Still a House Divided

Race and Politics in Obama's America

Desmond S. King & Rogers M. Smith

"Still a House Divided deftly lays to rest the idea of postracialism in American politics and, through the concept of rival racial-policy coalitions, reveals the modern potency of the dispute between color-blind and race-conscious camps. King and Smith make a compelling case that competing visions over the role of race continue to define the core of American political life, and their bold and meticulously researched book offers new and much-needed leverage on a frustratingly durable problem."

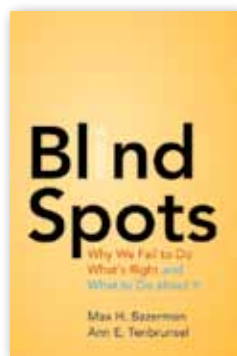

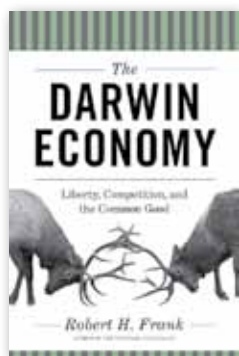

—Lawrence D. Bobo, Harvard University

Presenting a powerful account of American political alliances and their contending racial agendas, Still a House Divided sheds light on a policy path vital to the country's future.

Desmond S. King is the Andrew W. Mellon Professor of American Government at the University of Oxford. Rogers M. Smith is the Christopher H. Browne Distinguished Professor of Political Science at the University of Pennsylvania.

The Darwin Economy

Liberty, Competition, and the Common Good

Robert H. Frank

"The Darwin Economy debunks popular nostrums of both left and right, and takes particular aim at the notion that a well-functioning competitive market system will necessarily produce socially optimal results. Frank suggests novel approaches to America's problems that go well beyond the tired ideas of the present debate."

—Francis Fukuyama, author of The Origins of Political Order

Robert H. Frank is an economics professor at Cornell's Johnson Graduate School of Management.

Untangling the Ethics of Incentives

Ruth W. Grant

"This remarkable book asks some deceptively simple questions: With what norms should we judge the use of incentives? How can we compare incentives to coercion and persuasion? With characteristically lucid prose and a productive blend of theory and case studies, Ruth Grant illuminates an often-neglected arena of inquiry. At a time when philosophers advocate 'libertarian paternalism' as an alternative to coercion and governments deploy 'conditional cash transfers' as instruments of social policy, Grant's reflections could hardly be more relevant."

—William Galston, The Brookings Institution

Ruth W. Grant is professor of political science and philosophy and a senior fellow of the Kenan Institute for Ethics at Duke University.

Blind Spots

Why We Fail to Do What's Right and What to Do about It

Max H. Bazerman & Ann E. Tenbrunsel

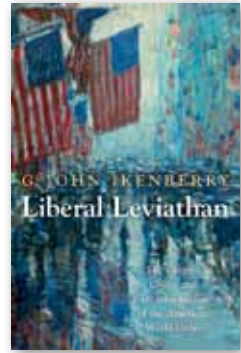

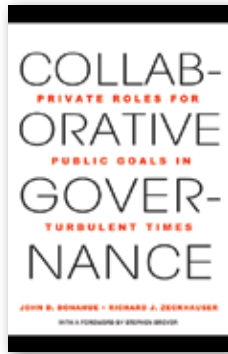

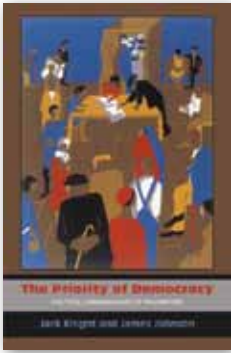

"Showing that the human mind sometimes leads us to behave in ways that are inconsistent with our own ethical standards, Blind Spots introduces behavioral ethics and reveals how this emerging field has important implications for wise decision making in our personal and professional lives. This is a must-read for those responsible for shaping regulatory policies in organizations and government."

The Priority of Democracy

Political Consequences of Pragmatism

Jack Knight & James Johnson

"Knight and Johnson have written an essential volume for scholars, public officials, and citizens living in the contemporary era. They stress that democracy does not just work by itself. No single design enables every democracy to generate fair and effective outcomes given the vast diversity of circumstances around the world. Knight and Johnson examine factors that increase the likelihood that democratic systems can be effective."

—Elinor Ostrom, Nobel Laureate in Economics

Jack Knight is professor of political science and law at Duke University. James Johnson is associate professor of political science at the University of Rochester.

Exceptional People

How Migration Shaped Our World and Will Define Our Future

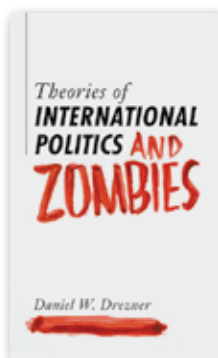

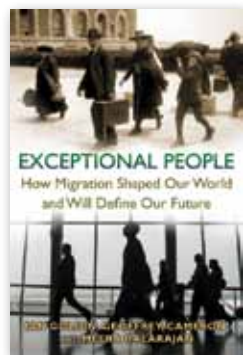

Ian Goldin, Geoffrey Cameron & Meera Balarajan

"Migration is not a zero-sum game; it brings great benefits to the receiving country, the sending country, and to migrants themselves. That is the clear message of the evidence from history, economics, and the social sciences more generally. This wise book assembles that evidence in a very thoughtful, careful, and scholarly way, making an enormous contribution to this crucial subject and providing fundamental guidance on one of the key issues of our times."

—Nicholas Stern, London School of Economics and Political Science

Ian Goldin is director of the Oxford Martin School, University of Oxford, and professorial fellow at Balliol College, Oxford. Geoffrey Cameron is a research associate at the Oxford Martin School, University of Oxford. He currently works as a senior policy advisor with Foreign Affairs and International Trade Canada. Theories of International Politics and Zombies

Daniel W. Drezner

"Drezner elucidates the often-arcane world of international theory in an interesting and highly amusing way. He also shows how close the relationship between politics and popular culture is, how the latter can convey social and political critique in the most unlikely ways, and why satire remains such an important form of that critique."

The Spirit of Cities

Why the Identity of a City Matters in a Global Age

Daniel A. Bell & Avner de-Shalit

"There aren't many new ideas in political theory, but Daniel Bell and Avner de-Shalit definitely have a new idea, and a good one: that cultivating 'the spirit of cities' is the best antidote to global homogenization. The nine cities that they use as examples are presented with an innovative and engaging mix of personal anecdote, history, and theoretical reflection."

The 1970s

A New Global History from Civil Rights to Economic Inequality

Thomas Borstelmann

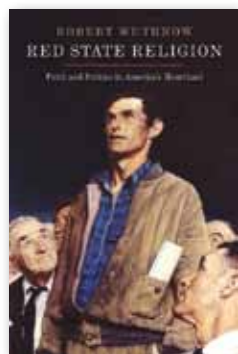

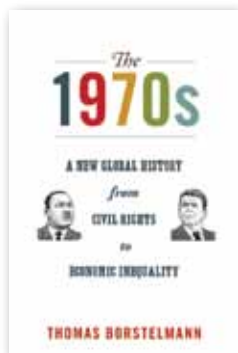

"The United States and the world have become more integrated and diverse during the last several decades, and this book helps us understand how that transformation came about. Borstelmann locates the origins of the contemporary world in the 1970s and presents by far the most comprehensive and persuasive portrait of that decade. Ranging from politics and ideology to economic globalization and religious fundamentalism, this book makes compelling reading."

Why Americans Hate the News Media and How It Matters

Jonathan M. Ladd

“This book addresses an important, understudied topic—public attitudes toward the press and why these attitudes matter. I particularly like Ladd’s discussion of the influential role of politicians and his explicit recognition of the unique postwar media period. Ladd consolidates prior work done on the history of the American press into a cohesive narrative that contributes value above and beyond the original materials.”

—Tim Groeling, University of California, Los Angeles

Drawing on historical evidence, experiments, and public opinion surveys, this book shows that in a world of endless news sources, citizens’ trust in institutional media is more important than ever before.

Paths Out of Dixie

The Democratization of Authoritarian Enclaves in America's Deep South

Robert Mickey

"In this remarkable book, Mickey focuses on Southern politics after the great public reversal of black disenfranchisement—and boldly compares that politics to authoritarianism. He grounds his compelling claims and narratives in an exceptionally confident handling of evidence, resulting in a major milestone in American political science, indeed one that rivals V. O. Key's famous work. This vivid and profoundly illuminating book is certain to change views not just of Southern politics, but of the country we have been—and the national democracy we have become."

No Man's Land

Jamaican Guestworkers in America and the Global History of Deportable Labor

Cindy Hahamovitch

"In No Man's Land, Cindy Hahamovitch brilliantly explores the world of guestworkers and the complex history of America's relationship with them. In the confused and confusing debate over jobs, immigration, and the economy, this book is a must-read. If you have ever eaten an apple or put sugar in your coffee, it is time you got to know the people who help put these foods on your table."

—Kevin Bales, Free the Slaves

No Man's Land puts Jamaican guestworkers' experiences in the context of the global history of this fast-growing and perilous form of labor migration.

Cindy Hahamovitch is professor of history at the College of William & Mary.

Philanthropy in America

A History

Olivier Zunz

"This beautifully crafted book, by master historian Olivier Zunz, transforms our understanding of American civil society. Zunz compellingly traces the often auspicious, yet sometimes troublesome relationships that bind government to philanthropy, money to responsibility, and charitable decisions to social reform and democratic performance. Anyone interested in U.S. politics and society will want to engage with this riveting narrative."

—Ira Katznelson, Columbia University

Demonstrating that America has cultivated and relied on philanthropy more than any other country, Philanthropy in America examines how giving for the betterment of all became embedded in the fabric of the nation's civic democracy.

Olivier Zunz is the Commonwealth Professor of History at the University of Virginia.

Between Citizens and the State

The Politics of American Higher Education in the 20th Century

Christopher P. Loss

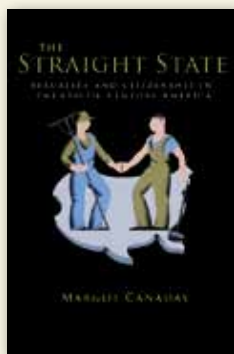

"Combining a vision of broad patterns of social change with a historian's appreciation of real people whose actions mattered, Christopher Loss has written a wonderfully rich analysis of the ways that universities worked in between the federal government and the people to create an educated—if conflict-ridden—democracy."

—John Skrentny, University of California, San Diego

At a time when people's faith in government and higher education is being sorely tested, this book sheds new light on the close relations between American higher education and politics.

Christopher P. Loss is assistant professor of higher education and public policy at Vanderbilt University.

Line in the Sand

A History of the Western U.S.-Mexico Border

Rachel St. John

"Rachel St. John untangles the myths surrounding the U.S.-Mexico border in this thoughtful and meticulously researched book. In so doing, she not only restores the border to its central place in borderlands studies but also renders the border essential for understanding the history of North America."

—Karl Jacoby, Brown University

Drawing on extensive research in U.S. and Mexican archives, Line in the Sand weaves together a transnational history of how an undistinguished strip of land became the significant and symbolic space of state power and national definition that we know today.

Beyond Mechanical Markets

Asset Price Swings, Risk, and the Role of the State

Roman Frydman & Michael D. Goldberg

“The year 2008 saw not only financial failure but the failure of an idea, the economic theory in which financial markets are mechanically determined to settle at equilibrium and economically efficient prices. Roman Frydman and Michael Goldberg demonstrate clearly the fallacy of that idea. Their powerful analysis provides insights which can help us reduce the probability and severity of future crises.”

The Tyranny of Utility

Behavioral Social Science and the Rise of Paternalism

Gilles Saint-Paul

“Saint-Paul stands courageously in the middle of the new road to serfdom, trying to stop the heavy traffic being nudged along on it. He alerts us to the greatest threat to liberty since communism—our good will, our paternal-maternal desire to prevent anyone, anywhere from exercising their free will mistakenly. Let us pray Saint-Paul succeeds. If the unintentional enemies of liberty are open to reason, he will!”

How Law Can End the Poverty of Nations

Robert D. Cooter & Hans-Bernd Schäfer

"This book distills and presents in a lucid and often even entertaining way the main insights and contributions of law and economics to meeting the challenges of growth for developing countries. Cooter and Schäfer argue that market freedom is the key to growth, but that it needs to be sustained by the appropriate legal rules and institutions."

Dangerous Sex, Invisible Labor

Sex Work and the Law in India

Prabha Kotiswaran

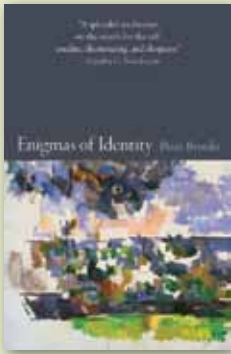

"This groundbreaking study brilliantly maps feminist ideas that have powerfully influenced law reform around sex work and trafficking. Kotiswaran convincingly makes the case that the welfare of sex workers in the developing world depends on complex factors that can be identified only through a local, legal realist account, and which have been virtually ignored by feminist theory. Read this book: it will challenge what you think you know."

Enigmas of Identity

Peter Brooks

"Peter Brooks has written a splendid meditation on the search for the self: erudite, illuminating, and eloquent. He shows how this search leads to an obsessive focus on markers of identity and stories of imposture. Rousseau, Balzac, Stendhal, Proust, and Freud are central interlocutors, but Brooks makes reference to a wide range of other texts, and deftly weaves developments in U.S. law into his discussion."

How Legal Rituals Make and Unmake Persons

Colin Dayan

"In language that is searing and lyrical, evocative and precise, this exceptional book thinks with the zombies, specters, felons, slaves, dogs, cadavers, and other entities that are the remnants of loss and dispossession in the law. Dogs and people are abundantly present here, even as the legal fictions they are made to inhabit are exposed with acid lucidity. These are hard histories made readable by Dayan's precious acts of writing."

The Age of Social Democracy Norway and Sweden in the Twentieth Century

Francis Sejersted

Translated by Richard Daly with editing
by Madeleine B. Adams

"This book will be a treasure trove for scholars—and politicians!—who want to understand the workings of the 'Scandinavian model.' Social scientists will value it for the wealth of telling details and compelling counterexamples that can suggest new generalizations and undermine old ones. Historians will appreciate how narrative and analysis acquire depth and relief by the comparison between the intertwined developments of Norway and Sweden, one country now lagging behind and now leaping ahead of its neighbor along economic, political, and cultural dimensions. Politicians will want to understand whether the stable and affluent social democracies rest on unique historical and geographical constellations or offer a model that can be imitated. By virtue of its acute psychological insights and low-key but poignant irony, The Age of Social Democracy is also a marvelously wise book."

The Makings of Indonesian Islam

Orientalism and the Narration of a Sufi Past

Michael Laffan

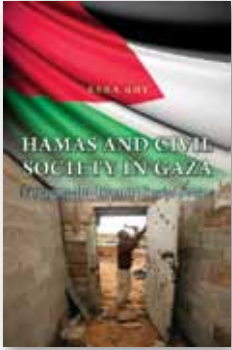

“This book is a major contribution to our understanding of Indonesian Islam. Laffan’s methodical and exhaustive research provides us with a well of information and insights that will be mined by scholars and students for years to come. The Makings of Indonesian Islam establishes a new benchmark for scholarship on the subject.”

—Barbara Watson Andaya, coauthor of A History of Malaysia

The Makings of Indonesian Islam presents Islamic and colonial history as an integrated whole, revealing the ways our understanding of Indonesian Islam, both past and present, came to be.

Hamas and Civil Society in Gaza

Engaging the Islamist Social Sector

Sara Roy

“This is the most perceptive analysis available not only of the evolution of the social institutions of Hamas, but also of the extraordinary pressures brought to bear on Palestinian society under occupation. Roy’s book is leavened by her profound empathy for the lives of ordinary people, and it is suffused by a moral clarity that is rare in works of this level of acuity and scholarly rigor. No one seriously interested in Palestine or Israel can afford to ignore this powerful book.”

Afghanistan

A Cultural and Political History

Thomas Barfield

"A brilliant book to educate all of us about a country we should know and appreciate...."

Thomas Barfield's book on Afghanistan is likely to become the first source that serious students turn to as a guide to this complicated country. His comprehensive portrait of Afghanistan is a stunning achievement."

—Joseph Richard Preville, Saudi Gazette

"Afghanistan: A Cultural and Political History is an invaluable book. Mr. Barfield does not give the United States a way out of Afghanistan, but he does provide the context necessary for good policymaking."

—Doug Bandow, Washington Times

"Anyone who wishes to comprehend the intricacies of this complex and mysterious country would be wise to consult this exceedingly valuable book."

—Raphael Israeli, Israel Journal of Foreign Affairs

"Written with a rare combination of scholarship and wit, [Barfield's] splendid book offers unusual insights into the history and political culture of Afghanistan that make it essential reading for anyone interested in understanding the challenges that the United States, Britain and their NATO allies face there now."

Facing the Challenge of Democracy

Explorations in the Analysis of Public Opinion and Political Participation

Edited by Paul M. Sniderman & Benjamin Highton

Princeton Readings in Religion and Violence

Edited and with introductions by Mark Juergensmeyer & Margo Kitts

"This brilliantly compiled compendium explores the complex relationship between religion and violence. The readings, which span two millennia, force us to confront a painful truth—those who aim to kill in the name of God will find legitimacy in carefully selected sacred texts. Highly recommended for anyone hoping to understand humanity's persistent attraction to holy war and sacrifice."

—Jessica Stern, Harvard University

This groundbreaking anthology provides the most comprehensive overview for understanding the fascinating relationship between religion and violence—historically, culturally, and in the contemporary world. Bringing together writings from scholarly and religious traditions, it is the first volume to unite primary sources—justifications for violence from religious texts, theologians, and activists—with invaluable essays by authoritative scholars.
