	Per sq. mile
1910	360,580	1,834	10,745	2,870	376,053	2.6
1980	740,148	1,786	37,270	2,503	786,690	5.3
1990	741,111	2,381	47,679	4,259	799,065	5.4
2000	817,229	2,692	56,068	5,161	902,195	6.2
2010	884,961	4,027	62,555	6,253	989,415	6.8

Of the total population in 2010, 496,667 were male and 765,852 were 18 years old or older. Median age, 39.8 years. Households, 409,607. In 2010 Montana's Hispanic population was 28,565, up from 18,081 in 2000 (an increase of 58.0%).

Nebraska

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Nebraska region was first reached by Europeans from Mexico under the Spanish general Coronado in 1541. It was ceded by France to Spain in 1763, returned to France in 1801, and sold by Napoleon to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803. During the 1840s the Platte River valley was the trail for thousands of pioneers' wagons heading for Oregon and California. The need to serve and protect the trail led to the creation of Nebraska as a Territory in 1854. In 1862 the Homestead Act opened the area for settlement, but colonization was slow until the Union Pacific Railroad was completed in 1869. Omaha, developed as the starting point of the Union Pacific, became one of the largest railway towns in the country.

Nebraska became a state in 1867, with approximately its present boundaries except that it later received small areas from the Dakotas. Many early settlers were from Europe, brought in by railway-company schemes, but from the late 1880s eastern Nebraska suffered catastrophic drought. Crop and stock farming recovered but crop growing was only established in the west by means of irrigation.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Nebraska is bounded in the north by South Dakota, with the Missouri River forming the boundary in the northeast and the boundary with Iowa and Missouri to the east, south by Kansas, southwest by Colorado and west by Wyoming. Land area, 76,824 sq. miles (198,974 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,826,341, an increase of 6.7% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,180,293	7,689	3,502	730	1,192,214	15.5
			All others
1980	1,490,381	48,390	31,054		1,569,825	20.5
1990	1,480,558	57,404	40,423		1,578,385	20.5
2000	1,533,261	68,541	109,461		1,711,263	22.3
2010	1,572,838	82,885	170,618		1,826,341	23.8

Of the total population in 2010, 920,045 were female and 1,367,120 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the estimated Hispanic population of Nebraska was 167,405, up from 94,425 in 2000 (a rise of 77.3%). The largest cities in the state are: Omaha, with a census population, 2000, of 390,007; Lincoln (the capital), 225,581; Bellevue, 44,382; Grand Island, 42,940; Kearney, 27,431; Fremont, 25,174; Hastings, 24,064; North Platte, 23,878; Norfolk, 23,516.

In 2006 the Bureau of Indian Affairs administered 64,932 acres, of which 21,742 acres were allotted to tribal control.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 26,989 (15.1 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 15,455 (8.7). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 5.6 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 12,000 (6.8 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 6,200 (3.5).

CLIMATE

Nevada

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was part of Spanish America until 1821 when it became part of the newly independent state of Mexico. Following a war between Mexico and the USA, Nevada was ceded to the USA as part of California in 1848. Settlement began in 1849 and the area was separated from California and joined with Utah Territory in 1850. In 1859 a rich deposit of silver was found in the Comstock Lode. Virginia City was founded as a mining town and immigration increased rapidly. Nevada Territory was formed in 1861. During the Civil War the Federal government, allegedly in order to obtain the wealth of silver for the Union cause, agreed to admit Nevada to the Union as the 36th state. This was in 1864. Areas of Arizona and Utah Territories were added in 1866–67.

The mining boom lasted until 1882, by which time cattle ranching in the valleys, where the climate is less arid, had become equally important. Carson City, the capital, developed in association with the nearby mining industry. The largest cities, Las Vegas and Reno, grew in the 20th century with the building of the Hoover dam, the introduction of legal gambling and of easy divorce.

After 1950 much of the desert area was adopted by the Federal government for weapons testing and other military purposes.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Nevada is bounded north by Oregon and Idaho, east by Utah, southeast by Arizona, with the Colorado River forming most of the boundary, south and west by California. Land area, 109,781 sq. miles (284,332 sq. km). In 2003 the federal government owned 91.9% of the land area.

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,700,551, an increase of 35.1% since 2000. Nevada had the fastest-growing population of any state between the censuses of 2000 and 2010, continuing a trend stretching back to 1950.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/Alaska Native	Asian	Total (including others)	Per sq. mile
1910	74,276	513	5,240	1,846	81,875	0.7
1980	700,360	50,999	13,308	35,841	800,508	7.2
1990	1,012,695	78,771	19,637	90,730	1,201,833	10.9
2000	1,501,886	135,477	26,420	334,474	1,998,257	18.2
2010	1,786,688	218,626	32,062	195,436	2,700,551	24.6

Of the total population in 2010, 1,363,616 were male and 2,035,543 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 716,501, up from 393,970 in 2000 (an increase of 81.9%).

The largest cities in 2000 were: Las Vegas, 478,434; Reno, 180,480; Henderson, 175,381; North Las Vegas, 115,448; Sparks, 66,346; Carson City (the capital), 52,457.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, were 39,506 (15.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 20,790 (8.0). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 6.4 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 131,800 (52.9 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 16,700 (6.7).

New Hampshire

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was part of a grant by the English crown to John Mason and fellow-colonists and was first settled in 1623. In 1629 an area between the Merrimack and Piscatagua rivers was called New Hampshire. More settlements followed, and in 1641 they were taken under the jurisdiction of the governor of Massachusetts. New Hampshire became a separate colony in 1679.

After the War of Independence New Hampshire was one of the 13 original states of the Union, ratifying the US constitution in 1788. The state constitution, which dates from 1776, was almost totally rewritten in 1784 and amended again in 1792.

The settlers were Protestants from Britain and Northern Ireland. They developed manufacturing industries, especially shoe-making, textiles and clothing, to which large numbers of French Canadians were attracted after the Civil War.

Portsmouth, originally a fishing settlement, was the colonial capital and is the only seaport. In 1808 the state capital was moved to Concord (having had no permanent home since 1775); Concord produced the Concord Coach which was widely used on the stagecoach routes of the West until 1900.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

New Hampshire is bounded in the north by Canada, east by Maine and the Atlantic, south by Massachusetts and west by Vermont. Land area, 8,953 sq. miles (23,187 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,316,470, an increase of 6.5% since 2000.

Population at five federal censuses was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	429,906	564	34	68	430,572	47.7
			All others
1980	910,099	3,990	6,521		920,610	101.9
1990	1,087,433	7,198	14,621		1,109,252	123.7
2000	1,186,851	9,035	39,900		1,235,786	137.8
2010	1,236,050	15,035	65,385		1,316,470	147.0

Of the total population in 2010, 667,076 were female and 1,029,236 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 36,704, up from 20,489 in 2000 (an increase of 79.1%). The largest city in the state is Manchester, with a 2000 census population of 107,006. The capital is Concord, with 40,687. Other main cities and towns (with 2000 populations) are: Nashua, 86,605; Derry, 34,021; Rochester, 28,461; Salem, 28,112; Dover, 26,884; Merrimack, 25,119; Londonderry, 23,236; Hudson, 22,928; Keene, 22,563; Portsmouth, 20,784.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 13,683 (10.4 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 10,268 (7.8). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 6.1 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 9,300 (7.1 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 5,300 (4.0). Same-sex marriage became legal in Jan. 2010.

CLIMATE

New Hampshire is in the New England climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate). Manchester, Jan. 22°F (-5.6°C), July 70°F (21.1°C). Annual rainfall 40" (1,003 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

While the present constitution dates from 1784, it was extensively revised in 1792 when the state joined the Union. Since 1775 there have been 16 state conventions with 49 amendments adopted to change the constitution.

The Legislature (called the General Court) consists of a Senate of 24 members, elected for two years, and a House of Representatives, of 400 members, elected for two years. It meets annually. The Governor and five administrative officers called 'Councillors' are also elected for two years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, New Hampshire sends two members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Jeanne Shaheen (D. 2009-15) and Kelly Ayotte (R. 2011-17).

The capital is Concord. The state is divided into ten counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won New Hampshire with 54.4% of the vote (John Kerry won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: John Lynch (D.), 2011-13 (salary: $120,095).

New Jersey

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of Delaware Indians, the area was settled by immigrant colonists in the early 17th century, when Dutch and Swedish traders established fortified posts on the Hudson and Delaware Rivers. The Dutch gave way to the English in 1664. In 1676 the English divided the area; the eastern portion was assigned to Sir George Carteret and the western granted to Quaker settlers. This lasted until 1702 when New Jersey was united as a colony of the Crown and placed under the jurisdiction of the governor of New York. It became a separate colony in 1738.

During the War of Independence crucial battles were fought at Trenton, Princeton and Monmouth. New Jersey became the 3rd state of the Union in 1787. Trenton, the state capital since 1790, began as a Quaker settlement and became an iron-working town. Industrial development grew rapidly, there and elsewhere in the state, after the opening of canals and railways in the 1830s. Princeton, also a Quaker settlement, became an important post on the New York road; the college of New Jersey (Princeton University) was transferred there from Newark in 1756.

The need for supplies in the Civil War stimulated industry and New Jersey became a manufacturing state. The growth of New York and Philadelphia, however, encouraged commuting to employment in both centres. By 1980 about 60% of the state's population lived within 30 miles of New York.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

New Jersey is bounded north by New York, east by the Atlantic with Long Island and New York City to the northeast, south by Delaware Bay and west by Pennsylvania. Land area, 7,354 sq. miles (19,047 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 8,791,894, an increase of 4.5% since 2000.

Population at five federal censuses was:

	White	Black	Asian	Others	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	2,445,894	89,760	1,345	168	2,537,167	337.7
1980	6,127,467	925,066	103,848	208,442	7,364,823	986.2
1990	6,130,465	1,036,825	272,521	290,377	7,730,188	1,042.0
2000	6,104,705	1,141,821	483,605	684,219	8,414,350	1,134.4
2010	6,029,248	1,204,826	725,726	832,094	8,791,894	1,195.5

Of the total population in 2010, 4,512,294 were female and 6,726,680 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 1,555,144, up from 1,117,191 in 2000 (an increase of 39.2%).

Census populations of the largest cities and towns in 2000 were:

Newark	273,546	Hamilton	87,109
Jersey City	240,055	Trenton (capital)	85,403
Paterson	149,222	Camden	79,904

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution, ratified by the registered voters on 4 Nov. 1947, has been amended 45 times. There is a 40-member Senate and an 80-member General Assembly. Assembly members serve two years, senators four years, except those elected at the election following each census, who serve for two years. Sessions are held throughout the year.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, New Jersey sends 13 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Frank Lautenberg (D. 1982–2001, 2003–15) and Robert Menendez (D. 2007–13).

The capital is Trenton. The state is divided into 21 counties, which are subdivided into 566 municipalities—cities, towns, boroughs, villages and townships.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won New Jersey with 57.3% of the vote (John Kerry won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Chris Christie (R.), 2010–14 (salary: $175,000).

New Mexico

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first European settlement was established in 1598. Until 1771 New Mexico was the Spanish 'Kingdom of New Mexico'. In 1771 it was annexed to the northern province of New Spain. When New Spain won its independence in 1821, it took the name of Republic of Mexico and established New Mexico as its northernmost department. Ceded to the USA in 1848 after war between the USA and Mexico, the area was recognized as a Territory in 1850, by which time its population was Spanish and Indian. There were frequent conflicts between new settlers and raiding parties of Navajo and Apaches. The Indian war lasted from 1861–66, and from 1864–68 about 8,000 Navajo were imprisoned at Bosque Redondo.

The boundaries were altered several times when land was taken into Texas, Utah, Colorado and lastly (1863) Arizona. New Mexico became a state in 1912.

Settlement proceeded by means of irrigated crop-growing and Mexican-style ranching. During the Second World War the desert areas were used as testing zones for atomic weapons. Mineral related industries developed after the discovery of uranium and petroleum.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

New Mexico is bounded north by Colorado, northeast by Oklahoma, east by Texas, south by Texas and Mexico and west by Arizona. Land area, 121,298 sq. miles (314,161 sq. km). In 2003 the federal government owned 26,518,360 acres, or 34.1% of the land area.

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,059,179, an increase of 13.2% since 2000. Of the total population in 2010, 1,041,758 were female and 1,540,507 were 18 years old or older.

The population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/ Alaska Native	Asian/ Native Hawaiian/ Pacific Islander	Other	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	304,594	1,628	20,573	506	—	327,301	2.7
1980	977,587	24,020	106,119	6,825	188,343	1,302,894	10.7
1990	1,146,028	30,210	134,355	14,124	190,352	1,515,069	12.5
2000	1,214,253	34,343	173,483	20,758	376,209	1,819,046	15.0
2010	1,407,876	42,550	193,222	30,018	385,513	2,059,179	17.0

Before 1930 New Mexico was largely a Spanish-speaking state, but after 1945 an influx of population from other states considerably reduced the percentage of persons of Spanish origin or descent. However, in recent years the percentage of the Hispanic population has begun to rise again. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 953,403, up from 765,386 in 2000 (an increase of 24.6%). At 46.3%, New Mexico has the largest percentage of persons of Hispanic origin of any state in the USA.

The largest cities are Albuquerque, with 2000 census population of 448,607; Las Cruces, 74,267; Santa Fe (the capital), 62,203; Rio Rancho, 51,765; Roswell, 45,293.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 30,173 (15.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 15,996 (8.1). Infant mortality, 2006, 5.8 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 13,400 (6.9 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 8,400 (4.3).

CLIMATE

New York State

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first European immigrants came in the 17th century, when there were two powerful Indian groups in rivalry: the Iroquois confederacy (Mohawk, Oneida, Onondaga, Cayuga and Seneca) and the Algonquian-speaking Mohegan and Munsee. The Dutch made settlements at Fort Orange (now Albany) in 1624 and at New Amsterdam in 1625, trading with the Indians for furs. In the 1660s there was conflict between the Dutch and the British in the Caribbean; as part of the concluding treaty the British, in 1664, received Dutch possessions in the Americas, including New Amsterdam, which they renamed New York.

In 1763 the Treaty of Paris ended war between the British and the French in North America (in which the Iroquois had allied themselves with the British). Settlers of British descent in New England then felt confident enough to expand westward. The climate of northern New York being severe, most settled in the Hudson river valley. After the War of Independence New York became the 11th state of the Union (1778), having first declared itself independent of Britain in 1777.

The economy depended on manufacturing, shipping and other means of distribution and trade. During the 19th century New York became the most important city in the USA. Its industries, especially clothing, attracted thousands of European immigrants. Industrial development spread along the Hudson-Mohawk valley, which was made the route of the Erie Canal (1825) linking New York with Buffalo on Lake Erie and thus with the developing farmlands of the middle west.

On 11 Sept. 2001 New York City was attacked by hijackers when two commercial airliners were flown into the World Trade Center. The building was destroyed and 2,749 people died.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

New York is bounded west and north by Canada with Lake Erie, Lake Ontario and the St Lawrence River forming the boundary; east by Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut, southeast by the Atlantic, south by New Jersey and Pennsylvania. Land area, 47,126 sq. miles (122,057 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 19,378,102, an increase of 2.1% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American		Total	Per sq. mile

New York, Jan. 30°F (−1.1°C), July 74°F (23.3°C). Annual rainfall 43" (1,087 mm). New York belongs to the Atlantic Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

New York State has had five constitutions, adopted in 1777, 1821, 1846, 1894 and 1938. The constitution produced by the 1938 convention (which was substantially a modification of the 1894 one), forms the fundamental law of the state (as modified by subsequent amendments). A proposed new constitution in 1967 was rejected by the electorate. In 1997 voters rejected a proposal to hold a new constitutional convention.

The Legislature comprises the Senate, with 62 members, and the Assembly, with 150. All members are elected in even-numbered years for two-year terms. The Legislature meets every year, typically for several days a week from Jan.–June and, if recalled by leaders of the Legislature, at other times during the year. The Governor can also call the Legislature into extraordinary session. The state capital is Albany. For local government the state is divided into 62 counties, five of which constitute the city of New York.

Each of the state's 62 cities is incorporated by charter, under special legislation. The government of New York City is vested in the mayor (Michael Bloomberg), elected for four years, and a city council, whose president and members are elected for four years. The council has a President and 51 members, each elected from a district wholly within the city. The mayor appoints all the heads of departments, except the comptroller (the chief financial officer), who is elected. Each of the five city boroughs (Manhattan, Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and Staten Island) has a president, elected for four years. Each borough is also a county, although Manhattan borough, as a county, is called New York, Brooklyn is called Kings, and Staten Island is called Richmond.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, New York State sends 29 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Charles Schumer (D. 1999–2017) and Kirsten Gillibrand (D.), who succeeded Hillary Clinton (D. 2001–09) following the latter's appointment as Secretary of State. Gillibrand won a special election in Nov. 2010 to take on the remainder of Clinton's term, which was set to end in 2013.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from New York State totalled $69,696m., up from $58,743m. in 2009 although down from $81,386m. in 2008. The leading destinations for exports in 2010 were Canada (value of $14,693m.), followed by the United Kingdom, Hong Kong and Switzerland.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 113,740 miles of road (65,874 miles rural). The New York State Thruway extends 559 miles from New York City to Buffalo. The Northway, a 176-mile toll-free highway, is a connecting road from the Thruway at Albany to the Canadian border at Champlain, Quebec.

There were 11,494,513 motor vehicle registrations in 2007 and 1,333 traffic accident fatalities.

Rail

In 2009 there were 3,494 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). There were 37 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in New York State in 2009 totalled 6.6m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 20.5m. tons. New York City has NYCTA and PATH metro systems, and commuter railroads run by Metro-North, New Jersey Transit and Long Island Rail Road. Buffalo has a 7-mile metro line.

Civil Aviation

At Jan. 2003 there were 542 aviation facilities in New York State. Of these, 160 were public-use airports, 382 were private-use airports; two were private-use glider ports, six public-use heliports, 144 private-use heliports, nine public-use seaplane bases and ten private-use seaplane bases. There were 45,434,709 passenger enplanements statewide in 2007. The busiest airports are New York City's John F. Kennedy International (which handled 31,732,371 passengers in 2003) and LaGuardia (22,482,770 passengers in 2003).

Shipping

The canals of the state, combined in 1918 in what is called the Improved Canal System, have a length of 524 miles, of which the Erie or Barge canal has 340 miles.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The State Human Rights Law was approved on 12 March 1945, effective on 1 July 1945. The State Division of Human Rights is charged with the responsibility of enforcing this law. The division may request and utilize the services of all governmental departments and agencies; adopt and promulgate suitable rules and regulations; test, investigate and pass judgment upon complaints alleging discrimination in employment, in places of public accommodation, resort or amusement, education, and in housing, land and commercial space; hold hearings, subpoena witnesses and require the production for examination of papers relating to matters under investigation; grant compensatory damages and require repayment of profits in certain housing cases among other provisions; apply for court injunctions to prevent frustration of orders of the Commissioner.

In Dec. 2008 there were 60,347 federal and state prisoners, down 3.6% from 62,620 in Dec. 2007—the largest fall in any state over the same period.

The death penalty was declared unconstitutional in New York in 2004; the last person was removed from death row in 2007. The last execution was in 1963.

Education

Education is compulsory between the ages of six and 16. In fall 2007 the 4,631 public elementary and secondary schools had 2,765,435 pupils and 211,854 teachers. There were 518,850 pupils at 2,130 private schools.

The state's educational system, including public and private schools and secondary institutions, universities, colleges, libraries, museums, etc., constitutes (by legislative act) the 'University of the State of New York', which is governed by a Board of Regents consisting of 15 members appointed by the Legislature. Within the framework of this 'University' was established in 1948 a 'State University' (SUNY), which controls 64 colleges and educational centres, 30 of which are locally operated community colleges. The 'State University' is governed by a board of 16 Trustees, appointed by the Governor with the consent and advice of the Senate.

In fall 2009 there were 269 degree-granting colleges and universities in New York State; enrolled students numbered 1,248,908.

Student enrolment (fall 2009) in degree-granting institutions in the state included:

North Carolina

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The early inhabitants were Cherokees. European settlement was attempted in 1585–87, following an exploratory visit by Sir Walter Raleigh, but this failed. Settlers from Virginia came to the shores of Albemarle Sound after 1650 and in 1663 Charles II chartered a private colony of Carolina. In 1691 the north was put under a deputy governor who ruled from Charleston in the south. The colony was formally separated into North and South Carolina in 1712. In 1729 control was taken from the private proprietors and vested in the Crown, whereupon settlement grew, and the boundary between north and south was finally fixed (1735).

After the War of Independence, North Carolina became one of the original 13 states of the Union. The city of Raleigh was laid out as the new capital. Having been a plantation colony North Carolina continued to develop as a plantation state, growing tobacco with black slave labour. It was also an important source of gold before the western gold-rushes of 1848.

In 1861 at the outset of the Civil War, North Carolina seceded from the Union, but General Sherman occupied the capital unopposed. A military governor was admitted in 1862, and civilian government restored with readmission to the Union in 1868.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

North Carolina is bounded north by Virginia, east by the Atlantic, south by South Carolina, southwest by Georgia and west by Tennessee. Land area, 48,618 sq. miles (125,920 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 9,535,483, an increase of 18.5% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,500,511	697,843	7,851	82	2,206,287	45.3
			All others
1980	4,453,010	1,316,050	105,369		5,874,429	111.5
1990	5,008,491	1,456,323	163,823		6,628,637	136.1
2000	5,804,656	1,737,545	507,112		8,049,313	165.2
2010	6,528,950	2,048,628	957,905		9,535,483	196.1

Of the total population in 2010, 4,889,991 were female and 7,253,848 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 North Carolina's Hispanic population was 800,120, up from 378,963 in 2000. This represented a rise of 111.1%.

The principal cities (with census population in 2000) are: Charlotte, 540,828; Raleigh (the capital), 276,093; Greensboro, 223,891; Durham, 187,035; Winston-Salem, 185,776; Fayetteville, 121,015; Cary, 94,536; High Point, 85,839; Wilmington, 75,838.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 130,839 (14.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 77,277 (8.4). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 8.1 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 55,300 (6.2 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 36,400 (4.1).

CLIMATE

Climate varies sharply with altitude; the warmest area is in the southeast near Southport and Wilmington; the coldest is Mount Mitchell (6,684 ft). Raleigh, Jan. 42°F (5.6°C), July 79°F (26.1°C). Annual rainfall 46" (1,158 mm). North Carolina belongs to the Atlantic Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1971 (previous constitutions, 1776 and 1868); it has had 29 amendments as of 2010. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 50 members and a House of Representatives of 120 members; all are elected by districts for two years. It meets in odd-numbered years in Jan.

The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years; they can be elected to only one additional consecutive term. There are also 19 executive departments—eight have elected heads (for four-year terms) and ten have heads appointed by the Governor; the other department is the North Carolina Community College System, under a president.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, North Carolina sends 13 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Richard Burr (R. 2005–17) and Kay Hagan (D. 2009–15).

The capital is Raleigh. There are 100 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won North Carolina with 49.7% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

North Dakota

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The original inhabitants were Plains Indians. French explorers and traders were active in the 18th century, often operating from French possessions in Canada. France claimed the area until 1803, when it passed to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase, except for the northeastern part which was held by the British until 1818.

Trading with the Indians, mainly for furs, continued until the 1860s, with American traders succeeding the French. In 1861 the Dakota Territory (North and South) was established. In 1862 the Homestead Act was passed (allowing 160 acres of public land free to any family who had worked and lived on it for five years) and this greatly stimulated settlement. Farming settlers came to the wheat lands in great numbers, many of them from Canada, Norway and Germany.

Bismarck, the capital, began as a crossing-point on the Missouri and was fortified in 1872 to protect workers building the Northern Pacific Railway. There followed a gold-rush nearby and the town became a service centre for prospectors. In 1889 North and South Dakota were admitted to the Union as separate states with Bismarck as the Northern capital. The largest city, Fargo, was also a railway town, named after William George Fargo, the express-company founder.

The population grew rapidly until 1890 and steadily until 1930 by which time it was about one-third European in origin. Between 1930 and 1970 there was a steady population drain, increasing whenever farming was affected by the extremes of the continental climate.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

North Dakota is bounded north by Canada, east by the Red River (forming a boundary with Minnesota), south by South Dakota and west by Montana. Land area, 69,001 sq. miles (178,711 sq. km). In 2000 American Indian lands covered 3,542 sq. miles (3,467 sq. miles in reservations and 75 sq. miles in off-reservation trust land). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 672,591, an increase of 4.7% since 2000.

Population at five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	569,855	617	6,486	98	577,056	8.2
			All others

1990	604,142	3,524	31,134		638,800	9.3
2000	593,182	3,916	45,102		642,200	9.3
2010	605,449	7,960	59,182		672,591	9.7

Of the total population in 2010, 339,864 were male and 522,720 were 18 years old or older. Estimated outward migration, 2000–05, 23 per 1,000 population. Only Vermont has fewer persons of Hispanic origin than North Dakota. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 13,467, up from 7,786 in 2000 (an increase of 73.0%).

The largest cities are Fargo with a population, census 2000, of 90,599; Bismarck (capital), 55,532; Grand Forks, 49,321; and Minot, 36,567.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 8,938 (13.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 5,870 (9.2). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 5.8 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 4,300 (6.8 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 1,700 (2.6).

CLIMATE

Bismarck, Jan. 8°F (−13.3°C), July 71°F (21.1°C). Annual rainfall 16" (402 mm). Fargo, Jan. 6°F (−14.4°C), July 71°F (21.1°C). Annual rainfall 20" (503 mm). North Dakota belongs to the High Plains climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1889; it has had 154 amendments as of 2011. The Legislative Assembly consists of a Senate of 47 members elected for four years, and a House of Representatives of 94 members elected for four years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, North Dakota sends one member to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Kent Conrad (D. 1987–2013) and John Hoeven (R. 2011–17).

The capital is Bismarck. The state has 53 organized counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won North Dakota with 53.3% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Ohio

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The land was inhabited by Delaware, Miami, Shawnee and Wyandot Indians. It was explored by French and British traders in the 18th century and confirmed as part of British North America in 1763. After the War of Independence it became part of the Northwest Territory of the new United States. Former independence fighters came in from New England in 1788 to make the first permanent white settlement at Marietta, at the confluence of the Ohio and Muskingum rivers. In 1803 Ohio was separated from the rest of the Territory and admitted to the Union as the 17th state.

In the early 19th century there was steady immigration from Europe, mainly of Germans, Swiss, Irish and Welsh. Industrial growth began with the processing of farm, forest and mining products; it increased rapidly with the need to supply the Union armies in the Civil War of 1861–65.

As the industrial cities grew, so immigration began again, with many whites from eastern Europe and the Balkans and blacks from the southern states looking for work in Ohio.

Cleveland, which developed rapidly as a Lake Erie port after the opening of commercial waterways to the interior and the Atlantic coast (1825, 1830 and 1855), became an iron-and-steel town during the Civil War.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Ohio is bounded north by Michigan and Lake Erie, east by Pennsylvania, southeast and south by the Ohio River (forming a boundary with West Virginia and Kentucky) and west by Indiana. Land area, 40,861 sq. miles (105,829 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 11,536,504, an increase of 1.6% since 2000.

Population at five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	4,654,897	111,452	127	645	4,767,121	117.0

Oklahoma

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Francisco Coronado led a Spanish expedition in 1541, claiming the land for Spain. There were several Indian groups but no strong political unit. In 1714 Juchereau de Saint Denis made the first French contact. During the 18th century French fur-traders were active. A French and Spanish struggle for control was resolved by the French withdrawal in 1763. France returned briefly in 1800–03, and the territory then passed to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase.

In 1828 the Federal government set aside the area of the present state as Indian Territory (a reservation and sanctuary for Indian tribes who had been driven off their lands elsewhere by white settlement). About 70 tribes came, among whom were Creeks, Choctaws and Cherokees from the southeastern states, and Plains Indians.

In 1889 the government took back about 2.5m. acres of the Territory and opened it to white settlement. About 10,000 homesteaders gathered at the site of Oklahoma City on the Santa Fe Railway in the rush to stake their land claims. The settlers' area, and others subsequently opened to settlement, were organized as the Oklahoma Territory in 1890. In 1907 the Oklahoma and Indian Territories were combined and admitted to the Union as a state. Indian reservations were established within the state.

The economy first depended on ranching and farming, with packing stations on the railways. A mining industry grew in the 1870s attracting foreign immigration, mainly from Europe. In 1901 oil was found near Tulsa.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Oklahoma is bounded north by Kansas, northeast by Missouri, east by Arkansas, south by Texas (the Red River forming part of the boundary) and, at the western extremity of the 'panhandle', by New Mexico and Colorado. Land area, 68,595 sq. miles (177,660 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 3,751,351, an increase of 8.7% since 2000.

The population at five federal censuses was:

	American Indian/Alaska Native				Other	Total	Per sq. mile
	White	Black	Native	Other
1930	2,130,778	172,198	92,725	339	2,396,040	34.6
1980	2,597,783	204,658	169,292	53,557	3,025,486	43.2
1990	2,583,512	233,801	252,420	119,723	3,189,456	44.5
2000	2,628,434	260,968	273,230	288,022	3,450,654	50.3
2010	2,706,845	277,644	321,687	445,175	3,751,351	54.7

Of the total population in 2010, 1,894,374 were female and 2,821,685 were 18 years old or older. Oklahoma is home to 39 recognized Indian tribes. In 2010 Oklahoma's Hispanic population was 332,007, up from 179,304 in 2000 (an increase of 85.2%).

The most important cities with population, 2000, are Oklahoma City (capital), 506,132; Tulsa, 393,049; Norman, 95,694; Lawton, 92,757; Broken Arrow, 74,859; Edmond, 68,315; Midwest City, 54,088; Enid, 47,045; Moore, 41,138; Stillwater, 39,065; Muskogee, 38,310; Bartlesville, 34,748.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution, dating from 1907, provides for amendment by initiative petition and legislative referendum; it has had 200 amendments (as of Sept. 2005).

The Legislature consists of a Senate of 48 members, who are elected for four years, and a House of Representatives elected for two years and consisting of 101 members. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four-year terms; the Governor can only be elected for two terms in succession. Electors are (with necessary exceptions) all citizens 18 years or older, with the usual qualifications.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Oklahoma sends five members to the House of Representatives.

It is represented in the Senate by James Inhofe (R. 1994–2015) and Tom Coburn (R. 2005–17).

The capital is Oklahoma City. The state has 77 counties.

Agriculture

In 2007 the state had 86,565 farms and ranches with a total area of 35.09m. acres; average size was 405 acres and average value per acre was $1,157. Area harvested, 2007, 7,650,080 acres. Livestock, 2007: cattle, 5.39m.; sheep and lambs, 76,200; hogs and pigs, 2.40m.; laying hens, 3.32m.

Farm income 2006: from crops, $974m.; from livestock and products, $4,120m. The net farm income in 2006 was $877m. The major cash grain is wheat (167m. bu. in 2008 with a value of $1,082m.). Other crops include barley, oats, rye, grain, corn, soybeans, grain sorghum, cotton, peanuts and peaches. Value of cattle and calves produced, 2008, $1,954m.

The Oklahoma Conservation Commission works with 91 conservation districts, universities, and state and federal government agencies. The early work of the conservation districts, beginning in 1937, was limited to flood and erosion control: since 1970, they also include urban areas.

Irrigated production has increased in the Oklahoma 'panhandle'. The Ogallala aquifer is the primary source of irrigation water there and in western Oklahoma, a finite source because of its isolation from major sources of recharge. Declining groundwater levels necessitate the most effective irrigation practices.

Forestry

There were 7,665,000 acres of forested land in 2007, with 245,000 acres of national forest. The forest products industry is concentrated in the 118 eastern counties. There are three forest regions: Ozark (oak, hickory); Ouachita highlands (pine, oak); Cross-Timbers (post oak, black jack oak). Southern pine is the chief commercial species, at almost 80% of saw-timber harvested annually. Replanting is essential.

INDUSTRY

In 2006 Oklahoma's 3,915 manufacturing establishments had 142,000 employees, earning $5,871m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2006 was $24,025m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment in 2007 was 1,566,000. Employees by branch, 2007 (in 1,000): government, 321; trade, transportation and utilities, 288; education and health services, 193; professional and business services, 181; manufacturing, 150. Oklahoma's unemployment rate was 6.8% in Dec. 2010.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from Oklahoma totalled $5,353m., up from $4,415m. in 2009. The leading destinations for exports in 2010 were Canada (value of $1,867m.), followed by Mexico, Japan and China (excluding Hong Kong).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 112,922 miles of road comprising 15,633 miles of urban road and 97,289 miles of rural road. There were 3,224,653 registered motor vehicles.

Rail

In 2009 there were 3,275 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). There were 19 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Oklahoma in 2009 totalled 16.9m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 33.2m. tons.

Civil Aviation

Airports in 2005 numbered 351, of which 142 were publicly owned. There were 3,513,358 passenger enplanements statewide in 2007.

Shipping

The McClellan-Kerr Arkansas Navigation System provides access from east central Oklahoma to New Orleans through the Verdigris, Arkansas and Mississippi rivers. In 2004, 12.9m. tons were shipped inbound and outbound on the Oklahoma Segment. Commodities shipped are mainly chemical fertilizer, farm produce, petroleum products, iron and steel, coal, sand and gravel.

Justice

There were 25,864 federal and state prisoners in Dec. 2008. In 2006 there were 17 state correctional facilities, 15 community work centres and seven community correctional centres. The death penalty was suspended in 1966 and reimposed in 1976. There were two executions in 2011 (three in 2010). Oklahoma's total of 97 executions between 1977 and 2011 is the third highest in the USA behind Texas and Virginia.

Education

Public elementary and secondary schools numbered 1,798 in 2007–08. In fall 2007 there were 642,065 pupils and 46,735 teachers at public schools. The average teacher salary per annum was $45,702 in 2008–09. In 2006–07 total expenditure on public elementary and secondary education was $5,230m. There were 59 degree-granting establishments (29 public) in 2008–09; enrolment totalled 206,382 in fall 2007.

Institutions of higher education include:

Founded	Name	Place	2004 enrolment
1890	University of Oklahoma	Norman	31,529
1890	Oklahoma State University	Stillwater	27,419

1969	Rose State College	Midwest City	13,804
1970	Tulsa Community College	Tulsa	26,838
1972	Oklahoma City Community College	Oklahoma City	19,700

Health

In 2007 there were 113 community hospitals with 10,900 beds. A total of 454,000 patients were admitted during the year.

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2006 totalled 548,759. In fiscal year 2006 a total of 725,736 people in Oklahoma received Medicaid. In Dec. 2008 there were 669,673 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 18,948 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2008.

RELIGION

The chief religious bodies are Baptists, followed by United Methodists, Roman Catholics, Churches of Christ, Assembly of God, Disciples of Christ, Presbyterian, Lutheran, Nazarene and Episcopal.

CULTURE

Press

There were 47 daily newspapers in 2005 and 171 weeklies.

Oregon

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was divided between many Indian tribes including the Chinook, Tillamook, Cayuse and Modoc. In the 18th century English and Spanish visitors tried to establish claims, based on explorations of the 16th century. The USA also laid claim by right of discovery when an expedition entered the mouth of the Columbia River in 1792.

Oregon was disputed between Britain and the USA. An American fur trading settlement established at Astoria in 1811 was taken by the British in 1812. The Hudson Bay Company was the most active force in Oregon until the 1830s when American pioneers began to migrate westwards along the Oregon Trail. The dispute between Britain and the USA was resolved in 1846 with the boundary fixed at 49°N. lat. Oregon was organized as a Territory in 1848 but with wider boundaries; it became a state with its present boundaries in 1859.

Early settlers were mainly American. They came to farm in the Willamette Valley and to exploit the western forests. Portland developed as a port for ocean-going traffic, although it was 100 miles inland at the confluence of the Willamette and Columbia rivers. Industries followed when the railways came and the rivers were exploited for hydro-electricity. The capital of the Territory from 1851 was Salem, a mission for Indians on the Willamette river; it was confirmed as state capital in 1864. Salem became the processing centre for the farming and market-gardening of the Willamette Valley.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Oregon is bounded in the north by Washington, with the Columbia River forming most of the boundary, east by Idaho, with the Snake River forming most of the boundary, south by Nevada and California and west by the Pacific. Land area, 95,988 sq. miles (248,608 sq. km). The federal government owned (2003) 30,638,949 acres (49.7% of the state area). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 3,831,074, an increase of 12.0% since 2000.

Population at five federal censuses was:

	American					Per sq. mile
	White	Black	Indian	Asiatic	Total
1930	938,598	2,234	4,776	8,179	953,786	9.9
1980	2,490,610	37,060	27,314	34,775	2,633,105	27.3
	American Indian/Alaska					Per sq. mile
	White	Black	Native	All Others	Total
1990	2,636,787	46,178	38,496	120,860	2,842,321	29.6
2000	2,961,623	55,662	45,211	358,903	3,421,399	35.6
2010	3,204,614	69,206	53,203	504,051	3,831,074	39.9

Of the total population in 2010, 1,935,072 were female and 2,964,621 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 450,062, up from 275,314 in 2000 (an increase of 63.5%).

In 2000 American Indian lands covered 1,377 sq. miles (1,342 sq. miles in reservations and 35 sq. miles in off-reservation trust land).

The largest cities (2000 census figures) are: Portland, 529,121; Eugene, 137,893; Salem (the capital), 136,924; Gresham, 90,205; Beaverton, 76,129; Hillsboro, 70,186; Medford, 63,154; Springfield, 52,864; Bend, 52,029. Primary statistical (metropolitan) areas: Portland–Salem, 2,265,223; Eugene–Springfield, 322,959.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 49,096 (13.0 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 31,939 (8.4). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 5.5 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 26,900 (7.3 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 14,200 (3.9).

CLIMATE

Jan. 32°F (0°C), July 66°F (19°C). Annual rainfall 28" (710 mm). Oregon belongs to the Pacific coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1859; some 250 items in it have been amended. The Legislative Assembly consists of a Senate of 30 members, elected for four years (half their number retiring every two years), and a House of 60 representatives, elected for two years. The Governor is elected for four years. The constitution reserves to the voters the rights of initiative and referendum and recall.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Oregon sends five members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Ron Wyden (D. 1996–2017) and Jeff Merkley (D. 2009–15).

The capital is Salem. There are 36 counties in the state.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won Oregon with 56.7% of the vote (John Kerry won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: John Kitzhaber (D.), 2011–15 (salary: $93,600).

Secretary of State: Kate Brown (D.), 2009–13 ($72,000).

Government Website: <http://www.oregon.gov>

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2010) was $36,427.

Budget

In 2009 total state revenue was $7,812m. Total expenditure was $24,381m. (including: education, $7,133m.; public welfare, $4,925m.; highways, $1,566m.; hospitals, $1,221m.; government administration, $942m.) Outstanding debt in 2009, $12,495m.

Performance

Gross Domestic Product by state was $166,725m. in 2010 (provisional), ranking Oregon 25th in the United States. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 3.4% (provisional).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 2,384 sq. miles.

Minerals

Mineral resources include gold, silver, lead, mercury, chromite, sand and gravel, stone, clays, lime, silica, diatomite, expansible shale, scoria, pumice and uranium. There is geothermal potential. The total value of non-fuel mineral production in 2006 was $509m.

Agriculture

Oregon, which has an area of 61,557,184 acres, is divided by the Cascade Range into two distinct climate zones. West of the Cascade Range there is a good rainfall and almost every variety of crop common to the temperate zone is grown; east of the Range stock-raising and wheat-growing are the principal industries and irrigation is needed for row crops and fruits.

There were, in 2008, 38,600 farms with an acreage of 16.4m. and an average farm size of 425 acres; most are family-owned corporate farms. Average value per acre (2007), $1,890.

Farm income in 2006: from crops, $2,961m.; from livestock and products, $1,030m. The net farm income in 2006 was $876m. Principal crops in 2008: greenhouse and nursery products (estimate, $880.1m.), hay ($613.3m.), grass seed (estimate, $510.3m.), wheat ($340.2m.), potatoes ($211.0m.), Christmas trees (estimate, $122.8m.), onions ($97.5m.), pears ($92.5m.).

Livestock, 2009: cattle and calves, 1.24m. (including 115,000 milch cows); sheep and lambs, 220,000; goats, 38,000; hogs, 20,000 (2008).

Forestry

Oregon had 30,169,000 acres of forest in 2007, with 14,012,000 acres of national forest. In 2006 ownership was as follows (acres): US Forestry Service, 12.5m.; US Bureau of Land Management, 2.4m.; other federal, 338,000; State of Oregon, 969,000; tribal, 622,000; local government, 287,000; industrial private, 5.3m.; non-industrial private, 5.0m. Oregon's commercial forest lands provided an estimated 2007 harvest of 3.8bn. bd ft of logs, as well as the benefits of recreation, water, grazing, wildlife and fish. Trees vary from the coastal forest of hemlock and spruce to the state's primary species, Douglas-fir, throughout much of western Oregon. In eastern Oregon, ponderosa pine, lodgepole pine and true firs are found. Here, forestry is often combined with livestock grazing to provide an economic operation. Along the Cascade summit and in the mountains of northeast Oregon, alpine species are found.

Total covered payroll in the forestry and logging industry in 2008 was $515.2m.

Fisheries

Commercial fish and shellfish landings in 2008 was 260.3m. lb and amounted to a value of $126.5m. The most important are: ground fish, crab, shrimp, tuna, whiting and salmon.

INDUSTRY

Forest products manufacturing is Oregon's leading industry, followed by high technology. In 2006 the state's 5,632 manufacturing establishments had 189,000 employees, earning $8,368m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2006 was $39,502m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2007, 1,732,000. Employees by branch, 2007 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 340; government, 290; education and health services, 212; manufacturing, 204; professional and business services, 198. The unemployment rate was 10.6% in Dec. 2010.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from Oregon totalled $17,671m., up from $14,907m. in 2009 although down from $19,352m. in 2008. The leading destinations for exports in 2010 were China (excluding Hong Kong) (value of $4,047m.), followed by Malaysia, Canada and Japan.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 59,758 miles of road (46,975 miles rural). There were 3,088,313 registered vehicles in 2007.

Rail

In 2008 there were 2,388 total miles of active track and 22 federally franchised freight railroads. There is a light rail network in Portland.

Civil Aviation

In 2005 there were one public-use and 103 personal-use heliports; 251 personal-use and 95 public-use airports; and three sea-plane bases, two public-use and one personal-use. There were 8,294,811 passenger enplanements statewide in 2007.

Shipping

Portland is a major seaport for large ocean-going vessels and is 101 miles inland from the mouth of the Columbia River. In 2009 Portland handled 21,001,697 tons of cargo; Coos Bay, the second busiest port, handled 1,328,340 tons of cargo in 2009. Portland was the 31st busiest US port overall in 2009 but the 13th busiest for exports.

Justice

There are 14 correctional institutions in Oregon. In Dec. 2008 there were 14,167 federal and state prisoners. The sterilization law, originally passed in 1917, was amended in 1967 and abolished in 1993. Some categories of euthanasia were legalized in Dec. 1994.

The death penalty is authorized but there have been no executions since 2001.

Education

School attendance is compulsory from seven to 18 years of age if the twelfth year of school has not been completed; those between the ages of 16 and 18 years, if legally employed, may attend part-time or evening schools. Others may be excused under certain circumstances. In fall 2007 the 1,295 public elementary and secondary schools had 565,586 students and 30,013 teachers; average salary for teachers (2008–09), $52,950. Total expenditure on public elementary and secondary education (2006–07) was $5,574m.

Leading state-supported institutions of higher education (fall 2005) included:

	Students
University of Oregon, Eugene	20,347
Oregon Health and Science University, Portland	2,511
Oregon State University, Corvallis	19,224
Portland State University, Portland	23,929
Western Oregon State College, Monmouth	4,872
Southern Oregon State College, Ashland	4,986
Eastern Oregon State College, La Grande	3,533
Oregon Institute of Technology, Klamath Falls	3,347

There were 26 public and 34 private degree-granting institutions in 2008–09; enrolment in all institutions totalled 202,928 in fall 2007. Largest of the privately endowed universities are Lewis and Clark College, Portland, with 3,433 students in fall 2005; University of Portland, 3,415 students; Willamette University, Salem, 2,642 students; Reed College, Portland, 1,340 students; Linfield College, McMinnville, 1,750 students; Marylhurst College, 1,268 students; and George Fox College, Newberg, 3,267 students.

Health

In 2007 there were 58 community hospitals with 6,800 beds. A total of 347,000 patients were admitted during the year.

Welfare

Medicare enrolment in July 2006 totalled 547,344. In fiscal year 2006 a total of 516,067 people in Oregon received Medicaid. In Dec. 2008 there were 659,719 Old-Age, Survivors, and Disability Insurance (OASDI) beneficiaries. A total of 46,376 people were receiving payments under Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) in Dec. 2008.

RELIGION

The chief religious bodies are Catholic, Baptist, Lutheran, Methodist, Presbyterian and Latter-day Saints (Mormons).

CULTURE

Press

In 2009 there were 19 daily newspapers with a circulation of more than 610,000 and 74 non-daily newspapers.

Tourism

In 2005, 173,000 overseas visitors (excluding those from Mexico and Canada) visited Oregon.

Pennsylvania

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Pennsylvania was occupied by four powerful tribes in the 17th century: Delaware, Susquehannock, Shawnee and Iroquois. The first white settlers were Swedish, arriving in 1643. The British became dominant in 1664 and in 1681 William Penn, an English Quaker, was given a charter to colonize the area as a sanctuary for his fellow Quakers. Penn's ideal was peaceful co-operation with the Indians and religious toleration within the colony. Several religious groups were attracted to Pennsylvania, including Protestant sects from Germany and France. In the 18th century, co-operation with the Indians failed as the settlers extended their territory.

The Declaration of Independence was signed in Philadelphia while Pennsylvania became one of the original 13 states of the Union. In 1812 the state capital was moved to its current location in Harrisburg, originally a trading post and ferry point on the Susquehanna River in the south-central part of the state. The Mason-Dixon line, the state's southern boundary, was the dividing line between free and slave states in the build-up to the Civil War. Gettysburg and other crucial battles were fought in the state. Industrial growth was rapid after the war. Pittsburgh, founded as a British fort in 1761 during war with the French, had become an iron-making town by 1800 and grew rapidly when canal and railway links opened in the 1830s. The American Federation of Labor was founded in Pittsburgh in 1881, by which time the city was of national importance producing coal, iron, steel and glass.

At the beginning of the 20th century, industry attracted immigration from Italy and eastern Europe. In farming areas the early sect communities survive, notably Amish and Mennonites. (The Pennsylvania 'Dutch' are of German extraction.)

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Pennsylvania is bounded north by New York, east by New Jersey, south by Delaware and Maryland, southwest by West Virginia, west by Ohio and northwest by Lake Erie. Land area, 44,743 sq. miles (115,883 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 12,702,379, an increase of 3.4% since 2000.

Population at five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	All others	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	7,467,713	193,919	1,503	1,976	7,665,111	171.0
			All others
1980	10,652,320	1,046,810	164,765	11,863,895	264.7
1990	10,520,201	1,089,795	271,647	11,881,643	265.1
2000	10,484,203	1,224,612	572,239	12,281,054	274.0
2010	10,406,288	1,377,689	918,402	12,702,379	283.9

Of the total population in 2010, 6,512,016 were female and 9,910,224 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 Pennsylvania's Hispanic population was 719,660, up from 394,088 in 2000 (a rise of 82.6%).

The population of the largest cities and townships, 2000 census, was:

Philadelphia	1,517,550	Allentown	106,632
Pittsburgh	334,563	Erie	103,717

Upper Darby	81,821	Bethlehem	71,329
Reading	81,207	Lower Merion	59,850
Scranton	76,415	Bensalem	58,434

The Philadelphia–Wilmington–Atlantic City metropolitan area had a 2000 census population of 6,188,463. The capital, Harrisburg, had a population in 2000 of 48,950.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 149,273 (12.0 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 127,450 (10.2). Infant mortality, 2006, 7.6 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 68,600 (5.5 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 27,400 (2.2).

CLIMATE

Philadelphia, Jan. 32°F (0°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 40" (1,006 mm). Pittsburgh, Jan. 31°F (−0.6°C), July 74°F (23.3°C). Annual rainfall 37" (914 mm). Pennsylvania belongs to the Appalachian Mountains climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1968. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 50 members chosen for four years, one-half being elected biennially, and a House of Representatives of 203 members chosen for two years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years. Every citizen 18 years of age, with the usual residential qualifications, may vote. Registered voters in Nov. 2004, 8,366,663.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Pennsylvania sends 19 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Robert Casey, Jr (D. 2007–13) and Patrick Toomey (R. 2011–17).

The state capital is Harrisburg. The state is organized in counties (numbering 67), cities, boroughs, townships and school districts.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won Pennsylvania with 54.3% of the vote (John Kerry won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Tom Corbett (R.), 2011–15 (salary: $177,888).

Lieut.-Governor: Jim Cawley (R.), 2011–15 ($149,424).

Secretary of the Commonwealth: Carol Aichele (R.), appointed Jan. 2011 ($128,080).

Government Website: <http://www.pa.gov>

ECONOMY

Rhode Island

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The earliest white settlement was founded by Roger Williams, an English Puritan who was expelled from Massachusetts because of his dissident religious views and his insistence on the land-rights of the Indians. At Providence he bought land from the Narragansetts and founded a colony there in 1636. A charter was granted in 1663. Religious toleration attracted Jewish and nonconformist settlers; later there was French Canadian settlement.

Shipping and fishing developed strongly, especially at Newport and Providence. These two cities were twin capitals until 1900, when the capital was fixed at Providence.

Significant actions took place in Rhode Island during the War of Independence. In 1790 the state accepted the federal constitution and was admitted to the Union.

Early farming development was most successful in dairying and poultry. Early industrialization from the 1790s was mainly in textiles. Thriving on abundant water power, the industry began to decline after the First World War. British, Irish, Polish, Italian and Portuguese workers settled in the state, working in the mills or in the shipbuilding, shipping, fishing and naval ports. The growth of the cities led to the abolition of the property qualification for the franchise in 1888.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Rhode Island is bounded north and east by Massachusetts, south by the Atlantic and west by Connecticut. Land area, 1,034 sq. miles (2,678 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,052,567, an increase of 0.4% since 2000. Population of five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/ Alaska Native	Asian	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	532,492	9,529	284	305	542,610	508.5
1980	896,692	27,584	All others 22,878		947,154	903.0
1990	917,375	38,861	4,071	18,325	1,003,164	960.3
2000	891,191	46,908	5,121	24,232	1,048,319	1,003.2
2010	856,869	60,189	6,058	30,457	1,052,567	1,018.1

Of the total population in 2010, 544,167 were female and 828,611 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 130,655, up from 90,820 in 2000 (an increase of 43.9%).

The chief cities and their population (census, 2000) are Providence (the capital), 173,618; Warwick, 85,808; Cranston, 79,269; Pawtucket, 72,958; East Providence, 48,688.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 12,048 (11.5 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 9,740 (9.3). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 6.1 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 6,900 (6.5 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 3,100 (2.9).

CLIMATE

Providence, Jan. 28°F (−2.2°C), July 72°F (22.2°C). Annual rainfall 43" (1,079 mm). Rhode Island belongs to the New England climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1843; it has had 62 amendments. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 38 members and a House of Representatives of 75 members, both elected for two years. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are now elected for four years. Every citizen, 18 years of age, who has resided in the state for 30 days, and is duly registered, is qualified to vote.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Rhode Island sends two members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Jack Reed (D. 1997–2015) and Sheldon Whitehouse (D. 2007–13).

The capital is Providence. The state has five counties but no county governments. There are 39 municipalities, each having its own form of local government.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won Rhode Island with 63.1% of the vote (John Kerry won in 2004).

South Carolina

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Originally the territory of Yamasee Indians, the area attracted French and Spanish explorers in the 16th century. There were attempts at settlement on the coast, none of which lasted. Charles I of England made a land grant in 1629 but the first permanent white settlement began at Charles Town in 1670, moving to Charleston in 1680. This was a proprietorial colony including North Carolina until 1712; both passed to the Crown in 1729.

The coastlands developed as plantations worked by slave labour. In the hills there were small farming settlements and many trading posts, dealing with Indian suppliers.

After active campaigns during the War of Independence, South Carolina became one of the original states of the Union in 1788.

In 1793 the cotton gin was invented, enabling the speedy mechanical separation of seed and fibre. This made it possible to grow huge areas of cotton and meet the rapidly-growing needs of new textile industries. Plantation farming spread widely and South Carolina became hostile to the anti-slavery campaign which was strong in northern states. The state first attempted to secede from the Union in 1847, but was not supported by other southern states until 1860, when secession led to civil war.

At that time the population was about 703,000, of whom 413,000 were black. During the reconstruction periods there was some political power for black citizens but control was back in white hands by 1876. The constitution was amended in 1895 to disenfranchise most black voters and they remained with hardly any voice in government until the Civil Rights movement of the 1960s. Columbia became the capital in 1786.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

South Carolina is bounded in the north by North Carolina, east and southeast by the Atlantic, southwest and west by Georgia. Land area, 30,061 sq. miles (77,857 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 4,625,364, an increase of 15.3% since 2000.

The population in five census years was:

Year	White	Black	American		Total	Per sq. mile
			Indian	Asiatic
1910	679,161	835,843	331	65	1,515,400	49.7
			All others
1980	2,150,507	948,623		22,703	3,121,833	100.3
1990	2,406,974	1,039,884		39,845	3,486,703	115.8
2000	2,695,560	1,185,216		131,236	4,012,012	133.2
2010	3,060,000	1,290,684		274,680	4,625,364	153.9

Of the total population in 2010, 2,375,263 were female and 3,544,890 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population of South Carolina was 235,682, up from 95,076 in 2000 (an increase of 147.9%, the largest percentage rise in any US state).

Population estimate of large towns in 2005: Columbia (capital), 117,088; Charleston, 106,712; North Charleston, 86,313; Rock Hill, 59,554; Mount Pleasant, 57,932; Greenville, 56,676.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 63,071 (14.1 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 40,305 (9.0). Infant deaths, 2006, 8.4 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 32,800 (7.6 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 12,800 (3.0).

CLIMATE

Columbia, Jan. 44.7°F (7°C), Aug. 80.2°F (26.9°C). Annual rainfall 49.12" (1,247.6 mm). South Carolina belongs to the Atlantic Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1895, when it went into force without ratification by the electorate. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 46 members, elected for four years, and a House of Representatives of 124 members, elected for two years. It meets annually. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, South Carolina sends six members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Lindsey Graham (R. 2003–15) and Jim DeMint (R. 2005–17).

The capital is Columbia. There are 46 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won South Carolina with 53.9% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Nikki Haley (R.), 2011–15 (salary: $106,078).

South Dakota

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The area was part of the hunting grounds of nomadic Dakota (Sioux) Indians. French explorers visited the site of Fort Pierre in 1742–43 and claimed the area for France. In 1763 the claim, together with French claims to all land west of the Mississippi, passed to Spain. Spain held the Dakotas until defeated by France in the Napoleonic Wars when France regained the area and sold it to the USA as part of the Louisiana Purchase in 1803.

Fur-traders were active but there was no settlement until Fort Randall was founded on the Missouri river in 1856. In 1861 North and South Dakota were united as the Dakota Territory. The Homestead Act of 1862 stimulated settlement, mainly in the southeast until there was a gold-rush in the Black Hills of the west in 1875–76. Colonization was by farming communities in the east with miners and ranchers in the west. Livestock farming predominated, attracting European settlers from Scandinavia, Germany and Russia.

In 1889 the North and South were separated and admitted to the Union as states. Pierre, founded as a railhead in 1880, was confirmed as the capital in 1904. It faces Fort Pierre, the former centre of the fur trade, across the Missouri river. During the 20th century there have been schemes to exploit the Missouri for power and irrigation.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

South Dakota is bounded in the north by North Dakota, east by Minnesota, southeast by the Big Sioux River (forming the boundary with Iowa), south by Nebraska (with the Missouri River forming part of the boundary) and west by Wyoming and Montana. Land area, 75,811 sq. miles (196,350 sq. km). In 2000 American Indian lands covered 14,966 sq. miles (14,061 sq. miles in reservations and 905 sq. miles in off-reservation trust land). The federal government, 2003, owned 2,314,006 acres.

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 814,180, an increase of 7.9% since 2000.

Population in five federal censuses was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	563,771	817	19,137	163	583,888	7.6
			All others
1980	638,955	2,144	49,079		690,178	9.0
			American Indian/Alaska Native	Asian/other
1990	637,515	3,258	50,575	4,656	696,004	9.2
2000	669,404	4,685	62,283	18,472	754,844	9.9
2010	699,392	10,207	71,817	32,764	814,180	10.7

Of the total population in 2010, 407,381 were male and 611,383 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 22,119, up from 10,903 in 2000 (an increase of 102.9%).

Tennessee

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Bordered on the west by the Mississippi, Tennessee was part of an area inhabited by Cherokee. French, Spanish and British explorers navigated the Mississippi to trade with the Cherokee in the late 16th and 17th centuries. French claims were abandoned in 1763. Colonists from the British colonies of Virginia and Carolina then began to cross the Appalachians westwards, but there was no organized Territory until after the War of Independence. In 1784 there was a short-lived, independent state called Franklin. In 1790 the South West Territory (including Tennessee) was formed and Tennessee entered the Union as a state in 1796.

The state was active in the war against Britain in 1812. After the American victory, colonization increased and pressure for land mounted. The Cherokee were forcibly removed during the 1830s and taken to Oklahoma, a journey on which many died.

Tennessee was a slave state and seceded from the Union in 1861, although eastern Tennessee was against secession. There were important battles at Shiloh, Chattanooga, Stone River and Nashville. In 1866 Tennessee was readmitted to the Union.

Nashville, the capital since 1843, Memphis, Knoxville, and Chattanooga all developed as river towns, Memphis becoming an important cotton and timber port. Growth was greatly accelerated by the creation of the Tennessee Valley Authority in the 1930s, producing power for industry. With an expanding economy, by 1970, the southern pattern of emigration and population loss had been reversed.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Tennessee is bounded north by Kentucky and Virginia, east by North Carolina, south by Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi and west by the Mississippi River (forming the boundary with Arkansas and Missouri). Land area, 41,235 sq. miles (106,798 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 6,346,105, an increase of 11.5% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,711,432	473,088	216	53	2,184,789	52.4
			All others
1980	3,835,452	725,942	29,726		4,591,120	111.6
1990	4,048,068	778,035	51,082		4,877,185	115.7
2000	4,563,310	932,809	193,164		5,689,283	138.0
2010	4,921,948	1,057,315	366,842		6,346,105	153.9

Of the total population in 2010, 3,252,601 were female and 4,850,104 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population of Tennessee was 290,059, up from 123,838 in 2000 (an increase of 134.2%).

The cities, with population (2000) are Memphis, 650,100; Nashville (capital), 569,891; Knoxville, 167,535; Chattanooga, 150,425; Clarksville, 94,879; Johnson City, 55,542; Murfreesboro, 53,996; Jackson, 50,406; Kingsport, 41,335; Oak Ridge, 27,742. Metropolitan Statistical Areas, with 2000 populations: Nashville, 1,231,311; Memphis, 1,135,614; Knoxville, 687,249; Johnson City-Kingsport-Bristol, 480,091; Chattanooga, 465,161; Clarksville-Hopkinsville, 207,033; Jackson, 107,377.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 85,560 (13.8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 58,882 (9.5). Infant mortality, 2006, 8.7 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 64,000 (10.5 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 25,900 (4.3).

CLIMATE

Memphis, Jan. 41°F (5°C), July 82°F (27.8°C). Annual rainfall 49" (1,221 mm). Nashville, Jan. 39°F (3.9°C), July 79°F (26.1°C). Annual rainfall 48" (1,196 mm). Tennessee belongs to the Appalachian Mountains climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The state has operated under three constitutions, the last of which was adopted in 1870 and has been since amended 35 times (first in 1953). Voters at an election may authorize the calling of a convention limited to altering or abolishing one or more specified sections of the constitution. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 33 members and a House of Representatives of 99 members, senators elected for four years and representatives for two years. Qualified as electors are all citizens (usual residential and age (18) qualifications).

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Tennessee sends nine members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Lamar Alexander (R. 2003–15) and Bob Corker (R. 2007–13).

The capital is Nashville. The state is divided into 95 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Tennessee with 56.9% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Bill Haslam (R.), 2011–15 (salary: $172,980).

Texas

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A number of Indian tribes occupied the area before French and Spanish explorers arrived in the 16th century. In 1685 La Salle established a colony at Fort St Louis, but Texas was confirmed as Spanish in 1713. Spanish missions increased during the 18th century with San Antonio (1718) as their headquarters.

In 1820 a Virginian colonist, Moses Austin, obtained permission to begin a settlement in Texas. In 1821 the Spanish empire in the Americas came to an end and Texas, together with Coahuila, formed a state of the newly independent Mexico. The Mexicans agreed to the Austin venture and settlers of British and American descent came in.

Discontented with Mexican government, the settlers declared independence in 1836. Warfare, including the siege of the Alamo fort, ended with the foundation of the independent Republic of Texas which lasted until 1845. During this period the Texas Rangers were organized as a police force and border patrol. Texas was annexed to the Union in Dec. 1845, as the Federal government feared its vulnerability to Mexican occupation. This led to war between Mexico and the USA from 1845 to 1848. In 1861 Texas left the Union and joined the southern states in the Civil War, being readmitted in 1869. Ranching and cotton-growing were the main activities before the discovery of oil in 1901.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Texas is bounded north by Oklahoma, northeast by Arkansas, east by Louisiana, southeast by the Gulf of Mexico, south by Mexico and west by New Mexico. Land area, 261,232 sq. miles (676,587 sq. km). Texas is the second largest US state behind Alaska. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 25,145,561, an increase of 20.6% since 2000.

Population for five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asian	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	3,204,848	690,049	702	943	3,896,542	14.8
			All others
1980	11,197,663	1,710,250	1,320,470		14,228,383	54.2
			American Indian/ Alaska Native	All Others
1990	12,774,762	2,021,632	65,877	2,124,239	16,986,510	64.9
2000	14,799,505	2,404,566	118,362	3,529,387	20,851,820	79.7
2010	17,701,552	2,979,598	170,972	4,293,439	25,145,561	96.3

Of the total population in 2010, 12,673,281 were female and 18,279,737 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 9,460,921, up from 6,669,666 in 2000 (an increase of 41.8%). The numerical increase was the second largest in the Hispanic population of any state in the USA, after California. Only New Mexico has a greater percentage of Hispanics in the state population.

The largest cities, with census population in 2000, are:

Houston	1,700,672	Pasadena	127,843
Dallas	1,036,309	Beaumont	118,289
San Antonio	991,861	Brownsville	117,326

Texas suffered its worst one-year drought on record in 2011, when the average rainfall for the state was 14.9" (378 mm). Texas belongs to the Central Plains climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution dates from 1876; it has been amended 467 times as of Aug. 2011. The state legislature consists of the Senate and House of Representatives. The Senate has 31 members elected for four-year terms. Half of the membership is elected every two years. The House has 150 members, elected for two-year terms during polling held in even-numbered years. The legislature meets in regular session for about five months every other year. The session begins in Jan. of odd-numbered years and lasts no more than 140 days (although special sessions can be called by the Governor). The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Texas sends 32 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Kay Hutchison (R. 1993–2013) and John Cornyn (R. 2002–15).

The capital is Austin. The state has 254 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Texas with 55.5% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Rick Perry (R.), 2011–15 (salary: $150,000).

Lieut.-Governor: David Dewhurst (R.), 2011–15 ($7,200 plus legislature session salary).

Secretary of State: Esperanza 'Hope' Andrade (R.), appointed July 2008 ($125,880).

ECONOMY

Per capita personal income (2010) was $37,706.

Budget

In 2009 total state revenue was $81,144m. Total expenditure was $110,726m. (education, $44,355m.; public welfare, $26,583m.; highways, $6,777m.; hospitals, $3,763m.; correction, $3,690m.) Outstanding debt in 2009, $30,438m.

Performance

In 2010 Gross Domestic Product by state was $1,106,236m. (provisional), ranking Texas second after California. If Texas were a country in its own right it would be the world's 13th largest economy. In 2010 state real GDP growth was 2.8% (provisional).

Banking and Finance

In 2002 there were 751 financial institutions in Texas insured by the US Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, with assets worth $216,900m. They had 4,980 offices with total deposits of $256,600m.

As at Dec. 2003 there were 351 state-chartered banks operating in Texas, with total assets of $121,970m. The largest banks were International Bank of Commerce, Laredo (with assets of $5,294.2m.), Texas State Bank, McAllen ($4,215.6m.), Sterling Bank, Houston ($3,110.1m.), Prosperity Bank, El Campo ($2,395.0m.) and PlainsCapital Bank, Lubbock ($2,061.8m.).

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Electricity

In 2009 production was 396.6bn. kWh, of which 189.0bn. kWh was from natural gas.

Oil and Gas

Texas is the leading producer in the USA of both oil and natural gas. In 2007 it produced 21% of the country's oil and 22% of its natural gas. Production, 2008: crude petroleum, 398m. bbls (value in 2007, $27,108m.); marketed production of natural gas, 6,921bn. cu. ft (value in 2007, $42,734m.). Natural gasoline, butane and propane gases are also produced.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 6,784 sq. miles.

Minerals

Minerals include helium, crude gypsum, granite and sandstone, salt and cement. Production of coal (2009) was 35.1m. short tons. Total value of domestic non-fuel mineral products in 2006 was $2,980m.

Agriculture

Texas is one of the most important agricultural states. In 2007 it had 247,437 farms covering 130.40m. acres (up from 228,926 farms covering 129.88m. acres in 2002); average farm was of 527 acres. Both the number of farms and the total area covered are the highest in the USA. In 2007 land and buildings were valued at $1,270 per acre. Large-scale commercial farms, highly mechanized, dominate in Texas; farms of 1,000 acres or more in number far exceed that of any other state, but small-scale farming persists. Soil erosion is a serious problem in some parts.

Production: corn, barley, beans, cotton, hay, oats, peanuts, rye, sorghum, soybeans, sunflowers, wheat, oranges, grapefruit, peaches, sweet potatoes. Farm income, 2006: from crops $5,703m.; from livestock and products, $10,324m. The net farm income in 2006 was $4,866m.

The state has an important livestock industry, leading in the number of all cattle (13.71m.) and sheep (945,000); it also had 0.44m. milch cows, 1.16m. hogs and pigs, and 19.12m. laying hens in 2007. Wool production in 2007 totalled 4.60m. lb, the most of any state.

Forestry

There were 17,273,000 acres of forested land in 2007, with 682,000 acres of national forest.

INDUSTRY

In 2006 the state's 20,691 manufacturing establishments had 846,000 employees, earning $40,922m. Total value added by manufacturing in 2006 was $196,580m.

Labour

Total non-agricultural employment, 2007, 10,359,000. Employees by branch, 2007 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 2,104; government, 1,728; professional and business services, 1,291; education and health services, 1,255; leisure and hospitality, 980. The unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 8.3%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from Texas totalled $207.0bn., the most of any state and representing 16% of all US exports. The state's major export markets in 2010 were Mexico (with a value of $72.6m.), Canada ($18.8m.), China ($10.3m.) and Brazil ($7.2m.).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 there were 305,855 miles of road comprising 84,194 miles of urban road and 221,661 miles of rural road. There were 18,072,148 registered motor vehicles and 3,363 traffic accident fatalities.

Rail

In 2009 there were 10,405 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights), including 8,375 miles of Class I railroads. Texas has more rail miles than any other state. There were 45 freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Texas in 2009 totalled 82.4m. tons and rail traffic terminating in the state came to 186.6m. tons (the most of any state).

Civil Aviation

There were 70,940,435 passenger enplanements in 2007. In 2002 Texas had 295 public and 1,073 private airports, 429 heliports and 8 stolports. In 2003 a total of 52,465,427 passengers (48,036,422 domestic and 4,429,005 international) embarked and disembarked at Dallas/Fort Worth International airport. It handled 736,023 tons of freight in 2003. The Houston Airport System (HAS) recorded a total of 42,034,978 passengers arriving and departing that year; of these, George Bush Intercontinental airport served 34,151,342 (28,530,960 domestic and 5,620,382 international). HAS cargo shipments in 2003 reached 335,753 tons in 2003.

Shipping

The port of Houston, connected by the Houston Ship Channel (50 miles long) with the Gulf of Mexico, is the second busiest in the country after South Louisiana and the busiest for foreign trade cargo. In 2009 it handled 211.3m. tons of cargo (148.0m. tons of foreign trade cargo and 63.4m. tons of domestic cargo). Other major ports are Corpus Christi, Beaumont, Texas City and Port Arthur, which ranked as the USA's 5th, 7th, 11th and 19th busiest ports respectively in 2009. There were 1,021 miles of inland waterways (271 miles of deep-draft channels and 750 miles of shallow-draft channels) in 2007.

Justice

In Dec. 2008 there were 172,506 prison inmates. Between 1977 and 2011 Texas was responsible for 477 of the USA's 1,277 executions (more than four times as many as any other state), although it was not until 1982 that Texas reintroduced the death penalty. In 2011, 13 people were executed (17 in 2010). There were 312 death row inmates as at 1 Jan. 2012. In 2000, 40 people had been executed, the highest number in a year in any state since the authorities began keeping records in 1930.

Education

School attendance is compulsory from six to 18 years of age.

In the 2007–08 school year there were 8,758 public elementary and secondary schools with 4,674,832 enrolled pupils; there were 321,929 teachers. Total expenditure on public schools in 2006–07 was $45,189m.

In 2010 there were 146 higher education institutions (38 public universities, 39 independent colleges and universities, 50 public community college districts, four campuses of the Texas State Technical College System, three public Lamar state colleges, nine public health-related institutions, one independent medical school and two independent junior colleges). Enrolled students in fall 2008 totalled about 1.4m.

Utah

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Spanish Franciscan missionaries explored the area in 1776, finding Shoshoni Indians. Spain laid claim to Utah and designated it part of Spanish Mexico. As such it passed into the hands of the Mexican Republic when Mexico rebelled against Spain and gained independence in 1821.

In 1848, at the conclusion of war between the USA and Mexico, the USA received Utah along with other southwestern territory. Settlers had already arrived in 1847 when the Mormons (the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints) arrived, having been driven on by hostility in Ohio, Missouri and Illinois. Led by Brigham Young, they entered the Great Salt Valley and colonized it. In 1849 they applied for statehood but were refused. In 1850 Utah and Nevada were joined as one Territory. The Mormon community continued to ask for statehood but this was only granted in 1896, after they had renounced polygamy and disbanded their People's Party.

Mining, especially of copper, and livestock farming were the basis of the economy. Settlement had to adapt to desert conditions and the main centres of population were in the narrow belt between the Wasatch Mountains and the Great Salt Lake. Salt Lake City, the capital, was founded in 1847 and laid out according to Joseph Smith's plan for the city of Zion. It was the centre of the Mormons' provisional 'State of Deseret' and Territorial capital from 1856 until 1896, except briefly in 1858 when federal forces occupied it during conflict between territorial and Union governments.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Utah is bounded north by Idaho and Wyoming, east by Colorado, south by Arizona and west by Nevada. Land area, 82,170 sq. miles (212,818 sq. km). In 2000 American Indian lands covered 8,937 sq. miles (8,910 sq. miles in reservations and 27 sq. miles in off-reservation trust land).

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 2,763,885, an increase of 23.8% since 2000.

Population at five federal censuses was:

	White	Black	American Indian/Alaska Native	Asian	Total (including others)	Per sq. mile
1910	366,583	1,144	3,123	2,501	373,851	4.5
1980	1,382,550	9,225	19,256	15,076	1,461,037	17.7
1990	1,615,845	11,576	24,283	25,696	1,722,850	21.0
2000	1,992,975	17,657	29,684	37,108	2,233,169	27.2
2010	2,379,560	29,287	32,927	55,285	2,763,885	33.6

Of the total population in 2010, 1,388,317 were male and 1,892,858 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 358,340, up from 201,559 in 2000 (an increase of 77.8%).

The largest cities are Salt Lake City (the capital), with a population (census, 2000) of 181,743; West Valley City, 108,896; Provo, 105,166; Sandy City, 88,418; Orem, 84,324; Ogden, 77,226.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 55,634 (20.3 per 1,000 population—the highest rate in any US state); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 13,991 (5.1). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 5.1 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 23,700 (9.2 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 9,900 (3.8). ### CLIMATE

Salt Lake City, Jan. 29°F (-1.7°C), July 77°F (25°C). Annual rainfall 16" (401 mm). Utah belongs to the Mountain States climate region (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Utah adopted its present constitution in 1896; it has had numerous amendments since then. The Legislature consists of a Senate (in part renewed every two years) of 29 members, elected for four years, and of a House of Representatives of 75 members elected for two years. It sits annually in Jan. The Governor is elected for four years. The constitution provides for the initiative and referendum.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Utah sends three members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Orrin Hatch (R. 1977–2013) and Mike Lee (R. 2011–17).

The capital is Salt Lake City. There are 29 counties in the state.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Utah with 62.6% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The original Indian hunting grounds of the Green Mountains and lakes was explored by the Frenchman, Samuel de Champlain, in 1609. He reached Lake Champlain on the northwest border. The first attempt at permanent settlement was also French, on Isle la Motte in 1666. In 1763 the British gained the area by the Treaty of Paris. The Treaty, which also brought peace with the Indian allies of the French, opened the way for settlement, but in a mountain area transport was slow and difficult. Montpelier, the state capital from 1805, was chartered as a township site in 1781 to command the main pass through the Green Mountains.

In the War of Independence Vermont declared itself an independent state to avoid being taken over by New Hampshire and New York. In 1791 it became the 14th state of the Union.

Most early settlers were New Englanders of British and Protestant descent. After 1812 a granite-quarrying industry grew around the town of Barre, attracting immigrant workers from Italy and Scandinavia. French Canadians settled in Winooski. Textile and engineering industries developed in the 19th century attracted more European workers.

Vermont saw the only Civil War action north of Pennsylvania when a Confederate raiding party attacked from Canada in 1864.

During the 20th century the textile and engineering industries have declined but paper and lumber industries flourish. Settlement is still mainly rural or in small towns.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Vermont is bounded in the north by Canada, east by New Hampshire, south by Massachusetts and west by New York. Land area, 9,217 sq. miles (23,871 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 625,741, an increase of 2.8% since 2000.

Population at five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/ Alaska Native	Asian	Total (including others)	Per sq. mile
1910	354,298	1,621	26	11	355,956	39.0
1980	506,736	1,135	984	1,355	511,456	55.1
1990	555,088	1,951	1,696	3,215 <sup>1</sup>	562,758	60.8
2000	589,208	3,063	2,420	5,358 <sup>1</sup>	608,827	65.8

Of the total population in 2010, 317,535 were female and 496,508 were 18 years old or older. In 2000, 414,480 (66.2%) were rural, the highest rural population percentage of any state in the USA. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 9,208, the lowest total of any state. However, this figure represents a rise of 67.3% compared to the 2000 census figure of 5,504. The largest cities are Burlington, with an estimated population (2002) of 38,885; Essex, 18,863; Rutland City, 17,309; Colchester, 17,245. The capital, Montpelier, had a population in 2000 of 8,035.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 6,339 (10.2 per 1,000 population—the lowest rate in any US state); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 5,213 (8.4). Infant deaths, 2006, 5.5 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 5,400 (8.7 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 2,200 (3.5). Same-sex marriage became legal in Sept. 2009.

CLIMATE

Burlington, Jan. 17°F (−8.3°C), July 70°F (21.1°C). Annual rainfall 33" (820 mm). Vermont belongs to the New England climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution was adopted in 1793 and has since been amended. Amendments are proposed by two-thirds vote of the Senate every four years, and must be accepted by two sessions of the legislature; they are then submitted to popular vote. The state Legislature, consisting of a Senate of 30 members and a House of Representatives of 150 members (both elected for two years), meets in Jan. every year. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for two years. Electors are all citizens who possess certain residential qualifications and have taken the freeman's oath set forth in the constitution.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Vermont sends one member to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Patrick Leahy (Democrat, 1975–2017) and Bernard Sanders (Independent Democrat, 2007–13).

The capital is Montpelier (estimated population of 8,028 in 2002). There are 14 counties and 251 cities, towns and other administrative divisions.

Virginia

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1607 a British colony was founded at Jamestown, on a peninsula in the James River, to grow tobacco. The area was marshy and unhealthy but the colony survived and in 1619 introduced a form of representative government. The tobacco plantations expanded and African slaves were imported. Jamestown was later abandoned but tobacco-growing continued and spread through the eastern part of the territory.

In 1624 control of the colony passed from the Virginia Company of London to the Crown. Growth was rapid during the 17th and 18th centuries. The movement for American independence was strong in Virginia; George Washington and Thomas Jefferson were both Virginians, and crucial battles of the War of Independence were fought there.

When the Union was formed, Virginia became one of the original states, but with reservations because of its attachment to slave-owning. In 1831 there was a slave rebellion. The tobacco plantations began to decline, and plantation owners turned to the breeding of slaves. While the eastern plantation lands seceded from the Union in 1861, the small farmers and miners of the western hills refused to secede and remained in the Union as West Virginia.

Richmond, the capital, became the capital of the Confederacy. Much of the Civil War took place in Virginia, with considerable damage to the economy. After the war the position of the black population was little improved. Blacks remained without political or civil rights until the 1960s.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Virginia is bounded northwest by West Virginia, northeast by Maryland and the District of Columbia, east by the Atlantic, south by North Carolina and Tennessee and west by Kentucky. Land area, 39,490 sq. miles (102,279 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 8,001,024, an increase of 13.0% since 2000.

Population for five federal census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/ Alaska Native	Asian/Other	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,389,809	671,096	539	168	2,061,612	51.2
			All others
1980	4,230,000	1,008,311	108,517		5,346,818	134.7
1990	4,791,739	1,162,994	15,282	217,343	6,187,358	155.9
2000	5,120,110	1,390,293	21,172	546,940	7,078,515	178.8
2010	5,486,852	1,551,399	29,225	933,548	8,001,024	202.6

Of the total population in 2010, 4,075,041 were female and 6,147,347 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 631,825, up from 329,540 in 2000 (an increase of 91.7%).

The population (2003 estimates) of the principal cities was: Virginia Beach, 439,467; Norfolk, 241,727; Chesapeake, 210,834; Richmond (the capital), 194,729; Arlington CDP, 187,873; Newport News, 181,647; Hampton, 146,878; Alexandria, 128,923.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 106,686 (13.7 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 59,093 (7.6). Infant mortality, 2006, 7.1 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 60,800 (8.0 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 31,100 (4.1).

CLIMATE

Average temperatures in Jan. are 41°F (5°C) in the Tidewater coastal area and 32°F (0°C) in the Blue Ridge mountains; July averages, 78°F (25.5°C) and 68°F (20°C) respectively. Precipitation averages 36" (914 mm) in the Shenandoah valley and 44" (1,118 mm) in the south. Snowfall is 5–10" (125–250 mm) in the Tidewater and 25–30" (625–750 mm) in the western mountains. Norfolk, Jan. 41°F (5°C), July 79°F (26°C). Annual rainfall 46" (1,145 mm). Virginia belongs to the Atlantic Coast climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution became effective in 1971. The General Assembly consists of a Senate of 40 members, elected for four years, and a House of Delegates of 100 members, elected for two years. It sits annually in Jan. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Virginia sends 11 members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Jim Webb (D. 2007–13) and Mark Warner (D. 2009–15).

The state capital is Richmond; the state contains 95 counties and 40 independent cities.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections Barack Obama won Virginia with 52.6% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Bob McDonnell (R.), 2010–14 (salary: $175,000).

Lieut.-Governor: William T. Bolling (R.), 2010–14 ($36,321).

Washington State

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The strongest Indian tribes in the 18th century were Chinook, Nez Percé, Salish and Yakima. The area was designated by European colonizers as part of the Oregon Country. Between 1775 and 1800 it was claimed by Spain, Britain and the USA; the dispute between the two latter nations was not settled until 1846.

The first small white settlements were Indian missions and fur-trading posts. In the 1840s American settlers began to push westwards along the Oregon Trail, making a settlement with Britain a matter of urgency. When this was achieved the whole area was organized as the Oregon Territory in 1848. Washington was made a separate Territory in 1853.

Apart from trapping and fishing, the chief industry was supplying timber for the new settlements of California. After 1870 the westward extension of railways encouraged settlement. Statehood was granted in 1889. Settlers were mostly Americans from neighbouring states to the east and Canadians. Scandinavian immigrants followed. Seattle, laid out in 1853 as a saw-milling town, was named after the Indian chief who had ceded the land and befriended the settlers. It grew as a port during the Alaskan and Yukon gold-rushes of the 1890s. The economy thrived on exploiting the Columbia River for hydro-electric power.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Washington is bounded north by Canada, east by Idaho, south by Oregon with the Columbia River forming most of the boundary, and west by the Pacific. Land area, 66,456 sq. miles (172,119 sq. km). Lands owned by the federal government, 2003, were 13,246,559 acres or 31.0% of the total area. Census population, 1 April 2010, was 6,724,540, an increase of 14.1% since 2000.

Population in five federal census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/Alaska Native	Asian/ Other	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,109,111	6,058	10,997	15,824	1,141,990	17.1
1980	3,779,170	105,574	60,804	186,608	4,132,156	62.1
1990	4,308,937	149,801	81,483	326,471	4,866,692	73.1
2000	4,821,823	190,267	93,301	788,730	5,894,121	88.6
2010	5,196,362	240,042	103,869	1,184,267	6,724,540	101.2

Of the total population in 2010, 3,374,833 were female and 5,143,186 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 755,790, up from 441,509 in 2000 (a rise of 71.2%).

West Virginia

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1861 the slave-owning state of Virginia seceded from the Union. The 40 western counties, mostly hilly country and settled by miners and small farmers who were not slave-owners, were declared a new state. On 20 June 1863 West Virginia became the 35th state of the Union.

The capital, Charleston, was an 18th-century fortified post on the early westward migration routes across the Appalachians. In 1795 local brine wells were tapped and the city grew as a salt town. Coal, oil, natural gas and a variety of salt brines were all found in due course. Huntington, the next largest town, served the same industrial area as a railway terminus and port on the Ohio river. Wheeling, the original state capital, located on the major transportation routes of the Ohio River, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and the National Road, was a well established, cosmopolitan city when it hosted the statehood meetings in 1861.

Three-quarters of the state is forest. Settlement has been concentrated in the mineral-bearing Kanawha valley, along the Ohio river and in the industrial Monongahela valley of the north.

More than half of the population is still classified as rural. However, the majority commute to industrial employment.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

West Virginia is bounded in the north by Pennsylvania and Maryland, east and south by Virginia, southwest by the Big Sandy River (forming the boundary with Kentucky) and west by the Ohio River (forming the boundary with Ohio). Land area, 24,038 sq. miles (62,259 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 1,852,994, an increase of 2.5% since 2000.

Population in five federal census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian/Alaska Native	Asian/Other	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	1,156,817	64,173	36	93	1,221,119	50.8
1980	1,874,751	65,051	1,610	5,194	1,949,644	80.3
1990	1,725,523	56,295	2,458	7,459	1,793,477	74.0
2000	1,718,777	57,232	3,606	9,834	1,808,344	75.1
2010	1,739,988	63,124	3,787	46,095	1,852,994	77.1

Of the total population in 2010, 939,408 were female and 1,465,576 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 the Hispanic population was 22,268, up from 12,279 in 2000 (an increase of 81.4%). Even with this increase West Virginia has the smallest Hispanic percentage in its population (at 1.2%) of any state.

The 2000 census population of the principal cities was: Charleston (the capital), 53,421; Huntington, 51,475. Others: Parkersburg, 33,099; Wheeling, 31,419; Morgantown, 26,809; Weirton, 20,411; Fairmont, 19,097; Beckley, 17,254; Clarksburg, 16,743.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 21,501 (11.8 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 21,549 (11.9—the highest rate in any US state). West Virginia was the only state in the USA where deaths exceeded births in 2008. Infant mortality, 2006, 7.4 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 13,100 (7.3 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 8,500 (4.7).

CLIMATE

Charleston, Jan. 34°F (1.1°C), July 76°F (24.4°C). Annual rainfall 40" (1,010 mm). West Virginia belongs to the Appalachian Mountains climate zone (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution was adopted in 1872; it has had 17 amendments. The Legislature consists of the Senate of 34 members elected for a term of four years, one-half being elected biennially, and the House of Delegates of 100 members, elected biennially. The Governor is elected for four years and may serve one successive term.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, West Virginia sends three members to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Jay Rockefeller IV (D. 1985–2015) and Joe Manchin III (D. 2011–13).

The state capital is Charleston. There are 55 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won West Virginia with 55.7% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Earl Ray Tomblin (D.), 2011–13 (salary: $150,000).

Senate President: Jeffrey V. Kessler (D.), 2011–13 (base salary: $20,000).

Wisconsin

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The French were the first European explorers of the territory; Jean Nicolet landed at Green Bay in 1634, a mission was founded in 1671 and a permanent settlement at Green Bay followed. In 1763 French claims were surrendered to Britain. In 1783 Britain ceded the area to the USA which designated the Northwest Territory, of which Wisconsin was part. In 1836 a separate Territory of Wisconsin included the present Iowa, Minnesota and parts of the Dakotas.

In 1836 James Duane Doty founded Madison and, even before it was inhabited, successfully pressed its claim to be the capital of the Territory. In 1848 Wisconsin became a state, with its present boundaries.

The city of Milwaukee was founded on Lake Michigan when Indian tribes gave up their claims to the land in 1831–33. It grew rapidly as a port and industrial town, attracting German settlers in the 1840s and Poles and Italians 50 years later. The Lake Michigan shore was developed as an industrial area; the rest of the south proved suitable for dairy farming; the north, mainly forests and lakes, has remained sparsely settled except for tourist bases.

There are 11 Indian reservations where more than 15,500 of Wisconsin's 47,000 Indians live. Since the Second World War there has been black immigration from the southern states to the industrial lake-shore cities.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Wisconsin is bounded north by Lake Superior and the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, east by Lake Michigan, south by Illinois, and west by Iowa and Minnesota, with the Mississippi River forming most of the boundary. Land area, 54,158 sq. miles (140,268 sq. km). Census population, 1 April 2010, was 5,686,986, an increase of 6.0% since 2000.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	All others	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	2,320,555	2,900	10,405	2,333,860	42.2
1980	4,443,035	182,592	80,015	4,705,642	86.4
1990	4,512,523	244,539	134,707	4,891,769	90.1
2000	4,769,857	304,460	289,358	5,363,675	98.8
2010	4,902,067	359,148	425,771	5,686,986	105.0

Of the total population in 2010, 2,864,586 were female and 4,347,494 were 18 years old or older. In 2010 Wisconsin's Hispanic population was 336,056, up from 192,921 in 2000 (an increase of 74.2%).

Population of the large cities, 2000 census, was as follows:

Milwaukee	596,974	Janesville	59,498
Madison (capital)	208,054	La Crosse	51,818
Green Bay	102,313	Sheboygan	50,792

Employees by branch, 2007 (in 1,000): trade, transportation and utilities, 547; manufacturing, 501; government, 416; education and health services, 399; professional and business services, 277. Average annual pay per worker (2005) was $35,471. The state unemployment rate in Dec. 2010 was 7.5%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 2010 exports from Wisconsin totalled $19,790m., up from $16,725m. in 2009 although down from $20,570m. in 2008. The leading destinations for exports in 2010 were Canada (value of $6,053m.), followed by Mexico, China (excluding Hong Kong) and Germany.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2007 the state had 114,705 miles of road of which 92,557 miles were rural roads. There were 5,017,895 registered motor vehicles.

Rail

In 2009 there were 3,510 miles of freight railroad (excluding trackage rights). There were ten freight railroads operating in 2009. Rail traffic originating in Wisconsin totalled 12.9m. tons in 2009 with rail traffic terminating in the state totalling 56.6m. tons.

Civil Aviation

There were, in 2002, 134 public access airports. There were 5,606,008 passenger enplanements statewide in 2007.

Shipping

Lake Superior and Lake Michigan ports handled 47.8m. tons of freight in 2002; 87% of it at Superior, one of the world's biggest grain ports, and much of the rest at Milwaukee and Green Bay.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

In Dec. 2008 there were 23,380 prison inmates. The death penalty was abolished in 1853.

Education

All children between the ages of six and 18 are required to attend school full-time to the end of the school term in which they become 18 years of age. In fall 2007, 2,268 public elementary and secondary schools had 874,633 pupils; there were 58,914 teachers. Private schools enrolled 138,290 students. Public pre-schools enrolled 37,773 children. Average public school teacher salary in 2008–09 was $50,424. Total expenditure for public elementary and secondary education was $10,373m. in 2006–07. Spending per pupil in fiscal year 2008 was $10,791.

There are three non-profit higher educational sectors in Wisconsin: the public colleges and universities, the technical colleges, and the private colleges and universities.

The University of Wisconsin, established in 1848, was joined by law in 1971 with the Wisconsin State Universities System to become the University of Wisconsin System with 13 degree granting campuses, 13 two-year campuses in the Center System and the state-wide University Extension. The system had, in 2009–10, 6,898 faculty members. In fall 2009, 178,909 students enrolled (11,216 at Eau Claire, 6,638 at Green Bay, 10,009 at La Crosse, 41,654 at Madison, 30,418 at Milwaukee, 13,192 at Oshkosh, 5,303 at Parkside, 7,803 at Platteville, 6,728 at River Falls, 9,209 at Stevens Point, 9,017 at Stout, 2,794 at Superior, 11,139 at Whitewater and 13,789 at the Center System freshman-sophomore centres).

The Wisconsin Technical College System has 16 technical college districts, which award two-year associate degrees, one- and two-year technical diplomas and short-term technical diplomas. Approximately 400,000 students enrol in the colleges each year.

UW-Extension enrolled 187,809 students in its continuing education programmes in year ending June 2009. Independent institutions of higher education include: Marquette University (Jesuit), in Milwaukee (with 11,689 students in fall 2009); Cardinal Strich University (Franciscan), with campuses in Milwaukee, Madison and Edina, Minnesota (6,276); Concordia University Wisconsin (Lutheran), in Mequon (7,178); and Lawrence University, Appleton (1,483). The state's educational and broadcasting service is licensed through the UW Board of Regents.

Health

In 2007 there were 124 community hospitals with 14,000 beds. A total of 613,000 patients were admitted during the year.

Welfare

In Nov. 2004 there were 136,488 Supplemental Security Income (SSI) recipients in the state; set monthly payments (2005) are $663 for a single individual, $709 for an eligible individual with an ineligible spouse and $1,001 for an eligible couple. A special payment level of $759 for an individual and $1,346 for a couple may be paid with special approval for SSI recipients who are developmentally disabled or chronically mentally ill, living in a non-medical living arrangement not his or her own home. There is a monthly cash benefit for each child living with an SSI parent of $250 for the first child and $150 for each additional child. All SSI recipients receive state medical assistance coverage and may qualify for food stamps.

Wisconsin completed its conversion to the W-2 (Wisconsin Works) programme on 31 March 1998, ending the 62-year-old Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) programme. W-2 clients (Nov. 2004) totalled 15,374 with 11,148 receiving cash assistance. W-2 clients must be working, seeking employment or be enrolled in job-training programmes. Recipients are limited to 60 months of financial assistance (consecutive or non-consecutive). Participants are eligible for child care assistance, a state subsidized health plan, job and transportation assistance and food stamps. In Aug. 2004 there were 322,405 (132,313 households) food stamp recipients. Medicare enrolment in July 2006 totalled 834,677. In fiscal year 2006 a total of 973,369 people in Wisconsin received Medicaid. An additional 94,257 (Aug. 2004) are provided for under BadgerCare, a state-funded medical insurance programme for certain low-income families.

RELIGION

Wisconsin church affiliation, as a percentage of the 2004 population, was estimated at 31% Catholic, 25% Protestant Mainline, 22% Evangelical and 14% unaffiliated.

CULTURE

Tourism

The tourist-vacation industry ranks among the first three in economic importance in Wisconsin with an estimated $11,710m. spent in 2003. The Department of Tourism budgeted $13,665,400 to promote tourism in 2004–05.

Wyoming

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The territory was inhabited by Plains Indians (Arapahoes, Sioux and Cheyenne) in the early 19th century. There was some trading with white Americans, but very little white settlement. In the 1840s the great western migration routes, the Oregon and the Overland Trails, ran through the territory with Wyoming offering mountain passes accessible to wagons. Once migration became a steady flow forts were built to protect the route from Indian attack.

In 1867 coal was discovered. In 1868 Wyoming was organized as a separate Territory and in 1869 the Sioux and Arapaho were confined to reservations. At the same time the route of the Union Pacific Railway brought railway towns to southern Wyoming. Settlement of the north was delayed until after the final defeat of hostile Indians in 1876.

The economy was based on ranching. Cheyenne, made Territorial capital in 1869, also functioned as a railway town moving cattle. Casper, on the site of a fort on the Pony Express route, was also a railway town on the Chicago and North Western. Laramie started as a Union Pacific construction workers' shanty town in 1868. In 1890 oil was discovered at Casper, and Wyoming became a state the same year. Subsequently, mineral extraction became the leading industry, as natural gas, uranium, bentonite and trona were exploited as well as oil and coal.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Wyoming is bounded north by Montana, east by South Dakota and Nebraska, south by Colorado, southwest by Utah and west by Idaho. Land area, 97,093 sq. miles (251,470 sq. km). The Yellowstone National Park occupies about 2.22m. acres; the Grand Teton National Park has 307,000 acres. The federal government in 2003 owned 49,268 sq. miles (50.6% of the total area of the state). The Federal Bureau of Land Management administers 17.4m. acres.

Census population, 1 April 2010, was 563,626, an increase of 14.1% since 2000. Wyoming has the smallest population of any of the states of the USA, but in the year 1 July 2008–30 June 2009 the state's population showed the largest percentage growth of any in the USA.

Population in five census years was:

	White	Black	American Indian	Asiatic	Total	Per sq. mile
1910	140,318	2,235	1,486	1,926	145,965	1.5
			All others
1980	446,488	3,364		19,705	469,557	4.8
			American Indian/ Alaska Native	Asian/ Native Hawaiian/ Pacific Islander	Other	Total	Per sq. mile
1990	427,061	3,606	9,479	2,806	10,636	453,588	4.7
2000	454,670	3,722	11,133	3,073	21,184	493,782	5.1
2010	511,279	4,748	13,336	4,853	29,410	563,626	5.8

Of the total population in 2010, 287,437 were male and 428,224 were 18 years old or older. At the 2010 census the Hispanic population of Wyoming was 50,231, up from 31,669 in 2000 (an increase of 58.6%).

The largest towns (with 2000 census population) are Cheyenne (the capital), 53,011; Casper, 49,644; Laramie, 27,204; Gillette, 19,646; Rock Springs, 18,708; Sheridan, 15,804; Green River, 11,808.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 8,038 (15.1 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 4,222 (7.9). Infant mortality rate, 2006, 7.0 per 1,000 live births. 2006: marriages, 5,000 (9.8 per 1,000 population); divorces and annulments, 2,700 (5.4). The abortion rate, at less than 1 for every 1,000 women aged 15 to 44 in 2005, is the lowest of any US state.

CLIMATE

Cheyenne, Jan. 25°F (-3.9°C), July 66°F (18.9°C). Annual rainfall 15" (376 mm). Yellowstone Park, Jan. 18°F (-7.8°C), July 61°F (16.1°C). Annual rainfall 18" (444 mm). Wyoming belongs to the Mountain States climate region (see UNITED STATES: Climate).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The constitution, drafted in 1890, has since had 76 amendments. The Legislature consists of a Senate of 30 members elected for staggered four-year terms, and a House of Representatives of 60 members elected for two years. It sits annually in Jan. or Feb. The Governor is elected for four years.

For the 112th Congress, which convened in Jan. 2011, Wyoming sends one member to the House of Representatives. It is represented in the Senate by Michael Enzi (R. 1997–2015) and John Barrasso (R. 2007–13).

The capital is Cheyenne. The state contains 23 counties.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In the 2008 presidential elections John McCain won Wyoming with 64.4% of the vote (George W. Bush won in 2004).

OUTLYING TERRITORIES

The outlying territories of the USA comprise the two Commonwealths of the Northern Mariana Islands and Puerto Rico, the incorporated territory of Palmyra Atoll, a number of unincorporated territories (including American Samoa, Guam and the US Virgin Islands) in the Pacific Ocean and one unincorporated territory in the Caribbean Sea.

Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

In 1889 Spain ceded Guam (largest and southernmost of the Marianas Islands) to the USA and sold the rest to Germany.

Occupied by Japan in 1914, the islands were administered by Japan under a League of Nations mandate until occupied by US forces in Aug. 1944. In 1947 they became part of the US-administered Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands. On 17 June 1975 the electorate voted for a Commonwealth in association with the USA; this was approved by the US government in April 1976 and came into force on 1 Jan. 1978. In Nov. 1986 the islanders were granted US citizenship. The UN terminated the Trusteeship status on 22 Dec. 1990.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Northern Marianas form a single chain of 16 mountainous islands extending north of Guam for about 560 km, with a total area of 5,050 sq. km (1,950 sq. miles) of which 464 sq. km (179 sq. miles) are dry land, and with a population (2010 census) of 53,883.

The areas and populations of the islands are as follows:

Island(s)	Sq. km	2000 Census	2010 Census
Northern Group <sup>1</sup>	171	6	0
Saipan	122	62,392	48,220
Tinian (with Aguijan)	101 <sup>2</sup>	3,540	3,136
Rota	83	3,283	2,527

In 2003, 23% spoke Chinese, 22% Chamorro and 24% Filipino languages. English remains an official language along with Carolinian and Chamorro. The largest town is Chalan Kanoa on Saipan.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 1,265 (22.9 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2007, 137 (1.6). Infant mortality, 2002, 6 per 1,000 live births.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was approved by a referendum on 6 March 1977 and came into force on 9 Jan. 1978. The legislature comprises a nine-member Senate, with three Senators elected from each of the main three islands for a term of four years, and an 20-member House of Representatives, elected for a term of two years.

The Commonwealth is administered by a Governor and Lieut.-Governor. The present term of the Governor is five years, but future terms will be four years, with elections taking place in even-numbered years as from 2014.

As from Jan. 2009 the Commonwealth sends one delegate to the US House of Representatives. The Congressman may participate but not vote on the House floor.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the elections of 3 Nov. 2007 the Republican Party won 12 seats in the House of Representatives, the Covenant Party 4 and the Democratic Party 1. Three independents were elected.

In the gubernatorial elections of 7 Nov. 2009 Heinz S. Hofschneider received 36.3% of votes cast, incumbent Benigno R. Fitial 36.2%, Juan Guerrero 19.3% and Ramon Guerrero 8.0%. In a run-off on 23 Nov. between Fitial and Hofschneider, Fitial retained power after winning 51.4% of the vote to Hofschneider's 48.6%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Benigno R. Fitial (R.), 2010–15 (salary: $70,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Eloy S. Inos (Covenant Party), 2010–15 ($60,000).

Legislature Website: <http://www.cnmileg.gov.mp>

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 10 sq. miles.

Fisheries

In 2005 total catch was 432,000 lb (196 tonnes), entirely from marine waters.

INDUSTRY

Labour

In 2000 the labour force totalled 44,471 people (46% male) of which 42,753 were employed. Unemployment was 3.8% in 2000.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

In 1997 imports totalled $836.2m.; in 1999 exports totalled $1,049.0m. Most imports came from other US Pacific territories, Hong Kong and Japan.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There are about 381 km of roads.

Civil Aviation

There are six airports in all. Saipan handled 677,000 passengers (595,000 on international flights) and 9,500 tonnes of freight in 2001.

Telecommunications

There were 24,700 main telephone lines in 2008, equivalent to 289.3 per 1,000 inhabitants, and 20,500 mobile phone subscribers in 2004.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Education

In fall 2007 there were 462 pupils enrolled in nursery school and pre-school, 689 in kindergarten, 6,989 in elementary school (grades 1–8), 3,159 in high school (grades 9–12) and 901 in higher education.

Health

In 1999 there were 31 doctors, three dentists, 123 nursing personnel, four pharmacists and 14 midwives. In 2001 there was one hospital with 86 beds.

RELIGION

The population is predominantly Roman Catholic.

CULTURE

Tourism

In 2007 there were 385,000 tourist arrivals by air.

Commonwealth of Puerto Rico

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

A Spanish dependency since the 16th century, Puerto Rico was ceded to the USA in 1898 after the Spanish defeat in the Spanish-American war. In 1917 US citizenship was conferred and in 1932 there was a name change from Porto Rico to Puerto Rico. In 1952 Puerto Rico was proclaimed a commonwealth with a representative government and a directly elected governor.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Puerto Rico is the easternmost of the Greater Antilles and lies between the Dominican Republic and the US Virgin Islands.

The total area is 13,791 sq. km (5,325 sq. miles), of which 8,868 sq. km (3,424 sq. miles) are dry land; the population, according to the census of 1 April 2010, was 3,725,789, a fall of 2.2% from 2000. The urban population was 3,595,521 in 2000, representing 94.4% (73.3% in 1995) of the total population. Population density was 1,088 per sq. mile in 2010. Of the total population in 2010, 1,940,618 were female. The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 3.74m.

Chief towns, 2005 estimates, are: San Juan (the capital), 432,692; Bayamón, 226,789; Carolina, 191,214; Ponce, 185,276; Caguas, 143,844.

The Puerto Rican island of Vieques, 10 miles to the east, has an area of 51.7 sq. miles and 9,259 (2005) inhabitants. The island of Culebra, between Puerto Rico and St Thomas, has an area of 10 sq. miles and 1,960 (2005) inhabitants. Both islands have good harbours.

Spanish and English are the joint official languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 45,620 (11.5 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 28,781 (7.3). Marriages, 2006, 23,185; infant mortality rate, 2006, 9.1 per 1,000 live births. Population growth rate, 2007–08, 0.3%. In 2006 the most popular age range for marrying was 20–24 for both males and females. Fertility rate, 2008, 1.6 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Warm, sunny winters with hot summers. The north coast experiences more rainfall than the south coast and generally does not have a dry season as rainfall is evenly spread throughout the year. San Juan, Jan. 25°C, July 28°C. Annual rainfall 1,246 mm.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Puerto Rico is a self-governing commonwealth (Estado Libre Asociado) in association with the United States. The chief of state is the President of the United States of America. The head of government is an elected Governor. There are two legislative chambers: the 51-member House of Representatives and the 27-member Senate. Both houses meet annually in Jan. The executive power is exercised by the Governor, elected every four years, who leads a cabinet of 15 ministers.

A new constitution was drafted by a Puerto Rican Constituent Assembly and approved by the electorate at a referendum on 3 March 1952. It was then submitted to Congress, which struck out Section 20 of Article 11 covering the 'right to work' and the 'right to an adequate standard of living'; the remainder was passed and proclaimed by the Governor on 25 July 1952.

Puerto Rico broadly has authority over its internal affairs, but the USA controls areas generally regulated by the federal government. Puerto Ricans are US citizens and possess most of the rights and obligations of citizens from the 50 states, such as paying Social Security and receiving federal welfare. Differences include Puerto Rico's local taxation system and partial exemption from Internal Revenue Code, its lack of voting representation in either house of the US Congress (they have one non-voting representative) and the ineligibility of Puerto Ricans to vote in presidential elections. Puerto Rican men are subject to subscription in the US Armed Forces, but the commonwealth sends independent teams to the Olympics.

The US Constitution remains the supreme legal document. Puerto Rico's authority over internal affairs is subject to the agreement of the US Congress and may, in theory, be rescinded at any time. Its status has long been the subject of debate in Washington and San Juan, centred on the options of remaining as a Commonwealth or adopting statehood, a compact of Free Association or independence. A Presidential Task Force on Puerto Rico's Status was established by President Clinton in 2000 and continued to report during the tenures of George W. Bush and Barack Obama. President Obama has reiterated his commitment to its status being decided by the will of the people of Puerto Rico as expressed in a plebiscite or referendum. Nonetheless, any resulting legislation would be subject to approval by Congress before being signed by the President.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the gubernatorial election on 4 Nov. 2008 Luis Guillermo Fortuño (New Progressive Party/PNP) won with 52.8% of the vote, ahead of incumbent Aníbal Acevedo Vilá (Popular Democratic Party/PPD) with 41.3%, Rogelio Figueroa (Puerto Ricans for Puerto Rico/PPR) with 2.8% and Edwin Irizarry Mora (Puerto Rican Independence Party/PIP) with 2.0%.

In elections to the Chamber of Representatives on 4 Nov. 2008 the New Progressive Party (PNP) polled 74.5% of the vote and claimed 38 of the 51 seats and the Popular Democratic Party (PPD) 25.5% and 13 seats. In the Senate elections of the same day PNP took 22 seats and PPD took 5.

At a plebiscite on 14 Nov. 1993 on Puerto Rico's future status, 48.6% of votes cast were for Commonwealth (status quo), 46.3% for Statehood (51st State of the USA) and 4.4% for full independence. In a further plebiscite in Dec. 1998, some 52.2% of voters backed the opposition's call for no change, while 46.5% supported statehood. Independence was supported by 2.5%, while free association received 0.3%.

In 2005 there were 1,217,702 telephone lines, excluding mobile phones. Mobile phone subscribers numbered 1,993,150 in 2005. There were 925,000 internet users in 2005.

Justice

The Judicial power of the commonwealth is vested in a unified judicial system with regard to jurisdiction, operation and administration. It consists of the Supreme Court, the Court of Appeals and the Court of First Instance, which jointly constitute the General Court of Justice. The Supreme Court is the court of last instance, and is composed of nine members (a chief justice and eight associate justices) named by the Governor with the consent of the Senate. Judgments on federal laws are subject to review by the US Supreme Court.

The Court of First Instance is a court of original general jurisdiction consisting of a Superior Court (253 judges) and municipal courts (85 judges). There are 13 judicial regions in the First Instance Court. Final judgments made by the Court of First Instance must be appealed at the Court of Appeals. The United States Court of Appeals for the First Circuit, based in Boston, Massachusetts, sits in San Juan for two weeks each year.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2005 was 14,412 (368 per 100,000 population).

American Samoa

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The first recorded visit by Europeans was in 1722. On 14 July 1889 a treaty between the USA, Germany and Great Britain proclaimed the Samoan Islands neutral territory, under a four-power government consisting of the three treaty powers and the local native government. By the Tripartite Treaty of 7 Nov. 1899, ratified 19 Feb. 1900, Great Britain and Germany renounced, in favour of the USA, all rights over the islands of the Samoan group east of 171° long. west of Greenwich. The islands to the west of that meridian, now the independent state of Samoa, were assigned to Germany. The islands of Tutuila and Aunu'u were ceded to the USA by their High Chiefs on 17 April 1900, and the islands of the Manu'a group on 16 July 1904. Congress accepted the islands under a Joint Resolution approved 20 Feb. 1929. Swain's Island, 210 miles north of the Samoan Islands, was annexed in 1925 and is administered as an integral part of American Samoa.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The islands (Tutuila, Aunu'u, Ta'u, Olosega, Ofu and Rose) are approximately 650 miles east-northeast of the Fiji Islands. The total area is 1,511 sq. km (583 sq. miles), of which 200 sq. km (77 sq. miles) are dry land; population (2010 census), 55,519, nearly all Polynesians or part-Polynesians. Population density was 278 per sq. km in 2010.

In 2000, 88.8% of the population lived in urban areas. The capital is Pago Pago, which had a population of 3,656 in 2010. The island's three Districts are Eastern (population, 2010, 23,030), Western (31,329) and Manu'a (1,143). There is also Swain's Island, with an area of 1.9 sq. miles and 17 inhabitants (2010), which lies 210 miles to the northwest. Rose Island (uninhabited) is 0.4 sq. mile in area. In 1990 some 85,000 American Samoans lived in the USA.

The official languages are Samoan and English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 1,332 (20.5 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 241 (3.7). Infant mortality, 2006, 11.8 per 1,000 live births.

CLIMATE

A tropical maritime climate with a small annual range of temperature and plentiful rainfall. Pago Pago, Jan. 83°F (28.3°C), July 80°F (26.7°C). Annual rainfall 194" (4,850 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

American Samoa is constitutionally an unorganized, unincorporated territory of the USA administered under the Department of the Interior. Its indigenous inhabitants are US nationals and are classified locally as citizens of American Samoa with certain privileges under local laws not granted to non-indigenous persons. Polynesian customs (not inconsistent with US laws) are respected.

Fagatogo is the seat of the government.

The islands are organized in 15 counties grouped in three districts; these counties and districts correspond to the traditional political units. On 25 Feb. 1948 a bicameral legislature was established, at the request of the Samoans, to have advisory legislative functions. With the adoption of the constitution of 22 April 1960, and the revised Constitution of 1967, the legislature was vested with limited law-making authority. The lower house, or House of Representatives, is composed of 20 members elected by universal adult suffrage and one non-voting member for Swain's Island. The upper house, or Senate, is comprised of 18 members elected, in the traditional Samoan manner, in meetings of the chiefs. The Governor and Lieut.-Governor have been popularly elected since 1978. American Samoa also sends one delegate to the US House of Representatives. The Congressman may participate but not vote on the House floor.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At elections to the Senate and House of Representatives on 4 Nov. 2008, only non-partisans were elected.

At gubernatorial elections on the same day incumbent Togiola Tulafono (Democrat) received 41.3% of votes cast, Utu Abe Malae (ind.) 31.4% and Afoa Moega Lutu (ind.) 26.8%. In the run-off held on 18 Nov. 2008 Togiola Tulafono won with 56.5% of the vote against Utu Abe Malae with 43.5%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Togiola Tulafono (D.), 2009–13 (salary: $85,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Faoa A. Sunia (D.), 2009–13 ($75,000).

Government Website: <http://www.government.as>

ECONOMY

Overview

The Economic Development and Planning Office promotes economic expansion and outside investment.

Budget

The chief sources of revenue are annual federal grants from the USA, local revenues from taxes, duties, receipts from commercial operations (enterprise and special revenue funds), utilities, rents and leases, and liquor sales. In 2004–05 revenues were $182.0m. and expenditures $192.5m.

Banking and Finance

The American Samoa branch of the Bank of Hawaii and the American Samoa Bank offer all commercial banking services. The Development Bank of American Samoa, government-owned, is concerned primarily through loans and guarantees with the economic advancement of the Territory.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

American Samoa's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 9.2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was estimated at 60,000 kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was about 196m. kWh. Per capita consumption in 2007 was an estimated 2,874 kWh. All the Manu'a islands have electricity.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 13 sq. miles.

Agriculture

Of the 48,640 acres of land area, 11,000 acres are suitable for tropical crops; most commercial farms are in the Tafuna plains and west Tutuila. Principal crops are coconuts, taro, bread-fruit, yams and bananas.

Livestock (2002): pigs, 11,000.

Fisheries

Total catch in 2005 was 8,693,000 lb (3,943 tonnes).

INDUSTRY

Fish canning is important, employing the second largest number of people (after government). Attempts are being made to provide a variety of light industries. Tuna fishing and local inshore fishing are both expanding.

Labour

In 2000 the civilian labour force numbered 17,627, of whom 16,718 were employed. The unemployment rate in 2000 was 5.2%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE*Imports and Exports

Imports in 2006 totalled $579m. and exports $439m.

Chief imports are fish for canning, building materials, fuel oil, food, jewellery, machines and parts, alcoholic beverages and cigarettes. Chief exports are canned tuna, watches, pet foods and handicrafts.

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

There are about 150 km of paved roads and 200 km of unpaved roads in all. Motor vehicles registered, 2006, 9,215 (including 7,758 private vehicles).

Civil Aviation

Polynesian Airlines operate daily services between American Samoa (Pago Pago) and Samoa (Apia). Hawaiian Airlines also operates between Pago Pago and Honolulu. Manu'a Air Transport runs local services. There are three airports. There were 24,331 passenger enplanements in 2000.

Shipping

The harbour at Pago Pago, which nearly bisects the island of Tutuila, is the only good harbour for large vessels in American Samoa.

Telecommunications

A commercial radiogram service is available to all parts of the world and commercial phone services are operated to all parts of the world. There were 10,400 main telephone lines in operation in 2004 and 2,300 mobile phone subscribers.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

Judicial power is vested firstly in a High Court. The trial division has original jurisdiction of all criminal and civil cases. The probate division has jurisdiction of estates, guardianships, trusts and other matters. The land and title division decides cases relating to disputes involving communal land and Matai title court rules on questions and controversy over family titles. The appellate division hears appeals from trial, land and title, and probate divisions as well as having original jurisdiction in selected matters. The appellate court is the court of last resort. Two American judges sit with five Samoan judges permanently. In addition there are temporary judges or assessors who sit occasionally on cases involving Samoan customs. There is also a District Court with limited jurisdiction and there are 69 village courts.

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2007 was 236 (equivalent to 410 per 100,000 population).

Education

Education is compulsory between the ages of six and 18. In 2006–07 there were 16,427 pupils in public elementary and secondary schools, of which 16,191 were in regular schools, 187 in vocational education and 49 in special education. There were 1,767 students in higher education in fall 2007.

Welfare

In Dec. 2001 there were 5,320 beneficiaries including 1,470 survivors, 1,370 retired workers and 1,240 disabled workers. Total payments came to $2m. with average monthly benefits of $442.

RELIGION

In 2001 about 41% of the population belonged to the Congregational Church and 19% were Roman Catholics. Methodists and Latter-day Saints (Mormons) are also represented.

CULTURE*Tourism

In 2005 there were 24,000 tourist arrivals.

Guam*Guahan*KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Magellan is said to have discovered the island in 1521; it was ceded by Spain to the USA by the Treaty of Paris (10 Dec. 1898). The island was captured by the Japanese on 10 Dec. 1941 and retaken by American forces following the Battle of Guam (21 July–8 Aug. 1944). Guam is of strategic importance; substantial numbers of naval and air force personnel occupy about one-third of the usable land.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Guam is the largest and most southern island of the Marianas Archipelago, in 13° 26' N. lat., 144° 45' E. long. Total area, 212 sq. miles (549 sq. km). Hagåtña (previously Agaña), the seat of government, is about eight miles from the anchorage in Apra Harbor. The census in 2010 showed a population of 159,358; density, 290 per sq. km. In 2004 an estimated 59.0% of the population lived in rural areas. The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 191,000. The Malay strain is predominant. Chamorro, the native language, and English are the official languages.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 3,457 (19.6 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 762 (4.3). Infant mortality rate, 2005, 10.7 per 1,000 live births. Life expectancy at birth, 2005–10, was 73.3 years for males and 77.9 years for females. Fertility rate, 2008, 2.7 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Tropical maritime, with little difference in temperatures over the year. Rainfall is copious at all seasons, but is greatest from July to Oct. Hagåtña, Jan. 81°F (27.2°C), July 81°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 93" (2,325 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Guam's constitutional status is that of an 'unincorporated territory' of the USA. In Aug. 1950 the President transferred the administration of the island from the Navy Department to the Interior Department. The transfer conferred full citizenship on the Guamanians, who had previously been 'nationals' of the USA. There was a referendum on status on 30 Jan. 1982. 38% of eligible voters voted; 48.5% of those favoured Commonwealth status.

The Governor and Lieut.-Governor are elected for four-year terms. The legislature is a 15-member elected Senate; its powers are similar to those of an American state legislature. Guam sends one non-voting delegate (Madeleine Bordallo, D., 2009–11) to the US House of Representatives.

RECENT ELECTIONS

At the election of 7 Nov. 2006 for the Guam Legislature the Republicans won eight seats and the Democrats won seven. In gubernatorial elections held on 2 Nov. 2010 initial results indicated that Eddie Calvo (Republican) had won against Carl Gutierrez (Democrat). The Guam Election Commission ordered a recount owing to the slim majority but it confirmed Calvo as the victor with 50.3% of the vote against his opponent's 49.0%.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: Eddie Calvo (R.), 2011–15 (salary: $90,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Ray Tenorio (R.), 2011–15 ($85,000).

Government Website: <http://www.guam.gov>

ECONOMY

Budget

Total revenue (2007) $514.4m.; expenditure $394.8m.

Banking and Finance

Banking law makes it possible for foreign banks to operate in Guam. In 2003 there were 12 commercial banks.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Guam's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 9.9 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was an estimated 0.6m. kW in 2007. Production was 1,879m. kWh in 2007. Consumption per capita in 2007 was 10,835 kWh.

Water

The total area covered by water is approximately 7 sq. miles. Supplies are from springs, reservoirs and groundwater; 65% comes from water-bearing limestone in the north. The Navy and Air Force conserve water in reservoirs. The Water Resources Research Centre is at Guam University.

Agriculture

The major products of the island are sweet potatoes, cucumbers, watermelons and beans. In 2002 there were approximately 5,000 acres of arable land and 9,000 acres of permanent cropland. Production (2002 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): coconuts, 52; copra, 2; watermelons, 2. Livestock (2002) included 1,000 goats and 5,000 pigs. There is an agricultural experimental station at Inarajan.

Fisheries

In 2005 total catch was 357,000 lb (162 tonnes), exclusively from sea fishing.

INDUSTRY

Guam Economic Development Authority controls three industrial estates: Cabras Island (32 acres); Calvo estate at Tamuning (26 acres); Harmon estate (16 acres). Industries include textile manufacture, cement and petroleum distribution, warehousing, printing, plastics and ship-repair. Other main sources of income are construction and tourism.

Labour

In 2000 there were 105,014 persons of employable age, of whom 68,894 were in the workforce (64,452 civilian). 7,399 were unemployed.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Guam is the only American territory which has complete 'free trade'; excise duties are levied only upon imports of tobacco, liquid fuel and liquor.

Imports and Exports

In 2002 imports were valued at $389m. and exports at $37m. Main export destinations in 2001 were Japan, 50.0%; Palau, 9.4%; Micronesia, 9.1%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There are 674 km of all-weather roads. In 2002 there were 59,700 passenger cars and 20,100 commercial vehicles in use.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Tamuning. Seven commercial airlines serve Guam. There were 1,004,354 passenger enplanements in 2000.

Shipping

There is a port at Apra Harbor.

Telecommunications

Overseas telephone and radio dispatch facilities are available. Telephone subscribers numbered 145,300 in 2003 (887.3 per 1,000 inhabitants). Mobile phone subscribers numbered 98,000 in 2004. There were 506.4 internet users per 1,000 inhabitants in 2009.

Justice

The Organic Act established a District Court with jurisdiction in matters arising under both federal and territorial law; the judge is appointed by the President subject to Senate approval. There is also a Supreme Court and a Superior Court; all judges are locally appointed except the Federal District judge. Misdemeanours are under the jurisdiction of the police court. The Spanish law was superseded in 1933 by five civil codes based upon California law.

The population in penal institutions in July 2008 was 559 (318 per 100,000 population).

Education

Education is compulsory from five to 16. Bilingual teaching programmes integrate the Chamorro language and culture into public school courses. Total primary and secondary school enrolment in fall 2008 was 39,875, including 30,329 in the public system and 7,053 in private schools; there were 34 public schools and 27 private schools. The University of Guam is in Mangilao and Guam Community College is in Barrigada.

Health

There is a hospital, eight nutrition centres, a school health programme and an extensive immunization programme. Emphasis is on disease prevention, health education and nutrition.

Welfare

In 2000, $38.9m. was paid in public assistance to individuals, including $19.1m. temporary aid to needy families, $11.5m. Medicaid and $1.5m. old-age assistance.

RELIGION

About 75% of the Guamanians are Roman Catholics; the other 25% are Baptists, Episcopalians, Bahais, Lutherans, Latter-day Saints (Mormons), Presbyterians, Jehovah's Witnesses and members of the Church of Christ and Seventh Day Adventists.

CULTURE

Press

In 2006 there was one daily newspaper, as well as two weekly publications aimed at military personnel.

Tourism

There were 1,228,000 tourist arrivals in 2005.

Virgin Islands of the United States

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The Virgin Islands of the United States, formerly known as the Danish West Indies, were named and claimed for Spain by Columbus in 1493. They were later settled by Dutch and English planters, invaded by France in the mid-17th century and abandoned by the French c. 1700, by which time Danish influence had been established. St Croix was held by the Knights of Malta between two periods of French rule.

The Virgin Islands were purchased from Denmark by the United States for $25m. on 31 March 1917. Their value was wholly strategic, inasmuch as they commanded the Anegada Passage from the Atlantic Ocean to the Caribbean Sea and the approach to the Panama Canal. Although the inhabitants were made US citizens in 1927, the islands are constitutionally an 'unincorporated territory'.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The Virgin Islands group, lying about 40 miles due east of Puerto Rico, comprises the islands of St Thomas (31 sq. miles), St Croix (83 sq. miles), St John (20 sq. miles) and 65 small islets or cays, mostly uninhabited. The total area is 1,910 sq. km (738 sq. miles), of which 346 sq. km (134 sq. miles) are dry land.

The population according to the 2010 census was 106,405; density 794 per sq. mile. 92.6% of the population were urban in 2000.

Population (2010 census) of St Thomas, 51,634; St Croix, 50,601; St John, 4,170. In 2000, 69.8% of the population were native born.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 108,000.

The capital and only city, Charlotte Amalie, on St Thomas, had a population (2010 census) of 10,354. There are two towns on St Croix with 2010 census populations of: Christiansted, 2,433; Frederiksted, 859. The official language is English. Spanish is also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Births, 2008, 1,784 (16.2 per 1,000 population); deaths, 2008 (provisional), 699 (6.4). Infant mortality, 2005–07, 11.5 per 1,000 live births.

CLIMATE

Average temperatures vary from 77°F to 82°F throughout the year; humidity is low. Average annual rainfall, about 45". The islands lie in the hurricane belt; tropical storms with heavy rainfall can occur in late summer.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Organic Act of 22 July 1954 gives the US Department of the Interior full jurisdiction; some limited legislative powers are given to a single-chambered legislature, composed of 15 senators elected for two years representing the two legislative districts of St Croix and St Thomas-St John.

The Governor is elected by the residents. Since 1954 there have been four attempts to redraft the Constitution, to provide for greater autonomy. Each has been rejected by the electorate. The latest was defeated in a referendum in Nov. 1981, with 50% of the electorate participating.

For administration, there are 14 executive departments, 13 of which are under commissioners and the other, the Department of Justice, under an Attorney-General. The US Department of the Interior appoints a Federal Comptroller of government revenue and expenditure.

The franchise is vested in residents who are citizens of the United States, 18 years of age or over. They do not participate in the US presidential election but they have a non-voting representative in Congress.

The capital is Charlotte Amalie, on St Thomas Island.

RECENT ELECTIONS

In elections for governor held on 2 Nov. 2010 John deJongh, Jr (Democrat) won 56.3% of the votes, against 43.6% for Kenneth Mapp (ind.). In Senate elections held on 4 Nov. 2008 the Democratic Party of the Virgin Islands won 10 out of 15 seats.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Governor: John P. deJongh, Jr (D.), 2011–15 (salary: $138,000).

Lieut.-Governor: Gregory R. Francis (D.), 2011–15 ($115,000).

US Virgin Islands Government: <http://ltg.gov.vi>

ECONOMY*Currency

United States currency became legal tender on 1 July 1934.

Budget

Under the 1954 Organic Act finances are provided partly from local revenues—customs, federal income tax, real and personal property tax, trade tax, excise tax, pilotage fees, etc.—and partly from Federal Matching Funds, being the excise taxes collected by the federal government on such Virgin Islands products transported to the mainland as are liable.

Per capita income, 2000, $13,139.

Revenues in 2004 totalled $557.9m.; expenditures were $592.0m.

Banking and Finance

Banks include the Chase Manhattan Bank; the Bank of Nova Scotia; the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Puerto Rico; the Banco Popular of the Virgin Islands; First Bank of Puerto Rico; the Virgin Islands Community Bank; the Bank of St Croix; Barclays Bank International; Citibank; Banco Popular de Puerto Rico; and FirstBank Virgin Islands.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 126.5 tonnes per capita, the second highest in the world.

Electricity

The Virgin Islands Water and Power Authority provides electric power from generating plants on St Croix and St Thomas; St John is served by power cable and emergency generator. Production in 2007 was about 1.07bn. kWh. Per capita consumption in 2007 was an estimated 9,743 kWh. Installed capacity in 2007 was an estimated 323,000 kW.

Water

There are six desalination plants with maximum daily capacity of 8.7m. gallons of fresh water. Rainwater remains the most reliable source. Every building must have a cistern to provide rainwater for drinking, even in areas served by mains (10 gallons capacity per sq. ft of roof for a single-storey house).

The total area covered by water is approximately 604 sq. miles, of which 16 sq. miles are inland.

Agriculture

Land for fruit, vegetables and animal feed is available on St Croix, and there are tax incentives for development.

Livestock (2002): cattle, 8,000; goats, 4,000; pigs, 3,000; sheep, 3,000.

Fisheries

There is a fishermen's co-operative with a market at Christiansted. There is a shellfish-farming project at Rust-op-Twist, St Croix. The total catch in 2005 was approximately 2,798,000 lb (1,269 tonnes).

INDUSTRY

The main occupations on St Thomas are tourism and government service; on St Croix manufacturing is more important. Manufactures include rum (the most valuable product), watches, pharmaceuticals and fragrances. Industries in order of revenue: tourism, refining oil, watch assembly, rum distilling, construction.

Labour

In 2000 the total labour force was 51,042, of whom 7,351 were employed in the arts, entertainment, recreation, accommodation and food services, 6,742 were employed in educational, health and social services, 6,476 in retail trade, 4,931 in public administration and 4,900 in construction. In 2000 there were 4,368 registered unemployed persons, or 5-6% of the workforce.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Imports and Exports

Imports, 2005, totalled $10,243m. and exports $10,476m. The main import is crude petroleum, while the principal exports are petroleum products.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 1996 the Virgin Islands had 856 km of roads.

Civil Aviation

There is a daily cargo and passenger service between St Thomas and St Croix. Alexander Hamilton Airport on St Croix can take all types of aircraft. Cyril E. King Airport on St Thomas takes 727-class aircraft. There are air connections to mainland USA and other Caribbean islands. There were 658,905 passenger enplanements in 2000.

Shipping

The whole territory has free port status. There is an hourly boat service between St Thomas and St John and a 75-minute catamaran service between St Croix and St Thomas two to three times a day.

Telecommunications

All three Virgin Islands have a dial telephone system. Telephone subscribers numbered 152,000 in 2005 (1,359.4 per 1,000 population). Direct dialling to Puerto Rico and the mainland, and internationally, is now possible. In 2005 there were 80,300 mobile phone subscribers. Internet users numbered 30,000 in 2007.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2007 was 555 (512 per 100,000 population).

Education

In fall 2007 there were 10,770 in elementary school, 5,133 in high school and 2,384 students in higher education; there were 1,518 school teachers. In fall 2005 the University of the Virgin Islands (St Thomas and St Croix campuses, with an ecological research station on St John) had 2,392 students (1,263 full-time and 1,129 part-time) and 107 full-time instructional staff; 77% of the students were female.

Health

In 2004 there were 208 active physicians and 45 licensed dentists. The Roy Lester Schneider Hospital on St Thomas had 169 beds in 2008. The Governor Juan F. Luis Hospital, Christiansted, serves St Croix, with 188 beds in 2008.

Welfare

In 2001 federal direct payments for individuals totalled $233.4m., including: retirement insurance, $72.0m.; housing assistance, $53.4m.; survivors insurance, $20.2m.; disability insurance, $18.0m.; food stamps, $17.6m.

RELIGION

At the 2000 census 42% of the population were Baptists, 34% were Roman Catholics and 17% were Episcopalians.

There are places of worship of the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths in St Thomas and St Croix, and Protestant and Roman Catholic churches in St John.

CULTURE

Press

In 2006 there was one daily with a circulation of 17,000.

Tourism

Tourism accounts for some 70% of GDP. In 2006 there were 671,362 staying visitors and 1,903,533 cruise passenger arrivals, down from 697,033 and 1,912,548 respectively in 2005. Receipts from tourism amounted to $1,493m. in 2005.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

From around 4000 BC Uruguay was populated principally by Charrúa and Guaraní Indians. The Charrúa migrated seasonally between coastal and inland areas, while the Guaraní settled in the eastern forests and in the north. Smaller groups also settled the region and lands were fought over vigorously. In 1516 the first Europeans to enter the territory, Spanish navigator Juan Díaz de Solís and his party, were killed. Other Spanish and Portuguese expeditions followed and in the late 16th century the Spanish laid claim to the Río de la Plata. In 1603 Spanish governor Hernando Arias de Saavedra is said to have shipped cattle and horses from the Paraguay region into Río de la Plata, and Spanish, Portuguese and English settlers began livestock farming. The native peoples resisted the European colonizers but were killed in large numbers in warfare and by European disease.

In 1680 the Portuguese established the settlement of Colonia do Sacramento on the Río de la Plata. In 1726 the Spanish founded San Felipe de Montevideo as a fortified port and settled its hinterland. For the next 50 years the two powers fought over the coastal region and in 1776 the Spanish established the vicerealty of the Río de la Plata, with Buenos Aires as its capital. While the Napoleonic wars were weakening Spain, an autonomous junta was established in Montevideo and in 1810 criollos (ethnic Spanish born in South America) seized power from the Spanish in Buenos Aires. A federalist movement originating in the inland region of the Banda Oriental challenged both Montevideo and Buenos Aires. In the ensuing conflict Portuguese Brazil annexed the Banda Oriental from 1820–25, until Uruguayan federalists led a successful uprising and regained control. Banda Oriental declared its independence and its incorporation into the United Provinces of Río de la Plata on 25 Aug. 1825. Fighting continued until 1828 when negotiations began with Brazil and Argentina. On 18 July 1830 the constitution of the Oriental Republic of Uruguay was approved.

Conflict between the two main political parties, the colorados and blancos, dominated the next 90 years, factionalizing the nation and leading to the economically damaging War of the Triple Alliance (1864–70), fought between Paraguay and the unified forces of Uruguay, Argentina and Brazil. In 1905 the first democratic elections took place, returning the colorados to government under President José Batlle y Ordóñez. In the early 20th century ranching brought prosperity and an influx of immigrants, and a welfare state was developed. In 1919 a new constitution aimed to protect against dictatorship by providing for a plural executive known as a colegiado. However, economic depression led to instability and in 1933 presidential government and quadrennial elections were introduced.

Collective leadership returned from 1951–56 but a series of strikes and riots in the 1960s led to the extension of army influence. The military took repressive measures and the presidency was restored in 1967. Marxist urban guerrillas, the Tupamaro, fought a violent campaign against the regime but were finally defeated in 1972. The military took over the government in 1973. A period of harsh repression followed during which thousands were arrested and human rights abuses were rife. Economic difficulties in the 1980s weakened the military government and the country returned to civilian rule in 1985. Economic growth in the 1990s was followed by a downturn from 1999–2002. In 2005 Uruguay elected its first left-wing leader, Tabaré Vázquez of the Progressive Encounter-Broad Front-New Majority coalition.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Uruguay is bounded on the northeast by Brazil, on the southeast by the Atlantic, on the south by the Río de la Plata and on the west by Argentina. The area is 176,215 sq. km (68,037 sq. miles), including 1,200 sq. km (463 sq. miles) of inland waters. The following table shows the area and the provisional population of the 19 departments at census 2011:

Departments	Sq. km	Census 2011	Capital
Artigas	11,928	73,162	Artigas
Canelones	4,536	518,154	Canelones

The total population at the 2011 census was 3,251,526 (provisional); density, 18.6 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 3.43m.

In 2004 Montevideo (the capital) accounted for 39.2% of the total population. It had a population in 2004 of 1,269,600. Other major cities are Salto (population of 99,072 in 2004) and Paysandú (73,272 in 2004). In 2005, 92.0% of the population lived in urban areas.

13% of the population are over 65; 24% are under 15; 63% are between 15 and 64.

The official language is Spanish.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009: births, 47,152; deaths, 32,179. Rates (per 1,000 population), 2009: birth, 14.1; death, 9.6. Annual population growth rate, 2000–05, 0.0%. Infant mortality, 2005 (per 1,000 live births), 13. Life expectancy in 2007 was 72.6 years among males and 79.8 years among females. Fertility rate, 2008, 2.1 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A warm temperate climate, with mild winters and warm summers. The wettest months are March to June, but there is really no dry season. Montevideo, Jan. 72°F (22.2°C), July 50°F (10°C). Annual rainfall 38" (950 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The Constitution was adopted on 27 Nov. 1966 and became effective in Feb. 1967; it has been amended in 1989, 1994, 1996 and 2004.

Congress consists of a Senate of 31 members and a Chamber of Deputies of 99 members, both elected by proportional representation for five-year terms although in the case of the Senate only 30 members are elected with one seat reserved for the Vice-President. The electoral system provides that the successful presidential candidate be a member of the party which gains a parliamentary majority. Electors vote for deputies on a first-past-the-post system, and simultaneously vote for a presidential candidate of the same party. The winners of the second vote are credited with the number of votes obtained by their party in the parliamentary elections. Referendums may be called at the instigation of 10,000 signatories. Voting is compulsory.

CURRENT LEADERS

José Mujica

Position
President

Introduction

José Mujica took office on 1 March 2010 after winning a presidential run-off in Nov. 2009. A former leftist guerrilla, Mujica received 55% of the vote after campaigning on a platform of continued economic growth and policies to tackle crime and poverty.

Early Life

Mujica was born in Montevideo on 20 May 1935. He was a member of the centrist Partido Nacional (National Party) in his youth before joining the newly-formed Movimiento de Liberación Nacional (popularly known as the Tupamaros) in the 1960s, an armed guerrilla movement inspired by the Cuban revolution.

In 1971 he was convicted by a military tribunal under the government of Jorge Pacheco Areco of killing a police officer. He escaped from Punta Carretas prison but was re-arrested in 1972. Following the 1973 military coup Mujica was transferred to a military prison where he was subjected to torture and solitary confinement. When the military dictatorship ended in 1985 he was freed under a general amnesty covering political crimes since 1962.

On his release and the restoration of democracy, Mujica steered the Tupamaros away from its guerrilla past and remodelled it into the Movimiento de Participación Popular (Movement of Popular Participation), a legitimate political party that later joined the left-wing Frente Amplio (Broad Front) coalition. He was elected to the Chamber of Deputies in 1994 and in 1999 won a seat in the Senate, gaining re-election five years later.

On 1 March 2005 he resigned from the Senate when he was appointed minister of livestock, agriculture and fisheries by then president, Tabaré Vázquez. During his tenure Mujica intervened to keep down the price of beef, a staple of the Uruguayan people, winning popular acclaim. In 2008 he returned to the Senate after losing his cabinet post in a reshuffle.

On 28 June 2009 Mujica became Frente Amplio's presidential candidate after winning the coalition's primary election. He pledged to maintain the policies of outgoing President Vázquez, whose term of office had seen prolonged economic growth and strong social interventions by the government. In the first round of elections held in Oct. 2009 Mujica received 48% of the vote and on 30 Nov. 2009 he was declared winner of a run-off against Luis Alberto Lacalle of the National Party, with 55% of the vote.

Career in Office

Keen to maintain his predecessor's legacy, Mujica left the vice-president, Danilo Astori, in charge of economic policy. Mujica was expected to improve Uruguay's often strained relations with its neighbours, and he expressed his support for MERCOSUR, the regional economic bloc. His other priorities included the improvement of educational standards and the maintenance of energy supplies.

Mujica opposed a parliamentary bid to annul legislation giving officers immunity from prosecution for crimes committed during the years of military rule and, despite support in the Senate, the bill was rejected by the Chamber of Deputies in May 2011.

DEFENCE

Defence expenditure totalled US$260m. in 2008 (US$75 per capita), representing 0.8% of GDP.

Army

The Army consists of volunteers who enlist for one to two years service. There are four military regions with divisional headquarters. Strength (2007), 17,000. In addition there are government paramilitary forces numbering 920.

Navy

The Navy includes two frigates. A 280-strong naval aviation service operates one combat capable aircraft. Personnel in 2007 totalled 5,000 including 450 naval infantry and 1,600 coast guards. The main base is at Montevideo.

Air Force

Organized with US aid, the Air Force had (2007) 3,000 personnel and 19 combat capable aircraft.

ECONOMY

In 2006 agriculture contributed 9.2% of GDP, industry 32.4% and services 58.4%.

Overview

Along with a favourable climate for agriculture and tourism, the economy has substantial hydropower potential. Economic links with its larger neighbours, Brazil and Argentina, have proved a mixed blessing but the creation of the Southern Common Market (MERCOSUR) in the 1990s cemented trade and increased exports to those markets.

From 1990–98 the economy grew 3.9% per annum, above the country's long-term trend of 2% from 1960–2000. In 1999 the economy shrank by 2.8% after the devaluation of the Brazilian real and a serious drought. In 2002 the weak banking environment and strong ties with Argentina exposed Uruguay to Argentina's economic collapse. This led to a run on Uruguay's banks, the forced flotation of the peso in June 2002 and a deep recession from 2002–03. The events of 1999–2003 highlighted macroeconomic and structural weaknesses, particularly the need for banking reform and reduced dependence on MERCOSUR partners.

However, unlike Argentina, Uruguay did not default on its debt and the country has relatively effective public institutions. Since the crisis, farming, tourism and finance—the traditional pillars of the economy—have performed well. Annual growth was 6.7% from 2004–08, and poverty declined from 33% to 21.7% between 2002 and 2008. There were structural reforms to competition and bankruptcy laws, as well as fiscal reform. In Jan. 2007 Uruguay signed a framework agreement on trade with the USA, a first step towards a free trade agreement. The global economic downturn slowed Uruguay's growth, especially in export oriented sectors, but positive growth rates were maintained.

Currency

The unit of currency is the Uruguayan peso (UYU), of 100 centésimos, which replaced the nuevo peso in March 1993 at 1 Uruguayan peso = 1,000 nuevos pesos. In June 2002 Uruguay allowed the peso to float freely. Inflation, which had been over 100% in 1990, was 7.9% in 2008 and 7.1% in 2009. In July 2005 total money supply was 22,794m. pesos, foreign exchange reserves were US$2,578m. and gold reserves were 8,000 troy oz (1.8m. troy oz in Nov. 1999).

Budget

In 2008 budgetary central government revenues totalled 123,171m. pesos (of which taxes 116,046m. pesos) and expenditures 120,462m. pesos. Main items of expenditure by economic type in 2008: compensation of employees, 36,025m. pesos; grants, 31,565m. pesos; use of goods and services, 18,583m. pesos.

Standard rate of VAT is 22% (reduced rate, 10%).

Performance

Uruguay depends heavily on its two large neighbours, Brazil and Argentina. Uruguay suffered four successive years of negative growth between 1999 and 2002, culminating in the economy shrinking by 7.1% in 2002, as the general downturn in the world economy was exacerbated by Argentina's crisis. However, the economy has since recovered to achieve GDP growth rates of 2.6% in 2009 and 8.5% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$40.3bn.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank (President, Mario Bergara) was inaugurated on 16 May 1967. It is the bank of issue and supreme regulatory authority. In 2003 there were three other state banks, three principal commercial banks, ten foreign banks and two major credit co-operatives. Savings banks deposits were 1,993,029m. pesos in 1995.

There is a stock exchange in Montevideo.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Uruguay's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 2.2 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 2.3m. kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was 9.42bn. kWh; consumption per capita in 2007 was 2,760 kWh.

Agriculture

Rising investment has helped agriculture, which has given a major boost to the country's economy. Some 41m. acres are devoted to farming, of which 90% to livestock and 10% to crops. Some large estancias have been divided up into family farms; the average farm is about 250 acres. In 2007 there were approximately 1.35m. ha. of arable land and 33,000 ha. of permanent crops. 169,000 ha. were irrigated in 2006.

Main crops (in 1,000 tonnes), 2003: rice, 1,250; wheat, 326; barley, 324; sunflower seeds, 234; soybeans, 183; maize, 178; sugarcane, 165; potatoes, 151; oranges, 122; grapes, 103; tangerines and mandarins, 75; apples, 72; wine, 72; sweet potatoes, 65; sorghum, 60; lemons and limes, 40; oats, 40. ### Forestry

In 2005 the area under forests was 1.51m. ha. (mainly eucalyptus and pine), representing 8.6% of the total land area. In 2007, 7.17m. cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2005 was 125,906 tonnes, almost entirely marine fish.

INDUSTRY

In 2001 industry accounted for 26.6% of GDP, with manufacturing contributing 16.6%. Industries include meat packing, oil refining, cement manufacture, foodstuffs, beverages, leather and textile manufacture, chemicals, light engineering and transport equipment. Output in 1,000 tonnes (2007 unless otherwise indicated): distillate fuel oil, 637; cement (2008), 620; residual fuel oil, 368; petrol, 352; meat-packing (1991), 1,132,000 head; 9.6bn. cigarettes (2001).

Labour

In 1996 the retirement age was raised from 55 to 60 for women; it remains 60 for men. The labour force in 2005 totalled 1,269,300 (54% males). In 2001, 22.4% of the urban workforce was engaged in wholesale and retail trade/repair of motor vehicles, motorcycles and personal and household goods/hotels and restaurants; 15.5% in manufacturing/electricity, gas and water supply; 9.2% in private households with employed persons; and 9.1% in financial intermediation and real estate, renting and business activities. In 2001 the unemployment rate in urban areas was 15.3%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$14,551m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Trade in US$1m.:

	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008
Imports c.i.f.	3,114	3,879	4,757	5,667	8,943
Exports f.o.b.	2,931	3,405	3,953	4,485	6,421

In 2004 the main import suppliers were Argentina (22.2%), Brazil (21.7%), Russia (11.0%), USA (7.1%) and China (5.5%). Leading export destinations in 2004 were the USA (19.8%), Brazil (16.5%), Argentina (7.6%), Germany (5.2%) and Mexico (4.0%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2004 there were 77,732 km of roads, including 3,877 km of national roads and 4,819 km of regional roads. Passenger cars in 2007 numbered 553,200 (151 per 1,000 inhabitants in 2005). There were 150 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 2005.

Rail

The total railway system open for traffic in 2005 was 1,508 km of 1,435 mm gauge. Passenger services, which had been abandoned in 1988, were resumed on a limited basis in 1993. In 2007 the railways carried 600,000 passengers and 1.4m. tonnes of freight.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Montevideo (Carrasco). The national carrier is Pluna. In 2003 it operated domestic services and maintained routes to Asunción, Buenos Aires, Madrid, Porto Alegre, Rio de Janeiro, Santiago and São Paulo. There were 60 airports in 1996, 45 with paved runways and 15 with unpaved runways. In 1999 Montevideo handled an estimated 1,423,000 passengers (1,115,000 on international flights) and 25,500 tonnes of freight. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Uruguay-based carriers flew 8m. km, carrying 464,000 passengers (all on international flights).

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 25 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 53,000 GT. In 2004 vessels totalling 5,067,000 NRT entered ports and vessels totalling 22,262,000 NRT cleared.

Telecommunications

The telephone system in Montevideo is controlled by the State; small companies operate in the interior. Uruguay had 3,969,500 telephone subscribers in 2007 (1,188.6 for every 1,000 persons). There were 3,004,300 mobile phone subscribers in 2007. Internet users numbered 968,000 in 2007 (including 165,000 broadband subscribers).

Justice

The Supreme Court is elected by Congress; it appoints all other judges. There are six courts of appeal, each with three judges. There are civil and criminal courts. Montevideo has ten courts of first instance, Paysandú and Salto have two each and the other departments have one each. There are approximately 300 lower courts.

The population in penal institutions in Aug. 2006 was 6,947 (193 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Adult literacy in 2006 was 98.3% (male, 97.6%; female, 98.6%). The female literacy rate is the second highest in South America, behind Chile. Primary education is obligatory; both primary and secondary education are free. In 2007 there were 122,089 pupils in pre-primary schools with 5,220 teaching staff, 359,439 primary school pupils with 23,175 teaching staff and at secondary level there were 294,852 pupils and 21,369 teaching staff.

There is one state university, one independent Roman Catholic university and one private institute of technology. In 2007 there were 158,841 students and 15,789 academic staff in tertiary education.

In 2006 public expenditure on education came to 3.0% of GNI and represented 11.6% of total government expenditure.

Health

In 2003 there were 13,071 physicians, 4,154 dentists, 3,118 nurses, 1,323 pharmacists and 572 midwives. There were 107 hospitals with 6,661 beds.

Welfare

The welfare state dates from the beginning of the 1900s. In 2002 there were 0.5m. recipients of pensions and benefits. A private pension scheme inaugurated in 1996 had 315,000 members at 31 Dec. 1996. State spending on social security has been capped at 15% of GDP.

RELIGION

State and Church are separate, and there is complete religious liberty. In 2001 there were 2.6m. Roman Catholics and 710,000 persons with other beliefs.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Uruguay has one site on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the Historic Quarter of the City of Colonia del Sacramento (inscribed on the list in 1995), founded in 1680 by the Portuguese.

Press

In 2006 there were 12 paid-for dailies with an average circulation of 135,000. The newspaper with the highest circulation is El País, which sold a daily average of 46,000 copies in 2005.

Tourism

There were 1.81m. non-resident tourists in 2005, mainly from Argentina. Receipts totalled US$690m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Evidence of human settlement from at least 2200 BC is believed to be that of the Oxus civilization which extended across central Asia from Turkmenistan to Tajikistan. The region came under the influence of the first Persian Empire, centred on Persepolis, from around 550 BC when it was known as Sogdiana. Alexander the Great conquered Sogdiana and the ancient Greek kingdom of Bactria in 327 BC, marrying Roxane, daughter of a Sogdian chieftain.

Turkic nomads entered the area from the 5th century AD and control subsequently passed to Arabs, who introduced Islam to Transoxiana in the 8th century. The Persian Samanid dynasty, centred on the cities of Bukhara, Samarkand and Herat, held sway from around AD 875 for over a century, before falling to the Khara-Khanid Khanate.

Much of present-day Uzbekistan came under the control of Seljuk Turks from the 11th century. Led by Alp Arslan, they went on to conquer Georgia, Armenia, Syria and most of Anatolia. Khwarazm in northwest Uzbekistan gained independence from the Seljuks in the late 12th century, expanding westward as far as the Caspian Sea. Genghis Khan's Mongol Hordes overran Central Asia from 1221 and retained power until the rise of Timur, who made his native Samarkand the capital of an empire that by 1405 stretched from western India to the Black Sea. The subsequent Timurid dynasty was ruled by Shahrukh and, from 1447, by Ulugh-beg. Located on the trade routes between Europe, Persia, India and China, the oasis cities of Samarkand, Bukhara and Tashkent became prosperous centres of culture and learning.

The Uzbeks were Turkic-speaking tribes who moved into the region from the steppes to the north of the Aral Sea from the early 16th century. They established separate principalities, notably the Emirate of Bukhara and the Khanates of Khiva and Kokand. The fall of the Timurid Empire presaged the gradual decline of the Central Asian trade routes, partly as a result of the opening of shipping lines between Western Europe and India and East Asia.

During the 1850s the Russian empire began to expand into central Asia. In 1865 Russian forces seized the city of Tashkent and a year later the Khanate of Kokand was dissolved and incorporated into the Governor-Generalship of Turkestan. The Khanate of Khiva and the Emirate of Bukhara became protectorates. Russian colonists, settling throughout Central Asia, developed the region's infrastructure while exploiting the abundant minerals and promoting the growth of cash crops such as cotton. There were periodic revolts against Russian rule, notably the Andijan Uprising of 1898. The chaos surrounding the Bolshevik Revolution of 1917 precipitated the growth of an Uzbek guerrilla army, 'the Basmachi', although their efforts to establish a democratic republic were unsuccessful. In 1924 the Khorezm and Bukhara People's Republics were incorporated into the Uzbekistan Soviet Socialist Republic (SSR), which also included Tajikistan until it became a separate SSR in 1929. The Soviet period brought collectivization and rapid industrialization, particularly around the capital, Tashkent, leading to an influx of Russian migrant workers. Uzbekistan SSR became the primary cotton-producing region of the Soviet Union, although the large-scale diversion of rivers for irrigation had disastrous consequences for the Aral Sea, which lost two-thirds of its volume.

On 20 June 1990 the Supreme Soviet adopted a declaration of sovereignty, although the Communist Party, led by Islam Karimov, remained the only official political party. Following the collapse of the Soviet Union, Uzbekistan was declared an independent republic on 31 Aug. 1991. In Dec. 1991 Uzbekistan became a member of the Commonwealth of Independent States and Karimov was elected president by popular vote. He subsequently cracked down on political opponents, notably the Birlik party and the Islamic Renaissance Party, citing the need for 'stability'.

Bomb blasts in Tashkent, one of which almost killed the president in Feb. 1999, were blamed on extremists from the Islamist Movement of Uzbekistan (IMU), which operates largely in the Ferghana valley and aims to create a pan-Central Asian Islamic state. The IMU leader, Juma Namangoniy, was reportedly killed in Aug. 2002. Nearly 50 people died in a series of bombings and shootings in March 2004, allegedly perpetrated by Islamic militants. Suicide bombers targeted the US and Israeli embassies in Tashkent in July 2004.

On 13 May 2005 several hundred demonstrators were killed in Andijan after troops fired into a crowd protesting against the imprisonment of local businessmen. The USA joined calls for an international inquiry into the shootings. In Nov. 2005 the USA closed its military air base at Karshi-Khanabad which had been used for operations in Afghanistan.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Uzbekistan is bordered in the north by Kazakhstan, in the east by Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan, in the south by Afghanistan and in the west by Turkmenistan. Area, 447,400 sq. km (172,700 sq. miles), including 22,000 sq. km (8,500 sq. miles) of inland water. At the last census, in 1989, the population was 19,810,077. Estimate, 2010, 27.45m.; density, 65 per sq. km. In 1998, 75.8% of the population was Uzbek, 6.0% Russian, 4.8% Tajik, 4.1% Kazakh, 1.6% Tatar and 7.7% other. In 2008, 63.3% of the population lived in rural areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 29.06m.

The areas and populations of the 12 regions, the Karakalpak Autonomous Republic (Karakalpakstan) and the city of Tashkent are as follows (Uzbek spellings in brackets):

Region	Area (in sq. km)	Population (2008 estimate)	Capital	Population (2006 estimate)
Andizhan (Andijon)	4,200	2,477,900	Andizhan	356,800
Bukhara (Bukhoro)	39,400	1,576,800	Bukhara	241,300
Dzhizak (Jizzakh)	20,500	1,090,900	Dzhizak	139,200
Ferghana (Farghona)	7,100	2,997,400	Ferghana	188,100
Khorezm (Khorazm)	6,300	1,517,600	Urgench (Urganch)	140,700
Kashkadar (Qashqadaryo)	28,400	2,537,600	Karshi (Qarshi)	217,400
Karakalpak Autonomous Republic (Qoraqalpoghiston)	164,900	1,612,300	Nukus (Nuqus)	259,700
Namangan	7,900	2,196,200	Namangan	415,000
Navoi (Nawoiy)	110,800	834,100	Navoiy	121,200
Samarkand (Samarqand)	16,400	3,032,000	Samarkand	364,200
Syr-Darya (Sirdaryo)	5,100	698,100	Gulistan (Guliston)	56,900 <sup>1</sup>
Surkhan-Darya (Surkhondaryo)	20,800	2,012,600	Termez (Termiz)	122,700
Tashkent (Toshkent)	15,600	4,730,200	Tashkent	2,140,600

Regions are further subdivided into 227 districts and cities.

The capital is Tashkent (2006 population estimate, 2,140,600); other large towns are Namangan, Samarkand, Andizhan, Nukus, Bukhara, Karshi, Kokand, Ferghana, Margilan, Chirchik and Urgench.

The Roman alphabet (in use 1929–40) was reintroduced in 1994. Arabic script was in use prior to 1929, and Cyrillic from 1940–94.

The official language is Uzbek. Russian and Tajik are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009 births, 649,700; deaths, 130,700; marriages, 227,600; divorces, 17,200. Rates, 2009: birth (per 1,000 population), 23.3; death, 4.7; marriage, 10.0; divorce, 0.6. Life expectancy, 2007, 64.5 years for men and 70.9 for women. Annual population growth rate, 1998–2008, 1.2%. Infant mortality, 2005, 57 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 2.3 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The summers are warm to hot but the heat is made more bearable by the low humidity. The winters are cold but generally dry and sunny. Tashkent, Jan. –1°C, July 25°C. Annual rainfall 14.8" (375 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

A new constitution was adopted on 8 Dec. 1992 stating that Uzbekistan is a pluralist democracy. The constitution restricts the president to standing for two five-year terms. In Jan. 2002 a referendum was held at which 91% of the electorate voted in favour of extending the presidential term from five to seven years. Voters were also in favour of changing from a single-chamber legislature to a bicameral parliament. Based on the constitution President Karimov's term of office that started in Jan. 2000 ended in Jan. 2007, but according to election law a vote must be held in Dec. of the year in which the president's term expires. Pro-Karimov legislators maintained that he was eligible to stand again in the Dec. 2007 elections as he had only served one seven-year term despite having been president since 1990.

Uzbekistan switched to a bicameral legislature in Jan. 2005 with the establishment of the 100-member Senate (with 16 members appointed by the president and 84 elected from the ranks of regional, district and city legislative councils). The lower house is the 150-member Oliy Majlis (Supreme Assembly). 135 seats are elected by popular vote for five-year terms and 15 are reserved for the Ecological Movement.

CURRENT LEADERS

Islam Abduganiyevich Karimov

Position

President

Introduction

Islam Karimov, a former Soviet official, has been president since Uzbekistan declared independence in 1990. His regime has been characterized by the suppression of domestic political and religious opposition, and his electoral victories have been questioned for their irregularities. Karimov has sought to build ties with the West, and won US favour for co-operation in the war against terrorism in the aftermath of the 11 Sept. 2001 attacks. However, reports of torture and other human rights violations, culminating in an alleged massacre of Uzbek civilians in Andizhan in May 2005, have provoked increasing international criticism of his regime. In Dec. 2007 he retained the presidency, claiming a landslide victory in an election widely condemned as undemocratic and constitutionally illegal.

Early Life

Karimov was born on 30 Jan. 1938 in Samarkand. He qualified as a mechanical engineer at the Central Asian Polytechnical Institute and graduated in economics from the Tashkent Institute of National Economy. He then worked in Tashkent at farm machinery and aircraft plants. In 1966 he moved to the state planning committee of Uzbekistan, attaining the rank of vice-chairman.

In 1983 Karimov was appointed finance minister for Uzbekistan and three years later became deputy head of government, as well as chairman of the state planning committee. In 1989 he was named head of the Uzbek Communist Party. The following year Uzbekistan claimed sovereignty from the USSR and Karimov was chosen as president. Following the attempted coup against Mikhail Gorbachev in Moscow in 1991, Karimov declared full independence.

Career in Office

Against little organized opposition, Karimov dominated presidential elections and led Uzbekistan into the Commonwealth of Independent States. In 1992 he continued his campaign against domestic opposition, banning two leading parties—Birlik (Unity) and Erk (Freedom)—and imprisoning many members. In 1994 he agreed an economic integration treaty with Russia and signed a co-operation pact with Kazakhstan and Kyrgyzstan which was developed into a single economic community in 1996. In 1995 Karimov won a further five years in office by plebiscite.

In 1999 Tashkent was the scene of several car bombings which Karimov blamed on the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan (IMU). Government and IMU forces clashed several times, the culmination of growing tensions between the two sides since the mid-1990s. In the same year Karimov withdrew Uzbekistan from the CIS agreement on collective security, increasing the nation's isolation among Central Asian nations predominantly loyal to Moscow.

Karimov was re-elected to the presidency in 2000 with over 90% of the vote, although the electoral process was severely criticized by the international community, notably the opposition candidate's assertion that he himself would vote for Karimov. Following the 11 Sept. attacks in New York and Washington, Karimov permitted the USA to use Uzbek air bases for the war in Afghanistan. In the same year he signed up to the Shanghai Co-operation Society (with China, Russia, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan), established to promote regional economic co-operation and fight religious and ethnic militancy.

In Jan. 2002 Karimov secured a constitutional change, accepted by referendum, extending the presidential term from five to seven years. His assistance in the US campaign in Afghanistan was meanwhile rewarded by US$160m. worth of aid from Washington. Also in 2002 a long-running border feud with Kazakhstan was settled.

In March 2004 a series of shootings and explosions in the Tashkent and Bukhara regions left dozens of people dead. Further bombings near the US and Israeli embassies and in the Prosecutor General's Office in Tashkent occurred in July. Karimov's government blamed Islamic militants. Then in May 2005 several hundred civilians, protesting against the trial of local businessmen accused of Islamic extremism, were reportedly killed by security forces in Andizhan. Unrest also spread to the towns of Paktabad and Kara Suu before troops reasserted government control. At the end of July, in a punitive response to international criticism of the massacre, Karimov gave the USA six months to close its military airbase in Uzbekistan. His relations with the European Union also became increasingly strained in the wake of the events in Andizhan and the subsequent convictions of those accused of instigating unrest. The EU imposed an arms embargo and a visa ban, and these sanctions were extended in 2006. Uzbekistan meanwhile sought to strengthen its military and economic co-operation with Russia.

In Dec. 2007 Karimov's re-election as president failed to meet democratic standards, according to international observers, and was condemned by opposition activists as a sham.

In late 2008 and early 2009 there was some improvement in relations with the West as Karimov allowed the USA and NATO to transport non-lethal supplies through Uzbekistan to their armed forces in Afghanistan and the EU eased sanctions despite continuing concerns about human rights. The EU's decision followed the release of some political prisoners and the abolition of the death penalty.

In mid-2009 two terrorist incidents in Andizhan and Khanabad were attributed to increasing Islamist militancy.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for 12 months. Defence expenditure in 2006 totalled US$85m. (US$3 per capita), representing 0.5% of GDP.

Army

Personnel, 2007, 50,000. There are, in addition, paramilitary forces totalling up to 20,000.

Air Force

Personnel, 2007, 17,000. There were 135 combat capable aircraft in operation (including Su-17s, Su-24s, Su-25s, Su-27s and MiG-29s) and 29 attack helicopters.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 26.1% of GDP in 2006, industry 27.4% and services 46.5%.

Uzbekistan featured among the ten most corrupt countries in the world in a 2011 survey of 183 countries carried out by the anti-corruption organization Transparency International.

Overview

After the collapse of the Soviet Union, Uzbekistan embarked on a cautious economic transition. There is heavy dependence on state controls and planning, foreign exchange and trade restrictions and public investments aimed at achieving import-substitution industrialization and self-sufficiency in food and energy.

Heavily populated river valleys are intensely cultivated and irrigated. Agriculture employs a third of the labour force. The land is rich in natural resources and primary commodities (cotton, gold, copper, energy resources and precious stones) account for the majority of exports. Uzbekistan is the world's second largest cotton exporter behind the USA and relies on the crop as a source of export earnings. In recent years strong cotton and gold prices, with growing exports of natural gas and manufactured products, have strengthened the economy and its external financial position. However, the business climate is unfavourable to private enterprise.

The country receives significant remittances from citizens who work abroad, primarily in Russia and Kazakhstan. Uzbekistan has increasingly looked towards Russia, China and other central Asian countries to build economic links. Neighbouring countries are keen to develop Uzbekistan's oil and gas industry.

Economic growth increased from 4% in the period 1996–2003 to over 9% in 2007–08. However, the global downturn led to weaker demand for exports and there was a 30% decline in remittances in 2009.

Currency

A coupon for a new unit of currency, the soum (UZS), was introduced alongside the rouble on 15 Nov. 1993. This was replaced by the soum proper at 1 soum = 1,000 coupons on 1 July 1994. In 1994 inflation was 1,568%, but it reached more stable levels of 12.7% in 2008 and 14.1% in 2009.

Budget

In 2006 general government consolidated revenue amounted to 6,406bn. soums and expenditure to 6,331bn. soums.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 9.0% in 2008, 8.1% in 2009 and 8.5% in 2010; total GDP in 2010 was US$39.0bn.

Banking and Finance

The Central Bank is the bank of issue (Chairman, Faizulla Mullajanov). In 2001 there were 38 commercial banks, of which 16 were privately owned.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES*Environment

Irrigation of arid areas has caused the drying up of the Aral Sea. Uzbekistan's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 4.6 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity was an estimated 11.7m. kW in 2007. Production was 48.9bn. kWh in 2007 and consumption per capita 1,785 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Oil production was 4.8m. tonnes in 2008; natural gas output was 62.2bn. cu. metres. In 2008 there were proven oil reserves of 0.6bn. bbls and natural gas reserves of 1,580bn. cu. metres.

Minerals

Lignite production in 2007 was 3.28m. tonnes. In 2005, 84 tonnes of gold and an estimated 60 tonnes of silver were produced. There are also large reserves of uranium, copper, lead, zinc and tungsten; all uranium mined (2,629 tonnes in 2005) is exported.

Agriculture

Farming is intensive and based on irrigation. In 2002 there were 4.48m. ha. of arable land and 0.34m. ha. of permanent cropland. Approximately 4.28m. ha. were irrigated in 2002.

Output of main agricultural products (2003, in 1,000 tonnes): wheat, 5,331; seed cotton, 2,856; cottonseed, 1,720; tomatoes, 1,100; cotton lint, 946; cabbage, 900; potatoes, 760; grapes, 510; apples, 503; watermelons, 460; rice, 311; cucumbers and gherkins, 300. Livestock, 2003 estimates: 8.2m. sheep; 5.4m. cattle; 820,000 goats; 14m. chickens. Livestock products, 2003 estimates (in 1,000 tonnes): meat, 508; milk, 3,790; eggs, 83.

Forestry

In 2005 the area under forests was 3.30m. ha., accounting for 8.0% of the total land area. In 2007, 31,000 cu. metres of timber were produced.

Fisheries

The total catch in 2007 was 2,802 tonnes, exclusively freshwater fish.

INDUSTRY

Industrial production grew by 3.4% in 2002. Major industries include fertilizers, agricultural and textile machinery, aircraft, metallurgy and chemicals. Output (in tonnes): cement (2009 estimate), 6,700,000; distillate fuel oil (2007), 1,391,000; residual fuel oil (2007), 1,342,000; petrol (2007), 1,284,000; sulphuric acid (2000), 823,000; mineral fertilizer (2000), 800,000; cotton woven fabrics (2000), 360m. sq. metres; 1,000 tractors (2000); 26,000 TV sets (2000).

Labour

In 1999 a total of 8,885,000 persons were in employment, including: 3,421,000 engaged in agriculture, hunting, forestry and fishing; 1,968,000 in community, social and personal services; 1,142,000 in manufacturing, mining and quarrying, electricity, gas and water; and 734,000 in wholesale and retail trade, restaurants and hotels. In 2000 the unemployment rate was 0.6%. Average monthly salary in 1999 was 8,823 soums. A minimum wage of 6,530 soums a month was imposed on 1 Aug. 2004.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

External debt was US$4,226m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

In 2008 imports were valued at US$7,504m. and exports at US$11,573m. Principal imports, 2002, were machinery and equipment, 41.4%; chemicals and chemical products, 15.1%; foodstuffs, 12.5%; ferro and non-ferro metals, 8.0%.

The main import sources in 2002 were Russia (20.5%), South Korea (17.4%), Germany (8.9%) and Kazakhstan (7.5%). Principal export markets in 2002 were Russia (17.3%), Ukraine (10.2%), Italy (8.3%) and Tajikistan (7.8%).

COMMUNICATIONS*Roads

Length of roads, 2000, was 86,496 km (87.3% paved).

Rail

The total length of railway in 2005 was 3,986 km of 1,520 mm gauge (619 km electrified). In 2008, 14.3m. passengers and 78.3m. tonnes of freight were carried. There is a metro in Tashkent.

Civil Aviation

The main international airport is in Tashkent (Vostochny). Andizhan, Namangan and Samarkand also have airports. The national carrier is the state-owned Uzbekistan Airways, which in 2003 operated domestic services and flew to Almaty, Amritsar, Ashgabat, Athens, Baku, Bangkok, Beijing, Birmingham, Bishkek, Chelyabinsk, Delhi, Dhaka, Ekaterinburg, Frankfurt, İstanbul, Kazan, Khabarovsk, Krasnodar, Krasnoyarsk, Kuala Lumpur, Kyiv, London, Mineralnye Vody, Moscow, New York, Novosibirsk, Omsk, Osaka, Paris, Rome, Rostov, St Petersburg, Samara, Seoul, Sharjah, Simferopol, Tel Aviv, Tokyo, Tyumen and Ufa. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Uzbekistan-based carriers flew 40m. km, carrying 1,466,000 passengers (1,048,000 on international flights). In 2001 Tashkent handled 1,387,000 passengers (884,000 on international flights) and 36,200 tonnes of freight.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 1,849,600 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscribers numbered 12,733,700 in 2008 (46.8 per 100 persons). There were 830,000 PCs in use in 2006 and 2,469,000 internet users in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS*Justice

In 1994, 73,561 crimes were reported, including 1,219 murders and attempted murders. The death penalty was abolished in Jan. 2008. The population in penal institutions in Aug. 2003 was 48,000 (184 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

In 2007 there were 562,000 pre-primary pupils with 60,642 teaching staff, 2.16m. primary pupils with 118,676 teaching staff and 4.60m. secondary pupils with 352,001 teaching staff. There were 288,550 students and 23,354 academic staff in tertiary education in 2007. There are universities and medical schools in Tashkent and Samarkand. Adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 99.3% (99.6% among males and 99.1% among females).

Karakalpak Autonomous Republic (Karakalpakstan)

Area, 166,600 sq. km (64,320 sq. miles); population (2008 estimate), 1,612,300. Capital, Nukus (2006 estimate, 259,700). The Karakalpaks (Qoraqalpoghs) came under Russian rule in the second half of the 19th century. On 11 May 1925 the territory was constituted within the then Kazakh Autonomous Republic (of the Russian Federation) as an Autonomous Region. On 20 March 1932 it became an Autonomous Republic within the Russian Federation, and on 5 Dec. 1936 it became part of the Uzbek SSR. The main ethnic groups are Qoraqalpoghs, Uzbeks and Kazakhs.

Its manufactures are in the field of light industry—bricks, leather goods, furniture, canning and wine. The principal crops are rice and cotton.

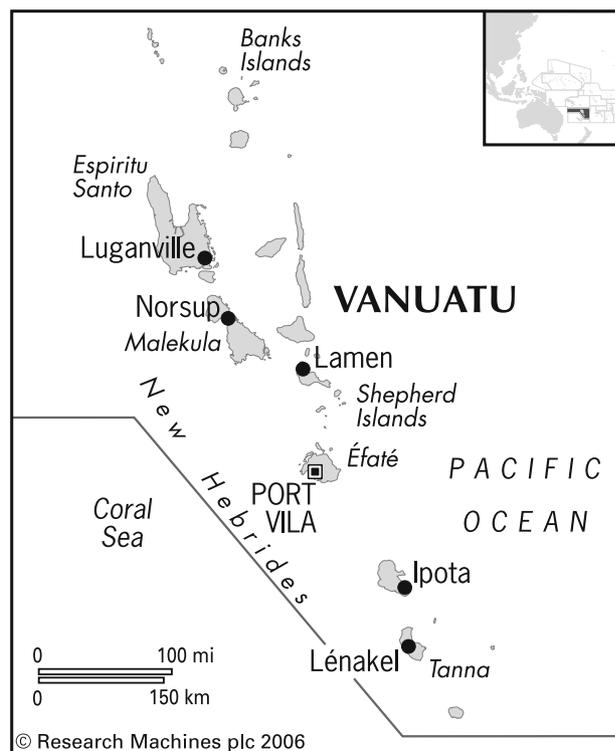

The shrinking of the Aral Sea has had a detrimental effect on agriculture and public health in the region. In 2002 the incidence of poverty was 36.4%, compared to 9.2% in Tashkent, the Uzbek capital. Estimates place unemployment at around the 70% mark.

In 2004–05 there were 6,800 students at Karakalpak State University. There is a branch of the Uzbek Academy of Sciences.

Total spending on health care in 2002 was US$10m., or US$6.50 per capita.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Vanuatu occupies the group of islands formerly known as the New Hebrides, in the southwestern Pacific Ocean. Capt. Bligh and his companions, cast adrift by the Bounty mutineers, sailed through part of the island group in 1789. Sandalwood merchants and European missionaries came to the islands in the mid-19th century and were then followed by cotton planters—mostly French and British—in 1868. In response to Australian calls to annex the islands, Britain and France agreed on joint supervision. Joint sovereignty was held over the indigenous Melanesian people but each nation retained responsibility for its own nationals according to a protocol of 1914. The island group escaped Japanese invasion during the Second World War and became an Allied base. On 30 July 1980 New Hebrides became an independent nation under the name of Vanuatu, meaning 'Our Land Forever'.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Vanuatu comprises 83 islands (65 of which are inhabited), which lie roughly 800 km west of the Fiji Islands and 400 km northeast of New Caledonia. The estimated land area is 12,190 sq. km (4,706 sq. miles). The larger islands of the group are: (Espiritu) Santo, Malekula, Epi, Pentecost, Aoba, Maewo, Paama, Ambrym, Efate, Erromanga, Tanna and Aneityum. They also claim Matthew and Hunter islands. Provisional population at the 2009 census, 243,304, giving a density of 20.0 per sq. km.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 270,000.

In 2009, 75.6% of the population lived in rural areas. Port Vila (the capital) had a 2009 provisional census population of 44,040 and Luganville 13,167.

39% of the population is under 15 years of age, 55% between the ages of 15 and 59 and 6% 60 or over.

The national language is Bislama (spoken by 57% of the population); English and French are also official languages; about 30,000 speak French.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 7,100; deaths, 1,200. Rates, 2008 estimates (per 1,000 population): births, 30.2; deaths, 5.0. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.6%. Life expectancy, 2007, was 68.1 years for males and 72.0 years for females. Infant mortality, 2005, 31 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 4.0 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is tropical, but moderated by oceanic influences and by trade winds from May to Oct. High humidity occasionally occurs and cyclones are possible. Rainfall ranges from 90" (2,250 mm) in the south to 155" (3,875 mm) in the north. Vila, Jan. 80°F (26.7°C), July 72°F (22.2°C). Annual rainfall 84" (2,103 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Legislative power resides in a 52-member unicameral Parliament elected for a term of four years. The President is elected for a five-year term by an electoral college comprising Parliament and the presidents of the 11 regional councils. Executive power is vested in a Council of Ministers, responsible to Parliament, and appointed and led by a Prime Minister who is elected from and by Parliament.

There is also a Council of Chiefs, comprising traditional tribal leaders, to advise on matters of custom.

National Anthem

'Yumi, yumi, yumi i glat blong talem se, yumi, yumi, yumi i man blong Vanuatu' ('We, we, we are glad to tell, we, we, we are the people of Vanuatu'); words and tune by F. Vincent Ayssav.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary elections were held on 2 Sept. 2008. The Party of Our Land (VP) won 11 of 52 seats, the National United Party (NUP) 8, the Union of Moderate Parties (UMP) 7, the Vanuatu Republican Party (VRP) 7, ind. 4, the People's Progress Party (PPP) 4, the Green Confederation 2 and nine other parties one each. On 22 Sept. 2008 parliament elected Edward Natapei (VP) prime minister, with 27 votes, against 25 for Maxime Carlot Korman (VRP).

Iolu Abil was elected president on 2 Sept. 2009 by an electoral college after a series of votes in the third round of voting, receiving 41 votes against 16 for outgoing president Kalkot Mataskelekele.

Parliamentary elections are scheduled to take place on 30 Oct. 2012.

CURRENT LEADERS

Sato Kilman

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Sato Kilman was appointed prime minister for the third time on 26 June 2011 after a chaotic seven months when the post changed hands five times. Kilman is the leader of the People's Progress Party, part of the Alliance bloc.

Early Life

Kilman grew up in Lakatoro, on Vanuatu's Malekula Island. He came to public attention in 2004 for his criticism of Prime Minister Serge Vohor's attempt to establish diplomatic relations with Taiwan. After moving the confidence motion that deposed Vohor, Kilman served as foreign minister from 2004–07 in the government of Ham Lini. He called for the arrest of Taiwanese nationals in Vanuatu, whom he claimed were conspiring to influence foreign policy.

Kilman was dismissed in a cabinet reshuffle at the end of 2007 over allegations of misappropriating state funds. He and his Alliance bloc subsequently served in opposition until Nov. 2009, when Prime Minister Edward Natapei dismissed several of his coalition partners in favour of the Alliance. Kilman was appointed to succeed Lini as deputy prime minister.

In Dec. 2010 a vote of no confidence was brought against Natapei after he refused to hand over the rotating leadership of a regional trade forum to the Fiji Islands' interim prime minister, Frank Bainimarama. The confidence vote was the seventh that Natapei had faced since his election in 2008. Kilman was appointed his successor by the parliamentary speaker on 2 Dec. 2010.

Kilman survived a no confidence motion on 18 Feb. 2011 when the majority of the opposition failed to vote. However, on 24 April 2011 he was narrowly defeated—by 26 votes to 25—in another motion brought against him. He was replaced by Serge Vohor, who became prime minister for a fourth time. Vohor's election was declared invalid on 13 May 2011 because he could not claim an absolute majority in parliament. Kilman was reinstated, only to be ousted again after a court upheld the charge brought by Natapei that Kilman's initial appointment was unconstitutional because the speaker had failed to conduct a secret ballot.

Natapei took office as prime minister on a caretaker basis to await a parliamentary vote. Ten days later, on 26 June 2011, Kilman returned to office after gaining 29 votes against Serge Vohor's 23.

Career in Office

Under Kilman's leadership Vanuatu became the fifth nation—after Nauru, Nicaragua, Russia and Venezuela—to recognize the breakaway region of Abkhazia as a sovereign nation independent of Georgia. In Oct. 2011 the World Trade Organization approved Vanuatu's membership, pending ratification of the accession package.

DEFENCE

Vanuatu does not have an army but there is a Vanuatu Police Force and a paramilitary Vanuatu Mobile Force.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 14.7% of GDP in 2006, industry 8.6% and services 76.7%.

Overview

The economy is based on agriculture, fishing, offshore financial services and tourism. Efforts have been made to boost tourism since the turn of the century by improving air connections and cruise ship facilities. Remittances from seasonal workers in New Zealand is the country's second largest foreign exchange earner. GDP grew at over 5% per year between 2005 and 2008, and even 3.6% in 2009 at the height of the global financial crisis, with particularly strong growth in telecommunications, agriculture and the hospitality sector.

Vanuatu is dependent on a relatively small number of exports, mainly copra, beef, cocoa, timber and coffee. The majority of exports go to Thailand, while Australia and New Zealand supplies the majority of tourists and foreign aid. The country is vulnerable to natural disasters.

Currency

The unit of currency is the vatu (VUV) with no minor unit. There was inflation in 2008 of 4.8% and 4.5% in 2009. Foreign exchange reserves in July 2005 were US$60m. and total money supply was 14,373m. vatu.

Budget

In 2008 revenues totalled 16,997m. vatu and expenditures 15,121m. vatu. Tax revenue accounted for 69.5% of revenues in 2008; current expenditure accounted for 77.6% of expenditures.

VAT is 12.5%.

Performance

Vanuatu experienced a two-year recession in 2001 and 2002, when the economy contracted by 3.5% and 4.4% respectively. The economy has since recovered to achieve GDP growth rates of 3.5% in 2009 and 2.2% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$0.7bn.

Banking and Finance

The Reserve Bank blong Vanuatu (Governor, Odo Tevi) is the central bank and bank of issue. There is also the state-owned National Bank, plus three other banks—ANZ Bank Ltd, Westpac Banking Corp. and BRED. Total assets and liabilities of commercial banks at 31 Dec. 2009 were 80,527m. vatu.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Vanuatu's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 0.5 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Electrical capacity in 2007 was an estimated 12,000 kW. Production in 2007 was about 46m. kWh and consumption per capita an estimated 204 kWh.

Agriculture

About 65% of the labour force are employed in agriculture. In 2007 there were approximately 20,000 ha. of arable land and 85,000 ha. of permanent crops. The main commercial crops are copra, coconuts, cocoa and coffee. Production (2003 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): coconuts, 206; copra, 23; bananas, 14; groundnuts, 2. 80% of the population are engaged in subsistence agriculture; yams, taro, cassava, sweet potatoes and bananas are grown for local consumption. A large number of cattle are reared on plantations, and a beef industry is developing.

Livestock (2003 estimates): cattle, 130,000; pigs, 62,000; goats, 12,000; horses, 3,000.

Forestry

There were 440,000 ha. of forest in 2005 (36.1% of the land area). In 2007, 119,000 cu. metres of roundwood were cut.

Fisheries

The principal catch is tuna, mainly exported to the USA. The total catch in 2005 was 151,079 tonnes.

INDUSTRY

Principal industries include copra processing, meat canning and fish freezing, a saw-mill, soft drinks factories and a print works. Building materials, furniture, aluminium and cement are also produced.

In 2006 industry accounted for 8.6% of GDP, with manufacturing contributing 3.2%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt in 2007 amounted to US$94m.

Imports and Exports

In 2007 imports (f.o.b.) amounted to US$201.7m. (US$159.1m. in 2006); exports (f.o.b.) US$29.9m. (US$36.7m. in 2006). In 2007 the main import suppliers were Australia, New Zealand, Singapore, the Fiji Islands and China. The main export destinations were the Philippines, New Caledonia, the Fiji Islands, Japan and Singapore.

The main exports are copra, beef, timber and cocoa.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2002 there were 1,070 km of roads, about 260 km paved, mostly on Efate Island and Espiritu Santo. There were estimated to be 8,200 passenger cars and 2,100 commercial vehicles in use in 2002.

Civil Aviation

There is an international airport at Bauerfield Port Vila. In 2003 the state-owned Air Vanuatu flew to Auckland, Brisbane, Honiara, Nadi, Nouméa and Sydney. Domestic services were provided by Vanair, a subsidiary of Air Vanuatu. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Vanuatu-based carriers flew 3m. km, carrying 83,000 passengers (all on international flights).

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 57 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 1.41m. GT. Vanuatu is a 'flag of convenience' country. The chief ports are Port Vila and Santo.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 10,400 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscribers numbered 36,000 in 2008 (15.4 per 100 persons). There were 3,000 PCs in use in 2005 and 17,000 internet users in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The legal system is based on British common law and French civil law. There is a Supreme Court with a Chief Justice and a Magistrates Court.

The death penalty was abolished in 1980. The population in penal institutions in June 2007 was 117 (53 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

In 2006 there were 1,316 pupils with 111 teaching staff in pre-primary schools. There were 38,000 pupils in primary schools in 2007 with 2,000 teaching staff, and 18,000 pupils in secondary schools in 2009. There is a campus of the University of the South Pacific at Port Vila and a Vanuatu Institute of Technology. The adult literacy rate in 2009 was an estimated 82.0%. In 2009 public expenditure on education came to 5.0% of GDP.

Health

There were 30 physicians and 360 nursing and midwifery personnel in 2004. There were 41 hospital beds per 10,000 population in 2005.

RELIGION

About two-thirds of the population are Christians, but animist beliefs are still prevalent.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Vanuatu has one site on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Chief Roi Mata's Domain (inscribed on the list in 2008), three sites on the islands of Efate, Lelepa and Artok that contain the chief's residence and burial chamber.

Press

In 2005 there was one daily newspaper with a circulation of 3,000.

Tourism

In 2005 there were 62,000 non-resident tourists to Vanuatu. Receipts totalled US$93m.

VATICAN CITY STATE

Stato della Città del Vaticano

Population, 2000: 800

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The history of the Vatican as a papal residence in Rome dates from the 5th century, following the construction of St Peter's Basilica by Emperor Constantine I. For many centuries the Popes bore temporal sway over much of the Italian peninsula. In 1860, following prolonged civil unrest, Victor Emmanuel's army seized the Papal States, leaving only Rome and surrounding coastal regions under papal control. When Rome was captured in 1871 and declared the capital of the Kingdom of Italy, papal temporal power was brought to an end. On 11 Feb. 1929 a treaty between the Italian Government and the Vatican recognized the sovereignty of the Holy See in the city of the Vatican.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

The area of the Vatican City is 44 ha. (108.7 acres). It includes the Piazza di San Pietro (St Peter's Square), which is to remain normally open to the public and subject to the powers of the Italian police. It has its own railway station (for freight only), postal facilities, coins and radio. Twelve buildings in and outside Rome enjoy extra-territorial rights, including the Basilicas of St John Lateran, St Mary Major and St Paul without the Walls, the Pope's summer villa at Castel Gandolfo and a further Vatican radio station on Italian soil. Radio Vaticana broadcasts an extensive service in 40 languages from the transmitters in Vatican City and in Italy. The Holy See and the Vatican are not synonymous—the Holy See, referring to the primacy of the Pope, is located in Vatican City. The de facto official language is Latin.

Vatican City has about 800 inhabitants.

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Vatican City State is governed by a Commission appointed by the Pope. The reason for its existence is to provide an extra-territorial, independent base for the Holy See, the government of the Roman Catholic Church. The Pope exercises sovereignty and has absolute legislative, executive and judicial powers. The judicial power is delegated to a tribunal in the first instance, to the Sacred Roman Rota in appeal and to the Supreme Tribunal of the Signature in final appeal.

A new Fundamental Law was promulgated by Pope John Paul II on 26 Nov. 2000 and became effective on 22 Feb. 2001; this replaced the first Fundamental Law of 1929. The Pope is elected by the College of Cardinals, meeting in secret conclave. The election is by scrutiny and requires a two-thirds majority.

National Anthem

CURRENT LEADERS

Benedict XVI

Position

Pope

Introduction

Joseph Ratzinger was elected head of the Roman Catholic Church on 19 April 2005, becoming Pope Benedict XVI. His appointment followed the death of the popular and charismatic Pope John Paul II. A highly intellectual theologian from southern Germany, Benedict XVI has served in the Vatican as head of the department that defends Catholic orthodoxy since 1981. He has reinforced the broadly conservative policies of John Paul II, his friend and close ally, and opposed secularism and relativism, which he has described as 'letting oneself be tossed and swept by every wind of teaching'.

Early Life

Joseph Ratzinger was born in Marktl am Inn, southeastern Bavaria, Germany, on 16 April 1927, the third and youngest child of a police officer and his wife. In 1929 his father was posted to the town of Tittmoning on the Austrian border, where the family remained for three years, before moving to Aschau am Inn and then to Hufschlag, near Traunstein, when his father retired in 1937. Ratzinger attended the high school in Traunstein, and later opted to train for the priesthood, entering the town's seminary in 1939. At 14 years of age he joined the Hitler Youth—a legal requirement as part of the Nazis' efforts to convert the German population to the 'National Socialist spirit'. Two years later Ratzinger was drafted into the anti-aircraft artillery corps. His unit guarded facilities including an aircraft-engine plant near Munich. In late 1944 Ratzinger was drafted into the German army and served in and around Munich. Reportedly a reluctant soldier, he deserted weeks before Germany's surrender in 1945, and rejoined the seminary in Traunstein. After two years he took up a place at the Herzogliches Georgianum, a theological institute linked to the University of Munich. On 29 June 1951 he was ordained to the priesthood in the cathedral at Freising, near Munich.

Ratzinger continued with his study of theology at the University of Munich—his doctoral thesis focused on St Augustine and his view of Christianity in the fifth century. Having gained his doctorate in July 1953, he began post-doctoral research about St Bonaventure, a Franciscan theologian of the 13th century. In 1959 Ratzinger moved to Bonn to take up a professorship in fundamental theology at the city's university. He taught at the University of Münster for three years from 1963, before joining the University of Tübingen, near Stuttgart. When the wave of student uprisings swept across Europe in 1968, it brought Marxism to the Tübingen campus. Ratzinger was horrified by what he saw as a 'tyrannical, brutal and cruel' ideology that was undermining the Church. He accepted an offer of a teaching position at the new University of Regensburg a year later, and remained in the Bavarian city for the next seven years. He began to take a more conservative approach to theology, and rose to become the dean and then vice-president of the university.

On 24 March 1977 Ratzinger was elected archbishop of Munich and Freising by Pope Paul VI. He was ordained to the episcopal order in May 1977 and a month later was elevated to cardinal priest. However, his work as an archbishop was to prove relatively short-lived. In Nov. 1981 he was called to Rome by Pope John Paul II (who had been elected in 1978) to take over the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, the department in the Vatican responsible for defending and reinforcing Catholic orthodoxy (once known as the Inquisition). At the same time, he became president of the International Theological Commission and the Pontifical Biblical Commission. The Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith courted controversy after publishing 'Dominus Jesus', which described other Christian faiths and world religions as 'deficient or not quite real churches'.

Ratzinger was elevated to the position of cardinal bishop of the diocese of Velletri-Sigini on 5 April 1993, and was elected vice-dean of the College of Cardinals in 1998. When he was appointed dean of the College in late 2002 (and cardinal bishop of the diocese of Ostia), Ratzinger had become one of the Vatican's most powerful and influential figures. He presided over the funeral of Pope John Paul II in St Peter's Basilica on 8 April 2005, and subsequently inaugurated the conclave for the election of the successor to St Peter in the Sistine chapel. On 19 April, after the fourth ballot of the conclave, the proto-deacon of the College of Cardinals, Jorge Estévez, announced to a crowd of tens of thousands in St Peter's Square: 'Dear brothers and sisters, we have a Pope. The most eminent and most reverend Lord, Lord Joseph, Cardinal of Holy Roman Church, Ratzinger, who has taken the name Benedict XVI.'

Career in Office

Pope Benedict XVI swiftly reappointed all former officers who had served under John Paul II. A hint of future Vatican policy came with the appointment of the US non-Cardinal William Joseph Levada to the post of prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith on 13 May 2005. The elevation of this deeply conservative prelate archbishop of the Archdiocese of San Francisco to one of the church's most powerful positions raised fears among reform-minded Catholics.

Controversy from another direction erupted in Sept. 2006 after the Pope delivered a lecture in Germany including a reference to a medieval text perceived as hostile to Islam. This provoked almost worldwide Muslim protest, forcing the Vatican to apologize for any unintentional offence. The incident threatened to derail a planned papal visit in Nov. to Turkey, a predominantly Muslim country, but the trip went ahead successfully, with Benedict advocating 'authentic dialogue' based on mutual respect between Christians and Muslims.

In 2007 the Pope met Russian president Vladimir Putin for the first time, and also King Abdullah of Saudi Arabia. It was the first such meeting between the head of the Roman Catholic Church and a Saudi monarch. In March 2009 he toured Africa and in May visited the Middle East where he appealed for peace and religious coexistence.

In Dec. 2008 Benedict again courted social controversy with a perceived attack on homosexuality that angered gay rights groups and activists. Then, in Jan. 2009, his controversial decision to readmit to the Church an ultraconservative bishop who had denied the Holocaust angered Jews and many Catholics. Moreover, his assertion in Feb. 2010 that the effect of some equality legislation in Britain had been to impose unjust limitations on the freedom of religious communities to act in accordance with their beliefs was condemned by human rights campaigners.

In Oct. 2009 Benedict made an unprecedented offer to disaffected Anglicans to join the Catholic Church while still maintaining many of their own spiritual traditions. In early 2010 he was the subject of allegations that he failed to take timely action against paedophile priests while prefect of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith (1981–2005), where he had responsibility for dealing with clerical abuse. The Vatican denied any wrongdoing but in Sept. 2010, while making the first papal visit to the United Kingdom since 1982, Benedict acknowledged that the paedophile scandal had undermined the moral credibility of the Church.

In Nov. 2010, in an apparent shift in traditional Vatican policy towards contraception, it was reported that the Pope was prepared to countenance the use of condoms to prevent the spread of HIV/AIDS.

Following a bomb attack on a Christian church in Alexandria, Egypt, Benedict called on Middle Eastern governments in Jan. 2011 to do more to protect religious minorities in their countries. This prompted the Egyptian government to recall its ambassador to the Vatican in protest at perceived interference in its internal affairs. He made a similar appeal for religious tolerance in Jan. 2012 following the bombing of a Christian church in Nigeria.

In July 2011 the Irish prime minister accused the Vatican of having tried to downplay the extent of sexual abuse of children by Catholic clergy in Ireland. In response, the Vatican recalled its envoy from Dublin.

ECONOMY

Overview

The economy is supported by donations from Roman Catholics across the world, the sale of postage stamps and tourist souvenirs, admission fees to museums and publication sales. The global economic turmoil reduced donations from US$79.8m. in 2007 to US$75.8m. in 2008. The cost of restoring the Vatican's cultural treasures and ensuring security contributed to a deficit of around €15m. by the end of 2008, compared to a surplus of nearly €7m. in 2007.

Currency

Since 1 Jan. 2002 the Vatican City has been using the euro (EUR). Italy has agreed that the Vatican City may mint a small part of the total Italian euro coin contingent with their own motifs.

Budget

Revenues in 2006 were €227.8m. and expenditures €225.4m.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 1.7% in 2001.

COMMUNICATIONS

Civil Aviation

The Vatican launched a charter airline, Mistral Air, in Aug. 2007 to fly pilgrims to holy sites across the world.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

In 2006 the Vatican City's legal system hosted 341 civil cases and 486 criminal cases. Most of the offences are committed by outsiders, principally at St Peter's Basilica and the museums.

ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

As the Vicar of Christ and the Successor of St Peter, the Pope is held to be by divine right the centre of all Catholic unity and exercises universal governance over the Church. He is also the sovereign ruler of Vatican City State. He has for advisers the Sacred College of Cardinals, consisting in Feb. 2012 of 213 cardinals from 70 countries (four created by Pope Paul VI, 130 created by Pope John Paul II and 79 created by Pope Benedict XVI), of whom 125 are cardinal electors—those under the age of 80 who may enter into conclave to elect a new Pope. 22 new cardinals were created in Feb. 2012. Cardinals, addressed by the title of 'Eminence', are appointed by the Pope from senior ecclesiastics who are either the bishops of important Sees or the heads of departments at the Roman Curia. In addition to the College of Cardinals, there is a Synod of Bishops, created by Pope Paul VI and formally instituted on 15 Sept. 1965. This consists of the Patriarchs and certain Metropolitans of the Catholic Church of Oriental Rite, of elected representatives of the national episcopal conferences and religious orders of the world, of the cardinals in charge of the Roman Congregations and of other persons nominated by the Pope. The Synod meets in both general (global) and special (regional) assemblies. General Synods normally take place every three years.

The central administration of the Roman Catholic Church is carried out by permanent organisms called Congregations, Council, Commissions and Offices. The Congregations are composed of cardinals and diocesan bishops (both appointed for five-year periods), with Consultors and Officials. There are nine Congregations, viz.: Doctrine, Oriental Churches, Bishops, the Sacraments and Divine Worship, Clergy, Religious, Catholic Education, Evangelization of the Peoples and Causes of the Saints. Pontifical Councils have replaced some of the previously designated Secretariats and Prefectures and now represent the Laity, Christian Unity, the Family, Justice and Peace, Cor Unum, Migrants, Health Care Workers, Interpretation of Legislative Texts, Inter-Religious Dialogue, Culture, Preserving the Patrimony of Art and History, and a Commission for Latin America. There are three academies: the Pontifical Academy for Sciences, the Pontifical Academy for Life and the Pontifical Academy for Social Sciences, the latter two instituted by Pope John Paul II.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

The Holy See has two sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Vatican City (inscribed on the list in 1984)—the centre of the Roman Catholic Church, it contains some of the greatest pieces of European art and architecture, including St Peter's Basilica.

The Historic Centre of Rome, the properties of the Holy See in that city enjoying extraterritorial rights (inscribed on the list in 1980 and 1990), is shared with Italy.

Press

In 2006 there was one daily evening paper, L'Osservatore Romano.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Present-day Venezuela was inhabited by hunter-gatherers from at least 3000 BC. The Arawaks and Carib lived mainly in the north and around the Orinoco river system. Christopher Columbus landed at Macuro with three Spanish ships on 5 Aug. 1498. A year later the area was explored by Alonso de Ojeda and Amerigo Vespucci. They named it Venezuela (Little Venice) after the indigenous villages built on stilts over water. Spanish settlements were established on the Caribbean coast from the early 16th century and ruled from Santo Domingo (Dominican Republic). Santiago de León de Caracas, founded in 1567, became the seat of the government of the province of Venezuela in 1578. Cocoa plantations developed slowly and much of the forested interior remained unexplored.

In 1717 Venezuela came under the Spanish Viceroyalty of New Granada, centred on Bogotá. In May 1795 rumblings of discontent over Spanish rule erupted into a revolt, led by José Leonardo Chirino who was inspired by the French Revolution. Francisco de Miranda and Simón Bolívar led further rebellions from 1805 and, following Napoleon's defeat of Spain, independence was declared in 1811. Spanish control was restored but the colonial power's defeat in the battle of Carabobo in June 1821 ensured that Venezuela became part of the federal republic of Greater Colombia. Gen. José Páez opposed the Colombian leadership and led revolts, culminating in a congress in 1830 that created a constitution for a new Republic of Venezuela and elected Páez the first president.

Páez was succeeded by José Tadeo Monagas and then by his brother, José Gregorio Monagas, who governed Venezuela until he was overthrown in 1858. Gen. Antonio Guzmán Blanco came to power in the April Revolution of 1870 and dominated politics for the next 18 years. He improved education, modernized the country's infrastructure and forced the separation of church and state. Blanco's autocratic rule was followed by the dictatorships of Joaquín Crespo (1892–98) and Cipriano Castro (1899–1908). Castro's corrupt and inefficient administration led to civil strife and, in 1902, to a major international incident known as the Venezuela Claims when Great Britain, Germany and Italy dispatched a joint naval force to Venezuela to seek redress for unpaid loans.

The brutal dictatorship of Juan Vicente Gómez began in Dec. 1908 when he seized power from the ailing Castro. Gómez's tyrannical regime, which endured until his death in 1935 did, however, develop the nation's oil industry. The election of Isaías Medina Angarita as president on 28 April 1941 led to the re-establishment of political parties, including Acción Democrática (AD), founded in Sept. 1941. In 1945 a three-day revolt against the government of Gen. Isaías Medina led to constitutional and economic reforms. In 1947 the writer Rómulo Gallegos was elected president but it was to be a short-lived democratic spell as the government was overthrown in a military coup in Nov. 1948 and the subsequent dictatorship of Marcos Jiménez lasted until 1958.

In 1961 a new constitution provided for a presidential election every five years, a national congress, and state and municipal legislative assemblies. Twenty political parties participated in the 1983 elections, with the economy in crisis and corruption linked to drug trafficking widespread. In Feb. 1992 there were two abortive coups and a state of emergency was declared. In Dec. 1993 Dr Rafael Caldera Rodríguez's election as president reflected disenchantment with the established political parties. He took office in the early stages of a banking crisis that cost 15% of GDP to resolve. Fiscal tightening backed by the IMF brought rapid recovery. Hugo Chávez Frías, who became president in Feb. 1999, continued with economic reforms and amended the constitution to increase presidential powers. The country was given a new name—the Bolivarian Republic of Venezuela. In Dec. 1999 the north coast of Venezuela was hit by devastating floods and mudslides which resulted in 30,000 deaths.

President Chávez was deposed and arrested on 12 April 2002 in a coup following a general strike but was back in the presidential palace within 48 hours. Opposition pressure intensified in 2002 and 2003 with more protests, a prolonged general strike and an attempt to petition for a referendum on the president's rule. Chávez faced a referendum on 15 Aug. 2004 and emerged victorious. His 'socialist revolution' and opposition to US policies has won him support but his long term impact has still to be assessed.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Venezuela is bounded to the north by the Caribbean with a 2,813 km coastline, east by the Atlantic and Guyana, south by Brazil, and southwest and west by Colombia. The area is 916,445 sq. km (353,839 sq. miles) including 72 islands in the Caribbean. Population at the 2001 census was 23,054,210 (11,651,341 females); density, 25.1 per sq. km. Venezuela has the highest percentage of urban population in South America, with 93.4% living in urban areas in 2005.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 31.23m.

The official language is Spanish. English is taught as a mandatory second language in high schools.

37.3% of all Venezuelans are under 15 years of age, 58.7% are between the ages of 15 and 64, and 4.0% are over the age of 65.

Caracas, Venezuela's largest city, is the political, financial, commercial, communications and cultural centre of the country. Metropolitan Caracas had a 2003 population estimate of 3,226,000. Maracaibo, the nation's second largest city (estimated 2001 population of 1.6m.), is located near Venezuela's most important petroleum fields and richest agricultural areas. Other major cities are Valencia, Barquisimeto and Ciudad Guayana.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

In 2006 the most popular age for marrying was 25–29 for men and 20–24 for women.

CLIMATE

The climate ranges from warm temperate to tropical. Temperatures vary little throughout the year and rainfall is plentiful. The dry season is from Dec. to April. The hottest months are July and Aug. Caracas, Jan. 65°F (18.3°C), July 69°F (20.6°C). Annual rainfall 32" (833 mm). Ciudad Bolívar, Jan. 79°F (26.1°C), July 81°F (27.2°C). Annual rainfall 41" (1,016 mm). Maracaibo, Jan. 81°F (27.2°C), July 85°F (29.4°C). Annual rainfall 23" (577 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The present constitution was approved in a referendum held on 15 Dec. 1999. Venezuela is a federal republic, comprising 34 federal dependencies, 23 states and one federal district. Executive power is vested in the President. The ministers, who together constitute the Council of Ministers, are appointed by the President and head various executive departments. There are 17 ministries and seven officials who also have the rank of Minister of State.

92% of votes cast in a referendum (the first in Venezuela's history) on 25 April 1999 were in favour of the plan to rewrite the constitution proposed by President Chávez. As a result, on 25 July the public was to elect a constitutional assembly to write a new constitution, which was subsequently to be voted on in a national referendum. In Aug. 1999 the constitutional assembly declared a national state of emergency. It subsequently suspended the Supreme Court, turned the elected Congress into little more than a sub-committee, stripping it of all its powers, and assumed many of the responsibilities of government. In Dec. 1999 the President's plan to redraft the constitution was approved by over 70% of voters in a referendum. Consequently presidents were able to serve two consecutive six-year-terms instead of terms of five years which could not be consecutive, the senate was abolished and greater powers were given to the state and the armed forces. President Chávez has effectively taken over both the executive and the judiciary. The constitution provides for procedures by which the president may reject bills passed by Congress, as well as provisions by which Congress may override such presidential veto acts. In Aug. 2007 President Chávez presented a set of constitutional reforms, including an end to presidential term limits. The proposals were rejected in a national referendum held on 2 Dec. 2007, with 49% of votes cast in favour of the amendments to the constitution and 51% against. However, a referendum on 15 Feb. 2009 to abolish presidential term limits (and those of various other elected officials including National Assembly deputies) was approved with 54% of votes cast in favour and 46% against.

Since the senate was dissolved under the constitution adopted in Dec. 1999 Venezuela has become a unicameral legislature, the 165-seat National Assembly, with members being elected for five-year terms.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections were held on 3 Dec. 2006. Incumbent Hugo Chávez Frías (Movement for the Fifth Republic/MVR) was re-elected president with 62.9% of the vote, ahead of Manuel Rosales (A New Time/UNT) with 36.9%. There were 12 other candidates. Turnout was 74.9%.

In elections to the Congress, held on 26 Sept. 2010, 165 seats were contested. The Partido Socialista Unido de Venezuela (United Socialist Party of Venezuela, PSUV) of President Chávez won 96 seats, the opposition Mesa de la Unidad Democrática (Coalition for Democratic Unity, MUD) 64, Patria para Todos (Fatherland for All) 2 with the remaining three seats reserved for indigenous peoples. Turnout was 66.5%.

Presidential elections are scheduled to take place on 7 Oct. 2012.

CURRENT LEADERS

Hugo Chávez

Position
President

Introduction

Hugo Rafael Chávez Frías of the Movimiento V República (Movement for the Fifth Republic/MVR—which he founded in 1997) was elected president in Dec. 1998 as the candidate for the left-wing 'Patriotic Pole' coalition. Although re-elected in 2000, he was subsequently challenged by anti-government protests and a failed coup. He was nevertheless re-elected again at the end of 2006. In Dec. 2007 he suffered his first defeat in a popular vote when proposals to extend his powers and accelerate his socialist revolution were rejected in a referendum.

Early Life

The son of teachers, Chávez was born on 28 July 1954 in Sabaneta, Barinas state. Embarking on a military career, he completed his higher education at the Academia Militar de Venezuela, graduating in 1975 with a degree in military science. After further military training, he took a masters degree in social science at the Universidad Simón Bolívar.

In 1982 Chávez co-founded the MBR-200, based on the ideals of the independence hero, Simón Bolívar. In Feb. 1992 Chávez led an abortive military coup attempting to overthrow the government of Carlos Andrés Pérez. He was captured and imprisoned until 1994 when he was pardoned by President Rafael Caldera. Having reformed the MBR-200 as the Movement for the Fifth Republic/MVR, he promised to fight social inequality in Venezuela, a country rich in natural resources but where the wealth benefited the minority elite. By 1998 over 90% of Venezuelans lived below the poverty line, social services had deteriorated to pre-1950s levels and inflation was high.

In Nov. 1998 Chávez's Patriotic Pole coalition won 34% of seats in legislative elections. The following month he ran for the presidency against the Proyecto Venezuela candidate, Henrique Salas Romer. With the highest majority for 40 years, Chávez won 56.5% of votes to 39.5%. His win ended the 40-year domination of Acción Democrática (Democratic Action) and the Partido Social Cristiano (Social Christian Party).

Career in Office

On election, Chávez pledged to modernize the government, root out corruption, implement radical reforms and revive the economy. In April 1999 he called a referendum in which 92% of voters called for a new constitution. In July elections to the constitutional assembly, Chávez supporters won 121 seats against ten for the opposition. A second referendum was called for Dec. in which 72% approved a new constitution, modelled on France's Fifth Republic. The two-tiered congress was combined into one National Assembly, the presidential term was extended from five to six years, presidential power over legislation and the budget was increased, and a second consecutive presidential term was permitted. Further changes included a reformed judiciary, an extension of universal economic and social rights, increased rights for indigenous Venezuelans, and more military involvement in policy implementation. Despite Chávez's popular support, members of the business community and the middle classes were wary of the power granted the president and US$4bn. was transferred out of the country. Nonetheless, a rise in oil prices compensated for this financial loss and inflation fell, although the country suffered a recession following the 1998 economic crisis. Disastrous mudslides in Dec. 1999 in which tens of thousands of people died brought further financial strain for the government.

In the July 2000 presidential elections Chávez beat his former ally from the 1992 coup Lt.-Col. Francisco Arias Cárdenas with 59.8% of votes to 37.5%. His MVR party was equally successful in regional elections. Opposition candidates claimed the votes had been rigged and the military was called in to disperse protestors. On re-election Chávez pledged to fight unemployment with public spending, introduce a land rights bill to ease rural poverty, offer tax breaks for businesses, build new schools and encourage foreign investment. Though lacking a MVR majority in the assembly, Chávez was able to secure wide legislative powers. One of his first moves was to seek a union with the oil-producing Arab states which would reject Western pressure for increased output (and thus lower prices). In Sept. he made his international position clear by criticizing US involvement in Colombian military efforts to combat left-wing rebels (the Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de Colombia or FARC), and by praising Cuban leader Fidel Castro's defiant rejection of US domination, as well as his economic and social policies. During a visit by Castro, Chávez agreed to sell oil to Cuba at a discounted price. In April 2001 Chávez hosted talks with Mexico and Colombia to pursue the implementation of a free trade zone, and to work towards extending free trade throughout the Americas. Despite international fears of a Castro reincarnate, he also visited the USA and Europe on numerous occasions.

As his 'Bolivarian Revolution' failed to produce the promised social and economic improvements, the country became increasingly divided between Chávez's supporters and opponents. In April 2002 anti-government protesters descended on the capital demanding his resignation. Taking advantage of the instability, a military coup was mounted with businessman Pedro Carmona Estanga at its head. Chávez was forced to resign and Carmona assumed the presidency. Western and Latin American governments (but not the USA) condemned the coup, refusing to acknowledge the new government, and protests by Chávez supporters quickly led to his reinstatement.

Nevertheless, Venezuelans remained polarized and more protests were staged in June and July. In Dec. 2002 a national strike was called by the opposition following a decision by the Supreme Court to overrule a referendum on Chávez's presidency called for Feb. 2003 by the Electoral Council. Protests focused on the state-owned petrol company Petróleos de Venezuela (PDVSA), the provider of around 40% of the country's revenues. Oil production plummeted and world prices increased, causing OPEC to increase production. The strike continued into 2003, threatening to destabilize the country's economy, but Chávez remained defiant. The strike abated in Feb. 2003, although workers at PDVSA continued to protest and the opposition petitioned for early elections.

In Aug. 2004 Chávez survived a national referendum on whether he should be allowed to serve the remainder of his term of office until 2006. Although credited with about 59% of the vote, opposition parties denounced the victory as electoral fraud. Then, in parliamentary elections in Dec. 2005 boycotted by the opposition, his MVR party won 114 of 167 National Assembly seats, with the remaining seats being won by his allies.

In Dec. 2006 Chávez won a third presidential term, defeating the main opposition candidate Manuel Rosales with 63% of the vote in the election. Pledging to maintain his socialist revolution, including widespread nationalization, he was granted sweeping powers by parliament at the end of Jan. 2007 to legislate by decree for an 18-month period. In the same month he announced that key energy and telecommunications utilities would be nationalized and in May the government took control of oil projects in the Orinoco Delta. Nationalizations continued into 2008, including in the banking, cement, steel and fuel sectors.

Popular discontent meanwhile surfaced over the closure in May 2007 of Radio Caracas Televisión (RCTV), the country's most popular—but anti-Chávez—television channel, which provoked large domestic demonstrations as well as international condemnation. Then in Dec. the president's proposal to reform the constitution and allow him to run for continuous re-election and to reinforce his socialist agenda was unexpectedly rejected by voters in a national referendum. Some disaffection with Chávez was also reflected in opposition gains in regional and mayoral elections in Nov. 2008. However, in a further constitutional referendum in Feb. 2009, there was a 54% majority in favour of abolishing presidential limits, clearing the way for Chávez to run for re-election in 2012.

In 2007 Colombia's president Uribe invited Chávez to try and broker a peace deal with the FARC. However, Uribe subsequently ended Chávez's involvement after a series of apparent diplomatic breaches. Relations between the two countries then deteriorated sharply in March 2008 after Colombian armed forces raided a FARC base in Ecuador, a Venezuelan ally. Chávez mobilized troops along Venezuelan-Colombian border and briefly threatened war before the crisis was defused diplomatically. Bilateral tensions resurfaced in late 2009 as US-Colombian plans for closer military ties in a drive against drug trafficking culminated in an agreement allowing US forces the use of Colombian bases, and escalated again in mid-2010 when diplomatic relations were temporarily severed.

As an oil-producing economy Venezuela suffered from the fall in the international price of oil that accompanied the global economic downturn from 2008. The economy continued to shrink in 2009 (by 5.8% in the last three months of the year alone) and in Jan. 2010 Chávez devalued the currency against the US dollar (by up to 50% under a dual exchange rate) to boost revenue from oil exports. The downturn nevertheless persisted and in Jan. 2011 the government devalued the currency for the second time in a year while unifying the exchange rate.

Meanwhile, there were increasing signs of popular discontent with Chávez's rule. In Jan. 2010 the resignation of the vice president and defence minister, Ramón Carrizález, prompted speculation about tensions within the regime. Then, in congressional elections in Sept., the PSUV retained control but lost the two-thirds majority in parliament needed to carry out constitutional changes and make judicial appointments as the opposition made significant gains. However, Chávez was able to by-pass this setback as the outgoing congress approved measures at the end of the year allowing him to rule by decree again for 18 months and to appoint new Supreme Court judges. The opposition claimed that this amounted to a coup by the executive against the other branches of government.

In June-July 2011 Chávez underwent surgery and further treatment for cancer in Cuba, but on his return to Venezuela said that he would stand as his party's candidate in presidential elections scheduled for Oct. 2012. He had further treatment for his condition in Cuba in Feb. and April 2012.

DEFENCE

There is selective conscription for 30 months. Defence expenditure totalled US$3,328m. in 2008 (US$126 per capita), representing 1.0% of GDP.

Army

The Army has six divisions (four infantry, one armoured and one cavalry), one combat engineer corps, one aviation command and one logistics command. Equipment includes 81 main battle tanks. Strength (2007) around 63,000. There were an additional 8,000 reserves.

A 23,000-strong volunteer National Guard is responsible for internal security.

Navy

Strength (2007) around 17,500 (3,200 conscripts). The combatant fleet comprises two submarines and six frigates. Naval Aviation, 500 strong, operates ten combat capable aircraft. Main bases are at Caracas, Puerto Cabello and Punto Fijo.

Air Force

The Air Force was 11,500 strong in 2007 and had 94 combat capable aircraft. Main aircraft types include CF-5s, Mirage 50s, F-16A/Bs and Su-30s.

INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS

In March 2008 Venezuela sent large numbers of troops to the border with Colombia. The action was in sympathy with Ecuador, whose border was violated when Colombian troops crossed it to attack forces of the rebel FARC movement. Within seven days of the mobilization, a diplomatic solution saw the troops stand down.

ECONOMY

In 2005 industry accounted for 58% of GDP, services 38% and agriculture 4%.

Overview

In the 1970s per capita GDP grew by over 300% but about two-thirds of gains were lost in the following decade. When oil prices fell from their 1970s peak, debt spiralled out of control to leave the country in depression. By the late 1990s per capita GDP had returned to 1970s levels while poverty had increased. In 2010 the government reported that the poverty rate had reached 70% in 1996 before declining to 23% in 2009. According to the Center for Economic and Policy Research, prior to the 2008 financial crisis per capita social spending tripled.

Venezuela's mineral and oil deposits are among the largest in the world. It was the third largest exporter of oil to the USA in 2009 (when 35% of total exports were bound for the USA). The oil industry accounts for over 90% of export revenues, over 30% of GDP and over 50% of government revenues. In 2007 the government nationalized electricity and communications firms, and there are plans to nationalize the banking, oil, cement, steel and agribusiness sectors.

Global financial turmoil coupled with the fall in oil prices (from US$126 per bbl in mid-2008 to US$30 per bbl in Dec. 2008) saw GDP growth slow to 5.3% in 2008 while inflation rose to 30.4%, its highest level in five years. The economy went into recession in 2009, shrinking by 3.2%. Among the measures to counter the slump was an increase in VAT from 9% to 12% and salary cuts for high-level officials. According to the IMF and the World Bank, Venezuela has been the Andean country hardest hit by the global crisis. A dual exchange rate system for the bolívar (in which goods are categorized as 'essential' or 'non-essential') was introduced in Jan. 2010.

Currency

The unit of currency is the bolívar fuerte (VEF) of 100 céntimos. It was introduced on 1 Jan. 2008, replacing the bolívar (VEB) at a rate of one bolívar fuerte = 1,000 bolívares. In Aug. 2009 foreign exchange reserves were US$18,559m., gold reserves were 11.46m. troy oz and total money supply was 186,679m. Bs.F. Exchange controls were abolished in April 1996. The bolívar was devalued by 12.6% in 1998, and in Feb. 2002 it was floated, ending a regime that permitted the bolívar to trade only within a fixed band. However, in Feb. 2003 it was pegged to the dollar at Bs 2.15 = US$1 (and after the introduction of the bolívar fuerte in Jan. 2008 officially at 2.15 Bs.F = US$1). In Jan. 2010 the bolívar was devalued by 17% to 2.6 Bs.F = US$1 and a second rate, known as the 'oil bolívar' for its aim of boosting revenue from oil exports, was introduced at 4.3 Bs.F = US$1. A further devaluation of the currency on 1 Jan. 2011 eliminated the rate of 2.6 Bs.F to the dollar and created a single official exchange rate of 4.3 Bs.F to the dollar. Inflation rates (based on IMF statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
12.5%	22.4%	31.1%	21.7%	16.0%	13.7%	18.7%	30.4%	27.1%	28.2%

Inflation was last in single figures in 1983.

Budget

The fiscal year is the calendar year. In 2006 revenue totalled Bs 117,326bn. and expenditure Bs 117,255bn. Petroleum income accounted for 52.9% of revenues in 2006; current expenditure accounted for 75.0% of expenditures. VAT is 12% (reduced rate, 11%).

Performance

Real GDP growth rates (based on IMF statistics):

2001	2002	2003	2004	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009	2010
3.4%	-8.9%	-7.8%	18.3%	10.3%	9.9%	8.8%	5.3%	-3.2%	-1.5%

Total GDP in 2010 was US$387.9bn.

Banking and Finance

A law of Dec. 1992 provided for greater autonomy for the Central Bank. Its President, currently Nelson Merentes, is appointed by the President for five-year terms. Since 1993 foreign banks have been allowed a controlling interest in domestic banks. In 2003 there were 24 commercial banks and three foreign banks.

The total stock of FDI at the end of 2010 was US$38.02bn.

There is a stock exchange in Caracas.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 7.0 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007 was 22.5m. kW; production was 114.85bn. kWh in 2007 and consumption per capita 4,219 kWh. Venezuela imports electricity to meet increasing domestic demand.

Oil and Gas

Proven reserves of oil were 211.2bn. bbls in 2010. Venezuela has reserves of oil of second only to those of Saudi Arabia. The oil sector was nationalized in 1976. Private and foreign investment were permitted after 1992, before President Chávez instigated a 'renationalization' following strikes in Dec. 2002–Feb. 2003. In Feb. 2007 Chávez announced that the last foreign-controlled oil production sites would be brought under government control. Oil production in 2008 was 131.6m. tonnes. Oil provides about 50% of Venezuela's revenues. Natural gas production in 2008 was 31.5bn. cu. metres. Natural gas reserves in 2008 were 4,840bn. cu. metres, the largest in Latin America.

Minerals

Output (in 1,000 tonnes) in 2004: iron ore, 19,196; limestone (2002), 13,434; coal, 6,748; bauxite, 5,842; alumina (2003), 1,882; gold, 9,690 kg. Estimated diamond production in 2005 was 115,000 carats.

Agriculture

Coffee, cocoa, sugarcane, maize, rice, wheat, tobacco, cotton, beans and sisal are grown. 50% of farmers are engaged in subsistence agriculture. There were approximately 2.44m. ha. of arable land in 2002 and 0.81m. ha. of permanent crops. About 575,000 ha. were irrigated in 2002.

Production in 2003 in 1,000 tonnes: sugarcane, 6,825; maize, 1,505; plantains, 760; rice, 701; bananas, 639; sorghum, 600; cassava, 490; pineapples, 384; oranges, 316; melons and water-melons, 308; potatoes, 298; onions, 237.

Livestock (2003): cattle, 16.07m.; pigs, 2.92m.; goats, 2.70m.; sheep, 820,000; horses, 500,000; chickens, 110m.

Forestry

In 2005 the area under forests was 47.71m. ha., or 54.1% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 was 6.06m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

In 2005 the total catch was estimated at 470,000 tonnes (mostly from marine waters). Imports of fishery commodities were valued at US$290m. in 2008.

INDUSTRY

Production (2007 unless otherwise indicated, in tonnes): petrol, 16.4m.; residual fuel oil, 14.6m.; distillate fuel oil, 14.3m.; cement (2007 estimate), 11m.; crude steel (2006), 4.9m.; raw sugar (2005), 690,000.

Labour

Out of 9,698,900 people in employment in 2002, 2,932,700 were in community, social and personal services, 2,585,300 in wholesale and retail trade, restaurants and hotels, 1,150,300 in manufacturing and 949,000 in agriculture, hunting, fishing and forestry. In Sept. 2005, 11.5% of the workforce was unemployed, down from 14.5% a year earlier.

In late 2002 and early 2003 a two-month long general strike intended to oust President Chávez ended in failure, instead crippling an already depressed economy.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$44,201m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Trade in US$1m.:

	2008	2009	2010
Imports c.i.f.	47,450	38,677	32,343
Exports f.o.b.	83,478	56,583	66,963

Exports of oil in 2001 were valued at US$19bn., the third highest export revenues after Saudi Arabia and Iran. Oil revenues account for 93% of all export revenues.

The main import sources in 2000 were the USA (37.8%), Colombia (7.4%), Brazil (5.0%) and Italy (4.4%). The main markets for exports in 2000 were the USA (59.6%), Netherlands Antilles (5.6%), Brazil (3.6%) and Colombia (2.8%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

In 2002 there were 96,155 km of roads, of which 33.6% were paved. There were 2,952,100 passenger cars in use in 2007 (107 per 1,000 inhabitants) plus 84,000 lorries and vans. There were 6,218 fatalities as a result of road accidents in 2006.

Rail

The railway network comprises 742 km of 1,435 gauge track. In 2004, 50.6m. tonnes of freight were carried. In 2006 Venezuela's first inter-city passenger service in nearly 70 years was opened with the inauguration of a line from Caracas to Cúa. Several other new lines are planned or currently under construction.

There are metros in Caracas, Los Teques, Maracaibo and Valencia.

Civil Aviation

The main international airport is at Caracas (Simon Bolívar), with some international flights from Maracaibo. Aeropostal Alas de Venezuela is the leading Venezuelan carrier. In 2005 scheduled airline traffic of Venezuela-based carriers flew 31.0m. km, carrying 3,240,200 passengers.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 82 ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 784,000 GT. La Guaira, Maracaibo, Puerto Cabello, Puerto Ordaz and Guanta are the chief ports. The principal navigable rivers are the Orinoco and its tributaries the Apure and Arauca.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 6,304,000 main (fixed) telephone lines. There were 23,820,000 mobile phone subscribers in 2007 (861.3 per 1,000 persons). CANTV, the national telephone company, lost its 50-year monopoly on fixed-line telephony in 2000. In 2005, 2,475,000 PCs were in use and in 2007 the number of internet users was 5,720,000.

Justice

A new penal code was implemented on 1 July 1999. The new, US-style system features public trials, verbal arguments, prosecutors, citizen juries and the presumption of innocence, instead of an inquisitorial system inherited from Spain which included secretive trials and long exchanges of written arguments.

In Aug. 1999 the new constitutional assembly declared a judicial emergency, granting itself sweeping new powers to dismiss judges and overhaul the court system. The assembly excluded the Supreme Court and the national Judicial Council from a commission charged with reorganizing the judiciary. President Chávez declared the assembly the supreme power in Venezuela.

The court system is plagued by chronic corruption and a huge case backlog. Only about 40% of the country's prisoners in 1999 had actually been convicted. In Oct. 1999 over 100 judges accused of corruption were suspended. The population in penal institutions in April 2008 was approximately 22,000 (79 per 100,000 population).

Venezuela's murder rate, at 52 per 100,000 population in 2008, is among the highest in the world.

Education

In 2007 there were 3,521,139 primary school pupils (184,409 teaching staff in 2005) and 2,174,619 secondary school pupils (187,737 teaching staff in 2005).

The leading institute of higher education is the Central University of Venezuela (Universidad Central de Venezuela), founded in 1721 in Caracas. The Bolivarian University of Venezuela (Universidad Bolivariana de Venezuela) was founded in 2003 by President Chávez in order to give lower-income students the opportunity to study free of charge regardless of academic qualifications or prior education. More than 75% of students are from poor backgrounds. There were 1,381,126 students in tertiary education in 2006 with 108,594 academic staff.

Adult literacy was 95% in 2007.

Public expenditure on education came to 3.7% of GNI in 2007.

Health

In 2002 there were 567 hospitals with 19 beds per 10,000 inhabitants. There were 48,000 physicians and 13,680 dentists in 2001; and 46,305 nurses and 8,751 pharmacists in 1997.

Welfare

The official retirement age is 60 years (men) or 55 years (women). However, the pensionable age is lower for those in arduous or unhealthy employment. The old-age pension is the minimum urban wage (967.50 Bs.F a month), plus 30% of the reference salary (20% of covered earnings in the last five years or 10% in the last ten years—whichever is higher) and an increment of 1% of earnings for every 50-week period of contributions beyond 750 weeks. The minimum pension is equal to the minimum urban wage.

Unemployment benefit is 60% of the insured person's average monthly earnings during the previous 12 months. The benefit is paid for up to five months.

RELIGION

In 2001 there were 22.05m. Roman Catholics. There are four archbishops, one at Caracas, who is Primate of Venezuela, two at Mérida and one at Ciudad Bolívar. There are 19 bishops. There was one cardinal in Feb. 2012. The remainder of the population follow other religions, notably Protestantism.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Venezuela has three sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Coro and its Port (inscribed on the list in 1993); Canaima National Park (1994); and La Ciudad Universitaria de Caracas (2000).

Press

In 2008 there were 108 daily newspapers (106 paid-for and two free) with a circulation of 2.53m.

Tourism

In 2005 there were 706,000 non-resident tourists; spending by tourists totalled US$713m.

Festivals

Among the country's most celebrated festivals is the Procession of the Holy Shepherdess (Jan.), which has run annually since 1856. Its centrepiece is a grand procession taking a statue of the divine shepherdess from Santa Rosa to the city of Barquisimeto, before the return trip is made at Easter. Celebrations to mark the initial declaration of independence from Spain in 1810 fall on 19 April, which is also designated as Day of the Indian. The Festival Internacional de Teatro in Caracas takes place in April and the Festival Internacional de Música El Hatillo is in Oct. Independence Day is observed on 5 July while the birthday of Simón Bolívar is celebrated on 24 July.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Archaeological evidence suggests Neolithic settlements in northern Vietnam existed from around 5000 BC. There were small rice-dependent villages in the Red River Delta from around 2000 BC and by AD 1500 there was bronze working at Dong Dau, near present-day Hanoi.

Much of present-day northern Vietnam was closely linked with China from the third century BC, initially as part of Nam Viet, regionally-administered from Canton, and from 111 BC under Han dynasty control. Chinese rule of Vietnam's north continued under the Tsin (265–420), Sui (581–618) and T'ang (618–907) dynasties. There followed several short-lived kingdoms until relative stability was restored by the Ly dynasty (1010–1225), notably under Emperor Ly Thanh Tong (1127–38) who adopted the name Dai Viet. The region's political structure remained Chinese-influenced but independent, although it came under attack from Sino-Mongol forces in 1285 and succumbed to Ming Dynasty control for 20 years from 1407.

From the late 1420s the Le dynasty expanded southward. In 1471 Le Thanh Tong seized control of much of the Kingdom of Champa (now Vietnam's central area), although complete defeat of the Cham took several centuries. By the 1500s the Le dynasty was in decline and was overthrown in 1527. The powerful Mac, Trinh and Nguyen families then fought for control. By 1590 the Trinh had established dominance in the north, centred on Thang Long (Hanoi)—the kingdom of Tonkin. The Nguyen ruled the southern provinces from Hue, a kingdom that became known as Cochin-China.

Both kingdoms benefited from growing trade with China and Japan and, to a lesser extent, in the 17th century with Portuguese, Dutch and English merchants. Catholicism, introduced from Europe, took root across much of Vietnam while the Nguyen pushed south into the Mekong Delta, which was home to thousands of Chinese refugees fleeing after the collapse of the Ming dynasty.

In 1749 Cambodia ceded the remainder of the lower Mekong delta to Nguyen control. In the 1770s a rebellion led by three brothers from the village of Tay Son, in Quy Nhan province, toppled the Nguyen and the Trinh, although the Nguyen wrested back control in 1802. At the end of the 18th century, France helped establish Emperor Gia-Long as ruler of a unified Vietnam. French forces captured Saigon in 1859 and took control of Cochin-China. Tonkin and Annam became French protectorates in 1884 and, with Cambodia already annexed (1863), a union of Indochina was formed in 1887, with Laos added six years later.

A Marxist/Leninist-inspired nationalist movement grew during the 1920s. In 1930 Nguyen Ai Quoc (Ho Chi Minh) established the Indochinese Communist Party, which became the Viet Minh movement. In 1940 Vietnam was occupied by Japan but after Japanese defeat in 1945, the Viet Minh established a republic with its capital in Hanoi. On 6 March 1946 France recognized the Democratic Republic of Vietnam as a 'Free State within the Indo-Chinese Federation'. In Nov. 1946 French forces attacked the Viet Minh in Haiphong, sparking a war of resistance until a peace agreement was reached in July 1954.

By the Paris Agreement of Dec. 1954 France transferred sovereignty to Vietnam, which was divided along the 17th parallel into Communist North Vietnam and non-Communist South. From 1959 the North promoted insurgency in the south, and in 1963 the Viet Cong (Communist guerrillas operating in the south) defeated several units of the South Vietnamese Army, prompting the overthrow and execution of President Ngo Dinh Diem. The Gulf of Tonkin incident, in which two US destroyers were allegedly attacked by North Vietnam, prompted retaliation by Washington. Aerial bombing raids began in March 1965 and the first combat troops soon followed, peaking at 540,000 in 1968. Opposition to the war in America mounted from 1967.

On 27 Jan. 1973 an agreement was signed in Paris ending the war although hostilities continued between North and South until the latter's defeat in 1975. Between 150,000 and 200,000 South Vietnamese fled the country. North and South Vietnam unified as the Socialist Republic of Vietnam on 2 July 1976. Vietnam invaded Cambodia in Dec. 1978, prompting a bloody but indecisive war with Chinese forces in Feb.–March 1979. In 1986 Vietnam began a shift towards a multi-sectoral market economy under state regulation. In 1995 Vietnam normalized relations with the USA and in July that year joined ASEAN and signed trade agreements with the EU.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Vietnam is bounded in the west by Cambodia and Laos, north by China and east and south by the South China Sea. It has a total area of 331,212 sq. km and is divided into eight regions, 58 provinces and five municipalities (Can Tho, Da Nang, Hai Phong, Hanoi and Thanh Pho Ho Chi Minh). The areas and 2009 census populations were as follows:

86% of the population are Vietnamese (Kinh). There are also 53 minority groups thinly spread in the extensive mountainous regions. The largest minorities are: Tay, Thai, Muong, Khmer, Mong and Nung.

The official language is Vietnamese. Chinese, French and Khmer are also spoken.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 1,494,000; deaths, 469,000. Estimated birth rate in 2008 was 17.2 per 1,000 population; estimated death rate, 5.4. Life expectancy, 2007, was 72.3 years for males and 76.1 years for females. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 1.3%. Infant mortality, 2005, 16 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 2.1 births per woman. Vietnam has had one of the largest reductions in its fertility rate of any country in the world in recent years, having had a rate of 5.8 births per woman in 1975. Sanctions are imposed on couples with more than two children. The rate at which Vietnam has reduced poverty, from 58% of the population in 1993 to 20% in 2004, is among the most dramatic of any country in the world.

CLIMATE

The humid monsoon climate gives tropical conditions in the south, with a rainy season from May to Oct., and sub-tropical conditions in the north, though real winter conditions can affect the north when polar air blows south over Asia. In general, there is little variation in temperatures over the year. Hanoi, Jan. 62°F (16.7°C), July 84°F (28.9°C). Annual rainfall 72" (1,830 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The National Assembly unanimously approved a new constitution on 15 April 1992. Under this the Communist Party retains a monopoly of power and the responsibility for guiding the state according to the tenets of Marxism-Leninism and Ho Chi Minh, but with certain curbs on its administrative functions. The powers of the National Assembly are increased. The 500-member National Assembly is elected for five-year terms. Candidates may be proposed by the Communist Party or the Fatherland Front (which groups various social organizations), or they may propose themselves as individual Independents. The Assembly convenes three times a year and appoints a prime minister and cabinet. It elects the President, the head of state. The latter heads a State Council which issues decrees when the National Assembly is not in session.

The ultimate source of political power is the Communist Party of Vietnam, founded in 1930; it had 3.6m. members in 2011.

National Anthem

'Đoàn quân Việt Nam đi chung lòng cứu quốc' ('Soldiers of Vietnam, we are advancing'); words and tune by Van Cao.

CURRENT LEADERS*Nguyen Phu TrongPosition*

Secretary General of the Communist Party of Vietnam

Introduction

Nguyen Phu Trong was elected secretary general of the Communist Party of Vietnam in Jan. 2011 at the Party's 11th national congress, replacing Nong Duc Manh. Chairman of the National Assembly since 2006, Trong was previously the party secretary for Hanoi.

Early Life

Trong was born in Hanoi on 14 April 1944. He attended the Nguyen Gia Thieu school in Hanoi district and from 1963–67 studied linguistics at the Hanoi General University. After graduating, Trong became a civil servant and in 1968 was inducted into the Communist Party of Vietnam. From 1968–73 he worked on the Communist Review, the party's official journal, and was a prominent representative of the party's youth contingent. He then undertook post-graduate studies at Ho Chi Minh National Academy of Politics and Public Administration before returning as editor of the Communist Review in 1976. In 1983 he graduated with a history PhD from the Soviet Academy of Social Sciences. He returned to the Communist Review and held senior posts, joining the editorial board in 1991 and serving as editor-in-chief until 1996.

In 1994 Trong became a member of the Communist Party central committee and from 1996–98 was deputy secretary of its Hanoi section. In 1997 he joined the politburo, focusing on political research and theory. He was appointed head of 'ideological-cultural and scientific-educational affairs' and from 2001–06 served as chairman of the 'theoretical council'.

From 2000–06 he was party secretary in Hanoi and from 2002–06 a deputy in the National Assembly. In 2006 he was elected secretary of the Assembly's party organization, as well as chairman of the Assembly itself, and became a member of the council for defence and security.

Career in Office

At 67 years of age, Trong was past the mandatory retirement age when he became secretary general and is considered a conservative hardliner. In 2011 he sought closer ties with China (signing an agreement in Oct. aimed at resolving disputed control over parts of the South China Sea) and held talks with Laotian delegates aimed at reinforcing relations. In seeking to build consensus, he liaises between the prime minister, Nguyen Tan Dung, and the state president, Truong Tan Sang (who was elected in July 2011).

In early 2011 the country faced inflation of over 11%, a weakening currency (devalued twice in 2010) and uncertainty over the country's financing that resulted in a credit rating downgrade in 2010. Trong has adopted a tough stance towards the media and has moved against critical journalism, including banning the use of unnamed sources.

Nguyen Tan DungPosition*

Prime Minister

Introduction

Nguyen Tan Dung was appointed prime minister in June 2006. Part of the new generation aspiring to leadership of Vietnam's single-party government, he is a proponent of economic reform and liberalization. He was reappointed for a second term in Jan. 2011.

Early Life

Nguyen Tan Dung was born in Ca Mau in the south of Vietnam on 17 Nov. 1949. While serving in the army he joined the Communist Party in 1967, and then enrolled in the elite Nguyen Ai Quoc Party School in 1981 to study political theory.

Dung advanced rapidly within the party, serving on influential committees and supporting Vietnam's 'doi moi' programme of economic reform to move the country towards a market economy. In Jan. 1995 he became deputy minister for home affairs and in May the following year he became the youngest person ever to be appointed to the politburo. Tipped as a future party leader, he was appointed deputy prime minister and also director of the central committee's economic commission in charge of the party's finances in 1997. The following year he took over as governor of the state bank.

From 1998–2006 Dung was groomed for leadership by the then prime minister Phan Van Khai, a fellow modernizer. Appointed to a range of key party posts during that time, he oversaw the continuing liberalization of Vietnam's economy. Dung expanded foreign trade relations and prepared Vietnam's accession to the World Trade Organization (WTO). He was also given responsibility for tackling domestic corruption and organized crime. When Khai resigned the premiership, Dung was confirmed as prime minister by the National Assembly on 27 June 2006.

Career in Office

Dung reiterated his intention to proceed with economic and social reform. His first action was to replace several government figures who had been implicated in corruption. He has sought to strengthen commercial links internationally, notably with the European Union. In Nov. 2006 Vietnam was approved for membership of the WTO and also hosted the annual Asia-Pacific Economic Co-operation meeting.

In Nov. 2009 the government devalued the Vietnamese currency (for the third time since June 2008) by about 5% against the US dollar, at the same time increasing interest rates in a bid to dampen rising inflation. While Vietnam experienced a sharp decline in exports in 2009 because of the global economic slowdown, there was positive growth of 5.3% for the year as a whole (although this was the lowest annual rate since 1999). In Dec. the World Bank approved a loan for the first time to Vietnam worth US$500m.

During an official visit to Moscow in Dec. 2009, Dung announced multi-billion dollar contracts to buy submarines, fighter jets and other military hardware from Russia, as well as agreements on co-operation relating to oil and gas, mining and financial services.

Dung has been closely associated with the communist regime's strategy of building up large state-run conglomerates and he faced criticism in the National Assembly in 2010 over the financial collapse of Vinashin, the giant state-owned shipbuilder. Dung conceded that his administration was partly responsible for the inadequate supervision of the company's management. Despite speculation that his opponents would use the failure as a way of removing him from office, in Jan. 2011 the Communist Party congress gave him a second term as premier.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for two years (army) or three years (air force and navy). For specialists it is also three years.

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$2,907m. (US$33 per capita), representing 3.2% of GDP.

Army

There are nine military regions (including the capital). Strength (2007) was estimated to be 412,000. Paramilitary Local Defence forces number around 5m. and include the Peoples' Self-Defence Force (urban) and the People's Militia (rural). There is also a paramilitary Border Defence Corps numbering some 40,000.

Navy

The fleet includes two diesel submarines (although their serviceability is in doubt) and five frigates. In 2007 personnel was estimated at 13,000 plus an additional Naval Infantry force of about 27,000.

Air Force

In 2007 the People's Air Force had 30,000 personnel, with 219 combat capable aircraft (Su-22s, Su-27s, Su-30s and MiG-21s) and 26 attack helicopters.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 20.4% of GDP in 2006, industry 41.6% and services 38.1%.

Overview

Over the last decade, the economy has been one of the best performing in Asia. Real GDP grew on average by 7.5% per year between 2000 and 2008, while poverty fell from over 50% in the mid-1990s to 16% in 2006. The oil sector plays an important role, with exports of crude oil accounting for 20% of total exports. Other key exports include rice, garments and footwear.

Vietnam joined the WTO in Jan 2007 and signed bilateral trade agreements with the USA in 2000 and the EU in 2004. Economic activity remained strong during the global financial crisis, thanks to a sizable stimulus package (5% of GDP) and loose monetary policy. Though real GDP growth fell to 5.3% in 2009, its slowest pace since 2000, it remained among the strongest in Asia. Growth rebounded to 6.8% in 2010. Increased macroeconomic risks stemming from the stimulus led to interest rate rises, while in Feb. 2011 the government announced a stabilization package including measures to reduce credit growth and the budget deficit.

Currency

The unit of currency is the dong (VND). The dong was devalued by 5.4% in Nov. 2009, 3.4% in Feb. 2010, 2.1% in Aug. 2010 and 8.5% in Feb. 2011. Foreign exchange reserves were US$8,268m. in May 2005 and total money supply was 192,281bn. dong. Inflation was 23.1% in 2008, falling to 6.7% in 2009.

Budget

In 2008 revenues were 323trn. dong and expenditures 364trn. dong. Tax revenue accounted for 89.0% of revenues in 2008, non-tax revenue 9.9% and grants 1.1%; current expenditure accounted for 72.6% of expenditures and capital expenditure 27.4%.

VAT is 10% (reduced rate, 5%).

Performance

Real GDP growth rates have been consistently strong since 1994, and averaged 7.7% between 2001 and 2007. This robust performance continued into 2008, 2009 and 2010 with growth rates of 6.3%, 5.3% and 6.8% respectively. GDP per head, which was US$98 in 1990, had risen to US$815 by 2007. Vietnam's total GDP in 2010 was US$103.6bn.

Banking and Finance

The central bank and bank of issue is the State Bank of Vietnam (founded in 1951; Governor, Nguyen Van Binh). In 2003 there were four state-owned commercial banks, 37 joint-stock private banks, four joint venture banks, and 50 representative offices and 26 branches of foreign banks. Vietcombank is the foreign trade bank. Foreign direct investment in Vietnam was US$7.6bn. in 2009, up from US$2.0bn. in 2005 although down from the high of US$9.6bn. in 2008.

There are stock exchanges in Ho Chi Minh City, which opened in July 2000, and Hanoi, which opened in March 2005.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Vietnam's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 1.1 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

Total installed capacity of power generation in 2007 was an estimated 12.5m. kW. In 2007, 69.48bn. kWh of electricity were produced (39.60bn. kWh thermal and 29.88bn. kWh hydro-electric); consumption per capita was 816 kWh. The proportion of households with electricity has doubled in the past 20 years, to 94% by 2007.

Oil and Gas

Oil reserves in 2008 totalled 4.7bn. bbls. In Aug. 2001 an offshore oil mine containing more than 400m. bbls of petroleum was discovered. Oil production in 2008, 15.4m. tonnes. Natural gas reserves in 2008 were 560bn. cu. metres; production was 7.9bn. cu. metres.

Minerals

Vietnam is endowed with an abundance of mineral resources such as coal (3.5bn. tonnes), bauxite (3bn. tonnes), apatite (1bn. tonnes), iron ore (700m. tonnes), chromate (10m. tonnes), copper (600,000 tonnes) and tin (70,000 tonnes); coal production was 34.1m. tonnes in 2005. There are also deposits of manganese, titanium, a little gold and marble. 2005 output (in 1,000 tonnes): sand and gravel, 146,400; lime, 1,718; salt, 925.

Agriculture

Agriculture employs 70% of the workforce. Ownership of land is vested in the state, but since 1992 farmers may inherit and sell plots allocated on 20-year leases. There were an estimated 6.35m. ha. of arable land in 2007 and 3.08m. ha. of permanent crops.

Production in 1,000 tonnes in 2003: rice, 34,519; sugarcane, 16,525; cassava, 5,228; maize, 2,934; sweet potatoes, 1,592; bananas, 1,221; coconuts, 920; coffee, 771; cabbage, 606; oranges, 500. Vietnam is the second largest coffee producer in the world after Brazil, and the second largest exporter of rice behind Thailand.

Livestock, 2003: pigs, 24.89m.; cattle, 4.39m.; buffaloes, 2.84m.; goats, 780,000; chickens, 185m.; ducks, 69m.

Livestock products (2003): meat, 2,487,000 tonnes; eggs, 234,000 tonnes; milk, 158,000 tonnes.

There were 257 tractors and 365 harvester-threshers per 10,000 ha. of arable land in 2006.

Forestry

In 2005 forests covered 12.93m. ha., or 39.7% of the land area. Timber exports were prohibited in 1992. Timber production was 34.17m. cu. metres in 2007, nearly all of it for fuel.

Fisheries

Total catch, 2005, 1,929,900 tonnes (93% from sea fishing). Vietnam's aquaculture production is the third largest in the world behind those of China and India, at 2,462,000 tonnes in 2008.

INDUSTRY

Estimated total industrial output in 2002 was 260,202.0bn. dong. In 2002 estimated production (in 1,000 tonnes) was: processed sea produce, 288,701; cement, 19,482; steel, 2,429; fertilizers, 1,176; sugar, 1,074; paper (2003), 800; detergents, 381; beer (2003), 1,049.8m. litres; clothes, 47.6m. items.

Labour

In 2004 a total of 41.6m. persons were in employment. Agriculture and forestry accounted for 23.0m. people; industry, 5.3m.; trade, 4.8m.; construction, 1.9m.; culture, health and education, 1.7m. A liberal Enterprise Law was adopted in 2000, leading to the creation of over 50,000 new private businesses and more than 1.5m. new jobs during the next three years. Official statistics put unemployment at 7.4% of the workforce in early 2000.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In Feb. 1994 the USA lifted the trade embargo it had imposed in 1975, and in Nov. 2001 a trade agreement with the USA was ratified. The agreement allows Vietnam's exports access to the US market on the same terms as those enjoyed by most other countries. The 1992 constitution regulates joint ventures with western firms; full repatriation of profits and non-nationalization of investments are guaranteed.

Foreign debt was US$19,287m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Trade is conducted through the state import-export agencies. Imports (c.i.f.) in 2008, US$80,714m. (US$36,761m. in 2005); exports (f.o.b.), US$62,685m. (US$32,447m. in 2005). In 2002 the main imports (by value) were: machinery (19%), petroleum (10%), textiles and garments (9%) and steel (7%). Other significant imports were plastics, vehicles, fertilizers and chemicals. Main exports: crude oil (20%), textiles and garments (16%), sea produce (12%), footwear (11%) and rice (4%). Other significant exports were electronics, coffee, latex, cashew nuts, pepper and coal.

The main import suppliers in 2000 were Singapore (15.1%), Japan (14.0%), South Korea (11.9%) and China (10.9%). Principal export markets in 2000 were Japan (18.6%), Australia (9.7%), Germany (7.7%) and China (6.6%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were 160,089 km of roads in 2007, of which 47.6% were paved. In 2007 there were 1,146,300 passenger cars in use and around 21.78m. motorcycles and mopeds. There were 13,200 fatalities in road accidents in 2007.

Rail

There were 2,402 km of railways in 2005, mostly metre gauge. Rail links with China were reopened in Feb. 1996. In 2008, 11.3m. passengers and 8.4m. tonnes of freight were carried.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Hanoi (Noi Bai) and Ho Chi Minh City (Tan Son Nhat) and 13 domestic airports. The national carrier is Vietnam Airlines, which provides domestic services and in 2003 had international flights to Bangkok, Beijing, Dubai, Guangzhou, Hong Kong, Kaohsiung, Kuala Lumpur, Kunming, Manila, Melbourne, Moscow, Osaka, Paris, Phnom Penh, Seoul, Siem Reap, Singapore, Sydney, Taipei, Tokyo and Vientiane. In 2005 scheduled airline traffic of Vietnam-based carriers flew 43.7m. km, carrying 3,762,200 passengers. The busiest airport is Ho Chi Minh City, which in 2001 handled 4,306,143 passengers and 96,560 tonnes of freight. Hanoi handled 2,207,052 passengers and 40,668 tonnes of freight in 2001.

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were 918 ships of 300 GT or over registered (including 769 general cargo ships and 76 oil tankers), totalling 2,683,000 GT. The major ports are Hai Phong, Ho Chi Minh City and Da Nang. There are regular services to Hong Kong, Singapore, Thailand, Cambodia and Japan. There are some 19,500 km of navigable waterways.

Telecommunications

Vietnam Posts and Telecommunications and the military operate telephone systems with the assistance of foreign companies. In 2008 there were 29.6m. main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscribers numbered 70m. in 2008 (80.4 per 100 persons). There were 8.1m. PCs in use in 2006 and 20.8m. internet users in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

A new penal code came into force on 1 Jan. 1986 'to complete the work of the 1980 constitution'. Penalties (including death) are prescribed for opposition to the people's power and for economic crimes. The judicial system comprises the Supreme People's Court, provincial courts and district courts. The president of the Supreme Court is responsible to the National Assembly, as is the Procurator-General, who heads the Supreme People's Office of Supervision and Control.

The death penalty is still in force. There were five confirmed executions in 2011.

The population in penal institutions in 2005 was 88,000 (105 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 92.8% (95.2% among males and 90.5% among females). Primary education consists of a ten-year course divided into three levels of four, three and three years respectively. In 2007 there were 7,041,312 pupils and 344,547 teaching staff in primary schools, and 9,845,407 pupils and 451,165 teaching staff at secondary schools. About 75% of children of secondary school age were in school by 2003, up from around a third in 1990. In 1995-96 there were seven universities, two open (distance) universities and nine specialized universities (agriculture, three; economics, two; technology, three; water resources, one). In 2007 there were 1,587,609 students in higher education with 53,518 academic staff.

Health

In 2001 there were 42,327 physicians, 44,539 nurses, 14,662 midwives and 5,977 pharmacists. There were 842 hospitals in 2003 with a provision of 24 beds per 10,000 population.

RELIGION

Taoism is the traditional religion but Buddhism is widespread. At the census of 2009 the principal denominations were: Buddhists, 6,802,318; Catholics, 5,677,086; Hoa Hao (a tradition based on Buddhism), 1,433,252; Cao Dai (a synthesis of Christianity, Buddhism and Confucianism), 807,915; Protestants, 734,168; no religion, 70,193,377. In Feb. 2012 there was one cardinal. There are 26 dioceses, including three archdioceses.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Vietnam has seven sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the Complex of Hue Monuments (inscribed on the list in 1993); Ha Long Bay (1994 and 2000); Hoi An Ancient Town (1999); My Son Sanctuary (1999); Phong Nha-Ke Bang National Park (2003); the Central Sector of the Imperial Citadel of Thang Long, Hanoi (2010); and the Citadel of the Ho Dynasty (2011).

Press

In 2008 there were 55 paid-for daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 2.8m. The Communist Party controls all print media but some criticism of government policy is allowed.

Tourism

There were 3,468,000 foreign tourists in 2005 (2,928,000 in 2004); spending by tourists in 2005 totalled US$1,880m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

One of the earliest recorded pre-Islamic Arab civilizations was the Sabaeen culture, which flourished in what is now Yemen and southwestern Saudi Arabia during the 1st millennium BC. The wealth of the kingdom of Saba (or Sheba) was based on the incense and spice trade and on agriculture. Beginning in about 115 BC, the Himyarites gradually absorbed Saba and Hadhramaut (to the east) to claim control of all of the southwest Arabian peninsula by the 4th century AD. Himyarite dominance came to an end in the 6th century as Abyssinian (Ethiopian) forces invaded in AD 525. Abyssinian rule was overthrown in 575 by Persian military intervention, and Persian control then endured until the advent of Islam in 628.

Yemen became a province of the Muslim caliphate. Thereafter its fortunes reflected the fluctuating power of the imams (kings and spiritual leaders) of the Zaidi sect—who built the theocratic political structure of Yemen that endured from the 9th century until 1962—and of rival dynasties and conquerors. These included the Fatimid caliphs of Egypt, who occupied most of Yemen from about 1000 until 1175 and, subsequently, the Ayyubids, who ruled until about 1250. The Rasulids, who had served as governors of Yemen under the Ayyubid dynasty, then exercised a measure of sovereignty. However, central authority had fragmented by the time the Ottoman Turks, fearful of Christian Portuguese influence in southern Arabia, intervened in Yemen in the first half of the 16th century. They held nominal but tenuous sovereignty until the end of the First World War (when Yemen became independent), and conflict with the Zaidi imams was frequent.

The southern Yemeni port of Aden was a coveted commercial location on the trading routes to the wider East from ancient times. By the end of the 18th century its strategic importance had increased as Britain sought to contain the French threat to colonial communications with British India following Napoleon's conquest of Egypt. With the coming of the steamship, Britain's need for a military and refuelling base in the region became more pressing. In 1839 the British captured Aden, attaching it administratively to India. In the 1850s the Perim, Kamaran and Kuria Muria islands were made part of Aden which became a free port. Britain also purchased areas on the mainland from local rulers and entered into protectionist agreements with them. The opening of the Suez Canal in 1869 further enhanced both Aden's strategic significance and British colonial consolidation.

In the early 1870s, tribal and religious warfare led the Ottoman Turks to reassert authority over northern Yemen, an occupation that lasted until the armistice of 1918. After the Ottoman evacuation, Imam Yahya, who had supported the Turks during the First World War despite leading an earlier revolt against them in 1911, sought to expand Yemeni territory. However, in 1934, after brief hostilities with Saudi Arabia (by then under the rule of Ibn Saud) and skirmishes with British forces from Aden, a trilateral treaty to fix Yemen's boundaries was agreed. The treaty heralded a period of generally peaceful coexistence, which lasted for the rest of Imam Yahya's reign. Aden, meanwhile, was formally made a British crown colony in 1937 and the surrounding region became known as the Aden protectorate.

Opposition to the theocratic and despotic rule of Imam Yahya led to his assassination in Feb. 1948. His son, Crown Prince Ahmad, succeeded him and put down the insurgents. Ahmad's reign was marked by further repression, renewed friction over the British presence in southern Yemen and growing pressure in the 1950s to support the Arab nationalist objectives of the new Nasser regime in Egypt. Following Ahmad's death his son, Muhammad al-Badr, was deposed a week after his accession in Sept. 1962 by revolutionary forces aided by Egypt. The rebels took control of the capital, Sana'a, and proclaimed the Yemen Arab Republic (YAR). Saudi Arabia and Jordan supported al-Badr's royalist forces against the new republic and conflict continued periodically until 1970. Despite its instability, the YAR regime retained power and secured international recognition.

In 1963 the Aden colony was merged into the Federation of South Arabia. A power struggle between rival nationalist groups after the British withdrawal in 1967 led to an independent Marxist state with Aden as the capital. This was renamed the People's Democratic Republic of Yemen (PDRY) in 1970. Mistrust and frequent border clashes between the YAR and the PDRY characterized the next decade, despite an accord in 1972 to merge the two entities.

A coup in the YAR brought Lieut.-Col. Ibrahim al-Hamadi to power in 1974. However, he was assassinated in Oct. 1977, as was his successor, Lieut.-Col. Ahmad al-Ghashmi, in June 1978. The following month Lieut.-Col. Ali Abdullah Saleh, the commander of the Ta'iz military area, was elected president by the Constitutional Assembly. Saleh's first months in power were turbulent. In early 1979 sporadic fighting erupted into full-scale war between North and South Yemen. Arab League mediation brought the hostilities to an end and both sides acknowledged the need to effect permanent Yemeni union. Saleh was meanwhile re-elected as YAR President by the Constituent Assembly in May 1983 and again in July 1988 by a new Consultative Council.

In the PDRY the chairman of the Presidential Council, Salem Rubayyi Ali, was overthrown in June 1978. Prime Minister Ali Nasser Muhammad briefly assumed the chairmanship before Abdul Fattah Ismail, a hard-line orthodox Marxist, was elected as head of state by the new Presidium of the People's Supreme Assembly in Dec. 1978. Ismail resigned unexpectedly in April 1980 and went to the Soviet Union, to be replaced by Ali Nasser Muhammad. While maintaining South Yemen's close relations with the Soviet Union, Muhammad favoured reconciliation with moderate Arab states. In particular, he viewed improved relations with Saudi Arabia as necessary to further the proposed merger with the YAR. In Feb. 1985 Muhammad resigned as prime minister but remained head of state and secretary-general of the dominant Yemeni Socialist Party (YSP). The rest of that year was marked by the re-emergence of political rivalries, aggravated by the return of Ismail from the Soviet Union, which triggered a brief civil war in Jan. 1986. Ismail was killed and Muhammad fled into exile, after which a new government was formed.

In May 1988 the YAR and PDRY governments reached an agreement on renewing unification discussions and demilitarizing their borders. Their respective leaders, Ali Abdullah Saleh and Ali Salem Albidh, agreed in late 1989 a draft unity constitution (originally drawn up in 1981) and on 22 May 1990 the Republic of Yemen was declared. A five-member Presidential Council assumed power and Saleh was appointed as president for a transitional period. By 1993 relations between the North and South had again deteriorated, Vice-President Albidh having withdrawn to Aden to demand political reforms. Sporadic military clashes escalated into full civil war in May 1994 between disaffected southern forces and Yemen's northern-based government. Southern officials announced their secession from Yemen on 21 May 1994, but northern forces quickly prevailed and Aden was captured on 7 July 1994. The former vice-president and other southern leaders went into exile.

Confirmed in office by parliament in Oct. 1994 for a five-year term, President Saleh's political position was further consolidated when he was re-elected by popular vote in Sept. 1999 (though the turnout was low, particularly in the south). An extension of his term of office from five to seven years was approved in a referendum in Feb. 2001. In April 2003 Saleh's ruling General People's Congress retained power in parliamentary elections with over two-thirds of the seats in the 301-member Assembly of Representatives. However, the main opposition parties claimed that polling was tainted by ballot rigging and intimidation.

In foreign affairs Yemen suffered diplomatic isolation and economic sanctions in the early 1990s for its equivocal response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. In 1995 Yemen clashed with Eritrea over control of the Hanish Islands in the Red Sea. Following arbitration by an international panel, Yemen assumed control of the main islands in 1998.

Longstanding tensions with neighbouring Saudi Arabia were eased when a border dispute was settled in June 2000. Attacks on Western targets in Yemeni territory—most notably the suicide bombing of the US naval vessel USS Cole in Oct. 2000 and a bomb attack on a French supertanker, the Limburg, off the Yemeni coast in Oct. 2002—fuelled concerns that Yemen might be a haven for Islamic extremists. Nevertheless, President Saleh pledged full support for the USA's global campaign against terrorism in the wake of the events of 11 Sept. 2001.

Attacks linked to al-Qaeda continued throughout the decade. In Oct. 2010 parcel bombs intended for US-bound cargo planes were suspected of originating in the country. In Jan. 2011 the US government expressed its 'urgent concern' at Yemen's extremist links. Popular anti-government protests starting the same month led to President Saleh relinquishing power in Nov. 2011. He was succeeded by Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi, who won the presidential election held in Feb. 2012 unopposed.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Yemen is bounded in the north by Saudi Arabia, east by Oman, south by the Gulf of Aden and west by the Red Sea. The territory includes 112 islands including Kamaran (181 sq. km) and Perim (300 sq. km) in the Red Sea and Socotra (3,500 sq. km) in the Gulf of Aden. The islands of Greater and Lesser Hanish are claimed by both Yemen and Eritrea. On 15 Dec. 1995 Eritrean troops occupied them, and Yemen retaliated with aerial bombardments. A ceasefire was agreed at presidential level on 17 Dec. On 20 Dec. the UN resolved to send a good offices mission to the area. In an agreement of 21 May 1996 brokered by France, Yemen and Eritrea renounced the use of force to settle the dispute and agreed to submit it to arbitration. Following a ruling issued by the Permanent Court of Arbitration in the Hague, Yemen assumed control of the main islands in 1998. The area is 555,000 sq. km excluding the desert Empty Quarter (Rub Al-Khali).

A dispute with Saudi Arabia broke out in Dec. 1994 over some 1,500–2,000 km of undemarcated desert boundary. A memorandum of understanding signed on 26 Feb. 1995 reaffirmed the border agreement reached at Taif in 1934, and on 12 June 2000 a 'final and permanent' border treaty between the two countries was signed. An agreement of June 1995 completed the demarcation of the border with Oman.

Census population, 2004: 19,685,161; density, 35 persons per sq. km. In 2005, 72.7% of the population lived in rural areas.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 27.98m.

In 2004 there were 20 governorates plus the capital city, Sana'a:

	2004 census population		2004 census population
Abyan	433,819	Lahej	722,694
Aden	589,419	Mahrah	88,594
Amran	877,786	Mahwit	494,557
Bayd	577,369	Marib	238,522
Dhala	470,564	Raymah	394,448
Dhamar	1,330,108	Sa'adah	695,033
Hadhramout	1,028,556	Sana'a (city)	1,747,834
Hajjah	1,479,568	Sana'a	919,215
Hodeida	2,157,552	Shabwah	470,440
Ibb	2,131,861	Ta'iz	2,393,425
Jawf	443,797

The population of the capital, Sana'a, was 1,707,531 in 2004. The commercial capital is the port of Aden, with a population of (2004) 588,938. Other important towns are Ta'iz, the port of Hodeida, Mukalla, Ibb and Abyan. Sana'a is currently the fastest-growing city in the world, with a population increase of 832.6% in the period 1975–2000 and a projected increase of 128.2% between 2000–15, by when it is expected to have 3.03m. inhabitants.

The official language is Arabic.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2009 estimates: births, 886,000; deaths, 163,000. Rates, 2009 estimates (per 1,000 population): birth, 38; death, 7. Yemen has one of the youngest populations of any country, with 75% of the population under the age of 30 and 44% under 15. Life expectancy, 2007, was 60.9 years for males and 64.1 years for females. Infant mortality, 2005, 76 per 1,000 live births. Annual population growth rate, 1998–2008, 2.9%; fertility rate, 2008, 5.2 births per woman.

CLIMATE

A desert climate, modified by relief. Sana'a, Jan. 57°F (13.9°C), July 71°F (21.7°C). Aden, Jan. 75°F (24°C), July 90°F (32°C). Annual rainfall 20" (508 mm) in the north, but very low in coastal areas: 1.8" (46 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Parliament consists of a 301-member Assembly of Representatives (Majlis al-Nuwaab), elected for a six-year term in single-seat constituencies and, since 2001, a 111-member Shura Council (Majlis al-Shura), appointed by the president.

The constitution was adopted in May 1991 but was drastically amended in 1994 following the civil war. On 28 Sept. 1994 the Assembly of Representatives unanimously adopted the amended constitution founded on Islamic law. It abolished the former five-member Presidential Council and installed a President elected by parliament for a five-year term, subsequently amended to a seven-year term through a referendum held on 20 Feb. 2001. As a result of the same referendum the term for MPs was extended from four to six years. Following the popular protests in 2011 that unseated President Saleh, his successor, Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi, is expected to oversee the drafting of a new constitution.

CURRENT LEADERS

Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi

Position
President

Introduction

Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi became president in Feb. 2012. His appointment ended 33 years of rule by Ali Abdullah Saleh, who was toppled following months of mass protests inspired by the Arab Spring. A career military officer from southern Yemen, Hadi is considered a moderate and has been granted two years to manage a transition towards stability and unity.

Early Life

Abdo Rabu Mansour al-Hadi was born on 1 May 1945 in Thukian, Abyan, in southern Yemen. He attended Aden Protectorate Army School, a private establishment for the sons of army officers in the former British colony. Graduating in 1964, he won a scholarship to the UK's Royal Military Academy at Sandhurst.

Following South Yemen's independence in Nov. 1967, Hadi served as leader of an armoured division at the Al-Anad military base. He undertook further training in Cairo in 1970, before being posted to the Dhala region and serving on the mediation committee that successfully resolved a conflict with North Yemen in 1972. For much of the 1970s he managed South Yemen's military training establishment and spent time in Moscow studying military leadership. Promoted to deputy chief of staff in 1983, Hadi was responsible for military liaison with the Soviet Union.

Following Yemen's unification in May 1990, Hadi was a leading figure in the republic's new army. During the 1994 civil war he supported Ali Abdullah Saleh (the president and former leader of North Yemen) and was rewarded for his loyalty when he was appointed vice president and minister of defence—the most senior position in the government held by a southerner. He was a key negotiator on issues including the Yemeni–Saudi border dispute, the controversial maritime frontier with Eritrea and the ongoing conflict between government forces and Houthi rebels in control of the northern Sa'adah province.

Saleh stood down in Nov. 2011 after more than ten months of popular unrest interspersed with violent government crackdowns. In accordance with a UN Security Council resolution, he agreed to transfer power to Hadi for an interim period ahead of presidential elections. On 21 Feb. 2012 Hadi, the sole candidate, was elected president, with turnout reported as 65%.

Career in Office

Hadi was sworn in to office on 25 Feb. 2012. A popular figure within Yemen, he also received support from many neighbouring states but faces a trying tenure in the face of continued threats from al-Qaeda, the Houthi rebellion, a secessionist movement in the south, a weak economy and crumbling infrastructure.

DEFENCE

Conscription is for two years. Defence expenditure in 2008 totalled US$1,492m. (US$67 per capita), representing 6.4% of GDP.

Estimates of the number of small arms in the country are around 12m., equivalent to 61 firearms for every 100 people, making Yemen second only behind the USA as the world's most heavily armed country.

Army

Strength (2007), 60,000 (including conscripts). There are paramilitary tribal levies numbering at least 20,000 and a Ministry of Security force of 50,000.

Navy

Navy forces are based at Aden and Hodeida, with other facilities at Mukalla, Perim and Socotra. Personnel in 2007 numbered 1,700.

Air Force

The unified Air Forces of the former Arab Republic and People's Democratic Republic are now under one command, although this unity was broken by the attempted secession of the south in 1994 which resulted in heavy fighting between the air forces of Sana'a and Aden. Personnel (2007), 3,000. There were 79 combat capable aircraft in 2007 including Su-17/20/22s, MiG-21s and MiG-29s.

ECONOMY

Crude petroleum and natural gas accounted for 28% of GDP in 2007; trade, restaurants and hotels 16%; transport and communication 12%; and finance and real estate 11%.

Overview

Yemen is the poorest country in the Middle East and its outlook is unpromising. It has limited resources, including declining oil reserves, little arable land and scarce water supplies. Oil dominates the economy, accounting for 70% of government revenue and more than 90% of export earnings. With one of the highest population growth rates in the world, over 40% of the population lives in poverty, mostly in rural areas. Its problems were aggravated by a 60% increase in food prices in 2007–08. The economy has also been hampered by long-running political and social unrest, including a civil war from 1990–94.

Despite a relatively insulated financial sector, Yemen suffered during the global economic crisis with declining FDI and remittances, sharp decreases in oil revenues and reduced public expenditure. Since Jan. 2011 mass civilian protests, echoing similar unrest throughout the region, have threatened to send the economy into freefall. Foreign donors are expected to put limits on aid amid ongoing security threats and the volatile political situation. Coupled with soaring prices and a failing currency, the medium-term outlook is gloomy.

Currency

The unit of currency is the riyal (YER) of 100 fiils. During the transitional period to north-south unification the northern riyal of 100 fiils and the southern dinar of 1,000 fiils co-existed. There were three foreign exchange rates operating: an internal clearing rate, an official rate and a commercial rate. In 1996 the official rate was abolished. Total money supply in June 2005 was 372,105m. riyals, gold reserves totalled 50,000 troy oz and foreign exchange reserves were US$5,253m. Inflation was 19.0% in 2008, falling to 3.7% in 2009.

Budget

The fiscal year is the calendar year. General government revenues in 2009 (provisional) were 1,276bn. riyals and expenditures 1,476bn. riyals. Oil revenue accounted for 58.3% of total revenues in 2009. The main items of expenditure in 2009 were wages and salaries (35.8%) and subsidies (26.9%).

Performance

Real GDP growth was 3.9% in 2009 and 8.0% in 2010; total GDP in 2009 was US$26.4bn.

Banking and Finance

The Governor of the Central Bank of Yemen is Mohamed Awad Bin Humam. Total reserves of the Central Bank were 81,089m. riyals in 2002 and there were 446,287m. riyals in deposits.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Yemen's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 0.9 tonnes per capita in 2008. An Environmental Performance Index compiled in 2008 ranked Yemen 141st in the world out of 149 countries analysed, with 49.7%. The index examined various factors in six areas—air pollution, biodiversity and habitat, climate change, environmental health, productive natural resources and water resources.

Electricity

Installed capacity was an estimated 1.3m. kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was 6.03bn. kWh; consumption per capita was 280 kWh.

Oil and Gas

In 2008 there were oil reserves of 2.7bn. bbls; mostly near the former north-south border. Oil production (2008): 14.4m. tonnes. Natural gas reserves in 2008 were 490bn. cu. metres.

Minerals

In 2008, 65,000 tonnes of salt were produced. In 2008, 100,000 tonnes of gypsum were extracted and 4.95m. cu. metres of quarried stone (including marble).

Agriculture

In 2007 there were around 1.38m. ha. of arable land and 250,000 ha. of permanent cropland. 772,000 ha. were irrigated in 2006. In the south, agriculture is largely of a subsistence nature, sorghum, sesame and millet being the chief crops, and wheat and barley being widely grown at the higher elevations. Cash crops include cotton. Fruit is plentiful in the north. Estimated production (2003, in 1,000 tonnes): tomatoes, 273; sorghum, 260; alfalfa, 242; potatoes, 213; oranges, 191; grapes, 169. Livestock in 2003 (estimates): goats, 7.3m.; sheep, 6.5m.; cattle, 1.4m.; chickens, 35m. Livestock products, 2003 estimates (in 1,000 tonnes): milk, 237; meat, 215.

Forestry

There were 549,000 ha. of forest in 2005 (1.0% of the total land area). Timber production in 2007 was 395,000 cu. metres.

Fisheries

Fishing is a major industry. Total catch in 2005 was 263,000 tonnes, exclusively marine fish.

INDUSTRY

Output (2007 unless otherwise indicated, in 1,000 tonnes): cement (2009), 2,118; petrol, 1,127; distillate fuel oil, 991; residual fuel oil, 676; wheat flour (2003), 667; jet fuel, 486; kerosene, 97. In 2001 industry accounted for 49.2% of GDP, with manufacturing contributing 6.7%.

Labour

Of 3,621,700 persons in employment in 2002, 1,927,700 were engaged in agriculture, hunting and forestry; 394,200 in wholesale and retail trade/repair of motor vehicles, motorcycles and personal and household goods; 358,000 in public administration and defence/compulsory social security; and 238,200 in construction. Unemployment was 18% in 2004.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$5,363m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Trade in US$1m.:

	2005	2006	2007	2008	2009
Imports c.i.f.	5,399.9	6,080.9	8,510.7	10,546.2	9,184.8
Exports f.o.b.	5,607.7	6,654.1	6,298.9	7,583.8	6,259.0

Main import suppliers, 2009: United Arab Emirates, 9.9%; China, 9.3%; USA, 6.4%; Japan, 5.6%. Main export markets, 2009: China, 25.2%; India, 20.1%; Thailand, 18.4%; Singapore, 6.9%.

Oil and fish are major exports, the largest imports being food and live animals, and transport and machinery equipment. Oil and oil products account for nearly 90% of exports. A large transshipment and entrepôt trade is centred on Aden, which was made a free trade zone in 1991.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were 71,300 km of roads in 2005 (8.7% paved). In 2007 there were 777,700 vehicles in use.

Civil Aviation

There are international airports at Sana'a and Aden. In 2001 Sana'a handled 881,000 passengers (707,000 on international flights) and 15,900 tonnes of freight. The national carrier is Yemenia, which operates internal services and in 2003 had international flights to Abu Dhabi, Addis Ababa, Amman, Asmara, Bahrain, Beirut, Cairo, Damascus, Dar es Salaam, Djibouti, Doha, Dubai, Frankfurt, Jakarta, Jeddah, Khartoum, Kuala Lumpur, London, Marseille, Milan, Moroni, Mumbai, Paris, Riyadh and Rome. In 2003 Yemenia flew 18m. km, carrying 844,000 passengers (622,000 on international flights).

Shipping

In Jan. 2009 there were seven ships of 300 GT or over registered, totalling 17,000 GT. There are ports at Aden, Mokha, Hodeida, Mukalla and Nashtoon.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 1.1m. main (fixed) telephone lines in Yemen; mobile phone subscribers numbered 3.7m. in 2008 (16.1 per 100 persons). There were 600,000 PCs in use in 2006 and 370,000 internet users in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

A civil code based on Islamic law was introduced in 1992. Amnesty International reported that there were at least 41 executions in 2011 (at least 53 in 2010).

Education

In 2005 there were 17,993 children in pre-primary schools, 3.21m. pupils in primary schools and 1.46m. pupils in secondary schools. In 2006 there were 209,386 students in higher education. The adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 62.4% (79.9% among males but only 44.7% among females, one of the biggest differences in literacy rates between the sexes of any country).

In 2008 total expenditure on education came to 5.2% of GDP and accounted for 16.0% of total government expenditure.

Health

In 2003 there were 68 hospitals with 8,871 beds. There were 4,078 physicians, 222 dentists, 8,342 nurses and 750 pharmacists in 2001; and 385 midwives in 1994.

RELIGION

In 2001 there were some 18.05m. Muslims (mostly Sunnis) and approximately 20,000 followers of other religions.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

There are four sites under Yemeni jurisdiction that appear in the UNESCO World Heritage List. They are (with year entered on the list): the old walled city of Shibam (1982); the old city of Sana'a (1986); the historic town of Zabid (1993); and the Socotra Archipelago (2008).

Press

In 2006 there were three daily newspapers with a combined average daily circulation of 40,000.

Tourism

There were 336,000 foreign tourists in 2005, bringing revenue of US$262m.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

The earliest known inhabitants were nomadic bushmen. From the 4th century AD, Bantu tribes farmed the region and established villages. Copper was mined for weapons and tools and from the 11th century, trade developed with neighbouring regions in copper and textiles. From 1500–1900 the region was divided into four tribal kingdoms: the Kazembe-Lunda in the north, the Bemba in the northeast, the Chewa in the east and the Barotse, later known as the Lozi, in the west. An inland region, it was not penetrated by non-Africans until the late 18th century, when Portuguese traders arrived near Lake Mweru. The Scottish explorer David Livingstone followed in the mid-19th century, and in the 1880s the British colonialist and mining magnate, Cecil Rhodes, arrived.

As part of his expansion north from the Transvaal, Rhodes persuaded the British government to secure Bechuanaland in 1885, and in 1888 he obtained mining rights in the territory of the Ndebele, which reached to the Zambezi river. In 1890 the chief of the Lozi, Lewanika, granted Rhodes mining rights in Lozi territory (known as Barotseland) in return for British protection. In 1891 the British government granted Rhodes' British South Africa Company a charter to administer the area from the Zambezi river to Lake Tanganyika.

From 1900 the territory was administered as two separate protectorates, Northwestern and Northeastern Rhodesia. Lead, zinc and copper were discovered, attracting more European prospectors. In 1911 the two protectorates were merged to become Northern Rhodesia and in 1924 the British Crown took over direct administration, while the British South Africa Company retained mineral rights. The territory was governed through a legislative council whose members were elected by the European population. The detection of rich copper seams—known as the Copper Belt—led to a huge increase in mining activity. The European population grew tenfold to 40,000 over the next three decades. Meanwhile, the African majority (98% of the country) was increasingly voicing its opposition to European rule. In 1948 some African members were added to the legislative council. In the same year the country's first African political party, the Northern Rhodesian Congress, was established by members of welfare societies from mining and rural communities. Connected to the African National Congress (ANC), in 1951 it renamed itself the Northern Rhodesian African National Congress.

In 1953 the British government imposed a federation consisting of Northern Rhodesia, its southern self-governing neighbour Rhodesia and Nyasaland. The Federation was welcomed by most Europeans in the territories as a means of consolidating their economic and political control but was opposed by most Africans for the same reason. Political dissent grew, with each region pressing its own claims for independence. In 1958 Kenneth Kaunda led a breakaway group from the Northern Rhodesian ANC to found the more radical Zambian African National Congress. After he was jailed for leading a civil disobedience campaign, the United National Independence Party (UNIP) was formed and elected Kaunda its leader on his release in Jan. 1960. Membership grew rapidly, convincing the British to accept it as a negotiating partner. At a London conference in Dec. 1960, Kaunda and other UNIP members secured a timetable for independence.

Elections in 1962 resulted in a UNIP-ANC coalition. The Federation was dissolved on 31 Dec. 1963 and in general elections held that year, with universal adult suffrage, UNIP won a clear victory. On 24 Oct. 1964 the country declared independence as the Republic of Zambia, named after the Zambezi river. The government took over mineral rights and oversaw a period of prosperity until copper prices collapsed in the 1970s. Further difficulties were caused by UN-imposed sanctions on Rhodesia—a key trading partner for Zambia—and rising oil prices, so that by the late 1970s Zambia was greatly indebted to the IMF.

In response to domestic dissent, Kaunda brought in a series of centralizing and authoritarian measures, including a new constitution making Zambia a one-party state. Living standards fell as copper production, Zambia's biggest foreign exchange earner, almost halved. Food riots and widespread unrest resulted in the 1991 electoral victory of the Movement for Multi-Party Democracy (MMD). However, allegations of corruption dogged the MMD government throughout successive terms, while the economy remained weak. Privatization of the copper mines in 2000 and other market-orientated reforms in the early 2000s reduced inflation but food security remained a serious issue. Failed harvests in 2001 resulted in the country receiving food aid.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Zambia is bounded by the Democratic Republic of the Congo in the north, Tanzania in the northeast, Malawi in the east, Mozambique in the southeast, Zimbabwe and Namibia in the south, and by Angola in the west. The area is 752,612 sq. km (290,584 sq. miles). Provisional population (2010 census), 13,046,508; population density, 17.4 per sq. km. In 2005, 65.0% of the population were rural.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 15-24m.

The republic is divided into nine provinces. Area, provisional population at the 2010 census and chief towns:

Province	Area (in sq. km)	Population	Chief Town
Central	94,394	1,267,803	Kabwe
Copperbelt	31,328	1,958,623	Ndola
Eastern	69,106	1,707,731	Chipata
Luapula	50,567	958,976	Mansa

Province	Area (in sq. km)	Population	Chief Town
Lusaka	21,896	2,198,996	Lusaka
Northern	147,826	1,759,600	Kasama
North-Western	125,827	706,462	Solwezi
Southern	85,283	1,606,793	Livingstone
Western	126,386	881,524	Mongu

The capital is Lusaka, which had a census population in 2010 (provisional) of 1,742,979. Other major towns (with provisional 2010 census population in 1,000) are: Kitwe, 504; Ndola, 455; Kabwe, 203; Chingola, 180; Mufulira, 150; Livingstone 137; Luanshya, 130.

The population consists of over 70 Bantu-speaking ethnic groups, with the main groups being the Bemba (18%), Tonga (10%), Nyanja (8%) and Lozi (6%). The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

Estimates, 2008: births, 541,000; deaths, 218,000. Estimated birth rate in 2008 was 42.9 per 1,000 population; estimated death rate, 17.3. Zambia's life expectancy at birth in 2007 was 44.0 years for males and 45.0 for females. Life expectancy was declining for many years, largely owing to the huge number of people in the country with HIV, although it has now begun to rise again slowly. In 2009, 13.5% of all adults between 15 and 49 were infected with HIV. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 2.3%. Infant mortality, 2005, 104 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 5.8 births per woman.

CLIMATE

The climate is tropical, but has three seasons. The cool, dry one is from May to Aug., a hot dry one follows until Nov., when the wet season commences. Frosts may occur in some areas in the cool season. Lusaka, Jan. 70°F (21.1°C), July 61°F (16.1°C). Annual rainfall 33" (836 mm). Livingstone, Jan. 75°F (23.9°C), July 61°F (16.1°C). Annual rainfall 27" (673 mm). Ndola, Jan. 70°F (21.1°C), July 59°F (15°C). Annual rainfall 52" (1,293 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

Zambia has a unicameral legislature. In 2009 the number of seats in the National Assembly was increased from 159 to 280 with effect from the 2011 elections, with 240 members elected for a five-year term in single-member constituencies, 30 members elected by proportional representation and ten members appointed by the president. Candidates for election as president must have both parents born in Zambia (this excludes ex-president Kaunda). The constitution was adopted on 24 Aug. 1991 and was amended in 1996, shortly before the parliamentary and presidential elections. The amendment restricts the president from serving more than two terms of office.

National Anthem

'Lumbanyeni Zambia' ('Stand and Sing of Zambia'); words collective, tune by M. E. Sontonga.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Presidential elections took place on 20 Sept. 2011. Michael Sata (Patriotic Front/PF) won 42.0% of the vote, Rupiah Banda (Movement for Multi-Party Democracy) 35.4% and Hakainde Hichilema (United Party for National Development) 18.2%.

In the parliamentary elections held on the same day the Patriotic Front gained 61 of the 150 elected seats in the National Assembly; the Movement for Multi-Party Democracy took 55, the United Party for National Development 29, the Alliance for Democracy and Development 1 and the Forum for Democracy and Development also 1. Three seats went to independents and two were vacant. Turnout was 54.0%.

CURRENT LEADERS

Michael Chilufya Sata

Position

President

Introduction

Michael Sata has been head of state since 23 Sept. 2011. He appointed Guy Scott as his vice-president a week after taking office.

Early Life

Born in 1937, Sata was raised in Mpika in the Northern Province of what was then Northern Rhodesia. Before entering politics he worked as a policeman, railwayman and trade unionist. After Zambia won independence in 1964 he became a member of the ruling United National Independence Party until joining the Movement for Multi-Party Democracy (MMD) in 1991. In the 1990s he variously served as minister for local government, health and labour, as well as minister without portfolio.

When Levy Mwanawasa was chosen as the MMD's 2001 presidential candidate, Sata left to form the Patriotic Front. However, he made little impact at the polls and in parliamentary elections his new party won only a single seat. He stood for the presidency in 2006, finishing second behind Mwanawasa who secured a second term. Sata was arrested for making a false declaration of his assets when registering for the campaign but the charge was dropped. In 2007 he was deported on arrival in neighbouring Malawi on allegations that he was plotting a coup. Later the same year his passport was withdrawn by the Zambian authorities, who accused him of bypassing regulations.

After an apparent reconciliation with President Mwanawasa in May 2008, Sata suffered a heart attack. When Mwanawasa died in Aug. that year, Sata was banned from attending the funeral. On 30 Aug. 2008 he was unanimously chosen as the Patriotic Front's presidential candidate but lost to Rupiah Banda of the MMD.

At the presidential poll on 23 Sept. 2011, Sata gained 42% of the vote against Banda's 35% after a campaign marred by violence. Sata was sworn in to office in Lusaka within hours of the results being declared. His victory ended two decades of MMD rule.

Career in Office

Having previously expressed his admiration for Robert Mugabe, Sata (known as 'King Cobra' for his fiery rhetoric) was accused of authoritarianism. He in turn accused the electoral commission of plotting to rig the election with pre-marked ballots.

Sata campaigned on promises to help the nation's poor and fight corruption. He has pledged to reinstate a 25% windfall tax on mining revenues abolished by the MMD in 2009. Nonetheless, the kwacha dropped to a 12-month low against the US dollar following Sata's victory. He has encouraged foreign investment while demanding improved working conditions, having criticized the employment practices of companies from China, a heavy investor in Zambia's mining industries.

DEFENCE

In 2008 defence expenditure totalled US$262m. (US$22 per capita), representing 1.8% of GDP.

Army

Strength (2007) 13,500. There are also two paramilitary police units totalling 1,400.

Air Force

In 2007 the Air Force had 29 combat capable aircraft including F-6 (Chinese-built MiG-19s) and MiG-21s. Serviceability of most types is reported to be low. Personnel (2007) 1,600.

ECONOMY

In 2006 agriculture accounted for 20.9% of GDP, industry 32.9% and services 46.2%.

Overview

Zambia is among the world's poorest economies despite rich natural resources. Copper accounts for the majority of export earnings. The principal drivers of growth in the past decade have been strong macroeconomic performance and expansion of mining, construction and communications.

From 2001–09 GDP grew on average 5.4% per year but this has yet to translate into significant poverty reduction, with 59% of the population living below the poverty line. Zambia's aim of attaining middle-income status by 2030 requires average annual growth of 6–7%. Policy reforms, including a more-efficient pre-budget consultation process and increases in electricity tariffs, are expected to boost growth, but the economy remains heavily dependent on foreign aid and vulnerable to world copper and oil prices.

Currency

The unit of currency is the kwacha (ZMK) of 100 ngwee. Foreign exchange reserves were US$477m. in July 2005. In Dec. 1992 the official and free market exchange rates were merged and the kwacha devalued 29%. Inflation, which was 183.3% in 1993, was down to 9.0% in 2006. Rates have since risen slightly to 12.4% in 2008 and 13.4% in 2009. Total money supply in June 2005 was 2,140.3bn. kwacha.

Budget

The fiscal year is the calendar year. Revenues in 2007 totalled 10,095bn. kwacha and expenditures 12,034bn. kwacha. Tax revenues accounted for 77.3% of total revenue in 2007; education accounted for 16.9% of total expenditure, economic affairs 14.1%, and housing and community amenities 12.2%.

VAT is 16%.

Performance

Real GDP growth was 6.4% in 2009 and 7.6% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$16.2bn.

Banking and Finance

The central bank is the Bank of Zambia (Governor, Michael Gondwe). In 2003 there were five commercial banks, six foreign banks and four development banks. The Bank of Zambia monitors and supervises the operations of financial institutions. Banks and building societies are governed by the Banking and Financial Services Act 1994.

There is a stock exchange in Lusaka.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Zambia's carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels in 2008 were the equivalent of 0.3 tonnes per capita.

Electricity

Installed capacity in 2007 was 1.8m. kW. Production in 2007 was 9.85bn. kWh, almost exclusively hydro-electric; consumption per capita was 788 kWh.

Oil and Gas

Oil and gas were both discovered in the northwest of Zambia in 2006. Exploration licences have been issued both to local and to foreign companies.

Minerals

Minerals produced (in 1,000 tonnes): copper (2009), 697; cobalt (2009), 1.5; silver (2009 estimate), 6,000 kg; gold (2009 estimate), 3,100 kg. Zambia is well-endowed with gemstones, especially emeralds, amethysts, aquamarine, tourmaline and garnets. Zambia Consolidated Copper Mines, privatized in 2000, is the country's largest employer. In 2007, 276,000 tonnes of coal were produced.

Agriculture

70% of the population is dependent on agriculture. There were an estimated 5.26m. ha. of arable land in 2007 and 29,000 ha. of permanent crops. Principal agricultural products (2003 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): sugarcane, 1,800; maize, 1,161; wheat, 100; seed cotton, 62; sweet potatoes, 53; groundnuts, 42.

Livestock (2003 estimates): cattle, 2.6m.; goats, 1.3m.; pigs, 340,000; sheep, 150,000; chickens, 30m.

Forestry

Forests covered 42.45m. ha. in 2005, or 57.1% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 was 10.03m. cu. metres, most of it for fuel.

Fisheries

Total catch, 2005, approximately 65,000 tonnes (exclusively from inland waters).

INDUSTRY

In 2006 industry accounted for 32.9% of GDP, with manufacturing contributing 10.8%. Industrial production grew by 9.1% in 2006. Zambia's economy is totally dependent upon its mining sector. Other industries include construction, foodstuffs, beverages, chemicals and textiles.

Labour

The labour force totalled 3,165,200 in 2000 (59% males). 71.6% of the economically active population in 2000 were engaged in agriculture, 7.5% in community services and 6.8% in trade.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

In 2005 foreign debt was US$5,668m.

Imports and Exports

In 2007 imports were valued at US$3,971.1m. and exports at US$4,618.6m.

Imports declined every year from 1997 to 1999 before increasing by 12% in 2000, and exports declined every year from 1997 to 2000. However, between 2003 and 2007 there was a 150% increase in imports and exports increased by 370%. In 2007 copper provided 71% of all exports (by value). Since 1990 non-copper exports have increased in value from US$50m. to US$1.1bn.

The main import sources in 2007 were South Africa (47.4%), United Arab Emirates (6.4%), China (5.9%) and India (4.1%). Principal export markets were Switzerland (41.8%), South Africa (12.0%), Thailand (5.9%) and the Democratic Republic of the Congo (5.3%).

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

There were, in 2001, 91,440 km of roads, including 4,222 km of highway. 131,100 passenger cars were in use in 2007 and there were 75,500 trucks and vans.

Rail

In 2005 there were 1,271 km of the state-owned Zambia Railways (ZR) and 891 km of the Tanzania-Zambia (Tazara) Railway, both on 1,067 mm gauge. A 27-km stretch of railway linking Chipata in the east of the country with Mchinji in Malawi was opened in Aug. 2010. This links with the existing railway to Nacala, one of Mozambique's leading ports. ZR carried 0.8m. passengers and 1.7m. tonnes of freight in 2000.

Civil Aviation

The former flag carrier, Zambian Airways, operated internal flights and in 2007 flew to Dar es Salaam, Harare and Johannesburg as well as operating domestic services, but ceased flying in Jan. 2009. Lusaka is the principal international airport. In 2001 Lusaka International handled 410,000 passengers (359,000 on international flights) and 24,800 tonnes of freight. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Zambian-based carriers flew 2m. km, carrying 45,000 passengers (17,000 on international flights).

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 90,600 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscribers numbered 3,539,000 in 2008 (28.0 per 100 persons). Telecel (2) Ltd. has been licensed to run a mobile telecommunications service in addition to the Zambia Telecommunications Company (ZAMTEL) since 1996. Internet services are provided by Zambia Communications Systems (ZAMNET), a private company of ZAMTEL. There were 131,000 PCs in use in 2005 and some 700,000 internet users in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The Judiciary consists of the Supreme Court, the High Court and four classes of magistrates' courts; all have civil and criminal jurisdiction.

The Supreme Court hears and determines appeals from the High Court. Its seat is at Lusaka. The High Court exercises the powers vested in the High Court in England, subject to the High Court ordinance of Zambia. Its sessions are held where occasion requires, mostly at Lusaka and Ndola. All criminal cases tried by subordinate courts are subject to revision by the High Court.

The death penalty is authorized, the last execution having taken place in 1997. The population in penal institutions in Dec. 2005 was 14,347 (122 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Schooling is for nine years. In April 2002 then President Mwanawasa announced the reintroduction of universal free primary education, abolished under former President Chiluba. In 2007 there were 2,790,312 pupils in primary schools with 56,557 teaching staff and 607,296 pupils in secondary schools with 14,246 teaching staff.

There are three universities and a National Institute of Public Administration. The University of Zambia, at Lusaka, was founded in 1965 and had 10,122 students in 2007. Copperbelt University, at Kitwe, founded in 1987, had 4,273 students in 2007. Mulungushi University, near Kabwe, was founded in 2008.

The adult literacy rate in 2009 was estimated at 70.9% (80.6% among males and 61.3% among females).

In 2008 public expenditure on education came to 1.3% of GDP.

Health

In 2004 there were 1,264 physicians, 19,014 nurses, 2,996 midwives, 491 dentists and 1,039 pharmacists. There were 88 public hospitals in 2004, with a total of 22,800 beds (207 per 100,000 population).

RELIGION

In 1993 the president declared Zambia to be a Christian nation, but freedom of worship is a constitutional right. In 2001 there were 3.89m. Christians. In Feb. 2012 there was one Roman Catholic cardinal. Traditional beliefs are also widespread.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Zambia shares one site with Zimbabwe on the UNESCO World Heritage List: the Victoria Falls/Mosi-oa-Tunya (inscribed on the list in 1989), waterfalls on the Zambezi River.

Press

In 2008 there were three paid-for daily papers, The Post, the Times of Zambia and the Zambia Daily Mail. The Post is privately owned and the Times of Zambia and the Zambia Daily Mail state-owned.

Tourism

In 2005, 668,862 foreign tourists visited Zambia. Most visitors in 2005 were from Zimbabwe (148,436), followed by South Africa (110,272), Tanzania (65,881) and the UK (44,369). Spending by tourists in 2005 totalled US$98m.

Festivals

The N'cwala ceremony is held in Feb. by the Ngoni people to commemorate their arrival in Zambia in 1835 and the first produce of the year. The Kuomboka, in Feb. or March, is the canoe procession of the Lozi chief and his family from the palace at Lealui down the Zambezi to Limulunga for the rainy season. The National Fishing Competition is held at Lake Tanganyika in March. Likumbi Lya Mize, held at Mize in July, celebrates the Luvale tribe's cultural heritage. The Livingstone Cultural and Arts Festival, held annually in Sept. since 1994, brings together many of Zambia's tribes and their traditional rulers. Independence Day is celebrated on 24 Oct.

KEY HISTORICAL EVENTS

Archaeological evidence shows human settlement dating back several thousand years. The Khoisan people were early inhabitants of the region, followed from around AD 500 by the Bantu-speaking Gokomere. Trading civilizations flourished from the 9th century, culminating in the Mwene Mutapa Empire (Empire of Great Zimbabwe) from the 15th century. Its stronghold was a fortified stone town known as Great Zimbabwe ('houses of stone'), which was founded around 1000 and had a population of up to 18,000 at its peak. During the 16th and 17th centuries the area came under partial control by the Portuguese until the Shona people defeated them in 1693 and established the Rozwi Empire. This fell to the migrating Ndebele (Matabele) in 1834.

King Lobengula of Matabeleland signed the Rudd Concession on 13 Oct. 1888, giving the British mining rights. The British South Africa Company, under Cecil Rhodes, colonized the territory from 1890. European immigration increased after white settlers won the first Matabele war in 1893–94. Following unsuccessful Ndebele and Shona uprisings in 1896 and 1897, indigenous people were increasingly displaced from their land. In 1911 the region was divided into Southern and Northern Rhodesia (see ZAMBIA: Key Historical Events) and in 1923 became a self-governing colony. In 1953 Southern and Northern Rhodesia joined with Nyasaland to form the Federation of Rhodesia and Nyasaland, a move opposed by African nationalists who feared it would entrench white minority rule. The South Rhodesian African National Congress was founded in 1957 and campaigned for self-rule by the African majority until it was banned in 1960. After unrest mounted in Nyasaland and neighbouring states, the federation was dissolved on 31 Dec. 1963 and Southern Rhodesia reverted to self-governing colony status within the British Commonwealth under the name of Rhodesia.

On 11 Nov. 1965 Rhodesia's white-dominated government issued a unilateral declaration of independence (UDI) to forestall any British attempt to grant black majority rule. The British governor dismissed the prime minister, Ian Smith, and his cabinet, and the British government reasserted its formal responsibility for Rhodesia although the Smith cabinet was effectively left to run the country. Britain imposed economic sanctions, as did the UN in 1968. On 2 March 1970 the Smith government declared Rhodesia a republic and adopted a new constitution. From 1966–79 the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU) and its off-shoot, the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU)—both of which were banned—led a sporadic guerrilla campaign. On 3 March 1978 Smith signed a constitutional agreement with the internationally-backed nationalist leaders. A draft constitution was published in Jan. 1979 and accepted by the white electorate in a referendum. Following the Commonwealth Conference in Lusaka in Aug. 1979, elections in March 1980 resulted in victory for ZANU. Southern Rhodesia became the Republic of Zimbabwe on 18 April 1980.

Political conflict between ZANU and ZAPU supporters in Matabeleland led to allegations of atrocities by government forces in 1983–84. Land reform—the redistribution of good farming land from the minority white population to the African population—became a pressing issue. President Mugabe's government bought 3-5m. ha. of land from white farmers, with the UK funding the £44m. bill. However, only 70,000 families benefited amid allegations of government profiteering. In early 2000 a policy of land occupation began, with black settlers taking over white-owned farms by force. President Mugabe ignored international pressure to restore the rule of law and violence escalated. During campaigning for the 2002 presidential election, which failed to meet international democratic standards, the opposition leader, Morgan Tsvangirai, was charged with treason. Zimbabwe was suspended from the Commonwealth in March 2002 over the conduct of the election and when the suspension was extended in 2003 it pulled out altogether.

In the early 2000s agricultural production fell drastically, the result of drought and of the continuing land seizures. In Sept. 2005 President Mugabe nationalized all land and ended the right of landowners to challenge government expropriations in the courts. In May 2005 the government began the mass demolition of urban slums, claiming it would improve law and order. Around 700,000 people were left homeless. The conduct of parliamentary and senate elections in 2005, which resulted in victory for President Mugabe's party, was criticized by the international community and in March 2007 evidence that Morgan Tsvangirai had been tortured by police caused an international outcry. In 2006 and 2007 the population experienced mass hunger, with UNICEF estimating that 4m. needed aid. The country's AIDS pandemic continued to worsen in 2007, with 24% of children under 17 orphaned by the disease.

In 2008 elections held against a backdrop of hyperinflation, Mugabe's ZANU-PF lost their parliamentary majority—to the MDC—for the first time since independence. Mugabe retained the presidency when Morgan Tsvangirai, leader of the MDC, pulled out of a run-off, claiming his supporters had suffered intimidation at the hands of Mugabe's supporters. An international outcry forced Mugabe into talks with Tsvangirai that resulted in a power-sharing agreement in Sept. 2008. The agreement faltered over the allocation of ministries until the composition of the new cabinet was finalized in Feb. 2009. By the end of 2008 millions of civilians relied on food relief, while a cholera outbreak had claimed over 2,000 lives by Jan. 2009, with 1,500 new cases a day being reported.

TERRITORY AND POPULATION

Zimbabwe is bounded in the north by Zambia, east by Mozambique, south by South Africa and west by Botswana and the Caprivi Strip of Namibia. The area is 390,757 sq. km (150,871 sq. miles). The 1992 census population was 10,401,767 (51.2% female). 2002 census population, 11,631,657; density, 29.8 per sq. km. The United Nations population estimate for 2002 was 12,608,000. In 2005, 64.1% of the population were rural. Although the population is still rising, it is doing so at a lower rate than had been previously expected, partly owing to the large number of AIDS-related deaths and partly as a result of over 3m. Zimbabweans having left the country as President Mugabe's grip on power strengthened, with the vast majority choosing to live in South Africa.

The UN gives a projected population for 2015 of 14.00m.

There are eight provinces and two cities, Harare and Bulawayo, with provincial status. Area and population (2002 census):

	Area (sq. km)	Population
Bulawayo	479	676,650
Harare	872	1,896,134
Manicaland	36,459	1,568,930
Mashonaland Central	28,347	995,427
Mashonaland East	32,230	1,127,413
Mashonaland West	57,441	1,224,670
Masvingo	56,566	1,320,438
Matabeleland North	75,025	704,948
Matabeleland South	54,172	653,054
Midlands	49,166	1,463,993

Harare, the capital, had a population in 2002 of 1,435,784. Other main cities (with 2002 census populations) were Bulawayo (676,650), Chitungwiza (323,260), Mutare (170,466) and Gweru (140,806). The population is approximately 98% African, 1% mixed and Asian and there are around 70,000 whites. The main ethno-linguistic groups are the Shona (71%), Ndebele (16%), Ndaou (3%) and Nyanja (3%). Other smaller ones include Kalanga, Manyika, Tonga and Lozi.

The official language is English.

SOCIAL STATISTICS

2008 estimates: births, 373,000; deaths, 199,000. Rates (2008 estimates, per 1,000 population); birth, 29.9; death, 16.0. Annual population growth rate, 2000–08, 0.0%. Zimbabwe's expectation of life at birth in 2007 was 43.6 years for females and 42.6 for males, down from an average of 54 years in 1993. The sharp decline is largely attributed to the huge number of people in the country with HIV. In 2009, 14.3% of all adults between 15 and 49 were infected with HIV. Zimbabwe had both the lowest overall life expectancy of any country in 2007 and the lowest for males, although Afghanistan's life expectancy for females was lower. Infant mortality, 2005, 60 per 1,000 live births; fertility rate, 2008, 3.4 births per woman.

CLIMATE

Though situated in the tropics, conditions are remarkably temperate throughout the year because of altitude, and an inland position keeps humidity low. The warmest weather occurs in the three months before the main rainy season, which starts in Nov. and lasts until March. The cool season is from mid-May to mid-Aug. and, though days are mild and sunny, nights are chilly. Harare, Jan. 69°F (20.6°C), July 57°F (13.9°C). Annual rainfall 33" (828 mm). Bulawayo, Jan. 71°F (21.7°C), July 57°F (13.9°C). Annual rainfall 24" (594 mm). Victoria Falls, Jan. 78°F (25.6°C), July 61°F (16.1°C). Annual rainfall 28" (710 mm).

CONSTITUTION AND GOVERNMENT

The 1979 Constitution, with 18 amendments, provides for a single-chamber 150-member Parliament (House of Assembly), universal suffrage for citizens over the age of 18, an executive

President, an independent judiciary enjoying security of tenure and a Declaration of Rights, derogation from certain of the provisions being permitted, within specified limits, during a state of emergency. The House of Assembly is elected for five-year terms: up to and including the 2005 elections 120 members were elected by universal suffrage, ten were chiefs elected by all the country's tribal chiefs, 12 were appointed by the President and eight were provincial governors. A constitutional amendment of Aug. 2005 allowed for the reintroduction of a 66-member Senate, which had been abolished in 1987. It also enables the government to expropriate land without being challenged in court and to remove the right to a passport if it is deemed in the national interest. The constitution can be amended by a two-thirds parliamentary majority. A further amendment of Oct. 2007 provided for simultaneous parliamentary and presidential elections, reduced the presidential term from six to five years and enabled parliament to choose a successor to President Mugabe. The number of seats in the House of Assembly has been increased to 214 (210 directly elected for five-year terms and four ex officio members) and in the Senate to 100 (60 directly elected members, ten provincial governors, the president and deputy president of the Chiefs' Council, 16 chiefs, seven additional members and five senators appointed by the President).

In a referendum on 12–13 Feb. 2000 on the adoption of a new constitution 697,754 (54.6%) voted against and only 578,210 in favour. Under the new constitution Zimbabwe would have had an executive president and an executive prime minister sharing power, but many people felt that this would have strengthened President Mugabe's control over the country.

RECENT ELECTIONS

Parliamentary and presidential elections took place on 29 March 2008. Of the 207 seats contested in the House of Assembly the Movement for Democratic Change-Tsvangirai (MDC-T) won 99 seats, against 97 for the Zimbabwe African National Union-Patriotic Front (ZANU-PF). This was the first time that ZANU-PF, the party of incumbent president Robert Mugabe, had lost its legislative majority since the country gained independence in 1980. Of the remaining seats, ten were claimed by the Movement for Democratic Change-Mutambara (MDC-M), a splinter faction of the MDC, and one by an independent candidate. In the Senate elections, the 60 available seats were divided equally between the ZANU-PF (30 seats) and the combined opposition of the MDC-T (24) and the MDC-M (6).

The results of the presidential election were contested. On 13 April the Zimbabwe Electoral Commission announced a full recount of both parliamentary and presidential votes in 23 constituencies. Following the recount it was confirmed that Morgan Tsvangirai, leader of the MDC-T, had won the highest proportion of the votes, but had not gained the absolute majority necessary to avoid a second round run-off against incumbent president Robert Mugabe. On 22 June Tsvangirai withdrew from the second round citing a campaign of violence against the MDC's supporters. Mugabe won the second round on 27 June with 85.5% of votes cast, against 9.3% for Tsvangirai (as his name was still on the ballot). Under international pressure, Mugabe entered into talks with Tsvangirai, resulting in a power-sharing deal in Sept. 2008 that saw Mugabe remain president while Tsvangirai eventually became prime minister in Feb. 2009.

CURRENT GOVERNMENT

Executive President: Robert G. Mugabe; b. 1924 (ZANU-PF; sworn in 30 Dec. 1987, having previously been prime minister from 1980 to 1987; re-elected in April 1990, March 1996, March 2002 and June 2008).

Vice-Presidents: Joyce Mujuru (ZANU-PF); John Landa Nkomo (ZANU-PF).

In Feb. 2009 a coalition government was formed that in March 2012 comprised:

Prime Minister: Morgan Tsvangirai; b. 1952 (MDC-T; sworn in 11 Feb. 2009).

Deputy Prime Ministers: Arthur Mutambara (MDC-M); Thokozani Khuphe (MDC-T).

CURRENT LEADERS

Robert Mugabe

Position
President

Introduction

Robert Mugabe came to power as newly-independent Zimbabwe's (formerly Rhodesia) first prime minister in 1980, becoming president in 1987. Although initially hailed as a democratic reformer, his economic mismanagement of the country, violent electoral campaigns and controversial programme of land seizures have tarnished his image at home and abroad. He has defended his land reform programme as the conclusion of the process of decolonization, but his policies have been widely perceived as short-term political expediency for the maintenance of personal power. In the wake of the disputed presidential elections in 2008, Mugabe conceded to power-sharing with the opposition Movement for Democratic Change (MDC) after protracted negotiations, but doubts remained over his willingness to relax his autocratic grip on the country.

Early Life

The son of a carpenter, Robert Gabriel Mugabe was born 21 Feb. 1924 at Kutama mission, northwest of Harare. After an early education at a Roman Catholic mission school, he studied at the University College of Fort Hare, South Africa, marking the beginning of an academic career boasting seven university degrees, three of which he completed during imprisonment. He worked as a primary school teacher in Ghana from 1956–60 when he returned to Rhodesia and joined Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU). In 1963 he became a founding member of the breakaway Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU) with Rev. Ndabaningi Sithole. A year later Mugabe was arrested for subversion and imprisoned, without trial, for ten years. Despite imprisonment, he remained politically active and was able to orchestrate, in 1974, a coup against Sithole to become party leader. In 1975, freed from prison, Mugabe joined Nkomo as joint leader of the Patriotic Front of Zimbabwe which waged a guerrilla war against Ian Smith's white Rhodesian Front government. In 1980 independence was achieved and parliamentary elections took place in which Mugabe, at the head of ZANU, won a landslide victory to become prime minister.

Career in Office

In office Mugabe appeared set to usher in a bright new era for the country. Having built a coalition government with ZAPU, he adopted a conciliatory stance towards the white, landowning minority. He introduced higher wages, credit programmes and food subsidies for poor farmers, a better infrastructure and equal land rights for women. Reform in the education system saw primary school enrolment trebled and secondary school enrolment increased five-fold during the first ten years of his rule (with Zimbabwe laying claim to the highest literacy rate of any African nation).

Troubles began in 1982 when ethnic turmoil between the Shona majority (represented by ZANU) and the Ndebele minority (represented by ZAPU) broke out after Mugabe dismissed Nkomo and ZAPU from government. The ensuing violence prompted much of the white population to emigrate, in turn creating an economic downturn. Centred in Matabeleland, the conflict drew international attention after the discovery of mass graves and alleged atrocities.

In 1987 Mugabe won the presidential elections and set about bringing ZAPU back into government. A unity agreement was signed and Nkomo became senior minister in a newly-formed Zimbabwe African National Union-Patriotic Front (ZANU-PF) government. Mugabe was again re-elected in 1990 (in polling marred by violence) and 1996, but throughout the 1990s he adopted a series of unpopular policies. His military support for President Kabila's beleaguered government in the Democratic Republic of the Congo led to strikes within his own country. An announcement of pay increases for himself and his party officials in 1998 prompted rioting, coming as it did amidst a growing economic crisis. Plans to raise food and fuel prices and to introduce a tax to support war veterans from the 1970s were blocked by trades unions and further diminished his popularity.

In Feb. 2000 Mugabe lost a referendum in which he sought to increase his presidential powers. Blaming the white minority for the defeat, he then targeted the issue of land ownership. A programme of violent land seizure followed, with black settlers taking over white-owned farms. A court order to halt the seizures was ignored and Mugabe subsequently replaced high court judges with political allies. In June 2000 parliamentary elections were held. Mugabe won the elections, but only by a narrow margin and after a campaign of intimidation which led to more than 30 deaths.

Mugabe was re-elected president in March 2002. Final results gave him 56.2% of the vote against 42.0% for opposition rival, Morgan Tsvangirai, the leader of the MDC. However, the elections failed to meet international democratic standards. They were preceded by violence against opposition supporters, the passing of a law limiting press freedom, the withdrawal of the European Union monitoring team and the arrest of Mugabe's main political rival on charges of treason. As a result, Zimbabwe was suspended from the Commonwealth and a range of targeted sanctions from the UK, the USA and the EU were placed on Mugabe and his cabinet. In March 2003 the USA froze Zimbabwean assets and forbade US citizens from undertaking economic dealings with Mugabe and his government colleagues.

The state of political uncertainty and violence following the 2000 referendum damaged investor confidence, causing export prices to decline and unemployment and food shortages to rise. Coupled with this, severe drought in early 2002 raised the threat of mass starvation. In April 2002 Mugabe declared a state of disaster, allowing him the temporary use of 'extraordinary measures' to cope with the situation. Although little was done in practical terms to relieve the threat of famine, Mugabe pushed ahead with the land redistribution programme. In June 2002 he ordered almost 3,000 white farmers to leave their land within 45 days, or face imprisonment. In Sept. 2002 new legislation was passed allowing farmers only a week's notice after receiving an eviction order. In March 2003 Amnesty International reported that up to 500 people had been arrested following a general strike, with members of the MDC especially targeted. In the same month the Commonwealth extended Zimbabwe's suspension until at least Dec. 2003. In June 2003 police detained Tsvangirai, who had called for mass popular protests against Mugabe's government, and in Jan. 2004 he went on trial for treason. Although he was acquitted in Oct. 2004 of charges relating to an assassination plot against Mugabe, he still faced a separate treason charge. Meanwhile, relations with the international community worsened. In Dec. 2003 the Commonwealth (despite South African disapproval) again extended Zimbabwe's suspension, prompting Mugabe's withdrawal from the organization.

At the parliamentary elections in March 2005, ZANU-PF took 78 of 150 seats. The MDC claimed that there had been widespread vote rigging and intimidation. Then, in May, Mugabe's government launched a demolition of urban slum dwellings and illegal settlements, including business premises, around the country without compensation. The policy drew international condemnation as an estimated 700,000 people (according to the UN) lost their homes, or source of livelihood, or both. In Aug. 2005 parliament approved amendments to the constitution, including the reintroduction of the Senate, which had been abolished in 1990. Other changes provided for the government to confiscate passports of those deemed to pose a threat to national security and to strengthen control over land redistribution with no right of appeal. Also in Aug., the authorities dropped the remaining treason charge against Tsvangirai. ZANU-PF won the Nov. 2005 elections to the new Senate, securing an overwhelming majority of 66 seats amid low voter turnout and opposition calls for a boycott.

Repression of the MDC and wider opposition intensified from 2006, particularly in March 2007 when Tsvangirai was beaten by security forces and hospitalized after his arrest at a political rally.

A meeting of regional leaders subsequently invited South Africa's president, Thabo Mbeki, to mediate in Zimbabwe's political and economic crisis. In Dec. 2007 Mugabe's presence at the EU-Africa summit in Lisbon provoked criticism of his regime's abuse of human rights.

Mugabe was endorsed as the ZANU-PF candidate for the March 2008 presidential (and parliamentary) elections. After a relatively peaceful campaign the MDC made a strong showing and ZANU-PF lost its legislative majority. Tsvangirai also claimed outright victory in the presidential race but Mugabe challenged the results. Despite international pressure, the electoral commission delayed the publication of results and a second round run-off was scheduled. There followed an orchestrated campaign of brutality against supporters of the opposition, which led to the withdrawal of Tsvangirai from the race in June. The international community was united in its condemnation of Mugabe's actions. The electoral crisis took place against a backdrop of economic meltdown.

Under international pressure, talks between Mugabe and Tsvangirai were brokered in Aug. 2008, which resulted in a deal the following month that saw Mugabe remain as president while Tsvangirai was to become executive prime minister. However, implementation of the agreement then stalled for several months over the allocation of cabinet posts between ZANU-PF and the MDC. The political deadlock was further exacerbated by the collapse of the economy and of basic services, which contributed to a serious outbreak of the disease cholera in Nov. 2008. In Jan. 2009, after months of acrimony and pressure from neighbouring states, Mugabe agreed to put power-sharing into effect and on 11 Feb. Tsvangirai was sworn in as prime minister. However, the failure of Mugabe's military and security service chiefs to attend the inauguration ceremony and the controversial detention of an MDC ministerial nominee did not represent an auspicious start for the new unity government.

In Sept. 2009 the EU sent its first high-level delegation to Zimbabwe for several years but refused to lift targeted sanctions. Donors were also cautious about releasing aid money to the government, fearing that it could be misused. In Oct. Mugabe called for improved relations with the West but added that the lifting of sanctions, which he blamed for ruining the country's economy, was an essential prerequisite. Mugabe's supporters had meanwhile continued to harass MDC activists, leading in Oct. to a stand-off between Mugabe and Tsvangirai in which the latter led an MDC boycott of cabinet meetings. The boycott was called off, however, after the intervention of the Southern African Development Community, which insisted that all 'outstanding issues' in the power-sharing pact be finally settled.

In Dec. 2009 Mugabe was re-elected as ZANU-PF leader for a further five years at a party congress in Harare. In 2010 he became increasingly critical and outspoken about the shortcomings of the power-sharing agreement and called for fresh elections (although no decision had been reached on an early poll by April 2012). He was meanwhile endorsed at the ZANU-PF congress in Dec. 2010 as the party's presidential election candidate. In Feb. 2011 the EU eased some sanctions on Zimbabwe, but expressed concern over continuing political violence and intimidation and ZANU-PF's failure to honour the unity government pact.

Morgan Tsvangirai

Position

Prime Minister

Introduction

Morgan Tsvangirai is leader of the Movement for Democratic Change (MDC), the only significant opposition to President Robert Mugabe's regime since independence was established in 1980. Tsvangirai became an increasingly credible alternative to Mugabe as dissatisfaction with the ever more authoritarian regime and its vast mishandling of the national economy grew. This electoral viability made Tsvangirai and his supporters a target for violence and intimidation, culminating in the nationwide bloodshed that followed the disputed 2008 presidential elections. Subsequently, however, the implementation of a power-sharing agreement brokered with Mugabe under international pressure led to Tsvangirai's inauguration as executive prime minister of a unity government in Feb. 2009. Despite some progress in Zimbabwe's economic fortunes, political instability has nevertheless persisted and Tsvangirai's ability to carry out his executive functions has been impeded.

Early Life

Tsvangirai was born in 1952 in Buhera, then part of Southern Rhodesia. He left school at 16 and took a job in a textile factory and then at a nickel mine in Bindura, eventually becoming general foreman and branch chairman of the Associated Mineworkers' Union (AMU). A strong supporter of Mugabe's ZANU-PF, Tsvangirai was brought into the first post-independence government. However, Tsvangirai's lack of direct involvement in the guerrilla war that led to the end of minority white rule in 1980 has been used against him by Mugabe's supporters.

In 1985 Tsvangirai left to become vice president of the AMU, having been voted onto the national executive two years earlier. In 1987 he was named secretary-general of the Southern Africa Miners' Federation. After a period studying in the UK, Tsvangirai was named general secretary of the Zimbabwe Congress of Trade Unions (ZCTU) in 1988. Six years later he became secretary general of the Southern African Trade Union co-ordinating council.

Under his leadership the ZCTU began to dissent from the ZANU-PF line. In the late-1980s and early-1990s Tsvangirai and Mugabe repeatedly clashed, notably over a programme of structural reform adopted by Mugabe. Though in line with IMF demands, Tsvangirai condemned the programme as an attack on workers' rights. He led several mass protests against the proposals, which forced Mugabe to back down. Tsvangirai was later jailed on unproven charges of being a South African spy.

Over the course of the 1990s the ZCTU became the focus of opposition to Mugabe's government. In Sept. 1999 Tsvangirai formed the MDC to formally challenge the dominance of ZANU-PF. In Feb. 2000 the MDC co-ordinated the defeat in a referendum of a government-championed constitutional amendment that would have extended Mugabe's personal power. It represented Mugabe's first significant defeat in a public vote since taking office. In Sept. 2000 Tsvangirai was charged with treason for comments made against Mugabe but the charges were later judged to be unconstitutional.

At the parliamentary elections of June 2000 the MDC won 57 of 150 seats, only five behind ZANU-PF. Mugabe's pre-election campaign received widespread international condemnation as white-owned farms were illegally seized and opposition supporters intimidated. Tsvangirai was defeated at the presidential elections of March 2002, winning 42.1% against Mugabe's 56.1%. However, observers claimed the elections failed to meet international standards and it was widely believed that Tsvangirai would have triumphed in a free vote.

Shortly before the election a video tape was exhibited allegedly showing Tsvangirai discussing an assassination attempt against Mugabe. Tsvangirai was charged with treason, carrying a possible death sentence, and his trial began in Feb. 2003. In June 2003 he called for mass action against Mugabe via a general strike and anti-government rallies. The MDC was targeted by government forces in the preceding weeks and Tsvangirai was arrested and subjected to new treason charges. He was acquitted of all charges in 2004.

Mugabe's regime met with international condemnation in March 2007 when Tsvangirai suffered serious head injuries whilst in police custody. More than 50 opposition leaders were arrested during a prayer meeting although no-one was charged. In June Tsvangirai toured Western Europe with rival opposition leader Arthur Mutambara, calling on European politicians to support their struggle for democracy.

In the general election of 29 March 2008 the MDC gained a majority in the House of Assembly, removing ZANU-PF from overall parliamentary control for the first time since Zimbabwe gained independence. Tsvangirai claimed the largest number of votes in the presidential election of the same date, winning 47.9% of the ballot against 43.2% for President Mugabe (according to the Zimbabwe Electoral Commission). However, the margin of victory was disputed, with the MDC claiming that Tsvangirai had gained the absolute majority required to avoid a second round run-off against the incumbent. These claims were rejected by the government and a run-off was scheduled for 27 June. There followed a sustained campaign of intimidation and violence against supporters of Tsvangirai. The MDC reported the death of 85 and the displacement of 200,000 of its followers over the following weeks. Five days before the ballot, having been forced to take refuge in the Dutch embassy, Tsvangirai withdrew from the race, professing that he could no longer force the Zimbabwean people to 'suffer this torture'. Over the following days he appealed to the international community, contending that 'the words of indignation from global leaders [must] be backed by the moral rectitude of military force'. Nevertheless, he subsequently entered into talks with Mugabe in Aug. 2008, which resulted in a deal the following month that provided for Mugabe to remain as president with Tsvangirai taking the premiership.

Career in Office

Implementation of the power-sharing deal was hampered by disagreements over the allocation of ministerial portfolios in a unity government until the end of Jan. 2009 when Tsvangirai accepted an arrangement giving the Movement for Democratic Change-Tsvangirai/MDC-T and the Movement for Democratic Change-Mutambara/MDC-M 16 and four posts respectively in a 35-member cabinet. On 11 Feb. Tsvangirai was sworn in as prime minister. However, there remained deep-seated domestic and international reservations about the viability of the new government, given the animosity between prime minister and president, Mugabe's autocratic track record and the conspicuous absence of the pro-Mugabe leaders of the security forces from Tsvangirai's inauguration ceremony.

With the finance portfolio under MDC control, the use of foreign currency was authorized, effectively replacing the worthless Zimbabwean dollar by the US dollar and South African rand and helping to bring about an end to years of hyperinflation. During a tour of the USA and Europe in June 2009, Tsvangirai successfully lobbied Western donors and the IMF to restore aid for essential services, although they refused to lift sanctions or release more substantive aid until the new administration had undertaken political and other reforms.

However, progress towards a new constitution was hindered by further political wrangling and in Oct. 2009 Tsvangirai temporarily boycotted meetings of the cabinet in protest at Mugabe's failure to honour agreements. The MDC meanwhile continued to face violence and intimidation from ZANU-PF supporters.

In Jan. 2010 Tsvangirai again urged the easing of targeted international sanctions in recognition of the unity government's economic record. However, the EU subsequently renewed its sanctions for another year, stating that the government had not made enough progress. Meanwhile, relations between Tsvangirai and Mugabe continued to deteriorate as the latter has sought to sideline the prime minister and maintain control over executive decision-making. In 2011 speculation about early presidential elections prompted renewed ZANU-PF violence. Tsvangirai warned that crucial reforms were needed before credible elections could take place.

On 6 March 2009 Tsvangirai survived a road accident in which his wife, Susan, died.

DEFENCE

In 2006 military expenditure totalled US$156m. (US$13 per capita), representing 2.8% of GDP.

Army

Strength in 2007 was estimated at 25,000. There were a further 21,800 paramilitary police including a police support unit of 2,300.

Air Force

The Air Force (ZAF) had a strength in 2007 of about 4,000 personnel. The headquarters of the ZAF and the main ZAF stations are in Harare; the second main base is at Gweru, with many secondary airfields throughout the country. There were 45 combat capable aircraft (including Hunters and F-7s (MiG-21)) in 2007 although the serviceability of some aircraft was in doubt, and six attack helicopters.

ECONOMY

Agriculture accounted for 19% of GDP in 2007, industry 24% and services 57%.

Since Robert Mugabe came to power in 1980 the economy has collapsed with the country experiencing sustained periods of roaring inflation and heavy unemployment. Shortages of food and other necessities culminated in the authorities making an international appeal for food in July 2001. In Feb. 2000 the country ran out of gasoline because it could not pay the import bills.

Zimbabwe's 'shadow' (black market) economy is estimated to constitute approximately 63% of the country's official GDP, one of the highest percentages of any country in the world.

Overview

At independence Zimbabwe was the second largest economy in Africa but the macroeconomic situation has deteriorated sharply since 1998. Between 1999 and 2008 output declined by more than 40%. According to the IMF the economic crisis was attributable to loose fiscal and monetary policies, an overvalued fixed exchange rate, excessive administrative controls and regulations, and chronic shortages of goods and foreign exchange. The effect of these policies has been magnified by collapsing health and education systems, the HIV pandemic, the fast track land reform programme and recurring droughts.

In Feb. 2009 the government launched a Short-Term Emergency Recovery Program focused on stabilizing the economy. In May 2010 the Medium Term Plan 2010–15 was announced, with the goals of restoring the economy to its 1990 level and developing the information technology and mining industries.

In 2007–08 Zimbabwe experienced hyperinflation as a result of excessive money creation. An extremely large public sector, insufficient external financing, the collapse of agricultural and mining exports and an unsustainable external debt burden fuelled this rapid monetary expansion. Most Western donors reduced or withdrew operations, with financial support confined to humanitarian aid. While China remains a major donor of both finance and food, it made some aid cuts in 2007 under pressure from Western governments. The government subsequently countered hyperinflation by eliminating the use of the Zimbabwe dollar in 2009, removing price controls and adopting a multi-currency regime, which is scheduled to remain in place until at least the end of 2012. The economy grew for the first time in a decade in 2009 while FDI also increased.

Nonetheless, unemployment and poverty rates remain high. Despite boasting several major attractions, tourism has declined since 2000 as a result of internal crises, with numerous airlines suspending flights to the country. Zimbabwe is heavily dependent on aid to meet basic needs, with the IMF allocating US$328m. to the country in Feb. 2010. Political uncertainty remains a major impediment to growth.

Currency

The use of the Zimbabwean dollar as an official currency was effectively abandoned on 12 April 2009. Currencies such as the South African rand, the Botswana pula, the pound sterling and the US dollar are used instead. Until 12 April 2009 the unit of currency was the Zimbabwe fourth dollar (ZWL), introduced on 2 Feb. 2009, with 12 zeros being removed to make 1trn. dollars (ZWR) equal to one new dollar. The Zimbabwe third dollar (ZWR) had replaced the Zimbabwe second dollar (ZWD) on 1 Aug. 2008, with a conversion rate of 1 revalued dollar = 10bn. old dollars (ZWD). The currency was devalued 17% in Jan. 1994 and made fully convertible. Its value dropped by 65% in 1998. It was devalued again in Aug. 2000 by 24%, in May 2005 by 45% and in July 2005 by 94%. It was further devalued by 60% in July 2006 and the following day the Zimbabwean new (second) dollar became the new currency. Inflation, which was 18.9% in 1997, rose to 133.2% in 2002 and 6,723.7% in 2007. The last official annual rate calculated in Zimbabwe dollars was 231,150,888.9% in July 2008, although the Central Statistical Office released monthly inflation rates calculated in US dollars for Oct. and Nov. 2009 of 0.8% and -0.1% respectively. Total money supply was Z$425,445.0bn. in Dec. 2007, up from Z$0.4bn. in Dec. 2002 and Z$44.7bn. in Dec. 2005.

Budget

Revenues in 2009 totalled US$933.6m. and expenditures US$920.9m. Tax revenues accounted for 94.5% of total revenue in 2009; current expenditures accounted for 87.3% of total expenditure. VAT was reduced from 17.5% to 15% in Jan. 2006.

Performance

Real GDP growth was negative every year from 2002 through to 2008. The economy contracted by 9.8% in 2002, 17.2% in 2003, 6.9% in 2004, 2.2% in 2005, 3.5% in 2006, 3.7% in 2007 and 17.7% in 2008. However, there was growth of 6.0% in 2009 and 9.0% in 2010. Total GDP in 2010 was US$7.5bn.

Banking and Finance

The Reserve Bank of Zimbabwe is the central bank (established 1965; Governor, Dr Gideon Gono). It acts as banker to the government and to the commercial banks, is the note-issuing authority and co-ordinates the application of the government's monetary policy. The Zimbabwe Development Bank, established in 1983 as a development finance institution, is 30.6% government-owned. In 2003 there were seven commercial and four merchant banks. In 1997 there were five registered finance houses, three of which are subsidiaries of commercial banks.

In Aug. 2003 Zimbabwe's banks ran out of banknotes as inflation reached 360%.

There is a stock exchange in Harare.

ENERGY AND NATURAL RESOURCES

Environment

Carbon dioxide emissions from the consumption and flaring of fossil fuels were the equivalent of 1.0 tonnes per capita in 2008.

Electricity

Installed capacity was 2.0m. kW in 2007. Production in 2007 was 9.18bn. kWh. Consumption per capita in 2007 was 887 kWh.

Minerals

The mining sector accounts for about 4% of GDP. 2006 production: coal, 2.11m. tonnes; chromite (gross weight), 700,000 tonnes; asbestos, 97,000 tonnes; nickel, 8,825 tonnes; gold, 11.4 tonnes. Diamond production in 2005 totalled 251,152 carats.

A huge diamond field was discovered near Mutare in 2006 that the government believes could produce up to a fifth of global diamond output.

Agriculture

Agriculture is the largest employer, providing jobs for 25% of the workforce. In 2002 there were an estimated 3.22m. ha. of arable land and 0.13m. ha. of permanent crops. Approximately 117,000 ha. were irrigated in 2002. There were about 24,000 tractors in 2002 and 800 harvester-threshers.

A constitutional amendment providing for the compulsory purchase of land for peasant resettlement came into force in March 1992. A provision to seize white-owned farmland for peasant resettlement was part of the government's new draft constitution that was rejected in the referendum of Feb. 2000. Various deadlines were given for white farmers to abandon their property during Aug. and Sept. 2002. The government claims that 300,000 landless black Zimbabweans have been resettled on seized land.

The staple food crop is maize, but 2003 production (at 803,000 tonnes) was less than a half of the 2000 figure. Tobacco is the most important cash crop, although production fell from 237,000 tonnes in 2000 to 68,000 tonnes in 2004. Production of other leading crops, 2002, in 1,000 tonnes: sugarcane, 4,100; seed cotton, 200; cassava, 175; wheat, 150; cottonseed, 127; groundnuts, 110; oranges, 93; bananas, 85; soybeans, 83; sorghum, 80; cotton lint, 72.

Livestock (2003 estimates): cattle, 5.75m.; goats, 2.97m.; sheep, 610,000; pigs, 605,000; chickens, 22m. Livestock products (2003 estimates, in 1,000 tonnes): milk, 280; meat, 206.

Forestry

In 2005 forests covered 17.54m. ha., or 45.3% of the total land area. Timber production in 2007 was 9.23m. cu. metres.

Fisheries

Trout, prawns and bream are farmed to supplement supplies of fish caught in dams and lakes. The catch in 2005 was approximately 13,000 tonnes (all from inland waters).

INDUSTRY

Metal products account for over 20% of industrial output. Important agro-industries include food processing, textiles, furniture and other wood products.

Labour

The labour force in 1996 totalled 5,281,000 (56% males). Unemployment in March 2007 was around 80%.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE

Foreign debt was US$4,257m. in 2005.

Imports and Exports

Imports (c.i.f.) in 2010 were US$9,051.5m. (US$3,526.8m. in 2009); exports (f.o.b.), US$3,199.2m. (US$2,268.9m. in 2009).

Main imports in 2004 (in US$1m.): machinery and transport equipment, 581.7; manufactured goods, 370.3; food and livestock, 282.2; petroleum and petroleum products, 278.1; chemicals and related products, 270.6. Main exports in 2004: tobacco and tobacco manufactures, 443.3; textile fibres, 243.4; metalliferous ore and scrap metal, 212.9; iron and steel 211.5.

Main import suppliers, 2005: Zambia, 40.9%; South Africa, 15.0%; Mozambique, 9.9%; Botswana, 5.0%; Kuwait, 4.0%. Main export destinations, 2005: South Africa, 41.5%; USA, 6.9%; Switzerland, 6.4%; Zambia, 5.6%; UK, 5.3%.

COMMUNICATIONS

Roads

The road network covers some 97,000 km but much of it is in poor condition. Number of vehicles in use, 2007: passenger cars, 1,214,100; lorries and vans, 186,800; buses and coaches, 15,600; motorcycles and mopeds, 109,000. There were 1,037 road accident fatalities in 2006.

Rail

In 2005 the National Railways of Zimbabwe had 2,759 km (1,067 mm gauge) of route ways (483 km electrified). In 2005 the railways carried 3m. passengers and 6.1m. tonnes of freight (including the Beitbridge-Bulawayo Railway).

Civil Aviation

There are three international airports: Harare (the main airport), Bulawayo and Victoria Falls. Air Zimbabwe, the state-owned national carrier, operates domestic services and in 2003 flew to Blantyre, Johannesburg, Lilongwe, London, Lusaka, Mauritius and Nairobi. In 2003 scheduled airline traffic of Zimbabwe-based carriers flew 6m. km, carrying 201,000 passengers (102,000 on international flights). In 1999 Harare handled an estimated 1,276,000 passengers (995,000 on international flights).

Shipping

Zimbabwe's outlets to the sea are Maputo and Beira in Mozambique, Dar es Salaam, Tanzania and the South African ports.

Telecommunications

In 2008 there were 348,000 main (fixed) telephone lines; mobile phone subscribers numbered 1,654,700 in 2008 (13.3 per 100 persons). There were 865,000 PCs in use in 2006 and 1,421,000 internet users in 2008.

SOCIAL INSTITUTIONS

Justice

The general common law of Zimbabwe is the Roman Dutch law as it applied in the Colony of the Cape of Good Hope on 10 June 1891, as subsequently modified by statute. Provision is made by statute for the application of African customary law by all courts in appropriate cases.

The death penalty is authorized. In 2003 there were four executions.

The Supreme Court consists of the Chief Justice and at least two Supreme Court judges. It is the final court of appeal. It exercises appellate jurisdiction in appeals from the High Court and other courts and tribunals; its only original jurisdiction is that conferred on it by the Constitution to enforce the protective provisions of the Declaration of Rights. The Court's permanent seat is in Harare but it also sits regularly in Bulawayo.

The High Court is also headed by the Chief Justice, supported by the Judge President and an appropriate number of High Court judges. It has full original jurisdiction, in both Civil and Criminal cases, over all persons and all matters in Zimbabwe. The Judge President is in charge of the Court, subject to the directions of the Chief Justice. The Court has permanent seats in both Harare and Bulawayo and sittings are held three times a year in three other principal towns.

Regional courts, established in Harare and Bulawayo but also holding sittings in other centres, exercise a solely criminal jurisdiction which is intermediate between that of the High Court and the Magistrates' courts. Magistrates' courts, established in 20 centres throughout the country, and staffed by full-time professional magistrates, exercise both civil and criminal jurisdiction.

Primary courts consist of village courts and community courts. Village courts are presided over by officers selected for the purpose from the local population, sitting with two assessors. They deal with specific classes of civil cases and have jurisdiction only where African customary law is applicable. Community courts are presided over by officers in full-time public service, who may also be assisted by assessors. They have jurisdiction in all civil cases determinable by African customary law and also deal with appeals from village courts. They also have limited criminal jurisdiction in respect of petty offences.

The population in penal institutions in June 2007 was 17,967 (136 per 100,000 of national population).

Education

Education is compulsory. 'Manageable' school fees were introduced in 1991; primary education had hitherto been free to all. All instruction is given in English. In 2006 there were 2,445,520 pupils at primary schools (64,001 teaching staff) and 831,488 pupils at secondary schools (33,964 teaching staff in 2003). In May 2004 the 45 private schools were closed down for increasing fees without state approval although they have for the most part since reopened. Private school fees are out of reach of the majority of families. Tens of thousands of teachers have left Zimbabwe and thousands more have left the profession. In 2009 the adult literacy rate was an estimated 91.9%. Both the overall rate and the rate for males are the highest in Africa.

There are 12 universities, the oldest and largest of which is the University of Zimbabwe, founded in 1952. Although formerly very successful, the university has experienced a series of problems ranging from staff shortages to electricity supply issues and remained closed during much of 2008.

In 2003 there were 55,689 students in tertiary education.

Health

There were 30 hospital beds per 10,000 inhabitants in 2006. All mission health institutions get 100% government grants-in-aid for recurrent expenditure. In 2004 there were 2,086 physicians, 310 dentistry personnel and 9,357 nursing and midwifery personnel. It is estimated that one in three adults are HIV infected.

Welfare

It is a statutory responsibility of the government in many areas to provide: processing and administration of war pensions and old age pensions; protection of children; administration of remand, probation and correctional institutions; registration and supervision of welfare organizations.

RELIGION

In 2001, 4.58m. persons were African Christians, 1.40m. Protestants, 1.09m. Roman Catholics and 870,000 followers of other religions. There were also 3.43m. followers of animist beliefs in 2001.

CULTURE

World Heritage Sites

Zimbabwe has five sites on the UNESCO World Heritage List: Mana Pools National Park, Sapi and Chewore Safari Areas (inscribed on the list in 1984); the Great Zimbabwe National Monument (1986); the Khambi Ruins National Monument (1986); and Matobo Hills (2003).

Zimbabwe shares with Zambia the Victoria Falls/Mosi-oa-Tunya (1989), waterfalls on the Zambezi River.

Press

In 2005 there were three daily newspapers, all controlled by the government, with a combined circulation of 125,000. In Jan. 2002 parliament passed an Access to Information Bill restricting press freedom, making it an offence to report from Zimbabwe unless registered by a state-appointed commission. In Sept. 2003 the independent Daily News was shut down for contraventions of the new press law. Zimbabwe's High Court ordered the government to allow its reopening but the order was ignored.

Tourism

There were 1,559,000 foreign tourists in 2005 (down from 1,854,000 in 2004); spending by tourists totalled US$99m.

Festivals

Of particular importance are the Harare International Festival of the Arts (April) and the Bulawayo Music Festival (May). The Zimbabwe International Film Festival is held in Harare in Aug./Sept.

THE STATESMAN'S YEARBOOK ONLINE, IN PRINT AND INDISPENSIBLE

The Statesman's Yearbook features extensive updated profiles on every country in the world. Each profile includes a concise geographic, historic, economic, political, social and cultural overview of the country together with essential statistics.

It includes:

- Detailed maps of all 194 countries
- Biographic profiles of all current leaders
- Economic overviews for every country
- Over 1,700 links to key national websites
- Our complete archive from 1864 – a unique insight into a changing world

At a time when opinion and propaganda can be overwhelming, The Statesman's Yearbook remains the first point of reference for reliable, concise information on any country in the world.

Features on our website include:

Chronologies including a week-by-week summary of world events and a special feature on the Olympic Games

Top 50 think tanks

Focus: an extract from one of our monograph titles with content analysis

City profile: series of quarterly, in-depth city profiles – NEW

Fact sheets on topics including World Population Development and Largest Urban Agglomerations, Migration, News Media, Crime and Health

Spotlight where our editor Dr Barry Turner focuses on a pivotal event in history and its relevance today

Editorial commentary on topics ranging from the current state of print and online media to lessons from history and the fallibility of experts

What you can do with this resource...

- Research a country or region in detail – consistent headings, sub-headings and research methods provide easy international cross-referencing
- Explore the impact of Key Historical Events
- Navigate Chronologies on Political Events, the Credit Crunch and a Timeline of Natural Disasters in a linear manner
- Discover how International Organizations and the top 50 think tanks transcend borders – includes detailed information on the organizations together with links to their websites all in one place
- Use the Archive to chart the history of a country, sometimes from its inception through to its end, such as the demise of the Confederate States of America or how Abyssinia became Ethiopia
- Trace the shifting political and geographical landscape of the world through the contemporary narrative of successive editors

THE STATESMAN'S YEARBOOK ARCHIVE

Access to the 1864–2004 Archive is also available as a one-time purchase through Palgrave Connect

The Statesman's Yearbook Archive is an easily accessible compilation of interesting and useful facts and figures through the generations, offering a way to survey changes at the global and individual country level over 140 years.

The Archive presents a unique way to trace the shifting landscape of culture, politics and economics across the globe. The prefaces offer a snapshot of the changing world, and delving further into the Archive reveals how countries have evolved, merged or dissolved.

Perpetual access to The Statesman's Yearbook Archive is also available via Palgrave Connect
