ORGANISATION FOR ECONOMIC CO-OPERATION AND DEVELOPMENT

The OECD is a unique forum where the governments of 30 democracies work together to address the economic, social and environmental challenges of globalisation. The OECD is also at the forefront of efforts to understand and to help governments respond to new developments and concerns, such as corporate governance, the information economy and the challenges of an ageing population. The Organisation provides a setting where governments can compare policy experiences, seek answers to common problems, identify good practice and work to co-ordinate domestic and international policies.

The OECD member countries are: Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, the Czech Republic, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Hungary, Iceland, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Korea, Luxembourg, Mexico, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Poland, Portugal, the Slovak Republic, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland, Turkey, the United Kingdom and the United States. The Commission of the European Communities takes part in the work of the OECD.

OECD Publishing disseminates widely the results of the Organisation's statistics gathering and research on economic, social and environmental issues, as well as the conventions, guidelines and standards agreed by its members.

This work is published on the responsibility of the Secretary-General of the OECD. The opinions expressed and arguments employed herein do not necessarily reflect the official views of the Organisation or of the governments of its member countries.

Foreword

The Structural and Demographic Business Statistics (SDBS) 2009 follows previous publications in this area in 2003 and 2006, and shows an improved coverage, comparability and quality of statistics over the years. The publication presents three datasets: the Structural Statistics for Industry and Services (SSIS) dataset; the Business Statistics by Size Class (BSC) dataset; and the Business Demography (BD) dataset. The first two contain information on key economic variables such as value-added, turnover and number of employees, broken down by detailed industrial classification, and for the BSC dataset, by employment size. The third dataset provides information on enterprise birth, death and survival rates.

This publication is part of a series of new publications that draw on the SDBS database. Firstly, the 2009 publication Measuring Entrepreneurship: A Collection of Indicators introduces the results of the joint OECD-Eurostat Entrepreneurship Indicators Programme (EIP). It presents a broad range of indicators covering entrepreneurial performance as well as determinants of entrepreneurship for a large number of countries, including non-OECD members. Secondly, a forthcoming 2010 publication will use the SDBS database to illustrate and analyse the industrial structure and business dynamics of OECD countries with a view to better serve policy making purposes.

The publication includes a description of the characteristics and uses of the database. The database, which contains longer time series and a more detailed industry classification, is also available online at <http://dx.doi.org/10.1787/sdbs-data-en> and on CD-ROM.

If you require additional information on the data presented in this publication, or if you wish to make comments or suggestions to improve the contents and presentation, you are welcome to contact the OECD Statistics Directorate by e-mail (stat.contact@oecd.org).

Introduction

1. OECD statistics on businesses

The OECD collects and develops a wide range of statistics on businesses and business activity. This publication presents the Structural and Demographic Business Statistics (SDBS) Database, i.e. the data collection by the Statistics Directorate relating to a number of key variables, such as value-added, operating surplus, employment, and the number of business units, broken down by industries and size classes.

Other OECD Directorates also collect important information relating to business activities. The Science Technology and Industry Directorate, for example, collect information on business research and development expenditure and innovation broken down by industrial sector and size class within its Analytical Business Enterprise Research and Development database (ANBERD). This database is part of the broader Structural Analysis Database (STAN) which additionally provides 2-digit industry breakdowns of economic activity (employment, production, value added, etc.) and input-output tables. The Directorate for Employment, Labour and Social Affairs maintains a large database of labour force statistics, which does provide information on employment in different industrial sectors as well as information on the numbers of self employed. The OECD's International Energy Agency collects information on carbon dioxide emissions and energy consumption by industrial sector for example. This is not an exhaustive list though; other Directorates also collect information related to businesses, such as financing and taxation.

Three datasets combine to form the Structural and Demographic Business Statistics (SDBS) database: Structural Statistics for Industry and Services (SSIS), Business Statistics by Size Class (BSC) and Business Demography (BD). The different variables in the SDBS are measured on an annual basis.

2. Structural and Demographic Business Statistics (SDBS)

The SSIS database provides information on economic variables broken down by 4-digit International Standard of Industrial Classification Revision 3 (ISIC Rev. 3) industries. The BSC database provides the same industry level of information as the SSIS database but this also broken down by size classes of businesses. In theory these two datasets are consistent and complementary, although in practice the datasets are considered separately because the time series for SSIS data are typically longer and the coverage of variables in the SSIS database is more comprehensive than the BSC database. Further on, the two datasets are not entirely consistent for some countries, reflecting partly different information sources and allocation methods and partly the different times when the datasets were compiled. As described in the country notes and in the examples that follow, for some countries it has been possible to make adjustments to the SSIS dataset to improve its internal consistency that cannot be replicated in the BSC database.

The BD database contains information on variables such as birth rates, death rates, survival rates, high-growth enterprises and gazelles for most OECD countries. As there is considerable policy interest in this type of information, the OECD Statistics Directorate has started to collect information on business demography data using harmonised questionnaires and definitions for variables. This is done in the framework of the OECD-Eurostat Entrepreneurship Indicators Programme (EIP), launched in 2006 by the OECD to build internationally comparable statistics on entrepreneurship and its determinants. As the BD database is recent, data are at present available for a few years only. In 2007 a Eurostat-OECD Manual on Business Demography has been published presenting different definitions of policy-relevant statistics on entrepreneurship and business demography and their empirical measurement.

3. Process of data collection

The United Nations Statistical Commission, at its 27th Session, recommended that the OECD, in collaboration with the United Nations Industrial Development Organisation (UNIDO), take responsibility for the collection and dissemination of world-wide industrial statistics. The collection of SSIS and BSC statistics for non-European Union countries has been organised through a joint OECD/UNIDO questionnaire.

For BD statistics, the OECD and Eurostat cooperate closely with National Statistical Offices for the collection of data through an annual questionnaire.

The OECD works with Eurostat in collecting the data for the SDBS database (SSIS, BSC, BD), as part of an agreement between the OECD and Eurostat designed to reduce the response burdens of EU member countries. Data for EU countries, including Norway, are sourced directly from Eurostat while data for non-EU countries are directly collected by the OECD.

The data received are checked and, if necessary, converted to SDBS standards (harmonised size class, ISIC Rev. 3). Quality checks are performed in order to be able to assess the consistency of the data, to flag potential outliers, and possibly, to remove or correct the data.

4. Characteristics of the SDBS database

Included variables

The SSIS and BSC databases provide, uniquely, comparable information on the following economic variables broken down by 4-digit ISIC Rev. 3 (where the coverage varies by country and database) and employment size classes in the case of the BSC database (1-9, 10-19, 20-49, 50-249, and 250+), for all OECD countries:

- Turnover or gross premiums written.
- Production at producers' prices and/or factor costs.
- Value added at basic prices and/or factor costs.
- Gross operating surplus.
- Total purchases of goods and services.
- Change in stocks of goods and services.
- Purchases of energy products.
- Gross investment in tangible goods.
- Gross investment in land.

- Gross investment in existing buildings and structures.
- Gross investment in machinery and equipment.
- Employment, number of persons engaged and number of employees.
- Employment, number of females' employees.
- Employment, number of employees in full time equivalent units.
- Hours worked by employees.
- Compensation of labour, all persons engaged and employees.
- Wages and salaries, all persons engaged and employees.
- Other employers' social contributions, employees.
- Number of enterprises and/or establishments.

The Business Demography database contains information on the following variables for most OECD countries. Indicators are broken down by industry using ISIC Rev. 3 and, for some of them, by employment size-class:

- Birth rate.
- Death rate.
- Survival rates.
- Employment by age of enterprise.
- Rate of High-growth enterprises.
- Rate of gazelles.

Industry Coverage

This publication provides data on industries according to ISIC Rev. 3. A full description of this classification, together with descriptions of concordance relationships between ISIC Rev. 3 and national and other international classification systems can be found at the United Nations Statistics Division's website.¹ Annex A provides a description of the 2, 3 and 4-digit industries for which the OECD requests information.

At its 37th Session, held in New York in March 2006, the United Nations Statistical Commission approved the revised International Standard Industrial Classification of All Economic Activities (ISIC), Revision 4 as the new international standards for activity. Details of this classification system can also be found at the UN website referred to above. The SDBS database will be updated to this new system in parallel with moves made by OECD member countries starting in 2010.

Size Classes of Industries Covered

The OECD Statistics Directorate requests breakdowns of industries into the following employment size classes, where the figures reflect in theory, although not always in practice, the numbers of persons engaged:

1-9, 10-19, 20-49, 50-99, 100-199, 200-249, 250-499, 500-999, 1000+

Unfortunately, it is not always possible for countries to provide information on this basis and, instead, countries provide data using the breakdowns relevant to the data sources available in their country. Data development in individual countries tends to follow policy requirements and the availability of information by size classes often reflects the needs of small and medium enterprise (SME) policy makers. Therefore, to improve the usability of the database and to improve harmonisation and encourage country comparisons, this publication focuses on 5 size classes where the data across countries and variables can be most closely aligned. These are as follows:

1-9, 10-19, 20-49, 50-249, 250+

Not all country information fits perfectly into this system however; for the United States for example it implies a size class breakdown of 1-9, 10-19 and 20+, and, so, for some countries, there is necessarily some divergence from these target size classes. As such the database refers to 5 size classes that are country specific. To reinforce the point that there may be differences in the coverage of businesses within size classes across countries, these 5 size classes are referred to as NSC1, NSC2, NSC3, NSC4 and NSC5; where the NSC refers to national size class.

1. Size classes based on the number of employees

The table above shows for each country the actual size class of businesses within each of NSC 1 to NSC 5. As can be seen in most cases they align quite close to the 5 target size classes mentioned above, but not always. In fact a strict comparison across countries is only possible if the focus is on businesses with less than 20 persons engaged and businesses with 20 or more persons engaged; and even here the comparisons are restricted by the exclusion of some small businesses at the lower end of the less than 20 threshold; the extent of which varies across countries. Data for Ireland for example exclude businesses with less than 3 persons engaged, and the US data refers only to businesses with employees.

5. Issues in using the SDBS database

The Structural and Demographic Business Statistics (SDBS) database is designed to provide a description of the economic structure of businesses by their industrial classification and by their size. The primary advantage of the database compared to other datasets is that it provides detailed information on a wide range of economic variables at a very detailed industry level. The database therefore provides an ideal tool for users interested in international comparisons of the economic performance of industries at this detailed level. This is especially true where comparisons of business size classes are needed.

However, users should also be aware of some of the phenomena that need to be fully understood when using these datasets. Key amongst these concerns are comparisons over time. Since the scope and coverage of source information used in the SDBS database can vary over time, breaks in series often occur. Moreover, enterprises and establishments may change their industrial classification over time. Sometimes this will reflect the fact that the enterprise or establishment has change activity completely but it may also reflect small year-on-year changes.

This section presents some of the issues that can affect analytical applications of the database, such as comparability and changes in concepts. The metadata describing the sources and methods used in each country are provided at the end of the tables shown for each country. Detailed definitions of variable concepts are provided in Annex B.

Comparability of concepts and coverage across countries

Effort has been made to ensure that the variables presented are comparable across countries but on occasions this is not possible. Three areas, worthy of particular mention, where some issues of incomparability arise are:

- Value-added: The definition of value-added used in this publication is consistent with that used in the 1993 System of National Accounts (for a given price basis, factor costs or basic prices). However not all countries are able to provide estimates on this basis and typically, for these countries, the estimates are based on production minus the intermediate consumption of goods and industrial services only. This differs from the SNA definition which excludes the intermediate consumption of all services.
- The coverage of businesses: For most countries the main sources of information used in the compilation of structural business statistics are economic censuses, business surveys and business registers. These typically cover establishments and/or enterprises above a certain size limit (usually based on employees or turnover above a certain level) but these thresholds vary across countries. This is of particular relevance in the context of business statistics by size class.
- The statistical unit used for businesses: Many measures are available for the statistical unit used to define businesses and these vary across countries. Two key measures prevail in this publication. The first is based on the enterprise and the second on the establishment.

Comparability over time

For some countries the source data used to estimate the variables in this publication are not always consistent over time and neither are the concepts nor the coverage of businesses. For example, data may be based on survey information in one year and exhaustive census information in another, or the coverage of the same data source itself may change over time, for example a census or survey may include all establishments with more than 20 employees in one year and then all employing establishments thereafter.

Changes in concepts can also complicate the comparability of data over time. It is not always obvious however where concepts change but, on occasions, especially for sectors, such as the distribution sector (wholesale and retail) where turnover and production can be especially affected by valuation changes in estimates of changes in stocks, it is possible to identify these occurrences.

Users should also note that changes may occur for specific sectors only, reflecting the different data sources often used by statistical offices to measure activity in sectors as diverse as manufacturing, services and construction. This means that in some cases breaks in series occur in certain sectors only.

Time series analyses – Classification changes and consolidation

The points raised above also relate to time series applications but, fundamentally, users need to be aware that the database provides snapshots of enterprises or establishments at points in time. Both enterprises and establishments can change their industrial classification over time; sometimes this reflects the fact that the enterprise or establishment has changed activity completely but it may also reflect small year-on-year changes.

Additionally, if enterprises in two different industrial sectors merge, the new entity may re-appear in one single industrial sector only, even if the overall activities of the new entity are unchanged. Similar issues arise if establishments in different sectors merge or when other demographic events occur such as take-overs or break-ups for example.

Gross measures of activity such as turnover, production and intermediate consumption of goods and services within an enterprise may be recorded net of the enterprise's intra-transactions or gross; depending on the country or enterprise's practice or available accounting information. If, therefore, an enterprise breaks-up into two new enterprises but both new entities remain in the same industrial sector, gross production, turnover and intermediate consumption may rise, although, all other things equal, no changes will be seen in net measures such as value-added, operating surplus or labour and investment related variables.

Analyses of time-series data related to business size classes are also of considerable policy interest and similar issues of time series consistency can arise when businesses move from one size class to another as they grow or contract.

Confidentialised data

Sometimes data are 'confidentialised' by statistical offices at a relatively aggregated (ISIC Rev. 3, 2-digit) level. This can occur because a statistical office might desire to show all but one of the 4-digit groups within a 2-digit sector leading to the secondary suppression of the 2-digit figure to preserve anonymity in the confidentialised 4-digit entry (otherwise the confidentialised 4 digit cell can be determined). Additionally, because statistical offices will typically confidentialise industries according to the classification systems used in their countries and then use this information as the building blocks to arrive at ISIC estimates, it is often the case that the numbers of industries that are confidentialised are proportionally higher when shown in ISIC than when shown on a national basis. This reflects cautionary prudence on the parts of statistical institutions. The process of ensuring that data are not disclosive when shown in a national classification system can be burdensome, particularly when legal penalties arise for accidental disclosure.

Coherence of sources

Statistical offices use a variety of sources to produce business statistics data and this variety can often cause comparability problems. In many countries, for example, different sources of information are used to estimate activity in different sectors. For example, manufacturing may be based on a survey of businesses with one or more employees whereas service sectors may be based on administrative data for businesses above some turnover threshold say. But the different sources can also relate to variables. Investment information for example may be sourced from dedicated investment surveys that may not have the same coverage, sample size or stratification as used for other variables. Another important example relates to information on employment, which, for some countries is based on labour force and not business surveys, which can compromise labour productivity calculations. Differences in sources are highlighted in the country notes.

Comparisons of BSC and SSIS statistics

The data requested for the BSC and SSIS databases are the same but differences exist in the coverage of variables and years. Typically, less information is available on the BSC database reflecting the greater data requirements involved in providing information at this level. Other differences exist however. For some countries the estimates of 4-digit totals for the same variable differ, reflecting the often different data sources used in the compilation of the BSC and SSIS datasets and also the coverage of these data sources. Timing is also a factor as for some countries the returns were provided at different times and so more up-to-date estimates may be reflected in one dataset than another.

Comparisons with other data sets

As mentioned, the OECD produces many other statistics related to businesses and their activities. This information can be used to supplement the SDBS database, but some care is needed in bringing the different OECD business datasets together. Although every effort is made using international standards, such as ISIC Rev. 3, to harmonise the various datasets, users should note that some differences still arise. On occasions this will be because different concordance relationships are, necessarily, used for different indicators to bridge the gap between national classification systems and ISIC Rev. 3. Sometimes it may reflect differences in the way business units are defined or sampled and on others it may reflect differences in the way similar concepts are measured.

One important dataset in the context of business statistics is national accounts data, where significant differences in concepts can occur. Economic indicators provided by the structural and demographic business statistics database typically provide more detailed information on industrial sectors than those provided by national accounts based statistics. This occurs because adjustments are made for the national accounts which, typically, can only be made at the more aggregated industry level. Four types of adjustments are commonly made.

- The first is driven by the need to achieve “exhaustiveness” in the coverage of economic activity such that estimates of gross domestic product (GDP) cover all market and non-market activity. Examples of this activity are: imputed-rent for owner-occupied dwellings and the production of agricultural products used and consumed by households.

- The second reflects the coverage of structural business statistics. Typically these are sourced from census data, surveys or business registers, but these sources are not always exhaustive in their coverage of businesses. Since they often only collect information on businesses above a certain size threshold (which are often based on turnover or employment criteria), micro and small enterprises or establishments are not always covered in structural business statistics. Additionally, structural business statistics generally only provide information that is based on business returns. In countries with large informal economies, businesses often under-declare their real turnover, profits and employment say, or may evade registration on administrative sources altogether. National accounts estimates try to adjust for this. Finally, some countries do not include all state owned, public corporations or non profit institutions, in their structural business statistics data.
- The third reflects conceptual adjustments made by national accountants, for example “tips” paid to waitresses and waiters in a restaurant say are recorded as income received by the employing enterprise in the national accounts. Larger adjustments are made to correct estimates that do not conform to SNA definitions. For example, some countries do not include intermediate expenditures on services in their structural business statistics estimates of total intermediate consumption of goods and services which are, in these cases, instead included in value-added. Another source of difference in industry estimates of value-added reflects adjustments made for financial intermediation services indirectly measured (FISIM).²
- The fourth reflects more general adjustments that embody, in practice, all of the three above and are driven by the need to achieve coherence between business statistics and other sources of information that can be used in the compilation of GDP, such as household budget and labour force surveys.

National Accounts based estimates, therefore, provide for more comprehensive coverage of economic activities and should be used where the focus is on total GDP or the contribution of aggregated industries to economic activity, irrespective of the size of any particular establishment or enterprise. The SSIS and BSC databases should be used where the focus is on: a specific industrial sector or sectors; information on the sizes of businesses is important; and/or where the focus is on market activities.

These are not the only areas where differences between SDBS and national accounts based statistics occur however. Another important difference arises when the business units used to measure activity differ. Typically, in most OECD countries, estimates of activity by industry sector are based on the most homogeneous production unit available. The unit used varies across countries depending on the available data sources but most countries will try to measure activity for the national accounts using a local kind of activity unit (used in many European countries) or the closely related establishment unit (used in many non-EU OECD countries). Enterprise data, which are how most European countries present SDBS data, reflect a combination of one or more sub-enterprise units such as establishments or local kind of activity units, and, so, data presented by industries on this basis may be different (higher or lower) than comparable national accounts data because different groupings of sub-enterprise units will be used across industries. Indeed, even if the same groupings of sub-enterprise units exist in a given sector, differences can arise in gross measures, such as production and intermediate consumption, reflecting the differing degrees of consolidation that exist within these sub-enterprise groups.

6. Examples of uses of the SDBS database

Examples of use of the SDBS database include analyses of structural change and industry dynamics, which are key for effective government policies on national competitiveness, entrepreneurship and innovation. The SDBS database helps policy makers and analysts to assess the structural changes in business activity and industrial dynamics over time. Another area of analysis for which the SDBS database can be efficiently used concerns the study of business size over time, more specifically the contribution of individual size classes to aggregate measures of economic performance.

Point in time comparisons

A strength of the SDBS database is its ability to provide a detailed description of the industrial structure of economies at a very detailed level, at fixed points in time, facilitating cross country comparisons. The database therefore lends itself to answering questions such as: What proportion of total employment is provided by small businesses? What is the contribution of a particular 4-digit industry to total value-added and how does this compare across countries? What were the unit labour costs by 4-digit industry and size class of OECD countries in 2006? Are small firms more or less profitable than large firms (where profit can be measured using gross operating surplus as a per cent of turnover)? How does the decomposition of value-added into its labour and capital components (gross operating surplus) vary by industry size? Are workers in small firms better paid than in large firms in some industries?

The database can also provide useful inputs into the development of other economic databases. For example, the OECD's input-output database contains information on intra-industry transactions at a relatively aggregated industry level but it is possible to incorporate SSIS and BSC data into the input-output framework using relatively simple assumptions and without distorting the overall input, labour and value-added structures of these SSIS and BSC industries. As such, inter dependencies between detailed industries and business sizes can be investigated, for example the dependencies of large businesses on small and vice-versa or alternatively the total direct and indirect dependencies of small businesses on export markets.

Changes over time

An area of considerable interest to policy makers and analysts concerns changes in business activity such as production, value-added and employment gains and losses over time. The SDBS database can provide an assessment of these changes but generally the comparisons should be performed over relatively short periods to avoid issues of incomparability arising over time. Demographic events like mergers, take-overs and break-ups may result in reclassifications of businesses, or parts of businesses, from one industry to another. The SDBS database accurately reflects these changes and users should familiarise themselves with the country notes to ensure that their analyses are not affected by breaks in series.

Another area of analysis for which the SDBS database can be used concerns the study of business size over time. Because it is not longitudinal (i.e. it does not track individual firms over time), the database cannot show the contribution small businesses make to economic and employment growth: as (smaller) firms go from the start-up phase to some optimal size, they typically change from one size class to another.

Structural indicators

The information in the SDBS database can also be used to analyse more thoroughly the economic structure by describing the structural characteristics of industries and/or size classes. Combining the different variables in the database, the structural performance of individual industries can be illustrated by structural indicators such as:

- average firm size: total employment/number of enterprises, indicating the importance of scale (and scope) in industries;
- average wage cost: wage costs/employment, indicating the unit labour cost in industries;
- labor productivity (in nominal terms): value added/employment as an indicator of economic performance in terms of productivity and value creation;
- vertical integration: value added/production showing how much value of the production is created within the industry.

These indicators at a very detailed industry level additionally allow for a more fine-grained analysis of industrial dynamics. Productivity growth analyses for example focus often on relatively aggregated industries, thereby generally assuming that homogeneity exists within pre-defined industry groups. But this assumption might not hold, as changes in 2-digit labour productivity could be due to changes in the share of activities of the 2-digit industry's 4-digit components or because of variances in the contributions made by different sizes of firms (as well as changes that might be driven by entries and exits into the population).

2. FISIM reflects the value of services provided by financial intermediaries for which no explicit charges are made. For example, interest is payable by borrowers and by lenders to financial intermediaries, and so, put simply, FISIM captures the value of the property income receivable by financial intermediaries less the interest payable by them.

PART I

Structural Statistics for Industry and Services and Business Statistics by Size Class

The tables that follow provide an illustration of the data available in the SSIS and BSC datasets. For ease of illustration, data are only presented at the 2-digit industry level and only for the following ISIC Rev. 3.1 industry groupings: C (mining and quarrying), D (manufacturing), E (electricity, gas and water), F (construction), G (wholesale trade and retail trade; repairs, etc.), H (hotels and restaurants), I (transport, storage and communications), K (real estate, renting and business activities). Information on other industrial sectors is also available but the coverage is more limited across countries. Readers should note that for any 2 digit industry where data are not available, because they have been confidentialised, many of the 3 or 4 digit sub sectors of this industry may be available.

Country notes at the end of the tables for each country provide information on the sources and coverage of data in each country, including a detailed description of where breaks in series occur.

Data are provided by the Australian Bureau of Statistics.

National data are collected using ANZSIC (Australian and New Zealand Standard Industrial Classification), converted into ISIC Revision 3.

1. For 2002 data onwards the statistical unit for businesses is based on the Australian Business Number (legal unit) and "type of activity unit", for more complex businesses. Non-employing businesses are also included in 2002 data onwards. Between 1996 and 2001, the unit was based on a different notion of the "management unit", which surveyed enterprises and establishments.
2. It is important to note that these variables are based on labour force (household and not business) surveys and, therefore great care should be applied in using these variables in combination with other variables based on business surveys.

BSC

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the BSC database for Australia, together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. Data for 2001 and earlier include businesses with employees only. Thereafter, the data include businesses without employees (such as unincorporated self-employed businesses and partnerships without employees).

The coherence between the SSIS and BSC datasets is not sufficiently significant to allow for a straightforward cross-over between the two datasets, and readers are not advised to do so. A number of factors cause these differences to occur including:

- i) Sources – For example, the variable for the number of persons engaged prior to 2002 in the BSC dataset is not based on labour force statistics, as is the case for SSIS.
- ii) Concordances – In some cases, the BSC statistics reflected aggregations of other ISIC sectors.
- iii) Concepts – The valuation of concepts is not always on the same basis-Investment variables in the SSIS database are measured net of disposals of fixed assets.

Methodological breaks

In general, data for 2002 onwards are not consistent with data in earlier years. Prior to this date, data on employment in the SSIS database are based on labour force statistics and should be used with great care if combined with monetary variables, which are based on business surveys. Finally readers should not assume that a straightforward complementarity exists between the SSIS and BSC datasets, and should restrict common analysis to using the BSC dataset to provide the relative (proportional) contribution made by business size classes within a particular sector. The BSC dataset for 2002 to 2006 has been produced using information available on an ANZIC basis following only a broad concordance with ISIC Revision 3. In most cases this makes little difference, however readers should note the concordance relationships used in the following sectors for all BSC variables between 2002 and 2006:

- ISIC 10-14 includes petroleum and mineral exploration and other mining services which is part of ISIC 7421 architectural, engineering and other technical activities.
- ISIC 15-37 includes newspaper printing/publishing, other periodical publishing which are parts of ISIC 90-93.
- ISIC 10-41 includes sewerage and drainage services which are parts of ISIC 90-93.
- ISIC 70-74 excludes petroleum and mineral exploration and other mining services which are parts of ISIC 7421 architectural, engineering and other technical activities.
- ISIC 90-93 excludes sewerage and drainage services, associations and interest groups, newspaper printing/publishing, other periodical publishing and some personal services.
- ISIC 95 includes: a) police services, corrective centres and fire brigade services which are parts of ISIC 75; b) associations, interest groups and some personal services which are parts of ISIC 90-93; and c) other personal services which are parts of ISIC 70-74.

Variable notes

Investment variables in SSIS are measured net of disposals of fixed assets.

SSIS and BSC employment variables are point-in-time estimates, reflecting a 30 June position.

Changes from 2007 reference year

For 2007, SSIS data for the main sector groupings are presented for information. They are not comparable with data for earlier years, reflecting the adoption by ABS of a new industry classification and a new methodology. 2007 data are based on an updated version of ANZSIC 2006, and the sectoral coverage of industry totals in 2007 may differ substantially from the ISIC Revision 3 definition. At the same time, a change in the estimation technique (i.e. generalised regression) was implemented.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by Statistics Austria via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via an annual survey in combination with administrative sources using the ÖNACE system; an adoption of the European NACE Revision 1, converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. In Austria, SBS surveys are carried out since the reference year 1995. A census was carried out for the reference year 1995. From 1997 to 2001, sample surveys with free grossing up were carried out. From 2002 onwards, a cut-off survey, in line with a model based estimation of enterprises below thresholds based on turnover or number of persons employed is carried out.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Belgium National Institute of Statistics via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via an annual survey on the structure of companies (excluding those in the financial sector), using the NACE-BEL system, an adoption of the European NACE Revision 1, converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. Businesses are defined in this context as legal entities with VAT and/or social security registrations. All businesses with 20 or more employees and/or turnover of more than 8 million euros are surveyed every year with smaller businesses selected via a sample and grossed up to the entire population.

Coverage and data sources

SSIS

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the SSIS database for Belgium together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. The statistical unit used to estimate SSIS variables is typically a legal unit.

BSC

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the BSC database for Belgium, together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. The statistical unit used to estimate BSC variables is typically a legal unit. Businesses are allocated to a size class on the basis of information obtained from social security records supplied and so may not always correspond to the actual numbers of persons engaged.

1. Data in 1995-98 do not fully align with the producer price concept.

Methodological breaks

Estimates of production in the 1995 to 1998 period are affected by the treatment of sales of goods for resale and so are not consistent with those in later periods, which are consistent with the concepts defined in this publication. The BSC and SSIS databases are fully aligned although in some cases small differences arise, for example due to certain aggregations made in SSIS.

Variable notes

SSIS and BSC

Production at producers' prices – Data in the period 1995-98 do not fully align to this concept, which affects, in particular, the trade sector (ISIC 50-52).

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by Statistics Canada.

National classification

National data are collected using the 1980 SIC System for 1997 and earlier data and NAICS for 1998 data onwards, both converted into ISIC Revision 3.

Coverage and data sources

SSIS

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the SSIS database for Canada together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. The coverage reflects incorporated businesses with or without employees, unincorporated businesses with employees, and unincorporated businesses with no employees but with revenue of greater than or equal to 30k Canadian Dollars in 2000 and after but only incorporated businesses with employees and sales of greater than or equal to 30k in earlier years (see also the notes in methodological changes). The statistical unit used for data collection is the establishment. Only data on manufacturing establishments are included.

1. Production for the wholesale/retail sector reflects total sales and other revenue.
2. Value-added reflects the difference between production and intermediate consumption of goods plus the net change in inventories over the year but does not include an adjustment for inventory revaluations from book value to current prices.
3. Reflects the average number of employees during the year.
4. Does not include other income in kind such as tips and commissions.

BSC

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the BSC database for Canada together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. The database covers all businesses with employees.

The source of the BSC data is the Statistics Canada Employment Dynamics Database, which has been discontinued since 1999. This database used information from labour force surveys and the Longitudinal Employment Analysis Program (LEAP), which is based on payroll records in businesses with employees. The statistical unit used to estimate BSC variable is the Enterprise and not the Establishment, which is the unit used in the SSIS dataset.

Methodological breaks

The switch from 1998 SIC to NAICS means that some care is needed in comparing figures before and after 1998 (the break occurring between 1997 and 1998). In addition readers should be aware of a series break in 2000, when a number of major conceptual and methodological changes were made to the Annual Survey of Manufacturers, which increased the coverage of establishments. For 1999 and earlier data, only incorporated businesses with sales of greater than or equal to 30k Canadian Dollars were in scope. For 2000 onwards the coverage was increased to include all incorporated businesses, unincorporated businesses with employees and unincorporated businesses with sales greater than or equal to 30k Canadian Dollars. At the same time manufacturing data for 2000 onwards exclude activity related to Head Offices. In 1999, Head Office activity accounted for about 3% of the employees of Canadian manufacturers and about 7% of the total value of shipments and other revenue.

Variable notes

All variables exclude ISIC sector 22.1.

Production at producers' prices: Production for the wholesale/retail sector reflects total sales and other revenue.

Value-added at basic prices reflects the difference between production and intermediate consumption of goods and, so, includes intermediate consumption of some services.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Czech Statistical Office via Eurostat.

National data are collected via separate annual surveys of incorporated and unincorporated enterprises, in combination with administrative sources, using the CZ-NACE System; an adoption of the European NACE Revision 1, converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. All businesses with 100 or more employees, joint stock companies and/or financial companies are surveyed yearly with other businesses selected via a sample and grossed up to the entire population.

1. Figures of gross operating surplus consistent with those used in SSIS can be derived in earlier years by taking value added at factor costs (in 2000) or basic prices (1995-99) minus compensation of labour, employees, see note 2.
2. Compensation of labour employees in earlier years can be derived as sum of wages and salaries, employees and other employers' contributions.

Methodological breaks

The BSC and SSIS databases are fully aligned although in some cases small differences arise, for example due to certain aggregations made in SSIS.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by Statistics Denmark via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via three sources: an annual survey of enterprises, information from balance sheets provided to the tax authorities and the business register using a NACE equivalent system (DB03) converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. DB03 replaced DB93 in January 2003. For enterprises with less than 5 employees data SBS are based on the tax-register and estimation methods.

Methodological breaks

The BSC and SSIS databases are typically fully aligned although in two notable cases differences arise. These cases concern the employment variables – number of persons engaged and number of employees. In 1995 and 1996, the BSC data for these two variables are significantly lower than their SSIS equivalents. This means that some caution is needed when using such variables in these years as their coverage is not exhaustive and is not necessarily consistent with other information in these years, for example number of enterprises and wages and salaries.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by Statistics Finland, via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via three data sources: business registers, surveys and administrative data. The survey is used for large enterprises and administrative financial data from the tax authorities is used for all other enterprises. The business register provides information on the principal activity and employment in enterprises not surveyed.

The survey covers all enterprises with at least 20 or 50 persons employed depending on the industry:

- For ISIC sectors 10-14, 15-37, 40-41 and 45, all enterprises with 20 or more persons employed are surveyed.
- For ISIC sectors 50-52, 55 and 60-64, all enterprises with 50 persons employed or more are surveyed as well as enterprises employing 10 to 50 persons with a turnover above a sufficient threshold.
- For other ISIC sectors, only a threshold of 50 persons employed is applied.

Smaller enterprises are included in the survey on the basis of the turnover or the balance sheet total defined by industry.

Data are provided using a NACE Revision 1 equivalent classification system (TOL 2002), converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD.

Methodological breaks

The BSC and SSIS databases are fully aligned for 1997 data onwards although in some cases small differences arise, for example due to certain aggregations made in SSIS.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the National Institute of Statistics and Economic Studies (INSEE) via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via various annual surveys conducted by different government departments, including INSEE. These include annual surveys on manufacturing, mining, utilities, agriculture, trade and other services, validated with administrative tax based sources, using a NACE equivalent system (NAF) converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. Typically the surveys are exhaustive for enterprises with 20 or more persons engaged, with sample surveys used for smaller businesses. Enterprises with turnover below a certain threshold (76.2 k€ for 1999 data) are excluded.

1. Estimates of gross operating surplus in 2002 for sector ISIC 45 and its sub-components reflect total value added at factor costs.

Methodological breaks

The BSC and SSIS databases are typically fully aligned in all years with only some small differences reflecting timing and rounding in some sectors and years. Estimates of gross investment in land in 1999 are not consistent with estimates in more recent years. For BSC, Estimates of gross operating surplus in 2002 for ISIC sector 45 and its sub-components reflect total value added at factor costs.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Federal Statistical Office via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via various annual surveys of manufacturing, electricity, gas and water supply, wholesale and retail trade, and other services, using a NACE equivalent Classification System, converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. The coverage of these surveys varies significantly over time, described in more detail below.

Coverage and data sources

SSIS

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the SSIS database for Germany together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. The coverage of activities varies across sectors and over time, as described below.

For the period 1996 to 1998 the coverage reflects enterprises with 20 or more persons engaged only, except ISIC sector 40-41 where there is full coverage throughout

Methodological breaks

Data on mining, manufacturing and construction sectors (ISIC 10-37 and 45) for the period 1996 to 1998 reflect only enterprises with 20 or more persons engaged. Thereafter, for all variables except investment related variables, the population is all enterprises with 1 or more persons engaged.

Data on other services (ISIC 60-74) are based on enterprises with turnover of 17 500 euros (as from 2003) or more and that appears on the Enterprise Register. Before 2000, the data are based on a combination of administrative data and estimates derived from the national accounts.

The BSC and SSIS databases are fully aligned although, in some cases, small differences arise, for example due to certain aggregations made in SSIS.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the National Statistical Service via Eurostat.

National data are collected via several annual surveys using a NACE Revision 1 equivalent classification system converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. For ISIC 15-37, data for enterprises with less than 10 employees were produced by combining business register data and Annual Industrial Survey data.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Central Statistical Office via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via annual structural business statistics surveys, validated with administrative data, using a NACE Revision 1 equivalent classification system (TEÁOR'03) converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. For 2000 data and earlier, enterprises with less than 5 persons employed are not included in the SBS and BSC databases. Thereafter data reflect all enterprises with 1 or more persons engaged.

1. Up to and including 2000 data on employment were collected via a separate survey to those used for monetary variables.

Methodological breaks

Data prior to and including 1999 reflect enterprises with more than 5 persons employed. Thereafter the data reflect all enterprises with 1 or more persons engaged. Employment-based data up to and including 2000 were based on a separate survey to that used for monetary variables and so care should be taken when comparing monetary and employment variables in this period, particularly at the 4-digit level. For 2001 data onwards, a unified survey has been used and so this problem does not arise. The BSC and SSIS databases are fully aligned. Estimates of activity at the 1-9 size class level in the period 1998-99 reflect only enterprises with between 5 and 9 persons employed – these estimates were not provided directly but have been derived as the residual of the total and all other size classes (10+) and so some care is needed in using the 1-9 size class data in 1998 and 1999.

Data have been taken directly from the Statistic Iceland's website.

National data are currently collected using an Icelandic version of the NACE classification system converted onto an ISIC Revision 3 basis.

Coverage and data sources

SSIS

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the SSIS database for Iceland together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. Statistics Iceland produces data from the Enterprise Register, which is maintained by the Internal Revenue Directorate. This is combined with information from the income tax register in order to obtain information on "wage payers" (businesses with employees) including self employed individuals. Estimates of turnover are based on enterprises' VAT returns and so only includes enterprises with turnover above the VAT threshold.

Methodological breaks

Readers should note that the coverage of the turnover and number of enterprise statistics in the SSIS dataset differ, since the former is based on VAT registered businesses whereas the latter is based on income tax and self employed statistics. Readers should also note that the comparability between the SSIS and BSC datasets is also limited by the fact that different populations of businesses are captured in the enterprise variables – in BSC the statistical unit actually refers to “wage payers”, in other words businesses with employees.

Variable notes

BSC

Number of enterprises – Reflects “wage payers” (businesses with employees).

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Central Statistical Office via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via an annual services inquiry and censuses of industry and construction using NACE Revision 1.1 converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. Estimates for the ISIC sectors 10-41 are drawn from the industrial census (sample survey) but with information provided only for enterprises with 3 or more persons engaged. The census of construction (ISIC sector 45) provides information for enterprises with 20 or more persons engaged. The annual services inquiry is exhaustive for enterprises with 20 or more persons employed, with sample survey used for smaller businesses.

Methodological breaks

Data in ISIC sectors 10-41 reflect enterprises with 3 or more persons engaged. Data for ISIC sector 45 reflect enterprises with 20 or more persons engaged. The BSC and SSIS databases are fully aligned, with only some minor differences reflecting rounding and timing. There is a break in the series, number of enterprises, between 1998 and 1999. Before 1999, this variable includes non-active units. From 1999 onwards, non-active units are removed. Compensation of labour estimates in ISIC sectors 55-64 and 70-74 reflect wages and salaries for the years 1998-2000. From 2001 onwards, they correctly reflect compensation of labour.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the National Institute of Statistics (ISTAT) via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via two enterprise surveys. The first is a sample survey of small and medium enterprises and the second is an exhaustive survey of large enterprises. Up to, and including, 1997, enterprises with less than 20 persons engaged were captured via the sample survey and all other enterprises were surveyed exhaustively. Since 1998, the threshold has changed to less than 100 persons engaged. In addition, since 1999, administrative data on balance sheets and the number of employees have also been used. Data are collected using a NACE equivalent classification system converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD.

Methodological breaks

Data are consistent over time although readers should note that the exhaustiveness of the surveys used changed between 1997 and 1998. Prior to 1998, all enterprises with 20 or more persons engaged was surveyed with a sample survey used for smaller enterprises. Since 1998, all enterprises with 100 or more persons have been surveyed with a sample survey used for smaller enterprises. In addition, from 1999, administrative data on balance sheets and the number of employees have also been used. The BSC and SSIS databases are fully aligned although in some cases small differences arise, for example due to certain aggregations made in SSIS.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Japanese Ministry of Economy, Trade and Industry.

National data are currently collected using the JSIC Revision 11 System, which replaced the JSIC Revision 10 System in March 2002.

Coverage and data sources

SSIS

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the SSIS database for Japan together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. The sources include two annual surveys: the Census of Manufacture and the Survey of Selected Service Industries. The statistical unit is the establishment.

1. The coverage of activity for each variable varies depending on the sector covered, as described in more detail in the sections below- for example the data on manufacturing industry reflect activities of establishments with 4 or more persons engaged whereas in other sectors all establishments are in scope.
2. Data on investment are available for the manufacturing industry only (except for ISIC 1010), covering establishments with 10 or more persons engaged in 2001 and earlier, and 30 or more persons engaged in 2002 onwards.
3. There are breaks on Section C data between 2005 and 2006 due to the change in the range of target establishments.

Methodological breaks

There are a number of methodological breaks in both the SSIS and BSC datasets, principally reflecting changes in the coverage of establishments over time, sector and variable; as listed below. For SSIS, until 2005, data source for sectors in mining was the Census of Mining and part of the Census of Manufacture. From 2006, the only source for these sectors is the Census of Manufacture. Readers should also note that although the BSC and SSIS datasets align reasonably well, some differences occur because the concordance relationships used in moving from JSIC to ISIC are not exactly the same at the 4-digit level (and sometimes higher), which is partly the consequence of the move from JSIC 10 to JSIC 11 and the different timing of BSC and SSIS data deliveries. This, in the main, affects the comparability of BSC and SSIS databases, although not significantly.

Variable notes

SSIS and BSC

Mining and Quarrying Sectors

Value added at basic prices – It is net of depreciation.

Employment: number of persons engaged – Includes the number of employees as defined below and temporary employees employed by the day or with contracts of less than one month's duration.

Employment: number of employees – Includes all employees with contracts of more than one month and temporary employees provided by employment agencies.

Manufacturing

From 2002 onwards, ISIC 221 is excluded from the total for ISIC 22 and the totals for manufacturing, ISIC 15-37.

The coverage of census varies by variable due to different questionnaires depending on the size of the establishment. In census years (those ending in 0, 3, 5, or 8) all establishments are covered whereas in other years, only establishments with 4 or more persons engaged are covered. Readers interested in information on establishments with fewer than 4 employees should contact METI directly. METI estimates the contribution of these establishments for the following variables: number of establishments, number of employees, wages and salaries, turnover and total purchases of goods and services.

Production – Production for establishments with between 4 and 29 persons engaged is equal to the value of shipments with no adjustments made for changes in inventories. Capital assets produced on own-account for own-use are not included in production and no adjustment is made for goods bought and sold, without further processing in the same year irrespective of the establishment size. From 2007, the whole activities of the establishments were covered so that activities other than manufacturing could also be reported. As a consequence, the data on “Production at producers’ prices”, “Total purchases of goods and services” and “value added at basic prices” are inconsistent with those of the previous years.

Value-added at basic prices – For establishments with 30 or more persons engaged value-added is calculated as production minus purchases of goods, subcontracting services and depreciation, where production is defined as above. For establishments with between 10 and 29 persons engaged, value-added is calculated on the same basis as 30+ establishments except in 2001 onwards it is calculated gross of depreciation. Establishments with between 4 and 9 persons are calculated as above but all estimates are calculated gross of depreciation.

Change in stocks of goods and services, Purchases of energy products – For BSC, both of these variables refer to establishments with 30 or more persons engaged.

Gross investment in tangible goods, Gross investment in land, Gross investment in existing buildings and structures, and Gross investment in machinery and equipment – For SSIS data all investment variables reflect establishments with 30 or more persons engaged in 2002 onwards data and 10 or more persons engaged in earlier years. For BSC data all investment data relate to establishments with 30 or more persons engaged.

Employment: number of persons engaged – Includes the number of employees as defined below, temporary employees employed by the day with or with contracts of less than one month’s duration, the self-employed and unpaid family workers. All data refer to establishments with 4 or more persons engaged except onwards 2003 BSC data that refer to establishments with one or more persons engaged.

Employment: number of employees – Includes all employees with contracts of more than one month and temporary employees provided by employment agencies and employees working 18 days or more in two consecutive months. All data refer to establishments with 4 or more persons engaged except 2003 onwards BSC data that refer to establishments with one or more persons engaged.

Wages and salaries, number of persons engaged – For SSIS, data reflect wages and salaries of persons engaged in establishments with 4 or more persons engaged. For BSC, data up to and including 2001, also refer to establishments with 4 or more persons engaged. 2003 onwards BSC data, however, reflect establishments with 1 or more persons engaged.

Wages and salaries, employees – For SSIS, data reflect wages and salaries of employees in establishments with 30 or more persons engaged. For BSC, before 2001, all data refer to establishments with 4 or more persons engaged. For 2001 onwards, BSC data reflect establishments with 30 or more persons engaged.

Non Retail/Wholesale Services

The statistical unit used for this sector is the establishment. Estimates for this sector correspond to all establishments irrespective of the number of persons engaged.

Production at producers' prices – Is actually measured at market prices, since it includes consumption taxes.

Employment: Number of persons engaged – Includes the number of employees as defined below, temporary employees employed by the day with or with contracts of less than one month's duration, the self-employed and unpaid family workers.

Employment: Number of employees – Includes all employees with contracts of more than one month and temporary employees provided by employment agencies and employees working 18 days or more in two consecutive months.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the National Statistical Office (KNSO). National data are currently collected via a number of annual sources: Censuses of mining, manufacturing and utilities (ISIC 10-41) in years ending in 3 or 8, with surveys in intervening years and for all other sectors, using the KSIC classification, which is consistent with ISIC Revision 3 up to the 4-digit level. The census covers all establishments whereas the surveys for sectors ISIC 10-41 cover only establishments with 5 or more persons engaged. For establishments with less than 5 persons engaged (in sectors ISIC 10-41) a less detailed questionnaire is used. As such, and also for consistency across time, for ISIC sectors 10-41, only data for establishments with 5 or more persons engaged are presented in the BSC and SSIS datasets. All other surveys (covering sectors ISIC 50-93) capture establishments with 1 or more persons engaged and the BSC and SSIS data concord with this.

Coverage and data sources

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the SSIS database for Korea together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources.

1. Production estimates in ISIC sectors 10-41 are not adjusted for goods purchased and sold in the same condition during the year. Works in progress are not included.
2. Value-added does not exclude intermediate consumption of services. Gross operating surplus, calculated as value-added minus compensation of employees, is correspondingly affected.
3. Estimates are based on average employment during the year.

BSC

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the BSC database for Korea, together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. Estimates for ISIC sectors 10-41 show data only for establishments with 5 or more persons engaged. Data for all other sectors (ISIC 50-93) reflect establishments with 1 or more persons engaged. Data for ISIC sectors 60-63 in the 100-199 size class reflect all establishments with more than 100 persons engaged. For ISIC sectors 50-55 and 70-93, data in size class 20-49 reflect all establishments with 20 or more persons engaged.

3. Estimates are based on average employment during the year.

Methodological breaks

The BSC and SSIS databases are typically aligned although some differences arise partly reflecting timing and partly reflecting slightly different concordance relationships used for detailed sectors in some years, notably in 1990 data. Although both the BSC and SSIS data are consistent over time, readers should note the different coverage of sectors within years. ISIC sectors 10-41 cover only establishments with 5 or more persons engaged. All other sectors cover establishments with 1 or more person engaged.

Variable notes

SSIS and BSC

Production at producers' prices – Does not include works in progress, own-account capital production, and, for ISIC sectors 10-41, does not include adjustments for goods where no further processing has been undertaken and bought and sold within the year.

Value added at basic prices, Gross operating surplus – These measures follow the census concept and so do not exclude intermediate consumption of non-industrial services.

New classification from 2007 reference year

Structural Business Statistics for 2007 onwards are provided by the KNSO using a new classification system: the KSIC Rev. 9 which is consistent with ISIC Revision 4. However, data in this publication are presented on the basis of ISIC Revision 3, since this is still the classification in use in most countries for the reference year 2007. Therefore, Korean data for 2007 were not presented in this publication.

2. 20+ for 50-52, 55 and 70-74.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Central Service for Statistics and Economic Studies via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via annual sample surveys, administrative sources and company accounts. Surveys are exhaustive for enterprises with 50 or more employees or with turnover of more than approximately 7 billion euros. Data are collected using a NACE Revision 1 equivalent classification system (NACE-LUX), converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the National Institute of Statistics, Geography and Informatics (INEGI). National data are currently collected using the NAICS 2002 System, which replaced the NAICS 1997 System. This, in turn, replaced the CMAP System in 1999, which was related to ISIC Revision 2 but the estimates provided in the SDBS database have been converted into an ISIC Revision 3 basis.

Coverage and data sources

SSIS

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the SSIS database for Mexico together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. The statistical unit used to estimate SSIS variables is the establishment, or more usually the legal unit, for manufacturing, trade and services industries but the enterprise is typically used in other sectors.

From 1994 to 2002, data are collected via an annual survey. Only enterprises or establishments that are classified as large (those with more than 1.6 million Mexican Dollars and/or more than 50 persons engaged) are covered. In 1998, this coverage reflected about 11% of the country's total labour force.

The 2003 data are based on the 2004 economic census and therefore include, in theory, all establishments.

Data from 2004 refer to an annual survey covering more legal units and more sectors than in the 1994-2002 period. Therefore data from 2004 onwards are not comparable with data in earlier years.

BSC

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the BSC database for Mexico together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. The statistical unit used to estimate BSC variables is the establishment, or more usually the legal unit for manufacturing, trade and services industries but the enterprise is typically used in other sectors. Data for 1998 and 2003 are based on the Economic Census, while data for other years are based on the Monthly Industrial Survey which covers around 2.6% of the total population of the 1994 Industrial Census.

Methodological breaks

The change from the CMAP classification system to NAICS may affect comparisons of data before and after 1998. SSIS and BSC data in 2003 are fully consistent. For the other years, comparisons of the BSC and SSIS databases are complicated by differences in coverage. For SSIS, data from 2004 onwards are not comparable with data in earlier years.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Central Bureau of Statistics via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via annual surveys, where the sample varies by industrial sector and size class, and administrative (VAT) data, using a classification system (SBI) compatible with the NACE Revision 1, converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD.

1. Estimates of gross operating surplus in 1999 reflect value-added at factor costs. Figures of gross operating surplus consistent with those used in SSIS can be derived in 1999 and 2002 by taking value added at factor costs minus compensation of labour, employees, see note 4.
2. 1999 data in ISIC 50-55 are not consistent with 1998 nor SSIS.
3. Original data transmitted to the OECD for ISIC 45 reflected only the population of enterprises with less than 250 persons engaged. Totals have been re-estimated using SSIS data with 250+ enterprises calculated as a residual.
4. Compensation of labour employees in 1999 and 2002 can be derived as sum of wages and salaries, employees and other employers' contributions.

Methodological breaks

The BSC and SSIS databases are broadly aligned although in some cases differences arise, for example due to certain aggregations made in SSIS, timing and rounding differences. Specific areas of difference are described in the notes above and below. Fundamental changes were made to the statistical processing system, affecting BSC and SSIS data from 2000 onwards. These changes may have affected the comparability of data before and after 2000.

Variable notes

SSIS

Number of enterprises – Numbers of enterprises are rounded to the nearest 5. This affects also the BSC data.

BSC

Gross operating surplus – 1999 data reflect value-added at factor costs. Figures of gross operating surplus consistent with those used in SSIS can be derived in 1999 and 2002, which is missing, by taking value added at factor costs minus compensation of labour, employees.

Gross investment in tangible goods – 1999 data in ISIC sectors 50-55 are not consistent with 1998 nor with SSIS.

Compensation of labour employees – 1999 and 2002 data can be derived as sum of wages and salaries, employees and other employers' contributions.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by Statistics New Zealand.

National data are currently collected using the ANZSIC (Australian and New Zealand Standard Industrial Classification). This was used in the Annual Enterprise survey (AES) for the first time in 1998 and Business Frame (register) (BF) in 1997. Prior to these dates the AES and BF were collected on an NZSIC basis. The BF is maintained using information from Inland Revenue, such as Goods and Services Tax (GST) registrations and Employee Monthly Schedule (EMS) returns, as well as Statistics New Zealand survey information.

Statistics New Zealand has recently developed from the BF a new statistical resource, the Longitudinal Business Frame (LBF). To enable trends to be studied, the new series has been back cast to February 2000 and released on a provisional basis. The LBF series covers all industries and includes an expanded coverage of New Zealand business. The LBF has been used as the source for a new series of Business Demography (BD) statistics.

The LBF contains data from two main sources: Statistics New Zealand's Business Frame (BF), and payroll tax records drawn from the Linked Employer-Employee Database (LEED). The BF is, however, the predominant source.

Coverage and data sources

Structural Statistics for Industry and Services (SSIS)

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the SSIS database for New Zealand together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. The statistical units used to estimate SSIS variables are the enterprise and local unit.

1. At producers' prices.
2. Reflects the position in February of each year.
3. The AES for 2007 has been designed and published using ANZSIC 06. Previous Annual Enterprise Surveys, including 2005 and 2006, were designed and published on an ANZSIC 96 basis.

Business Statistics by Size Class (BSC)

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the BSC database for New Zealand together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. The statistical unit used to estimate BSC variables is the enterprise and the local unit activity.

The criteria used to classify business data by size class is the number of employees.

Methodological breaks

As the design in the AES data (i.e. using ANZSIC 06) has changed and was backdated to 2005, SSIS data for previous years may not be directly comparable to the 2005-07 data.

All variables measured by the annual enterprise survey reflect economically significant enterprises. These are defined as enterprises that meet at least one of the following criteria:

- Greater than $30 000 NZL annual GST expenses or sales.
- Rolling mean employee count of greater than three.
- Is in a GST exempt industry (ex-residential property leasing and rental).
- Is part of a group of enterprises.
- Is registered for GST and involved in agriculture or forestry.

The coverage of variables collected using the annual enterprise survey (AES) has been subject to change over time. In 1998, the AES included private sector participants in the sewerage and drainage services and water supply industries, horticulture and fruit growing, livestock and cropping farming, dairy cattle farming, other farming and commercial property operators and developers. In 1999, the following industries were included: superannuation, creative arts, sports and services to sports, and interest groups not elsewhere classified.

Readers should also note that information provided by the annual enterprise survey is based on financial year reporting, which differs by sector as shown below. No adjustment is made to convert financial year data into calendar years.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by Statistics Norway via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via numerous annual sources including: Annual inquiries; the Statistical Register; annual company accounts and the VAT register. Data are collected on a NACE Revision 1 equivalent classification system (SN) converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. The population of enterprises covered varies by sector – for the manufacturing and mining sectors, enterprises with individual proprietorship, where the owner works alone and local kind-of-activity-units with employment of less than half a man-year are not included. In other sectors all enterprises are covered irrespective of their size.

1. All data in ISIC sectors 50-52 in 1998 have been suppressed by the OECD.

Methodological breaks

The key point concerns the comparability across sectors. The population of enterprises covered varies by sector – for the manufacturing and mining sectors, enterprises with individual proprietorship, where the owner works alone and local kind-of-activity-units with employment of less than half a man-year are not included. For other sectors all enterprises are captured. The BSC and SSIS databases are fully aligned although in some cases small differences arise, for example due to certain aggregations made in SSIS.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Central Statistical Office via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via various annual surveys, including separate surveys for employment and labour related variables. Data are collected using a NACE Revision 1 equivalent classification system converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD.

Methodological breaks

The BSC and SSIS databases are broadly aligned. Estimates of production in ISIC sectors 50-52 in 2001 onwards are based on a different valuation concept, and so are not consistent with data in earlier years.

Variable notes

SSIS

Production at producers' prices – For ISIC sectors 50-52 there is a change in valuation concept in data for 2001 and 2002 compared to earlier years.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the National Institute of Statistics via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via annual surveys with all enterprises with more than 100 persons engaged surveyed exhaustively and smaller enterprises surveyed via a sample. Data from administrative sources are also used. Information is provided using a classification system (CAE) compatible with the NACE Revision 1, converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD.

1. Up to and including 2000, data reflect only enterprises with 10 or more persons engaged. Data for 2001 have been suppressed by the OECD.

Methodological breaks

The BSC and SSIS databases are fully aligned although in some cases differences arise, for example due to certain aggregations made in SSIS, timing and rounding differences. Specific areas of difference concern ISIC sectors 50-55 in 1996 in the BSC database where data are marginally lower than SSIS data for all variables, reflecting lower coverage. Other differences between the databases and across time occur in the hours worked by employees variable – in the BSC database the coverage of this variable reflects only enterprises with 10 or more persons engaged up to and including 2000. All 1995 data are not consistent with data for 1996 onwards.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Statistical Office via Eurostat.

Since 2000, national data have been collected via three business surveys: For businesses with 20 or more employees; for businesses with less than 20 employees; and for entrepreneurs not registered in the Register of companies. Data are collected using the OKEC classification system, equivalent to NACE Revision 1, converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. Prior to 2000, data were collected only for enterprises with 20 or more employees.

1. 2003 data have been suppressed by the OECD. Estimates of gross operating surplus, consistent with earlier years and the SSIS database can be derived by subtracting compensation of employees from value-added at factor costs.

Methodological breaks

Data prior to and including 1999 reflect enterprises with more than 20 employees. Thereafter the data reflect all enterprises with 1 or more persons engaged. Up to and including 1999, the size classes in the BSC database refer to employees. For 2000 onwards, they refer to persons engaged. The BSC and SSIS databases are fully aligned, with minor differences reflecting rounding and timing. For the BSC database in 2003, estimates of gross operating surplus, consistent with earlier years and the SSIS database can be derived by subtracting compensation of employees from value-added at factor costs.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the National Institute of Statistics via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via annual surveys using a NACE equivalent system (CNAE) converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD. For manufacturing and some service sectors all businesses with more than 20 persons engaged are fully enumerated; for other services the threshold is 50. All other businesses are surveyed by sample.

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the SSIS database for Spain together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources.

Methodological breaks

The BSC and SSIS databases are typically fully aligned in all years although in two notable cases differences arise. These cases concern 1999 data, where a number of BSC variables are systematically, albeit marginally, lower than their SSIS equivalents and gross operating surplus up to and including 1999.

BSC estimates of gross operating surplus are fully consistent with value-added at factor costs minus compensation of employees. This is not the case for SSIS estimates for the period 1995-98.

Variable notes

SSIS

Gross operating surplus – Data for 1995 to 1998 are conceptually different to data in more recent years, which are consistent with estimates of value-added at factor costs minus compensation of employees.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by Statistics Sweden via Eurostat.

From 2003, data have been collected via a combination of administrative data and various surveys. Data for the largest enterprises and data for other enterprises were collected separately. From 1997 to 2002, all enterprises with 50 or more employees or large balance sheets (enterprises with more than 500 millions Swedish Krona, except real estate enterprises, where the threshold is 200 millions) were surveyed. Administrative data based on annual company reports provided to the tax authorities was used for all registered enterprises below these thresholds. 1995 and 1996 data are not as exhaustive in its coverage and typically includes only establishments with 5 or more employees. Information is collected using SE-SIC (equivalent to NACE Rev. 1) converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD.

Methodological breaks

In both the SSIS and BSC databases a break exists between 1996-and-earlier and 1997-and-later data, reflecting a more comprehensive coverage of enterprises and activity in the most recent period. The BSC and SSIS databases are fully aligned although, in some cases, small differences arise, for example due to certain aggregations made in SSIS.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Swiss Federal Statistics Office.

National data are collected using the NOGA classification converted into ISIC Revision 3.

Coverage and data sources

SSIS

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the SSIS database for Switzerland together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. Except for the data in the number of enterprises, the coverage reflects all businesses with two or more persons employed. Enterprise data contain data for all enterprises irrespective of their employment size. The statistical unit used for data collection is the enterprise (with more than two persons employed).

BSC

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the BSC database for Switzerland together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. The statistical unit used to estimate BSC variables is the establishment but surveys are sent to establishments via their parent enterprise. Only establishments where activity occurs for more than twenty hours per week are included.

Methodological breaks

The change in the Industrial Classification System from NGAE to NOGA may affect the comparability of 1995 BSC data and 1998 onwards. Readers should also note that although the BSC and SSIS datasets align well, the former is based on establishment data that cover establishments with activity of more than 20 hours per week on average whereas the SSIS database records enterprises with more than two persons employed. Typically, this means that the figures for variables, excluding the number of enterprises, in the BSC database are higher than in the SSIS database, although there are some exceptions. Additionally, readers should note that timing may play a role reflecting the different compilation dates for the two datasets.

Variable notes

Employment: number of persons engaged in the BSC database reflects all persons engaged that work more than 6 hours per week and that work in establishments where activity occurs, on average, more than twenty hours per week.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the State Institute of Statistics.

National data are currently collected via annual surveys. All enterprises having more than one local unit or having 20 employees or more are surveyed, while a sampling method is used for the other enterprises. Data are collected using a classification of enterprises determined in accordance with the NACE Revision 1, converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD.

Methodological breaks

From 2003, the BSC and SSIS database are typically fully aligned.

Prior to 2002, national data were collected via a number of annual sources including: a general census of industry and business establishments, conducted every ten years for years ending in 3; annual manufacturing surveys – for all manufacturing establishments with 10 or more persons engaged; and annual surveys in all other sectors covering all establishments irrespective of size. Data were collected using an ISIC Revision 3 compatible system. The BSC and SSIS databases were broadly comparable across years and sectors with some exceptions, notably other employers' social security contributions.

1999-2001 data for production and value-added in the BSC database were allocated using a different approach to that used in earlier years and so some care should be taken in comparing BSC estimates before and after 1999.

Methodological notes

Statistical institute source

Data are provided by the Office for National Statistics via Eurostat.

National data are currently collected via the annual business inquiry and covers all businesses registered for VAT and/or Pay as You Earn (PAYE). The threshold for compulsory VAT registration for 2007/08 was an annual turnover of GBP 64 000. Data is collected using SIC, equivalent to NACE Revision 1, which is converted to ISIC Revision 3 by the OECD.

Data are provided by the Bureau of the Census, US Department of Commerce.

National classification

National data are collected using the US SIC system for 1996 and earlier data, NAICS 1997 for data from 1998 to 2002 and NAICS 2002 for 2003 data onwards, all converted into ISIC Revision 3.

1. Production data refer to the total value of shipments.
2. Value-added is derived by subtracting the cost of materials, supplies, containers, fuel, purchased electricity, and contract work from the value of shipments. The result of this calculation is adjusted by the addition of value added by merchandising operations and the cost of merchandise sold without further manufacture, processing, or assembly plus the net change in finished goods and work-in-process between the beginning- and end-of-year inventories.
3. Manufacturing only.
4. Figures reflect the annualised average number of employees and salaries on 12 March, May, August and November for production workers plus other employees on 12 March.
5. Data are only for enterprises/establishments with employees. For any given industry the number of enterprises provided is the number with at least one establishment operating in the specified industry. Because multi-establishment enterprises may have establishments operating in more than one industry, the same enterprise can be counted in a number of industries. Therefore, the sum of the number of enterprises in the detailed industries may be higher than the number of enterprises reported for the associated aggregate industry. Data within an industry exclude enterprises where the establishments are identified as auxiliaries to parent companies and those that could not be classified.

BSC

The table below provides a description of the coverage of the BSC database for the United States, together with a description, where available, of the underlying data sources. Data include only businesses with employees.

Methodological breaks

Within the SSIS database, all variables, except the number of enterprises, number of establishments and numbers of employees (before 2004) exclude ISIC sector 22.1, and, so, the totals for ISIC sector 22 and manufacturing (ISIC 15-37) also exclude this sector. The switch from US SIC to NAICS means that some care is needed in comparing figures before and after 1997. In the BSC database ISIC sector 12 includes ISIC sector 13 in 2002.

Variable notes

All variables reflect businesses with employees only.

Production at producers prices in SSIS refer to the total value of shipments and covers the received or receivable net selling values, f.o.b. plant (exclusive of freight and taxes), of all products shipped as well as all miscellaneous receipts, such as receipts for contract work performed for others, installation and repair, sales of scrap, and sales of products bought and sold without further processing. Included are all items made by or for the establishments from material owned by it, whether sold, transferred to other plants of the same company, or shipped on consignment. The net selling value of products made in one plant on a contract basis from materials owned by another was reported by the plant providing the materials.

Value-added at basic prices is derived by subtracting the cost of materials, supplies, containers, fuel, purchased electricity, and contract work from the value of shipments (products manufactured plus receipts for services rendered). The result of this calculation is adjusted by the addition of value added by merchandising operations (i.e., the difference between the sales value and the cost of merchandise sold without further manufacture, processing, or assembly) plus the net change in finished goods and work-in-process between the beginning- and end-of-year inventories.

1. Turnover

Turnover equals the total value of invoices by the observation unit during the reference period corresponding to market sales of goods or services supplied to third parties. Turnover includes all duties and taxes on the goods or services invoiced by the unit with the exception of the VAT invoiced by the unit vis-à-vis its customer and other similar deductible taxes directly linked to turnover. It also includes all other charges (transport, packaging, etc.) passed on to the customer, even if these charges are listed separately in the invoice. Reduction in prices, rebates and discounts as well as the value of returned packing must be deducted. Income classified as other operating income, financial income and extra-ordinary income in company accounts is excluded. Operating subsidies received from public authorities, or supranational authorities are also excluded.

2. Production

The value of production corresponds to the sum of the value of all finished products (including intermediary products sold in the same condition as received), of the net change of the value of work in progress and stocks of goods to be shipped in the same condition as received, of the variation of stocks of finished products and of those in progress, of the value of goods or services rendered to others, of the value of goods shipped in the same condition as received less the amount paid for these goods and of the value of fixed assets produced by the unit for its own use.

The valuation of production data can be made according to any of the following four valuations: factor costs, basic prices, market prices and producers' prices, according to the treatment applied to indirect taxes and subsidies, the OECD database typically provides values of production in producers' prices, which, in order to maintain consistency with Eurostat, is the OECD's preferred valuation concept. The formulation described below describes how production (shown at producer prices) can be derived from estimates of turnover.

 & \text{PRODUCTION} \\
 & = \\
 & \text{TURNOVER} \\
 & + \\
 & \text{Net change in stocks of finished products and work in progress produced by the unit} \\
 & + \\

 & - \\
 & \text{Purchases of goods and services purchased for resale} \\
 & + \\
 & \text{Capitalised (own-account production)}
 \end{aligned}$$

3. Value added

In very simple terms value added corresponds to the difference between production and any intermediate consumption; where total intermediate consumption should always be valued at purchasers' prices. Alternatively value added can be described as the sum of the gross operating surplus and compensation of employees. Like production, the valuation of value added can be made according to any of the following four valuations: factor costs, basic prices, market prices and producers' prices, according to the treatment applied to indirect taxes and subsidies. The definition for value added is consistent with that described in the 1993 System of National Accounts (paragraphs 6.4-5).

The formulation for value added shown below, reflects value added at factor costs. Value added at basic prices can be easily derived from this by not subtracting the final item (taxes and subsidies on production).

 & \text{VALUE ADDED} \\
 & = \\
 & \text{TURNOVER} \\
 & + \\
 & \text{Capitalised (own-account) Production} \\

 & \text{Purchases of goods and services (the value of all goods and services purchased} \\
 & \quad \text{during the accounting period for resale or (intermediate) consumption} \\
 & \quad \text{in the production process. These values should reflect the actual price paid} \\
 & \quad \text{after deducting for deductible items such as VAT} \\
 & - \\
 & \text{Taxes and subsidies linked to production}
 \end{aligned}$$

4. Gross operating surplus

Gross operating surplus is the surplus generated by operating activities after deducting labour costs (compensation of employees), and, depending on the valuation used for value added, taxes minus subsidies on production from value added.

It reflects the balance available to the unit which allows it to recompense the providers of own funds and debt, to pay taxes and eventually to finance all or a part of its investment, and so measures the surplus or deficit accruing from production before taking account of any interest, rent or similar charges payable on financial or tangible non-produced assets borrowed or rented by the unit, or any interest, rent or similar receipts receivable on financial or tangible non-produced assets owned by the unit.

For unincorporated enterprises owned by households in which the owner(s) or members of the same household may contribute unpaid labour inputs of a similar kind to those that could be provided by paid employees, the surplus should strictly be referred to as “mixed income” because it implicitly contains an element of remuneration for work done by the owner, or other members of the household, that cannot be separately identified from the return to the owner. In practice however these surpluses are also described as gross operating surplus. Gross operating surplus (including mixed income) can therefore be derived as:

 & \text{GROSS OPERATING SURPLUS} \\
 & = \\
 & \text{VALUE ADDED (at factor costs)} \\
 & - \\
 & \text{COMPENSATION OF EMPLOYEES}
 \end{aligned}$$

Some countries have been able to provide estimates total remuneration of all persons employed, meaning that gross operating surplus excludes the employment component of mixed income. Gross operating surplus is measured gross of consumption of fixed capital (depreciation).

Valuation at factor costs, basic prices, producers' prices and market prices

The following Table illustrates the concepts of factor costs, basic prices, producers' prices and market prices and illustrates the relationships between these valuations, for value added and production.

	Value at factor costs
+	Other taxes on production ¹
–	Other subsidies on production ¹
=	Value at basic prices
+	Taxes on products ² (not including imports and VAT)
–	Subsidies on products ²
=	Value at producers' prices
+	Taxes on imports
–	Subsidies on imports
+	Trade and transport costs
+	Non-deductible VAT
=	Value at market prices ³

1. Other taxes on production consist mainly of taxes on the ownership or use of land, buildings or other assets used in production, or on the labour employed or compensation of employees paid. Other subsidies on production consists of subsidies, except subsidies on products, which resident enterprises may receive as a consequence of engaging in production (e.g., subsidies on payroll or workforce, or subsidies to reduce pollution).
2. Taxes on products, exclusive of VAT, import and export taxes, consist of taxes on goods and services that become payable as a result of the production, sale, transfer, leasing or delivery of those goods or services, or as a result of their use for own consumption or own capital formation. Subsidies on products correspond to subsidies payable per unit of a good or service produced, either as a specific amount of money per unit of quantity of a good or service, or as a specified percentage of the price per unit; it may also be calculated as the difference between a specified target price and the market price actually paid by a buyer.
3. Market prices, often referred to as purchasers' prices, are those which purchasers pay for the goods and services they acquire or use, excluding deductible VAT.

5. Total purchases of goods and services

Purchases of goods and services include the value of all goods and services purchased during the accounting period for resale or (intermediate) consumption in the production process, excluding purchases of capital goods to be used in the production process, which are registered separately as gross fixed capital formation. The goods and services concerned may be either resold with or without further transformation, completely used up in the production process or, recorded as increases to stocks/inventories.

Services paid for during the reference period are also included regardless of whether they are industrial or non-industrial; including payments for all work carried out by third parties on behalf of the unit including current repairs and maintenance, installation work and technical studies. Expenses related to the installation of capital goods and capitalised goods are excluded.

Non-industrial payments include legal and accountancy fees, patents and licence fees (where they are not capitalised), insurance premiums, costs of meetings of shareholders and governing bodies, contributions to business and professional associations, postal, telephone, electronic communication, telegraph and fax charges, transport services for goods and personnel, advertising costs, commissions (where they are not included in wages and salaries), rents, bank charges (excluding interest payments) and all other business services provided by third parties. Services which are transformed and capitalised by the unit as capitalised production are excluded.

Expenditure classified as financial expenditure or extraordinary expenditure in company accounts is excluded from the total purchases of goods and services.

Purchases of goods and services are valued at purchasers' prices excluding deductible VAT and other deductible taxes linked directly to turnover. No other adjustments for other taxes and duties on products or production are necessary.

6. Change in stocks (inventories) of goods and services

Change in stocks is the difference between the value of the stocks at the end and the beginning of the reference period. Change in stocks may be measured by the value of entries into stocks less the value of withdrawals and the value of any recurrent losses of goods held in stocks. Stocks are recorded at purchaser's prices exclusive of VAT if they are purchased from another unit, otherwise at production costs.

Stocks (inventories) are composed of the following:

- stocks of finished goods;
- stocks of work in progress;
- stocks of goods and services purchased for resale in the same condition as received; and
- stocks of raw materials and consumables.

Stocks (inventories) are composed of the following: Included are the stocks of goods and services bought for the sole purpose of reselling them in the same condition. Excluded are stocks of goods and services which are provided to third parties on a commission basis. Products purchased for resale and stocked by services enterprises can include goods (industrial equipment in the case of "turnkey" engineering contracts, or buildings in the case of property development, etc.) as well as services (rights to use advertising space, transport, accommodation, etc.).

7. Purchases of energy products

Purchases of all energy products include all purchases of energy products during the reference period that are intended to be used in production as fuel during the reference period. Energy products purchased as a raw material or for resale without transformation should be recorded as changes in stocks (inventories).

8. Gross investment in tangible goods: land, existing buildings and structures, plant machinery and equipment and new buildings and structures

Investment in tangible goods includes gross investment in land, and gross fixed capital formation in existing and new buildings and structures and machinery and equipment. It refers to the value of these assets purchased, or constructed on the unit's own account for its own use, during the reference year and that are expected to have a productive life of one year or more after the purchase date. Major additions, alterations and improvements to existing assets which extend their normal economic life or raise their productivity are also included. (The definition of gross fixed capital formation follows that provided in Chapter X of SNA 1993).

Tangible assets include land, buildings, other construction and land improvements, transport equipment, machinery and other equipment. Transactions in intangible assets include investment in non-financial produced fixed assets such as mineral exploration, computer software and entertainment, literary or artistic originals intended to be used for more than one year.

Gross investment in land includes purchases of land, underground deposits, forests and inland waters. Where land is purchased with existing buildings and the value of the two components is not separable, the total is recorded under this heading if it is estimated that the value of the land exceeds the value of the existing buildings. If the existing buildings are estimated to be of greater value than the land, the total is recorded under gross investment in existing buildings and structures. Also included here is land merely improved by levelling, the laying of pipes or by the provision of paths or roads. Land acquired through (business) demographic events such as mergers, take-overs, break-ups, split-off is excluded.

Gross investment in existing buildings and structures excludes purchases of buildings that have never been used, and also excludes acquisitions via mergers, take-overs, break-ups or split-offs of the business units. Investment in new dwellings and structures should be included in the total figure for gross investment in tangible goods.

The value of investment in machinery and equipment corresponds to the value of transport equipment, industrial machinery and equipment, office machinery, equipment and furniture, professional instruments and equipment, acquired new or second hand or manufactured by the unit on its own account and for its own use, and having a life expectancy of more than one year. It also includes the cost of major repairs that are carried out by the unit itself (extensions, alterations, improvements and other repairs which prolong the life or increase the productivity of existing fixed assets. Small tools purchases are also excluded, see SNA 1993, paragraph 10.63.

Assets acquired from others are valued at purchasers' prices, which cover all costs directly connected with the acquisition and installation of the items for use. Assets produced on own-account should be valued at basic prices. Although, frequently these valuations are based on production costs, including labour. Sales of assets should be valued at the actual amounts realised rather than at book values.

9. Employment – Numbers of persons engaged and number of employees

The total number of persons engaged is defined as the total number of persons who worked in or for the concerned unit during the reference year. Total employment excludes: directors of incorporated enterprises and members of shareholders' committees who are paid solely for their attendance at meetings; labour made available to the concerned unit by other units and charged for; persons carrying out repair and maintenance work in the unit on the behalf of other units; home-workers; and persons on indefinite leave, military leave or in retirement.

The number of employees includes all persons, workers and employees, covered by a contractual arrangement and working in the unit who receive compensation for their work, whether full-time or part-time. In particular, the following are considered as employees: salaried managers; students who have a formal commitment to contribute to the unit's activities in return for remuneration and/or education services; and employees engaged under a contract specifically designed to encourage the recruitment of unemployed persons. Also included are persons on sick leave, paid leave or vacation. It excludes: working proprietors; active business partners; unpaid family workers; and home-workers, irrespective of whether or not they are on the payroll. The employee definitions apply equally to numbers of female employees.

10. Employment – Numbers of employees in full time equivalents

This corresponds to the number of employees converted into full time equivalents. Persons working less than the standard working time of a full-year full-time worker should be converted into full time equivalents, with regard to the working time of a full-time full-year employee in the unit. Included in this category are people working less than: a standard working day; the standard number of working days in the week; and less than the standard number of weeks/months in the year. The conversion should be carried out on the basis of the number of hours, days, weeks or months worked.

11. Hours worked by employees

Hours worked by employees are defined as the total number of hours actually spent by all employees, during the year. They include:

- Hours actually worked during normal periods of work.
- Time worked in addition to hours worked during normal periods of work (overtime), where overtime hours are calculated in terms of actual hours spent at work and not in terms of time paid for.
- Time spent at the place of work on work such as the preparation of the workplace, repairs and maintenance, preparation and cleaning of tools.
- Time spent at the place of work waiting or standing by for such reasons as lack of supply of work, breakdown of machinery, or accidents.
- Time corresponding to short rest periods at the workplace, including tea and coffee breaks.

They exclude:

- Hours paid but not worked, such as paid annual leave, paid public holidays, paid sick leave.
- Meal breaks, welfare and union activities.
- Time spent on travel from home to work and vice versa.

12. Compensation of labour: All persons engaged and employees

The definition for compensation of employees is consistent with the definition set out in paragraph 7.21 of SNA 1993. It includes the total remuneration, in cash or in kind, payable to an employee in return for work done by the latter during the reference period. No compensation of employees is payable in respect of unpaid work undertaken voluntarily, including the work done by members of a household within an unincorporated enterprise owned by the same household. Compensation of employees does not include any taxes payable by the employer on the wage and salary.

It includes therefore wages and salaries of employees and other employers' social contributions.

Compensation of labour for all persons engaged is equivalent to the sum of wages and salaries of all persons engaged and other employers' social contributions for employees.

13. Wages and salaries: All persons engaged and employees

Total wages and salaries for all persons engaged includes all payments in cash or in kind payable to all persons counted on the payroll by way of remuneration for work done during the reference period. They exclude social security, pension, retirement and other contributions payable by the employer but include social contributions, income taxes etc made by the employee even if they are actually withheld and paid on their behalf by their employer. Payments for agency workers are not included in the wages and salaries of the unit using the workers but are instead recorded with the agency.

Wages and salaries for employees is a subset of total wages and salaries applying to employees only.

14. Other employers' social security contributions, employees

Social contributions payable by employers include the actual social contributions payable by employers to social security schemes or to private funded social insurance schemes to secure social benefits for their employees; or imputed social contributions by employers providing unfunded social benefits.

15. Enterprises

An enterprise is a legal entity possessing the right to conduct business on its own; for example to enter into contracts, own property, incur liabilities for debts, and establish bank accounts. It may consist of one or more local units or establishments corresponding to production units situated in a geographically separate place and in which one or more persons work for the enterprise to which they belong.

16. Establishments

An establishment is a unit that engages, under a single ownership or control, or predominantly one, kind of activity at a single location; for example a workshop or factory.

Business Demography

The Business Demography database contains, in particular, information on the following variables. The harmonised definitions used are described for each variable in turn below. These definitions are based on the 2007 Eurostat-OECD Manual on Business Demography Statistics. For further information see www.oecd.org/std/industry-services/businessdemographymanual.

1. Employer enterprise birth

The OECD's core measure of births reflects the employer enterprise birth. An employer enterprise birth refers to the birth of an enterprise with at least one employee. This population consists of enterprise births that have at least one employee in the birth year and of enterprises that existed before the year in consideration, but were below the threshold of one employee. Enterprise births do not include entries into the population due to mergers, break-ups, split-off or restructuring of a set of enterprises. They do not include entries into a sub-population resulting only from a change of activity. If a dormant unit is reactivated within two years, this event is not considered an enterprise birth.

2. Employer enterprise birth rate

The employer enterprise birth rate refers to the number of employer enterprise births, as a percentage of the population of active enterprises with at least one employee.

3. Employer enterprise death

An employer enterprise death occurs either as an enterprise death with at least one employee in the year of death or as an exit by decline, moving below the threshold of one employee. Deaths do not include exits from the population due to mergers, take-overs, break-ups or restructuring of a set of enterprises. They do not include exits from a sub-population resulting only from a change of activity. An enterprise is included in the count of deaths only if it is not reactivated within two years.

4. Employer enterprise death rate

The employer enterprise death rate refers to the number of employer enterprise deaths, as a percentage of the population of active enterprises with at least one employee.

5. N-year survival rate

The n -year survival rate for a particular year (t) refers to the number of enterprises that had at least one employee for the first time in year ($t - n$) and that have not died in year (t), as a percentage of all enterprises with at least one employee for the first time in year ($t - n$).

6. High growth enterprises (with growth based on the number of employees)

High Growth enterprises measured in number of employees refer to all enterprises with average annualised growth in number of employees greater than 20% per annum, over a three year period, and with 10 or more employees in the beginning of the observation period.

In other words, the figures for a particular year (t) refer to the number of enterprises whose number of employees grew by 72.8% cumulatively in the preceding 3 years and that had more than 10 employees at ($t - 3$). The calculation should not include employer enterprise births in $t - 3$.

7. High growth enterprises (with growth based on turnover)

High Growth enterprises measured in turnover refer to all enterprises with average annualised growth in turnover greater than 20% per annum, over a three year period, and with 10 or more employees in the beginning of the observation period.

In other words, the figures for a particular year (t) refer to the number of enterprises whose turnover have grown by 72.8% cumulatively in the preceding 3 years and that had more than 10 employees at ($t - 3$). The calculation should not include employer enterprise births in $t - 3$.

8. High growth enterprises rates

The share of high-growth enterprises is compiled as the number of high-growth enterprises as a percentage of the population of enterprises with ten or more employees.

9. Gazelles (with growth based on the number of employees)

Gazelle enterprises are a subset of High growth enterprises reflecting those high-growth enterprises born 5 years or less before the end of the 3 year observation period.

Gazelles measured in number of employees are enterprises which have been employers for a period of up to 5 years, with average annualised growth in turnover greater than 20% per annum, over a three year period, and with 10 or more employees in the beginning of the observation period.

In other words, the figures for a particular year (t) refer to the number of enterprises which had been employers for a period of up to 5 years at (t) and that had more than 10 employees at ($t - 3$) and whose number of employees grew by 72.8% cumulatively in the period ($t - 3$) to (t). The calculation should not include employer enterprise births in $t - 3$.

10. Gazelles (with growth based on turnover)

Gazelle enterprises are a subset of High growth enterprises reflecting those high-growth enterprises born 5 years or less before the end of the 3 year observation period.

Gazelles measured in turnover are enterprises which have been employers for a period of up to 5 years, with average annualised growth in turnover greater than 20% per annum, over a three year period, and with 10 or more employees in the beginning of the observation period.

In other words, the figures for a particular year (t) refer to the number of enterprises which had been employers for a period of up to 5 years at (t) and that had more than 10 employees at ($t - 3$) and whose turnover grew by 72.8% cumulatively in the period ($t - 3$) to (t). The calculation should not include employer enterprise births in $t - 3$.

11. Gazelles rates

The share of gazelles is compiled as the number of gazelles as a percentage of the population of enterprises with ten or more employees.

Structural and Demographic Business Statistics

The publication provides a summary of the information available in the OECD Structural and Demographic Business Statistics (SDBS) database. Key economic variables are presented at the International Standard of Industrial Classification, Revision 3 (ISIC) 2-digit level, for all industries and OECD member countries.

The database is an essential tool for analysing the industrial structure and dynamics of OECD economies. It provides a wealth of information at a very detailed sectoral level including: turnover, value-added, production, operating surplus, employment, labour costs and investment to name but a few. The breakdown by industrial sector, including services, is supplemented by a further breakdown into size classes, further enhancing the analytical capabilities of the database.

The database also includes business demography statistics such as business birth, death and survival rates but also the number of high-growth enterprises; which, in combination with the size class dimension, provides an invaluable input to the OECD Entrepreneurship Indicators Programme (EIP). As such, the database and the publication will help answer following questions: Which sectors have experienced positive/negative growth in recent years? What contribution do small businesses make to economic activity? How does the structure of businesses vary across OECD countries? Which industrial sectors have the highest labour productivity? How does labour productivity vary by business size? Are small and medium enterprises (SMEs) more or less profitable per employee than large businesses? Which sectors invest most?

Also available on Internet and on CD-ROM.

The OECD Structural and Demographic Business Statistics database is available on CD-ROM and on line at www.SourceOECD.org. It is in user-friendly software, Beyond 20/20™ for Windows™, that allows users to extract and export data, prepare customised graphs and tables, and perform their own analysis.
